W. S. CURREN
General Superintendent Transportation

worker, and the creation of a fund for the maintenance of the wife and dependent children of those who died while in the Company's service. No man enters into service of this kind to his fellow-men who does not have an honest, earnest and active interest in the promotion of human welfare, and this was one of the most conspicuous qualities of Dr. Sinsel.

The following is an excerpt from the "Grafton Sentinel," issue of December 10, 1923:

"He ranked high in his chosen profession of physician. He was an ex-president of the Taylor County Medical Association and for eighteen years he was a member of the U. S. Pension Board.

"Dr. Sinsel was constantly active in the affairs of his community and state. He was for four years a commissioner of the Grafton Board of Education and for three additional years its president. He represented Taylor County in the West Virginia House of Delegates in 1915 and 1916. In November of the latter year he was elected to the State Senate from the 11th Senatorial District. In the session of 1917 he had important committee assignments, and in that of 1919 he was elected president of the Senate, by virtue of which office he was Lieutenant Governor of West Virginia, and served as the executive head of the state during the absence of Governor Cornwell on a western trip. He presided over the deliberations of the Senate in a fair and impartial way, which commanded the respect of the entire membership regardless of party alignment.

"He was influential in the Grafton Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club, in each of which he was a charter member as well as in many other institutions for the promotion of the public welfare. He took part in every community activity during the Great War, and was chairman of the local Red Cross Chapter.

"He was a Past Noble Grand in the Odd Fellows, Past Dictator of the Moose, and a member of the Elks, Woodmen and other orders; but his highest fraternal distinctions were in the different orders of Masonry, where he achieved state-wide prominence. He was a Past Master of Grafton Lodge No. 15, A. F. and A. M.; Past High Priest of Copestone Chapter No. 12, R. A. M., and Past Commander of DeMolay Commandery No. 11, K. T., as well as Past Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery, K. T., of West Virginia, and a life member of the Grand Encampment of the United States. In the Scottish Rite he had attained the degree of K. C. C. H. and at the time of his death was First Ceremonial Master of Osiris Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

"His many other activities revolved about his membership in the First Baptist Church, of which he was a deacon and a teacher in the Sunday School. His daily life was consistently Christian and his greatest happiness to be of service.

"He is survived by his wife, May Davidson Sinsel, and three sons, Charles A. Sinsel,

The late Dr. Charles Arthur Sinsel

Jr., of Lumberport, W. Va., Rupert A. Sinsel, and Richard C. Sinsel, of this city; one daughter, Mrs. Dennis L. Cather of Flemington, and five sisters, Mrs. A. G. Dayton, of Philippi; Miss Abbie T. Sinsel, of Grafton; Mrs. Ira E. Robinson; Miss Mary H. Sinsel of Grafton, and Mrs. G. F. Sellers, of Mansfield, Ohio.

"As his remains lay at his home the constant stream of neighbors and friends who called to pay their last respects attested the esteem in which he was held by his fellows in all walks of life.

"The funeral took place from the late residence of the deceased at 662 Maple Avenue, Grafton, W. Va., and was one of the largest and most impressive in the history of this community, and was a forceful testimonial to the esteem in which Dr. Sinsel was held by his neighbors and friends, who are legion. The ceremonies were in charge of De Molay Commandery, K. T., and many of the lodges to which he belonged were represented formally. The funeral service was conducted by his late pastor, Rev. J. W. Brown, of the First Baptist Church."

The Relief Department was represented at the funeral by Wm. M. Kennedy, assistant superintendent; Dr. E. V. Millholland, medical and surgical director; Medical Examiners Dr. J. P. Lawlor, of Parkersburg, Dr. J. Gilbert Selby, of Cumberland, Md., Dr. Wm. U. Charlton, of Wheeling, Dr. E. A. Fleetwood, of Weston, Dr. E. C. Ledman, of Fairmont, and Assistant Medical Examiner Ira A. Stine.

Seen on Line

A German gentleman, who landed in New York the day before, en route to Shinnston, W. Va., on No. 3, speaking only two or three words of English. It was fine to note the special interest taken by dining car steward, train conductor, Pullman conductor and porter to see that he reached his destination safely and that he was well taken care of.

Two little fellows, about eight and ten years old, en route New York to Parkersburg, W. Va., on No. 3, unaccompanied, being well looked after by train and Pullman men.

Correspondent C. W. Dixon, Weston, W. Va., in his fine new home, purchased through the Relief Department. The Magazine representative sets a good example in Weston.

Last Act of Late Conductor Charles Ireland Was One of Courtesy to Lady Passenger

A STORY written by MAGAZINE Correspondent Alto Smith appeared in our October issue, paying a fitting tribute to Conductor Charles Ireland, upon the completion of fifty years service with the Baltimore and Ohio. It was, therefore, with deep regret that we recently received news of his sudden death.

The Daily News-Advertiser, Chillicothe, Ohio, says:—

"Relatives and friends here were grieved to hear of the sudden death of Charles Ireland, Beardstown, Ill., which occurred on November 18, as the result of heart failure. Mr. Ireland was born in Chillicothe, June 3, 1857, the son of Alphonso C. and Sara Jane Ireland. He entered the railroad service in this city, August 1, 1873, and was transferred to Vincennes, Ind., to the Ohio and Mississippi division of the Baltimore and Ohio, August 1, 1877, and finally after years of excellent service was transferred to the Springfield division in 1889, where he had been in continuous passenger service until the time of his death.

He was a member of the Episcopal Church.

"Surviving are his wife, one son, Charles Jr., one daughter, Mrs. Harry Anderson, a brother, William Ireland, and sister, Mrs. Thomas Cahill, of this city, and another sister, Mrs. C. W. Stanton of Springfield, Ill."

MAGAZINE Correspondent Alto Smith pays tribute to Mr. Ireland as follows: "He had completed 50 years 3 months and 17 days service without a mark against his record." Assistant Correspondent F. H. Wright, Flora, says: "We have all lost a good friend. He took his run out of Flora Saturday. Leaving Pana there is always heavy travel and he had just completed collecting tickets, when he noticed that a lady passenger had dropped something on the floor. He stooped to pick it up and fell forward, dead. His last act in life was a courtesy to a patron, such as he had been giving all his life."

The sincere sympathy of all employes is extended to the bereaved family of this old and loyal employe.

Note:

All puzzles published in this department will be defined, as far as possible, from the New Standard Dictionary, edition of 1920. It is permissible to use both geographical and biographical words in the construction of puzzles, but when such words are taken from any authority other than the New Standard Dictionary, the name of such authority must be stated at the end of the definition, in parenthesis. Obsolete words will be marked at the end of the definition thus—"obs". Variant spellings of a word must be marked at the end of the definition thus—"var". Address all communications concerning this department to G. H. Pryor, Room 800, Baltimore and Ohio Building, Baltimore, Maryland, and mark the envelope "Puzzles."

New Puzzles

1. REBUS (9)

10U8

Well, Friend Gi Gantic, as you see,
Your "overlisten's" solved by me.
With figures I am more at home
Than handling diction for a "pome."
Now since you have of medic's lore
And doctor's skill such ample store,
I beg a formula discreet
My portly figure to COMPLETE.
Baltimore, Md. N. Jineer

2. INVERTED PYRAMID

6—Stones (Scot. and D. E. Var.),
7—Having a rind or skin,
8—Woad (Obs.),
9—First notes in Guido's musical scale,
10—Neigh (Obs.),
11—A letter.
Brooklyn, N. Y. Gemini

3. BEHEADMENT (5)
May Ducats was a choicy miss,
Inured to wealth and ease;
No commoner should win her kiss,
For she was hard to please.
To gain this lady's heart and hand,
Must come a TWO, at least;
A check account at his command,
To lay the wedding feast.
Must furnish dainty waists and gowns,
Diamond, ONE, and ruby,
For less would bring but pouts and frowns—
Who will be the booby?
Baltimore, Md. Atlas

4. RIGHT STAR

7—Lock nuts,
8—Eat (Obs.),
9—A letter.
Maulkeytown, Ill. Todd

5. LINKADE (7)
Each day and hour, as trains go by,
ALL watches at the station.
For "Safety first" the trainmen's cry
Provides it occupation.
Speechless, it hastes to show each crew
Just how their trains to manage.
To LAST and heed its signals true
And thus escape all damage.
Often a FIRST horse shambles by,
From out some lonely by way.
Or fat and sleek, and stepping high,
One capers down the highway.
ALL heeds them not, it heeds each car
It's rushing, steaming, smoking,
To find the clue, don't search too far,
Just in your brains go poking.
Whitney Crossings, N. Y. Spica

6—To test again.
Charleston, S. C. Eureka

7. RECTANGLE
(New International Dictionary)
1—A letter,
2—(Obs.) Treasure,
3—Import,
4—The first month of the year,
5—Raw Chinese silk from the province of Hupeh,
6—A personification in Ger. and Scand. folklore of a spirit to work mischief,
7—(Obs.) Yonder,
8—(Biol.) Act of developing a new coat of hair,
9—An elevation in the Caucasus Mountains, Russia (N. S.),
10—(Obs.) Revelry,
11—To divide,
12—(Obs.) Ace,
13—A letter.
Zanesville, Ohio Reel

8. TRANSPOSITION (6)
The revolution was over,
The Bolshevik had won,
And all the Russian noblemen,
Would from the country run.
But in the ONE were TWO,
With letters of brilliant red,
"No THREES will be transported, Unless they first are dead."
Baltimore, Md. S. T. Udent

9. HALF SQUARE
1—An island in the British West Indies,
2—A native of the Aleutian Islands,
3—More secluded,
4—Kept afloat,
5—A contraction (Obs.),
6—Became inanimate,
7—A wooden implement for rowing a boat,
8—One half of an Em,
9—A letter.
Philadelphia, Pa. A. T. Ourman

10. INITIAL CHANGE (4)
The wisest men that ev'r you ken,
Have never deemed it treason,
To laugh a bit, to chaff a bit
And balance up their reason.
To ONE a bit, to TWO a bit,
And joke a bit in season.
Cumberland, Md. P. M. P.

11. DIAMOND

9—Letter in engineer.
Worthing, S. D. Sherlock Holmes

12. CHARADE (7)
Oh! Sweetheart dear, your TOTAL ways
Can never be forgotten,
For every day, yes, every hour,
LAST kindness it begotten.

To FIRST you, I will try so hard
That I, quite soon will be Glad to propose (and you'll accept),
And married we will be.
Baltimore, Md. The Major

13. RHOMBOLD

9—A letter.
Baltimore, Md. L. E. Phant

14. MUTATION
Tho' railroad schedules oft may change,
If now forgot, not quite so strange,
For such confusion now we find,
With clocks ahead and clocks behind.
By "standard time" one watch is set
(That is, if one does not forget!)—
Another, "daylight time" proclaims,
To save an hour, one of its aims.
E're night-time brings on "light-time's" glare
We find we have an hour to spare;
But, "old-time," "new-time," "true-time"—all Must sometime back on SUN-TIME fall!
Telford, Pa. P. A. Butterwick

15. MUTATION
Some may ask, "Am I A CHAPLIN, Or else a CHAPLAIN?"
May answer is, "I neither am,
But basso do I try!"
Baltimore, Md. I rimrose

Pensioners' Roll of Honor

*Oh, blest retirement! friend of life's decline—
Retreat from care that ever must be thine:
How blest is he who crowns, in shades like these,
A youth of labor with an age of ease.*

OLIVER GOLDSMITH—"The Deserted Village"

H. C. Breece

H. C. Breece was born in Allen County, Ohio, on April 15, 1858. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service in 1900 as trackman. On August 26, 1905 he was promoted to foreman, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

James Palladino

James Palladino was born in 1858. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service in 1888 as trackman. He remained in the M. of W. Department until 1921, when he was appointed janitor, Connellsville Division, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

T. H. Edmonds

T. H. Edmonds was born in 1858. He entered the service in 1873. After serving as engine cleaner at Piedmont and Keyser for a short time, he resigned and returned to school. He again returned to the Baltimore and Ohio in 1882 under Master Carpenter Jesse Townsend. He was made foreman painter in 1884. In 1885 he was appointed assistant foreman and in 1895 again made foreman painter on the Connellsville and Pittsburgh Divisions. A short time later these two divisions were separated and he remained on the Connellsville Division as foreman painter, which position he held at the time of this recent retirement.

Frederick Rohrs

Frederick Rohrs was born in 1856. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service as a laborer in the Motive Power Department in 1884. In 1898 he was appointed hostler and in 1913 supplyman. In 1914 he was transferred to position as pumper, where he remained until his retirement, Nov. 1, 1923.

What Railroads Cost Each Person

arises as to what became of the rest of the money.

It took 12 cents out of every 15.4 cents of earnings to pay operating expenses and taxes, and 7½ cents of this were the wages of employes. In other words, while each person in the country paid 2 cents a day toward railway interest and dividends, each person in the country paid 7½ cents a day toward railway wages. In 1916 each person paid 4 cents a day toward railway wages.

While the contribution of each person toward railway profits has declined eight-tenths of 1 cent a day since 1916, the contribution of each person toward railway wages has increased 3½ cents a day. This is because the average wages paid by the railways in 1916 were a little over four million dollars a day, while in the first half of this year they were about $8,300,000.

How much actual difference in money will it make, on the average, to each person whether the railways are allowed to earn the net return to which they claim they are entitled, or the return to which extreme radicals claim they should be restricted?

Not more than 1 cent a day.

Stewart Carroll a Good Press Agent

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., March 12, 1923

Mr. E. L. Ives:

Peoples Gas Building, Chicago, Illinois

Dear Mr. Ives:

I find that I have neglected to previously thank you for your suggestion that I travel between Chicago and Pittsburgh via the Baltimore and Ohio. I recently made the trip over the Baltimore and Ohio and presented your card to Mr. Carroll, the dining car steward, who took care of me in a most excellent manner. I was further entertained with information concerning the Railroad, particularly concerning the condition of its equipment, the large amount of freight which was being handled, the earnings for January, the closing price for the stock on the day of the trip, etc.

Were it not for the fact that the road would lose a good dining car steward, I would be inclined to suggest that Mr. Carroll be employed as a press agent.

At any rate, I enjoyed the trip very much.

With kind personal regards, I beg to remain, yours very truly,

The Value of a Smile

Sent in by MRS. CLARA McDONALD TAYLOR, who clipped it from the "Daughters of America Magazine"

The thing that goes the farthest toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most, is just a pleasant smile.
The smile that bubbles from the heart that loves its fellowman
Will drive away the clouds of gloom and coax the sun again.
It's full of worth, and goodness, too, with human kindness blent—
It's worth a million dollars, and it doesn't cost a cent.

There is no room for sadness where we see a cheery smile;
It always has the same good look—it's never out of style.
It nerves us on to try again when failure makes us blue;
The dimples of encouragement are good for me and you.
It pays a higher interest, for it is merely lent—
It's worth a million dollars, and it doesn't cost a cent.

A smile comes easily enough, a twinkle in the eye
Is natural—and does more good than any long-drawn sigh;

It touches on the heartstrings till they quiver blithe and long.

And always leaves an echo that is very like a song;
So, smile away! Folks understand what by a smile is meant,

It's worth a million dollars, and it doesn't cost a cent.

What Women Can Do When They Try

Prize Contest Won by Women from Ohio, West Virginia, Illinois and Maryland

THE Women's Prize Contest, conducted by the Women's Department of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE during the year 1923, brought forth a greater number of entries than any similar contest ever held by the MAGAZINE. And most gratifying were the results; there was no article submitted that was not of real value to Baltimore and Ohio women; there was not one that does not deserve special mention. Best of all, these articles—with the exception of those which already have been published—will appear in future issues of the MAGAZINE.

The contest was begun in January, 1923, when its purpose was explained and the prizes shown. Every woman of the Baltimore and Ohio, whether an employe herself or the wife of an employe, had a chance to enter. Each contestant submitted one or more articles during the year, articles which would be helpful to Baltimore and Ohio women.

At the end of the year these articles were carefully examined by five judges, two girls from our Baltimore offices, and three women who are wives of Baltimore and Ohio men. The results are shown in the tabulated list. Mrs. Cooper, Newark, Ohio, won first prize; Miss Lillian Betony, daughter of section foreman, Caddell, W. Va., won second prize; the third prize went to Mrs. Josephine Ausbrook, Clay City, Ill.; Mrs. J. V. Klier, wife of chief clerk, Valuation Department, Baltimore, and Miss Marie Slatterick, Division Engineer's Office, Wheeling, W. Va., tied for fourth prize. Mrs. Cooper received the handsome wrist watch pictured in the January issue of last year; the other prize winners were awarded lovely bar pins.

The articles which won the prize for Mrs. Cooper were certainly worthy of publication. The first one appears in this issue. Others will follow at intervals. Beside the article on the household budget Mrs. Cooper submitted papers on "System in Housekeeping," "Some of My Best Recipes," "The Story of an Angel Food Cake," "Devil's Food Cake Recipes," and "Why I Consider Swansdown Cake Flour a Real Economy in Baking."

Miss Betony's articles, some of which have appeared in the MAGAZINE are: "In Case of Emergency," "The Family Medicine Closet—What it Should Contain and Why," "Soup Recipes," "How to Mix and Bake Bread," "Care of the Baby," "Fish and its Cookery," "Household Hints," "The Terrapin," "Salad Recipes," and several others—all of which will make splendid articles for our women readers, and the housekeepers in particular.

Mrs. Ausbrook sent in a splendid salad recipe and an original apron pattern. The apron was designed by Mrs. Ausbrook, and while particularly adapted to the stout figure, since it will not sag in front when the housekeeper bends over to open her oven door, it is well adapted to the needs of any woman or girl who likes a pretty apron. 1½ yards of wide cretonne will make the apron. Edged with the inexpensive rick-rack it makes an apron that any housewife would be proud of.

Mrs. Klier's contribution was a letter, full of inspiration and ideas for our Women's Department—just the kind of letter that we like to get. A number of these ideas will be developed from time to time in the MAGAZINE. Hers is also a comprehensive article on how to build a house of post-cards—a little cardboard house to be used as a handkerchief box for children.

Miss Slatterick's contributions were a bathing suit which she made for herself and in which she was pictured last summer, and a delightful bit of philosophy on Happiness.

Those whose names are on our roll for honorable mention for contributing especially helpful and interesting articles in addition to those already named are the following: Mrs. Ada R. C. Abernathy, Lebanon, Ill., whose fine article, "Radio in the Home," was found interesting to many readers; Miss Maxine Waliburg, Lima, Ohio, whose article on Thrift won second prize in a Y. W. C. A. contest; Mrs. J. R. Easton, Wooster, Ohio, whose recipes and lovely letter, "My Home, My Neighbor and the Golden Rule," have been published in this department; Mrs. H. K. Clare, of Riverdale, Md., whose interesting story on how she manages her children will be read in a future issue of the MAGAZINE; Misses Edythe and Katye Coplan, Baltimore, whose helpful stories and letters all during the year have helped to strengthen the Women's Department considerably; Miss Estelle Barnes, Relay, Md., for her interesting story, "A Maryland Writer, Miss Martha Finley;" Mrs. Eva Gasperich, whose husband is a Mt. Clare man, for her inspirational stories and poems, one of which was published in the December issue; Mrs. E. Morris, Smithfield, Pa., whose household hints and splendid recipes from time to time have brightened these pages; Mrs. Lindsay Van Horn, Martinsburg, W. Va., who also has sent in some fine recipes, such as the women of West Virginia know how to prepare; Mrs. Cecil E. Baker, who sent in a delightful little story, "A Will and a Way—and Biscuits for Lunch," as well as some recipes for quince honey; Louise Oatman, Newark, Ohio, who sent in a number of fine recipes; Mrs. F. M. Wittman, Fairmont, W. Va., for household hints and recipes; Mrs. C. L. Culberson, 1117 Arbor Ave., Dayton, Ohio, who tells us how to make a lovely lamp shade, and whose article will be published in an early issue of the MAGAZINE.

The contest has given to the MAGAZINE some splendid articles for publication in its future issues; it has brought responses from women from all over the country; it has increased the desire among Baltimore and Ohio women to be of service to each other; it has brought us all a little closer together in our Big Family, and it has shown us just what women can do if they try.

There will be other contests in the future; arrangements are being made for one to be announced in an early issue of the MAGAZINE. While we hope for more entries next time, we could not wish for more helpful or more interesting ones than those which were submitted in the contest just finished. Those who did not win prizes need not feel at all discouraged. All entries will be used eventually in this Department. Look over the contributions of the prize winners and try again. That's the spirit of the Baltimore and Ohio, the spirit that in the early days bridged the rivers and tunneled the mountains that we might ride in comfort over the iron rails. The editorial staff joins in thanking each woman who entered this contest, for in so doing she has helped us, has helped herself, and has shown the spirit of real service.

What I Learned from the Household Budget

(First Prize Winning Article)

By MRS. F. E. COOPER, Wife of Master Mechanic, Newark, Ohio

I HAVE been reading in the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE about the office girls who are constantly leaving to get married—taking up a new job as it were. So if only for the sake of these brides may I tell of one of the contributors to the success of early married life—a household budget, which aids materially in making a careful manager of finances.

Most girls are glad to start out on the "road to happiness" with the life partner of their choice, even though the salary is rather small, but sometimes it's hard to make ends meet. To help, if possible, just such situations and too, older established families who find they can stretch the money further if an accurate account of income and expenditures is kept, I am going to give you the divisions of an actual working budget.

By this, I mean just what it takes to run a regular household establishment. Keep a ledger with columns for the following: Groceries (food), Meat, Milk, Ice, Electricity, Gas, Water, Garbage, Telephone, Coal, Insurance, Laundry, Household Necessities and Household Furnishings; Rent, or Upkeep of Home. This includes everything (unless help is hired) except personal expenditures which must be kept separately if the entire income is to be accounted for.

For the household budget, give yourself a stated amount, according to standard of living and locality. A certain sum can be set after a few months trial, but the most important fact is to keep within it every month. Don't allow yourself to get in the habit of running over or the value of the thing itself will be lost.

As a matter of convenience, add each column weekly, then at the end of the month, make a monthly statement of the total of each. Be sure to see that the sum left in the pocket book corresponds with the figures after you have deducted each week's expenses. It will not be at all difficult to be always correct, if you try each evening to allow a few minutes to write down the purchases made or bills paid that day in case you haven't time to do it before that.

It really doesn't require much book keeping in this simple method. A large book is all the equipment necessary unless you wish to keep the totals on file for further comparison. When one gets into this game it is not only interesting to see in black and white just where the money goes, but rather fascinating, at least to the bride, until a firm foundation is laid which means a goodly sized nest egg.

New Winter Fashions Show Many Styles that Can be Copied Easily by the Home Dressmaker

THE simplicity of the new styles for 1924 make sewing a pleasure. The patterns shown here may be obtained by writing the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine Pattern Bureau, 1188-1190 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y., enclosing 10 cents, silver or stamps, for each pattern ordered. Use the coupon. Please do not send your pattern orders to the Magazine Office at Baltimore. We get our patterns from the New York address, and to send orders to Baltimore would delay the receipt of your patterns for several days. All patterns are sent by first class mail, a new service established only two months ago. This means that patterns are sent out on the day that they are received at our New York office, and you receive them as soon as it is possible to get them to you.

4601. Wool crepe was selected for this model, decorated with cross stitching in contrasting colors. The lines are simple; the sleeve and neck line are very pleasing.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material.

4607. French serge, kasha or jersey weaves are good for this model. It has graceful lines, and becoming plait fulness at the left side of the front. The sleeve features the new fitted model.

This pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. The width at the foot with plaits extended is 2 yards. For a medium size  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 54-inch material will be required.

4600. Tweed, cheviot, serge, khaki and linen are good materials for this model.

The ample pockets will please the boy who has such good use for them.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size requires  $4\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material.

4606-4594. This comprises a popular short jacket (or coat) and the new cuff skirt. One could use caracul, velvet or other pile fabrics for the jacket and wool plaid suiting, twill or heather mixtures for the skirt.

The jacket is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 40-inch material. The skirt, which measures  $1\frac{3}{4}$  yard at the foot, is cut in 7 sizes: 25, 27, 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37 inches waist measure. A 29-inch size requires  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 54-inch material.

TWO separate patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 10c FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

4593. Striped percale is here combined with white pique. This is a good style for ratine, for wool rep, or serge, and also for linen, gingham and voile. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or elbow length.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. The width at the foot is 2 yards. A 38-inch size will require  $4\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material. Collar, vest and pocket flaps of contrasting material, require  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard.

4599. This dress is in slip on style. It has lines that are becoming and girlish. A combination of cloth and velvet, or plaid suiting and serge would be very desirable for this style.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12-year size requires 3 yards of 40-inch material of one kind. To make as illustrated requires  $1\frac{1}{4}$  yard of plain material and  $1\frac{3}{4}$  yard of checked material.

4590. This is a splendid model for business, or general utility wear. It may be developed in twill, kasha, French serge, or in satin, taffeta or velvet. The closing is effected at the centre in front, and additional opening may be made at the side seam.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires  $4\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. To trim with contrasting material requires  $\frac{3}{4}$  yard 36 inches wide or,  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of lace 3 inches wide if trimmed as illustrated.

4276. Figured percale in blue and white, with banding of black bias tape, is here shown. This is a good model for gingham, rubberized cloth, linen, crepe or sateen.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: small, medium, large and extra large. A medium size requires  $2\frac{1}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material.

4587. This pretty model comprises a vest and "step-in" drawers. The vest portion may be finished with "camisole"

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $5\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 40-inch material. The width at the foot is  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards, with plait extended.

4602. This model is finished in "wrap style" and has the new flare effect in the skirt portions. As illustrated plain and contrasting material may be effectively combined or, one could use wool crepe with wool or yarn embroidery for decoration. It is also a good style for velvet.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 27-inch material of one kind. If made as illustrated it will require 1 yard of figured material and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yard of plain material 36 inches wide.

4570. Soft nainsook was employed in the making of this model. Embroidery and narrow ruffles form the trimming. This is a good style for crepe, lawn, voile or soft silk.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 6 months, 1 year and 2 years. A 1-year size requires  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yard of 36-inch material.

Pattern 3681 is shown in this model. It is cut in 6 sizes: 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size will require  $2\frac{1}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material.

Long cloth, cambric, muslin, lawn, crepe, and outing flannel could be used for this design.

4586. Nainsook, crepe or crepe de chine are attractive materials for this design. Lace or insertion or, a simple finish of hem-stitching will be suitable for trimming.

top or with shaped shoulders. If desired a closing may be effected at the side of the panel. Crepe, crepe de chine or nainsook is suitable for this design.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44 and extra large 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. Panel of embroidery requires  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard 9 inches wide.

4585. This model is comfortable and practical. It is suitable for a nurse's uniform, or for a house dress. Linen, repp, drill, percale, gingham and flanneclette may be used to develop the dress.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $4\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. The width at the foot is 2 yards.

4589. Velvet or satin, would be very attractive for this model. It is finished in slip on style. The plait portions afford becoming fullness at the sides. The facing and collar are new features.

This pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $5\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. For collar and facings of contrasting material  $\frac{3}{4}$  yard is required. The width at the foot is  $3\frac{3}{8}$  yards.

Potato Salad

By MRS. E. A. AUGUSTINE, Wife of Engineer, Parkersburg, W. Va.

Boiled eggs chopped.

Onions chopped.

Mangoes chopped.

Use a little green or a little red.

Mayonnaise Dressing

2 eggs.

1 teaspoon salt.

3 tablespoons sugar.

Pepper.

Beat together with butter size of walnut. Add one teacup of vinegar and set on stove. Never let boil. When starts to bubble take off and add a little water.

"Everyone needs, and ought to have, comfort at home; and comfort is the united product of cleanliness, thrift, regularity, industry—in short, a continuous performance of duties, each in itself, apparently trivial. The cooking of a potato, the baking of a loaf, the mending of a shirt, the darning of a pair of stockings, the making of a bed, the scrubbing of a floor, the washing and dressing of a baby, all are matters of no great moment; but a woman ought to know how to do all these before the management of a household, however poor, is entrusted to her."—Samuel Smiles, in "Thrift"

Beware the Elusive Nickel!

In the average American household the leakage of pennies is a leakage of dollars every week, of hundreds of dollars every year, of thousands in every lifetime.

The streets are strewn with rubbish for which somebody paid good money five minutes ago. Our bureaus are stuffed with it. Our tables are cluttered with it. We go right on buying. Five cents—ten cents—what's that?

In amusement parks forty years ago there were trees, tables, music, perhaps a Punch and Judy, popcorn, perhaps pink lemonade. Families went with basket lunches. Nowadays take two good crisp twenties with you if you plan to spend a day with two or three children in an amusement park.

Five and ten cents! The biggest building in the world was built by them. They pay for the big street car systems, for the flashing chewing gum advertisements, for the newspaper buildings, for the tremendous cigarette industry. They started the movies.

These nickels and dimes will work just the same miracle in your life and mine. They will breed, increase and build, putting behind them power, courage, success, and more success.

—KATHLEEN NORRIS, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger

The Happiest Penny of All

A Story to tell to the Kiddies

ONCE upon a time there were five little pennies. They lived in a little purse in Jimmy's pocket. They were nice, round, bright, new pennies. Grandpa had given them to Jimmy for his birthday, one penny for each year. And Jimmy was five years old.

"How shall I spend my pennies, Grandpa?" asked Jimmy, climbing upon Grandpa's knee to play Ride-a-Cock-Horse-to-Banbury-Cross.

"Spend them in any way that you like, Jimmy Boy," said Grandpa, "but if I were you I'd see how happy I could make each one. There are lots of ways to spend pennies, you know."

Jimmy Boy thought, and thought, and thought.

"I shall spend one for candy," he said presently, "for that ought to make a penny happy." And he bought a round ball of lemon candy with the first little penny. And the first little penny was happy, but not half so happy as he ought to have been.

"I shall spend the second and the third little pennies for two pretty marbles," declared Jimmy Boy when he had eaten his candy. "I should think that they would be happy for that." And so he spent the two for marbles. And when the second penny and the third penny lay in the big cash drawer that belonged to the storekeeper, they were happy, too. But they were not half so happy as they might have been.

"What shall I do with the fourth little penny?" asked Jimmy Boy. "Oh, I know. I saw a lead pencil in the store window. I shall buy the pencil; then I can learn to write." So Jimmy Boy bought the pencil and gave the woman who kept the shop his fourth penny. She put it into her pocket. And as he lay there the fourth penny became quite happy, even happier than any of the other pennies. But even then it was not quite as happy as it could have been.

"I have only one penny left," declared Jimmy Boy, "I think that I shall keep it. The candy gave me the toothache and I lost my marbles. I still have my pencil, so I think I shall take it and count up the pennies that I have in my little penny bank. Then I'll put in the last new penny that Grandpa gave me."

So Jimmy Boy got a piece of white paper and made a mark on it with his pencil for every penny that he could see in his bank. There were twenty-four of them altogether. He dropped in the bright penny.

"Oh, goody!" he called, "that makes twenty-five now."

"And that's a whole quarter, a quarter of a dollar," said Grandpa.

"Oh, is it, really and truly?" asked Jimmy Boy, dancing happily. And he was so glad that he had saved the fifth little penny.

And the little penny in the bank with the twenty-four others was so happy that he danced and fell all over the place when Jimmy Boy shook the bank. He was happier than all of the other pennies put together, just the happiest penny of all. And why? I'll just let you guess.

Let's Keep a Budget This Year

AFTER having read Mrs. Cooper's splendid article on keeping a budget, I am sure that all of you will want to do this. It simply means keeping account of every cent that you spend.

January is National Thrift Month, the time when all housekeepers as well as all those who hold other occupations are encouraged to begin the New Year by resolving to make this year count, all of which means that we all should want to put aside something for a rainy day. And economy, which is the watchword of Thrift, goes a little farther; it means saving for the present needs, saving not only our money but also our time and energy; it means getting the best values for our money, living comfortably by spending wisely.

There is no better plan for systematic saving and wise spending than by keeping an account, so that we may see how our money goes and determine where we can "stop the leaks." To meet the need of an all-around account book, or budget, we have arranged with the National Thrift Committee to let us have at cost (10 cents each) copies of the little budget book which is just out. This booklet is designed so as to be of use to everybody, both men and women, whether engaged in business or in household work. There are spaces for entries for each day in the year. Make your entries every night, then at the end of the year you may make your grand totals.

A copy of the "Budget Book with a Conscience," which is the name of this little booklet, may be had by any reader of the MAGAZINE who will send 10 cents together with the coupon at the bottom of this page, properly filled out.

Dear Aunt Mary:

64 out of every 100 men die without leaving anything—as a result, their wives and children suffer after their bread winner is taken from them.

Baltimore and Ohio women have an excellent opportunity to prevent such a happening in their lives. Their husbands can save money through the Relief Department. $5.00 per month taken from their salary, with interest at the end of five years would amount to $339.00, or at the end of ten years to $771.65. Most everyone can spare $5.00 per month.

Yours lovingly,

UNCLE EZRA

Little Girl Helps Her Daddy Get a Better Job

Prize Contest Brings Many Suggestions on How Boys and Girls Can Help Their Daddies

"HOW I Can Help Daddy to be a Good Railroader" was the name of the contest for Baltimore and Ohio girls and boys which was explained in the October issue of the MAGAZINE. Then Little Railroaders from all over the System began to write letters to Aunt Mary, telling how each child could help his or her father to be a good railroader. Of course, our fathers are good railroaders anyway, but we found that there were many, many things that even little girls and boys can do to help their fathers be happy in their work.

Many fine letters were sent in, and Aunt Mary is only sorry that we could not give each one who entered a prize. But there will be many more contests in which you all can enter, so do not mind if you didn't win a prize in this one.

Many of the papers will be published; we had hoped to publish all of them, but so many of those from Brunswick, Md., were so much alike that of those we shall use only a few. All others will be used from time to time. The reason that those from Brunswick were so much alike is the fact that the teachers of the Brunswick School were kind enough to tell the children all about the contest and to talk it over in school. As a result the little people all learned together many ways of helping Daddy be a good railroader, and their papers contained many of the same things. Many of the prizes went to Brunswick children; so many from that place entered the contest.

We thank the teachers of the public schools at Brunswick, Martinsville, Ohio; Washington Junction, or Point of Rocks; Harper's Ferry, and Washington, Indiana; also those of St. Mary's School, Washington, Indiana—all of whom encouraged our Little Railroaders to enter the contest. Boys and girls, please thank your teachers for us.

There were many letters which, although they did not win prizes, were particularly good. A few little girls and boys did not seem to understand just what kind of letter to write; I am afraid that they did not read the contest rules very carefully, for instead of telling how they could help their daddies to be good and happy railroaders, they told about many other things. Of course, we could not enter these in the contest, and we hope that these little people will read the rules carefully next time. The letters were really nice and I am sure that one of them, at least, might have won a prize if it had been the right kind of letter.

Dolly Smith, sister of Carlton E. Smith, Brunswick, who won the first prize in the class for girls under 11 years old, named many ways in which she could help her brother be a good railroader. One of these nice ways is that of making the home more beautiful. An attractive home seldom fails to make a person love it, and a person who loves his home will be much happier than he who does not. Then, Dolly would have good books for her brother to read. Good books always help us to become better men and women. She would mend his clothes for him so as to keep him looking neat, and she would see that he is clean and neat before he leaves for work.

Raymond Albert, who won first prize in the class for boys under 11, is the son of Walter F. Albert, car coupler, Brunswick. Raymond is only nine years old. If he does all the fine things that he knows will help his Daddy be a good railroader, then I am sure that his Daddy is a good railroader and that he is proud of Raymond.

Ruth French, daughter of Track Foreman James F. French, Point of Rocks, Md., who won first prize in the class for girls over 11 years old, not only knows how to help her daddy to be a good railroader, but she has done it. Read in her letter what her father says about her. I wonder how many little girls and boys and their mothers can help the fathers to be promoted. Ruth's letter was the best among all of the letters from the girls.

The best letter of all is the one from Irwin Harper, 13 year old son of Station Agent E. C. Harper, Martinsville, Ohio. Irwin believes that the best way to help Daddy is to be a pal, a companion to him in every way. This is something that we all can do.

The others who won prizes, and whose names are on the opposite page, wrote splendid letters. These will be published from time to time in the MAGAZINE. I would like to have the pictures of all of these as well as of all of the others who entered the contest. A good snapshot showing the face clearly will make a good picture in the MAGAZINE; do not send blurred pictures for our picture man cannot use them at all.

Now, everybody watch out for the next contest, and in the meantime, try to answer the puzzles; sometimes there are nice rewards for correct answers.

First Prize Letter—Girls Under Eleven Years Old

Dear Aunt Mary:

I can help my brother to become a happy railroader by doing these things: I can keep

Irwin Harper, son of Agent, Martinsville, Ohio, winner of first prize for boys eleven years old and over quiet while he is asleep; obey him; speak better English; read the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE; do errands for him; make the home more beautiful by planting flowers, and have good books for him to read.

By doing these things, home will be more pleasant and he will be in a better humor to go to work.

When brother goes to work I always kiss him goodbye and wish him good luck.

I buy him fruit to eat. I will help him to do his work. When he has a birthday we have a little party in his family.

When he goes to work we fix him a nice dinner.

I sew his shirts or stockings before he goes to work. I take him to church. I am kind to him. I think a lot of my brother. I help him to buy his new railroad clothes when his old ones wear out.

I can make brother clean and neat before he goes to work, and when he goes out to work wish him good luck.

I wish him to love everybody and to be more ambitious, and I shall help him whenever I can.

DOLLY SMITH,

Sister of Clerk Carlton E. Smith,
Brunswick, Md.

First Prize Letter—Boys Under Eleven Years Old

Dear Aunt Mary:

There are many ways to help Daddy to be a happy railroader. I can go to school and get a good education; I can carry his lunch to him, bring home a good report and let him see it; do everything he tells me to do and do it the best I can; do everything I can to help him; be truthful, kind and trustworthy. I can take care of our furniture and clothes, and take care of my body. I can obey my parents. I do not worry Daddy at his work, nor carry tales. I behave myself at school, and tell the truth at all times.

RAYMOND ALBERT,

Son of Car Coupler Walter F. Albert,
Brunswick, Md.

First Prize Letter—Girls Over Eleven Years Old

Dear Aunt Mary:

"How We Can Help Daddy Be a Good Track Foreman." Oh! there are many ways. First of all we can have his home surroundings pleasant and cheerful; we can do this by having his meals ready when he comes in from work and by having a pleasant home. This can be done by every member of the household welcoming him with a smile and kind words.

Second, a working man cannot live on the food which a man lives on that does not work. He must have nourishing food which will make him stand the hardships which he passes through. Let every boy and girl see that his or her Daddy gets this.

Third, when Daddy comes in from work, tired and worn out, do not let him sleep in a bed half-made; see that he is comfortable and I am sure this will help to make him happy.

Fourth, if Daddy speaks to you, obey him at once, do not make an excuse of "I haven't time just now." Now suppose we turn this around and we were to ask Daddy to do something for us and he would say, "I haven't time just now." We would think very hard of him, wouldn't we? For this reason if he would be like some little boys and girls I know, he never would have time.

Boys and girls, I have tried to do these things which I have mentioned and I have also succeeded. Another thing which I haven't mentioned is never to neglect Daddy's clothes. Always have him comfortable in clothes as well as food, and other home surroundings.

I often think if it wasn't for Daddy what would mother, brother and I do, for we are all depending on him. My Daddy works every day and very seldom is sick. If anyone would ask him why he can stand so much work, I know the answer he would make. It would be, "My family does not neglect me." I am very glad to say that we all do everything we can to make Daddy's work a success and I am sure he is grateful to us. Some people might ask, "He can say he is grateful but does he show it?" Yes, he shows it. They may ask "How?" I can very proudly say, "Doesn't he work for us every day? What more could we expect of him?"

Boys and girls, if you are not making your daddy happy, make a new start, and I am sure you will have a happy daddy and also a happy home. There are many other ways in which we can help daddy but I think these are the main ones, don't you?

When I started my letter I asked Daddy if he would help me and to my surprise he told me that Mother, Brother and I had been the main ones to help him in the promotion from a trackman to a track foreman. Do you realize how glad I am to know that we can help Daddy this way?

First Prize Letter—Boys Over Eleven Years Old

Dear Aunt Mary:

I think there is nothing better for a boy to be doing, than helping Dad.

As everyone knows, recreation is essential to health and happiness, just as essential to a railroader as to any one else. Every railroader has at one time or another been tempted to quit. Nearly every time he becomes dissatisfied because of either too much or too little to do. I can keep Dad from getting too much to do by running all his errands and doing the little things that take his time.

As Daddy is station agent, he has more time for attention to me than if he were an operator. And because I know he is interested in me and watches a great many things I do, I am striving all the time to be his pride and standby. If I can make him proud of me, I can do a lot toward bringing him the peace of mind which will make it possible for him to concentrate on his work, and, thus, make him a better and happier railroader.

I know for myself that it is important that I start the day right. Then this is true for Dad, too. So I think it my duty to go to the office, each morning, sweep, dust, build a cheerful fire, and put things in order. This helps Dad start the day right, you see. Instead of dreading his return to work in the morning, he really looks forward to it. He is sure of finding the office inviting, and that means he will begin his work in a good frame of mind.

On Sunday Daddy has the whole day off. He rests his mind. Whenever possible, we take a long hike. In the colder months we attend church together, then read to each other through the evenings at home, or play checkers, or pitch indoor horseshoes. And summer Sundays are better still. We go fishing, swimming, sometimes boating.

I always try to be a good companion, a good pal to him, not spoiling his day with little worries. I like to be with Daddy when he just relaxes, like this and I enjoy it as much as I can, too, for his sake. Happy Sundays, no dread of Monday mornings and going back to the office, and contentment because I am contented. Daddy himself remains a boy, with me, for these play days.

It is in the little things that I can help Daddy to be a happy railroader.

Sincerely yours,

IRWIN HARPER

Son of Station Agent E. C. Harper, Martinsville, Ohio

Mildred Albrecht, Baltimore, Md., one of our little Railroaders

Dear Girls and Boys:

The little people who answered the October puzzles were many. I had no idea that so many of you would guess the right answers, for the puzzles were hard. It was not so hard to put the names together, but the girl's name was Gladys.

Those who guessed the right answers are: Estelle Barnes, St. Denis, Md.; Dorothy Knoepp, daughter of C. G. Knoepp, Mt. Clare Printing Department; Marjorie Walburn, 212 Elder Street, Cumberland, Md.; Blanche Jefferson, 1835 Clifton Avenue, Baltimore, Md.; Gladys Wieneke, 4609 Park Heights Avenue, Baltimore, Md.; Mary Magdalene Appel, Breese, Ill.; Ernst Lapp, Dorsey, Md.; Rebecca Herman, 1915 Clifton Avenue, Baltimore, Md.; Mary Elizabeth Fritz, 5904 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Ruth Troxell, 1 Alluvian Terrace, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Grace La Bonte, 414 S. Payson Street, Baltimore, Md.; Louise Kanode, Rippon, W. Va. Evelyn Luh (who also sent some original puzzles which we will use from time to time), Baltimore, Md.; Raymond Hutson, 125 W. First Street, Cumberland, Md.; Roy Walburn, 212 Elder Street, Cumberland, Md.; Arline Tysinger, 38 Humbird Street, Cumberland, Md.; Geneva Reel, 27 Poplar Avenue, Newark, Ohio; Frances Johnson, 2024 Penrose Avenue, Baltimore, Md.; Helen Starklauf, Baltimore, Md., and one little boy or girl from Cumberland who forgot to give his or her name.

Heard of "B & O" Shoes?

MISS LILIAN SCHUELER, our bright correspondent for the Office of Auditor of Disbursements, overheard her little sister Kathryn, in the following conversation with a playmate.

"Aw come on out and jump rope." This from one of the children on our block.

"But I tell you my mother won't let me," said Kathryn, who was having a hard time to obey that order.

"Well, why won't she let you?" another of the coaxers piped up.

"Because I have on my B & O shoes."

"B & O shoes, what's that?"

"Best and Only," snapped the answerer.

After hearing this Miss Schueler had to go in, shut the door and indulge in a good laugh. Here, too, Miss Lilian!

Other pictures of prize winners will be published in next month's MAGAZINE.

Over Fifteen Hundred Attend First Annual Entertainment and Dance of Chicago Terminals Employees' Association, December 12

ON December 12, the rain came down in Chicago, in torrents, all day and all night, but this did not prevent 1500 people, consisting of employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Terminals, their friends and families coming to the Masonic Temple at Cottage Grove and 63rd Street for the first annual entertainment and dance of the Chicago Terminal Employees' Association of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. And the sunshine inside more than counteracted the gloom outside. Everyone was happy, everyone enjoyed the evening and the entertainment was "put over" in the standard Baltimore and Ohio way. To pick anyone for special mention in connection with the entertainment would be impossible. Every man and every lady on every committee did his or her full share to make the evening the pronounced success everyone agreed it was.

The floor was perfect for dancing, the card room well taken care of and the music furnished by Van's Orchestra—one of the best in Chicago—was all that could be desired. The Midway Masonic Temple is practically new and while it may not be the largest hall in the City on Lake Michigan, it was perfectly adapted to our needs.

Between the dances, an exceptionally interesting entertainment was given by Miss Mima McKenzie and Master Kenneth Ladwig, the former being daughter of Team Track Foreman McKenzie, who has been in the service fourteen years. The children danced the Highland Fling together, then Mima gave us the Sailor's Hornpipe. After this, an attractive little girl came out on the platform and executed a pretty fancy dance. She was heartily applauded, and returning to respond, removed her wig, revealing none other than Master Kenneth. His disguise was perfect and everyone was well "fooled." Mr. McKenzie and Mrs. Ladwig have reason to be proud of their talented children. Through Mr. McKenzie's courtesy and that of Agent Ferguson, Sears Station, we are able to show our readers their photographs. The youngsters were accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Ladwig.

A fine, funmaking feature was the Balloon Dance, in which every gentleman received a balloon, which he tied to the ankle of his partner. An elimination contest then started, couples being eliminated when the lady's balloon was broken. Every dancer was permitted to break the balloon of an opponent, and it almost reminded one of a chicken fight to see the contestants sparring to break each others balloons.

The Association was originated at a meeting called by Superintendent F. S. DeVeny, on May 16, 1923, at which time a temporary organization was effected and committees appointed to arrange a picnic. The picnic was held on July 1, with an attendance of approximately four thousand, consisting of employees, their families and friends. Officials and employees worked shoulder to shoulder for the success of the picnic, with the result that it was a great success in every respect, and the future of the Association was assured.

A general meeting of employees was called on September 11, 1923, at which time by-laws were adopted and a permanent organization created.

The purpose of the Association is to promote social and other activities which will create good fellowship, and to further

WHAT THE REPORTER SAW AT THE CHICAGO TERMINAL EMPLOYEES' ANNUAL BALL, DECEMBER 12

The boy with the Irish Shillalah is Kenneth Ladwig, 2717 Wilcox Street, Chicago, who entertained the audience with fancy dancing. The two in "Kilties" are Team Track Foreman A. McKenzie and his daughter Mima, the latter being an exceptionally fine fancy dancer. The other drawings explain themselves the interests of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Railroad.

Every employe is automatically a member of the Association, and no dues are assessed, the Association being financed by revenue obtained through social events.

The Management has donated a large room on the second floor of the Grand Central Station for use as a club room; a piano has been purchased, and it is hoped that before the winter is over the members will be invited to a recital by the chorus and orchestra which is being formed.

President, R. M. Irish, chief clerk to engineer, M. & C.; Vice-President, E. J. Hoffman, abstract clerk, Local Freight House; Secretary, J. J. West, secretary to superintendent; Treasurer, Chas. Johnson, chief clerk to general auditor. The directors are: F. S. DeVeney, superintendent; S. A. Allen, freight traffic manager; T. T. Sample, conductor; R. R. Huggins, terminal train master; E. B. Oliver, locomotive engineer; F. Mathes, boilermaker; W. G. Brown, general passenger agent; C. H. Offerle, machinist; H. M. Jouver, general freight and passenger agent; F. B. Huntington, general auditor; A. Rost, track supervisor; J. H. Cook, city passenger agent.

The committees arranging the dance and entertainment on December 12, were composed of the following employes:

Arrangement Committee

Chairman, H. O. Wertenberg, cost accountant; Harold Williams, chief clerk, assistant general freight agent; William Weadley, car record clerk, local freight agent; J. J. Kennedy, chief clerk, master mechanic; H. E. Hanson, chief clerk, superintendent.

Reception Committee

Chairman, D. W. Owen, chief clerk, traffic department; H. J. Fisher, traveling freight agent; H. D. Cavell, traveling freight agent; C. A. Reamer, baggage agent; Tillie Sample, conductor; Frank Sindelar, track foreman; H. F. Anderson, general yard master; E. M. McCuen, road foreman engines; F. Mathes, boilermaker; J. E. Quigley, general foreman; Geo. Armstrong, agent; Joe Bowers, chief clerk, agent, Robey St.; E. S. Donahue, chief clerk, agent, Whiting; Mable Hartman, clerk, Agent's Office, East Chicago; Susan Whalen, clerk, Agent's Office, East Chicago; Clara Nordstrom, clerk, Agent's Office, 77th St.; William McBride, rate clerk, Agent's Office, 77th St.; A. Egarter, painter; W. E. Lowry, boilermaker; L. L. Quinn, car inspector; F. E. Mitchell, electrician; D. M. Julian, car foreman; Geo. Gohr, signal foreman; Henry Saltow, motor car operator; Raymond Hayes, plumber; E. B. Oliver, engineer; Geo. Maypole, chief clerk, Local Freight Office; Thime Lynch, assistant chief claim clerk, Local Freight House; C. H. Offerle, machinist; E. F. Ferguson, agent, Sears Station; I. J. Fields, clerk, Storekeeper's Office; A. Rost, track supervisor; C. I. Bender, assistant track supervisor; J. F. McWilliams, chief clerk, general freight agent; H. H. Hanert, leverman; Rose Malloy, telephone operator; Helen Smith, clerk, Master Mechanic's Office; Cassie Charles, telephone operator; Rose Levens, secretary to general attorney; Mary Philbin, assistant pay roll clerk, General Auditor's Office; Rose Glover, comptometer operator, General Auditor's Office; F. S. Stuhl, chief clerk, Baggage Room; Elizabeth Keough, secretary to master mechanic; Kathryn Smith, clerk, Master Mechanic's Office; Nell Pope, clerk, Master Mechanic's Office; Margaret English, clerk, Master Mechanic's Office; Evelyn Kinney, stenographer, Storekeepers Office; B. Kufka, record clerk, Sears Station; O. H. Hummer, secretary to general freight agent; R. Glenn, car inspector.

Ticket and Door Committee

Chairman, H. J. Burg, chief clerk, general auditor; Henry Childs, clerk, General Auditor's Office; Gilbert Haeck, clerk, General Auditor's Office; W. Wheeler, clerk, M. of W. Department; Wm. Hogan, track supervisor; T. H. Tearney, gate supervisor.

Cards and Bunco Committee

Chairman, G. Christiansen, assistant chief clerk, general auditor; J. H. Lawler, tracing clerk, Local Office; R. J. Blackburn, rate clerk, Local Office; H. F. Langfield, clerk, Local Freight Office; G. H. Brown, settlement clerk, Local Freight Office; L. G. Bolger, revising clerk, Local Freight Office; J. C. Molter, captain of police; Gus Wilmsen, home route clerk, Car Accountant's Office; Howard Nichols, clerk, Car Accountant's Office; C. E. Stuart, bookkeeper, General Auditor's Office; Elmer Kremske, interline clerk, Auditor's Office.

Anticipating that many would not care to dance, the Entertainment Committee made ample provision for playing Bunco and "500;" thirty-four tables of Bunco played progressively and fifteen tables of Five Hundred. Those who came too late to participate in the regular games were provided with cards or dice as they desired.

Twenty two rounds of Bunco and six rounds of Five Hundred constituted the evening's play and consumed approximately two hours, the games ending with the awarding of prizes, consisting of merchandise certificates on Marshall Field & Co., to the following:

Bunco

$7.00 certificates: Mrs. M. Randler, Irene Carlson, Mrs. A. McDonough. $5.00 certificates: Helen Klansky, Mrs. F. J. Wolf, Geo. Hilliard. $3.00 certificates: Mrs. C. Carstens, Mrs. J. Loperman, Ernst Leydet. $2.00 certificates: Mrs. Phillips, Marion Milburn, Marie Miller, Louise Reidler, H. Faulkner, O. H. Kuehner, G. W. Milburn, G. Smith, Elmer Thorstensen.

"500"

$7.00 certificate: Mrs. F. Oke. $5.00 certificate: H. A. Levy. $3.00 certificate: Mrs. A. De Vries. $2.00 certificates: Mrs. F. K. Moses, Mrs. H. A. Levy, O. E. Anderson, Mrs. F. G. Guernsey.

The "Booby" prizes consisted of two Ma-Ma Dolls and two Ham and Sam Mechanical toys. For Bunco the "Booby" was awarded to Mrs. Charles Ranck and by the manner in which Mrs. Ranck fondled the little stranger, it is evident that the newcomer will find a pleasant home.

John Higgins, by taking the mechanical toy for the men's "booby," found much pleasure in showing his friends the fruit of his labor. John was heard to make the remark that his was the first prize, merely another indication that it's the little things that actually count.

The gentlemen's "booby" prize was awarded to Chas. Brock, So. Chicago, Ill., and was a "Ham and Sam."

At the time of awarding the doll to Mrs. Ranck, Joe Wolf was noticed talking confidentially to her and it was learned that he was trying in every way to convince her that he was positive that the prize was meant for him. Mrs. Ranck, being unwilling to be deprived of her newly acquired "daughter," demurred, so nothing was left to do but to pick up the doll meant for the "500" player entitled to it and the last report we had, was that Fred was seen walking down Cottage Grove Ave. continually moving the infant up and down to hear the Ma-Ma utterances of the doll, much to the chagrin of Mrs. Wolf.

A homey atmosphere was given the room by Trainmaster Barlow and his family, who appeared to be having an enjoyable time. At the table next to them, occupied by Messrs. Rost, Cross and Hartlerode of East Chicago, they were playing one of those games where you chalk a ring in the center of the table and erase the score with your hand, as they used to do in those days of "never again." We did not know what the prize was they played for.

Particular mention should be made of Messrs. Levy and Bernstein of Mr. Huntington's Office for their timely assistance to the Committee. Not only for services rendered but for the fact that Mr. Levy being the accountant in the General Auditor's Office, in verifying the score cards of the 500 players, won the first prize. Owing to his partiality to the ladies—he forgot himself and was given second prize. It is evident that he must be a good accountant and knows the values of "debts" and "credits."

Mr. Bernstein was not so fortunate as he got in "dutch" with a sweet young lady who, we understand, will shortly be in position to dictate to him. This young lady was among the many who was privileged to cut for one of the prizes but failed in the shake off. We are not yet satisfied that "Murphy" fully protected her interests.

City and County employees of greater New York—223 of them—enjoyed Baltimore and Ohio hospitality in the Capital City.

Fred Hickok, agent, East Chicago, evidently had his mind on the "morrow" and was lining up his solicitation for Baltimore and Ohio business (for which Fred has a reputation), as he was fortunate enough to get the "bid" a few times, but he invariably insisted on laying down his cards and calling 100 Aces, 150 Trumps, etc. We would like Fred to explain what such procedure has to do with a game of "500."

Seen through the Magazine Reporter's Spectacles

Soo Line and C. and N. W. R'y engineer's wives, joining with the Baltimore and Ohio folk in making the evening enjoyable. The Soo Line uses our terminal in Chicago and therefore we were glad to be a "Good Neighbor."

Everett B. Oliver, MAGAZINE correspondent, member of various committees, finding partners for the ladies—while his wife looked on and smiled. Ever meet her? If you didn't you have missed something well worth while.

Captain of Police J. C. Moulter—with his red carnation, looking after his duties on the reception committee. Careful investigation failed to secure the "why" of the red carnation!

Claim Agent and Mrs. W. C. Boyer conspicuous by their absence. "Too wet," says friend Boyer. His secretary said she was there, but minute search did not reveal her whereabouts. Where was she?

Did you see Boilermaker Poppele's nose? Wonder where he got it? He refused to say!

Superintendent Deveney on the job, everywhere at once, looking after everything and everyone—and if anyone failed to have a good time, it certainly wasn't his fault.

President Irish. Maybe he is and maybe he isn't, but one thing we are sure of, he's the right man in the right place when it comes to the Welfare Association.

General Car Foreman Julian: "Here, you MAGAZINE man, come here, I want to whisper to you." We went, he whispered, we shook hands and parted the best of friends. He's a real live booster for the Railroad and the MAGAZINE too.

See Oliver's hat? Didn't look much like an engineer's cap, did it? Look in the photograph and you'll see it.

Master Mechanic Moses, knowing that The Capitol Limited had left his territory ON TIME, as usual, thoroughly enjoyed the evening.

The girls in the Ticket Office promising the reporter a dance, and then failing to appear. Why?

Traveling Auditor Porter, promising to bring his wife and see that we had a dance, also failed to keep his promise. Well, maybe he checked enough tickets that day, so thought he'd not take a chance on having to check more at the door of the Hall.

Miss Esther J. Moberg at the dance with—who was it, now? She didn't introduce us! Too busy, we guess.

To President Irish, Superintendent Deveney, E. B. Oliver, H. O. Wertenberg and many others, we extend appreciative thanks for the assistance given in securing details and photographs for our story, and in conclusion we have been asked to tell everyone who in any way helped to make the evening the success it undoubtedly was, that the officers extend their sincere thanks.

Try This Pre-Volstedian Flavor!

The other day we issued a general circular to all concerned on the system and, to our surprise, about fifty copies were returned by one of our superintendents stating that he had made an ample distribution and had fifty left over. There is an example. "Small stuff," you may say, but a little closer cooperation along that line might prove a saving in our printing bill.

The Railroad does not wish us to be stingy—it simply asks us to avoid useless waste. Let's watch our opportunities to do this during 1924!

Assistant Chief Clerk Walter Wilmer Secures Valuable Business

the Baltimore and Ohio. They left Gay Street Station, Baltimore, at 6.21 a. m., arriving Philadelphia (24th and Chestnut Streets) 8.05 a. m., then transferred to the Reading to Manayunk. After a day spent in feasting and good fellowship, they returned to Baltimore arriving at 10.00 p. m.

On November 25, the Autumn Pleasure Club, John Murphy, President, paid a return visit to Baltimore, coming on a special train over the Baltimore and Ohio.

After spending a pleasant day at the Collington Club they left Gay Street Station for home at 8.00 p. m. The Collington special was in charge of R. E. Lohman, city passenger agent, Baltimore, and the Autumn Club special in charge of W. F. Doroba, city passenger agent, Philadelphia. The movement of these clubs was secured for the Baltimore and Ohio through the efforts of Walter Wilmer, assistant chief clerk to the assistant auditor disbursements, and both clubs have expressed their appreciation for the manner in which the special trains were handled.

The quality of Mr. Wilmer's interest and effort in securing this business for the Baltimore and Ohio may be judged by the fact that he was competing for it against a road which could have handled each of the movements without change.

Congratulations, Mr. Wilmer!

Just between You and Me

As the Rectangle published in this issue under No. 7 is the first of its kind we have presented we feel it necessary to explain that it is shaped like this:

  O O O O O
O O O O O O O
  O O O O O O
    O O O O O O
      O O O O O O
        O O O O O O
          O O O O O O
            O O O O
              O O O

and the words read the same across and up and down, just like a diamond or a square.

At last we have the pleasure of publishing a contribution from our old friend Jo Mullins. Jo has been puzzling for more than a half-century, has kept at it continuously and is today recognized as one of the greatest solvers the game has ever known. He has a delightful personality and a legion of friends and while he coyly acknowledges to more than sixty summers, time sits lightly on his shoulders and he doesn't look a day over forty-five. So much for clean, healthy living and an active mentality.

P. M. P. says the jingle he has used in No. 10 is not altogether original with him but is something he had remembered from early childhood. The words may not be exactly as the original but are near enough to convey the meaning of the unknown author.

On November 30 Happy Thought and N. Jineer tendered a reception to the puzzlers of Baltimore at the home of the latter. Quite a gathering of the Krewe resulted, and a pleasant evening was spent in solving original puzzles presented by those present. It was voted to hold more of these gatherings and the next one is slated for some time in January.

A Good Creed

Let's forget everything but the good things, and increase our happiness and prolong our lives.

Let's forget all the slander we ever heard. Let's forget the fault-finding and remember only the good points.

Let's magnify the other fellow's good qualities and minimize his poor ones.

Let's blot out as far as possible all the disagreeableness from yesterday, start out with a clean sheet today, and write upon it for memory's sake only those things which are lovely and lovable.

Let's help the other fellow—of course, the other fellow's helping us.

Here I Am

The World Almanac, under the head of the "Richest Men in the United States," reports:

"The 33 persons who filed returns showing an income of one million dollars or more, resided as follows:—

"California, 1; Illinois, 3; Maryland, 1; etc."

I might as well own up to it, and admit that I am cornered at last, and fully "located financially." My good friends on the MAGAZINE staff will cheerfully furnish my address.

Getting Satisfaction

In one of the big "five and ten" stores in Baltimore, there is a sign reading—"Never leave this store dissatisfied; see the Manager."

Everyone leaving the store can see it, and it has a good effect. It has occurred to me that this would be a good slogan or rallying cry for the railroads. Satisfied patrons, shippers and passengers are most important and should be cultivated. In addition to stopping leaks and getting new business, let us do what we can in satisfying patrons.

A Good Catch

I have made the acquaintance of a young man—I should judge about 24—an employe of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company stationed at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. I meet him nearly every Sunday, as I am departing for Baltimore after my week end visit. He gets down under the trains and carefully examines the wheels and things of that kind, and he does it well. I like him. I am sure he is all right. He owns not only shares of the road employing him, but shares in the Lehigh Valley Coal and Iron Company. Monthly installment payments have brought this grist to his mill. If I were a girl, instead of a horrid man, single and eligible, I would set my cap for this young man and lose no time in the matter. His name? Well I'll get it for you. He always greets me with a smile, and a smile wins me every time.

Jerome P. Fleishman

I made the acquaintance of Jerome P. Fleishman when he was a lad, and I have followed him all through the years. I wish there were more like him. He sends me every month the Farmers and Merchants Messenger, a fine little MAGAZINE published in the interest of the Farmers and Merchants National Bank of Baltimore, and of which Mr. Fleishman is the editor. I want you to write Mr. Fleishman requesting him to send you a copy each month. You will read every single line in each copy received, and enjoy every word.

I am interested in the paper because it advocates systematic saving. There are many of us who plunge right along from month to month spending every dollar as though the salary was going to last forever. My Christmas check, Maryland Trust Company, amounted to $252.45, and in 1924, I want to possess courage to make it a five hundred dollar check, instead of a two hundred and fifty.

Office of Vice-President Operation and Maintenance

Correspondent, H. H. HARTLOVE

Attention! Here beginneth the New Year.

Methinks I see a vision of someone writing intently. What themes are being developed? What stories classically told? What new adventures recorded? And, behold, a voice is heard saying, "It is I, your humble correspondent, inditing the episodes of life, the philosophy of the living and the clarion call to renewed activity. Arouse the clan! Cause a news gland to be grafted on the 'unnewsy!' Let's go. Bring forth daily data of individual and collective doings to be woven into startling stories. But hark ye, should'st thou and them not produce, it will be necessary for your correspondent to pick up whatsoever crumbs he may for the monthly bread pudding sent to the editor."

Reinstatement De Luxe

"Bill" Fowler, co-star with George Elste, returns again as champion bowler and the heart of Henry Fankhanel beats with joy. The office force takes "Bill's" reinstatement with weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, for they now listen to his Saturday morning squawk whenever he loses on Friday night. We await "Bill's" fifteenth resignation from the team—for he resigns whenever he makes a bum score.

Harry and Peggy Vick, their daddy is in the Office of Vice-President, Operation and Maintenance

Famous Sayings of Not Yet Famous Men

George Elste: See what a big lunch I had this morning.

Doc Feezer: Holy Cow! (Note by H. H. This expression is a relic of ancient Sanscrit days I'm sure.)

T. J. Klauenberg: Get that ear of cheese on 94.

Radio. An Utilitarian Device.

Miss Grace Smith, file clerk, Rates of Pay Bureau, arranged for her brother-in-law to construct a radio and she now locates papers by radio.

Changes in Safety Bureau

R. J. Wilde, formerly secretary to superintendent, Safety Department, is now secretary to R. Marsden Smith, general attorney.

J. C. Hessenauer is now secretary to superintendent, Safety Department. Charles Cloonan, formerly chief pass clerk, has been appointed clerk, Bureau of Federal and State Commission Reports, vice J. C. Hessenauer.

Watch Our Smoke!

Renewed interest is being shown in the performance of our vice-president's bowling team. Our assistant chief clerk is now a member of this team and our chief clerk one of its staunchest supporters and most enthusiastic rooters. The personnel of the team is as follows: E. P. Wrightson, Bob Hause, Winnie Guerke, Clarence Staines, Bill L. Fowler, Eddie Collins and the three Georges—Seeds, Elste and Roth, with "Jimmie" Hessenauer as captain, not only of the three Georges but of the entire team. Before the bowling season is over the vice-president's Bowling team will have taken first place. If you don't think this team can roll good duck pins, come round some Friday evening to the King Pin Alleys, North and Pennsylvania Avenues. You will see. Isn't this invitation enough?

Owing to the high cost of precious metals and because of the fact that the team spent eighty-eight trillion marks for a leather medal to be presented to "Bill" Fowler, we are unable to present this invitation on a silver platter. Come one, come all! No refreshments will be served, but your spirit will be refreshed by an evening of sunshine and amusement.

Speaker's Club

My report on this organization's activities during the last semester will attempt to appear in the February MAGAZINE.

Car Service Department

Correspondents, H. V. OBERENDER and C. P. BAYN

To the readers of our little MAGAZINE we wish a Happy, Bright, and Prosperous New Year. May each new day bring some new joy, some new hope, some big thing for us to do to make life a little sweeter and a little happier for someone else. Give to the world the best that you have and the best will come back to you.

"If you have a job to do—do it now, If it's one you wish was through—do it now, If you're sure the job's your own—just tackle it alone; Don't hem, and haw, or groan, but do it now."

Let's take this for our motto, every day let's smile.

This is duty just begun—Help someone along life's stormy way.
Win for yourself the glad "well done."

Cupid surely has sent his arrows flying in every direction. The diamond rings that dazzled us so long have about all gone and we are waiting a new lot of sparklers to keep us guessing this year.

Marie Brown started the ball rolling. She was married November 17, to Mr. Bernard Sauter. Mercia B. Owens followed her example two weeks later and on Thanksgiving Day became the bride of Bob Travers. Thelma Wilder had a pretty church wedding on November 28, when she was married to Robert Phelps Little. Bertha Rief kept us waiting for the date but she too has joined the line of Car Service brides. We have an idea that before the New Year is very old several more of our girls will be signing up to "Love, Honor and Obey, and wash dishes every day."

Miss Hazel Keller spent the month of November in bed with a bad congestion of the lungs. Too bad, after just having her tonsils removed. Well, we are glad to have you back in your accustomed place, sort o' missed you in that front line and hope there will be no more colds, coughs or congestions to keep you away again.

Edward D. Meyers returned after a slight operation. Hilda Stewart was operated on for appendicitis at the Franklin Square Hospital, December 2, and is coming along nicely. With no more appendix to worry about, Hilda should gain some of the weight her friend Miss E. R. enjoys.

Theresa Robinson also is back with us after a long spell of illness. We hope these friends will have better health in the year before them and trust that all of the employees will take care of this greatest of all blessings—Good Health.

In behalf of the correspondents and our fellow workers we wish to thank those who worked so untiringly to bring about the two weeks vacation. We can show our appreciation by our efforts in helping to do the other fellow's work while he is away. This vacation is a Big Thing, and we can make it a great success if everybody will do his part willingly. Make this the greatest year for yourself and for your Company!

Engineering Department

Correspondent, O. K. EDEN

During the past few weeks our department has been quite busy, preparing the 1924 budget, which includes buildings, bridges, etc. Everything is being put in readiness, so that when Spring sets in we can go ahead once more.

For some time our curiosity has been piqued as to why young ladies bob their hair. So far we have been unable to find out. Is it because it is easier to handle in the morning, thus lessening the chance of being late for "roll call?" We wonder. Anyway, how about giving us YOUR reason, Miss Fox? Does "he" like you any better?

We had quite a delegation visiting us from our Pittsburgh office the other day, District Engineer Clarke, his chief clerk, C. H. Holtzworth, and Field Engineer R. M. Wooley, here on Company business. Also, on his monthly visit, "Bill" Kolker from District Engineer Griffith's Office—this time minus the "Cleopatra" effect.

Although ostensibly a part of this department, we hear very little from our friends in the Real Estate Department and Superintendent of Fire Insurance B. S.

Mace. The trouble is they are somewhat backward in telling about their doings, but we hope to have a little something about these folks, who handle all the real estate and insurance problems for our great road, in the near future. We know there is quite an artist in their midst, being none other than J. R. E. Hiltz, and we hope to persuade him to give us a contribution from time to time, to help liven up our column.

Then there are those friends of ours in the Photographic and Blue Print Departments, who also come under the Engineering Department. Up there (they are on the 15th floor, or roof, of our Central Building), they produce the blueprints, photographs, photo-stats, etc., which play such an important part in a railroad's life.

A certain young man from our file room was seen in the vicinity of Lombard and Gilmor Streets a few nights ago, and it was the first opportunity we have had of seeing him in his new trick derby. You'd better be careful, Freddy, or you'll catch a cold standing on marble steps late at night.

Don't forget the prospective business card, for either passenger or freight. Not so long ago a friend of mine was going to Detroit and had intended using a competitive line. By showing that "our" road gave as good service as the competitor, and in some ways better service, I persuaded this friend of mine to go the "Best and Only" way. There are sure to be occasions when friends will be going on a trip, or shipping something, intending to give the business to a competitor, when, with a little effort on our part, we can persuade them to use the road for which we work. And the chances are, once tried, they will always use it. Try it and see!

We are glad to welcome E. A. (Ed) Pyles, chief draftsman to engineer of buildings, to our fold once more. Ed has been away for some time, on account of sickness, and it is good to see his smiling countenance again.

Although coming a little early, Santa was good to W. W. Southard, draftsman under Office Engineer Milburn, leaving a bouncing baby boy at Mr. Southard's home on December 5. Bill won't forget last Christmas for some time to come. Congratulations and best wishes are in order, Bill, for your young hopeful.

ERROR—

I greatly regret that the Christmas greeting to the members of the Engineering Department, appearing on page 26 of the December issue, was signed with the fac-simile signature of E. G. Lane, engineer maintenance of way, Eastern Lines, instead of that of H. A. Lane, chief engineer. The mistake was mine and I have apologized to both the officers in question.

—Editor.

Office of District Engineer, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Correspondent, J. M. WHEALAN

Fellow Correspondents—we again enter into another year as representatives of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE. I know that your feelings upon this occasion are worthy of yourselves and the publication which you represent so ably. Another year lies before us in the onward march of time, ours to do with as we will. We may not all see the beginning of another, so let us make the most of what time may be allotted to us and help make the MAGAZINE, good as it may be, better.

The lists are open for membership in the "Chevy" club, we understand, the qualifications being ownership and the ability to understand a Chevrolet car. C. H. H. just recently qualified for membership and seems in a fair way to be elected president, or whatever title they intend to give the boss of the concern. For a while W. A. B. was in danger of being disqualified on account of losing his car, but fortunately the young men who tried it out grew tired of it very quickly and decided that it would be a shame to keep it. It is expected that J. F. M. will automatically retire from membership soon, as his car met with a serious accident recently and may not recover. Don't be backward now; get yourself one of those things and join the club. There are no dues.

The second meeting of Engineering Department Accountants was held in this office on December 10, 1923, to formulate final plans for a unified system of accounting in the Engineering Department. All arrangements were completed for the inauguration of the completed system on January 1, 1924.

Office of Chief Engineer Maintenance and Engineer Maintenance of Way

Correspondent, J. E. BARNHART

The year 1923 has passed into history. No doubt all of us, in reviewing the past year, can see many instances where our efforts might have been productive of greater results, if we had applied ourselves more diligently to our work.

As we are starting out upon a new year, let us resolve to redouble our efforts for greater efficiency and by cooperation in thought and action, endeavor to produce harmoniously, the best results. No labor is performed in vain and honest efforts diligently applied will, in time, bring their reward. Let us therefore perform our duties faithfully and have the consciousness that always accompanies work well done.

Quoting from a late edition of one of our local papers, it has been said, "President Coolidge has saved one tenth of every 'pay' that he has drawn." This is a most remarkable record. How many of us can say that we have done as well during the past year? As January is known as Thrift month let us make a thrifty resolution for the year 1924, and all succeeding years, by starting now a sinking fund to which will be applied each payday one tenth of our salary. This can readily be arranged through the Savings Feature, Relief Department, by which any amount designated will be deducted from our salary and placed in our Savings Account or "Sinking Fund" where all monies so deposited will draw interest at a guaranteed rate of 4%, and possibly more if the Management deems it advisable after the year's business has been closed. Since 1893 the rate of interest paid has not been less than 5% and one year it was 6%. Everyone can save something if he will, and a savings account, be it large or small, is a mighty good friend in time of need.

Let's go. Who will be the first applicant?

The correspondent would be glad to receive any news items or photographs for the MAGAZINE. Your assistance is earnestly solicited.

A good principle with which to start the new year. Be on time, work consistently and there should be no doubt about your being able to leave the job, on time, with your work up to date.

As this is Leap Year, it behooves our bachelors to be on their guard. It is rumored that our file clerk has already had one proposal. Watch your step, Tom!

You have all heard about people so generous that they would give the coats off their backs. We almost had an example of such generosity right here in our own midst. It happened this way: A trunk was reported in bad condition. Two representatives were sent to make an inspection and to see that the contents were intact. The contents were removed, carefully folded by the lady of the house and replaced by the one representative while the other listed them as they were packed. After the list was completed, the trunk was locked and roped. The men were taking leave when they got a breath of the chill air outside—which reminded them of their overcoats. But they were no where to be found. After much searching and pondering they recalled that the contents were all ladies' effects with the exception of two men's overcoats. This led to a clue. The trunk was again unroped, unlocked and unpacked, and there in the bottom of the trunk were their coats neatly packed away.

At Washington they are almost as generous. A lost coat was turned in at the Terminal and when requesting them to return it direct to the owner who had been located, they promptly complied. However, shortly after one of the employes missed his coat, and strongly protested that he did not believe in robbing Peter to pay Paul. The coat was returned, exchanged, and sent to its owner.

T. L. Redding, formerly in the baggage room at Cleveland, Ohio, has been promoted to position in the Cashier's Office of the Freight Department in that city. While we regret to lose our ambitious baggagemen, we are more than glad to see them advance, and sincerely hope Mr. Redding will continue to climb.

E. Lampert has succeeded Mr. Redding as checkman in the baggage room.

L. O. Shiflet, baggage agent, Pt. Pleasant, has won another booster for the Baltimore and Ohio by his prompt and courteous attention to a baggage matter for three young ladies who were on their way to school at New Lexington from Huntington. When the commendatory letter from A. J. King, the father of these three girls, was referred to Mr. Shiflet, he replied very unassumingly that while he recalled the incident he felt the service he had the pleasure of performing was in line of duty.

However, it is quite natural to assume that services which call for a letter of commendation from a busy business man are just a little above the average.

A. A. Terney, passenger brakeman, Baltimore Division, has also helped to seal the bond of friendship between Mr. N. F. Fabner, Washington, D. C., and the Baltimore and Ohio, by promptly turning in to the Lost Article Bureau an overcoat belonging to this gentleman, found on one of our trains. Mr. Rabner was very grateful for the return of his coat and while he said that he has always been a booster of the Company, he assures us that he will keep it up.

On November 18, the Baltimore and Ohio Gun Club, composed of Philadelphia Division Trainmen, gave their annual wild duck dinner at their shore bungalow located at Mitchell Point on Swan Creek. Mr. Dugan was among the lucky officials who received an invitation. Judging from reports of the sumptuous dinner served and the general good fellowship which prevailed, an invitation to one of these affairs is looked upon with great favor.

Joseph M. Workman, train baggageman running on trains 37 and 64, celebrated on December 6 his seventy-fifth birthday and also his fifty-third year with the Baltimore and Ohio. Of the fifty-three years, he has spent twenty-seven in the baggage service, and during this time not one serious baggage irregularity can be recalled. His clear record is convincing evidence of his conscientious attention to his duties, and his loyalty to the Company.

Mr. Workman's two anniversaries were appropriately celebrated at Newark by the Veteran Employees' Association and his many friends, an account of which is given elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Dugan recalls his pleasant associations with Mr. Workman, beginning when he was a traveling baggage agent and has the highest regard for him. As Mr. Dugan was unable to attend the reception he was compelled to convey his congratulations and best wishes by means of a letter in which he was joined by the whole department.

This office will continue to watch the mails for Mr. Workman's train baggage reports for many years to come.

The traveling baggage and milk agent in the Cincinnati district reports that when recently inspecting baggage car on No. 3, he found the baggageman in charge, F. G. Meloy, had assumed an air of considerable importance. It developed that it was all due to the fact that he is now grandfather of a little girl who arrived at his daughter's home on November 23. Congratulations!

H. W. Griffin, terminal baggage agent at Pittsburgh, Pa., recently enjoyed a well earned vacation visiting his old friends and acquaintances at Cincinnati, where he formerly lived.

It is with deep sorrow and sincere regret that we announce the death of Frederick A. Zenter, assistant chief clerk and head of the Accounting Bureau of this Department.

Mr. Zenter died on the morning of November 28, after a brief illness and operation at St. Agnes Hospital. We extend our deepest sympathy to his wife and members of his family. His kindly disposition and ever ready helpfulness will be sorely missed by his fellow employees.

November 29, was a real day of Thanksgiving for Miss Madelin Kistner, because that was the day "Our Mats" satisfied her artistic nature, and took unto herself an ARTIST for "Better or for Worse."

Mr. Lewis Atkinson was the lucky man, and well do we know he is lucky. Most of us have known Madelin for a number of years, and we have felt her loss already.

Congratulations. May happiness and success be hers always!

A Happy New Year!

The year 1923 has just been brought to a close. In entering the new year, let us all pull together to help put 1924 across bigger than the preceding year, having always in mind "GREATER BUSINESS," "COURTESY," "EFFICIENCY," "ECONOMY" and "FRIENDSHIP," not because we have to, but because we want to.

On December 12, General Freight Agent Samuel House gave a short address to the employees, which was very much appreciated, and will serve as an inspiration during the ensuing year. It was not much that Mr. House asked, just that we strive to do our best at all times, but the results, if we comply with that request, will more than repay us for the little extra time and labor. For "anything that is worth doing, is worth doing well," to quote a well-known axiom which Mr. House used.

Following Mr. House's talk, the Welfare Association was reorganized and elected the following officers for the year 1924:

A. S. Baker, president; H. D. Stange, president, ex-officio; W. W. Weller, secretary; J. A. Martin, treasurer.

It goes without saying that we have pledged our full support to the newly elected officers and stand back of them 100%.

The versatile William J. Cruickshank has moved up his record another notch, this time to tack up his diploma in the Traffic Course, American Commerce Association. He finished with a percentage of 96 plus. Some day "Bill" is going to be an honest-to-goodness traffic manager for some nationally known corporation. At last accounts, Don Bordner (once of the Savings Feature) was traffic manager for one of the great fruit companies; headquarters, New York. Some day "Bill" and Don will be singing a fruit salad duet, something of the Gallagher and Shean type.

Now, "Bill" has broken out in a fresh spot. Unwilling to confine his traffic management to old earth, he goes higher and starts to manage the air waves and the currents of the ether. He is a sort of Henry Ford in the manufacture of moderate priced radio sets (five made to date), and when some skeptic says "Bill, I can't get the darn thing to work," then Bill gets a thrill of life moving along its keel, and the tune comes singing in. Edison, Marconi, Steinmetz, Tesla, are all slated to take a back seat when Bill "puts it through." He is some adaptable fellow!

Speaking of correspondence courses, another one has nailed his "bunting" to the mast and signed up for the traffic course.

The fires of ambition have warmed their souls, and out of "the rut" they come.

"The successful men are those who have worked while their neighbors' minds were vacant or occupied with passing trivialities, who have been acting while others have been wrestling with indecision. They are the men who have tried to read all that has been written about their craft; who have learned from the masters and fellow-craftsmen of experience, and profited thereby; who have gone about with their eyes open, noting the good points of other men's work, and considered how they might do it better. Thus they have carried themselves above mediocrity, and in striving to do things the best they could, have educated themselves in the truest manner."

"The heights by great men reached and kept,
Were not attained by sudden flight.
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

Another student, this time feminine, is learning to cook. Trying to prove that "civilized man cannot live without cooks," especially the kind that make home happy by doing a thousand and one things beside the mechanical work of the kitchen.

That's right, Miss Brunette, tame the savage wild man by giving him something good to eat. Get him thus and keep him, as:

"The love of man oft takes its flight
If his stomach be not well-filled."

Just why some girls have to take a course in Domestic Science to keep the dishes from breaking is more than our poor think organs can determine. Yet we live to learn. Lots of luck, Miss Brunette. Atlanta or Boston, which?

Some people go in for radio "receiving" stations, but here comes the burly Desverreaux and reports that on November 15, his wife presented him with a new "broadcasting" station. Her name is Margaret Eilcen, and she is a promising damsel. Never mind, Norris, a few wails will help the infant to get a healthy pair of lungs.

"Bob" Owens plays golf in the spring, goes fishing in the summer and hunts in the fall and winter. An all-the-year regular fellow in his love of the out-of-doors. "Bob" doesn't worry if he doesn't bring home the bacon, as he is getting real health out of it. And that's the only thing that really counts.

T. Parkin Scott, chief clerk, Savings Feature, prepared the following brief account of the recent holiday Mrs. Scott and he had in the Southland:

We left New York on November 17, Saturday, at noon, on the steamship "Morus," Captain C. P. Maxson in charge, passed out North River to the Atlantic Ocean on the morning of the 18th, and out of sight of land until the Florida coast was sighted. Here we got into the Gulf Stream following the Florida Coast, and within sight of Miami and Palm Beach, rounding the peninsula of Florida, entering the Gulf of Mexico which we crossed to enter the Mississippi, where in the beautiful moonlight we came to a stop and took on our pilot to guide the big ship up the "Father of Waters." This was a wonderful and beautiful trip.

Landing at New Orleans on the morning of the 23rd, we spent one day and night in the old town, and the next morning took the steamship "Excelsior" for Havana, with Captain Charles Baldwin, arrived here on the 26th, spent two days in the land of wet goods and old Spanish homes and forts. Left on the 28th, steamship "Governor Cobb," landed in Florida Keys, where the custom officers, after a thorough inspection of our baggage, found no wet goods, so we were permitted to move on. As we had an hour and a half to wait at this point, we took a taxi and drove all over Key West. That night we crossed the Keys, and as I sat in my berth looking out of the window, I found that we were entirely out of the sight of land.

We left the train at St. Augustine on the 29th, spent two days in this quaint old town, and then on to Jacksonville, where we took the beautiful steamship "Allegheny," under Captain Pratt. The next day we put in and spent the entire day in Savannah, leaving that night, and arriving in Baltimore on the night of December 4, 10.30 p. m. We had breakfast on the ship, and I was back in the office on December 5.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Parkin Scott

This was a wonderful trip, and I would recommend it to anybody who is fond of the water.

(Whaddye mean—water—Mr. Scott? Ed.)

The last word has been spoken, the last line written for 1923. As we look back we can see the mistakes that have been made, the victories that have been ours, the lost opportunities, as well as those we have taken advantage of. Let us endeavor to profit by these experiences. May 1924 be for all of us a year of thrift, happiness and prosperity, a year of putting our best efforts into whatever we are assigned to do.

In every large office there is always some dormant talent that bursts forth every now and then. This time Paul Ackler felt a call to sing the praises of his fellow workers of our Statistical Department. Hence the five verses below. To show their good fellowship, the other five members of the department put their heads together and wrote the sixth verse, as a token of their appreciation.

Our Statistical Bureau

Ambrose Hardwick once said with a sigh,
"In the Glee Club I'll sing till I die;
My voice sure is bum—
But the great day will come
When I'll sing for the Angels on High."

Joseph Volk has a wonderful way,
Getting figures that have gone astray;
He'll dig all around—

"Till the lost ones are found
Though it takes him nearly all day.

Walter Seibert now has a Ford car,
He will drive you around, near or far;

Now some of us go—

Therefore, most of us know
We can stand everything but the jar.

Charlie Roycroft he works all the time,
But an argument he sure will find;
With no definite aim—
And nothing to gain
But he never comes out far behind.

William Marley, the dreamer sublime,
Gazes far into space all the time;
When the boss gives a yell—
Poor "Bill" never can tell
If it's a call or a snap in his mind.

Paul Ackler is to writing inclined,
But he can't pick a definite kind;
First it's poems, then prose—
Now it's scenarios

We hope he'll soon make up his mind.

Charles H. Consolvo, proprietor of the Hotel Belvedere, Baltimore, after his recent return from a visit to the western coast, took occasion to compliment the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and in talking to the people of Baltimore referred to it as "Their own railroad." Thanks, Mr. Consolvo.

C. C. Wilson, traveling car agent, is still confined at the Phoenix Sanitarium at Phoenix Arizona, but from all reports is steadily progressing and expects to be back with us within a short time.

Hilda Vogts is also rapidly mending and says that she will soon be back at her old job again.

The Third Annual Dance of the Transportation Department was held at Tuttle's Hall, 21 E. North Avenue on November 14. There was a large crowd present and from all reports everyone had a fine time. The success of the occasion was due to the generous manner in which the members of the office and their friends lent their moral and financial assistance. These functions are great things. Everybody seems to know everybody else better the morning after. T. A. McCann did his usual good work toward making the dance a success by graciously accepting tickets. There is even a right and a wrong way of taking tickets. There's a man in one of our movie houses who has a distinctive and pleasing way of receiving the pasteboards. One day, a modern flapper was substituting for him. She stood like an Egyptian mummy and took my ticket as though she were conferring an unusual favor on me. The contrast was vivid, and the impression lasting.

sponsible for our photographs in this issue. The score was two to one in favor of the Embargo Department as the "Transportation Thirteen" left Baltimore for Harper's Ferry, Saturday afternoon, November 17, Noreen Bailey and Margaret Hettrich against Lillian Foster carrying swagger sticks with much swank. Lillian got one in on the girls Sunday morning, however, when she went horse back riding. The ice men at Harper's Ferry certainly have hefty horses.

Arriving at Harper's Ferry, the girls were bundled into taxis and rolled up the hills to the Hill Top House where they proceeded to put themselves on the outside of a delicious supper. There was a gentleman from Charleston, W. Va., staying at the hotel at the time who asked the girls if they would care to go coon hunting. A few did not take kindly to the invitation at first, some of them taking the word "coon" in its usual sense and getting the idea that they were to assist in running down a genus Africanus, but finally, after a few explanations decided to take a chance, so off they went. The man from Charleston, one from New York, two girls from Washington, four chauffeurs and thirteen "B&Oites" piled into four machines and drove about twenty miles to an island which seemed to be composed of nothing but a corn field full of stubble. They covered the island completely, holding lanterns and dogs. No coon was captured although they had a couple with them on their return trip.

The next morning they played leap-frog and, what do you think? Emma Mac spurred Ella Jones right in the eye with her heel on the way over and Ella has been explaining that black optic ever since. In addition to those in the accompanying photographs, Florence Busch and Lillian and Maybelle Foster also made the journey. There's a whole lot more about that trip that has been confided to me but as an honorable correspondent, I shall not publish it. I will say that it must have been "some trip" with the emphasis on the "some."

The radio bug has struck our office. Instead of "Good morning" the salutation now is "who did you get last night?" Lloyd George, Charlie Schwab and the other celebrities are receiving such honors as B. A., L. L. D., etc., but we are looking confidently to some of the more modern universities to hand out a new degree to some of our radio enthusiasts as a mark of esteem for their research work along that line. I have in mind one in particular who has proven beyond a reasonable doubt that the best results can be obtained by attaching the antenna to the base string of his piano and furthermore that dreamy waltzes are received best when the aerial wire is connected to the bed spring. So don't be surprised if you are out walking next Sunday afternoon and see Baby Grand pianos or Walnut beds on the house tops. They are only taking the place of the old time obsolete aerial.

Word has just been received that the Glee Club came close to losing one or two of its valuable singers. The circumstances as explained to us are as follows: E. F., White, first bass, in company with O. R. Lutz, second tenor, was scheduled to sing with other members of the Club at a certain Home for Aged Men, and through some mixup, got in the wrong "Home." E. J. as the story goes, is already inside and the attendants won't release him, thinking he is an inmate. It was suggested that Mr.

Lutz go in, but O. R. declined the issue, apparently afraid they would hold him also, which could very easily have happened, considering all the gray hair he is sprouting. However E. F. was finally rescued by the Mrs., and the party proceeded to the correct address, arriving there in time to hear the last song. A pretty close call for the Glee Club, we wish to remark.

Please mention our magazine when writing advertisers

Very much in the same manner as Al Moore lost his coat, Bobby Burns missed his Eversharp Pencil. During the third week of November "Bas" reported the loss of a valuable pencil. Notices were posted in all rest rooms and on the bulletin boards, and in addition a series of ads inserted in the daily papers with a reward offered for its return. (She sure must have given him a terrible raz for being so careless.) Everything was in a stew for several days with Burns running around in a circle, until he goes to his tailor to have a vest repaired and the tailor finds pencil in lining of vest. The "Needle in a Hay Stack" could be very appropriately compared to a pencil in all that lining, with just as much chance of finding one as the other. We would suggest that Burns keep such a valuable article under lock and key and only bring it out on state occasions.

Speaking of New Year's resolutions, here's a good one for every Baltimore and Ohio employee. Take the first step in starting a Savings Account by signing, today, the little slip for regular payroll deductions.

Our friend "Atlas" Shipley, a-hunting he did go. Yes, he had one and a half days off in which time he expected to lay low many an unwary hare. The next morning he came in with an interesting looking package which we all surmised was the rabbit he had promised the chief clerk but what was our disappointment when we found it was only cough syrup, etc., for his only catch, a heavy cold.

Miss Aubrey Silance is an example of our Baltimore and Ohio "business getter." The pastor of her church, Reverend E. A. Sexsmith, was appointed general secretary, Board of Young People's Work, Methodist Protestant Church, a position which requires considerable traveling. Knowing this, she hied herself forth to lay before him the merits of the Baltimore and Ohio and now Reverend Sexsmith not only uses the Baltimore and Ohio whenever he possibly can but advises his friends to do the same.

The "snoophounds" of the Voucher, File and Index Bureau have recently discovered that Miss Edna Mitchell is again going strong with Billy Valentino Gately.

Our champions, the bowling team, have not been asleep. Harken to what our bard friend "Ovan" tells us.

It was in the bleak November,
And we always will remember,
A bunch of nuts went bowling Friday night.
They took a crowd of rooters,
Who certainly were "Hooters."
And the match, it almost ended in a fight.
When they lined up at the alley,
Right off the gang did rally,
But Long John was left "Standing" at the post.

He got into the second game,
And landed in the Hall of Fame
At cleaning up he proved to be a ghost.

The match was in a tie
So the third was "do or die;"
Beck "spared" in his tenth frame, it seemed a cinch,

But they overlooked Long John
When his turn came along
He "spared"—the match was in a clinch.

Would Long John lose his nerve,
Would his ball go straight or curve?
Gee, those rooters could be heard a mile away.

Beck got nine pins on his spare,
Black defeat was in the air
Faint hearted rooters did not want to stay.

But Long John's ball went true
And the duck pins they just flew 'Twas a strike upon a spare, that's going some
And he had another ball
Got nine, should have had 'em all,
Just ask him and he'll tell you how it's done.

The Bowlers met again last night
To renew the bitter fight;
But it was NOT just the same.
Happy winners of last week
They had money on the game.

Long John didn't talk so loud,
Johnnie Whalen wasn't proud,
The whole blooming team was tame.
Pinkerton was on his toes
The pins lay down when his ball goes,
Now he's in the Hall of Fame.

The story nears its doleful end,
Our sad team "just needs a friend"
Now there's just one thought that saves us all from shame
That it took an "A. D." man
To give the "A. D." Team a slam,— Pinkerton, that's the D— Muts name.

Christmas bells are not the only kind that have been ringing in our office in the past month, for the little white bells were called upon to tell the happy news of the marriage of H. B. Fisher, A. R. A. Bureau, to Miss Gladys M. Pearce, on November 20. Fellow workers extend heartiest wishes for happiness.

The broad grin on the face of W. J. Patrick Gahan? Oh yes, that's caused by the arrival of a baby girl on December 9. The experienced daddies have promised to give him lessons in minding the baby.

We welcome Miss Ruth H. LaBonte who has accepted a position in the Coupon Bureau. We wish her success in her new work.

To William Fritz we extend our sympathies in the death of his father, Mr. Fred Fritz, on November 15.

Also to Bill Bradford, in the loss of a dear brother. It is with pleasure that we notice Mr. Bradford's return to his duties after a long and serious illness.

Even our friend "Cap" Zimmerman has had to resort to the aid of a cane since that time he tried to entertain the Knights Templar with a highland fling. The accident happened when his sword became tangled up with his feet, making him perform a few steps that weren't part of the fling. However, we are glad to notice a great improvement in his walk which leads us to believe that "Cap" and the cane will soon part company.

Bruce says after all these years he has learned something startlingly disappointing about Santa Claus. Ask him to tell the sad story.

Why, do you suppose, would the absence of one little "Tar Heel" cause such a disconsolate look on the countenance of one lean, long, lanky youth? Well she's back from a two week's vacation in "North Calinah." Girls, did you get the cane? Was she in an accident or is it old age? We were told that the cop stopped all traffic to run across the street to shake hands, and the street car conductor entertained her on the way out home with all the scandal in and around town.

Emmie Louis' brother says there's no road like the Baltimore and Ohio. He invariably rides our road from Philadelphia to Baltimore. We like to hear this, and may we make a request? Boost us to your friends, too.

Some where in this issue you will find a picture of Austin Dopman, son of Mildred Dopman, voucher clerk. We are proud of Austin, for he is our first representative in the children's page. We are sending one of his drawings to Aunt Mary, and hope to see it in print soon. We should like to have this department represented every month on the children's page. Get busy, little artists, and see what you can do with your pen or crayon.

Election of Welfare Association Officers for the year 1924 resulted as follows:

President, R. H. English; Vice-President, W. A. Doxen; Secretary, Miss A. M. Baker; Treasurer, G. L. Bauerle. (we'd all like to take a shot at this job).

With the exception of Secretary Baker (doesn't that sound big?) the same board was re-elected. We have a lingering suspicion that these fellows are well liked in here but we wouldn't tell them so, they might suffer from an exaggerated case of "swell head."

Thrift may be looked upon from a variety of angles. Starting right from one's self, the individual must have a reserve force in one capacity or another. Regardless of one's calling in the Railroad family, one needs but study to see that he can readily improve on the routine of his assignments.

"Toto" prize Boston Bull Terrier owned by Harry A. Huetcher

Large opportunities are afforded by the extension universities and night classes, and our own Traffic Class meeting every Thursday evening at 8:00 p. m. in the Assembly Room, Fifth Floor, General Office Building.

These are safe and sane bets. There are long shots with the odds in most cases decidedly against you, as galloping dominoes or African Golf, as some prefer to call it. And none of these pay real dividends.

As wealth is a direct result of labor, the fellow who applies himself and knows in the end wins.

A fair warning appears on the northwest corner three blocks north of the Annex Building. "Save one tenth of what you earn." A street car advertisement runs "Save the day you are paid." To lay aside something for the rainy day which must sooner or later come in each one's life, is but common sense and decent citizenship!

An employer in a neighboring city (I am told) employs no one who is not a saver, on the grounds that if he squanders his own he is prone to squander the firm's best interests.

Our railroad family is a community of "Home Owners." If you pay rent, get out of the habit! (You are insured in the Relief, undoubtedly.) Look the Savings Feature over carefully, compare it, then start to buy your own home through it. It outclasses anything of its kind anywhere. Those familiar with Building Associations in this section know that the interest drops on the share, usually $100.00, but not so with the Relief. That drops on every single dollar applied to the principal. Another thing—you never handle the money it being deducted and you never feel it—(myself included).

If you contemplate a Savings Account, a liberal interest rate is allowed and should appeal to your sense of good judgement.

Our own cooperative methods really do get us somewhere toward cooperation that cooperates, which is THRIFT.

Subscriptions through this Department for the Salvation Army amounted to $126.45, Japanese Fund $204.90. West End Hospital and others—figures to date not complete.

Harry Huetcher, Interline Settlement Division, who hails from Hamilton County, Ohio, is a breeder and fancier of high grade bull terriers, and prize winners at that. Wins 'em clear across the board. One, two, three places, as per the recent exhibition at the North Howard Street Armory.

Miss Alice Irene Daugherty, Interline Settlement Bureau, was married to Clement B. Forgan, Camden Station Force, at 3:30 p. m., November 30, at St. Augustine's Church, Elkridge, Md., by the pastor, Rev.

John D. Norton. After a trip through Florida, they will reside in Relay. Congratulations!

Please note December 2, 1923, as a big day in the annals of M. E. Becker, Local Settlement Bureau. A nine and a half pound son arrived on that day; therefore the joy unalloyed. Congratulations!

The wedding of Miss Helen Kirkwood and John L. Daniel took place at the home of the bride, at Catonsville Junction, on November 28. Miss Leah Radcliffe was bridesmaid and G. Fred Miller, best man. A number of the bride's friends from the office attended the ceremony.

Frank Clarke has no more use for his radio and is willing to dispose of it at a sacrifice. Reason—Little Shirley Clarke started broadcasting on November 18. Congratulations!

Several young men from our office have organized a basketball team, which will play under the name of the Mohawk Athletic Club. Charter members of the organization are Daniel Akers, Clifton Goldsmith, Marcus Hine, Baldwin Krumholtz, Maurice Leonard and Arthur Thomas. George Leas is manager, Morrison Dickey, coach, and Harry Holstein, acting captain. They would like to arrange games with other Baltimore and Ohio teams.

The Interline Bureau abstractors decided, the other day, by a vote of two to one, to divide all the cakes they might bring for lunch. Ed McKenzie says he is glad there are only three abstractors.

Pier 22, North River

Correspondent, WALT SANDS

Know all men by these presents, that the long established firm of John Newman, Inc., correspondent, Pier 22, New York, doth dissolve itself into the hands of Walt Sands, receiver, who hereby solemnly promises that to the best of his ability, he will promote the gospel of good will and humor in these columns.

The following bit of prose comes by stealth. It seems that our hero, Ralph Zunno, was dispatched to Pier 7 under sealed orders to manicure the place. Our famous poet—Anonymous—whom we shall call "Laurette" for the present, received an inspiration to record in the archives of modern history as follows:

Orders Issued to Sailor Zunno

Pier 22 is a ship and you're its gob
Go down to Pier 7 and get on the job,
Clean off the shelves and swab up the floor,
Keep rubbing and rubbing until your hands are sore.

It's my intention to make it look neat
So be off, little gob, and your work complete.

—Laurette

Undaunted, our hero reciprocates, while the villain dexterously twirls his moustache and smiles with glee.

Oh, mister boss, the great the biga da man
I just got here from Pier 7 where the place now is spie and span

I cleaned up the shelves and swabbed the floor

And did what I was told, and in the future
mister, mister,
Please do not me a-scoll.

—Ralph

Older employees who knew Captain Thomas L. Morris will feel a sense of loss in his death on November 13, 1923 at the age of past 82. Captain Morris entered the Baltimore and Ohio service November 12, 1887. His service was continuous and loyal up to September 1, 1916, when because of failing eyesight he was obliged to leave the tug "Baltimore," and retire with a pension. His loyalty to the Company was severely tested during the harbor strike of Marine Masters and Pilots during April, 1910. He stood the test and stuck to his post. LOYALTY, thou art a Crown Jewel.

6.10 p. m. Can't let these demurrage bills go. I'll make the 7 o'clock instead.

7.00 p. m. I wonder how many packs of tobacco Mike got. (Starts figuring.)

8.00 p. m. As long as it's this late, I'll miss the bazaar tonight. Whada I care?

Eddie Wendell, our midnight worker, says that t'other night he went out somewhere, just where, no one knows. Anyway he spent the entire evening with ut hearing "Yes, we have no bananas." I hope that "our gang" will support me from now on. Only in this way can we keep Pier 22 in its rightful place. Give me the news and photos boys and girls.

(In extending a cordial welcome to Walt Sands, now representing the Among Ourselves in the MAGAZINE at Pier 22, it will not be amiss to say a word about the retiring correspondent, John Newman.

Mr. Newman and I have been good friends ever since my connection with the MAGAZINE began a little over ten years ago, and some of the finest things that have ever appeared in our columns have come from him.

He never wished to be MAGAZINE correspondent, the mantle falling on him in a more or less accidental way, but the folks at Pier 22 will certainly agree that his contributions have invariably born the hall mark of quality.

We are glad that he is going to continue his page "Homilies of the Hudson." If you saw what he prepared for that page in the December issue, you cannot help but realize how interesting and helpful his characteristic sketches have been to our army of 50,000 or more readers.

We are certainly happy that in Mr. Newman's case it is not a resignation, but merely a transfer.—Ed.)

The severity of countenance and impassive features disguise the actual warmth and genial companionship of this hero of the rank and file, Demosthenes, II, silver-tongued songbird of the shops.

In daily intimate contact and close personal association, we find him naively human—we love the good within him and misunderstand the so-called "bad." But taking him all in all, as an officer and friend, he tips the scale of Manhood as M-A-N.

Let's pull together!

Edward Kenna, secretary to general superintendent, has secured a better position and we wish him well but will miss him. This also means steps forward for the rest of us, as Mr. Goodman has taken Mr. Kenna's place, Weis has filled Goodman's shoes as secretary to Mr. Hoskins, and Mallory has been selected as secretary to Mr. Mewshaw.

Another change was the transfer of Mr. Lincoln to Mr. Egan's office. This meant advancement for Messrs. Hughes, Bell and Ralston, to all of whom we wish heaps of success.

We again have back with us in the fold, Miss Thelma Thomas, who has taken the place of Miss May Schammel, who has taken a position in the Division Accountant's Office. Lots of luck to both these young ladies!

Alas, we have the opportunity of meeting "Barney Oldfield's" rival, our friend "Jack Tarr" who has smashed considerable records in his "Chevy" which he purchased in the Spring. Be careful of signs Jack?

Our friend Bill Devlin has bought a new "Oakland," and if there is any car made, that is it. Ask him about it.

Certainly do think "Ed. Ham Hughes" should be given a chance to prove himself worthy in Big League Ball.

The old town folks will see more of Lester M. Higgs now since he has purchased a "Lizzie." One thing he will appreciate is the repair of the road to his place in Montevideo. It seems as though everyone in the Superintendent's Office craves to ride on rubber, according to the late check on automobiles.

Probably our late radio instructor, Edward Leech, who made a trip to New York to make a study of the science, may be able to surprise us with something new.

The accompanying picture is of E. W. Justi, assistant foreman of carmen at Camden Station, who entered the service in 1914 as a car cleaner.

He left the service for a brief period in 1919, returning in 1922 to the position he now occupies. In addition to his work at Camden and Riverside in Baltimore he has also seen service in the Car Department at Cumberland and Keyser.

Courtesy to our patrons and with each other.

Cooperation with our connections and among ourselves.

Candor in our statements to all.

This is why the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is a happy family, enjoying the confidence of the public.

On November 25, our milkman, Joe Monaghan, became the proud father of an 11 pound boy. Congratulations, Joe, with wishes for many more. No race suicide here!

Our friend A. Leimbach, is proud of his 50 year service button. He is at present on the relief and has the best wishes of all, that he will soon be restored to his usual health.

M. Campbell enjoys the distinction of being the oldest tallyman at Locust Point. He still retains his youthful vigor and can check freight the fastest of them all.

A. V. Cutino is one of the tallymen at the Point that knows a good banana when he sees one. It is reported he intends to write a song entitled, "Who Sella Da Banana."

The yard trainmen are seriously thinking of running Charles Davis for congress—in case the Baltimore Sun runs the distinguished "Andy Gump."

We wish to announce another newcomer at the Point, he is George Seeds, formerly of Vice-president Galloway's Office. Mr. Seeds has been in the service of the Company for a long time. We wish him success in his new task.

We wish our readers to meet Miss Dorothy Gosnell and Miss Martha Fox two of our "sunbeams," who, by their pleasant manners and sunny dispositions, help to illumine the weary path we clerks daily tread.

The pictures do not in the least flatter the young ladies, but as Locust Point has long been "hiding her light under a bushel" we think it time to release some of her attractions.

One of our photographs is not that of a "Prince of India," although I doubt if any of that class is better looking or has a more commanding presence. Neither does it represent a "Sheik of Arabia," but it faithfully portrays the well known lineaments of our faithful porter and friend, James A. Turner, more generally known as the "Shiek of Myrtle Ave." His courtesy to all, his faithfulness to duty and willingness to oblige, have made him many friends at our office.

"Smiling Bill" Captures Four Auto Thieves

With a smile on his face almost as big as he is—Big Bill Garber, policeman at the Arlington Avenue Gate, who has been in the service for a great many years, lost his smile long enough the other day to capture four automobile thieves. Since the erecting of the new office building, most of the men who work in the shop are parking their machines on the outside, due to the space on the inside being used for material. Bill always keeps a watchful eye on these machines, not only preventing them from being stolen, but seeing that no parts are taken off. The other day he overheard one colored man who was on the seat of a FORD, say to a colored man who was applying the armstrong starter to said FORD, "Come on ya, boy and let's take a ride." When the other negro saw "Bill," he just naturally left. But the one at the wheel, when he saw "Bill's" smile fade—he knew that "Bill" meant business, so he left too when the patrol wagon came. Since that time "Bill" has captured a few others. All of the ones who were captured have been sentenced to no less than three years. "Bill" believes in the old saying—"IT TAKES A MAN WITH A SMILE TO DO A THING WORTH WHILE."

The Mount Clare Welfare Pleasure and Athletic Association held a Christmas treat for the welfare children at Frederick Road Park, on Sunday afternoon, December 23, from 2 to 4 p. m. Each child under ten years of age was presented with a substantial toy, in addition to a box of candy, horn and orange. The distribution was made by Santa Claus, who was none other than our friend "Bill" Garber, who is officer at the Arlington Avenue gate. Music was furnished by the Mt. Clare Orchestra, under the direction of J. B. Guericcio. This event is in keeping with similar events held by the Welfare Association for the benefit of its members, all of which are entirely free of charge. They

We were office bound. The others were too. A car stopped. Some got on and some did not. The conductor closed the door and gave the motorman the bell. It started; but no, a maid came gently rapping. The motorman got another bell. What did we do? We waited for the next car. Woe is man!

You May Never Equal His Record, but You Can Own the Watch of His Choice—a HAMILTON

L. F. Ewing, of the Pennsylvania Limited, just recently retired, headed the list of veteran conductors on the Philadelphia Division of the Pennsylvania Lines with forty-three years of service.

His train, one of the fastest in the country, runs on a schedule that takes every passing second in account. And that is why, a number of years ago, he chose a Hamilton as the watch to time his limited train.

It is significant that the Hamilton Watch is usually the choice of railroad men who want to be sure of accurate time. When you want a watch that will give you satisfaction plus—a watch that is dependable always—go to your jeweler and ask to see the Hamilton No. 992. This is the watch that marks the owner as a railroad man of keen judgment who is always on time.

For other than time inspection service ask to see the Hamilton No. 974, which gives you Hamilton quality at a lower price. We will gladly send a copy of "The Timekeeper" to any railroad man asking for it.

This is "THRIFT MONTH," and as the result of thrift, our collection clerk, E. C. Mullikin, has recently purchased a very fine home in one of the newest sections of this city. "Jack" is to be congratulated on this account, and it is to be hoped that others of our force may be led to emulate such a good example.

Before you buy a bag— learn why thousands of railroad men use Naugahyde

Railroad men throughout the country today are carrying Naugahyde Bags for three big reasons—

A Naugahyde wears longer, looks better, and costs less!

Nothing so tough and serviceable as Naugahyde has ever been put into a moderate priced bag before. Built over a strong, steel frame and vulcanized into a single piece, a Naugahyde Bag not only stands countless knocks of hard travel, but is absolutely waterproof. It will also stand unusually high temperatures without cracking or peeling.

Naugahyde Bags are made with a black grain finish, English check lining, and the best grade of solid brass fittings. Unexcelled in appearance, they keep their good looks through the hardest service.

You will find a Naugahyde the best bag investment you ever made. If your dealer cannot supply you, write direct to us. Naugahyde Bags come in three sizes—16 inch, 18 inch, and 20 inch.

Correspondents, JOHN J. SELL and RALPH

January is "Thrift" month; give this some thought. Are you practicing Thrift? If not, why not start now? If you practice thrift at home, it will be reflected in your work, and there is an old saying, "A thrifty man will always come out ahead."

The Keyser Collegian Basketball Club has put another strong team in the field for the 1923-1924 season, and is scheduled to play some of the fastest teams in the east, being the champions of West Virginia. They won 66 and lost 11 games during the 1922-1923 season. This team consists, almost exclusively of local Baltimore and Ohio employees, and would be glad to hear from strong teams anywhere on the System.

The cooperation existing among our employees was exemplified recently. On November 28, a shipment of fresh meat was unloaded at Roberts Station on the West End of our division, consigned to this non-agency station. Section Foreman C. W. Hammon, noting the shipment, and knowing no local consignee by the name shown, immediately got in touch with the nearest express agent and arranged for its return, thereby averting damage and a claim. Cooperation of this kind counts.

Traveling Car Agent G. Hunter Castle introduced us to his Siamese friend, Mr.—What's his name, Hunter? Well, he was a good fellow anyway, and Hunter showed him all the high points around Cumberland Terminal. Understand Hunter is now posting up on the Siamese language, in anticipation of receiving some letters from that distant land.

We understand our old friend F. A. Ernst, Assistant Division Engineer Jones' staff, met with some tough luck recently. It appears Ernst was working at West End, when a wild turkey jumped up in front of him. Ernst grabbed it by the wing, but the bird got away. He has some Thanksgiving feathers to show for it!

Our collaborator on the West End, Traveling Passenger Agent H. B. Kight, was laid up a few days with an injured leg, but we are glad to report that he is again with us. We expect Keyser items to spruce up again.

At a meeting of the Cumberland Veterans' Association held on December 4, in Odd Fellows Hall, Cumberland, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year. President, H. W. Bloss, Vice-President, W. Tederick; Treasurer, J. F. Barnett; Corresponding Secretary, A. Y. Wilson; Financial Secretary, A. E. Menefee; Chaplain, John Ketzner. Officers of Ladies' Auxiliary, Allison No. 4 are: President, Mrs. J. F. Barnett; Vice-President, Mrs. J. W. Smith; Secretary, Mrs. H. W. Bloss; Treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Young; Chaplain, Mrs. F. A. Taylor; Marshall, Mrs. W. H. Rafter; Outer Guard, Mrs. E. Dwiggins; Chairman, Entertainment Committee, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee; Chairman, Relief Committee, Mrs. W. G. Culp. Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee was elected delegate and Mrs. F. A. Taylor, alternate, to the Grand Lodge of Veterans, to be held in May at Baltimore. Following the election of officers, an entertainment and refreshments were provided by a committee of which Mrs. J. F. Barnett was chairman.

Considerable interest is being taken in the monthly meetings arranged by the Cumberland Veterans' for the winter months, and a good attendance is assured. A fine program has been arranged for each meeting.

Seen at Cumberland. The Capitol Limited on time, eastbound, eighteen times; westbound, sixty times. Let's keep up the good work; we don't want our Paw Paw friends to set their clocks wrong.

The Baltimore and Ohio Social Club, Cumberland, arranged a fine Yuletide dance and social in the New Shops on December 14, under the auspices of the Entertainment Committee. Good music was provided and refreshments served.

A good way to promote thrift, is to patronize your local banks. We also suggest that you read what our advertisers in the MAGAZINE have to offer before making necessary purchases.

The strong Cumberland Duck-pin Team, under the management of Chief Clerk to Superintendent G. A. McGinn, journeyed to Baltimore on December 8 and met defeat at the hands of the General Office Team. McGinn's team previously defeated Baltimore at Cumberland. This makes it fifty-fifty and we suggest they roll off the tie at Martinsburg, on neutral ground. We are still rooting for the home team.

We have dances and dances but we have only one original terpsichorean artist. When it comes to dancing, Assistant Car Distributor B. A. Noone puts them all in the shade!

We often wonder why most of our contributors give us photographs taken many moons ago, instead of some good up to date pictures. We know, from personal observation, that our employees would look well in the MAGAZINE. We have no age limit, send your photographs in.

Every additional shipment of freight and every additional passenger we can get over our line helps. We have the facilities to handle them; let's organize a "Go-Getters Club," and get the business.

We were pleased to hear additional favorable comments on the Baltimore and Ohio Dining Car Service recently. Investigation developed that Steward Costello and Waiter Marshall, No. 7, are to be congratulated this time. It's service and the smile that keeps satisfied customers.

The Diabolt Club is in full bloom. "Grandma" Messman, "Hotty" Spearman, "Bill" Kornhoff and "Mike" Fleming are now slated to return the compliments in Keyser pretty soon. Look out, Big Ed, Dusty and Marshall, you know all champions fall some time.

Class S engines are now operating on the East End, Cumberland Division, and in line with all Baltimore and Ohio operations, are performing 100 per cent. Of course, we want to give credit to the yardmasters getting trains out of the yard, and road crews moving them. With all the "Family" working together, we got the name of "The Best and Only" and we are not going to permit either new or old engines to take that title from us.

We understand our genial operator, "Pete" French, Streckers, has a patent on cleaning stove pipes. While we don't want to enroach on "Patented Rights" we understand "Pete" asked to have the tower stove pipe cleaned out in preparation for cold weather; when he didn't get service immediately, he proceeded to do the job himself. We don't know if it was dynamite caps, but Pete is commencing to look white again and we hope the pipe won't need cleaning any more this season.

Jake Miller, chief dispatcher, bought a new gun and from the tales he told expected to secure enough game to last all winter. On the first day out he discovered the gun was made to shoot around corners and as no game runs in circles, Jake decided to return the gun to the factory. It would not be fair to tell what reply he received on his complaint. Next time, Jake, take a little salt along; you can at least throw it straight.

Overheard Benny Noone and Gus Hodges consoling each other on Bald Heads. Benny said, "Bald men don't need to be afraid of going crazy," and Gus replied, "It's a cinch you don't need to be afraid." Anybody wonder what he meant?

A. P. Connell, transportation timekeeper, is spending all his time at home now. We think Mary Margaret is just the name for her. Congratulations to you and Mrs. Connell.

L. B. See, East Yard, Cumberland, is on the job when it comes to taking inventory but the other day when a conductor called up and asked if we could locate the "Perfume Bottle," "Bill" Nolan promptly informed him where that worthy could be found. Come on Bill, tell us the joke.

J. L. Brown, agent, Great Cacapon, and G. N. Lomyer, are in the race for mayoralty honors at that station. It's a toss up between the agent and the signal maintainer. It is a fortunate locality that can boast of these two men.

Let's go on Thrift. Get some business, handle promptly and watch our car miles. Remember, when we save for the Company, we save for ourselves. Look into the Relief Department and get that "own your own home" idea. Write the Superintendent of the Relief Department for particulars.

On November 16, Local Conductor B. Shipley, while switching in Hancock Yard, observed a car which appeared to be loaded heavier than weight shown on manifest. He ran car over scales, reweighing it, the actual weight being considerably more than the billing called for, thereby increasing our revenue. On November 23, he observed another case of this kind, and handled with same result. Conductor Shipley is to be commended for his watchfulness and handling given these cases.

Our photograph shows the Cumberland Tool Cars taken in 1907. E. J. Napier, (deceased), wreckmaster, was in charge. Included in the group are G. R. W. Ziler, C. C. Beck (deceased), D. P. Ziler, present wreckmaster, George Darr, H. E. Langley, L. Youngblood, F. Tole and "Jim" Ziler. A number of these employees are still in the service.

The West End is taking on a busy outlook. The American Celuloise & Chemical Company is constructing a new two million dollar addition for the manufacture of artificial silk and other by-products, just west of Cumberland. Ground is being broken for the new fair ground and race track west of Cumberland, while at Oakland the General Construction Company is making preliminary arrangements for the building of a big dam, nine miles up in the mountains, along the Little Yough river, in connection with a big hydro-development. This will harness water to make power to be distributed to electrical users throughout Western Pennsylvania, Western Maryland and West Virginia. These new projects will require a large amount of raw material as well as construction material, which will be hauled to the scene of operations over our lines.

Seen at Cumberland. F. E. Baldwin, fuel distributor and H. L. Goodman, secretary to general superintendent, having a friendly argument.

We have not seen our old friend Luke Burns, up this way recently. What's matter Luke, has the girl gone back on you, or is it Christmas?

CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY!

November 28, 1923 will always be well remembered by Carl H. Lapp, for that was his wedding day. Yes, our popular material man has become a benedict, being initiated into the Holy Order of Matrimony at 2.30 p. m. on the above date by Rev. Enders of the English Luthern Church, Cumberland. Louise Hinkle is the fortunate young lady. The newlyweds "honeymooned" in Chicago and other western cities. It has been said "the shortest moon is the honeymoon;" but that theirs may last for a lifetime, is the wish of their many friends.

Effective December 1, Fuel Economy Instructor Smith was transferred to the Connellsville Division. Prior to coming to the East End as fuel economy instructor, Mr. Smith was a fireman on the West End of Cumberland Division. We wish him success in his new field. Successor to Mr. Smith has not yet been appointed.

The accompanying picture shows General Car Foreman Davis and Night Passenger Foreman Raupach on their return from an apparently successful hunting trip. Don't fail to note the rabbits strewn over the automobile which were put there, according to Jake Brown's story, because there was no room for any more in the car. Jake has always been known for his truthfulness and for this reason we would like to believe his story. Perhaps the rabbits were asleep.

Friend Jake tells us another story of this hunting trip. It seems that our highly esteemed master mechanic, popularly known as "King Tut," was a member of this party. On starting, it was noted he had no gun, which naturally caused much wonder, as he had promised all his friends a rabbit. However, after a short time, our EFD upon rushing to the scene of much squealing and rustling of leaves, found A. H. H. down on his knees hugging a poor little rabbit. King Tut says hugging them to death is the most economical and surest method. We agree, this wouldn't be a bad death.

We are indebted to Mr. Glenn for the following Stores Department and Back Shop notes. Many, many thanks, J. C., for your assistance. Do come again.

Our stalwart M. of W. storekeeper, Mr. Shaw, journeyed to Keyser a few days ago via "speed and luxury Deluxe." The only remark Bill had to make was "I'm glad that's over and I'm glad my insurance was paid in advance." Fast moving limousines and slow moving politics never did mix very well anyway.

Things we would like to see in the Back Shop and Stores Force at Cumberland:—
Ralph Baird put 5 gallons of gas in his tank at one time.

D. M. Scott stay home two evenings straight.

Margaret Mouse with more than one date per week.

Mildred Hewitt without a date.

John Phillips cut down on the high life.

Dominic McDonald stay away from Piedmont Sunday nights.

Ray Lippold without car trouble.

Kathryn Goggin do less vamping.

Ralph Kelly open up and say ten or twenty words without stopping.

Miss Adams not in a heap of trouble and worrying.

James Laffey not arranging a party.

John Troxell make a date.

Frank Hopkins taking things easy.

Kathryn Gettley stay away from Pittsburgh.

We are pleased to have with us Miss Kathryn Goggin, who takes the place of Miss Anna Burns, transferred to Division Accountant's Office. We hope you'll like us and will stay with us for a long time.

We are also pleased to have with us Mr. Emerick and his force of efficiency experts. They are doing fine work. By the way, Mr. Emerick, have you seen a better shop on any railroad?

We regret very much to report the death of one of our beloved fellow workmen, Edmund H. Stealey, age 32, who was killed in an automobile accident on Williams Road about three miles from Cumberland on November 14. Mr. Stealey, although only with us a short time, made many friends and was well liked by all his fellow workers. He is survived by his mother, five sisters and one brother, to whom we offer our sincere sympathy.

"Jack" Smith, our popular outside foreman, is on the job again after spending several weeks in Hollywood and other California cities. No, Smithy didn't go out there to join the movies—just for a vacation.

These Men Wouldn't Stay Down

Read how these 29 railroad presidents rose from positions as laborers, office boys, rodmen, etc.

Leaflet No. 4, recently issued by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, tells how the following presidents got their start. The rise of these men should be an inspiration to every railroad man who wants to get ahead. There is still room at the top if you really want to get there.

NAME	BEGAN AS	NAME	BEGAN AS
C. H. Markham	Track Laborer	W. B. Story	Axeman; Engineer
H. E. Bryan	Call Boy		Corps

S. M. Felton	Rodman	J. H. Hustis	Messenger Boy
E. J. Pearson	Rodman	Stanton Ennes	Telegraph Opr. and Brakeman
		C. R. Gray	Telegraph Operator

These men didn't get ahead by luck or pull. They rose step by step because they studied their work—they made each job a stepping-stone to something better—they trained themselves in spare time so that when opportunity came they were able to take advantage of it.

Why don't you study in your spare time and get the special training you must have if you want to get ahead? If you will put your shoulder to the wheel and really try, the International Correspondence Schools will help you to reach the goal of your dreams far quicker than if you attempt to make the journey alone.

At least find out how by marking and mailing the coupon that has meant so much to so many other railroad men just like yourself.

The following shop employes at Hardman, Neal Fream, Vic Lucas, and Geo. Shay, strapped their trusty rifles to their backs and hied forth to Elk Mountain for the avowed purpose of exterminating Bruin and his family.

They were fortunate in killing an animal weighing less than two pounds, color grey. All members of the hunting party contended that it was a bear cub. The good citizens of Preston County, however, declared that it was a rabbit.

The accompanying photograph is Miss Catherine Crawford, daughter of Engineman W. H. Crawford, Piedmont. Little Miss Crawford won the Pythian Sister Scholarship at Piedmont for having been the best all round student in the school during 1921. She also is the proud possessor of a County Certificate. She is in the 2nd year High School.

Passenger Brakeman Matt Yarnell, while on duty a few days ago, overheard a passenger on his train say that he had just discovered in looking over his mail, enroute, that he had routed a carload of apples to the wrong destination, and was in a quandary as to just what to do. Upon his arrival at Cumberland, Matt went to the Superintendent's Office, explained the case, had the necessary changes made, and the car continued to its proper destination. He also wired the shipper, who had continued east, that the change was made and everything was O. K. A few days later Matt had the prettiest basket of apples in the country, with a letter of praise from the shipper. Service and Courtesy surely do pay. In the shipper we have a satisfied passenger and a life long booster, and in Matt an helpful employe.

News is scarce. Your correspondent, who has been with the Company for 20 years today, December 11, injured his knee while alighting from a train and has been at his home in bed. He is out now and looking for news and for ads, too. (Mr. Mannix, please note!)

It is with profound regret that we report the death of Mrs. Mary Ervin, wife of Chief Clerk to Trainmaster P. G. Ervin. Mrs. Ervin, who had been ill for a long time, bore her suffering with true Christian spirit. The esteem in which she was held in the community was manifested by the beautiful floral emblems that surrounded her casket. To Mr. Ervin and his children we extend heartfelt sympathy.

To Boilermaker W. E. Kight and family we also extend our deepest sympathy in the passing to that Great Beyond of his mother, Mrs. Harley H. Kight. Mrs. Kight had been an invalid for several years and yet she, too, with Christian fortitude, bore her sufferings without a murmur, believing in Him who doeth all things well. Among the beautiful flowers which mutely told of the esteem in which she was held, was a beautiful piece from fellow boilermakers.

In crediting those who assisted me in getting up the notes for Keyser in last month's issue, I failed to give good old Ed. Tasker any part whatever, and he is the fellow I am depending upon.

'Scuse me Ed! I appreciate your help and I am going to see that in the future you are given the credit you deserve.

George Porter, first trick ticket clerk in the Cumberland Ticket Office, enjoyed a trip to Canada last month. George said he visited Niagara Falls and did not think they were so wonderful for if that little old creek up home (at Oakland) had a high place to fall from, it would be wonderful, too.

The springs on the right side of Boiler Foreman Spicer's new automobile are getting rather weak, since our boiler clerk has returned to the farm to live and is riding back and forth with him each day.

We sympathize with "Do Do" these days, owing to the transfer of B. J. Davis to the Freight Agent's Office. Certainly did hate to have "P K" leave us, but wish him the best of luck in his new position.

We understand that Assistant Foreman Ravenscraft, who has been confined to his home for the past month with an injured knee, is now rapidly improving. We certainly do miss "Ginnie" and hope he will be on the job by the time this item appears in the MAGAZINE.

Vernon Beall, employed as electrician apprentice, was recently awarded a prize and acknowledged the Champion Winchester Rifle Shot of the World, his score being 499 out of a possible five hundred, made at the tournament held by the Winchester Rifle Club in Philadelphia. If Vernon could only play checkers the same way he can shoot, "Oh Boy," we would have a match worth while with our old friend, "Abe" Ketzner.

Night Boiler Foreman J. H. Griffen is confined to his home with a severe attack of rheumatism. Hurry up, Uncle Jack, and get those limbs of yours supplied up as we certainly do miss you.

Dusty says, "The way some of our lady clerks pay over their money to the druggist each pay day, makes it evident that they are getting their complexion on the installment plan."

"John Smith, our colored janitor, has a very small sense of humor," quotes Bertha, our time clerk. "He was given our old family cat, which gave up its ninth life, to dispose of in manner fitting its many years of mouse catching. He took the remains to the rear of one of our local hash houses, for what purpose I am not sure, and left it. I would not have grieved so much to have the cat so disposed of, if John had only removed my name and address from the suit box, used as a coffin."

Apprentice Carl Avers, better known as "Interrogation Point," recently made a trip to the Pacific Coast. On his return he distributed among his friends copies of the various time tables of the roads over which he traveled. He had 317 time tables of the various roads and their branches. In fact, he hardly had anything else in his grip. We do not know if Carl is trying to bump Traveling Passenger Agent Kight or is economizing.

Below are a few bright ones heard in Master Mechanic's Office:

Do Do—Bertha, Blacksmith Smith will report for duty tomorrow; will you kindly notify his foreman?

Bertha—What Smith?

Do Do—BLACK.

Alice—I have a charge of one gallon of fuel oil, is that R. & R.?

Marshall—No, H W—hot work.

Mary—Yardmaster Virts and Geo. (Sheeny) Sheetz are organizing an apple club.

Ethel—What kind of an apple club?

Mary—Bald-wins.

C. C.—Dusty, I note in November issue of the MAGAZINE an article stating that you are a prompt five o'clock man these days. I suppose if you were adding a column of figures and the whistle blew for five o'clock you would stop half way up a column.

Dusty—Nothing doing, Chief, if it was that close to five o'clock I would not start to add.

Martinsburg, W. Va.

Correspondent, W. L. STEPHENS

Radio fans around Martinsburg are enjoying some fine entertainments these days. Jude Fulk and Engineer Alonzo Hockenberry claim to be the champion radio fans of this city. The boys around Hose Company 5's hall say one of these ardent fans has his meals sent to the engine house; he is not even willing to go home to eat; he might miss something.

The boys around the Yardmaster's Office, Martinsburg, tell a good joke on Veteran Engineer "Ed" Fortney. Recently Veteran Fortney and several of the men were standing at the local station, watching the passengers coming from the train. A fine looking woman rushed up to Brother Fortney and throwing her arms about his neck, kissed him and went into raptures about how glad she was to see him. "Say, Woman, haven't you made a mistake?"

"No, I haven't," and she proved it by again embracing the embarrassed Veteran. Then, lifting her head from the last embrace, the lady happened to see and recognize the man whom she was expected to meet. Proper apologies were offered, of course, but every fellow who had witnessed the proceedings was wishing that he was in Brother Ed's place.

A number of friends and neighbors of Veteran Storekeeper W. G. Edwards and Mrs. Edwards gave this venerable couple a delightful surprise on the 49th anniversary of their marriage, December 8. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Mr. Edwards is nearing his 50-year service button, and is still going.

The grim reaper has been busy in our railroad family since the last issue of the MAGAZINE. The sympathy of all the employees here goes out to Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Tedrick in the loss of their seven-months-old daughter, Margaret Ruth. The little one died on December 7, after an illness of several days, of a severe cold.

A sudden death was that of Carpenter Jacob A. Fristoe, who died while at work. The camp with which Mr. Fristoe was employed was making some bridge repairs at Martinsburg. Mr. Fristoe reported for duty as usual, nor did he complain of feeling ill or in any way unable to perform his duties. While engaged in sawing a stick of timber he fell dead. Company Surgeon Dr. J. H. Hodges and his assistant, Dr. Oates, were summoned immediately, but they found Mr. Fristoe beyond medical aid. It was the opinion of the physicians that the deceased had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. Mr. Fristoe was 54 years old and had been a resident of Martinsburg since 1910, coming here from Virginia. The funeral services were held at the home, 398 W. Race St. and the body taken to Middletown for burial.

Engineer William F. Provance died at the King's Daughter's Hospital on December 7, after an illness of several months. He was a native of this city, having been here in 1872, later moving to Baltimore. He had served the Baltimore and Ohio creditably for many years. Nineteen years ago he returned to Martinsburg to live, and here he remained until his death. A widow and one son, with other relatives, survive. Funeral services were held at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, with interment in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

AUTOMOBILE MAKES 27 MILES ON AIR

An automobile goes 27 miles on air by using an automatic device which was installed in less than 5 minutes. The automobile was only making 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline but after this remarkable invention was installed, it made better than 57. The inventor, Mr. J. A. Stransky, 590 Eleventh Street, Pukwana, South Dakota, wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his own risk. Write him today.—Adv.

we hope that all will put their shoulder to the wheel and make the new year—1924—better for themselves as well as the Baltimore and Ohio.

On November 22, a baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Moser; they have named the little one Thomas Colborn Moser. The proud father is employed as time keeper in Division Accountant's Office. Congratulations!

Regret to report the death of the following conductors: H. C. Critchfield of Johnstown, Pa., and J. H. LaClair of Uniontown, Pa.

On November 23, Conductor P. C. Crislip returned from a hunting trip to the mountains. Thanks "Red," the squirrels were fine.

J. R. Dunston, engineer, has been in the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, Pa., for some time, taking treatment. We all hope for J. R.'s speedy recovery.

On November 24, the Honorable E. T. Rubin, demurrage clerk, Connellsville, Pa., was host at a well appointed and fine turkey dinner at his home on McCormick Avenue for the clerks in the Freight Office. Dinner was served at 6.30 o'clock and in true Thanksgiving style. All the guests reported one of the most enjoyable evenings they have spent for some time.

On December 1, Morgan Smith was appointed instructor, Fuel Economy, vice H. T. Clark, promoted to assistant road foreman of engines at Cumberland.

It is understood that effective January 9, the agency at Markleton, Pa., will be closed. The Sanitarium at this point was taken over by the Government during the war and used as a tubercular hospital for gassed soldiers. At the close of the war it was abandoned and the business has since fallen off to such an extent that the maintenance of an agency is not necessary.

Thrift—Thrift—Thrift!

Our good old friend, Noah Webster, says in his book of knowledge that THRIFT means good husbandry, frugality, prosperity and gain, and we are inclined to believe that Noah could not have picked out a better meaning. Where can you find more economy than in the practice of good husbandry? Where is there a better attribute to be found than in the practice of frugality? Where is there anybody who does not love to gain something in the killing pace of every day life, and what is more desirable than prosperity? Thrift is but a small word compared with others found elsewhere in the Webster classic, and yet it has a world of meaning, and is so full of possibilities to those of us who would practice its teachings. So, as a suggestion for a New Year resolution, permit me to urge a more proficient practice of THRIFT.

Once again the little hamlet of West Newton appears in the limelight. Dan Cupid has been snoopin' around, and we are told one of his wicked darts hit B. S. Bailey, warehouseman, who has recently taken unto himself a wife. We like your friends to hear of your achievement, Brother Bailey, hence this exposure, and with it go our best wishes for a happy future.

While tattling in the vicinity of this same little burg, might add that Agent Mulvey looks well with his new molars, and we sincerely hope his experience with these will not be as with the ones he lost some time ago. Hold them tight, Tom!

It has come to our notice that Assistant Train Master Harry Allen is about to move into his new house. Big house warming coming, hey, Harry?

Freight Conductor J. G. Cunningham, who has been on the sick list for the last three months, is steadily improving and we hope he will soon be back on the job.

Car Distributor A. H. Gribbin, who has been in poor health for some months, has again returned to duty.

Miss Gertrude Madden, stenographer in Superintendent Beltz' Office, who has been in poor health, is now rapidly regaining her strength, and will return to duty shortly.

Messrs. Huggins, Car Distributor's Office, and Matheny, of McKeesport, went hunting recently in the wilds of No Man's Land, Northern District. Both said they were hunting bear but we are inclined to think they were trailing "dears."

Friend Cupid has started operations in Transportation Assistant Gorsuch's Office. We notice the tell-tale evidence on the proper finger of our friend, Gertrude Clay. We all wish you luck, Gertie, and will call around at the little shop at 6th in McKeesport and order our next suit. Cooperation helps. Signs indicate other startling developments along this line in this same office, due notice of which will be given later.

Another victim of the ever busy Cupid is our estimable friend, George (Ginger) Washington Graham, freight representative in the District Freight Office at Pittsburgh. Seems George dug up enough courage and nerve to "pop the question" and the event was actually consummated November 6. Congratulations and best wishes. George did it.

OLD TIMERS ON THE NORTHERN DISTRICT

Friends of M. H. McNerney, mason foreman, Pittsburgh Division, will be grieved to learn of his death on November 17. Mr. McNerney, who resided in McKeesport at the time of his death, entered the service of the Company, April 1, 1896 and had been an employe of the Pittsburgh Division during all of his service. He had made an exhaustive study of concrete and methods of working it for many years, and at the time of his death was engaged in the study of a method of waterproofing concrete to make it absolutely dry. Thus is recorded the passing of a true and faithful employe of the old school whose loss is mourned by all with whom he came in contact.

For a long time we have heard of the wierd experiences of our nimroding friend, Brother Kelly, of Transportation Assistant Gorsuch' Office, but it remained for our friend the cartoonist to give us a true picture of the events as they happened in the field. We know not in what particular part of the country this experience happened, but the accompanying sketch portrays a word picture and is inserted for your edification with no intention to offend the frightened hunter. It's no sin to run when you're scared.

It has come to my notice that Miss Emma Navoney and Miss Mary Gallagher, Division Engineer's Office, Connellsville, are complaining about not being able to get their names in the Connellsville items of the MAGAZINE. If the girls come across with the shoes, feel quite confident we can have their photographs in an early issue.

There have been no accidents on the Northern District since October 7, and not a wheel has been off the main track in that territory during the entire month of November, which is gratifying. This has been due to improvement in the physical condition of the road, better efficiency in the M. of W. Department, and good feeling, in general, among the employees, all of which are to be congratulated.

Practice Thrift,

It will give you a lift,

One of our photographs is of Engineer James A. Cottrell and his son and was taken while they were visiting Washington, D. C., recently. Mr. Cottrell, Sr., is engineer on trains 47 and 48, running between Pittsburgh and Clarion Jct., and known as the "Stump Jumping Limited." He has been in Baltimore and Ohio service many years and resides near Glenwood, Pa. He is fond of dogs and also of his pet engine 1313, named many years ago "The Old Black Cat." He tells us this engine used to hold the record for speed, because of her high wheels. Years ago the 1300 class engine hauled some of our best trains.

Another of our photos is of Conductor A. G. Kirkwood and Baggage-master J. H.

Edgar. It was taken at Kane, Pa. Conductor Kirkwood has worked in various branches of the service. He last entered the service on September 1, 1901 as brakeman and was promoted to conductor on September 16, 1902. He now runs one side of passenger train between Mount Jewett and Butler. He was brought up, from the time he was six years old, at Clarion Jct. Living close to the railroad all his life he knows railroad work and the history of our road for many years back.

Baggagemaster Edgar has been in the service since 1899. He was first employed at Allegheny, Pa., as a clerk, and in 1902 was transferred to position as brakeman. He is a promoted man and occasionally we have the pleasure of seeing him in his conductor's uniform saying, with his genial smile "Tickets Please." He enlisted during the World War and was given a commission as lieutenant. He served in railroad army service in Russia.

Many of our readers and patrons do not know what they are missing by failing to visit Kane and vicinity at this season of the year. Bear stories are numerous, and carried in newspapers all over the country. These animals are numerous and have been causing considerable trouble by raiding pig pens and sheep pastures, but they are being kept on the move by hundreds of hunters who are enjoying the sport.

The Kane Republican carries a photograph taken by Mrs. Gleason, Smethport, Pa., who passed in an automobile while Ivan Peterson and another man were attempting to get a bear out of a tree near Lantz corners, within one hundred feet of the Kane Mount Jewett, road—quite close to the Baltimore and Ohio tracks. The bear finally descended from the top of the tree, and weighed 80 pounds. The capturer had a lively time making Mr. Bruin fast, being considerably scratched up during the operation. After being fed and admired for several hours the bear was released, it not being "open season."

Weslie Haun, one of our old time employes, is the flagman on one side of the Capitol Limited between Pittsburgh and Willard. When this train was first put on, and the most efficient crew selected, Weslie was one of the number. Later, when the positions were put up for bid, he was the successful applicant. Mr. Haun always tells us how the passengers riding the Capitol Limited appreciate it and that its service is unexcelled. He has a fine home in Butler, where he has lived for several years. Mr. Haun is also the proud father of two sons, one being chief dispatcher, Akron, Ohio, and the other in the employ of the Standard Oil Co., at Olean, N. Y. The latter, Ralph, was formerly employed as telegraph operator on the Pittsburgh Division.

Our station at Butler has recently been overhauled and painted, and the platform raised, which is quite an improvement.

Agent J. G. McCloskey, Petrolia, has recently purchased—No, not an automobile—a Ford. He is often seen on the new road with a lady, and as it is the same one all the time, we expect smokes will be passed out any day.

We hope to have some Big Game stories soon. A bunch of our people are in camp now. We hope Presley and Harold will get the bear this time.

Engineer E. V. Fitzgerald has purchased a new Buick. He is now demonstrating the four wheel brake.

January is National Thrift month. Let's put our shoulders to the wheel and practice Thrift both at home and in our daily work.

THE LAST DAYS OF THE NARROW GAUGE, NORTHERN DISTRICT

On September 30, 1911, the last narrow gauge train ran from Kane to Foxburg, Pa. See story above. In photograph No. 1, Brakeman W. G. Murphy has unfortunately been omitted. He was standing near the tank. He is still in the service. Photograph No. 3 shows snow in Jo Jo cut, near Kane, Pa., in February, 1908

"If you see the gas or electric light burning when its not needed, turn it off—in the office or at home. Look out for the water. Lots of places we are on meter basis, and in many places we are actually short of water. Stop That Leak in the water pipe, too! Shut the car door; it takes more coal to haul a car with an open door.

A short time ago, the O. R. T. Club of Pittsburgh held a get-together meeting of old time telegraphers and agents. J. Yeager, one of our efficient operators in "DS" Office, Pittsburgh, was in charge of the arrangements. A good attendance was reported. The Club held its Christmas Dance at the Moose Club Rooms, Pittsburgh, December 14.

We have just heard of the death of John D. Shoup. He passed away on December 7. Mr. Shoup was a conductor on the old P. and W., Northern District. He worked here about 25 years. He left the service sixteen years ago and at the time of his death was employed by the National Transit Company at Oil City, Pa. "Pappy John," as he was affectionately known here, had many friends on the Northern District and elsewhere. His brother is Car Inspector J. O. Shoup, Foxburg, and his son is Flagman D. B. Shoup. Our sympathy is extended to his relatives.

We are reproducing some photographs of the last trains run over the old narrow gauge road. They were taken on September 30, 1911, the last day the narrow gauge trains ran.

Engines 7, 94 and 99 were coupled together, with all narrow gauge equipment, at Kane, Pa., on the night of September 30, and run to Foxburg for the last time. People all along the line were gathered at stations to bid farewell to the little narrow gauge trains that had served them well for so many years.

Before daybreak the next morning, the Maintenance of Way employees were at work, in a downpour of rain which lasted until Monday, spreading the rails from narrow to standard gauge, and on Monday night the Mount Jewett crew, shown in photograph No. 1 left Foxburg with standard gauge engine 799 and equipment, arriving at Kane without difficulty.

The narrow gauge days will long be remembered by old timers who are still with us and others who have retired. The cold winters we had, with snow higher than box cars in some cuts and the links and pins are not forgotten. The old timers remember riding on the tops of box cars down all hills, handling brake clubs and sometimes—without result.

Conductor Billy Mattern and Baggage-man T. J. Rainey have railroaded with us for forty years and still stick to the rail.

The snow scene shows trouble in a cut, one mile east of Kane, on February 6, 1908. At this time, the road had been snowed up between Clarion Jet. and Kane for more than two weeks. Conductor A. G. Kirkwood and Engineer Paul J. Diffenderfer with engine 900, snow plow and flanger, had been dispatched from Kane but were stalled in Jo Jo cut, in a drift 1500 feet long and from three to fourteen feet deep. A gang of Italian laborers with this crew, threw down their shovels and disappeared. The crew after doing all they could to get out of the drift, drained the engine, pulled the fire and walked back to Kane. Later on, when the storm had subsided, the same crew, with engine 900, assisted by B. L. & K. engine No. 10, started again to clear the right of way. With a crew of 10 Italian laborers and 29 glass workers from Kane, Jo Jo cut was opened after three days of hard work.

We recall one winter when the road between Clarion Jet. and Kane had been blocked by snow. After 21 days, the first passenger train left Kane in charge of our old friend, Conductor F. X. Jarvis, now deceased. They arrived at Tylersburg and after getting on, one of the passengers looked at his watch. He said to Conductor Jarvis, who asked for his ticket, "You are a little late today." "Yes, sir," Jarvis replied, "we are just 21 days and 40 minutes late!"

Those days are gone forever. While we still have heavy snow storms, since the road has been made standard gauge, we are occasionally delayed, but we get through somehow.

The New Year

As the years come and go, many opportunities are lost; yet oftentimes failure can be turned into actual achievement, if we profit by the omissions of the past. Therefore during 1924 let us firmly resolve to put forth our best efforts and then our regrets will be few and our losses regained.

November 26 the Baltimore and Ohio Glenwood Social Club held its Thanksgiving dance in Foreman's Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa. Although unfavorable weather was responsible for many being absent, the attendance was good and an enjoyable evening was passed. The music was furnished by Sargone's Orchestra, Pittsburgh. The officers of the club express their appreciation of the splendid results obtained by Miss Jane Passmore, Master Mechanic's Office and W. E. Mohler, supervisor of shop orders, Glenwood Locomotive Shop. Among the pleasing features of the evening was the large representation of Pittsburgh young ladies, who are employed in the different telephone exchanges. It is regretted that the inclemency of the weather prevented the young ladies from the office of the Superintendent of Shops and the Stores Department from attending. It is hoped they will be more fortunate next time.

Foreman Kane, Glenwood Locomotive Blacksmith Shop, walked into the office recently and informed the correspondent that he was always well protected in the shop. Upon being interrogated, Mr. Kane took us into his confidence and imparted the following information: It appears that Charles Allen, spring maker, is the possessor of a wonderful pair of hands with a wicked kick in either and has recently gained the title of amateur champion of Greater Pittsburgh in the light heavy weight class, his weight being 170 pounds. On his first appearance in the squared arena, he met George Kunz of Lawrenceville, Pa., whom he sent to the land of dreams in the first round. He then challenged Sam Simmons, who eagerly accepted the defi, wishing to avenge Kunz and uphold the honor of Lawrenceville, with the following result: First round: Felt each other out—when suddenly Allen rushed Simmons to the ropes, delivering several jabs and with a stiff uppercut dropped him to his knees. It was an exceedingly warm round. Second round: Allen received from Simmons a left jab in the eye, which intensified and roused his fighting blood and several hot exchanges took place, with Allen having the better of it. Third round: Having shaken hands, Allen rushed Simmons to his corner, delivering numerous smashing rights to the face, head and body knocking him to his knees, when the bell rang and saved Simmons from a knock out. The judges stopped the fight and awarded the decision to Allen, with which went the amateur light heavy weight championship of Greater Pittsburgh, which explains Mr. Kane's declaration in the opening sentence.

"The ticket agent at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Station at Grafton, W. Va.,

Please mention our magazine when writing advertisers is the most courteous, polite and amiable official in that capacity that I know and I do quite a bit of traveling." This is a statement made by a prominent Elkins man at an informal dinner which he and a number of Grafton men attended here. "I have been in Grafton a number of times and have had occasion to ask this ticket agent questions with reference to trains and other information. At times when I asked these questions he was busy as a bee. But he always answered me pleasantly and with a smile. I don't know the man's name, but I tell you he is a most valuable asset to the Baltimore and Ohio. I have heard people all over the state of West Virginia say the same thing that I am saying about the man at the ticket window in Grafton. If there were more courteous employees of public service corporations in this state and throughout the country there would be a much better feeling between the corporations and the general public. Courtesy and service with a smile is one of the biggest assets of any business, be it public or private. I am in a position of authority over a number of men," the Elkins man concluded, "and I tell you that I would rather have men who are friendly, considerate and courteous and perhaps not so efficient than to direct men who are simply good machines."

W. H. Rowland was born in Hancock, Ind., on January 18, 1850 and first came to Grafton, W. Va., in 1885. He had been in the service of the Company for forty-seven years when he retired. His death here on October 23 was mourned by a large number of friends and acquaintances.

Dr. Charles A. Sinsel, for over a third of a century medical examiner of the Relief Department at Grafton, passed away on Saturday afternoon December 8. The esteem in which we held him was reflected by the constant stream of neighbors and friends who called to pay their last respects at his late home on Maple Avenue.

(Miss Unks prepared a long and fitting account of the life of Dr. Sinsel and we have incorporated it in the account prepared by the Relief Department, which will be found elsewhere in this issue. Ed.)

On November 7 Section Foreman W. F. Cross, while working in the vicinity of No. 7 tunnel, noticed brake rigging dragging on No. 96. He immediately got in touch with operator at Smithburg, by telephone, in an effort to stop train and avoid possible derailment. Operator at Smithburg stated to Foreman Cross that Train 97 was in siding at West Union and that if he could get in touch with some of the train crew by telephone that the train could be stopped at West Union, thereby lessening the likelihood of a derailment, if the train was permitted to come as far as Smithsburg. This arrangement worked out satisfactorily. Engineer of No. 97 flagged No. 96 and brake rigging was removed at that point.

Monongah Division staff commends Foreman Cross for his good work and hopes that others will follow his good example.

I had W. B. Porterfield's picture to put in the MAGAZINE again but he stole it. It was a compliment to him but he thinks it would scare all the rats out of the office so he thought it better to take it home where there are no rats. Say, don't you think he had a lot of nerve to hang his stocking up for Santa Claus? He rather cheated C. W. Burke out of his share if he expected to have it filled.

It is with regret that we report the death of W. H. Longwell's father, who died in a local hospital on November 22 of a complication of diseases. He was buried at Manassas, Va., on November 26.

Mr. Longwell is night foreman at Clarksburg Shops and we extend to him our heartfelt sympathies.

The many friends of A. A. Burger, local representative of the Trunk Line Freight Inspection Bureau, will be interested to hear that he has become a radio fan.

Andy seems to be sure that he has heard Oriental monologues from Japan, and that once or twice he has heard sounds which he is inclined to think comes from far away Mars.

E. L. Dent, ticket clerk, Sturgeon White, chief clerk to trainmaster, and conductor Wirt Knapp attended the foot ball game at Morgantown, Thanksgiving Day, between West Virginia University and Washington and Jefferson College. They were much disappointed because our "Mountaineers" lost the game.

Miss Nellie G. Comer, posting clerk, Freight Office, in company with her father, Patrick Comer, M. of W. Department, spent several weeks in the Southwest visiting friends and relatives.

Among the important places of interest which they planned to see are Cincinnati, Louisville, New Orleans, Phoenix, Ariz., and San Francisco.

C. M. Criswell, division freight claim prevention representative, with headquarters here, has had a two weeks vacation.

On November 17, an inspection of all yards on the Monongah Division was made by a committee of three supervisors, appointed by Division Engineer A. H. Freygang. They were E. C. Parks, L. T. Wilfong and J. F. Shafferman.

The inspection was made on the following points; cleanliness and general appearance. After going over the yards at Grafton, Fairmont and Clarksburg, the committee decided that Foreman F. Sermo, Fairmont Yard, under the supervision of Supervisor H. H. Tedrick, had the cleanest yard and they further decided that Fairmont yard had the best general appearance. Foreman Sermo was given a prize of $25.00.

Foreman Sermo entered the service as laborer in June, 1916, Fairmont Yard; promoted to assistant foreman, August, 1916 at Grafton. On January 10, 1917, he was transferred to Fairmont Yard as assistant foreman, and on April 16, 1917 he was promoted to extra gang foreman. On December 1, 1917 he was made foreman of Section No. 45.

Mr. Sermo has been very successful, is a fine fellow and always does his work with a smile and cheerful word for all. He is a good trackman and a progressive young man. He has bought and is paying for a home. His wife and three children are proud of Frank and his progress.

On December 5 a delightful surprise was given our senior supervisor, J. F. Shafferman, it being his sixty-fourth birthday. The party was planned by his wife, and Mr. Shafferman received the compliments of his friends who sincerely hope he may enjoy many more birthdays.

R. F. Peters, formerly of the repair track, Car Shops, Fairmont, has been transferred to Glenwood Shops. Jess Lynch was promoted to be car foreman, Fairmont.

We are glad to welcome back to duty our chief clerk and paymaster at Fairmont Freight house, Clyde Monroe.

Wheeling Division

Happy New Year Everybody!

The Maintenance of Way Department wants to show off this month and with our notes you'll find pictures of two section gangs on our Division. One is Section Foreman A. T. Baker and his gang on the platform at Wheeling Station, Foreman Baker on the extreme left. The man in the center (with the grin), is the reason Wheeling has one of the cleanest platforms on the System, Antonio Torchi. The other picture is of Section Foreman J. W. Kiser and his men at Kenova, W. Va., Foreman Kiser in the center. Not just making talk ('cause I belong to the M. of W. Department, too), but don't you think the Maintenance of Way men are about the most important on the Railroad? And good looking, too?

Leo, son of A. G. Villers, pumper, Underwood, had his face, hands and arms burned in a gasoline explosion at Hundred, W. Va., November 30. Leo has many friends on the Baltimore and Ohio, having formerly been employed as operator, Holloway, Ohio, and other points on the Wheeling Division. His burns are severe but we hope for his early recovery.

Miss Hilda Margarite Knope, secretary to master mechanic, Benwood, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry A. Land of Denver, Colo., on December 31. The wedding took place in Bellaire, Ohio. The bride wore gray Canton crepe and a large black hat, and accessories to correspond, and carried American Beauties. She was attended by Miss Betty Schleicher of McMechen, and Miss Kathryn Pearsoll of Cleveland and Mr. Robert Riddle of Warwood was best man. The happy couple left on a honeymoon shortly after their wedding breakfast, their destination being a "dark secret." Mrs. O. L. Kinsey, wife of assistant chief clerk to district master mechanic baked the wedding cake (an' she can bake 'em too!). The Baltimore and Ohio wishes that luck and prosperity follow the Lands where'er they go!

thought and action was clearly demonstrated recently when Crossing Watchmen Foreman C. McElroy saved a young girl from injury and possible death. The girl was crossing the street and became confused when she saw an automobile coming towards her, hesitating in the middle of the street and every minute the vehicle was coming closer. McElroy, who happened to come around the corner just then, took in the situation at a glance and immediately jumped into the street, grabbed the girl and placed her on the sidewalk; not, however, before the machine had given her a slight bump. She was not hurt and the driver was solicitous enough to inquire and to thank McElroy for his quick thought in averting an accident.

Dining Car Department

Steward and Mrs. C. B. Kautz have returned from Baltimore and New York where they were visiting friends.

Steward C. L. Snoffler visited his mother in Baltimore last month and reports getting the usual good things that only Mother can make!

Steward C. F. Burnham and family spent their Christmas Holidays in Florida. We expect Mr. Burnham to tell those of us who've never been South what Christmas is like in Florida.

W. C. (Bill) Piper, erstwhile dining car steward, who is attending West Virginia University at Morgantown, W. Va., visited his home folks in Wheeling for Thanksgiving.

Dining Car Foreman W. L. Detwiler met with an accident recently while driving in his Cadillac Sedan, when what he thought was a coal truck crashed into his car from the rear and just about demolished his rear axle and one rear wheel. Imagine our surprise, when we hurried to the scene of the accident, to find it was a Ford that hit him!

"Do You Remember When?"

Sam Forgey first started to work at Wheeling Freight House?

Walter Cockrell was a young man and used to fall in love with every girl he met?

George Fitzgerald managed the Benwood Baseball Club and played right field—Strike 1—Strike 2—Strike 3?

When Earle Rickey (Bill Nye) went to Glenwood on No. 72 every other morning?

When Clarence Poe, Sam Simmons, "Charlie" Duvall and Walter Carl (that famous quartette) sang "Jim Dumps" to the tune of Auld Lang Syne?

When "Charlie" Stitt refused to let any road engines take ore trains to Mertz and Schramms, but insisted on all ore being set off at Bridgeport?

When "Vic" Reynolds insisted on all "mud hens" switching out their Columbus loads at Benwood instead of taking them to Bridgeport and Holloway?

Way back in 1907 when "Charley" Dixon, "Charley" Duvall and George Fitzgerald all went to the West Virginia State Fair and had their picture taken?

(AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST).

DO YOU REMEMBER 'way back in the 70's when John Michael Garvey first came to Wheeling and was being shown the sights of the city by "Pete" Moran? It was Mr. Moran's duty to show the points of interest, etc., to all new IRISHMEN striking the town. While inspecting the Baltimore and Ohio Shops, which were then located at 24th Street, a train from the Pittsburgh Division pulled in and Mr. Garvey made inquiry as to the reason for the green flags displayed on the front of the engine. Mr. Moran explained to John Michael that the green flags indicated "there were others or more to follow." And do you remember our surprise the next day to see Mr. Garvey shoving his baby buggy up the street proudly displaying two big green flags?

On November 27, Miss Elsie Manion, stenographer to Division Storekeeper C. R. Kincaid, agreed to forever love, honor and obey Mr. Wayne Martin of Wheeling, W. Va. The clerks of the Storekeeper's Office, Benwood, presented Miss Manion with a beautiful chest of silver and an electric toaster. Best wishes are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Martin for a long, happy married life.

The lost has returned! We are glad to have Miss Della Davis with us again. Miss Davis recently returned from an extended tour of the west and on her arrival here accepted a position in the Storekeeper's Office.

Joe Marschani, chief clerk to division storekeeper, received news that Thanksgiving turkeys could be bought at a great saving in Moundsville. Mr. Marschani immediately got on a street car, spending 15 cents for car fare to Moundsville. After walking about 10 cents worth of leather off his shoes, he secured a turkey five or ten cents cheaper than they were in McMechen. He got on a street car in Moundsville for the return trip but was ejected from the car owing to the size of the turkey. It was then necessary for him to take a taxi which cost $3.00. He arrived in McMechen with his turkey O. K. but a firm believer in "shop at home."

Miss Magdaline Hasenauer, Wheeling, now holds the position formerly held by E. Seth.

On November 24, engine 859, with four cars, made up a special train to Cameron. This train handled Union High School team and rooters from Benwood to Cameron, where they engaged the Cameron team in one of the finest football games of the year. It was remarked by the older employes of the shops that engine 859 was the best decorated engine ever hauling a special over the Wheeling Division, with school colors and a huge football on the front. Credit for securing this special is due to Shop Clerk T. W. Keffer, Jr., Pipefitter Helper A. E. Dean and a former employe, Walter (Buck) Keffer, who secured pledges from the business men of McMechen. Over three hundred people went to Cameron on the train.

Wilbur Copper, Wheeling, has accepted position of messenger boy, succeeding "Dutch" Huffner, resigned.

James ("Jimmie") McElwee, Bellaire, Ohio, has accepted position in the Master Mechanic's Office formerly held by Harold Schafer.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Kettlewell are the proud parents of a new baby boy, weighing over 9 pounds. Mr. Kettlewell is assistant car foreman, Benwood, and Mrs. Kettlewell will be remembered as Miss Rosella Doyle of McMechen, formerly a clerk in the Master Mechanic's Office. We guess "Al" thinks everyone intends to start a New Year's resolution of "No smoking" as we have not yet seen any cigars.

Miss Ruth Vernon and Howard Thonen were noticed near the scales just outside the storeroom recently. "Johnnie" Kady was weighing Miss Vernon and told her her weight was 97 pounds. He then turned to Mr. Thonen and told him the scales would not weigh over 100 pounds. Mr. Thonen suggested that he get on twice! Perhaps Mr. Davis, the scale agent, could fix him up.

The old adage that truth is stranger than fiction was never better exemplified than in the case of our popular revision clerk, Mary Keenan, who recently returned from Los Angeles after an absence of two months. Mary's trip to the coast was ostensibly to visit her sister, but in reality to secure a position in the movies, as she had been told by many good judges that she would have no trouble at all in making a name for herself on the silver screen, because of her striking resemblance to Mary Pickford, "only she was much more beautiful and shapely."

As Mary's train sped across the Santa Fe trail, she had beautiful visions of the future, when millions of movie fans would sit enthralled by her magnificent acting and gaze spellbound at her entrancing beauty. Although she did not advertise her trip, except in the local papers, when her train reached Los Angeles she was greeted by an immense throng, including about a dozen of the most famous directors in the country. D. W. Griffith, Jesse Lasky, Cecil De Mille and several lesser lights were on hand with blank contracts ready to secure Mary's signature at her own figure. It was indeed hard for her to decide which of the directors she would favor, and after much deliberation she decided on D. W. Griffith, as she had once seen "The Birth of a Nation" and

"Over the Hill" and Mr. Griffith was also the handsomest of the bunch. Mary was escorted by Mr. Griffith to his limousine and whisked away to the studio. Just then she received a violent jolt, and upon opening her eyes and looking out of the car window, she could see nothing but cactus and sage brush on every side.

It was a delicious dream while it lasted, and the awakening was quite a shock.

In due time Mary reached her destination and was met by her sister, no one else taking any notice of her. (Be sure and read of Mary's return trip in the next issue, when the opening lines of this epistle will be sustained.)

"He also that is slothful in his work is a brother to him that is a great waster." (Proverbs 17: 9) A man of THRIFT is just the opposite.

Someone has said that THRIFT is self-control. This is true in some form or other. Self-controlled expense or a self-controlled pocket-book means THRIFT, but to thrive makes it necessary in most cases that we take punishment in some shape or form. The idea is not to cry out, and above all, not to quit. Fight back, but fight fair!

When you bait your hook with your heart, the fish always bite. Every human being wants something; bait your hook with your heart and go after the thing you want.

W. M. Longwell, former round house clerk, Gassaway, died on November 19, after an illness of several months. The family has the sympathy of all employees on our Division. Mr. Longwell has been employed in various capacities here ever since the Coal and Coke Railroad was taken over by the Baltimore and Ohio and had been in the service of the Coal and Coke Railroad for some years prior to the date of the consolidation.

Yard Clerk H. H. Cayton, Buckhannon; Ticket Clerk H. E. Brown, Baggage Clerk A. C. Hoover and Yard Clerk W. W. Hall, Weston, have been absent because of illness. Messrs. Hoover and Brown are still absent and we are pulling for their speedy recovery.

Mechanical Examiner W. J. Duffy recently spent a few days on the Charleston Division examining firemen for promotion to locomotive engineers.

Brakeman H. Brown was recently married to Miss Meta West of Buckhannon, W. Va. They will reside in Buckhannon. Congratulations!

We are sorry to record the fact that Major Richard Brooke, division engineer, is absent because of an acute attack of Influenza. Some comfort is gotten from the fact that he was able to leave the hospital a few days before the writing of this article. All his friends hope for a quick "come back."

One of our photographs is the home of Howard C. Pancoast in the Blue Grass Region. If reports are true, Howard had a reason other than investment for providing a nice home; details later. It is probable after he learns of the Relief Department plan for financing homes, he will become a member of every branch of the Relief.

W. J. Mulvihill, supervising agent, Chicago Division, Garrett, Ind., has been assigned to the General Manager's staff, with office at Cincinnati. Everybody knows "Bill" and everybody that knows him likes him.

Edna Weiss, telephone operator, is on sick leave, sojourning in one of those wild Southwestern cities. If the Westerners do not admire her good looks too much she may come back when she recovers.

A. W. Knapp, assistant passenger clerk, Transportation Department, announces the arrival of another daughter, name Alberta Francis.

C. A. Brown, assistant file clerk, General Manager's Office, desiring to learn how a railroad is really operated, has taken a sixty day leave, during which time he will serve as yard clerk, Cincinnati Terminals. During this period Joseph Hoffman will act as assistant file clerk, being succeeded as junior clerk by Frank Podesta, Transportation Department, who, in turn, is succeeded by William Theising.

B. F. Timme, General Manager's Office, celebrated his summer vacation in December. Ben was too busy putting the bus in order to get far from home.

C. J. Moeves, assistant car distributor, spent Thanksgiving shooting at rabbits in the Hoosier state; no harm done other than defacing a few of the decoys.

It is gratifying to learn that the wife of E. F. Medosch, General Manager's Office, is rapidly regaining her health.

Another of our photographs is the last chance of MAGAZINE readers to see Ruth L. Beitzer—thereafter it will be Mrs. Thomas E. Donnelly. We extend our good wishes.

It was not anticipated that our effort in behalf of F. M. Hughes, Maintenance of Way Department, would be productive of results so quickly. We learn that with a lady cousin from Indianapolis (or any other city in the state or any city in any other state) he has been visiting Cox Theater. This is a good start, Francis, and you may get your winter quarters yet!

Ed. Lowther, office boy, Maintenance of Way Department, recently dislocated his shoulder by falling into bed. There are any number of things that could be said about such an instance so we better keep quiet.

Alice H. Conroy suffered a painful ankle sprain recently which was caused, some of her friends say, by her excessive weight. We don't believe it!

With the present lull in business, it is gratifying to report that Station Service Inspector Angel, during the week ending December 8, increased the revenue by $208.00 at Chicago station, representing gains from check-weighing; 85% of the amount represented gains on inbound and the balance outbound.

We Practice What We Preach

Our photograph shows home of the General Office correspondent in Oakley, having been purchased through the Relief Department.

The Cincinnati Terminals Chapter of Veterans' held its annual election at the Grand Hotel on December 12, with the following result:—President, J. M. Hughes; Vice-President, J. J. O'Donnell; Secretary, W. C. Owen; Financial Secretary, H. S. Howden; Treasurer, E. G. Sweptston; Sergeant-at-Arms, H. W. Oldenburg; Directors, C. E. Fish, L. A. Cordie, S. O. Mygatt, Thomas G. Gibbons, R. H. Searls. Delegate to Convention, C. E. Fish. Alternate Delegate to Convention, G. W. Lishawa. After the election the Veterans, their families and friends were entertained with music, singing, dancing and light refreshments, for which the Committee in charge is to be complimented.

If there is any employee in the General Office who is not receiving a copy of the MAGAZINE monthly, and will advise the Correspondent will see that it is provided.

Our sympathy is extended to Car Distributor G. M. Wilhelm, whose grandmother departed this life during the past month. Our readers will recall the picture of the three generations of the family published a few months ago.

Chief Statistician O. H. Von Blon is hard at it getting his yearly tabs on high spots, etc., brought up to date. Von takes particular interest in getting the statements submitted before it is necessary to "punch" for them.

Now that R. C. Kistner has expressed an interest in the Savings Feature, Relief Department, we can expect to hear more rumors as to his intentions.

To help defray, in part, the expense of issuing the MAGAZINE, we are soliciting advertisements. If any of the General Office boys can help out with their friends, please get in touch with the correspondent.

Giles F. Kreidler is to be commended for giving some help to the correspondent. Please keep it up, Giles.

If E. C. Yocum is not called upon to play Santa Claus, he should be, for he's a jolly good fellow and is a ringer for Santa Claus except for the white hair and beard.

A. A. Duesing and George Lange, after a strenuous season of football, are rapidly assuming normal proportions and will soon again be recognizable.

January is National Thrift Month. Coming so closely after Christmas, it makes the thrift idea a pleasure, especially to married men, and most especially for the "near married."

The life of a car tracer is a thing of joy and beauty forever, except when it isn't. A car tracer furnishes the data for this tale. Tracing the movement of a certain car, he had been after a number of different stations. One of these stations, sent in a wire one day asking if O. K. Reply was sent, using code, of course, "We are OK—close file." Imagine astonishment of car tracer when reply was received by wire "OK—closing file today."

National Thrift month gives us the opportunity to take a fresh start and put new life into our campaign to "Stop the Leak," "Save Fuel," "Prevent Freight Claims," etc.

James McMahon, crossing watchman, Niles, Ohio, is dead. His many years of service had made him a familiar figure in this territory. Everyone knew the old gentleman who so carefully protected travel over his crossing. The daily newspaper at Niles commented upon the fact that in his years of service, no one had been injured on this crossing. Surely no man could have earned a greater tribute than this public acknowledgement of services rendered the people who used this crossing.

National Thrift month is not intended to boost bank deposits only, but to urge elimination of waste, wherever found. We can find plenty of opportunity to enter into this campaign.

C. H. DeArment, agent, Wooster, Ohio, one of the youngest in point of years, as an agent, altho' an old timer when it comes to railroad service, is vigorously assisting in the development of business at Wooster and along the Millersburg Branch. Recent developments indicate to what extent a live agent can assist in increasing business.

The Freight Claim Prevention Committee has re-organized and two meetings have been held. None of the original enthusiasm is lacking and a strenuous campaign is under way to improve the showing of the Akron Division and to reduce this source of loss to a minimum.

The following letter from Mrs. W. J. Carter, Cleveland, Ohio, shows to what extent the spirit of helpfulness is prevalent among Baltimore and Ohio employees and indicates the appreciation felt by our patrons, although they do not all find it convenient to express it in this manner:

"On November 1, a friend and I were on our way to Youngstown and we changed trains at Akron Junction. While there we received the most courteous and considerate attention from the day yard clerk.

"In our rush to catch the train we forgot to thank this young man properly and I would consider it a very great favor on your part if you would express our appreciation to him."

The name of the employee mentioned has not yet been definitely determined.

Cleveland Terminal

Correspondent, H. B. SMITH

The Local Welfare Organization starts the New Year under the guidance of "Our Joe," and under his leadership we know that there will be many good times ahead. His initial party at the Labor Temple proved his ability—even if he didn't win the prize waltz. For the information of those who have not taken any interest in past social or athletic events, each and every employe of the railroad in the terminal is a member of the Welfare Organization. It will be of interest to all if you will give Joe Cline the benefit of any suggestions that you may have for the good of the order. Your hearty support and cooperation is desired.

Norma Mitchell, former claim clerk, was married to Hugh Farmer at Leetonia, Ohio, on Thanksgiving Eve. To the farm for her!

It will be a long story and there will be reproduced photographs of a railroad freight bill, a car load of soap, several trucks used to cart the contents of freight car, as well as the cancelled check given in payment for the freight charges, all in connection with a shipment from Proctor and Gamble, Cincinnati, which is now in transit, particulars of which will appear in the next issue. Miss Dietrick is somewhat worried about the freight charges but cheerfully accepts Christmas presents.

Mrs. J. Grayell, 3484 West 126th Street, Cleveland, who, for 35 years was a trustworthy matron at the Cleveland passenger station, is now an invalid at her home and a few words of encouragement from her many railroad friends often, would brighten her life considerably.

Paul Saylor appears to be getting along better. At least, Sarah finds a lot of work to do on the fourth floor.

Additional parking space has been arranged for the Dodge Van. Owners of Maxwells, Essex and Fords may return to the auto lot.

In a recent issue there appeared an article that two young lady employes were reported missing at Chester Park, also two children, on the same bulletin board. However, this was partly in error, Miss Dietrick advises both were sixteen years old and eventually located by their parents. There have not been any recent visits to Cincinnati.

Report of check weighing at Columbus St. Freight House for November is somewhat behind previous months, statement showing a gain of $225.73, contributed by 15 employes with Dillon first, Reese second, Lipa third, Berkircher fourth and Lakofsky fifth in amounts gained. All others on the bottom of the list and only there for honorary mention. Cold weather may have contributed to this small amount but watch the boys next month.

"Bill" Carpel was the successful winner of the ham raffle.

The girls at the Freight Office had their annual Christmas Party, no men invited—but several were seen hanging around the outside of the building and peeping in once in a while.

The Terminal Bowling League started with a bang in December and to see them roll is a burlesque that all would appreciate. "Father Time" R. B. McGinley is captain of the Freight Office team which is having frequent practice games with the Traffic Department Team, under the leadership of B. R. Strome—but wait until next year at the tournament.

Third Trick East Bound Checker W. A. Stevenson and Miss Marian C. Brandon were united in marriage on Thanksgiving day at 9.30 a. m. and immediately after the ceremony left on No. 16 for Washington, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. Best wishes to both!

C. J. Griniwesky, former chief clerk to Division Storekeeper Lockhart, was recently appointed storekeeper at South Chicago. S. J. Lindorfer, from Gassaway, succeeds Mr. Griniwesky.

C. D. Bane, former telegraph operator at "AO" Tower, was recently appointed first trick ticket agent, vice W. E. Winebrenner, who has received the appointment of traveling passenger agent, Southwest District. Hearty Congratulations, "Winey!" "Winey" was a hustler and will be missed at New Castle. Carl is also a "go-getter."

A "Get-Together-Get-Acquainted" meeting was held following a dinner served in the dining room of the Fountain Inn Hotel at 6.30 p. m., November 22, with 47 employes of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from New Castle and Youngstown present, and Terminal Train Master W. H. Yeager acting as Toastmaster. Mr. Yeager gave an interesting address regarding the solicitation of business by each and every employe of the Baltimore and Ohio, and on various other topics.

Division Freight Agent C. F. Farmer, Youngstown, informed the members present that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was the third largest revenue railroad in the world, being exceeded by only two other lines. He also spoke of the competition at New Castle. We have no industries on our line this making us wholly dependent upon connecting lines for our living.

Train Master J. P. Dorsey, New Castle, City Freight Agent Knox, New Castle, and various other employes gave short, interesting talks. Meeting adjourned at 9.30 all reporting a fine time.

On November 3, Fireman J. J. Wallace, Willard, Ohio, while on his way to New Castle on extra engine 4233, west, with Engineer F. J. Shreffler, was in the act of putting coal in fire box, when the ring on his $60.00 ILLINOIS BUNN SPECIAL watch gave way, permitting watch to fall into fire box. Fireman Wallace made no attempt to recover it, but Engineer Shreffler, seeing what had happened, instructed Fireman Wallace to get it out. This he did, possibly three minutes after, and placed it on coal pile for ten minutes to cool off. After the watch had cooled off considerably, Fireman Wallace examined it and found that the crystal had not even been cracked. Just 21 hours later he compared his watch with that of Passenger Brakeman H. H. Schroeder, and found it to be keeping perfect time, even though somewhat disfigured by smoke and heat. Fireman Wallace is shaking hands with himself!

Can you start a fire with a baseball match?

A peanut stood on the west bound main
It's heart was all a flutter,
The Capitol Limited came rumbling past;
Toot! Toot! 'Twas peanut butter.

H. B. Sherry, traveling car agent, is on the sick list. Here's hoping for your recovery, Sherry, as Mangold and Hart do not seem to be able to "dig" up enough grief without your assistance.

Since Yardmaster J. B. Clark has traded his Jewett roadster in on a brand new Jewett Brougham, and Yardmaster A. W. Colnot his Dodge roadster for a Hudson Coach, they have taken on a little avoirdupois. They are beginning to get accustomed to the use of the "ankle express."

Much credit is due to Terminal Train Master Yeager for the successful handling of the two special trains originating at New Castle, December 8, which carried the New Castle High School football team, band, and fans to Pittsburgh, where Ne-Ca-Hi played Turtle Creek Union for the Syracuse trophy. The score was 14-14. The first train on this date left New Castle at 11.15 a. m., carrying eleven steel coaches, and 1000 passengers, and arrived at Forbes Field, where the game was held at 12.40 p. m. The second train left New Castle at 11.30 a. m., with ten coaches and 500 passengers, making a stop at Ellwood City for 60 passengers, arriving at the field at 1 p. m. or one hour before the game was called. On the return trip, the first section left Pittsburgh at 7 p. m., arrived at New Castle at 8.40 p. m. The second section left at 11.40 p. m., arriving at New Castle at 1.20 a. m.

East Bound Checker Clyde Nicholson recently returned from a hunting trip spent in Canada. Instead of bringing something back on his hip he brought it back on his lip. Evidently intends it for something, but as yet we have been unable to determine just what.

We hope that all employes of the Baltimore and Ohio will have a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Mrs. G. H. Hoffman, wife of Engineer G. H. Hoffman, spent several days visiting in Washington, D. C., and while there attended several sessions of Congress.

Miss Margaret Sullivan, general clerk, Master Mechanic's Office, enjoyed a vacation visiting friends and relatives in Akron, Ohio.

A disastrous fire was narrowly averted at the Baltimore and Ohio Restaurant on December 8, when the kitchen caught fire from a defective flue. Fire Marshall Ed. Scanlon and his brigade responded promptly and had a stream of water playing on the building just one minute after the alarm was sounded. It was only through the diligent work of the Fire Brigade that the building was saved from entire destruction. Mr. Scanlon is to be commended in having the Fire Brigade on the job promptly and performing their duties so efficiently.

With banners flying and amid the cheers of thousands, the New Castle High School Football Team and two thousand loyal rooters departed on two special trains over the Baltimore and Ohio for Pittsburgh on December 8, where they battled the Turtle Creek High School to a 14-14 tie score at Forbes Field. The service rendered by the Baltimore and Ohio was all that could be desired, and the highest commendation and praise was expressed by the High School officers for the efficient manner in which the large crowd was handled. This is only another instance of the neighborly spirit that exists in New Castle, and the Baltimore and Ohio is fast becoming the most popular of the many lines entering this city.

This business was secured after keen competition, and the local officers are to be congratulated on their successful efforts.

A local meeting composed of employees who transact business with the public, was held in the Youngstown Freight Office, November 14. Subjects discussed were Solicitation, Efficiency, Operations, etc. These subjects were carefully gone over and many good points brought out interesting to everyone. Other meetings will be held in the future.

A dinner-meeting, composed of employees in the Youngstown Warren District, who transact business with the public, was held in the Youngstown Y. M. C. A., Tuesday, November 20. There were 71 in attendance. C. F. Farmer, division freight agent, Youngstown, Ohio, acted as chairman. Speeches were made by James Aiken, agent, Youngstown; J. C. Kline, terminal train master, Haselton; A. D. Griffith, Warren, Ohio; S. H. Rhoades, agent, Warren, Ohio; A. S. Wilson, agent, Niles, Ohio; W. D. Reed, Warren, Ohio; J. A. Davies, car foreman, Haselton, Ohio; D. W. O'Neil, Haselton, Ohio; and many of the employees. Solicitation, better operation, etc., were thoroughly discussed by all present, and resulted in many interesting points being brought out. Every one derived much benefit from the meeting. Other meetings will be held in the future.

Mrs. Frances Scaglione-Coalo, a recent bride, entertained the girls of the Local Freight House at dinner, at her home in New Castle, Pa., November 22.

W. P. Cramer, pensioned car repairman, left December 5 for a visit with his brother, C. S. Cramer, in Spanish Fork, Utah. Mr. Cramer will visit friends in Moberly, Mo., Denver, Colo., and Los Angeles, Calif., before returning home.

C. F. Farmer, division freight agent,

W. P. Cramer, Youngstown, O.

Youngstown, Ohio, received the following letter from G. L. Oles, Fulton Fruit Market, Youngstown, Ohio: "I was in Chicago Monday of this week and bought some produce, shipping it Baltimore and Ohio freight. Upon my return this morning, I was dumbfounded to find that this freight came in yesterday noon. Practically as fast as express. What I want to know is, do I get this service any time that I ship out of Chicago?" Reply was made that we have a regular daily less earload merchandise car from Chicago to Youngstown, which schedule is second morning delivery at Youngstown. We also operate a less earload refrigerator car from Chicago to Youngstown, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week, making second morning delivery and the service rendered was our regular schedule. Mr. Oles planned to leave January 1 for Florida, and without doubt used the Baltimore and Ohio.

W. D. Reed was a welcome visitor in Youngstown recently. He announced that the stork had visited the home of Yardmaster and Mrs. J. L. Thoman, Deforest Jet., on November 26. It is understood a new Essex Sedan has been bought for J. L. Thoman, Jr.

Dover, Ohio

To Baltimore and Ohio Employees:

We wish to thank you all for the beautiful floral offerings and kind expressions of sympathy sent to us during the death of our beloved wife and mother.

(Signed)

E. J. BAKER AND FAMILY

Mr. Baker is one of our oldest engineers and a son, C. L. Baker, is ticket clerk at Dover.

S. A. Norris, who has exceptional musical ability, found it necessary to lay off for a week. Seth is the band master at Wolf Creek, Ohio, and as Wolf Creek will soon be celebrating a Home Coming, he has nominated L. C. Murphy and W. W. Cunningham, Dover employees, to act as end men in the minstrel show.

Oscar Miller makes regular trips to Coshocton. We think the Wedding Bells will soon be ringing. We have told Oscar the kind of cigars we smoke.

B. F. Wilcox, yard master; E. J. McIntire and J. L. Wilcox, conductors, and Bruce Wilcox, yard clerk, spent a week hunting rabbits. No one knows how many rabbits they got, but the fur sure did fly to hear them tell about it.

The Baltimore and Ohio Family continues to grow. Dover is at least holding her own with other railroad towns. Conductor and Mrs. V. T. Grimm are the proud parents of a baby boy, born on November 5. Conductor and Mrs. L. C. Kail announce the arrival of a baby boy on November 8. Conductor and Mrs. W. H. Metcalf were visited by the stork on December 7, and he left a darling baby daughter. Brakeman and Mrs. R. W. Sherrard are the proud parents of a baby boy, born on October 9. Congratulations, boys, and the best of health to the youngsters and wives.

Little did a certain nurse in The Twin City Hospital know that in nursing Car Inspector E. V. Hoagland, of Uhrichsville, back to health, she was to "put up with him" the rest of her life. They were married on November 28. Congratulations, "Hoagie," and we wish you a long and happy married life.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO FREIGHT STATION AT YOUNGSTOWN

Carl Groninger, traveling freight agent, was in Dover a few days before Thanksgiving and wanted to buy a few turkeys to send back to his home. The yard master informed him that Conductor P. C. Stevenson had a turkey farm, and then Mr. Groninger got in touch with Mr. Stevenson. Mr. Stevenson would not promise any delivery for Thanksgiving, but could deliver any number for Christmas. Mr. Groninger ordered a carload to be shipped via the Baltimore and Ohio. Any employees interested in turkeys can get in touch with Mr. Stevenson at Dover.

January as National Thrift month interests us all. We can help ourselves by helping others.

Fireman B. H. Garlick, injured some time ago, must undergo another operation

This will further delay his getting to work, but the boys are still waiting to say "hello."

National Thrift Month serves as a reminder, but there is no closed season for Thrift.

Yard Brakeman Curley, injured some time ago in a street car accident while enroute to work, is now reported up and around. We are anxious to see Curley back on the job.

If we enjoy hunting, we will have a splendid chance in January to hunt up some original ways of promoting thrift, and also to practice and preach this idea.

Second Trick Chief Clerk Bobbie is not satisfied with the showing made in cutting out waste, etc., and has bought a new pair of shell rim glasses. He looks better now.

Car Foreman Bauman has informed his friends of his marriage to Pearl Lublow of Sandusky. Honeymoon spent in Washington and now residing at Youngstown.

We express our appreciation of the many kindnesses of Arthur Richards, round house electrician, in obtaining pictures for the MAGAZINE.

One of our photographs is of the Haselton Relief Crew. Reading left to right: Fireman Insheep, Switchman Lee Richards, better known as Pocattello and Engineer Mauerman. The smoke in the picture is furnished gratis by the engine of another road although this explanation is hardly necessary as no Baltimore and Ohio engine crew could, or would be guilty of such a performance.

Correspondent, A. R. STROME

From July 1 until November 1 we were the only tenants in the new Union Trust Building, but as it is gradually nearing completion other tenants are moving in, and we are glad that we are going to have company this winter.

We are glad to know that our old friend E. L. Kimes, formerly in Terminal Agent's Office and more recently, assistant manager of the Isthmian Steamship Company in Cleveland, is going up the ladder of success.

Mr. Kimes has just been appointed manager of the Isthmian Lines' new office in Cincinnati.

Regret to lose Lynn from our family circle, but wish him continued success in his new line.

Miss Helen Kodet has been appointed passenger representative at Cleveland to succeed Miss Frances Matheson, who recently left us to enter the matrimonial game.

Albert Pryatel has been appointed secretary to Division Passenger Agent Strickenburg, to succeed J. M. Mench, promoted to assistant ticket agent. We welcome him into the Baltimore and Ohio family.

We have organized a six team bowling league in Cleveland—more of which you will hear later.

We understand C. W. Shinnamon is an artist at "Duck Pins" and hope some day to be able to say the same about him in the "Ten Pin" class.

Promotions seem to be the order of things in the Akron Division Traffic Department at the present time—C. H. Groninger, chief clerk to division freight agent, Akron, promoted to traveling freight agent; E. L. Miller, chief clerk to district freight agent, Akron, succeeds Mr. Groninger; Elmo McCall, rate clerk, Division Freight Office, succeeds Mr. Miller. A. R. Strome, assistant chief clerk in Assistant General Freight Office, Cleveland, promoted to freight representative; F. O. Dunkle, rate clerk, promoted to assistant chief clerk; F. N. Seitz, trace clerk, promoted to rate clerk.

Luther King, assistant trace clerk, left us December 1 to accept a position in the Traffic Department of the American Petroleum Products Company.

Who?—Editor.

What? Said "Cut notes in 1/2."

When? January issue.

Where? MAGAZINE.

Why? Submerged with material.

Happy New Year!

Fireman and Mrs. W. D. Moore announce the arrival of a baby daughter on December 6. Good luck to mother and baby!

Train Rider Harry Malone, while making observations at the Freight House recently, missed his footing and fell between the platform and the cars. Harry would not have been in such a bad predicament had he not had his hands in his pocket at the time. Trucker "Stubby" Workinger came to the rescue, and saved Harry from going head first to the ground. Safety First, Harry!

Oliver Seifert, warehouse foreman at Massillon, has resigned to enter the employ of The Ohio Public Service Co. We regret to see him leave, but wish him success.

Glen Myers has been appointed warehouse foreman at Massillon, vice Mr. Seifert. Congratulations upon your appointment!

The steel business at Massillon has been on the increase. Heavy shipments from The Central Steel Co. are being received daily and are being routed via Baltimore and Ohio. Because of the good performance of our Steel Special, we are handling all of the steel for The Ford Motor Co., at Detroit.

The Massillon-Greenville Gravel Co., located on our line about 2 1/2 miles west of Massillon, has closed down for the winter and are enlarging their plant in order to double their output when they open up next spring. This means additional revenue for us.

John Baker, tallyman at the Freight House, lost his glasses recently, and has offered a valuable reward for their return.

Leland Harris has returned to our employ as O. S. & D. clerk. Glad to see you back, Leland.

We have been informed that Freight Agent L. T. Kegler respects old age. Recently the General Superintendent's Special made a trip over the line, and as usual, a large amount of wire business was left at many of the telegraph offices. Operator and Ticket Clerk George H. McCoy, who has been in the service a score of years, found it difficult to dispose of the work left by the Special. Mr. Kegler, who has a big heart, sent help at once. We will all get old some day, George.

The Careful Crossing Campaign has not had much effect on some of the Motoring Public. At least it doesn't appear that way on the Lincoln Highway crossing our line at Massillon. The motorists keep our bridge inspector, J. T. Sidaway, busy making gates. As soon as he gets a gate put up, they test its strength by racing over the crossing in front of our trains with the gates down, and "Zowie" goes the gate. Nevertheless, Sid is getting to be an expert and very efficient in making gates. Some day people may learn to drive automobiles, Sid.

The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce paid a visit to the City of Ft. Wayne, Indiana, on November 14, for the purpose of exploiting the Port of Baltimore with a view to influencing foreign trade through that port. The day was spent visiting all the large industries, and in the evening a banquet was served by the Ft. Wayne Chamber of Commerce in their club rooms. Division Freight Agent D. E. Sullivan and Traveling Freight Agents W. R. McKee and F. F. Karns attended the banquet.

An interesting event occurred in Garrett on November 23. The Garrett Savings Loan and Trust Company entertained the Colt Club, with members in Dekalb, Allen and Noble Counties. The committee was in charge of Engineer Emmett Manion, Agent W. A. Clefford, Chief Dispatcher A. R. Moore and their wives.

Superintendent Hooper gave a talk on the connection between the railroad and the farmer, and said that the railroads are attempting to bridge the gulf between themselves, the farmer and the general public, as they believe an interchange of ideas would serve to bring them closer to each other for the best interests of all. Short talks were made by Mr. Shankin, Purdue University, Superintendent Carroll of the Public Schools, and Wade Libbey, vocational agricultural teacher.

At the close of the meeting two trips to the International Live Stock Show at Chicago were awarded; one to Virgil Hatch of the Junior Club, and the other to Delphis Martin.

President Monte L. Green of the Trust Company, who acted as chairman, composed the following song to the tune of "Mammy," which made quite a hit:

B. and O.—B. and O.
 Number eight runs east, number seven runs west

But the "CAPITOL LIMITED" runs the best,

B. and O.—B. and O.!

Safety First is the motto of this great Railroad.

She's a coming, never known to be late,
 She's a going, and she'll make it sure as fate

B. and O.—B. and O.!

If she runs on smiles

She'll run a million miles

Our B. and O.!

The Colt Club is a unique organization. For several years it was the only club of its kind in the United States, and at present is the only one east of the Mississippi River. Chief Dispatcher Moore, chairman, Rural Development Committee of the Trust Company is proud of the success of the meeting.

Safety—A to Z

By CHARLES HOPPER, Safety Committeeman

Artificial eyes are no good—Wear goggles.
Be sure you are right—then go ahead.
Call no man a liar.

Do not be afraid to talk to a careless man.

Everybody makes mistakes, watch out.

Fools do foolish things and take chances.

Go slow across railroad tracks.

Help others who cannot help themselves.

Insurance is good protection, but protect yourself.

Join the order of Safety First.

Keep away from dangerous places that do not concern you.

Look at all danger signs.

Make yourself a Committee of One on safety.

Never move belts when machinery is in motion.

Obey all orders from Safety Committeemen.

Place no obstruction on the right-of-way.

Question no danger signals.

Read book of safety rules and be governed accordingly.

Study first aid to the injured.

Take no chances as they may be fatal.

Unbelievers cannot be taught safety.

Vicious men are faulty and need watching.

Watch your step for holes and boards with nails exposed.

Examine all tools and wrenches before using.

You must live up to the 18th Amendment.

Z (Zenith) If we live up to this Alphabet we have reached our Zenith of Safety.

The November MAGAZINE contained a photograph of Agent F. W. Paden and his family, North Baltimore, Ohio. Mr. Paden was born in Bellevue, Ohio and his first railroad experience was on the Big Four Railroad at Tiffin, Ohio. He entered the Baltimore and Ohio service as agent, Bairdstown, Ohio, on April 26, 1905. The local newspaper is running a series of articles entitled "Great North Baltimore Men," and under this heading, in a recent issue says:

"EDITOR'S NOTE—Another sketch of another famous North Baltimore man. This man needs no introduction. If you ever leave N. B. and take a train ride you're bound to meet him.

"There are two men we know of in this world who are real workers, men to stick to their task with intensity and who never watch the hands on the clock to see when quitting time comes. One of them is the well-known Thomas A. Edison, electrical wizard; the other, Frank Paden, agent, Baltimore and Ohio, North Baltimore.

"As far as we know, Frank wasn't born in N. B. But that doesn't stop him from being a worker. From early morn until late night, F. P. is a busy man. He does a little bit of everything at the station, and knows quite a bit more what he's doing than anyone else. That's why he's the agent and why he's held the position so ably for years.

"Frank was recently elected president of the Commercial Club and he's started in to do some real boosting for the town. He's also a Mason, member of a church, and he was a big factor in the success of the recent father-son banquet, which shows that he takes an interest in the youth of North Baltimore as well as its older inhabitants.

"We take our hats off to Frank."

The accompanying picture is of George Miller, blacksmith, South Chicago. Mr. Miller was born on March 31, 1857, entered the service on April 15, 1872, at Cumberland, Md., and came to South Chicago on May 5, 1882. He has been in continuous service at South Chicago since that time—forty-one years. When are we going to celebrate, Mr. Miller?

The Stores Department, South Chicago has made a change in personnel. Mr. McCrary being promoted to division storekeeper, Lincoln St., Chicago, vice V. N. Dawson, who is now district storekeeper, Cincinnati, Ohio. We are sincerely sorry to lose Mr. McCrary, but extend our congratulations and good wishes for his continued success.

O. J. Grinewetsky, former chief clerk, New Castle, has accepted position of storekeeper, South Chicago. Welcome to our city.

J. B. Hayes, former telegraph operator, Wolf Lake, has taken up his duties as ticket agent, South Chicago. Our local paper gave Mr. Hayes quite a send-off and it is regretted that I could not secure a copy. Congratulations!

Aunt Mary's visit was a pleasant surprise, only sorry we could not hold her here for a while. We like surprises, Aunt Mary.

South Chicago is the place to locate if you want to get married. Four weddings reported in the December MAGAZINE and now "Jimmie" Crinion has taken the final step—slipping away, quietly, on October 22. "Jimmie" is employed in the office of Terminal Train Master Huggins, South Chicago. Congratulations!

Our sympathy is extended to First Trick Operator Earl Hill, in the loss of his dear mother at Finley, Ohio. Also E. McDermott, car inspector, whose father passed away recently.

Earl Hall, clerk, first shift, Newark Round House, is at home after undergoing an operation on his crippled leg. Earl has been having considerable trouble necessitating loss of time. To overcome this, and the additional expense due to the operation, the shopmen made up a nice purse and presented it to Earl with their best wishes for a speedy recovery and return to duty. Brotherly love, that's sure.

James R. Cody, I. C. C. clerk, will go to Baltimore to have an operation performed on his leg, which has been giving him much trouble of late. We hope that "Jim" will return soon feeling much better and be able to use his artificial limbs again. The trouble has been due to an affection which prevented using the usual artificial limb.

A. W. Dowie, clerk to general foreman, has returned to duty after being on the sick list for two weeks.

Ursal K. Swain, A. R. A. clerk, General Car Foreman's Office has been appointed to fill the position of stenographer, Division Accountant's Office, in place of Donald Jorden, who is now with Division Passenger Agent White, Columbus, Ohio.

J. C. Williams, third shift clerk, Round House, is on the sick list.

Master Mechanic F. E. Cooper enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner in his new home.

Our photographs this month include Caller Charles D. Rogers, who entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on September 28, 1920. Every engineer, fireman or trainman will recognize this familiar face as Charlie sees to it that each one of them receives his semi-monthly pay check.

We have also a photograph of Drayman Edward Williams, Stores Department, Newark, Ohio, with his trusty steed, "Faithful Fred", as "ED" calls him. If you had the opportunity to watch this horse when its driver is away from it, and the dray is on or near tracks preparatory to loading or unloading, you would believe that he had been instructed in the art of SAFETY FIRST. If an engine or cut of cars moves near him, you will find that he will move the dray clear of all tracks without instructions from his driver. When things are safe he will back up to the proper point for loading. The dray and horse are used to convey material from the shops to the depots where the material is loaded for shipment. Some day in the near future "Faithful Fred" is going to lose his job; he will be replaced by a motor truck.

The November, 1923 copy of SAFETY FLASHES carried an article "His Efforts To Help Others Has Saved Many Lives," written by Supervisor of Shop Schedules, Charles G. Miller.

Mr. Miller is a firm believer in SAFETY FIRST and, as stated in his article, was the original safety man at Newark shops. It is through his untiring efforts that our shops have been able to perfect a reliable organization, the Safety Committee. Mr. Miller is in touch at all times with the shop committeemen and the division committee. Division officers highly appreciate the good results obtained through the assistance of Mr. Miller.

At the regular meeting of the Newark Division Veterans on December 6, former Division Superintendent J. F. Irwin, now special agent, was presented with a Fifty Year Gold Button by President George Sturmer, Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association, who was present to take part in the various pleasures of the evening. Mr. Irwin was visibly affected when presented the button and responded with difficulty.

At this meeting Veteran Joseph M. Workman was honored on account of his fifty-three years service. He was seventy-five years old on the date of the meeting.

The meeting was out of the ordinary and the time was fully taken up in various ways, a fine chicken supper being served by the Ladies' Auxiliary, who always seem to know just what it takes to please the Veterans.

table to the loyalty and team-work of the employees. I also feel assured that every employe will greet the new year in the same spirit and with renewed effort to make every year a better one, both for themselves and the Railroad.

I wish you all a Happy New Year.

My friend and able assistant Jack Kernochan advises me that the stork visited the home of Matty Mitchell, switch tender, 48th Avenue, on November 13, leaving a fine baby girl. Congratulations!

The accompanying photograph is an engine fired by our engineer, W. H. Whitehead, in 1891, on the Santa Fe Railroad. Mr. Whitehead is standing by the front driving wheel. Engineer Klinein and son are at the pilot. This photograph is particularly interesting when contrasted with the new 6100 engines purchased by the Baltimore and Ohio, a photograph of which appeared in the December MAGAZINE.

Mrs. Anna Klamick, who for sixteen years has been employed as janitress at the Grand Central Station, passed away on November 11. A beautiful floral wreath was contributed by our Terminal Employees' Association. Our sympathy to her family!

Engineer Iver K. Hastings and Fireman G. P. Paul, while operating a steam derrick at 55th Boulevard on the new construction elevation work, were so seriously injured that they passed away shortly after. Mr. Hastings was a nephew of Peter Hastings, general foreman of construction, and had been in our employ since December, 1910. Mr. Paul had been in the service only one week. A floral wreath was sent by the Employees' Association.

Our sincere sympathy is extended to the families of Messrs. Hastings and Paul.

A gentleman from New Wilmington, Pa., recently left a package in the Chicago terminal, and upon discovering his loss wired our trainmaster, saying that the contents were of little intrinsic value, but were prized because they were keepsakes of his deceased mother. He wrote under date of November 8, as follows:

"Words cannot express my very great appreciation of your kindness in locating the parcel about which I wrote you, and in returning it to me. The Baltimore and Ohio is deserving of both patronage and praise for the courteous treatment it gives its patrons."

Appreciation is a fine thing. Keep it up, boys! The Chicago Terminal is right there when it comes to courtesy and careful attention to patrons.

Mrs. David Little entertained with a special program on the piano.

The Veterans announce that the several meetings in the near future are to be handled in a manner similar to the December meeting, lots of good entertainment and plenty of "eats," so if you are a Veteran you will miss several treats if you fail to attend the meetings which are held on the first Thursday of each month. A word to the wise should be sufficient!

As January has been designated as National Thrift Month, it is fitting that the MAGAZINE columns should carry a word along this line to its many readers who have in the past year been making great strides toward THRIFT.

How truly thrift contributes to happiness is being demonstrated in many employes' homes just now, when the money accumulated through the Christmas saving plan is being paid out by banks and building associations.

The checks already sent out aggregate thousands of dollars, much of which would have been spent during the year, had it not been for the system of weekly deposits that was adopted. While much of this money will be spent to make Christmas merry, still there will be a large amount reserved to pay debts, taxes and on homes now being purchased.

If money can be systematically saved for one purpose, it can be systematically saved for another and it is of importance that the habit of THRIFT be instilled in the boys and girls growing up that they may not be wasteful.

Money is not a thing to be wasted or to be buried. It is, instead, a thing to be used, but it can be used more wisely and more effectively in hundreds of dollars than in hundreds of cents. One can command the good things of life in the exact proportion of his actual possession of money honestly earned. If you have made an honest effort to be thrifty during the past year, just try to be more so during 1924.

Division Engineer's Office, Newark, Ohio

We wish to rectify a grave error in the December issue of the MAGAZINE in regard to the Division Engineer's Office Bowling Team. Reading the December number makes it appear that the Engineers have a good team. Instead it is decidedly "rotten," though the numerous challengers who have tried to beat them are a little "rotenner." So one and all who have any bowling aspirations, if you want a game where pickings are easy, arrange a game with Division Engineer's Office bowling team, Newark, Ohio and win by a few hundred pins. Oh yes, we forgot, we mean "maybe."

H. Harding, signal supervisor, has been looking lonely recently. Upon investigating as to why he is not wearing his usual smile, we find that his wife has gone to the country for a visit. Cheer up Harry, time soon rolls around.

All the engineers in the M. of W. Department are working hard these days trying to get their work in shape so as to be able to eat Christmas dinner with the home folks in various parts of the country, but several of them at least will be thinking of the "Girl I left behind me."

Engineer J. E. Shaw was recently returning from Wheeling on No. 45 and overheard a conversation between two business men, who, by their conversation, were in the steel business. One said to the other that before the World War the Baltimore and Ohio was on the decline, but since then it had come to the front and is one of the leading roads of the country. The other gentleman asked if the Baltimore and Ohio was producing the goods, to which his friend replied that they were, as their equipment was up to date and trains moving on time.

Conversations of this nature are common, and the cooperation of Management and employees has made the Baltimore and Ohio service what it is with SERVICE THAT SATISFIES. This should be the slogan of each and every employe, because without service, no road may expect to progress.

Tom Snyder, C. T. Department, submits:

Brooks—without water.
Winters—without snow.
Fall—without hurting yourself.
Payne—without hurting.
Reel—without falling.
Savey—without knowing.
Cole—without lumps.
Wells—without digging.
Seymour—without glasses.
Hunt—without finding something.
Roll—without getting dirty.
Mayer—without harness.
Ball—without a bat.
Kruise—without a ship.

After a 20 day headache on the Ohio Special at the Convention of the American Legion held in San Francisco recently, Tom Snyder is back on the job. Everyone had a most enjoyable trip, for which they owed their thanks to the Convention Special Committee, Ohio Department, American Legion and especially to its chairman, E. W. Gettrost, Columbus, Ohio. The Baltimore and Ohio was the selection made by Mr. Gettrost to submit plans for this trip. This was handled by Bert White, division passenger agent, Columbus, and was approved by the State Executive Board, Ohio Department. The Baltimore and Ohio was preferred because of the active interest it took in the selection of the most beautiful scenic route to the coast and return. It is hoped that the State Department of the American Legion will look kindly toward the Baltimore and Ohio for the St. Paul Convention in 1924.

Newark Post No. 85 has already started a movement to take its 30 piece band to St. Paul, and it hopes to raise enough money before then to take them via Baltimore and Ohio. This will mean that at least 75 or 100 will leave Newark for this Convention.

The bowling season is now open and four teams have been organized in the Accounting Office. A schedule has been arranged, which calls for games every Wednesday night on the Pastime alleys. After practicing diligently for several weeks, the Engineer's Office issued a challenge to the Accountants, with the Engineers coming out on top. We have no excuses to offer, but after a few of our scheduled games have been played, we will again be ready to play the Engineers, and we think that the score will be much different. But this is not altogether what I started to say. If any of the Wheeling bowlers happen to read this item, they would be doing us a favor by getting in touch with Ed Rupp, chief clerk, and arrange for a game to be played either in Wheeling or Newark.

Donald Jordon, stenographer to division accountant, has been promoted to secretary to division passenger agent, Columbus, Ohio. We wish Jordon success.

A parting word in regard to THRIFT—something that is sometimes misunderstood, and seldom practiced. The THRIFT DRIVE during the month of January is somewhat different from "STOP THAT LEAK," as THRIFT, in this particular instance, pertains to the home. It is economy, without stinginess. If THRIFT were practiced during the month of January, we feel sure that everyone would get the habit and economize the other eleven months of the year.

STOP THAT LEAK—We can all help in many ways. Be more efficient, make every move count for something. Notice the things around the office that you could change such as not using good forms for scratch paper; watch the use of rubber bands, pins, pencils, postage stamps, etc., as they all cost money. Be sure that the waybills agree with the shipping orders, the freight bills compare with the waybills, the reports are made correctly and car loads and merchandise cars are carded and to proper destinations.

Freight House men can help. Handle the freight as you would handle something of your own. Stop and think when you are about to load some heavy object in the same car with a lot of light freight. Do not accept freight for shipment unless properly packed and protected to withstand ordinary transportation. See that bill of lading agrees with marks on articles before it is received. Be sure the entire shipment is loaded in the proper car and safely stowed. In delivering shipments to draymen or consignees be particularly careful to see that each article called for on the delivery receipt is delivered, making careful investigation of articles damaged, noting on freight bill and delivery receipt. See that all cars are properly sealed before ordering them out.

Yard men can help by not ordering cars placed for loading until they are properly inspected and are O. K. for loading the commodity for which ordered. Be careful in weighing cars as to showing correct car numbers, correct gross and tare weights, which will prevent cars held up for re-weighing or re-checking numbers and weights.

Let's all work together to help do these things and help STOP the LEAK. There is an old saying "WORKERS DON'T THINK AND THINKERS DON'T WORK." Let's see if we can't change the first part of it. That's our job!

J. M. Reed said he didn't see how he could wait until spring so that he could go fishing. He is already planning a trip for next summer. We are afraid that this is going to be a long winter for him.

R. H. Schantz had some time, on his hunting trip. We would like to have been there when he rolled from the load of fodder he was hauling into the barn.

While riding on No. 58 a short time ago, the writer noticed an old man five or six seats ahead trying to get into his overcoat. Before we could get to him to offer assistance, Conductor Reynolds called out, "Just a moment brother and I will help you." Those who know Mr. Reynolds, and have ridden on his train, know that this was only one of the many things he does for his guests every day. You never see him when he isn't wearing the "Million Dollar Smile." Mr. Reynolds has the real Good Neighbor spirit of the Baltimore and Ohio.

General Yardmaster Kerr has resumed duty after spending an enjoyable vacation during the hunting season. Yard Conductor Phelps acted as general yardmaster during his absence.

It is now the beginning of a New Year and I appeal to every reader of our MAGAZINE through its columns for assistance in making the MAGAZINE more interesting for all during the New Year. Everyone in Columbus and on the Division can assist, without inconvenience, by sending us a note each month and it will not only be appreciated by us but by all the readers. Now's the time to get busy. "Let's go." Wish all a successful New Year.

One cool November morning as No. 32 stood steaming in the Union Station, it was discovered that a Sea Lion belonging to a show company enroute had escaped from a crate in the baggage car and had got out on the platform, causing considerable excitement among the employees "Who will capture my Sea Lion?" asked the show manager. Every one was silent for a few minutes, and no one seemed inclined to volunteer to assist in capturing the animal. All of a sudden a man burst in among the silent crowd, bravely and loudly exclaiming "I'll capture that Sea Lion!"

With an anxious though determined heart, this man, no other than our Yard Brakeman Thomas Smith, proceeded to capture Mr. Sea Lion, and after several exciting minutes he succeeded in restoring the animal to its crate in the baggage car.

Brakeman Smith has been commended for his bravery but at this time it is not known what medal will be awarded him. However, a "Pig Iron Undershirt" has been awarded by our "Sand House Committee."

"Girls can keep secrets." On November 1, Miss Cashner, comptometer operator, handed in her resignation to take effect November 15, which was not a surprise, as she had worn a diamond for a year. The "Get-to-gether" Club immediately planned a miscellaneous shower, inviting the Sewing Club, the Get-to-gether and a few friends.

As a complete surprise on November 14, returning from lunch, she found her desk decorated with everything for the kitchen, from the dish pan to the cleansing powder and the scrub brushes. Everyone was getting anxious to know just when this wedding was to take place.

A dinner given the same evening in compliment to a supposed bride elect proved to be an announcement of her marriage, which took place a year ago. Mrs. R. T. Jones (Katheryn Funke), 816 Renhart Avenue, was hostess at the dinner arranged for Miss Cashner. During the evening one of the guests received a telegram which told of the marriage of Miss Cashner and R. H. Ayers on November 18, 1922, at Pontiac, Michigan. Mrs. Ayers has been with the Baltimore and Ohio for the past four years.

On November 17, Mr. and Mrs. Ayers received the Baltimore and Ohio employees of this station, at the home of Mrs. Ayer's parents, 35 E. Lane Avenue. They were presented with, should I say wedding presents or anniversary presents?

Mr. and Mrs. Ayers left to make their home in Cincinnati, Ohio, where Mr. Ayers is connected with a construction company as civil engineer.

A valuable clerk and friend has left our midst, but much success and happiness is our wish for both.

Don't ever say "girls can't keep secrets."

Your Correspondent? Oh, yes, I knew all about it, as I was invited to go with them but illness prevented, so I was in on the secret, too!

We are going to look our best tomorrow for someone whispered around that President Willard was coming this way and we hope he has time to visit us.

Our Agent

One who is always on the job. One of us as well as our superior.

One of our boys and his family received a surprise from our thoughtful clerks in keeping with Thanksgiving. During the canning season they had a great deal of sickness which ended in his wife going to the hospital. Knowing this and showing our love and appreciation for others, many cans of fruit were sent to them. They both thank everyone, not for the gift but the spirit in which it was given.

Boy, page Messieur Coue! The other day one of our employees hobbled into the doctor's office, painfully on crutches. He was obviously in great pain and we wondered at the heartlessness of the doctor who would demand that he come to the office instead of remaining in bed to be visited at least twice a day. But the doctor knew his prowess better than we, for the crippled young man emerged from the office a short time later without crutches. His face was wreathed in smiles and there was almost no perceptible limp in his walk.

"Every day in every way our doctor is growing better and better." K. M. C.

Our elevator at this point is about to pass out of existence, bids for its dismantling having been received. The elevator was built in 1883 after the old one was destroyed by fire. Until three years ago the elevator gave a large amount of grain business to us. The dismantling of the structure is required because the land on which it is built is under lease to the Kelly Island Lime and Transport Co. After the dismantling is completed and improvements are made by the Kelly Island Lime and Transport Co., it is expected that large business will come to our line. Lime producers and lake sand shippers, they ship several hundred cars of freight over our road each year.

The shop bowling team has had an even break in the games played by them this year, having won eighteen and lost eighteen games.

The shop has furloughed about 35 men and still have 135 men working.

A favorable outlook for increased outbound business for 1924 presents itself with the announcement of a new crushing plant to be constructed at the Wagner Quarries Plant at Soldiers Home, Ohio. The new plant will have a total capacity of approximately 60 cars a day.

Frank E. Cheshire, car shop superintendent was called to Keyser, W. Va., because of the death of his mother which occurred on November 29. The sympathy of all is extended to him in his loss.

Webster defines Thrift as economy in the use of resources. When thrift is mentioned our first thought is economy in the use of money. This is all very well and deserves our thought and attention. Many people are not economical enough with their money; this is manifest in the figures showing the amount that is spent each year for tobacco, chewing gum, picture shows and the like. While a little of all these things might deserve some of our money and so benefit us, it is evident that they receive more than their share. There are other things also that receive much more of our money than they should.

In the consideration of Thrift, there is a line of demarkation beyond which it runs into what we call stinginess, and that is something that is not commendable in any one. One who denies himself the necessities of life in order to accumulate money is stingy. The man who is stingy in order to accumulate wealth at the risk of his health, is simply planning a post mortem lawsuit by his dissatisfied beneficiaries, as well as destroying his own happiness.

What is true of individuals is true also of corporations, because, according to Chief Justice Marshall, a corporation is an artificial being. The individual should save while he earns, in order to protect himself and his loved ones against misfortune. So also the corporation should lay aside a part of its earnings for future protection.

Another way in which we should practice thrift is in the spending of our time. Pool rooms, cards, etc., receive more of our time than they should. If we spend a little of our time, if we have any to spare, for amusements of this kind, there is no doubt that we might be entertained but we cannot afford to give them the major portion of our time. If we do we are nothing more than spendthrifts of time.

If we would all practice thrift in the spending of our time we would, in the end, be wiser. Dr. Eliot, President Emeritus, Harvard, has expressed this thought when he said that the thoughtful reading of the few books that he mentioned will, in the course of time, furnish the reader with the rudiments of a college education.

The one who spends his time in acquiring a college education is both thrifty in the spending of his time and wise in his endeavors.

Mike Dorsey, day yard master, has been absent with a bad cold, he says. But we are informed by one whose word we have never had an occasion to doubt, that Mike was seen on an interurban car sitting in the same seat with a "Coon Dawg," just a night or two before he laid off.

master, Zanesville. I was about to say he is still working at that job, but we have to be careful what we print as we might be hauled up before a magistrate and charged with libel!

On December 2, while switching cars in West Zanesville Yard, Yard Conductor Guy McIntyre had his right hand severely mashed. He was taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital to have the injury dressed, but the doctors decided that amputation was necessary. I know I am voicing the sentiments of the Newark Division officials and employees when I say that "Mac" is a loyal and industrious worker and that we are sorry to hear of his accident. We extend our sympathy to him and to his family.

The writer is new on this job and it is his maiden voyage on the "Sea of Magazine writing." He therefore requests that each of you send him any or all news that you think will be of interest to the Baltimore and Ohio family. Such things as marriages or wanting to be married, or in fact news of any one courting trouble in other ways, will be given consideration and appreciated.

We are sorry to announce the death of Mrs. V. N. Hale, at Albuquerque, N. M., after several months illness. Mrs. Hale was formerly Miss Mable Moore, clerk in the Division Storekeeper's Office, and daughter of Engineer "Fred" Moore. Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to the family.

Her sister, Miss Clara "Ted" Moore, who was also clerk in Division Storekeeper's Office and is ill at Albuquerque, we are glad to state, is greatly improved. We hope for her speedy and complete recovery.

It is with regret that we report the serious injury to H. F. Davis, brakeman, who, when knocked from the top of a car while switching at Columbus, November 1, had his right arm crushed between shoulder and elbow, making amputation necessary. We are glad to say that he is recovering rapidly.

George A. Darding, machinist apprentice, and son of "Fred" Darding, general clerk, was married on Thanksgiving Day. His fellow workers wish for him and his bride much to be thankful for, and a happy married life.

Information reached us that Fireman "Ches" Hensley, desired to be absent from duty to "get his head cut off." We were very much concerned about this until informed that this was meant to "get married." The ceremony took place November 15, and he has our best wishes for a long life of happiness.

Announcing the arrival of a dear baby girl, eight and three-quarter pounds, to Mr. and Mrs. Gordan Phillips, on November 27! Mr. Phillips is assistant district attorney, located at Chillicothe. John Phillips, sr., district attorney, and "Dick" Mallen, train master, are the proud grandfathers. There were few prouder or happier men around this station than "Dick," when, with his usual happy smile, he reported being grandfather for the third time. The other two are twin grandsons, "Dick" and "Jack" Phillips, of whom we have been trying to get photographs, but never seem able to do so. Perhaps now with the new arrival this will be possible. Congratulations!

W. H. Grady, section foreman, has resumed duty feeling fine after a leave of absence, spent in Richmond, Calif. Glad to see him back on the job again.

A mystery! How did "Phil" Hixson, clerk in Division Accountant's Office, get his right hand cut, while off duty recently, and why does he withhold details?

Our sympathy is extended to John Fletcher, sr., and family in the death of their daughter and sister Bertha.

J. E. Jones, brakeman, was among those recently married. Felicitations!

The one way to do a thing is the SAFETY FIRST way.

H. "Happy" Robertson, conductor, has the sincerest sympathy of his fellow workers, in the death of his wife, suddenly on December 6, from heart trouble.

C. E. Rutherford, clerk in Division Accountant's Office, is the proud father of a baby girl, who arrived on December 3, weighing six and one-half pounds. Mrs. Rutherford (Mildred Curtis) was a former employe, having had the same position that "Rudy" now holds, and of course, under the circumstances, when the little Miss is old enough she will undoubtedly be an employe of the Division Accountant's Office. Of course "Mil," we know this will be against your wishes, but you never can tell. The little lady has been given the name of Virginia Ann. Congratulations to both!

We have been informed, through the Train Master's Office, that Brakeman Frank Long has been working very steadily recently and from all appearances is poised high on a diving board, for a plunge into the sea of matrimony. More details have been promised later.

The accompanying photograph is of Wallace "Barney" Barnett, second trick crew dispatcher at Chillicothe. "Barney" entered the service over thirty years ago as fireman, transferred to different occupations, boiler maker helper, trucker, car repairer, extra caller, and is now calling crews. He is always on the job and when some one calls up asking "how many times out am I," is there to tell them and say "stick around, might need you."

The practice of THRIFT in your work, will not only help the railroad, but in so doing will help you.

Round House Machinists C. Novinger, P. Palmer and L. ("Happy") Ryan of the second trick, recently planned a rabbit hunt. Some time before, they began making elaborate preparations as to guns, ammunition, etc. After finally getting started, and going about fifteen miles they agreed upon a place to hunt. Then, and not until then, "Happy" discovered that he had forgotten to bring his gun. Not to be daunted, however, he at once gathered a pocket full of stones and attempted to kill rabbits in this manner. His aim seemed poor and after throwing until he had a cramp in his arm, he began kicking at brush piles. In other words, in the absence of a dog, he played "dog" for the others. They each got eight rabbits, but "Happy" came home empty handed. Nevertheless, he still wore the broad smile, and expects to try again before the end of the season. Suggestion has been made that he tie the gun around his neck the night before starting, next time.

SAVE COAL. The pop is a tell tale. It never works unless you make it work. Keep the pop down. STOP THAT LEAK. BETHRIFTY, which means using economy and good management of property.

Toledo Division

Correspondent, C. E. THRASHER

Your correspondent wishes to thank every employe on our division for the interest taken in sending him notes for the MAGAZINE during the past year. Without your help the writer cannot secure all of the news on the Division and when something of interest occurs, and you do not see a "write up," it is because we did not know anything about it. Boys, we are always looking for "dope." But not the kind of "sand house dope" that is usually traced back to some little joke that you play on the other fellow, just to have some fun among yourselves. We want real live news that is of interest to all employes. Every now and then some fellow in the Transportation Department takes a "rap" at me because there is not more news in our items about the train service employes. I eat this for "Breakfast," chew it for "Lunch" and swallow it for "Dinner." Every time I'm on line I get the same old cooking, and you know a fellow gets tired of the same meals. I have come to the conclusion that we are badly in need of a correspondent in the Transportation Department. So I appointed myself a committee of one, passed a resolution that we were going to get some one to help chew this food. The first man we saw was Guy Fain, baggage-master, Trains 54 and 55. We popped the question to him, and he accepted.

Everybody on the Toledo division knows "Guy" and you know when he starts to write items for the MAGAZINE, our Editor will have to run a special edition.

We have also been successful in securing an assistant correspondent at Hamilton Freight House; J. Collins, chief clerk to agent. We should hear from him in the near future. We are trying to get a correspondent at Toledo, and if successful we will be well fortified on our Division. No news should escape us.

Every employe is, or should be, interested in Freight Claim Prevention. Let us Resolve, "that each employe will take an active part in this work during 1924." The payment of claims is a "leak" and is usually caused by neglect of some one in not observing rules. The Railroads sell nothing but transportation, and along with this we agree to give service and courtesy. We accept a shipment for transportation from point of origin to destination. We do not carry out our contract unless we deliver that particular shipment in as good condition as we receive it. What is the result if we don't? A dissatisfied patron, and a claim to pay. Suppose, Mr. Employe, that you had an old relic that had been in the family for years and you wished it transported to a distant city safely. You crate it, and turn it over to a Railroad. That Railroad breaks it beyond repair. What would you think? This thing happens every day and investigations develop that negligence is the cause.

Mr. Engineer, you can help reduce these claims by careful handling of your train. When it is necessary to stop, do so with the thought in your mind that this freight is entrusted to your care, and that you will handle it as if it were your own. You do not see the damage that is done when a sudden stop is made and the cars are jammed together, but a check tells the tale and our Company pays the bill.

Of course the trucker plays an important part; it's his duty to see that shipments are loaded properly and piled down to prevent shifting.

The conductor and brakeman can help to reduce claims by careful handling of shipments while loading and unloading freight at way stations.

At this time of the year, perishable freight should be given special attention to see that it is protected against cold. All employes in train and yard service should watch this closely.

One of our photographs is of Crossing Watchman F. M. Hemmert, Botkins, Ohio. Mr. Hemmert arrived at Botkins in 1872, and studied telegraphy at that point. He says that in those days telegraphing was done by registers, made dots and dashes on paper, and the message copied from the paper. Mr. Hemmert was checked in as agent about 1873, and was agent operator until 1918. His right arm failed and he could no longer handle the key so he resigned. After taking several months rest, the crossing job was open and this was offered him. He accepted and has been holding his end down for the past five years. When he first worked for the C. H. & D. all engines were wood burners and all box cars were 18, 20 and 24 feet long, capacity 18,000 pounds, and they were not allowed to load them to exceed 9 tons. 15 to 17 cars was the limit for any train.

In those days 15 hours constituted a day's work, and work it was! Mr. Hemmert never caused an accident, never missed a train order, never was suspended and always tried to have the good will of his superior officers, to be obedient and honest and practice Safety First. He is hale and hearty despite his 50 years in service with C. H. & D. and Baltimore and Ohio.

Now that 1924 is with us, make your new resolutions so that you will have no regrets at the closing of the year. As your correspondent, I will endeavor to serve you at East Dayton and write all items that will be of interest to the Company and yourselves.

The MAGAZINE is your magazine. Its main endeavor is to further that Good Will and Cooperation so prevalent in our ranks now.

My wish is that the new year for each and all of us may be filled with abundant blessings.

Lima, Ohio

Correspondent, O. L. WALLBURG

Our Veterans' Chapter elected officers for the year 1924 at Odd Fellows' Hall on December 6, as follows: W. F. Van Horn, president; John Sweeney, vice-president; F. E. Snyder, treasurer; John Schnabel, sergeant-at-arms; and O. L. Wallburg, secretary. Directors, Lima; John Harboldt, Patrick Leahy, Maurice Brown and S. H. Hartsing, Dayton; R. C. Henderson, A. C. Bushwaw, Edward Ledger, Toledo; S. J. Cook, George Thomas and A. Neubrecht, Delegate to Grand Convention in May, 1924, W. F. Van Horn; Alternate, O. L. Wallburg.

Our association is in a strong, healthy condition and is a wonderful institution on the Baltimore and Ohio. While it is comparatively new on the Toledo Division, the membership, together with the officers, have grasped the idea that it is here to stay and that it means much toward promoting a better understanding among employes themselves and also the officers of the Company. President Willard holds the Veterans of Our Railroad in high regard. The Baltimore and Ohio is considered one of the best managed railroads in the country and this has been brought about through the loyalty and whole hearted support contributed by the employes, the Veterans doing a large part. This was forcefully demonstrated several years ago, when the Veterans started after new business for the Company and got it. The Management has not forgotten this loyal work and their appreciation has been shown in various ways.

We have reached a place right now, when the loyalty and good will of the Veterans must again be emphasized and brought to the attention of the public. The good business we were enjoying has gone around the corner. To bring it back is the question cudgeling the brains of our people everywhere, not only on the railroads, but in the industrial and business world. Once more it is a battle to overcome pessimism with optimism. We must go after business hard and use every fair means to secure it for our Railroad. We must exert ourselves to the utmost in getting and keeping business that rightfully belongs to us, and also in getting new business, which we can handle as well and often better than any other railroad. The excellent quality of our service must be emphasized, and who has a better opportunity to get this business than our own people, especially our Veterans?

I venture to say that there were thousands of dollars brought into the treasury of Our Company through the efforts of our employees, especially the Veterans, that never was brought to the attention of our Traffic Department or the Management, solely because the man doing this work did not want to bring himself into the limelight.

This feeling may be alright, but I feel that it adds a great deal to the push behind such a campaign when we see an increasingly large number of employees taking an active part in it by going after the business and getting it. Then, after securing the business keeping it, by First Class Service. Use the card which is sent out each month in our MAGAZINE, pick out some firm, then make an honest effort to secure business which has not been coming to our rails. Do not approach the proposition with the idea that you cannot get it, because you never know what you can do until you have tried.

Joseph Shelly, for years employed in Lima Yard as conductor, died at his home, 330 S. Pine St., on November 21. "Joe" was a conscientious and faithful employee for many years, and a member of the Veterans' Association since it was first organized on the Toledo Division. The Baltimore and Ohio Family at Lima extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Veterans' Association held their annual election of officers on December 6, with the following results: Mrs. O. L. Wallburg, president; Mrs. John Schnabel, vice-president; Mrs. Patrick Finn, secretary; Mrs. John Sweeney, treasurer; Mrs. Patrick Conley, chaplain; Mrs. Joseph Shelly, marshal; Mrs. Martin Dibling, outer guard; Mrs. Amelia Woltrom, musician. Mrs. Patrick Conley was elected to go to the Grand Convention in May, 1924, with Mrs. John Sweeney as alternate. The ladies say that 1924 will be one of the most successful years they have ever had, principally due to the fine spirit which is shown among the officers and members. The last social held by the Veterans' and their Ladies was an enjoyable one principally because of the activities of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Our good friend Joe Ziegenbusch, round-house clerk, lost his father through death, the summons being hastened by tuberculosis. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

General Foreman Miller is now firmly established at Lima, his household goods having arrived from Washington, Ind. Welcome to our family at Lima, Mr. Miller. We are for you and with you.

"Dave" Heffner is back on the job at the Freight House after an illness of several weeks. We're all glad to see "Dave." When not attending G. A. R. Conventions and Reunions, "Dave" is delivery clerk at the Freight House.

"Buck" Geiry watches the traffic at Market Street, since "Our Own Tim Lucey" went to Sidney, and sees that the "Henrys" do not bump the 4500's off the right-of-way. He is fast becoming a staunch member of the Baltimore and Ohio Family. "Buck," while guarding North St., was a Nickle Plate man, but his taking Market Street places him on the Baltimore and Ohio payroll and entitles him to the MAGAZINE, which he demands the same as any other Old Timer.

The accompanying photograph is that of our telegraph office at Austin and Agent Mrs. Grace E. Study. We'll say she is fond of vines and flowers! They were planted by her.

Correspondent, L. M. MASON

What if the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad could put something into effect that would stop the big flow of claims coming in every day? Some one will see the way and start the ball rolling before many more years.

What causes claims? Negligence, nothing more! If a shipment is broken enroute, it is either negligence on the part of the loader or the engineer for rough handling. It's negligence on the part of the employee who accepts a shipment that is not in good condition. It is not an accident unless a shipment is damaged in a wreck.

If every man would try to be perfect for just one day, not a claim would be paid for damages for that day. Why not try it? And if it will work for one day, we might get it to work two days and then we might be able to continue on and be perfect for a week. If it will work for one day, it ought to work every day. Why not let all the agents organize their forces into two or three perfect day drives a week, then if it will work for two or three days a week, why not try it for a week at a time, and so on as long as it will work! To be perfect an employee will have to take interest in his work, he must work just as if he was working for himself. If an employee knew he had to pay out of his own pocket for the claim he makes against the Company, how many claims would he make? Not a single one!

How long would it take you to get a needle and thread, and sew a hole up, that you caused to be torn in a sack of flour or grain? Are you working to make your company as much money as they pay you? That's what you should do! You can't make your company as much money as they pay you if you cause them to pay out a claim by your negligence.

Why do our engineers, before starting out on their run, inspect their engines? Why do our conductors inspect their trains all over before starting? They are looking for defective parts that would cause a claim to be paid for a life lost or for a box car full of costly merchandise destroyed. Why can't other employees look for defective shipments of merchandise?

Men grow weaker in body and wiser in mind. Use your head and save your body. It takes head work to accomplish things worth while. Get your heads together this year and see how many claims you can save. A good organized freight house force will do the work.

WELLSTON - - OHIO

Conductor Pat Sweeney says the coming generation is growing better. Most children whose ages are given as four, look to be ten.

"Won't and can't," "Will and can." Which will it be when I'm a man? Which is it now—just every day? Which is the best for work or play? "Will and can," and stick right to it! "Won't and can't" can never do it!

R. C. Henderson master carpenter, Dayton, recently paid us a visit, Mr. Henderson and his wife have returned from a trip to points in California, Washington and other western states.

Roy Marsh and C. W. Hush, accompanied by their wives and Mrs. C. W. Brandau, wife of Conductor C.W. Brandau, went to Alsen, N. Y., because of the death of a brother of the ladies.

Now that the holidays are over and we are starting on a New Year, let's all get out and drum up more business. This is the time of year when business is slack, and we wonder where it goes to. Everybody sits down and waits to see what comes next. Get out and advertise our Railroad. We may have friends who are planning a trip. Ask what road they are going on. Tell them why they should go our way. How much business could we get if seventy thousand employees would all ask their friends to ship and travel our way? You may be figuring on buying a new automobile ask your dealer to have it shipped in on our line; ask your grocer how much business he gives your road; tell him in exchange for your business you would like some of his.

General Foreman Thomas Zinkan, recently gave a talk to the students at the local High School on how to become railroaders. Mr. Zinkan also spoke of our tours to Washington, D. C., and said it is one that students should not miss. It is an educational, as well as a pleasure trip.

How many times have you complained that your "Ship never comes in?" Have you ever sent out anything to bring it in?

Have you ever done anything more than your fellow workmen have done?

Have you worked and denied yourself that you might become proficient in a certain line?

If not, how can you expect to reap benefits that come to men who have labored hard and consistently?

If your work, at its best, brings a smaller remuneration than some other line, whose fault is it?

You expect so much and have given so little. This is a world of balance and things even up in the long run. If you have chosen a job that you thought would bring you a comparatively easy life and you find that the compensation is less than you could realize from some other line, remember that that other line requires more than you are willing to give. You receive in proportion as you give—of brain, of brawn, of heart.

With the new year it is fitting that beneficial ideas and plans be mapped out. January has been named as a National Thrift month. It is not intended that this be confined to our duty only but to our outside or home life as well, for it naturally follows that an employe using thrift and economy in the management of his household uses the same principles in his work, and with existing conditions this is an essential feature. No one should know better than the individual employe how the most economical use of tools, material, supplies and time can be made and with these uses put into actual practice a bigger buying dollar earned.

"Shorty" Woods has been transferred from the Accounting Office, Washington, and is now checking cars for Ed. Coil at Flora.

It is with regret that we have heard of the tragic death of Jim Lavelle, operator, Shops, Relay, who was killed in an automobile accident near Washington on December 8. Lavelle had been in the service of the Company for fourteen years, was widely known and well liked by members of the railroad circle as well as those outside, and the condolence and sympathies of his friends are offered.

The Red Cross Instruction Car "Pasteur" has been on the division, stopping at larger towns and points where we have forces, for instructions and lectures in connection with the work of the Red Cross. The car was open to the public as well as the employes and there was considerable interest manifest in the addresses and exhibitions on "First Aid" by Drs. McLeod and Rodel.

A new heating plant has been installed in the offices at Washington and the days of the frigid zone should be over.

F. G. Mcloy, baggagemaster on through runs, was a happy man the day oil was struck on his land in California, but this was nothing to his happiness a few days ago when informed that Patricia Jane Compton of Coshoccon, Ohio, had arrived to call him "Grandpa." "Shorty" handles three hundred pound trunks like handballs now.

The Passenger Department recently learned that Brakeman D. P. Thompson, Nos. 67 and 68 on the East End, had been the means of routing some passengers over the Baltimore and Ohio and commendations were given him. When Brakeman Thompson courteously informed a passenger of connections to be had at Washington, Indiana, he found he had used a competing line between Detroit and Cincinnati. He impressed upon the passenger the many reasons why he should use the Baltimore and Ohio on his return trip. When returning Thompson met him at Washington and learned he had bought two return trip tickets via our line between those points. Mr. Thompson feels it is his privilege to get all the business he can and just for that we print his picture.

Regretting to lose Miss Jones, our A. R. This is a very important position having been previously filled by Miss Appleton who crossed the Matrimonial Sea two months ago. Miss Johnson now holds the enviable position.

On October 6, a get together meeting was held in the Parmly Hotel at Painesville. It was attended by heads of the different departments and employes, with Agent G. W. Taylor as chairman. The subjects of traffic relations with the public, co-operation, courtesy and securing business for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad were discussed at length by all present.

Moore, Moore and Still Moore

By EDITH ROACH, Magazine Correspondent

JOHN W. MOORE, father of our popular Conductor, R. W. Moore, was born on September 23, 1823 at Zanesville, Ohio, and started to work as baggagemaster on the old Central Ohio. Soon after he was promoted to conductor. At that time the road only extended from Zanesville to Newark. It was later built to Columbus, reaching the later point in the fall of 1851. After the line was built to Columbus, a line was started east from Zanesville to Bellaire, Ohio, reaching the latter point in 1854.

John W. Moore was always on passenger trains and ran the first train from Columbus to Bellaire in 1854. In 1874 the Bellaire bridge was completed across the Ohio River and Mr. Moore ran the first passenger train across this bridge.

When Conductor R. W. Moore was a youngster, his father took him and his brother, Jessie T. Moore, to Wheeling frequently. This was a great treat for the boys, and probably had largely to do with their following in their father's footsteps. The father was a conductor until October, 1882, running all the time between Columbus and Wheeling. In October, 1882, he left the service because of ill health. Mr. Moore passed away March 2, 1909, at the ripe old age of 86 years.

R. W. Moore commenced braking for his father in 1870, being then 17 years old. Soon after he was promoted to baggagemaster and held this position about 6 months. Upon the retirement of his father, William Franklin, master of transportation, promoted him to conductor to take his father's place. Except for 6 years when Mr. Moore was on a run between Wheeling and Chicago on what was known as the Daisy Limited, Nos. 5 and 6, he has been running regularly between Cincinnati and Wheeling.

The Midland Division was opened in 1885 and in 1888 Mr. Moore was transferred from the Chicago run, by Captain W. W. Peabody, who was at the time general manager west of the Ohio River, to the Midland Division. This makes a total of 73 years of service as passenger conductor for Mr. Moore and his father. Jesse T. Moore, another son, ran a passenger train on the Pittsburgh Division of the Pennsylvania Co. 37 years, until he was retired two years ago which makes in all 110 years as passenger conductors for the father and two sons.

The first passenger train handled by Conductor R. W. Moore was from Columbus to Zanesville, October 21, 1882. At this time conductors did not wear uniforms and when the senior Moore came home the tickets collected were usually in his pocket. It was the lot of R. W., then a youngster, to make out the report. Counting his own service he has been making out ticket reports for more than 50 years to the same office. Mr. Moore remembers distinctly the old wood burning engines, as well as when the camel back engine shoved the coaches on the ferry boat at Bellaire to be ferried across and headed for the trip to Baltimore.

Conductor R. W. Moore is a charter member of Columbus Shrine and other Masonic bodies, also a devout Presbyterian. He enjoys good health and will no doubt exceed his father's record for years of service.

Annual Frolic of Camden Station Employees

"ON with the dance," commanded Chairman H. L. Goodman, when at 8.30 p. m. on November 26, the clans of the Camden station employees started to gather in the Automobile Club at Mount Royal Avenue and Cathedral Street, Baltimore, for their annual frolic. And the "Imperial Six" furnished the music and the dance commenced.

"Where is the Philadelphia gang?" asked Mr. Higdon. "On No. 9," was the reply. "And how is No. 9?" "Why ask such a question about a Baltimore and Ohio train?" It is just 9.02 p. m. and we hear her coming into Mount Royal station, across the way. "Baltimore Division standard," says Mr. Goodman; "Higdon, pick up four or five of the boys, and go over to the station to escort our visitors over here." In a few minutes, here they come! There's Chief Clerk Farr, Terminal Trainmaster's Office; Chief Clerk Connors, Master Mechanic's Office; Miss Helen Love, secretary to terminal trainmaster; Miss Helen Sentman, secretary to master mechanic, and many others—thirty-five of them—all representative of the flower and youth of the Quaker City.

Who is this we see dancing up the stairs like a young man of eighteen? None other than our old friend G. A. Bowers, assistant master mechanic, Riverside. But where is his wife, we inquire? "In Cincinnati." Oh, that explains why George did nothing but dance by himself and look on all evening. He was chaperoned by Chief Clerk King, also of Riverside, and Miss Martha Fox, Locust Point, also kept her eye on him. Representatives from Wilmsere came in to swell the gathering crowd, and we saw our old friend Foreman Kelly, Water Station Service, Wilmington, and so, with the boys and girls from the Central Building, the Annex Building, Camden, Philadelphia, Wilmsere and Wilmington, the Baltimore Division was well represented.

The hall is a fine one, and with the beautiful dresses of the girls and the "Tuxedo" of R. H. Kline, the casual observer might have thought that he was witnessing a beauty and fashion show rather than a dance of the Camden employees.

The music was good. The floor was fine. Everyone was happy, and the "eats" satisfying. The committee in charge, which consisted of Chairman H. L. Goodman, J. B. Higden, H. King, B. E. Bell, M. Swein and E. Freeman, left nothing undone to insure the enjoyment of their guests and were heartily congratulated by everyone present.

The dance stopped at midnight. Just before the "witching hour" confetti was much in evidence, and as we wended our way to our street cars, trains, automobiles, taxis and "Fords," we all felt that the evening had been well spent and most enjoyable in every way.

Another Dance for Transportation Department

Encouraged by the success of the last get-together meeting and dance, the girls and boys of the Transportation Department, Baltimore, have decided to hold a similar affair on Wednesday evening, February 6. They will be delighted to have their friends come and enjoy a pleasant evening with them. The dance will be held at Tuttle's Hall, 21 E. North Avenue. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the committee, or from R. L. Mansfield, 610 Baltimore and Ohio Building. Price of tickets, 55 cents each.

OMISSION—

On pages 48 and 49 of the November, 1923 issue, the picture of the Washington party showed Harry B. Knight, traveling passenger agent, Cumberland, in charge. W. H. Foust, traveling passenger agent, Pittsburgh, on the extreme left, was also in charge and had quite a group with him. Mention of this was omitted in the November MAGAZINE.

The Value of Thrift

By RUDYARD KIPLING

ALL the money in the world is no use to a man or his country if he spends it as fast as he makes it. All he has left is his bills and the reputation of being a fool, which he can get much more cheaply in other ways.

There's nothing fine or funny in throwing away cash on things you don't want merely because the cash is there. We've all done it in our time, and we've all had to pay for it. The man who says he never worries about money is the man who has to worry about it most in the long run, and goodness knows there's enough worry in the world already without our going out of the way to add to it.

Savings represent much more than their mere money value. They are proof that the saver is worth something in himself. Any fool can waste, any fool can muddle; but it takes something of a man to save and the more he saves the more of a man does it make of him. Waste and extravagance unsettle a man's mind for every crisis; thrift, which means some form of self-restraint, steadies it.

Death of Frank E. Dent

ON November 11, Frank E. Dent, retired Veteran operator, died at the home of his mother, Fairmont, W. Va. He was born in 1863 and entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio as agent-operator at Shinnston, W. Va. on October 1, 1890. He was transferred to Fairmont on November 20, 1903 and to Gaston Junction on August 23, 1913. He retired on June 1, 1919.

Mr. Dent had been in poor health for the past four years. He had visited various health resorts and had been under the care of specialists without result. He was a member of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association and was active in the work of this organization.

He was a son of Mrs. Cordelia Dent and the late I. J. Dent of Fairmont, W. Va. He married Miss Ethel V. Tetrick, Worthington, W. Va., and she, with two daughters and one son survive him.

Mr. Dent lived in Fairmont almost all his life. He was a man of kindly personality and had many friends, who join with his fellow workers in extending deep sympathy to his family.

Our Passenger Department

THE SUCCESS OF THE PASSENGER DEPARTMENT IS DEPENDENT UPON GOOD SERVICE

ON the Baltimore and Ohio we are endeavoring to establish for our passenger service a reputation for Safety, Comfort, Dependability and Courtesy. A safe trip, a comfortable trip and a dependable trip our patrons can reasonably expect as a return for the fare they pay. Courtesy and hospitality we can easily add, and, coming as good measure, will be all the more appreciated.

The responsibility of establishing and maintaining a good reputation rests largely with those whose duties bring them into contact with the traveling public—a traveling public that is quick to criticise, yet eager to praise. A courteous word, a thoughtful act, an unexpected service, will do as much to reenforce our reputation as the rigid maintenance of schedules, the safeguarding of life or the protection of property.

Ticket Sellers, Information Bureau employes, Gatemen, Conductors, Train Attendants and others, who serve the public daily, should look to the little things, which, in the aggregate, make up the whole of dependable travel and reputable service. A bit of extra attention—something that the passenger hardly expects, yet quickly recognizes—is in your power to give.

No merchant ever made a success of his business unless he coupled hospitality with his commodity, and the same is true with the passenger service of a railroad.

Let us, therefore, develop a reputation for the Baltimore and Ohio that will give it national acceptance as the road where thoughtful, courteous and hospitable attention to travelers is considered as important as the dependable maintenance of schedules.

We earnestly solicit the cooperation of every employe in helping to create for the Baltimore and Ohio the reputation of being "the best railroad in the world in point of service."

Riverside <sup>OVERSIZE</sup> <sub>CORD</sub> Tires

Riverside Oversize Cord Tires are guaranteed for 10,000 miles and in actual performance give up to 18,000 miles. Can any other tire do more?

So why not save one-third and use Riverside Cords? What more will any other tire do? Then why pay more?

And this 10,000 miles service is backed by a guarantee that has stood for fifty-one years. Does any other tire carry a better guarantee?

Quality is built into Riverside Cords

This guaranteed mileage is built into Ward's Riverside Cords. High treads, thicker and stronger, of tough, live rubber.

This exceptional quality of Ward's tires alone has made us the largest retailers of tires in the country. The tires themselves have convinced thousands that Riverside Cords are best.

You Don't Risk One Cent

Before you buy any tires send for Riversides. Inspect them. Compare them with tires selling for $5.00 or $15.00 more.

Send them back if you do not find them the equal of any first-quality oversize cord made. We will refund your money.

These prices buy 10,000 miles of service—and more.

(On February 12, 1827, the first regular meeting was called by Baltimore merchants to consider the building of a Railroad from Baltimore to the Ohio River. See cut in panel below. On February 28, 1827, the charter was granted to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, the first Railroad in America, by the Maryland Legislature.)

In council they sat, in Baltimore Town,
This Philip E. Thomas, and good Brothers Brown,
Howard and Patterson, Winchester, McMahon,
And old Talbot Jones; and each had his say on
The thought of a railroad—swift coaches—a "flyer,"
The subject then setting the nation on fire.

For the world was opposed to the idea of power
To speed transportation to ten miles per hour!
Old Dobbin made six—Oh, 'twas simply absurd—
Vile creatures who'd flit o'er the ground as a bird!
A coach upon rails? Surely out of the question,
And, besides, wouldn't speeding give folks indigestion?

But these Fathers of Progress defied such a creed,
And bade Chairman Thomas forthwith to proceed.
"Good Friends," he began, "our fair town's situation
Will improve hundredfold with increased transportation;
Our trade will expand and our incomes increase—
For the Baltimore and Ohio let's sign up a lease."

And thus was begun, nigh a century ago,
The plans for the finest old railroad we know.
But sometimes I wonder, if we'd lived in the age
When folks went afoot or travelled by stage,
Could we have withstood the guffaws of the crowd,
And dared to lay rails while the world laughed aloud?

A Successful Suggestion System is a Partnership

The Good Will of Those Making Suggestions Must be Supplemented by the Responsiveness of Management

THE November 1923 issue of the MAGAZINE contained a full page article headed "Suggestions Are Always in Order." It briefly stated the earnest desire of the Management to have all employees feel free to make suggestions for the betterment of the service and also stated that suggestion boxes had been placed at convenient locations on the Railroad for the use of employees and that any employee unable to locate any of these boxes could send his suggestion to the Magazine Office where it would be promptly forwarded to the proper officers.

This article has developed some interesting comment—and from widely separated sources. For instance, it was seen by one of the editors of an internationally known newspaper, who commented on it as being a most hopeful sign of a better understanding between Management and employee. He also expressed the belief that a wider dissemination of this principle throughout the industrial structure of the country would bring about lower costs of production and thus help make for lower living costs.

Another comment came from an employee whose years of service and standing lend considerable importance to his statement. He said that he was fully convinced of the desire of the Management to secure suggestions from employees, but that experience had taught him that not all the members of the supervising forces of the Railroad entirely understood the full import of the slogan "Suggestions Are Always in Order" as applied to all activities on the Baltimore and Ohio.

It will be the purpose of this article, therefore, to point out as specifically as possible why any business organization which wishes to take advantage of all the factors producing prosperity must of necessity permit of the widest application of the principle enunciated in this slogan.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad recently published in their Bulletin No. 4 some statistics developed at a hearing of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. These data were caused to be published by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin and covered the year 1921, showing the following list of twenty-nine railroad presidents and the first positions they held in railroad service:

NAME	BEGAN AS
C. H. MARKHAM	Track Laborer
H. E. BRYAN	Call Boy
J. E. GORMAN	Office Boy
C. E. SCHAFF	Brakeman

C. R. GRAY	Telegraph Operator

This list includes the presidents of the New York Central, Pennsylvania; Illinois Central; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul; Rock Island; Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh; Norfolk and Western; New York, New Haven and Hartford; Northern Pacific; Philadelphia and Reading; Central Railroad of New Jersey; Erie; Boston and Maine; Union Pacific; and the Baltimore and Ohio among others. It unquestionably represents the directing heads of by far the larger part of the twenty odd billions of railroad property investment in the United States.

Officers Began in the Ranks

Getting closer to home ground it is interesting to note in the same connection that the four vice-presidents of the Baltimore and Ohio, Messrs. Shriver, Batchelder, Gallo-way and Fries, started their railroad careers respectively as clerk, operator, messenger boy and entry clerk. If space permitted one could continue through the list of the leading officers not alone of the Baltimore and Ohio but of other railroads and find the same average of humble positions first held by them in railroad service.

A recent article in our own MAGAZINE by J. C. Wilkens on the subject "Who Will Be the Railroad Executives of Tomorrow?" very properly pointed out the fact that the only way we can answer the question imposed in the subject is to judge the future by the past, and that if we do this we will find that the railroad executives of tomorrow are in the ranks and, in some cases, in the very low ranks of the railroads today.

And Talent is in the Ranks Today

Is it any wonder, therefore, that as these future executives are in the ranks today, present railroad managements should not only ask for but should earnestly solicit suggestions from them?

Promotion Does Not Make Supermen

The mere fact that they are now in the ranks does not dull their powers of observation, of investigation, of initiative or of planning. In stepping from the grade of an engineer to that of a road foreman of engines, for instance, they are not miraculously clothed with new and theretofore unpossessed mental qualities. If they are of the stuff which present and future executives must have, they are constantly on the alert to better their methods of work and to make themselves more efficient in all respects. And there are literally thousands of such men in the Baltimore and Ohio service today, whose thoughtful cooperation through the medium of suggestions for the betterment of the service our Management earnestly solicits.

Of course, not all of these thousands of employes will rise to executive positions on the Railroad. Some perhaps will change their vocations or leave the service for one reason or another and many will fail to scale the heights because they lack some one or another of the many qualities which are necessary to make an all around executive. The quality which most often is lacking in men of this type is the executive quality itself—that rare ability to handle men, to so delegate work to others that it will be carried out with the same success as if the executive himself did it.

But that fact does not abate for a minute the other equally obvious fact that such men have certain qualities developed to as high a degree as have the executives themselves—such qualities as observation, analysis and planning—on which are built the ability to make the most worth while suggestions.

It is such men whom the poet Gray undoubtedly had in mind when he penned the immortal line:

"Full many a flower is born to blush unseen"

and of whose powers of analysis and suggestion the Baltimore and Ohio Management wishes to make the fullest use. It is such men as have come under my own observation, men of fine intellectual calibre, thoughtful and studious, but whose natural predilections they themselves admit have never carried them beyond the places which they have made for themselves in our organization and filled so satisfactorily.

But just because they will never be called executives is no reason why they should not wish to pass on suggestions looking to the improvement of the service. The Management cannot always see into every nook and cranny of the Railroad. Executives cannot be constantly present in stations, terminals, classification yards, shops, roundhouses and other important localities on the Railroad. Nor can the supervising officers of lower grade see all the possibilities of improvement in the minutiae of operations. Hence, we get down to the men on the ground in the final analysis, the men who actually do the physical labor on the Railroad, for information concerning practices which permit of betterment. No man could tell what improvements could be made in the service if all such potential observations and suggestions were put into the refining pot and the worth while things saved from the dross. When we but recall the revolutions that have been accomplished in industry by such epoch-making inventions as the application of steam to machinery, the cotton gin in the textile grade, and others, we get a picture of what might be accomplished by the thoughtful and concentrated study of the manifold operations of a great Railroad by its 70,000 employes.

Foremen Make or Break Suggestion System

The success of a program looking to the fullest use of suggestions in any organization depends, however, not more upon the response of the rank and file than it does on the sympathetic attitude of those to whom the suggestions must be made. Putting it bluntly—in order to get the best results from such a plan all the officers of the Railroad, from the lowest to the highest grade, must be completely convinced that the plan is worthy of their hearty support.

One of the finest mechanics I know on the Railroad put it this way:

"It's alright for the Management and the MAGAZINE to be preaching 'Suggestions Are Always in Order,' but you won't get the right results until you get the kind of cooperation that that means extended from the minor bosses to the employees."

And then he went on to particularize, giving two illustrations of waste that he had called to the attention of his boss without any action. The matters were eventually reported to the proper divisional officer and were immediately investigated. One was in such condition that the entire potential waste of about $20.00 was immediately prevented. The other case was that of the application of an oversize part, which upon investigation, however, proved to be justified because previous installations of the smaller and cheaper part had been unsatisfactory.

Now that particular employe would not be soured on the whole principle of making suggestions if he continued to get rebuff after rebuff. He knows the value of suggestions and also that he is following the Baltimore and Ohio Way in keeping on making them. But he is a most unusual mechanic, with large experience in dealing with men, a good education and frequent contact with divisional officers who would never have risen to their present positions if they had been the sort to turn the cold shoulder on suggestions.

Suggestions Must Be Encouraged

Consider, however, the other employe without these contacts and association (the more numerous type, of course) and who makes suggestions that he believes are good, to his immediate boss, only to have them turned down. Can you imagine what he thinks about the "system" that permits of such apparent indifference? Do you wonder that he questions the sincerity of the statements that he hears and reads that "Suggestions Are Always in Order?" Can you blame him much for getting careless not only of the wastes the other fellow is permitting but also as to how he does his own work? Can you imagine what a disastrous effect it has on the morale of all the men with whom he comes in contact when, discouraged as he willingly offers to lend his interest and intelligence to better operations, he becomes not alone a believer in but a preacher of the pernicious doctrine of Don't Care.

This is not to admit for a moment that any men in supervising capacities on the Railroad deliberately stifle suggestions from their men. The "suggestion idea" as now stressed on the Baltimore and Ohio is a comparatively new thing—it was not emphasized in the training of railroad officers twenty years ago, and it takes time to let the idea sink in. Again, foremen are extremely busy men—with difficult programs of work to get out—and in looking to the main job they may appear to be overlooking the suggestion idea.

Successful Executives Solicit Suggestions

Putting the same thought in a more constructive way it may be said that the most successful and esteemed officers are, generally speaking, those who not only accept suggestions in a gracious way but actually solicit them from their subordinates. It might not be making it too strong to add that the greatest strength of some executives is in their receptivity to ideas. They are not creative geniuses themselves but they know the value of keen appraisal and becoming appreciation of the other man's ideas.

Think Twice before Speaking!

In this connection it would be unfair not to state that of the many suggestions that may be made in an organization as large as ours, relatively only a few are worthy of being put into effect. This observation is well illustrated by the case of the young man who got a job firing on an eastern railroad about twenty years ago. He was full of pep and after he had had a chance to look around he began to ask searching questions about things that did not look just right to him. He was trying in a constructive way to better operations, as he saw the light. One night he was reading in his boarding house room when there was a knock at his door and shortly he was in the midst of a friendly lesson in railroad deportment as taught by his caller, an older fireman. Said the teacher, in effect:

"Everybody around here knows that you are a live wire and doing your best to make things run smoothly, and they like you, even if you do talk a lot for a new man. But I've seen other chaps like you overdo it so I just dropped in to give you a word of friendly and timely warning.

"Keep on asking all the questions you need to ask—nobody will begrudge you information here. But when you find out what you want, don't be in too much of a hurry in forming conclusions as to how we can do the job better. Remember that this terminal has been here for fifty years and has turned out some fine men. Remember that there may be reasons for doing things the way they are being done that you have not even thought of. There are many conditions at places on this railroad hundreds of miles from here that affect what we do. I know little about a whole lot of these conditions and you know nothing about more of them. So after you have formed your conclusions about how we could do things better here than they are being done, don't go off 'half cocked' about them. Sleep on them for a while and ask more questions about them. Only when you have exhausted all the reasonable ways of finding out why they are being done as they are being done—and still think you have a better plan—should you spring it on the supervision. They will be glad enough to put your suggestion into effect if it is a good one. But if you shoot a whole lot of half-baked ideas at them they will duck when they see you coming. You will help yourself a lot if you keep the soft pedal on."

(Parenthetically it may be of interest to know that the speaker later became a prominent officer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and that the young fireman is now one of the leading railroad educators of the country.)

As between the two men, however—the one of the rank and file who is perhaps too fertile in suggestion, and the other employe or officer who habitually discourages suggestions—the former is unquestionably the more valuable to the organization. He is the more valuable for the same reason that the fellow who makes mistakes but does things is more valuable than the fellow who never makes mistakes because he is of the type of Brown in the story. Brown asked Gray for a job and Gray got in touch with Brown's former employer.

"What kind of a fellow is Brown?" said Gray.

"Oh, just so-so," was the reply.

"Is he steady?" went on Gray.

"Yes," came the reply, "he's so damn steady you can't see him move."

Not All Good Suggestions Can Be Put into Effect Immediately

Often the Management gets a suggestion, investigates it and finds it a good one, but is unable to put it into effect. It may call, for instance, for a capital outlay of $5000 to assure a yearly saving of $1000, a return of 20 per cent., a handsome return on the investment indeed. But there may be a dozen other suggestions considered at the same time and one or more may assure a return of 25 per cent. on the capital outlay. Obviously, with the amount of capital available for improvements strictly limited, the first improvement suggested has to be postponed until the other—and more profitable ones—are effected. To the person making the first suggestion this postponement may appear most unwise, until he visualizes the above picture—with Management in the home office surveying the needs of 5200 miles of track and $750,000,000 worth of property investment—and determining on the cold basis of relative value which improvements should be made first out of a limited budget.

Baltimore and Ohio Committed to Suggestion Idea

That the Management is intensely interested in any suggestion designed to improve our operations could be proved by many, many examples. Two, however, should suffice.

The first is of the corps of upwards of twenty men, all drawn from our own personnel in the Motive Power Department, whose entire time is now being spent in improving shop methods. Here the Management has expert investigators taken from the ranks and trained in Baltimore and Ohio equipment and system, developing improved practices. How natural, therefore, that the Management should welcome suggestions which come spontaneously from, and represent the good will of the employes who make them.

The other illustration is of a number of suggestions sent in during the summer of 1923 by an employe at an important terminal. He had only been in the service for three years, yet his letter was deemed of such importance that it was discussed at a general staff meeting of the Operating Department, was later carefully investigated on the ground and resulted in a greatly improved situation.

What leaders in industry think of the value of a suggestion system is indicated in the three following paragraphs from "Review of Industry," of December, 1923:

"Every individual in an industrial establishment is capable of evolving helpful ideas. And a working force that displays sufficient interest to place before management workable ideas certainly is striving for good relations. But management must do

Our Trains Continue to Use Pennsylvania Terminal in New York

There has recently been quite a good deal said in the newspapers about the time at which the Baltimore and Ohio will discontinue to use the Pennsylvania Terminal, 33rd Street and Seventh Avenue, New York, for its passenger trains, and we believe that these reports have caused a misapprehension in some quarters in this respect.

Therefore, we state for the information of all employes that the Baltimore and Ohio expects to continue to use the Pennsylvania Terminal in New York for its passenger trains until September 1, 1925.

its part if the best results are to be attained.

"Ideas will not come from the personnel of an establishment merely in response to wishes nor by whistling for them. If suggestions are to be brought forth the rank and file must be encouraged to think not in spurts but all of the time.

"Concerns that have paid attention to suggestion systems have profited from the ideas submitted. But a system of the character indicated should be properly planted, freely watered and constantly cultivated, for otherwise it will not be a success."

Suggestions from employees will be welcomed by the Management of the Baltimore and Ohio and should be made through supervising officers or placed in the Suggestion Boxes provided. Where these facilities for making suggestions are not available they may be sent to the MAGAZINE where they will be handled in confidence with the proper officers.

Exhibits 1 to 5 inclusive, show portable cabinets used in the Automatic Department. Although particularly adapted to the machinery in that department, they can be adapted in other shops by minor changes to suit local conditions.

Particular attention is directed to Exhibit 2 which shows on the pedestal to the right of the machine nine oil cavity spuds set up in a holder to be applied in the machine when the set being machined is completed. The operator sets up this extra holder full of spuds during the time the machine is working. This particular feature can be worked out in several operations in almost any shop. The time saved in this manner represents a saving in the total time for doing a certain amount of work. While these exhibits cover a manufacturing condition, the principle of getting the work to and from the machine can be applied almost anywhere, and the method of setting up jobs preparatory to machining can also be taken advantage of in any shop.

Exhibits 6 and 7 illustrate the utilizing of all tool heads of machines and conveys the idea of assignment of work to machines particularly designed for the peculiar operations, thereby utilizing machine equipment to its maximum by operating all tool heads simultaneously and resulting

No. 1 - Portable serving cabinet is placed at machine and in it the machine operator places finished cylinder cock bodies. When filled with these the cabinets are taken to the inspection department in increased production. The principle of utilizing all tools on the machine would not only apply to the operations as shown in the exhibits, but could be applied to almost any class of work being performed on the machine. By a careful study of the work assigned, correct tooling can be arranged to take advantage of the full capacity of the machine.

Exhibit 8 shows metal guards on boring machines. This principle can be applied to practically all boring machines, and will eliminate sweeping the cuttings from the floor and improve the appearance of the shop. Attention is also directed to the off-set tool holder on the left hand head which is arranged for facing off the driving box at the same time it is being bored. This practice is also adaptable to other classes of work but is particularly adapted to the box as shown.

Exhibit 9 shows metal cutting box for accumulating cuttings and borings and is a practical arrangement which can be applied in almost any shop. This arrangement provides a means for the operator of a machine to keep the surroundings of his machine free from cuttings. This is desirable from his standpoint in that he does not have to be walking around in the metal cuttings. It also eliminates the necessity of laborer sweeping up the cuttings from the floor. Containers are made to hold an even wheelbarrow load, emptied through a slide bottom and eliminating the extra handling.

Making Democrats of Princes

SEVERAL years ago the crown prince of Belgium, Leopold, went to his father, King Albert, and complained that the servants were calling him familiarly by his first name, "Leopold," instead of addressing him in the prescribed manner "Your Royal Highness."

Whereupon King Albert in the democratic spirit which has endeared him to people the world over, replied: "The servants have done this at my instruction. You have been impertinent to them. When you learn that courtesy is as becoming to a prince as it is to a servant, I will see that you are addressed in the prescribed fashion of "Your Royal Highness."

This interesting story was told me by a gentleman who lived in Belgium for a number of years and to whom it was told by King Albert himself and, I believe, it has never previously been published.

No. 6—Planer with four crossheads set up and four tool heads in operation. An example of proper utilization of facilities, using all tool heads, correct feeds and speeds, thereby operating the machine at maximum capacity. No. 7—Jig for holding two driving boxes on planer with two tool heads, which results in planing driving boxes in pairs. No. 8—Metal guard applied to boring machine which catches and guides the cuttings and borings into two pans which are located one on each side of the machine. As these pans are filled they are emptied by the operator or the laborer who may be cleaning up the shop into a large pan which is taken from the shop by a motor truck. No. 9—Metal cutting box in which cuttings are placed when removed from machine. The capacity of the box is a wheelbarrow load and is constructed with a slide bottom in order that the cuttings can be dumped into wheelbarrow, eliminating extra handling.

Want to Help Get Business? Magazine Correspondents Suggest Dozens of Interesting New Ways

(The Editor of the Magazine recently asked all correspondents to report on what they had done in the way of individual business solicitation for the Railroad. Almost all correspondents responded promptly, thus indicating that they are making an individual effort to do what they are asking all employes to do. Some of the stories appear here, and there will be more in the next issue. If you have a new business getting idea the Magazine will be glad if you will send it in and thus help put this big campaign across)

From Under Our Rivals' Guns

THE president of the Men's Bible class in my church is also the president of a large manufacturing concern in our city. I know him real well. Two years ago he was using a competing road for his weekly trips to New York, but my solicitation for the Baltimore and Ohio made him try our service. Since then he has been a regular passenger because his trial trip convinced him of the superiority of our service in dependability, comfort and in good meals at fair prices.

Last Sunday, however, he told me that he had decided to go back to the other road because he felt that having been a stockholder in that road for a number of years and not owning stock in our Road, he had not been a consistent supporter of his own investment.

That was a poser for me—it was such a reasonable excuse for his going back to our competitor's service. When I got to the office Monday morning, however, knowing the approximate time at which he would leave our city next morning, and that on this occasion his wife was going with him, I secured good reservations for two and then telephoned him what I had done. It took the wind out of his sails and he said "Send the tickets over."

Now I may not be able to hold his business in the same way from week to week, but I still have an opportunity to put myself on an equal footing with our competitor, at least. Who knows but that with a little solicitation on my part and with his knowledge of the value of an investment in a Railroad whose employes are trying to make it "the Best Railroad in the World in Point of Service," I may be able to persuade him that Baltimore and Ohio stock, in addition to Baltimore and Ohio tickets, would be a good buy for him?

Through the Newspapers

FOR years I have been a local correspondent of the Flora Journal Record, preparing regular copy for their railroad column. Most of the news consists of personals, but when I have a story which has real human interest in it and which illustrates a high point in railroad efficiency, my friend the editor is usually glad to have it.

Now it may be that the little paragraph which I ran in a recent issue setting forth the great record of the Capitol Limited up to January 1 (on time 450 out of 466 trips made), may not bring any direct returns to the Railroad. But I rather fancy that it may because many former residents of our city now live in Chicago and get the Journal Record and, of course, look over the notes about their old railroad friends. At least it can do no harm.

There are dozens, probably hundreds, of employes on the System who are more or less regular correspondents of their local papers. Railroading is an intensely human game, dealing, as it does, so largely with personalities, and all of the many good things that we can say about record performances of our engineers and other trainmen, and notable accomplishments in efficiency which are conducive to the public welfare and good service, are real bits of news which cannot but help reflect credit on the Railroad and its employes. Everybody knows the business value of a good reputation.

Local Business Depends on Railroad Prosperity

IT is interesting to note, especially in a typical railroad city like Newark, Ohio, how the prosperity of general business is conditioned on the prosperity of the railroad business. For instance, in our city the merchants are most prosperous when the railroad's forces are busiest. How natural, therefore, that the merchants should want the men of the railroad to be steadily employed.

Perhaps some of our merchants do not completely understand this, and, if it were brought to their attention, would see to it that the Baltimore and Ohio is given the long haul on all the products which they receive.

It seems to me that this question of mutual interest of merchants and business men in cities largely occupied by railroad employes can be advantageously emphasized by all of us in lining up traffic for our Railroad.

Local Merchants Like This

STORE windows are much in demand for all sorts of advertising material. And, of course, store owners are particular what goes in them. But I'll give you an illustration of how it can be done.

Last spring one of our local druggists wanted to make a summer "drive" on the sale of cameras and camera supplies for vacationists. I heard about it and got him to dress up his windows, not alone with cameras but with a good deal of the advertising data which the Baltimore and Ohio gets out, time tables, etc., as a background. Of course, there was a big, fine picture of The Capitol Limited as the main feature.

The combination was fine, for the vacation seeker, looking in the window, had the pleasures of photography attractively presented to him (which helped the storekeeper) and the camera lover got a real tip from our literature on where the prettiest pictures might be obtained, (which may have helped our ticket sales).

She Had the Telltale Stamp Made

I DO a little bookkeeping for a druggist in my town and he has promised to let us have some of his incoming shipments.

He also has agreed to permit me to use a rubber stamp requesting routing via the Baltimore and Ohio on all his orders.

I have had this made and on all his orders now appears in red ink:

BALTIMORE AND OHIO SERVICE IS BEST FOR ME. PLEASE ROUTE ALL ORDERS VIA THAT ROAD.

Exact Information

A GOOD salesman must know his line and an employee of a railroad who tries to sell freight or passenger service, even if he isn't a regular solicitor, should know something about our schedules.

Several years ago I tried to get a friend to use our line but the joke was on me when he asked me for exact information about the time of our trains and I did not know and a time table was not readily available. Thereafter I kept posted on this point and can now "tell the world." Why not carry the big blue time table with us always and find out something definite about our principal fast freight and Q. D. trains and the local freights in our own localities?

Hands Timetable to Worthwhile People

I AM employed one night a week as assistant receiving teller in a savings bank in our city, the officers of which are friendly to the Baltimore and Ohio. So when I asked them if I could put a condensed timetable and Capitol Limited leaflet in each pass book as I handed it back to the depositor, they readily agreed and I have been doing it for the last few weeks.

People who save money know a good thing when they see it and I'm sure that they will be impressed by the thoughtfulness which an employee is showing in advertising the service of his dependable Railroad.

Keeps Church People Informed

THINGS that can be done to stimulate interest in our road are suggested by the following: I place my copy of the MAGAZINE, after I have finished with it, in the reading room of my church in Washington, D. C. This will at least keep our road before the eyes of the people who frequent this room, and may cause some of them to ask questions regarding the "Best and Only."

December Magazine Won Five Carloads

WE have on our mailing list all traffic managers of the different industries in Youngstown territory to whom I have been sending a copy of the MAGAZINE. To show appreciation, one of the traffic men of the largest industry called on the 'phone and said he had just received a copy of our fine December MAGAZINE, the pictures of different people,

Get the Girls interested —

"The girls"—bless 'em. Watch for the story in next issue of the young woman clerk who has gotten sixteen carloads since last summer through friendship. The traffic manager says it would have gone by another road if it had not been for her the old and new station, being very interesting. I called his attention to the solicitation card and he said, "Yes, I saw it and have just given your line five carloads of unrouted business, which could have been routed via four other lines."

Mr. Brown, passenger representative, Cleveland, was in the office a short time ago. He had a lot of literature advertising Washington, Baltimore, California and Florida tours and left it with me. In addition to enclosing the literature in our regular mail, I also sent it to people I think might be interested in taking a trip. I think this is an excellent way to advertise the Baltimore and Ohio.

Also Tells the Story

I AM the treasurer of a building and loan association in our city and as such have the job of sending out the quarterly dividend checks. Now the folks who get these also get a copy of our condensed timetable (which they are likely to save if only because it has a calendar printed on it for convenient reference) and also a copy of The Capitol Limited leaflet. With these two pieces of advertising I enclose a card reading:

As an employee of the Baltimore and Ohio I want to recommend to you its dependable freight and passenger service. I will be glad to arrange to get accommodations for you on our trains and to give you full information about our freight service on request. My telephone number is

Carries Prospective Business Cards

LONG before the employees outside of the Traffic Department were appealed to through the MAGAZINE to act as individual solicitors of business for the Railroad, I had canvassed all my business friends in South Chicago. Through them I met others that I did not know, talked to them and even got promises of business. They said that they were instructing their shippers to route incoming business via the Baltimore and Ohio—which was really all I could ask.

I find that it is a good thing to have a supply of the prospective business cards with me. They give me a definite way of committing a shipper to sending at least some business over our lines.

Somewhere on the System

SOLICITING in spare time has enabled me to meet a lot of nice people. Last autumn I attended the local Farm Product Show and personally distributed about 500 pieces of literature describing our train service. Almost every night during the vacation season I frequent the lobbies of the local hotels and talk about the beauties of the "Blank" Caverns near here, to which we run special tours. For the past year I have made it a point to see that the racks in the hotels have a full supply of our timetables and passenger advertising folders, and whenever the opportunity offers I

A Foiled Plan

By

STRICKLAND GILLILAN

I had had a delicious breakfast, and had tightened my belt for lunch;
I wished to repeat a pleasure, so I followed a hungry hunch:

I ordered, from hotel waitress, the thing that had pleased at dawn—
A kopje of "bucks" and some sausage from succulent piggies drawn.

She brought what I asked and I sorrowed to see the mistake I'd made.
By bringing before my vision the terrors she there displayed.

The "bucks" were of Portland concrete, the sausage was powdered beef—
I grabbed up my check and departed to hide my display of grief.

I shouldn't have been so foolish as to think I could elsewhere get The "quality" food I'd taken to deaden my daybreak fret.

An attempt at duplication could bring but a weight of woe—
The breakfast I'd had that morning
I got on the "B.&O."

Motive Power

MY attention has been called to a sign posted in the Cumberland Locomotive Shop which reads:
"Every Dollar Saved Helps Give A Man Work."

If every employe of the Baltimore and Ohio would realize the full import of this statement, and keep it constantly in mind, many of them would undoubtedly make valuable suggestions for saving material, and increasing efficiency and production which would help us in working out plans for providing "more work for Baltimore and Ohio men."

In this connection I want to emphasize the fact that the Motive Power Department is solidly back of that Baltimore and Ohio slogan "Suggestions Are Always in Order."

FIGURE this out for yourself. In 1923 there were 1,900 Forms 940 made in the "Authority for Expenditure Bureau" of the Engineering Department, ten copies of each required, each averaging five pages and blueprint. Under I. C. C. rules, an A. F. E. (Form 940) must be issued for all changes in capital account involving $100 or more, and these must be registered in consecutive order on prescribed forms. Most of the above A. F. E.'s were for additions or betterments, and the number issued is an index of the improvements made to the Company's facilities during the past year.

WHEN the drive was recently started to increase car mileage, about the same time another drive was inaugurated to improve the performance and eliminate delays to Quick Dispatch freight.

Trains 94 and 97 are classified and re-switched at Brunswick, and given "A" inspection, which results in the shopping of an average of from 25 to 30 cars daily.

In the early part of July 1923, General Foreman M. E. Mullen, General Car Foreman Bissett and Assistant Car Foreman J. M. O'Conner, at Brunswick, conceived the idea that they could repair and replace in the same connections, the "QD" loads cut out of train 94. On July 9, after perfecting their plans, they arranged to put this into effect, and from July 9, 1923 to January 17, 1924, there were shopped out, repaired and forwarded in the same trains—3201 "QD" loads.

Finding this arrangement worked successfully on Trains 94 in the Eastbound Yard, they arranged to handle cars cut out of Trains 97 in the same manner. This was put into effect November 13, 1923, and up to and including January 17, 1924, they repaired and dispatched in same trains—1148 "QD" loads, making a grand total of 4349 "QD" loads so handled. In some instances wheels and arch bars were applied in 15 minutes.

This resulted in the consignees receiving their shipments 24 hours sooner than formerly, increased the car mileage and car supply.

All Railroad A Message to the Employees of the Baltimore & Ohio ~~Chicago~~ ~~Terminal Railroad Company~~

By H. M. JOUVER

General Freight and Passenger Agent, Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Railroad

Mr. Jouver addressed the following to the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal, but we felt that the suggestions and examples given were so well worth passing on that we have changed the salutation, as above, to include all employees on the System—Ed.

PAGES 12 and 13 of our Magazine for December contained an appeal to the entire personnel of the System to solicit freight and passenger traffic, and I wish to emphasize this appeal as it applies to the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Railroad Company. Getting business for the Railroad is a privilege. It is also a duty to our associates and ourselves, for has it not already been said that there is hardly an employee of the Baltimore and Ohio System, who, if shown how, by the exercise of a little effort on his or her own part, could create enough business to keep a fellow employee—even of another department or at another point on the Railroad—on full time instead of part time, but would be glad to do so.

It is comparatively easy to sell when you have a good commodity.

Our commodity is TRANSPORTATION, and when it is trade marked "VIA BALTIMORE AND OHIO," it is readily saleable because it is absolutely DEPENDABLE. It gives you a confidence in it that will make solicitation a pleasant and profitable diversion from your usual duties.

One employee asks, "How can we help the BALTIMORE AND OHIO secure NEW BUSINESS?"

Another asks, "How can we make the SERVICE better?"

Still another says, "How can we retain and build up the traffic we already have?"

These questions are not hard—they are completely answered by the one word—"COOPERATION."

To secure NEW BUSINESS, any Railroad, or as a matter of fact any line of industry, must handle its present business satisfactorily, and this can never be accomplished unless all pull the same way. To make SERVICE better, we must take a personal interest in the cars or passengers that move over OUR RAILROAD. Unless dependable service is rendered, we cannot reasonably expect a continuance of patronage. In order to obtain a "repeat" order, it is necessary to keep the "trial order" moving swiftly and safely.

And these important factors are all dependent on the COOPERATION extended by the Car Order Clerk, Billing Clerk, Yard Clerk, Switch-tender and Train Crews, in fact, by all the employees on the Railroad. Unless all of us realize our part in the service, we will be unable to secure NEW BUSINESS, make SERVICE better, or dependably handle the business now entrusted to our care.

That the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Railroad have already responded very generously is evidenced by the following examples of COOPERATION which have come to the attention of the Traffic Department within the last few days:

Cooperation of Yardmaster—Repair Track Forces and Others

Car of lard intended for export to Germany and movement in train "Ninety-Eight" was held out at East Chicago account bad order. Furthermore, it was found necessary to transfer lading. The sailing date was close at hand and upon explaining the situation to the yardmaster, he offered to advance the time of his daily trip to South Chicago Yards, where transfer was to be made. This was accomplished, with the result that contents of car were transferred same day, the car moving east same night in train No. 94 from South Chicago at 7.39 P. M.

NOTE: Although, entire contents of car had to be transferred, practically no time was lost. These men all practice "C-O-O-P-E-R-A-T-I-O-N in capital letters.

Cooperation between Car Order Clerks, Switching Crews and Yardmaster

(This is the "Capitol Limited" of switching service.)

An industry in our Homan Avenue District ordered at 11.00 A. M. a box car for rush movement to New York City. Car order clerk conferred with yardmaster. Yardmaster with switching crew placed car for loading 1.00 P. M.—car loaded—pulled out of industry 3.00 P. M.—moved three miles to 12th Street, delivered Baltimore and Ohio 5.40 P. M., moving east in Train No. 94, 6.30 P. M. same night. SERVICE!

The following is indicative of the valuable information that is being telephoned this office by our associates "outside." (These calls were made while this message was being written.)

Assistant Train Master's Clerk: "Car you expected would be delivered late tonight by C. & A. for Baltimore and Ohio Train No. 94 tomorrow night, has just been set out at Brighton Park. Now 3.30 P. M. Have informed yardmaster and he will have car picked up shortly. Will deliver in time for (94) tonight."

Clerk in General Auditor's Office: "Mr. and Mrs. Brown, friends of mine, making trip to Washington. Talked to them about our "Capitol Limited." They will travel via Baltimore and Ohio.

These employees would not have gone to the trouble that they did, if they were afflicted with the indifference that is sometimes attributed to the "servants of the public." These instances of co-operation clearly indicate that our employees are loyally assisting the Traffic Department by giving the personal help which makes the Baltimore and Ohio System dependable, and just so long as the Business-go-getters of the Operating and other departments continue to display this interest in their work and in their Company, just so long will the Traffic Department be enabled to approach with confidence the "prospects" for Transportation.

We of the Traffic Department realize only too well our ineffectiveness unless we secure the wholehearted support of "those down the line" in "the yard" and on the "footboard." So far we have reason to be proud of the friendships we have made and we feel sure that this spirit of cooperation extended during the past year will be magnified this year in the interest of the Baltimore and Ohio and ourselves. Your wholehearted cooperation is therefore earnestly solicited.

Traffic Solicitation

By GEORGE S. HARLAN, General Freight Agent

This entry was awarded second place in the contest on Traffic Solicitation, concluded in December

BEFORE any undertaking can be carried on successfully it must be thoroughly understood and appreciated in all of its ramifications.

First of all, then, what is "solicitation?"

Our dictionary says it is: "An earnest request in order to obtain something desired."

It is all of that, and certainly much more when the term is applied to the securing of freight or passenger traffic for a railroad, and the necessary qualifications for the most successful exercise of this highly necessary function of railroading today are not found in every man.

First of all, that something which for want of a better word we will call "personality" enters perhaps more largely than anything else into the equation, for if a man be not personally agreeable to transact business with, no one is glad to see him, and some will not even receive him: hence at the outset the opportunity to present his proposition, let alone press it to a favorable conclusion, is greatly curtailed, if indeed not entirely lost.

Perhaps the chief requisites of a pleasing personality are a sound mind in a sound body; these demand cleanliness, and from them, naturally, springs cheerfulness, whose hall-mark is a happy smile. Add to these knowledge and industry, and you have the best foundation upon which to build.

The fortunate man who possesses these qualifications has made, and will continue to make, many friends in every walk of life—real friends, good wishers who want to see him prosper, and it is to these he must largely turn for his successes. He will make the great majority of men with whom he comes in contact his personal friends, cultivating them accordingly, and one of the best ways to accomplish this is to be with them during their "off hours"—their play time.

There are so many angles to solicitation that it is safe to say that but few consecutive instances can be handled exactly alike, possibly because no two human beings were ever created exactly alike.

One of the most important factors in successful solicitation is as thorough a working knowledge of the resources of your Company as it is possible for you to secure, together with the ability to use them quickly to the best advantage of the Company, and to the greatest satisfaction of the patron.

Next important is the most intimate knowledge you can obtain of the patron's business—the sources of his inbound supplies of all kinds; their nature; his handling of them at his plant—and his methods of marketing his output, as well as the location of the markets themselves.

This portion of the solicitation field presents almost unlimited possibilities, bounded, possibly, only by your own energy and resourcefulness.

Learn early the full meaning of the word "SERVICE," which covers everything in connection with a railroad's relations with a patron and his business—for it controls more traffic than anything else—far more than half that which moves each day. And by that is meant that by far the largest proportion of a railroad's earnings is derived from business that is not specifically solicited each day. It would be impossible to do so. It is either held to a road or diverted from it according to whether service, in all that the name implies, is rendered. Therefore, there can be no such thing as "fair service," "poor service," or "bad service." They are FAILURE, pure and simple. Solicitors are an integral part of SERVICE. Try, then, to make your part so complete in every detail that you and your Company will be the first thought to spring to the mind of any one who wants to ship freight, or to travel.

Be honest. Absolute loyalty to your Company demands this. Don't put them in wrong with their patrons. Be careful never to promise anything impossible or even doubtful of performance. Remember the old adage, still true today: "A liar is seldom believed though he may sometimes speak the truth." Your own personal effort is all you can safely promise—and that you should promise, and give, without reservation. For the rest, state clearly and concisely what can be reasonably expected, but don't promise it without reservation.

TAKING A WHEEL OFF THE RAILROADS TO MEND THE FARM WAGON WON'T HELP MUCH IN THE LONG RUN

Be courteous always to all men, big or little. No investment requires so small an outlay, and often none yields such large returns, frequently when and where least expected and at moments most appreciated.

Co-operate heartily with all departments of the Company for the one big interest—especially with those men in the Operating Department who are immediately associated with you in your daily work. You and they, working closely together, form a team that is a hard combination to beat. Consult freely with them, and frequently; learn what has happened, and what may reasonably be expected to happen from their standpoint. A thorough understanding of this kind will often get you far better results quickly, and many times save needless trouble both to you and the patron.

Don't worry. It can only result in wrinkles and bad health, neither of which, to say the least, is an asset in solicitation.

Don't chase rainbows. Your time is too valuable to the Company. If a certain line of traffic is absolutely unobtainable, and you have made positively sure that it is, go hard after something else that you have a chance of getting to take the place of it—and get twice as much of it. This is a great healer, and will help you a lot.

Remember always, results count—not dreams.

Be persevering, but not to the extent of causing irritation by constantly asking for something that has been (and possibly for good reasons) refused. Continue to call so as to be in touch in case your services are needed, but never permit any resentment to show if they are not availed of. Your competitor is not perfect. The day may come sooner than you think when you will be "wanted."

Never lose your temper no matter what the provocation. There is perhaps no more pitiful sign of personal weakness and it seldom fails to cause loss of respect on the part of the other fellow. Besides, his personal money is often involved in any controversy he may have with a railroad. Yours is not; you may simply have failed to render what you led him to believe when you solicited his business you would give, i. e., satisfaction. Try putting yourself in his place. Suppose it was your real money, your lost business opportunity—your inconvenience—wouldn't it look different? Always give him what you would want under the same circumstances—a square deal.

Never knock a competitor. It has never paid yet, in the long run and never will.

If you don't believe all of this, read "A Message to Garcia;" it will show you the real idea. Then read "That Something;" it will supply the key.

Last, now, but not by any manner of means least,—Don't wish you were a "GO-GETTER"—BE ONE.

Note:

All puzzles published in this department will be defined, as far as possible, from the New Standard Dictionary, edition of 1920. It is permissible to use both geographical and biographical words in the construction of puzzles, but when such words are taken from any authority other than the New Standard Dictionary, the name of such authority must be stated at the end of the definition, in parenthesis. Obsolete words will be marked at the end of the definition thus—"obs". Variant spellings of a word must be marked at the end of the definition thus—"var". Address all communications concerning this department to G. H. Pryor, Room 800, Baltimore and Ohio Building, Baltimore, Maryland, and mark the envelope "Puzzles."

The printer muffed one in the December issue. Puzzle No. 19 he made read "BOOM THE R I M RAILROAD," and it should have been "BOOM THE R I N RAILROAD," but our solvers are getting pretty wise and about fifty of them called my attention to the error but said it had not prevented them from working out the correct solution. Setting up a puzzle column in printer's type is no easy task and considering all the possibilities for errors I think our printer's batting average is mighty good up to date.

Mrs. Brown Gets the Business

By MARGARET TALBOTT STEVENS

The story of a remarkable Baltimore and Ohio woman who helps her husband in his work for two big reasons: for the joy that she gets out of it herself and for the joy that it gives her husband. Read it!

"WELL, 'Billy,' how's The Capitol Limited today?"

This was the greeting of Mrs. W. G. Brown, wife of our general passenger agent, Chicago, to her husband on the evening of November 8 as we started out to the lecture. What lecture? Why, none other than a lecture on Washington, given by that adaptable little woman, Mrs. Brown herself, who finds the time not only to take care of her house and her two lovely children, to do the family sewing and to prepare the meals, but to help her husband in his passenger solicitation.

For a long time we have been trying to get a good story of how the wife of a railroad man could help him in his work. Then we heard of Mrs. Brown, and it didn't take us long to get out to Chicago to learn more about her and the splendid things that she is doing. Then it was that we decided to fool her. Did we succeed? Listen!

"Mrs. Brown does not know that you are coming," said the G. P. A. to me as soon as I arrived, "and perhaps it is just as well. She might be a little nervous about putting over the lecture, or a bit uneasy if she knew that you might be taking notes on her talk. So we've decided not to tell her until the lecture is over. My secretary will drive us out. You are supposed to be his friend pro tem. You have known him for a long time, all about his car, about his family and everything. We shall introduce you to Mrs. Brown as 'Miss Talbott.' She will never suspect that you are from Baltimore."

And so it was arranged. The joke passed off beautifully. As Miss Talbott, I told Mrs. Brown of my home in Ohio; of how I went out in Mr. Firman's car on Friday evenings during my stay in Chicago; of Superintendent Kruse and "our office force" at Newark (for I had to be a railroader in order to know Mr. Brown). It was great fun.

Mrs. Brown was in high spirits. She talked about Washington and about The Capitol Limited, about Baltimore and Ohio women, and about Mr. Brown's work. She laughingly referred to herself as "the lecturer" and asked her husband if he would bet her a new gown that she wouldn't get any business on that evening for the Washington Tours. But the G. P. A. didn't bet.

We arrived at the Hamilton Park Women's Club along with about 300 others. Mrs. Brown's lecture was to be the feature of the evening. With all due respect for this little lady's personality, I was not looking forward to such a thrilling lecture. Why, I've been sightseeing in Washington many a time, and, of course, what she said would be nothing new for me. So I seated myself and prepared to listen in order to get the story.

The meeting was called to order by the president, who introduced Mrs. Brown. As I remember, I do not believe that Mrs. Brown's name was even mentioned. The president merely stated that, through the courtesy of Mr. Brown, general passenger agent of the Baltimore and Ohio, this lecture was being presented before the Hamilton Women's Club. Mrs. Brown stepped to the platform.

Immediately there was flashed upon the screen the picture of a magnificent engine and a fine looking train.

"Why," I exclaimed to myself, sitting up straight in my chair, "that's the——!"

"Here's our train all ready for us," began Mrs. Brown in a clear, pleasant voice, "and I am sure that if we were going to Washington today we would take the famous Capitol Limited."

It was The Capitol Limited, then!

Then followed in quick succession—no long waiting, mind you, as is frequently necessary in other lectures—a lot of lovely pictures. There was a scene along the winding Youghiogheny, others around Pittsburgh and Cumberland; the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and some fine ones of Harpers Ferry, following in sequence as we would see them on a journey from Chicago to the Nation's Capitol.

"And now," went on Mrs. Brown, "we find ourselves at Union Station." Here a magnificent picture of Union Station was shown, while the speaker told of the unusual features in connection with Union Station.

From that time on the story was told in a manner that was delightfully feminine. All of the things that might appeal to women were brought out in an interesting manner. The pictures, all colored, were handled rapidly and efficiently by Erwin Rasher, correspondence clerk in Mr. Brown's office. Stanley Nelson, another young man in the same office, alternates with Mr. Rasher in showing them. Prominent buildings of Washington were shown, inside and outside. Social affairs at the Capitol and the White House were discussed, even a conjecture as to whether or not Mrs. Coolidge will wear gloves as often as Mrs. Harding did. "For," went on the speaker,

"of course, whatever Mrs. Coolidge does, the other ladies of Washington will do. It's just like keeping up with the Joneses!"

The comments occasionally heard in the audience were interesting.

"It was a hard job for President Harding to shake hands with so many people," said Mrs. Brown, "but I really believe that he enjoyed it. I am sure that every time that I happened to be there at a reception he seemed to be enjoying it."

"Humph!" grunted a gentleman behind me, "who wouldn't be happy when you were there?"

"I am not a speaker," declared Mrs. Brown when she took her place on the platform, "my husband says that I am just a talker."

"And she's a mighty good talker at that," declared a woman at my left.

"Darned good," agreed her husband.

Nothing in Washington was forgotten, not even the Zoo. The home of Ex-President Woodrow Wilson commanded as much attention from the clubwomen as did the home of the League of Women Voters.

The lecture was more than an hour long, delightfully interesting from beginning to end. As she stepped from the platform Mrs. Brown found herself the center of an admiring group. Cards, bearing information concerning Mrs. Brown's address and information concerning the Washington Tours, had been distributed. One woman came forward with one of these in her hands.

"Will you make a reservation for me for the April Tour?" she asked Mrs. Brown. "And will next week be time enough for the ten dollars for the reservation?"

"Goodby to my new gown!" thought Mrs. Brown, but "Yes, indeed, I am so glad that you are going," she declared to the good woman.

"There, Daddy," she said, turning to Mr. Brown, "am I not a good little business getter?"

"You are!" declared the G. P. A., his eyes shining with pride of her, "You are wonderful!"

"Then," declared the little lady, "it's a wonder that you wouldn't introduce me to Miss Stevens!"

"Wha-a-a-t!" we all gasped, "And how did you know?"

"Ha, ha, Daddy, you thought you'd fool me, didn't you? Well, any time that you fool 'Miss B. and O. Brown' you'll have to get up early in the morning! It can't be did!"

And we agreed with her.

"Miss B. and O. Brown," as Mrs. Brown is known among her Chicago friends, is one of the greatest boosters that the Baltimore and Ohio has. Lecturing is only one of her self-imposed jobs. True, she has prepared this lecture for women's clubs, and she already has more than fifty engagements to give it within the next two months to women's clubs and church congregations of Chicago. But besides all this, she gets business for the Baltimore and Ohio by telephone, on the street when she meets her many acquaintances, on trains, and wherever she happens to be. And all of it is done for the joy that it gives her husband to have her help him.

"Why, 'Billy' almost 'busts' when I get new business for him," she declared. "And each lecture engagement brings another. I got two new ones this evening. It is true that I love the work, but the greatest possible joy that I get out of it is the happiness that it brings to 'Billy.' You can't get interested in anything unless you love it and unless you love the force that impels you to do it.

"Every person I meet looks like a Baltimore and Ohio ticket to me, and if a person is not already a patron of our Road, I convert him into one.

"Working with your husband creates a bond of fellowship which outlasts everything; I've no doubt but that it would even outlast love. This might be a panacea for divorce."

Mrs. Brown is interested in nothing that does not count for something worth while. And her idea of something worth while is Baltimore and Ohio business.

From the evening and Sunday papers she compiles mailing lists. For example:

"Mr. and Mrs. Parker Jones announce the marriage of their daughter Alice Eugenie to Mr. Arthur Jenkins Smythe. The wedding will take place in June at their home, Richmond Manor."

Now what can Mrs. Brown do with this? Well, first of all, there are the names of four people, with the addresses of three.

These go down on her list. Then Mr. Arthur Jenkins Smythe's address is found in the telephone directory. These are people who later may receive Baltimore and Ohio literature. But that is not all. Mrs. Brown gets out her typewriter and sits down to write the little bride-to-be a personal letter. If she happens to know her, so much the better; if not, the letter takes on this form.

My dear Miss Jones:

Shortly before I was married I had quite a problem on my hands. My fiancé and I could not decide where to go for a honeymoon. I am wondering if you might have this same question confronting you. If you have, perhaps I can be of service to you.

Have you ever made that lovely trip to Washington, D. C. on the Baltimore and Ohio's new Capitol Limited?

And so on.

What is the result of such a letter? Watch out for the number of newlyweds who take the Capitol Limited out of Chicago! And if you see, amid the old shoes and confetti, a well-dressed little dark-haired woman bearing a bouquet for the little bride, why that's Mrs. William Gary Brown, wife of the G. P. A. at Chicago.

I wondered if Mrs. Brown went in for any kind of sports, or what recreation she took.

"Don't you even play bridge?" I asked her.

"Oh, yes," she replied; then mischievously winking her eye she added, "I always play bridge when I'm sure of meeting some Baltimore and Ohio prospects."

"And you manage your household and do your own sewing?"

She nodded:

"Even to making 'Billy's' shirts."

"But how do you know so much about selling transportation? How did you happen to get into this business of passenger solicitation?"

"I was a business woman before I was married," she declared archly, "and now I'm 'Billy's' wife. That explains it all nicely, I am sure."

"And now, will you help me gather up all of these left-over cards?" she asked, starting at one end of a long row of seats.

"Certainly," I replied, wonderingly adding, "And what shall you do with these?"

"Humph! I'll use them again next time. Can't you see that I'm stopping the leak?"

Lorain Stopped Costly Leaks during 1923

By F. W. HARMON, Timekeeper

HERE is how a leak was stopped at the coal loading machine, known as Number 2, at Lorain, Ohio. In operating this machine the loaded car has to pass over a spring switch and make a return to the machine, the switch frequently causing derailments. If the car did not clear the switch it would return on two tracks and cause a derailment. This would delay the machine from three to five hours to retrack if it was at night and the wreck crew had to be called. This meant a loss in loading time and labor of from 60 to 100 cars.

Mr. Taylor, general foreman of docks, and Mr. Waitt, assistant general foreman, first put a man there to throw this switch when he saw that a car would not clear and that it would run out the same way it had come in. But as time went on, we still had derailments and loss of time as usual.

Mr. Taylor then decided to have an electric switch put in, took up the question with the division engineer, and showed him where he could "stop a leak" in doing away with three men, one man on each shift. At 60 cents per hour, or $374.46 per month, working eight months out of the year this would save $2995.20 and would increase capacity of this machine from three to four cars per hour. The change was made at the cost of only $400, thus saving heavy labor and delay costs and damage to track and cars. The new switch was worked during this season without a derailment at this point, unloading 75,700 cars of coal, 800,000 more tons of coal than was ever unloaded at this point before. This switch was electrically thrown twice to every car, making 151,400 times.

Mr. Taylor is very proud to think that he was able to stop the leak satisfactorily.

This is only one leak stopped. There are others. One of our machine operators, George Kendeigh, told Mr. Taylor that there were many knuckle pins going over the side of the pan and into the river on a certain series of cars commencing No. 238500 and coke rack series No. 134000, as they were being turned upside down for dumping. A steel basket was promptly erected to catch these pins, and to the surprise of all, in a few days 15 pins were found in this basket. These otherwise would have fallen into the river and been lost. It is safe to say that we have caught 10 to 15 pins per week, not an inconsiderable item at their cost of about 35 cents apiece.

General Foreman Taylor also has his car riders pick up truck springs that fall from cars as they are being dumped, and throw them off at the table before the next car is dumped; otherwise they would go directly into the boat and be a total loss to the Railroad. Incidentally they are worth about a dollar apiece.

Air cocks which lie on the tops of coal cars are also being thrown off and saved instead of being permitted to fall into the boat and lost. Another considerable saving.

Mr. Taylor thinks that the damage to cars handled at this point this year does not exceed $500 from careless handling, as he has had only one complaint this season concerning damaged cars.

The "5093"—Pride of Washington, Indiana

By C. H. CREAGER, Road Foreman of Engines

THE accompanying photograph shows the "Pride of Washington, Indiana."

Engine 5093 was assigned to Trains 2 and 23 on May 28 last, and operates on the west end of the St. Louis Division. Since that date she has not operated these runs on 31 days, for various reasons, but excepting these days she has brought No. 2 to Washington on time except on four occasions, when the delay was respectively seven, sixteen, seven and twelve minutes.

THE PRIDE OF THE ST. LOUIS DIVISION

Here is Engine 5093 which runs between Washington, Ind. and St. Louis, on No. 2 and No. 23. This is the cleanest looking engine running into the St. Louis Terminal. The entire front parts of the boiler and the smoke stack are bronzed, as are also the braces on the pilot. The Baltimore and Ohio "Safety First" emblem has been put on the cylinder heads. The rest of the engine is kept highly polished at all times. This engine is the pride of the Cone Round House and of the engineer and fireman who run on it. Those in the picture, reading from left to right, are: Assistant Road Foreman of Engines B. A. Tharp, Fireman J. H. Williams, Engineer F. H. List, General Foreman I. L. Harper. The picture was sent in by Engineer List

Assistant to Purchasing Agent D. A. Williams
On January 21, Mr. Williams celebrated his 40th year of service with the Baltimore and Ohio. He first entered service at Newark, Ohio, as storekeeper on January 21, 1884.

On the westbound trip, 166 miles, only two stops are made, 3 hours 52 minutes being the scheduled time. Eastbound, two station stops are made and side track taken for No. 1, the scheduled time being 3 hours 45 minutes. The trains consist of six to nine cars, and our people at Washington say that when Engine 5093 is on the train it can always be counted on to be on schedule time. (Record from May 28—November 1.)

Two crews operate engine 5093, Engineer List and Fireman Williams, Engineer Mischler and Fireman Lockhart, the latter being also an extra engineer.

Engineer List, Fireman Williams and General Foreman Harper of East St. Louis deserve credit for the manner in which this engine is decorated. Fireman Williams spends most of his lay over period at East St. Louis in cleaning his engine. The crew leaves Washington at 4.01 a. m. and returns at 4.18 p. m., working every other day.

"Rickety Dan" and "Blondie" are very proud of "their" engine and with the record they have made there is every reason why they should be. Although the crew running opposite these men did not originate the idea of cleaning up Engine 5093 they are equally careful in keeping it clean and in good condition.

Thirty Years of Friendly Service to Credit of Dr. Edward H. Mathers

WE HEARD a radio lecture recently, the subject of which was "Fellowship in Business." The speaker emphasized the idea that "personality" is an indispensable requisite for success.

We who conduct the varied activities of a public service corporation have need to cultivate that fellowship which means mutual understanding and cooperation.

No institution can or will be prosperous where selfishness and jealousy are rampant among those to whom its administration is entrusted.

Although personality is an expressive term, and is an attribute which we instantly recognize in others, its characteristics defy that clear definition or classification which would enable those who seek its cultivation to follow or imitate an established standard.

Personality is that intangible power by which a person influences the actions or opinions of others; and a winning personality is not only an asset of great value to its possessor, but likewise extends its beneficent influence over all who come within its range.

There is a man of this calibre in the service at Baltimore who will need no introduction to many of the Company's employees—we refer to Dr. Edward H. Mathers, medical examiner, Relief Department. He has been in the service since 1893, and during that period of 30 years has been stationed at Newark, Ohio; Cumberland, Md.; Cleveland, Ohio; Washington, D. C.; and Baltimore, Md. He was born on April 18, 1866, and is a big man, both physically and as one who loves his fellow men. His interest in the welfare of the employees of our Company is constantly and strikingly demonstrated by his voluntary efforts to assist disabled members; to help them secure places in the service suitable to their diminished earning capacity, and generally to help a man who cannot help himself. We publish his photograph so that the entire Baltimore and Ohio family may know a man whose winning personality contributes so much to that fellowship in business which makes for efficient service and success.

And the Siding Was Christened "Christy"

OPERATOR J. P. Christy, Tontogany, Ohio, has been honored. No doubt but that during his life, which includes 25 years of faithful service with the Baltimore and Ohio, Operator Christy has had babies named for him. In a mining country it is no unusual thing to have mines called by your name, but to have a real, honest-to-goodness railroad siding named for you means that somebody thinks you're worthy of your name and that your name is worthy of a siding. So there!

The siding, or passing track, is midway on what is known as the Bowling Green Section of the Baltimore and Ohio, near Tontogany, Ohio. The naming of the siding became effective on September 20, the day when Operator Christy says he became "the happiest man in the state of Ohio."

"My heart is filled with emotions of gratitude," Mr. Christy wrote President Willard, "for your naming the siding 'Christy.' The boys are congratulating me from every quarter. We know that it would be a tribute that any official would be proud of. My wife and daughter Alvira join me in thanking you for it. It is really more than we could ever expect. It surely makes me happy."

The Toledo News Bee of that date carried an interesting item in connection with the naming of the siding, in which it called the act "a monument to the services of one of the veteran employees." Mr. Christy himself says he considers it greater than any headline carved in marble or in brass.

Mr. Christy came into the service of the Baltimore and Ohio as operator, Toledo Division, on September 14, 1898. He has held this position ever since. "Jack" Christy, as he is popularly known, besides being a good operator, is quite a historian and finds many things of interest in his section of the country.

"The Baltimore and Ohio is the only steam railroad that traverses historic Fort Meigs," writes Mr. Christy. "The fort is located on the eastern bank of the beautiful Maumee River, just south of Perrysburg, opposite Maumee City. The victory won there in 1813 by General William Henry Harrison, defending the post against the combined armies of the British and the Indians, retrieved the great Northwest Territory, lost by the surrender of General Hull's army at Detroit. This signal victory put into the Presidential Chair Presidents Adams, Jackson and Harrison.

"The state of Ohio has erected an obelisk 90 feet high, which can be seen plainly by the passing Baltimore and Ohio trains. Other monuments are being erected there by several states. The next station will be Hull Prairie, a station just north of Haskins, where General Hull, of the American Army, camped on his march to Detroit. There also will a fitting tablet be erected.

"The Rosteloo Rock, where 'Mad Anthony' Wayne formed his war plans, is now located in the Maumee River. Less than a mile west of Tontogany is where General Custer made his home. There also is the Green-Camp Trail, blazed by Generals Green and Camp from Findlay to Otsego.

"The writer predicts that the section of the country between Fort Meigs and

The Rebuilding and Repairing of Locomotives

What is a Back Shop? Why Are Apprentices?
A Peep Into the Operations at Glenwood

By EDRIC C. GREAVES, Secretary to District Master Mechanic

OFTENTIMES we hear that a locomotive is in the Back Shop, and the question is often asked by those who are not in the Motive Power Department as to just what is meant by the term "Back Shop." In former years, when a roundhouse was erected, it was customary to construct an adjoining building, where classified or extra heavy running repairs to a locomotive were made—in other words, repairs that consumed a considerable length of time. In contrast the repairs made in the roundhouses were of an emergency nature or what are known today as "Running Repairs."

There are three large locomotive back shops on the Eastern Lines of the Baltimore and Ohio, which are conducted independently of the roundhouse, viz.: Mt. Clare, Glenwood and Cumberland, where a large percentage of the Railroad's classified and extra heavy running repairs to locomotives, as well as conversion work, is performed. By classified repairs is meant renewal of boilers, fireboxes, side sheets, flue sheets, flues, tires, cylinders, superheater units, arch tubes, etc. By conversion work is meant the application of new and standard parts, changing the locomotive from one type to another; as in the case of locomotive 1003, which was converted from the consolidated freight type to a switching locomotive and about which an article appeared in the November issue of the MAGAZINE.

Coordinating Work

To successfully and economically operate these shops, it is necessary that the work be systematized and that the forces be divided into different units. Therefore, in order to prevent delays and loss of time, due to waiting for parts, etc., each unit is required to function with the other; i. e., each unit endeavors to complete that portion of the work assigned to it on the scheduled date in order to avoid interfering with that portion of work assigned to other units. All of this is figured out on a shop schedule system, and from this schedule each unit is supplied with information daily as to the progress being made.

Accompanying this article is a photograph of some of the apprentices, who are being trained in the Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop to become journeymen in the different crafts or trades. These young men were required to pass the Company's physical and mental examination before their applications were accepted. Reading from left to right in the picture are, top row: Apprentice Instructor George Hiller; Machinist Apprentices John Moeschler, M. J. Mulligan, Emmet Campbell, W. Kelly, J. Toth, A. Sullivan, Ed. Campbell, H. Rothranff, Oceloa Paxton.

Middle Row: Machinist Apprentices J. Jasko, Chas. Schuster, Ed. Doyle, John Kline, Joe Courcey, Ed. Kline, A. Kunkle, A. Gotch.

Bottom Row: Machinist Apprentices J. Lanase, H. Blair, J. Gannon, W. Murphy, T. Jenkins, F. Gotch.

The term of a first-class apprentice is four years, comprising 290 days each year, during which time an apprentice is required to carry out a schedule of work, which is specially prepared each month. For example, the following is a schedule to be followed by a first-class machinist apprentice:

	MONTHS
Drill Press.....	1
Nut facer.....	1
Mud plug lathe.....	1
Bolt lathe.....	3
Reverse lever bench.....	2
Link bench.....	2
Valve bench.....	2
Crosshead bench.....	2
Piston grinder.....	2
Brake gang (Erecting Shop).....	2
Valve gang (Erecting Shop).....	4
Shoe and wedge gang.....	3
Steam gauge.....	4
Planer.....	2
Boring mill.....	2
Slotter.....	2
Shaper.....	2
Air Shop.....	3
Millwright gang.....	2
Tool room.....	4
Heavy lathe.....	2
Total.....	48

In connection with this schedule, our Shop Efficiency Bureau, with the idea that the future mechanics, supervisors and officers on whom will depend the carrying on of the great work of successfully and economically operating the Mechanical Department of our wonderful railroad system, are the young men now serving their apprenticeships and those who will enter the service in the future, are devoting a great deal of time and study toward promoting the efficiency of these young men to a high standard of economic and productive ability.

GLENWOOD LOCOMOTIVE BACK SHOP APPRENTICES

The Bureau fully realized that to accomplish this would require close and constant observation on the part of the apprentices; fulfillment of the schedule, which has been prepared in a systematic manner; obtaining the maximum amount of knowledge of the different machines and classes of work, this to include the proper maintenance of machines, grinding tools for different kinds of material, knowledge of when and where to increase or decrease speed and feed of machines, etc. In line with these suggestions from the Shop Efficiency Bureau, the apprentices in Glenwood shops have a competent instructor, who supervises their work and aids them in every possible manner.

An apprentice is paid on a sliding scale; i. e., he receives an increase in compensation every six months. At the end of his term, viz., four years, he is given a diploma signed by the officials of the Baltimore and Ohio, and receives first consideration for any vacancy which may be open in his line of work.

The great advantages of learning a trade in the modern and well equipped shops of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad need not be dwelt upon here, but it is of interest to know that nearly all of the Company's officials, both executive and supervisory, first entered the service of the Company as apprentices, in fact—if not in name.

We will endeavor in future issues of the MAGAZINE to outline the relations of the different units in Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop and the manner in which these different units function.

Furness Withy Line Handles Heavy Foreign Trade over Locust Point Piers

By J. ROSS GOULD, Magazine Correspondent

FOLLOWING out our idea of getting our readers acquainted with the great interests that are using the facilities of the Baltimore and Ohio at Locust Point, we present here a picture of the steamship "Manchester Merchant," Furness Withy Line, which docks regularly at this terminal. We also quote verbatim from letter of the Baltimore manager of this line to the writer, giving a brief synopsis of the birth and growth of this line at this port, as follows:

"During the years 1880 and 1890 there were docking at Locust Point Terminals the Johnston Line from Liverpool and Neptune Line from Rotterdam. Robert B. Ways was foreign freight agent of the Baltimore and Ohio, and through his efforts, in cooperation with the agents of the lines named above, the import business grew rapidly.

"Early in 1900 Furness Withy & Co., Ltd., secured control of the Johnston and Neptune Lines of steamers, and they now have steamers plying between Baltimore and all parts of the world, but especially to and from England, Sweden, Norway and Holland. During the past eleven months Furness Withy & Co., Ltd., have had 70 steamers dock at Locust Point Terminals, discharging 77,995 tons of freight.

Many of our people are unaware of the customs laws which require that when import tonnage is discharged on a pier for delivery to the importer no one can remove it without first procuring a permit from the Government. In order to secure a permit each importer, or his agent, must present to the Collector of Customs an original bill of lading and invoice of contents of each case or package certified to by the American Consul. On presenting permit to the dock clerk, they then can remove their shipment or reship it.

"In order to keep this import tonnage moving promptly there must be full cooperation between the steamship, customs and railroad employes and in a great measure most of the detail falls on the Railroad Terminal employes. They must have cars ready as soon as the steamer docks, and often this means they must be on duty early in the morning and late at night.

"The true spirit of cooperation is exemplified frequently between the steamship and railroad employes when a steamer arrives and has to sail again within 24 or 48 hours. Working hand in hand in receiving import cargoes and delivering export cargoes from the cars to the dock for loading into the steamers, is where your Locust Point employes frequently show their mettle.

"If everyone connected with shipping at the port of Baltimore would cooperate fully, it would bring larger returns in every way."

Carry on, don't pull back.
Open the way for others.
Overlook human shortcomings.
Punctual be in all engagements.
Earnestly act for mutual benefit.
Round up the slacker.
Assist wherever possible.
Think before you act.
Increase your knowledge.
Offer to assist one another.
Never say stop, but go ahead.

We are indebted to Mr. Milton Hurley, manager of this line at Baltimore (a former employe of The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in the office of our friend and former official, the late Robert B. Ways) for this, interesting story.

Mr. A. F. Sidebottom, as general manager, and Mr. Hurley as manager of import (with offices in the Furness Building at Baltimore), with Messrs. Westscher, superintendent, and Steen and Atwell as his assistants at our Pier 6, have fully exemplified the spirit of cooperation in their dealings with our Road.

They also find in our foreign trade forces, headed by Foreign Freight Traffic Manager F. J. Couse, and in our own agent at Locust Point, J. M. White, exemplars of the best kind of friendly cooperation, and the spirit of progress extends all the way down the line among our forces here.

Baltimore is already a great foreign trade port, but with the coordination of effort which exists among all the factors controlling this trade, and with the great natural and economic advantages of the port, the future is bright for an ever accelerating increase in the amount of business done here.

"How happy does a man go forth to his labor or his business, and how doubly happy does he return from it when he knows that his means are carefully husbanded, and wisely applied by a judicious and well-managing wife."

The Homecoming of Lucy Franklin

And a Bit of Railroad History of Old Vincennes

By MARGARET TALBOTT STEVENS

EIGHTY-FOUR years ago, scarcely a dozen years after the race between the horse and the steam engine from Baltimore to Ellicott's Mills, there came to the home of Abner T. Ellis, a prominent business man of Vincennes, Indiana, a little baby girl. Now, the birth of a baby girl in Vincennes in the year 1839, is not of itself particularly interesting; the significant fact, however, is that eighty-four years later, in November, 1923, this little girl, still small in stature, but rich in experience and as sprightly as in her childhood days, should return to her native town to be accorded a municipal celebration by the citizens thereof. This little girl's name was Lucy. She is now Mrs. Lucy Franklin, daughter of the first president and promoter of the old O. & M. Railroad, now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio.

When little Lucy Ellis was seven years old she went on a long journey by stage coach with her father and mother to the city of St. Louis. This remarkable journey was so important an event in the life of the little girl that she chose to record it on the window pane of the dining room of her father's mansion in Vincennes. She used her little diamond ring for the purpose, and the record still remains there. Therefore, it was no wonder that when the news spread about the old town that soon there would be a railroad on which she could travel, the child's interest knew no bounds.

Judge Abner T. Ellis was one of the most progressive citizens of the state in his day. His daughter recalls that he was judge of the Probate Court for ten years or more, and that he was at one time a member of the State Legislature. In "Railway Celebrations of 1857" we find the following extract:

"The organization of the Ohio and Indiana portions of the road was effected in 1850, Abner T. Ellis, of Vincennes, being elected president, and a number of the solid men of Cincinnati and Vincennes and of the country between those points chosen directors."

The "History of Vincennes," by Cauthorn, tells us that Abner T. Ellis was born in New England and came to Vincennes to practice law. He soon became wealthy and for many years was a trustee of the town. His activities as promoter and organizer made him one of the most progressive citizens. He helped to organize the Wabash Navigation Company, to build the lock and dam of the rapids of the Wabash River, and he was one of the persons who advocated the building of the Ohio and Mississippi, as that part of the Baltimore and Ohio was then called. It was Mr. Ellis also who was instrumental in procuring a charter from the states through which that railroad runs, and it was his support that contributed largely to its building. Little wonder then that he was elected its first president, and that he should be re-elected several times thereafter. It was strange, however, that, despite the accumulation of his large estate, he lost it finally and died, leaving little, if anything.

Lucy Played Piano for Abraham Lincoln

His daughter Lucy was reared in the midst of plenty. She is an accomplished pianist, and even as a little girl performed remarkably well. She tells with pride of how she played the piano for Abraham Lincoln.

"Mr. Lincoln loved music," she said. "He came often to our house, and nearly every time he came he asked me to play for him. I remember how he used to lift me up and set me on the piano stool. But do you know," she added cautiously, "I always hated to have him lift me up; he was so homely I was kind of frightened whenever he came close to me."

Then Mrs. Franklin told a little anecdote about her childhood.

"My father liked to entertain," she said, "and we had many delightful parties at this old house. One day he entertained a group of gentlemen. They were all having a jolly time and someone began to ask my father if there was any cherry bounce in the cellar. My father laughed and said that there was. My little cousin and I, who were just about six years old at the time, listened with open ears. Cherry bounce! Why, we had never seen any cherry bounce in the cellar. We would go right away and look for it.

"At the first opportunity we left the room and crept down the cellar steps. Come and I'll show you just where."

She led us down the narrow steps of the cellar of the old Ellis Mansion, now used as the home of the Pastime Club. She pointed to a shelf in the first room that we entered. "There!" she exclaimed, "there is where the keg of cherry bounce stood. Father's cellar, as I afterwards learned, was famous for the best cherry bounce in Indiana. My little cousin and I examined the keg carefully. Yes, there it was, in big letters painted on the keg: C-H-E-R-R-Y B-O-U-N-C-E! Yes, that was it, all right. We turned the spigot. The liquid began to sizzle out and we didn't know how to stop it. We decided that since we had nothing to catch it in we'd better drink it, and so we did. Emma drank as much as she could, and then I did the same thing. Then we had more, and we finally had to let it run. We just felt so tired that we couldn't stand up any longer. We just lay right down on the cellar floor and went to sleep.

"In the meantime we had been missed by the family. An alarm was sent out through the neighborhood. There were still a few Indians around and who knows what could have happened to two little girls who might have wandered alone out on the streets at night?

"A general search was begun. For a long time they looked. At last someone suggested looking in the cellar. They came down and picked us up from where we were lying, in a sea of cherry bounce. I have no idea how long we had been there. When we opened our eyes we were in our own little beds, suffering from terrific headaches. Father never said anything, but I am certain that none of his friends had any cherry bounce that night."

Hundreds of Mrs. Franklin's old friends and neighbors, their children and their grandchildren, came in during the course of the day of the celebration on November 10, to speak to the little white-haired woman and to welcome her back to Vincennes.

"I remember," said one of them, "when Lucy Ellis was the belle of Vincennes. There was a great party given for her, but I was not invited.

"I decided to go anyway. I did not live so far away, so I dressed up and sneaked in the back way. I just wanted to get a peep at Lucy to see what she wore. The young people were having a jolly time in the parlor. I crept up to the door and peeped in. There was Lucy, resplendent in a filmy something that seemed to take her right off her feet and lift her into the air. Yes, she looked like an angel."

Government Exhibit creates renewed interest in Poultry.

IN appreciation of the poultry development work being done in Illinois by the Commercial Development Department through its Agricultural Bureau, the Taylorville, Ill., Daily Courier, under date of December 13, made the following comment:

"The Baltimore and Ohio management is to be congratulated upon its broad conception of service to the communities served, and by the same token those persons are to be congratulated who live in the counties served by this great transportation system."

This tribute was occasioned as a result of the second annual Baltimore and Ohio State Poultry Show which was held in the beautiful gymnasium of the Taylorville High School, December 10 to 15, 1923.

The exhibits which made the State Show possible were the result of two poultry projects which the Baltimore and Ohio has carried on in Illinois this year, namely, Illinois Egg Setting Project and the Illinois Flock Management Project.

The Illinois Egg Setting Project opened with the distribution last spring of high class Rhode Island Red egg settings to a total of 140 farm boys and girls in the fourteen counties traversed by our lines.

A series of fourteen county poultry shows last fall gave these young poultrymen an opportunity to exhibit their best birds in friendly competition. The winners of the county shows were required to exhibit their birds at the State Show, where a total of 26 pens of five birds each was shown.

The exhibitors, showing the first eight, the prize winners, in order of merit and with the prizes won, were as follows:

The show was judged by Mr. J. P. Quinn, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who stated:

"Never have I seen finer quality produced by poultry club members than is entered in this show. Their pens could enter in the open classes at any poultry show, and would not only give adult breeders some keen competition, but would unquestionably take a number of the blue ribbons."

The Baltimore and Ohio Poultry Club members thus started in poultry work with Rhode Island Reds are being transferred into the 1924 Baltimore and Ohio Flock Management Clubs. Each Flock Management Club member will keep an accurate daily record of the number of eggs laid, sold, consumed at home, set, hatched, chicks raised, sold, consumed at home, feed and equipment purchased, so that at the end of twelve months he or she can show just what his operations have been and the profit resulting therefrom.

1923 Flock Management Club

The farm boys and girls to whom White Plymouth Rock egg settings were distributed in 1922 carried on Flock Management work during 1923 and the winners were announced at the State Show, as follows:

First, Dorothy Deal, Morrisonville, Christian Co.; Second, Maude Thompson, Grayville, White Co.; Third, Lyman Gurley, Wayne City, Wayne Co.

Dorothy Deal not only carried off first honors, but her record is all the more remarkable because of her being only nine years of age.

As a reward to the winners of first, second and third places, the following prizes were given by the Baltimore and Ohio:

Dorothy Deal, pen of six pullets and one cockerell; Maude Thompson, pen of five pullets and one cockerell; Lyman Gurley, pen of four pullets and one cockerell.

The breed given was white Plymouth Rock, and the three pens were from the famous Fishelton Farms, Hope, Indiana, thus making a substantial addition to the breeding stock of each of the three winners.

Mention must be made of the two excellent pens of LaVerne Gardner, which swept the White Rock open class in the Christian County Show, taking first prize for "best old pen" and "best young pen," respectively. The older pen of birds was hatched from Baltimore and Ohio egg settings furnished Mr. Gardner in 1922, and the young pen of birds was hatched from eggs laid by the former.

Best Bird of Show

Judge Quinn was called upon to pick the Grand Champion bird of the show, regardless of sex or breed, and he chose White Rock Hen No. 62 from LaVerne Gardner's pen of birds. Judge Quinn stated that she was one of the finest utility birds he had seen in a long time and that $50.00 would be a most conservative value to place on her.

The outstanding feature of the show, particularly interesting from an educational standpoint, was the Government Exhibit from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This exhibit, consisting of charts, panels and models, created renewed interest in poultry raising on the part of everyone who saw it.

With fourteen counties in Illinois focusing their attention on the production of poultry of the class shown at Taylorville, it is not hard to conceive what it will mean both to the communities and the railroad in the form of poultry and egg shipments and the steady cash return resulting to the producers of same.

The Illinois Poultry clubs were sponsored by the Baltimore and Ohio in close cooperation with the University of Illinois Agricultural Extension Service and the Illinois County Farm Bureaus. The University was represented by E. I. Pilchard, assistant state club leader, Prof. L. E. Card and C. W. McIlroy of the Poultry Husbandry Department. The County Farm Advisors have taken keen interest in promoting the club work and have had the assistance of able local leaders in a number of counties. The Baltimore and Ohio has been represented by Agricultural Agents P. O. Hurley and E. B. Baugh, the latter having spent a great deal of time on this particular project, and we would be guilty of gross negligence were we to fail to acknowledge the assistance given by C. E. Hay, County Farm Advisor of Christian County, who worked untiringly to make the State Show at Taylorville a success.

A Fair Exchange

STORIES of the kind of food served at places like homes for the aged are in the repertoire of nearly every good story teller. We believe, however, that this is a new one:

An old gentleman living at the home for the aged had the regular beverage poured into his cup at the supper table. He tasted it, then turned to the waitress and said:

"Miss, if this is coffee, kindly bring me tea; and if it is tea, kindly bring me coffee."

A Jolly Evening with the Pittsburgh Auxiliary

TRAIN for Hazelwood! All aboard! We were off to a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

"What's all this about?" asked Conductor Linwood.

"More Veterans," we declared, producing our transportation.

A few minutes more and we had reached our destination, where we were met by a delegation from the Auxiliary, led by the secretary, Mrs. Daugherty. A short walk brought us to Odd Fellows Hall, where already the meeting of the Veterans had been finished.

In the group of visiting members of the Ladies' Auxiliary were Grand President Mrs. F. M. Howard, Newark, Ohio; Grand Vice-President Mrs. J. M. Garvey, Wheeling, W. Va.; Grand Secretary Mrs. O. L. Wallburg, Lima, Ohio; Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Chester Lewis, both of Newark, Ohio; Mrs. Menafee, of the Cumberland Auxiliary; Mrs. McKee, grand treasurer, Baltimore, Md. President H. G. Fletcher, of the Fairmont Veterans; Grand President George W. Sturmer and Grand Vice-President J. M. Garvey, and Chief of Welfare W. W. Wood were among the visiting Veterans.

Mrs. Hill, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Auxiliary, made an address of welcome to the grand officers and the visiting members. This was followed by a reading by Miss McAnich; a delightful Scotch dance by the McElroy children, in costume; solo, Miss May Lake, accompanied by Miss Helen Lake; piano trio, Misses Miller and Miss O'Roke; a clever little dance by Ruth Austin, accompanied by Miss Anna Pearl McMunn; Sailor's Hornpipe by little Miss McElroy; reading, Miss Jean McAnich, and an Irish jig by the McElroy children.

All of the talent, save that of the McElroy children, came from Baltimore and Ohio families.

The installation of the officers was taken in charge by Grand President Mrs. Howard. The newly-elected officers are: president, Mrs. F. S. Applebee; vice-president, Mrs. Nicholson; secretary, Mrs. Daugherty; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Hill; chaplain, Mrs. John Peters; marshal, Mrs. John McMunn; outer guard, Mrs. O'Roke.

Grand President Mrs. Howard made a speech of appreciation for the splendid entertainment of the evening, and brought the greetings of the State of Ohio. She spoke of the growth of the Newark Veterans from a body of eight or ten men who met in a basement, to the splendid organization of Veterans now at that place and the addition of a Ladies' Auxiliary. She extended the invitation to all Veterans and Auxiliary members to attend the meetings of the Newark chapter on the first Thursday of every month.

Grand Vice-President Mrs. Garvey gave an inspirational talk on what it means to be a Veteran or the wife of a Veteran, and on what it means to live up to the standard of Fellowship, Socialbility and Harmony, the Auxiliary motto.

Grand Secretary Mrs. Wallburg expressed her pleasure at being present among the "young" men, and incidentally, among their wives. She said that she had met quite a number of these young men, but that she was willing to know them all.

Grand Treasurer Mrs. McKee expressed her appreciation of the invitation to be with the Pittsburgh folk on this occasion. She also told of the splendid work that is being done by the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary in Baltimore, of the interest of the members in the work and progress of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Mrs. Menafee, of Cumberland, told of the growth of the Cumberland Auxiliary. She praised the fine work of the Pittsburgh chapter, and invited all present to attend the meetings of the Cumberland folk, on the first Tuesday of each month.

"Aunt Mary," of the MAGAZINE, told, by request, stories of her journey to France.

Grand President Strumer paid a tribute to womanhood and the Auxiliaries. He advised the Veterans to make sure that all all their wives become members of the Auxiliary.

Grand Vice-President Garvey said: "Brothers and Sisters, it is said that brevity is the soul of wit. I am chuck full of the former but lack the latter. Just let me know whenever there is anything going on in Pittsburgh, and I'll be there!"

Chief of Welfare W. W. Wood expressed his thanks for the splendid entertainment of the evening, and his pleasure at being present.

President Fletcher, Fairmont, invited all to the Fairmont party on January 25, and thanked all those who had put their shoulders to the wheel to make the entertainment a success.

Brother Cox, of the Pittsburgh Veterans, said in part: "If all of the words which have been said tonight were taken home and digested, we'd never grow old * * * Today we are working under the best set of officials that a railroad ever had." He further urged cooperation of all Veterans with the management in furthering the success of the Baltimore and Ohio. Mr. Cox entered the service of the Railroad nearly 60 years ago.

Mr. Durant, chief clerk to the superintendent, Pittsburgh, reminded everybody of this year's picnic, urging all to get ready to help make this the most successful affair of its kind.

A splendid luncheon, served by the members of the Auxiliary, brought the interesting meeting to a close.

The visiting members wish especially to thank the Pittsburgh Auxiliary for the delightful entertainment which they received.

The Veterans elected the following officers by acclamation: President, G. K. Reed; vice-president, J. A. Schuck; secretary, G. N. Orbin; treasurer, C. H. Durant. The executive committee is composed of the following: William A. Cox, H. McLaughlin, H. L. Forney, W. F. Duncan, H. H. Hartley, George F. Kane, Ira Rush, H. H. Stork, R. W. L. Hill, John McCabe.

Veterans and Ladies' Auxiliary Hold First Annual Memorial Service at Connellsville

At a meeting of the Veterans' Association, in the Y. M. C. A., Connellsville, Pa., on January 8, all old officers were unanimously re-elected. They are: P. J. Harrigan, president; S. T. Irwin, vice-president; John Layton, secretary; John Lindsey, treasurer; T. J. Brennan, delegate to annual convention.

While the Veterans were holding their business meeting, the Ladies' Auxiliary met in another room and installed their officers for 1924. The ceremonies were conducted by Past President Mrs. W. H. Pearson, assisted by Mesdames O'Donnell and Ida Kelly, past officers. The officers installed were: president, Mrs. M. H. Cadden; vice-president, Mrs. James Wardley; secretary, Mrs. Anna Snyder; treasurer, Mrs. Charles Gaskill; chaplain, Mrs. W. H. Pearson; inside marshal, Mrs. O'Donnell; outer guard, Mrs. Ida Kelly; musician, Mrs. Ida Vance. The lunch committee for the ensuing year consists of Mrs. Ira Beal, chairman, Mesdames M. C. Patterson, G. W. Woods, George Leonard, Edward Fenstermacher. Two candidates were elected to membership.

After the close of the business sessions, the ladies joined the men and a memorial service was held. Since 1917, fifty-two veterans have passed to the Great Beyond, while nine members of the Auxiliary have died since 1921. President P. J. Harrigan presided at the service, the memorial sermon being delivered by Rev. E. H. Stevens, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Connellsville. Grand President George W. Sturmer was present and made an interesting address on the subject of "Getting Business" for the Baltimore and Ohio. He was followed by Mr. Harrigan, who recalled the excellent work done by the Veterans in the campaign of 1921; he asked that everyone redouble their efforts now, saying that the prosperity of Connellsville was bound up with that of the Baltimore and Ohio. He read Mr. Willard's statement published on pages 12 and 13 of the December MAGAZINE, this being also read at the meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Conductor H. G. Fletcher, of Fairmont, also made a fine address asking the support of all employes in securing business.

Several musical numbers were rendered between the addresses, including selections by a male quartette composed of Messrs. Homer Davis, Charles Bailey, Thomas Williams and George Laing, with Miss Grace Workman as pianist. Three vocal solos were rendered by Miss Genevieve Clarke, accompanied on the piano by Miss Lena Havener, who is the daughter of one of our engineers.

In recognition of his fifty-two years service, Patrick Scary, Connellsville, Pa., was presented with a Veterans' button by Vice-President S. T. Irwin.

There were 110 people present at the memorial service and concert, including members from Smithfield, Somerset, Rockwood, Meyersdale and Hyndman.

Leave It to the Newark Veterans!

THERE'S an old saying among the Veterans along our Western Lines that if you want to put anything across just "leave it to Newark." And when a visitor goes to the meetings of these Veterans and their wives, he is impressed with the truth of the idea. At least he learns that these good people know what it means to get together for a jolly time. The Veterans and the Auxiliary hold their meetings simultaneously; good fellowship abounds; there are no secrets the one organization has from the other, and the result is a community of interest and a fine understanding. These are the characteristics which should be uppermost in the relationship between the two bodies, and which are best promoted through the joint meetings.

On the afternoon of January 3 a meeting of the Grand International Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, to which many of our Veterans wives belong, held its regular monthly meeting in the B. of L. E. Hall, Newark, Ohio. This also happened to be the date of the meeting of our Veterans and the Auxiliary. Therefore, it was decided that there was no reason why these bodies could not work in harmony. Accordingly the B. of L. E. Auxiliary held its meeting in the afternoon. Each member provided herself with a number of sandwiches in addition to some other edible contribution. All these were spread upon the table at five o'clock, the pianist played a lively march, and the members filed to the table, where each served herself, cafeteria style, to whatever tempted her appetite. Then, picnic fashion, the members draped themselves upon chairs, stairways, etc., and the meal progressed with good cheer.

After dinner the members of the Auxiliary to the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans remained until the coming of their husbands, when the second meeting would be in progress. In the meantime, the writer, one of the Good Will Delegates to France, entertained the members with overseas yarns.

Then the old timers began to arrive—Russel Kyle, who is 61 years in service and still going; old Pat McGinley; W. G. Harrison, pensioned scale inspector, whose grandfather was present at the laying of the cornerstone of the Baltimore and Ohio, and whose father also was a veteran in the ser-

At the close of the meeting, a fine lunch consisting of ice cream, sandwiches, coffee and cake, was served by the ladies.

It is interesting to know that the officers, with the exception of one who died, are the same for 1924 as they were when the Chapter was organized seven years ago, and that under the guidance of President Harrigan and his able assistants the membership in this Chapter has grown from 75 in 1917 to 619 in 1924.

vice of the Baltimore and Ohio. Big Dave Murphy was on the job, as also were more than a hundred other Veterans and their wives, long before eight o'clock. Mrs. O. L. Wallburg, grand secretary of the Ladies' Auxiliary and president of her own chapter at Lima, Ohio, was one of the guests of honor. (All of the ladies who want to know how to manufacture a hula hula pocketbook from inner tubes may gain this information from Mrs. Wallburg.)

Mrs. Frank M. Howard, grand president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and president of the chapter at Newark, was also much in evidence. (Mrs. Howard is getting that hair waving stunt down to a fine point; it adds a considerable amount of distinction, particularly when she tells the yarn about her flight in an airplane over the city of Newark.) Mrs. Leonard, the Auxiliary's press reporter had a few permanent waves to call her own, and which matched quite well with the monkey fur with which her gown was trimmed. Sister Little did full justice to the piano keys, and Uncle Dan Moriarity, with his air of importance, escorted Mrs. Dan to a seat of honor.

President Moriarity asked Sister Howard to open the meeting. Visitors were introduced, a prayer was offered by the chaplain, Mrs. Helfinger, one stanza of America was sung by the assembly, and the roll call was made. Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, followed by the report of the treasurer. A number of bills were read and ordered to be paid. President Moriarity then read a letter of New Year's greeting from President Willard to the Veterans and employes of the Baltimore and Ohio. He also read a letter from the editor of the MAGAZINE suggesting that MAGAZINE correspondents be invited to attend the meetings in order to get the news for publication in the MAGAZINE. Mr. Moriarity further invited the men to take home the copies of the MAGAZINE to their families each month, and told them where these can be procured.

Applications for membership were read and passed upon. Upon a suggestion from Brother Murphy, the question of a turkey supper, to be held during the month of February, was discussed. The decision was made in favor of a chicken supper. It was further moved and carried that the pensioned employees be the guests of the Veterans for this dinner, all others being required to pay. It was further moved and carried that the supper be followed by a dance in the Masonic Hall.

Mrs. Howard then assumed charge of the meeting on behalf of the John Doyle Auxiliary. The roll call, minutes of the last meeting and reports of the various committees occupied but a few minutes. Particularly interesting was the report of the Relief Committee, whose chairman had visited a number of sick members and shut-ins since the last meeting, both among those of the Auxiliary and of the Veterans; she had looked after their needs and wants, sent flowers where they would do the most good, and made the patients comfortable wherever possible. She further reported the request for quilt patches from one Veteran shut-in, who while away his lonesome hours by making quilts. Sister Moriarity, having just recovered from illness, expressed her appreciation to the members for the flowers which had been sent to her. "I think they made me well," she added.

Followed then the statement of various bills, which were ordered to be paid; the penny flower march, in which both women and men took part, and then an interesting talk by Mrs. O. L. Wallburg, Lima, Ohio. Mrs. Wallburg, the spirit of wit and humor, kept the assembly in smiles by her sallies. She discussed, among other things, the Flower March. "We introduced the flower march in Cincinnati," she said, "and nobody ever gets ill or dies there. At Lima it is quite different; we have had about 20 funerals recently, so many indeed that we have had to change the name 'Penny March' to 'Silver Offering.'"

"Aunt Mary," of the MAGAZINE, followed Mrs. Wallburg with an urgent request that those assembled get business for the Baltimore and Ohio, and appealed to all present to see that the MAGAZINE is taken into the homes.

Mrs. Wallburg and "Aunt Mary" were then voted in as honorary members of the John Doyle Auxiliary. The Veterans, not to be outdone by the ladies, promptly voted in "Brother Mary" as an honorary member. The latter made a speech of acceptance which is not for publication.

Brother Moriarity then announced that if the members knew of any cases where there are pensioned employees who may be unable to pay their dues, he would be glad to have their names—or such names might be turned in to the secretary—and they would see that these old employees received their membership cards. "Our pensioners should be our guests whenever they are not able to take care of themselves," said President Moriarity.

The installation of officers was the feature of the program of the evening. The election having taken place at the last meeting, the following officers were installed:

John Doyle Auxiliary

President, Mrs. Frank M. Howard; vice-president, Mrs. D. H. Moriarity; recording secretary, Mrs. E. Powell; treasurer, Mrs. E. E. E. Moore; chaplain, Mrs. J. W. Hughes; marshal, Mrs. Fred Hoffman; outer guard, Mrs. William Stewart; pianist, Mrs. Charles Markham; executive committee, Mrs. C. Lewis, Chairman; Mrs. Ed. Hopper, Mrs. Nettie Moore, Mrs. Marjorie Lake, Mrs. C. Smith, Mrs. Charles Mort, Mrs. Laura Howard, Mrs. Daisy Hollister, Mrs. Lulu Moore, Mrs. Mattie Kramer, Mrs. Nettie Rose, Mrs. J. W. Hoffman, Mrs. Ross Lynn.

Newark Division Veterans

President, D. H. Moriarity; vice-president, F. M. Howard; secretary and treasurer, E. E. E. Moore; outer guard, C. A. Anderson; executive committee, Messrs. Helfinger, Wiley, Stewart, Laird, Murphy.

Not the least important event of the evening was the presentation of a diamond

A Letter to All Members of Veteran Employees Association

January 18, 1924

Gentlemen:

Having just passed through one of the most prosperous years in the history of our Railroad, we naturally are looking forward to even greater accomplishments in 1924.

In extending to us his New Year greetings, President Willard said that the year 1923 "definitely marked the beginning of an era of good feeling and sympathetic understanding on the Baltimore and Ohio which I hope will continue to grow stronger with the passage of years."

We of the Veterans' Association played no small part in the birth of this era and it is our earnest desire that we continue to give the maximum of service in 1924. We did our bit in 1923 because we were inspired by President Willard's injunction that we were to be helpful towards improving the operation of the property—

NOT BECAUSE WE FEEL OBLIGED TO DO SO,
BUT JUST BECAUSE WE WANT TO DO SO.

In the nature of things and because our ideals are founded on progress, we must look forward to the accomplishment of even greater things in the coming months, than transpired in 1923. Instead of relaxing after the strenuous months that have passed, we should strive for even better records so that our Railroad may keep its head high among its neighbors and we share the just pride that will be ours by right of this accomplishment.

The prosperity that came to our Railroad was shared by all of us, and we who have been through some lean and trying years of service appreciate the contentment and happiness in pleasant work which was our lot in the year just passed.

Empty freight and passenger cars and "idle" locomotives are mute heralds of enforced idleness for some of us. Our Railroad can only maintain prosperity for us by moving loaded cars of freight. The loading for these cars can only be obtained by solicitation of manufacturers and other shippers. Unless shippers are frequently approached and exhorted to use our facilities, our competitors will gain the ascendancy.

For these reasons, then, please make a special appeal to all members of the Baltimore and Ohio Veteran Employees' Association when opportunity offers, to diligently canvass the shippers in their vicinity and urge the use of our Railroad for the transportation of their goods. Urge the grocer, the coal dealer, the clothier, the department store manager and others with whom we have business dealings that goods sent them shall come by way of the Baltimore and Ohio. Enlist the members of your families in the effort to obtain new business and retain the old, and by cooperative endeavor we shall be able mutually to enjoy with our Company continued prosperity in 1924. In each copy of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE a card is enclosed. Read it, use it, and if you need additional cards, these will be provided.

(Signed) GEORGE W. STURMER
Grand President

Among the Martinsburg Veterans

By MRS. CLARA McDONALD TAYLOR

Note: A portion of the news told in these columns was sent in by Mrs. Taylor for our January issue. Unfortunately the copy was mislaid and we apologize to Mrs. Taylor—ED.

VETERAN HOWARD KEEDY, one of the most faithful and accommodating employes whom we know, is pictured on third page preceding. Brother Keedy served the Baltimore and Ohio for 49 years. He is now 73 years old and a remarkable man. The picture was taken at his home on Winchester Avenue.

The float originated and used in the New Year's Mummers' Parade by the Martinsburg Chapter of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen is pictured here, too. Martinsburg was very much on the map on New Year's Eve. All the kiddies turned out with Pa and Ma and everybody had a big time. The parade was sponsored by the Ashar Temple Dokies, and many lovely floats competed for the honors. First prize was won by the Anti-Tuberculosis float, which was truly a beautiful thing, showing the sacrifices made by our nurses in their fight for human lives. Every float entered was cleverly planned and credit is due all who entered. The one displayed by our Cumbo Carmen was a splendidly equipped miniature railway train and engine, complete in every detail. The work was done by A. A. Slaughter and Charles Hockenburg. The men on the truck which carried their prize were in their working clothes, ready for duty. As all of our Cumbo men are loyal boosters, the men that followed in line, 150 strong, were also attired for work. They got the glad hand all along the line, and their prize was a barrel of Berkeley County apples, "the best in the land." Moreover, these men thoughtfully donated these apples to the King's Daughters Hospital. Much of the credit for this splendid float is due Carmen Rhodes, Smallwood, Tabler, Stoneburner, B. C. Williams.

We also have a picture of our deceased Brother W. A. Burkhart, of Martinsburg Veterans, and father of Yardmaster Harry Burkhart, Keyser, and Brakeman Carroll Burkhart, Martinsburg. Brother Burkhart began work for the Baltimore and Ohio as brakeman, later being promoted to conductor. He served the Company faithfully for 45 years. We miss him and we miss the pleasure that he used to bring to our meetings with his generous store of humorous poems, etc.

We trust that during the ensuing year the members of the George M. Shriver Auxiliary will do their best in helping to get new members for our organization. Congeniality, cooperation and sacrifice will work wonders. We owe cooperation to ourselves and to the lodge. It will increase efficiency and promote good feeling, develop energy and decrease cost, eliminate petty jealousies, create enthusiasm and get results. And results are what we want.

Although a little late, we extend our best wishes to John Tierro and Miss Edna Kastle, who were married on November 29 at St. John's parsonage. The bride is the daughter of Veteran and Mrs. J. W. Kastle.

James T. Hess, former resident of Martinsburg and former employe of our Railroad, was accidentally killed in Waynesboro, Pa. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

The schools of Martinsburg and of the county set aside one day for donations to our local hospital. Each child brings something. Donations consist of staple groceries, vegetables, hams, chickens, etc. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the City Hospital welcomes the donations. This year's collection was the largest ever received.

We extend our sympathy to Brother Fauver and Mrs. Fauver in the death of their grandson, Harvey Walter Knadler.

"God needed one more child

Amidst his shining band,

And so he bent with loving smile

And clasped your darling's hand."

At our annual election of officers on December 13, all the officers of the past year were re-elected for 1924.

We hope that the New Year will bring to our George M. Shriver Auxiliary many new faces—new members. Our meetings are held on the second Thursday night of each month, on the second floor of the Baltimore and Ohio Building. We shall be glad to welcome all Veterans and their wives.

Our Auxiliary has been much saddened by the death of Sister Peer. Her life was that of a noble Christian. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren. The funeral services were held from St. Johns Lutheran Church, Rev. Caspar Miller, Rev. Wagner and Rev. Lowry conducting the services. Sister Peer will ever be remembered by the members of the Auxiliary, who extend their sympathy to her bereaved husband.

We also bow in humble submission to the hand of Death in the loss of Mrs. Nannie Grimes, mother of our Sister Margaret Bowers. May the One who has promised

THE FLOAT WHICH WON A BARREL OF BERKELEY COUNTY APPLES

In the New Year's Mummer's Parade, this interesting float was exhibited by the local chapter of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. The men are Baltimore and Ohio boosters. This float won a prize in the parade—a barrel of Berkeley County Apples, the pride of West Virginia to go through the dark valley with us be the comfort of the bereaved family.

While your correspondent regrets that she was unable to be present at the conference of correspondents held in Baltimore, she heartily appreciates the letters and messages of good will sent her from other correspondents.

A sad accident befell Car Repairman Hobbs, Cumbo, in his effort to hurry the fire at his home recently. He used coal oil, and as a result of distressing burns received therefrom, died. His wife, in attempting to extinguish the blaze which caused the death of her husband, was severely burned, and at this writing is confined to the hospital. The community at large extends its sympathy to the bereaved ones. Mr. Hobbs was the grandson of Retired Engineer and Mrs. John Bowers, Frederick, Md.

Minor Furr, for nearly forty years a Baltimore and Ohio man, and a member of the Veterans' Association, died on January 14. He was 63 years old. His death was the result of high blood pressure and a complication of diseases. Mr. Furr was born near Keyser. He first entered service in the shops at Piedmont, but was later transferred to the position of conductor, which he relinquished in order to be nearer his home in Martinsburg. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen for nearly 25 years. We extend our sympathy to his family.

Cincinnati Auxiliary Celebrates Its First Birthday

By MRS. O. L. WALLBURG, Grand Secretary

ON January 9, one year ago, five women, wives of Baltimore and Ohio employees at the Cincinnati Terminals, met at the Grand Hotel, Cincinnati. These five were Mrs. Fred Richter, Mrs. A. A. Ginder, Mrs. John Naylor, Mrs. George Neal and Mrs. Peter Edrick. Their meeting was the result of an invitation sent out by the grand officers of the Ladies' Auxiliary. This meeting was the nucleus of the Cincinnati Auxiliary, which now has grown to a membership of 56, with $250 in the treasury.

On January 9, this year, they celebrated the Auxiliary's first birthday. The original five, who formed the corps of officers last year, were re-elected this year. Invitations had been sent to the grand president, Mrs. F. M. Howard, at Newark, and to some of the members from that city who had assisted in forming the Cincinnati Auxiliary last year; to the grand secretary, Mrs. Otto Wallburg, and women of the Toledo Division Auxiliary, the latter numbering 22.

The parlors of the Grand Hotel are turned over to the Ladies' Auxiliary each month for their meetings. This privilege was secured through the courtesy of E. B. Russell, assistant to the general manager, Cincinnati. The meeting on this occasion was opened at 3.00 p. m. After the transaction of the regular business, the installation of officers took place. Grand President Mrs. Howard was the installing officer. Following is the line-up of officers for the ensuing year:

President, Mrs. Harry Howden; vice-president, Mrs. George Neal; secretary, Mrs. Fred Richter; treasurer, Mrs. August Ginder; chaplain, Mrs. Peter Edrick; marshal, Mrs. John Naylor; outer guard, Mrs. George Rethman; musician, Mrs. W. J. Murphy.

Mrs. Howden was also elected delegate to the Grand Convention to be held in Baltimore in May, with Mrs. Richter as alternate.

A silver offering march brought $4.65 into the flower fund. The meeting closed with prayer by the chaplain, and the hymn, "God Be With You 'til We Meet Again." Mrs. William Wolfram, of Dayton, Ohio, presided at the piano during the installation ceremonies and assisted materially in the success of the meeting.

Following the meeting a fine dinner was served, especially prepared under the direction of the hotel management for the occasion. The ladies were loud in their praises of the splendid "home" cooking, and for the courtesies extended by the management.

A fine address was made by the vice-president of the Railway Clerks' National Bank of Cincinnati, who spoke in splendid terms of the Baltimore and Ohio management, particularly in its relation to this bank.

Chairman J. S. Rhodes, Carmen's Committee, Martinsburg, and his sister, Mrs. Alice Creque, Washington, D. C.

The members then returned to the parlors and enjoyed themselves as only young wives of Veterans can. Mrs. Sites, of the Cincinnati Terminal Auxiliary, presided at the piano, and soon footsteps were pattering in the old fashioned waltz, the Virginia Reel, and other old-time favorites. The star performers were Mrs. Van Horn, of Lima; Mrs. Wolfram, of Dayton, and Mrs. Rethman and Mrs. Richter, of Cincinnati.

Plans already are in hand for repeating such a birthday party next year. This "baby" Auxiliary meets on the second Tuesday afternoon of each month. A standing invitation awaits every member of the Auxiliary or of the Veterans' Association on the System who may be visiting or passing through Cincinnati, to attend these meetings.

Inspiring Letter from President Hughes, Cincinnati Veterans' Association

THE Editor of the MAGAZINE has received some splendid letters from a number of the Veterans' Chapters promising that their members would do all in their power to get shippers and travelers to use the Baltimore and Ohio. Among the most interesting of these is the following:

CINCINNATI, O., December 26, 1923

To the Officers and Members of the Veteran Employees' Association, Cincinnati Terminal:

As stated in its Constitution, our Association is organized for the purpose of creating and promoting a spirit of friendliness and sociability among its members and to afford an opportunity for the discussion of matters pertaining to our mutual interests.

These purposes are legitimate and laudable, and cannot but be beneficial to all concerned.

However, it has occurred to your president, that as we start out upon another year of life and activity, we might with propriety add another purpose which is equally laudable, viz: the advancing and promoting, as far as we can, the interests of the Company we serve, THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD.

Much can be done by our members along this line:

First, by continuing to render the most efficient and faithful service possible in the departments in which we serve.

Second, by a watchful care and intelligent handling of all Company's property with which we have to do.

Third, by using our individual influence to divert traffic, both freight and passenger, from other channels to that of the Baltimore and Ohio.

At the present time there is a very marked decrease in the volume of traffic being handled as compared with that handled a few weeks ago.

President Willard is urging the Traffic Department to put forth every effort to increase the volume, and, if possible, bring it back to normal again.

We are asked by that department individually and collectively to lend a helping hand.

Let us then seek every opportunity to make known the superiority of the Baltimore and Ohio as a common carrier. Inquire of friends and others who may be connected with the Traffic Departments of the various industries in and around Cincinnati and make an earnest appeal to them that they favor the Baltimore and Ohio when shipping their products.

Should anyone, by accident or otherwise, learn of any traffic about to be moved, let such a one at once convey the information to a representative of the Traffic Department or C. E. Fish, Terminal Agent, and L. A. Cordie, Freight Agent, Second Street, west of Smith Street.

W. C. OWEN,
Secretary

J. M. HUGHES,
President

C. W. Galloway Ladies Auxiliary No. 1, Baltimore Division

By MRS. CHARLES W. LEWIS, President

THE Auxiliary has completed a most successful and prosperous year and looks forward to 1924 with high hopes and ambitions. The past year has been full of pleasure for the members, with many instructive talks by prominent people, but the greatest pleasure and accomplishment of the organization is that we have actually helped others. We hope to be able to play a bigger part in the lives of others, in and out of the organization, in the year of 1924.

Our December executive board meeting was held at the home of Secretary Mrs. MacMillen and a tasty luncheon was served.

Our December meeting was addressed by our vice-president, C. W. Galloway, who delivered an exceptional address, it being a compliment to any woman's organization. With our election of officers and the exchange of the Season's Greetings we had a full program. An innovation is the appointment of representatives from different points around the city, such as the Baltimore and Ohio Building, Mt. Clare, etc. to serve on the executive board. The Florence Crittenton Committee under Mrs. McCaghey has been active and is accomplishing many things.

The Christmas season was celebrated by a tea for all the members on December 27 at the home of the president and on December 30, Mrs. Stier gave a tea in honor of the officers and members.

On January 18, the Auxiliary entertained the husbands of members with a New Year's party and Mask Dance as elsewhere described in this issue.

Our 1924 officers are: president, Mrs. Charles W. Lewis; vice-president, Mrs. J.

A. Wall; secretary, Mrs. George MacMillen; treasurer, Mrs. William T. Holmes; assistant secretary, Mrs. Edward Stier; chaplain, Mrs. George Sturmer; marshal, Mrs. William McKee; outer guard, Mrs. J. T. Schley; chairman, Sick Committee, Mrs. Lillie Flaherty; chairman, Entertainment Committee, Mrs. W. B. Whitsitt.

An invitation is extended to all those who are eligible to join.

Working for Safety is a Pleasure

By W. T. FEEHLEY, Safety First Committeeman, Riverside Shops

HAVING gained some knowledge of Safety by attending Safety meetings, and looking through my Safety Book of Rules, I can approach a man who is disregarding a safety rule and explain to him the rule he is breaking, and also the seriousness that may result through his negligence. I am pleased to know that I can help prevent some careless accident, and by so doing can help to make railroading safe for humanity.

I want to help towards the success of "Safety First" at Riverside, and will endeavor to put forth my best efforts with the aid of the other committeemen to try and place this shop at the head of the list and maintain it in this place as the Safety First Shop on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Observations of a Safety Man

By CHARLES HOPPER, Safety Committeeman, Chicago Division

I HAVE often noticed, especially with machinists, the careless practice of using a hand hammer instead of a backing punch to drive out a tight bolt. This is very dangerous as two pieces of hardened steel coming together will cause a piece to break off the hand hammer, or the sledge, which might cause a bad injury.

Another dangerous practice which one often sees is when a carpenter, making repairs, will throw out pieces of boards or planking with the nails point up. Of course the carpenter does not get hurt, but how about the other fellow? It is not necessary to speak to a man about this practice as he knows it would take but a few minutes to bend these nails over. But when you do speak to him he always has an excuse that he did not have time, or forgot it, or was called away from the job before he had it finished.

I often notice empty oxygen and hydrogen tanks standing up when it is just as easy to lay them down, but of course no one knows who does it.

I have often found roof braces where the nails are rusted off, causing them to fall. I have removed several of these myself rather than to wait to report them to the proper parties whose place it is to do this kind of work, as I think a Safety Man, or any other man should do this as I consider it is the duty of every man to protect others from injury. Should he see something that he could not do himself he should get someone to watch this place while he gets help, but if he left this place and went to report same it might be too late and another accident would occur.

Thousands of dollars are spent each year by the Railroad to protect employes and the public, and when people disregard signs and protecting devices and take chances, it is very discouraging to the officers who want to run a safe plant.

When the Train Goes By

By JOSEPH S. DERAMUS

What do you see as you stand by the track,
When the train goes rambling by,
It is just a mass of steel and smoke
Like a streak against the sky?

Back of the steel and the smoke and noise,
Do you see the human side;
Do you see it all as a human thing
Where the fates of mankind ride?

Do you see the countless folks who wait
For the food and clothes it brings;
Do you see it bearing unto the world
All the daily needful things?

Do you see the lover who is hurrying back
To the girl he left behind;
Do you see the youth who is leaving home
With the hope of fame to find?

Do you see the chap who has had his fling,
And is longing to be back
Where he'll be content to spend his days
With the folks in the old home shack?

Do you see the heart downcast in gloom
When a friend is forced to leave;
And the sorrow and tears that death often brings,
And a soul going home to grieve?

Oh, what do you see as you stand by the track,
When the train goes rambling by,
Is it just a mass of steel and smoke
Like a streak against the sky?

Lovely Decorations and Delightful Music Mark Wheeling's Seventh Annual Ball

ON December 27 the employees of the Wheeling Division held their Seventh Annual Ball at the Market Auditorium, and all of the fifteen hundred or more employees and their families who attended voted this to be the most successful of the seven. Two things that contributed materially toward the spectacular and delightful affair were the unusually attractive decorations and the quality of the dance music.

On entering the hall, the first thing that met our eyes was a succession of colored moonbeams that danced over the ceiling of the auditorium and played over the walls and across the floor. From the ceiling were suspended two handsome myriad reflectors, scattering their vari-colored lights "along the Rialto," as John Michael Garvey put it. (And John Michael ought to know.) Along the walls and about the galleries were festoons of evergreens, reminding us of the Christmas season. Interspersed with these were beautifully draped American flags. Christmas trees were placed in every available nook, and across the end of the hall, blazing with electric lights, were huge letters spelling out the words: BALTIMORE AND OHIO. Investigation proved that this last named display was actually the 31-foot sign temporarily borrowed from our Baltimore and Ohio viaduct that spans Market Street. The display was one of the most attractive that we have ever seen at any similar gathering. Two bands, Heinie Kutch and his band, and Bonenberger's "Night Hawks," occupied the platform, the one relieving the other. Encores were aplenty and even the most rheumatic Veteran could not resist tapping his foot on the floor to the merry strains.

The attractive programs took the form of the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, showing on the front cover the picture of the Capitol Limited, and on the back the cover used on the June issue of the Magazine, President Willard's message to Baltimore and Ohio people—" . . . not however, because they feel obliged to do so but because they want to do so." Special credit is due the various committees for the splendid handling of the whole affair. The General Committee, the Committee of Arrangements, the Floor Committee, the Decoration Committee, the Program Committee, the Reception Committees and the Boosters Committee all played their parts well.

The tickets were in the form of annual passes, each of which had to be signed by the holder, in order to make sure of the fact that the party would be as nearly as possible a Baltimore and Ohio Family party.

Crossing signs at the doorway bade visitors Stop, Look and Listen, and spaces along the sides of the hall were decorated with station signs from various points on the division.

What the Moonbeams Saw

Assistant Division Engineer L. E. Haislip didn't miss a dance and the only thing he complained of was when some young thing tried to step backwards and climb up the back of his leg. Mrs. Haislip was there also and seemed to be enjoying herself immensely.

Track Supervisor W. C. Wright brought Mrs. Wright, who, though she has been on the sick list, gathered up enough strength to attend the Ball.

Assistant Supervisor Sole of the Monongah Division and Miss Edna Satterfield, telegraph operator, were two shining lights from Fairmont. Also, Miss ? (Mr. Peters knows who the other girl was.)

Supervisor W. D. Lucas and Mrs. Lucas were both there and I know they enjoyed themselves.

A. M. Six, better known as "Bert," and who is running for Sheriff of Ohio County in the Republican Primaries to take place next May, was a splendid booster for the Ball. Mrs. Six and the youngster were both there.

Mr. Detwiler, Dining Car Department, was being broken in, according to Mrs. Detwiler. Tried to tell us he wasn't very fond of dancing. We know better now.

Chief Dispatcher F. C. Moran brought his lovely daughter, Miss Madaline, but we didn't see Mr. Moran dancing.

Track Supervisor J. H. Wintermoyer was unable to attend the ball because of illness which had kept him at home for the past

THEY HELPED TO MAKE THE WHEELING BALL A SUCCESS

1. G. A. Keffner, Chief Clerk to Master Mechanic. 2. Master Mechanic F. A. Baldinger, Benwood.
3. Engineer Harry Fleming, Fairmont. 4. F. M. Wittman, Fairmont, W. Va.

Any one who was at the Wheeling Ball can easily recognize them all!

few months. We hope to have him back with us at the first of the year.

Signal Supervisor and Mrs. Adam J. Penrod and Adam Jr. were there with bells on although neither the Mister nor the Missus could be persuaded to dance.

Sheik Fitzgerald danced until midnight, carefully looking over his dancing partners and wondering how many of them will propose to him during the leap year.

And did you see General Superintendent Scott making his way through the crowds, carrying two cups of punch without spilling a drop? Mrs. Scott was there, as also were Mrs. C. W. Gorsuch, Mrs. J. A. Fleming, Mrs. Proudfoot, Mrs. Baldinger and Mrs. Marsh. And incidentally we heard a bit of gossip which we could not keep. It went about as follows:

Mr. Scott (during the "moonlight" waltz): I say, Mr. Marsh, I wonder what became of Fleming.

Mr. Marsh: Lights are out. I wonder if he's out dancing with somebody.

Mr. Scott: Impossible. Here's Mrs. Fleming right here.

Mr. Marsh: Well, if he's dancing, he's hiding himself well. By the way, do you suppose there's any possible chance that you and I could hide ourselves like that right now?

Mr. Scott: Not a ghost of a chance! Why, my dear man, don't you realize that your head and mine would shine like two billiard balls, and that we couldn't be hidden under any circumstances? Perish the thought. Let's forget it. Besides, the parson told me today that if I danced — — —". The rest of the conversation was lost in the dreamy melody of the waltz.

Mayor Thomas Thoner was there, all dressed up like a Christmas tree. He did not dance, although he was nice enough to give an address of welcome to all the out of town visitors to the City of Wheeling. He paid a nice compliment to the appearance of the hall and to the lovely decorations, and he wished all a Happy, Healthy and Prosperous New Year. Mayor Thoner has attended these annual employe balls for several years, so that now it seems that a party without him would be like having a Christmas celebration without Santa Claus.

John Michael Garvey and the Missus brightened up the corners with their smiles and kindly greetings for all. Among the Veterans long in service but full of pep were: Frank Howard, Newark Division engineer; Foreman William Ferguson, 56 years of service, Wheeling Division, Foreman T. Burke, Wheeling Division, 44 years service and Supervisor W. C. Wright, Wheeling Division, 39 years service.

Veteran M. C. Smith, claim agent, was looking them over and figuring on how to get the time this winter to take up dancing. Conductor Carr was there in all his glory. The Police Department was all dressed up in new regalia for the occasion. The Fletchers, the Flemings and the Brennans were there from Fairmont, and the Howards from Newark. There were special trains from Parkersburg, Fairmont and Holloway.

They say John Hart's heart is in Baltimore. Maybe it is now, but it wasn't on December 27.

"Anyone with claims for injured toes, feet or shoes, step this way," said Albert Gatewood. "No claims after you have left the floor."

Who was the belle of the ball? That's tellin' but judging by the program of a Wheeling young lady, it seemed that city took the prize. "Line forms on the right only," said our officer, "no crowding please."

A young lady from Fairmont was anxious to dance. She did too, but the feather was a serious interference. "Suggestions are always in order." Remove the feather when you want to dance!

"The silver tongued orator" was on hand to see that every one enjoyed himself. He's from Baltimore and he needs no introduction. Everyone knows Mr. Wood.

Did you see Frank Howard dancing? Some high stepper, we'll say. He has it all over many a youngster. Mrs. Howard didn't seem to mind either.

Miss Marie Slatterick, Magazine correspondent, Wheeling Division was very busy taking notes—but not for the Magazine—just names and addresses.

Twelve o'clock midnight, the witching hour. Engineer Fleming, Fairmont, shows indications of desiring to start for home. "Captain" Fletcher says "Train called for 1.30 a. m. If you don't want to dance any more, better go down to the coach and take a sleep!" They tell us, however, that there was not much sleeping in the coach on the return trip. Finally, Mr. Fleming gathers his flock, including, wife, daughter, son, other peoples wives, daughters, etc. and starts for the station. The bright lights of a Wheeling restaurant proved too tempting, and they all go in to "eat away the time."

Heart touching song by one of the ladies, several times during the evening. "Oh where, oh where is my little boy gone?" No answer!

Supervisor of Fuel Performance T. B. Burgess was on hand. He was much interested in the "performance" but we didn't see him taking part in it.

William Ferguson, 56 years of service, and T. Burke, with 44 years of service, were among the "Old Timers" who looked on.

E.W. Fiale, the C.N. & W. man, showed the world that he knew how to step off an old fashioned waltz as well as a modern fox trot.

Three cheers for Dancing Lew Foster! He made them dance who never had danced before.

And with all the fun it was surprising how many people had a word to say about business—"Best year ever—1923—for the road and all its people" was the general comment.

Fireman "Bob" Tweed Warns Engineer of Q. D. 90 Just in Time!

By A. E. ERICH, Magazine Correspondent

ON Sunday night, December 30, during a very heavy rainstorm, Fireman R.F. "Bob" Tweed, who resides at Vigo, Ohio, was at his home on his rest or lay over day. He was awakened by the noise of the storm and on looking out found that the water was very high. He immediately thought of Q. D. Freight Train No. 90, which was due in a short time. He obtained a barnyard lantern and waded through the water up the track toward the approaching train. By the time he had reached the track he could hear the train coming, but succeeded in getting a sufficient distance to flag the engineer; the train was stopped just before it ran into a place where the ballast had been badly washed from under the ties and rails. This train was running at a speed of 35 miles per hour when flagged by Mr. Tweed, and if it had not been for prompt action on his part a serious derailment would have occurred, resulting in bad delays, damage to property and perhaps loss of life.

Before entering the service as a fireman Mr. Tweed was employed as laborer, stationary fireman and boilermaker helper. On January 1, 1917, he was employed as freight fireman. September 17, 1917, he was furloughed for military service and after his service to his country was reinstated as fireman. At present he is on passenger run between Portsmouth and Parkersburg. Whether on or off duty he has the interest of the Company at heart, is a conscientious worker and a good employee. He has been highly commended for his prompt action in this instance.

Mr. Pryor's "Boys and Girls" Stage Fine Party on January 11

THE clerks of the Auditor Disbursements' Office held their first annual dance on January 11, at Community Hall. The evening's merriment opened with four dances, music being furnished by a good orchestra—Bill Fisher's. After the dances the following program was given: Piano Duet—Mesdames Cuddy and Hoffman.

Tenor solo—Roger Hoffman, accompanied on the piano by his mother. "In the Garden of My Heart."

Soprano solo—"A Kiss in the Dark." Miss Marie Bredehoeft, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Bredehoeft.

Fancy Dance—"Blue Danube Waltz." Miss Verna Warner.

Tenor solo—"I'm Trying so Hard to Forget." John Murphy.

Monologue "Outside the Law," and an interpretation of Gallagher and Shean, using the names of Messrs. Deverell, Pryor and Donovan, by Arthur Shanahan and Charles McMannis.

After the entertainment came ice cream and cake, and then dancing continued until midnight.

The hall was donated by Auditor of Disbursements G. H. Pryor, who is interested in all the social and athletic activities of "his boys and girls," and is the enthusiastic manager of their baseball team.

Those in charge of the entertainment and dance, to whom credit is due for the success of the evening, are J. F. Donovan, chief clerk; Misses Regina Coster, Bessie Cusack, "Two Cents" Lattin, (Verle) Anne Fitzpatrick, Lilian Schueler. Messrs. John Hoffman, "Jimmie" Nolan, Jim St. Leger, Tommie Campbell.

"Seen through the Keyhole" by the Magazine Reporter

Mrs. Cuddy and Mrs. Hoffman are splendid musicians. The latter is John Hoffman's wife.

Roger Hoffman has a fine voice. He was called on for an encore, but pleaded to be excused as he was suffering from a cold.

Miss Bredehoeft's encore was "I Love You Truly." Try as we would, we could not see, from our vantage point, whom she looked at while she sang it.

Much difficulty in seeing the "fine points" of Miss Warner's dance. Too much crowding up front. Why? Ask the bald heads.

John Murphy, during his song, kept his eyes "glued" on his fellow worker, Miss Regina Coster, and sang as if he were really trying to forget her. Fine detective work developed that it was only a joke and that nothing serious had occurred. As an encore, he sang the chorus again and was rewarded by a shower of pennies.

The Monologue of Messrs. Shanahan and McMannis was fine. Too bad the blue pencil won't pass it for reproduction in full.

Several young ladies tell us, with pride shining in their eyes, that Mr. Deverell is a splendid dancer.

Mr. and Mrs. Pryor were the center of attraction. To locate them, one had but to look for the crowd, and there they were, right in the center of it.

Young matrons gliding by on the arms of the single men; the girls didn't refuse to dance with the married men, either.

Three former employes and their hubbies attended the dance: Mrs. John Schaffer, nee Miss Myrtle Fifer and Mrs. Harry Frank, nee Miss Ida Susemihl, both in the Coupon Bureau; Mrs. Vernon Thomas, nee Miss Katherine Miller, M. of W. Bureau.

During the last dance, the room was a maze of confetti and serpentine, which added much to its gay appearance.

The evening was such a success that it is said there will be another entertainment after Easter. Needless to say, we'll be there "Lookin' through our key hole."

When Yellowstone Came to the Accounting Association

ON the evening of January 19, while the newly installed officers and the members of the Baltimore and Ohio Accounting Association made themselves comfortable and chewed on the ends of their cigars, Dr. George B. Shattuck, special representative, gave his famous Yellowstone lecture. The lecture was illustrated by beautifully colored slides which were made several years ago by Dr. Shattuck himself. The pictures were shown by Safety Moving Picture Operator Arthur D. Gans.

The meeting was one of special interest, it being the occasion of the installation of officers. With the exception of W. H. Orem, who was re-elected treasurer of the Association, those installed were all newly elected. John W. Sweitzer, chief clerk to Assistant Comptroller Deverell, was installed as the new president; J. C. McCahan, vice-president; R. M. Billmeyer, secretary, and W. H. Orem, treasurer.

The retiring president, F. F. Lollman, gracefully vacated the chair and President Sweitzer took his place. A shout, "Speech! Speech!" was heard, and the new president, declaring that he had prepared a speech but that he had forgotten it, took from his pocket an interesting looking document. The members "sat up and took notice," and the reading of the speech was begun. They wanted a speech and the president gave it to them. Unflinchingly he flailed them, collectively, then individually, for failing to attend meetings.

"We have a good attendance on special occasions like this," he declared, "but right here I want to know this. Where is Mr. _____."

And if the ears of the poor unfortunate who stayed at home did not burn, it was not the fault of the speech. But there was one who had his inning.

"Where," wailed the new president, "is Mr. J. P. O'Malley. Why isn't he here tonight? Is it because _____."

"But here I am," declared the assistant comptroller, rising from the depths of a back seat. "But go on," he added, "I want to hear what you had to say about me."

So Mr. Sweitzer read on, and before he had finished there were a dozen or more pairs of ears that were in for a good burning.

J. W. Myers, chief clerk to the comptroller, hastened to assure the members that the new president was in the right; that he (Mr. Myers) had been one of the delinquents, and that he made a solemn promise to attend future meetings regularly.

Comptroller John J. Ekin, to whom Mr. Sweitzer had paid a glowing tribute; Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts L. A. Lambert, and Assistant Comptroller J. P. O'Malley were called upon in turn to talk to "the boys." Their words were few, but inspirational, commending the president on his stand in connection with the absentees, charging him with his new duties, and wishing success to the organization.

Following the business meeting came Dr. Shattuck's splendid lecture on Yellowstone National Park. His graphic descriptions of the geysers and hot springs, the magnificent acreage of wild flowers; the buffalo, bears and elk that roam over the Yellowstone; the everlasting beauty of the Yellowstone Canon—were followed with intense interest by everyone.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by one of Restaurateur John Bopp's men, under the able supervision of the chairman of the "Eats Committee," T. Parkin Scott.

Leap Year, Boys, Better Wear a Uniform

The country stationmaster did not wear a uniform, and one day when a train came in he stood at the platform gate to take the passengers' tickets. A pretty girl came up to him, and when he held out his hand for her ticket she seized it, gave it a tight squeeze, and followed by giving him a hearty kiss.

The station master was surprised, but managed to say: "That's all very well, miss, but I want your ticket."

"Oh," replied the girl with a blush, "aren't you Uncle John?"

The Care of the Baby

By LILLIAN BETONY, Daughter of Section Foreman, Caddell, W. Va., and Medical Student, West Virginia University.

OF all the duties that fall to the lot of woman the care and proper rearing of children is the most important.

Of all professions open to women "Motherhood" is second to none, yet it is called "the unskilled profession." The price of ignorance in caring for babies is suffering, disease and death. It is estimated that every year in the United States 375,000 babies die mainly from diseases that could have been prevented if their mothers had known how to prevent them. It should be considered as important for a woman to be taught the most fundamental principles of caring for the baby, as it is how to make a new dress or decorate a room, how to entertain, how to make good candy, etc.

Since this subject has not been discussed to any extent, and I think it will be interesting as well as instructive to discuss some of the main phases, after reading up and research I submit this article, which I hope will aid our younger Baltimore and Ohio women in solving the problem of the every day care of the baby.

The following are points on the baby's clothing which no doubt every mother knows more or less about.

It should be loose, soft and warm enough, but not too warm, clean, but not too elaborate.

The binder should not have rough edges next to the skin, and should not be too tight. Skirts should have high necks and long sleeves and be of a material that will not irritate the skin.

Skirts and bands should come well down over the abdomen and should be pinned so as to prevent chilling.

Skirts of petticoats and dresses should not be so long that the baby cannot exercise its legs. Diapers should be changed as soon as they are wet or soiled. They should be well rinsed after washing to remove every trace of soap. Badly washed diapers cause inflammation of the hips.

Stockings should come well up over the knees. Except in the warmest weather the baby's legs and knees should not be left bare.

Shoes should have broad toes and left and right kept for the proper foot from the beginning.

Every baby, unless it is so weak that it should not be handled, should have its daily bath. Its own wash cloth, towels and soap should be provided and kept separate from those used by the rest of the family. The hour for the bath may be either in the morning or evening. It should not be right after feeding. If the baby is troublesome at night an evening bath will tend to better sleeping habits. In the morning, if the full bath is given at night, the face, hands, etc., should be washed. The room in which the bath is to be given should be warm and free from draughts. The clean clothing should be well aired all ready to put on. A tub or large basin of lukewarm water should be ready, with soft towels and wash cloths; pure soap, free from injurious ingredients and some bits of old cotton or linen for washing the baby's mouth. The head, neck and ears should be washed first, the scalp needs to be soaped daily to insure cleanliness. When the baby is a month old he can be put into the tub or basin to have the body washed. Tub bathing is always preferable for larger babies. The drying is done by soft patting rather than vigorous rubbing. Special care should be taken in drying the armpits and groin where chafing is likely to occur.

Chafing is caused chiefly by failure to keep dry the folds of skin in the armpit, groin, about the neck and ears, and sometimes behind the knees, and at the elbow joints, by lack of cleanliness or too rough clothing. To guard against it in the folds of the skin, these points at which chafing is liable to occur are dusted with a fine powder; talcum is commonly used. If the skin around these parts is dry and inclined to peel a little, cold cream or zinc oxides ointment may be used instead of powder. Chafing in a baby is nearly always due to neglect.

To wash a baby's mouth, a little clean lukewarm water, with a pinch of borax dissolved in it is used. A bit of clean cotton wrapped around the little finger is dipped into water and the inside swabbed out at least twice a day. Babies are likely to develop sore spots on the tongue. These can be prevented by proper care and careful daily washing.

The eyelids of a little baby sometimes become red and swollen with sometimes a creamy discharge. This is always a serious condition and a doctor should be called at once. Many babies have become blind because the doctor was not called soon enough.

Medium sized safety pins should always be used. Never under any circumstances use straight pins in a baby's clothes.

The baby from the beginning should have its own little bed. It may be a basket or a cradle; any other sleeping place will be better than having it sleep with its mother. Both will rest better.

Fresh air is essential to life. No baby can be healthy and strong and grow as it should without plenty of fresh air.

A baby will survive a great deal of neglect in other ways if it is properly fed. If it is not properly fed no amount of attention in other ways will compensate for ignorance or carelessness in this respect. The result of unwise feeding is usually a funeral. When there are signs that the baby's digestive organs are not working properly, mothers sometimes, acting on the advice of some well meaning neighbor, give it one thing after another because the neighbor said "it did her baby good." It requires only a very small amount of promiscuous experimenting with a baby's food to produce a sick baby.

The only safe way, if the baby's food seems not to agree with it, is to consult a reliable physician and follow his directions to the letter. The best food for a baby is its mother's milk. The baby's stomach at birth only holds about two tablespoonsful. At six months it holds three quarters of a cup full. The baby needs to be fed more frequently than grown folks because its stomach is small, but it is bad practice to train a baby to be fed every time it cries. Regular hours of feeding should be established from the beginning. After three months the daily feedings should be three hours apart.

Doctors all say that water should be offered to every baby two or three times a day, but experience goes to show that in the summer time in extremely hot weather water should be offered to every baby, but in winter there is enough water in the mother's milk, or the milk fed to a very small baby, that it does not require it. Quite often a baby of more than five or six months cries because it is thirsty. Cool boiled water should be given it in preference to water from the faucet or pump.

When the baby cries, do not think it is always from hunger. It may be indigestion. It is never good practice to take it up whenever it cries. Babies who have been trained to expect to be taken up every time they cry easily become veritable little tyrants and upset the peace of the entire household.

Colic is often relieved by a drink of warm water, by applying a hot flannel to the abdomen, by gentle rubbing of the abdomen beginning at the right groin and going up and around or by laying it on the stomach over a hot plate or a hot water bottle. If the pain persists it may be necessary to give an enema to empty the lower bowel.

Drugs should never be given to a baby to relieve pain except on a definite order of a doctor. Many of the pain relieving medicines contain opium or some other substance which acts on the baby's brain causing a stupor and seriously damaging its general health. Hundreds of babies are killed each year as a result of promiscuous drugging on the advice of neighbors and friends.

Beer, wine or liquor of any kind should not be given to a baby.

Bringing the baby to the table with the family has often proved to be the first step to a sickness which caused its death.

The baby who is being nursed at its mother's breast does not need potatoes, nor pork rind to suck, nor bread and gravy, nor crackers and milk. If these are not given to the baby by some injudicious person, he will not know anything about them and will not want them. It is not unusual in some homes to find that a baby of a few months has been given beer or sausage or a richly iced cake or candy, or decaying fruit. Cucumber pickles have been given to a baby of a year, while tea and bread constitute a staple article of infant's food in thousands of homes. Where such blunders in feeding are persisted in, deaths among babies under two years, as might be expected, are common occurrences. (Continued on page 46)

From Parkersburg, W. Va., Comes This Little Business Frock

MISS JANICE THORN, Agent's Office, Parkersburg, is the artist who fashioned for herself this practical dress of tan linen. It was made from Baltimore and Ohio Pattern No. 4216.

This pattern should appeal to the business girl, for it is a pretty costume that can be utilized for business wear as well as for the home. The collar is convertible. The sleeve may be finished in wrist length or to the elbow. The graceful, becoming fullness of this model is held by the belt sections over the back and front. Prunella or twill for service and kasha, crepe or velvet for a more dressy costume would lend themselves to this pattern.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes, 36 to 48 inches, inclusive. A 38-inch size requires 3¾ yards of 54-inch material. To make the collar of contrasting material, 36 inches wide, requires ¼ yard. The width of the dress at the bottom is 2¼ yards.

The price of the pattern is only 10 cents. Please use the coupon provided on the pattern page.

Let's Begin Our Spring Sewing

By PEGGY

NOW is the time to begin our dress-making for the Spring. The shops are full of lovely new materials, and an early start in dressmaking saves a hasty grabbing of some ready-made frock at the last minute. Plan now and by making your own clothes you'll find that you may have two or three for the price of one. Economy is our watchword for this year.

The new fashions are simple and delightful, making our fingers simply itch to get at our spring sewing. If you do not find the pattern for which you are looking, the new Spring and Summer Book of Fashions is now ready. The price is 12 cents in stamps. Use the coupon and send your order, as well as the orders for all patterns shown here, to Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE Pattern Bureau, 1188-1190 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, New York. This will give you quick, first class mail service.

4621. Collar and cuffs of this neat model are of checked white and yellow gingham, the frock and sleeves are of yellow poplin. This is a good style for challie, poplin, or linen. It could also be of batiste with collar and cuffs of embroidery.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 4-year size requires  $2\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 27-inch material. For collar and cuffs of contrasting material  $\frac{3}{8}$  yard is required. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4641. The straight line dress is here shown with pleasing and attractive features. One may have the fronts rolled low and open, or buttoned to the neck. The sleeve is pretty in wrist length with the narrow tab cuff, and very smart and comfortable in elbow length.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $4\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. The width at the foot is  $2\frac{1}{8}$  yards. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4637. Here we have the latest expression in blouses, coupled with a smart skirt in wrap effect. This style is especially suited to growing girls. It may be developed in wool rep, jersey, serge or broadcloth. Braid or binding, or a simple finish of machine stitching is nice for decoration.

flounces. It is a good style for broadcloth, mohair, serge, twill or kasha.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $6\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material, if made with flounces. If made without flounces  $4\frac{7}{8}$  yards will be required. The width at the foot is  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4610. Easy to adjust and very comfortable is this apron. One could make this of sateen or gingham. It is also attractive for cretonne with binding in a plain contrasting color, or, for unbleached muslin, with bands of striped seersucker.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: small 34-36 medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; extra large 46-48 inches bust measure. Medium size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 27-inch material. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4644. The "Domino" is a simple time honored masquerade "dress," suitable for all figures, and for many materials. One could choose black satin or sateen with the lining in self or a contrasting color.

This pattern is cut in 4 sizes: small, 34-46; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. Medium size requires  $6\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material. The width at the foot is 2 yards. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4666. The new and pretty plaids are nice for this model, or, one could use serge, or wool rep. Wash materials are also attractive for this style.

It is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $3\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 32-inch material.

To make revers, collar and cuffs of contrasting material will require 1 yard. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4634. Plaid woolen in brown tones was used for this model. The trimming bands are of tan color wool crepe. This is a good style for velveteen and for all wash materials.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size requires 3 yards of 40-inch material. To trim as illustrated requires  $\frac{3}{8}$  yard of 32-inch material cut crosswise. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

The pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16-year size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 54-inch material. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4647. Here is a very attractive model, that may be finished with or without the 4349. Embroidered voile and organdy were chosen for this pleasing model. It is also nice in silk, gingham and crepe. Dotted Swiss and organdy could also be combined for this style. The bertha trimming may be omitted. The closing may be at the centre back, as illustrated or on the shoulders.

This pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size will require 3 yards of one material 40-inches wide. If made as illustrated,  $\frac{7}{8}$  yard of contrasting material, and  $2\frac{1}{8}$  yards figured material is required. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4612. Household duties will be lightened when one is attired in so comfortable and pretty an "apron frock" as is here portrayed. The closing is at the left side, and the right side boasts of a very convenient pocket.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. The width at the lower edge is 2 yards. Medium size will require  $5\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 27-inch material. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4619. This model provides a separate blouse. The overalls are sleeveless, and the body portion of the back is buttoned to the waist portion. Scrsucker, denim, or gingham could be used for the overalls, and cambric for the blouse, or the entire suit may be of one material.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. A 4-year size requires  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards for the overalls, and  $1\frac{1}{8}$  yards for the blouse.

4315. Checker percale was used for this model, with chambray for trimming. This style also lends itself well to gingham, cretonne, crash and linen. In pongee with cross—or pass-stitching it will make a serviceable, washable dress.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 6-year size requires 3 yards of 32-inch material. If collar, bands and facings are to be of contrasting material  $\frac{3}{8}$  yard is required.

4620. This is a good model for twill, serge, corduroy, velveteen and for all wash materials.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. A 4-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 27-inch material. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4617. The plait fulness and "V" neck line are new and attractive style features. In black satin or blue serge this design will make a serviceable day dress. It is also good for crepe weaves or wool rep.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 40-inch size requires  $4\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. The width at the foot with plaits extended is about  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4636. Green jersey cloth or brown serge, or, the ever reliable navy blue in wool crepe would be very serviceable for this model. Braid or stitchery could be used for the decoration.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size requires  $1\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 34-inch material. Price, 10 cents. Use coupon.

4615. This portrays a one piece straight line model, with a sleeveless overblouse in tunic style. It is a good model for combining two different material. Velvet and figured crepe, or lace would be a good contrast. Or satin with brocaded silk or chiffon.

Our Little Railroaders

*Ding, dong, dell!
What will keep us well?
Fresh air and exercise—
Listen while I tell:*

Getting Straight

There was a crooked man

Who walked a crooked mile,
He bought a tube of tooth paste,
Said he, 'I'll be in style.

'I'll brush my crooked teeth,
I'll wash my crooked face,
'And down the crooked mile I'll run
And try to win a race.'

He set about quite crookedly,
But something happened soon,
His face when washed quite thoroughly
Grew rounded like the moon.
His crooked teeth, brushed properly,
Grew straighter every day,
He won the race; the crooked mile
Had straightened out straightway.

wet weather. This will save health, time and money.

3. Germs are killed by light and ventilation. Keep your room well ventilated and have plenty of light.

4. Fruit that is handled by the public is likely to contain germs. Wash your fruit before eating it.

5. Children should have plenty of fresh air, exercise, sunshine, healthful foods and lots of sleep.

6. Take good care of the hair. Wash it often and brush it thoroughly. Do not wet it everytime you comb it.

7. Clean your teeth three times a day if possible. Enamel is easily broken off by biting things like nuts, string, opening a being able to walk. And you know what it means not to be able to play with other girls and boys: you know what it means to Father and Mother to have you ill; you know that, besides worry and work for them, it costs a lot of money for doctors and nurses. Besides, think what a lot of suffering sickness brings.

I know, then, that none of our Little Railroaders will want to be ill this year. This is why we are giving the most of our page this month to telling you some ways in which you can keep well.

One of the nicest helps we have is a health booklet sent us by Hazel Grimes, of Martinsburg. Hazel made this booklet at school. Each page is nicely illustrated, and I wish that I could show each picture here. However, here are some of the splendid rules which she gives. I wonder how many of these Our Little Railroaders are already following.

1. Cheat the doctor by wearing warm clothes and keeping your feet dry in cold, knife blade, etc. Never pick your teeth with a pin; use dental floss.

8. Get the right size in shoes to fit your feet. Shoes that are too small cause corns and foot trouble. Do not wear pointed shoes.

9. Give the girls and boys plenty of fresh fruits. Apples, pears, peaches, oranges and prunes are especially good.

10. Plenty of hot water is good for everybody. Wash your hands before eating. Housekeepers should always wash their hands before preparing a meal.

How many of you girls and boys observe these splendid health rules? What do you think of them? For every letter that Aunt Mary receives during the month of February from little girls and boys, telling how they keep well and happy, she will send to the writer a little surprise. Let's hear from all of you. Address: Aunt Mary, Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Maryland.

Mary and Her Mother

By AGATHA TYSINGER, Cumberland, Md.

THERE was once a little girl named Mary who did not like to work.

Day by day she became more lazy. Mary's mother was very poor and had to carry wood every day from the forest to the little town to sell it.

One day, Mary's mother said to her. "Dear daughter, will you help me to carry wood to town?" "Oh, I guess I'll have to work all my life," said Mary, in a loud voice, as she started to pick up the wood.

As Mary started down the road, she became lazy, and without thinking what she did, threw all the wood on the ground.

"As she sat down by the roadside she heard an old man singing. She saw him coming up the road and this was his song;

"If a task is once begun
Never leave it till its done,
Be the labor great or small,
Do it well or not at all."

Mary was frightened, but the old man said he did not come to harm, but to help her. She told him all about the wood on the ground and how hard her mother had to work. The old man told her to go home and tell mother that she would help to carry wood every day. She thanked him for curing her of laziness.

Every day Mary helped her mother to carry wood. One day as she was picking up the wood, she found a large sack under it, filled with gold. In it was a note saying, "To Mary and her Mother from the little old man of the forest." After that, Mary and her Mother lived very happily.

Teacher—"Johnny, why are you so late?"

Boy—"I've got new boots on, and mother forgot to cut the string."—Exchange.

This One Came from France

"So is it your brother who tied the frying pan to the poor cat's tail. That was a naughty thing to do. You wouldn't do such a thing, would you?"

"Who? I? Oh, never, never!"

"But why did you let him do it? Why didn't you beg him not to do it?"

"Oh, I could not. I was very busy."

"And what were you doing?"

"I had to hold the cat."

Dear Girls and Boys:

I have a little surprise in store for each one of you who sends in an answer to the puzzles. A man who lives in New York, and who manufactures something that is, or should be, used by every little girl and boy, has sent me enough of that something to give a package of it to every girl and boy who answers the puzzles on this page.

Now, there are two puzzles this time. If you guess one right, you will receive one little package as a reward; but if you guess both puzzles correctly, you will get two. Here are the puzzles:

I

Guess what is in the package, and what it is used for.

My Whole is the name of the article in the package which is offered as a prize for the correct answer to this puzzle. It is made up of two words, of five letters each.

The first word is the name of something used by every little girl and boy in eating and in talking.

Take away the last letter and leave the sound of a horn.

Take away the last letter from this, and leave a word meaning also.

Take away the last letter from this and leave a preposition of two letters.

The second word means to stick, as with glue.

Take away the last letter and leave a word meaning that which has come and gone.

Take the last letter from this and leave a French word meaning a step.

Take the last letter from this and leave a nickname for father.

The one letter remaining is one of the most frequently used letters in the dictionary. Can you guess what this prize is?

II

This is a puzzle of three words; there are five letters in the first word, four in the second, and five in the third, making fourteen in all.

My first is in SICK, my second in WELL, My third in SEE, in FEEL, in TELL; My fourth is found in EAT and LAUGH, My fifth is in ONE, but not in HALF.

My sixth is in CRY, my seventh in GO, My eighth in RUN, my ninth in NO.

My tenth you'll find in TAKE and PUT, My eleventh in FEET, but not in FOOT; My twelfth is like my eleventh, you know, My thirteenth and fourteenth are both in THROW.

My whole is what the doctors say
You should do at least twice every day.

Send all your answers, as usual, to:
Aunt Mary, Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Md. And
please write your full address on each letter.

Lorraine, little daughter of Car Inspector J. W. Thorpe, West Newton, Pa.

Care of the Baby

A good general rule is to give the baby no solid food until it has teeth. Until a child is seven or eight months old its digestive organs are not able to digest starchy foods or solid foods of any kind. Every change in a baby's diet should be made gradually. Before weaning it should gradually be accustomed to other foods. It is a very bad plan to wean a baby in hot weather. If a baby gains in weight, is ordinarily contented and does not vomit, his food both in quantity and quality must be nearly right. It is a good plan to weigh the baby every month for the first year.

Some points well worth remembering when a baby is teething are. Don't blame teeth for all the signs of sickness a baby shows. If a baby is a year old and shows no teeth it is wise to consult a doctor and try to find out the reason. The custom of thrusting a "dummy" into the baby's mouth and trying to keep it exercising its jaws all the time is one to be ashamed of. It proclaims to the world the ignorance of the mother. Besides it may be the cause of serious throat trouble later on, even if it doesn't appear to be injurious immediately.

Protect the baby's eyes from the bright sunlight when it is out of doors.

Keep flies away. Flies are disease carriers.

The baby's bowels should move every day. Four passages may be expected during the first few weeks. No baby should be allowed to go over 36 hours without a movement.

From the time a baby is four or five months old training in controlling the bowels should begin, and it is usually a mother's or nurse's fault if a baby at eighteen months does not know enough to save soiling or wetting diapers during the day.

Physicians have found that babies who have been trained to keep a dummy in their mouth during teething, or to use a comforter, are more frequently the victims of adenoids and other throat troubles than other children.

From the time a baby is three months old it is a good plan to lay it flat on the floor on a blanket every day, where there are no draughts and let it stretch and kick. If it attempts to stand up on its feet too soon its efforts should be discouraged. The bones are soft and "bow legs" may be the result of too early attempts at standing or walking. Trotting the baby on the knee is one of the worst forms of exercise.

"Oh," laughed Mrs. Franklin, "I had lots of beaux then. Those were the days of the horse and buggy. It was quite nice to go driving behind a spirited horse with a nice young man. But sometimes there were too many nice young men with horses and buggies. Then I would choose the one that I wanted, and to the others I would say, 'you will have to ask my papa.' I knew that when they asked him he would always say no. My father never wanted me to marry, and when at last I did decide to marry, the ceremony was performed at my father's bedside as he was dying."

The reception given Mrs. Franklin by the Pastime Club was quite informal. Decorations of chrysanthemums and the laughter of happy voices of young people, most of whom were descendants of the friends of Lucy Ellis Franklin, must have reminded her of the time when, years ago, the halls rang with the gaiety of her many friends and admirers. Frequently, in a spirit of fun, Mrs. Franklin called these young people by the names of their grandparents whom she used to know, and, to her great delight, some of them did not know whether she meant to tease them or not. She was in a gay mood that day and she met everybody with an amusing anecdote or some witty remark. When she saw the stars and stripes hoisted before the door she jumped from her chair and cried: "Hurrah for Lucy! They're doing for me what they did for George Washington!"

Refreshments were served by the young women of Vincennes. In the ice cream were moulded the significant figures "'46," recalling the date on which Lucy Ellis visited St. Louis.

"It has been one of the loveliest days of my life," said Mrs. Franklin as with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Franklin, from Rankin, Ill., she bade farewell to those who had gathered to do her honor. "If I live for another fifty years I'll come back again to celebrate."

The Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE was invited to participate in the celebration by Mr. George W. Purcell, editor of the "Vincennes Sun." The "Vincennes Commercial" was also represented by Mr. O. V. Agar. The general committee on arrangements for the reception consisted of President John Boyd, Ex-President W. C. Mason, and Secretary Harry V. Sommes, of the Pastime Club. These were assisted by George Gardner, J. T. Lindsay (one of our travelling freight agents), Robert Foulkes, C. E. Gregg, Leroy Badollet, Guy McJimsey, R. C. Gibson, W. A. Willmore, R. D. Robinson, Oscar Laue, B. F. LeMond and O. V. Agar. There was also a large committee of women of Vincennes who did everything possible to welcome Mrs. Franklin and her friends, and the stranger as well.

Vincennes Hospitable and Quaint

Vincennes is a city of hospitality. Quaint old town, established by the French, the home of a number of Indian tribes, made famous by such people as Colonel Vigo, General George Rogers Clark, Father Gibault, William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor, and a host of others, not the least of whom was Judge Abner T. Ellis, Vincennes has grown to be a staunch little railroad center of the West. It is necessary to be seen to be appreciated. From the time that you arrive at the station and meet the old blind fiddler, who, for your benefit and his own financial reasons, greets you with "Down in Poverty Row," until you have gone through the old William Henry Harrison House, rich in historic significance as is the town itself, you seem to be under the magic spell of that famous novel, "Alice of Old Vincennes."

The old fort of Sackville, the first newspaper office, the spot on which the women of the town fed the forces of George Rogers Clarke; the old Cathedral Library, rich in antique literature; the first capitol of Indiana Territory, the trysting place of "Jeff" Davis and Jessie Taylor, and all of the modern buildings as well, are justly the prides of the citizens of Vincennes. Then, too, there are the modern factories, thrusting up their columns of steam and flame on the grounds where once the Indians built their campfires, and where the French had their trading posts. Old Vincennes and new Vincennes! The two are united and this union, together with the spirit of those who dwell therein, makes a town well worthy of song and story. Her citizens are loyal and stalwart; latchstrings hang outside for the visiting stranger; every doorway seems to swing open at our approach; the spirit of such citizens as Abner Ellis still abounds. And long afterward, when the swift Baltimore and Ohio train is carrying us over that section once known as the Ohio and Mississippi, homeward bound, we dream of a pleasant day in a pleasant little town.

Cigars Are Passenger's Token of Courtesy of Conductor Reese

SHORTLY before Christmas, Conductor N. E. Reese, Baltimore Division, had occasion to extend to one of our passengers the kind of courtesy which is always forthcoming from Baltimore and Ohio conductors of his type. He did not know that it had made the impression which was evidenced a few days later when the postman played Santa Claus and delivered to him a box of fine cigars with the card of Mr. Alex. Milne, manager of the Ingle-Nook furniture studios in Washington, D. C., enclosed therein. On the reverse, over Mr. Milne's signature, were the words: "With compliments and thanks for your courtesy."

Baltimore and Ohio employees do not expect rewards from passengers for extending to them the type of courtesy which we think is peculiarly our own on the Baltimore and Ohio, but it is always nice to know that our efforts are worthy of a token of the kind mentioned. In acknowledging the kindness of Mr. Milne, Mr. Reese wrote him as follows:

Baltimore, Md., December 5, 1923

Mr. Alex. Milne
2015 F Street, N. W.
Washington, D. C.

My Dear Sir:

I hasten to acknowledge receipt of the elegant box of Rosa de Bulgaria which I received this evening for which please accept my sincere thanks. I also want to assure you that I will enjoy every one of them during my spare time.

It is a pleasure for Baltimore and Ohio men to render faithful service. We are sincerely interested in the success of those who are endeavoring to manage our Road successfully and make it the best railroad in the world.

I sincerely hope that when you find it necessary to make a trip either for business or for pleasure you will always choose the Baltimore and Ohio in order that you may enjoy the best service of any railroad in the land.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) N. E. REESE

Special Note—St. Louis Division

"Not, however, because they feel obliged to do so, but because they want to do so"

ON July 7, 1923 when Bedford local was leaving Mitchell, Conductor Lynn Robinson and Brakeman James Purkhiser noticed smoke issuing from a car in the extreme east end of Mitchell yard. They stopped their train and upon investigation found Baltimore and Ohio 96586, loaded with lime, on fire. They switched car out, took it to cinder pit and after working on it for an hour, turned it over to the yardmaster. Car was taken to the Lime Company's quarry where contents were transferred to another car. Investigation developed that rain during the night, and a leaky roof, had permitted water to get into the lime, causing it to slack. Prompt action on the part of this crew averted serious loss.

On December 10, 1923, the same crew was switching at Bedford, with Engineer "Sam" Green and Fireman Roy Carr. The track spread, derailing engine drivers. After rerailling engine, track was in such condition that work could not be completed. The section men were at the other end of section. On December 12, while doing work at Bedford 18 inches were broken out of rail. Sectionmen were again at the other end of section. The entire crew, consisting of the four men mentioned, in each case went to the section house, secured material and repaired track, after which they went ahead in the usual manner as if nothing had happened. To have called section men to make repairs would have resulted in at least two hours delay.

These men have been highly commended by Superintendent Stevens for their interest and for their action in helping to "Stop That Leak."

Retreat from care that ever must be thine:
How blest is he who crowns, in shades like these,
A youth of labor with an age of ease.*

OLIVER GOLDSMITH—"The Deserted Village"

William N. Herrold

Was born on May 17, 1858 in Madison Township, Pa. He was educated in the Public Schools. He entered service of the Allegheny Valley Railroad in March, 1878 and served three years as brakeman. From April to September, 1881 he was in the employ of the Pittsburgh, Titusville and Buffalo Railroad. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on October 2, 1881 and in June, 1882 was promoted to conductor. In August, 1883 he was appointed yard master and in 1913 station master. He held the latter position at the time of his recent retirement.

Thomas D. McGee

Was born on May 29, 1857 at Medina, N. Y. His first railroad experience was with the Buffalo and Jamestown R. R., now a part of the Erie, as brakeman, in 1876. He was then in the employ of the D. L. and W. M. K. and T., Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Mexican Central and B. R. & P. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on April 15, 1892 as brakeman on the old Valley Railroad, now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio. In 1892, because of an injury received in an accident, he was transferred to position of targetman, which he held at the time of his recent retirement.

Daniel Younkin

Was born in April, 1855. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service as a watchman on August 18, 1886 on the Connellsville Division. In October, 1892 he was transferred to position of laborer and on August 1, 1910 was again made watchman. On June 16, 1913 he was transferred to trackman which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

Thomas Lawlor

Was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, on March 17, 1858. He came to New York in 1859. In 1873 he went to Chicago, and was employed on various railroads until 1901. On July 16, 1902 he entered Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Railroad service, as flagman and held this position until his recent retirement.

Buchanan Hiatt

Was born in May, 1858. His first railroad experience was in 1878, when he was employed in a gang under John Kelly, grading at Red Rock and later at City Farm, between McKeesport and Pittsburgh. His special recollection of the latter place is that almost every other house had a small pox quarantine flag. His next work was at Round Bottom, Cumberland Division, on a stretch of track known as Seven Curves. He was grading third track, under "Dick" Welsh, and later moved to Rollings Station, repairing track, under Supervisor "Pat" Templeton and Foreman Coleman Donahue, after which he left the service temporarily. In May, 1884 Mr. Hiatt secured a position as brakeman and in 1886 was promoted to conductor, his first trip being with John Billmyer and his second with "Jim" Chapman. Because of a physical breakdown, Mr. Hiatt was given position as watchman in January, 1922 which he held until his recent retirement.

S. D. Brown

Was born on August 1, 1857. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on August 1, 1897 as trackman and held this position at the time of his recent retirement.

Peter B. LeGates

Was born at Laurel, Del., on June 6, 1854. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on June 1, 1885 as fireman on the Philadelphia Division, working out of Wilmington. In 1888 he went to Philadelphia as tender repairman, the shops being then located at 58th Street and Woodland Avenue. He was one of the first employes at East Side Shops and had been in continuous service at that point until his recent retirement.

Business Getting Suggestions

Dont Let Go!

WHILE waiting for my car (Brill) the other morning, a prosperous looking man came driving down the road and offered me a lift to town in his limousine. In the course of conversation he said that he was in an exceptional hurry as he wanted to get to his place of business and catch a train for New York. It didn't take long to find out that he was going via the Baltimore and Ohio from Camden Station. Among other things he said:

"What has happened down there at the Baltimore and Ohio? I have recently been approached by three or four of my friends from various departments asking me to ship via that line. In my particular case, it wasn't necessary because I feel that the Baltimore and Ohio is a home enterprise and should be supported by the people of Baltimore, but a business man can't help noticing and appreciating the interest that is being manifested among those down the line. To me, such solicitations have much greater weight than those from men especially designated for that purpose."

You can see that this thing has taken a hold on the public, so don't let go.

In the Realm of the Riddle

"The Good Guessers" is an organization of Baltimore puzzlers that meets once a month at the homes of its various members. There are no constitution, by-laws and rules, no officers and no dues or assessments. The crowd just gets together and has an enjoyable evening according to its likes. The first meeting was held at the home of N. Jineer in November, the second meeting at the home of Primrose and Pearlle Glen on January 10, and the third meeting at L. M. N. Terry's home in February. Other meetings will be held monthly and any puzzler, whether a resident of Baltimore and vicinity or from afield, will be made welcome. If you want to know about these meetings drop a line to me and I will keep you fully posted. The Good Guessers would like to embrace every active puzzler in Baltimore and its vicinity, whether a member of the National Puzzlers League or not.

Fine MAGAZINE Representation on Newark Division

THE best illustration of how a MAGAZINE correspondent can literally honeycomb his division for news is afforded by the example given by the Newark Division under the able lead of Division Correspondent B. A. Oatman.

Those who note the comparative representations from the various divisions in the MAGAZINE have probably been impressed by the amount of space given to Newark Division notes in the MAGAZINE during the last couple of years, and the reason therefor is easy to find. It is in the organization of fifteen assistant correspondents appointed by Mr. Oatman, as follows:

Edith Roach, Freight House, Columbus; R. Kennett, Columbus Station; F. G. Hadley, agent, Mt. Vernon; G. R. Steen, Freight House and Marietta Station; Mary Timberlake, Division Engineer's Office, Newark; R. T. George, Accounting Department, Newark; C. R. Stone, Office of Division Freight Agent, Newark; B. A. Oatman, Newark Division and Shops, Newark; R. Schemenauer, Station, Sandusky; C. H. Somers, Station, Zanesville; Edw. Fisher, Station, Mansfield; F. C. Horn, Shelby; R. C. Moorehead, cartoonist, Dillon; H. Markham, cartoonist, Newark; C. C. Grimm, general yardmaster, Newark; A. S. Wahl, Yard Office, Newark.

Although the volume of material sent in by these correspondents each month is always embarrassing to the MAGAZINE staff because of the large amount of blue penciling which must be done, we nevertheless are glad to have such full representation because we then know that probably not an issue of the MAGAZINE goes by without there being some items in the Among Ourselves department of particular interest to practically every employee.

Of course, this splendid organization of Mr. Oatman's reflects also the hearty co-operation on the part of Superintendent Kruse and other division officers.

Among Ourselves

Baltimore and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio Annex Buildings

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBEEK

When I receive my copy of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE, I begin at the very beginning and read it through, advertisements and all. In this way I absorb all the good things.

One of the interesting things in the December number was L. E. Scarborough's article on the running of a train in England, making the longest non stop run in the world. The interesting part to me was the practice of detaching coaches placed at the end of a train, at certain stations, while running at high speed. This is something that might be practiced in the case of our Capitol Limited making the run from Washington to Cumberland, cutting out Martinsburg, and thence on the run to Pittsburgh, eliminating all stops by the slipping of cars placed at the end of the train.

Our January number was a thrift publication, and had I known of it, I could have made a readable paragraph anent the thrift of Albert E. Frankton. After the time had expired for sending in copy for the January MAGAZINE, this young gentleman produced a Christmas check and declared that he was about to deposit it in our Relief Savings Department. Mr. Franklin is a good stenographer. I look in vain for slips in his work, but they are not there, and now that I know that he is inclined to habits of thrift, he has risen still higher in my estimation. Please understand that to be thrifty one is not necessarily stingy. By no means!

The Law Department needed a high class stenographer in December, and Miss Kimble was welcomed into our fold. The Law Department seems to have oceans of luck in getting the best stenographers obtainable. The touch system as exemplified by this young lady is really an art.

When I came to the Law Department forty-two years ago, the touch system, as applied to the typewriter (and not to one's pocketbook) was in an embryonic state; had not been thought of, and now, noiseless Remingtons manipulated by skilled operators, are an every day sight; that is—in the Law Department.

On December 22, I traveled to Bethlehem to see my little sweetheart, Susan Anne Trageser; returned to Baltimore on Sunday following, and then went back to Bethlehem on Monday to be present and enjoy the Christmas festivities. Some one remarked that I was silly to make the extra trip; that I would be worn out, whereupon I responded there was no danger of that, as riding on Baltimore and Ohio and Philadelphia and Reading trains today, over 100 pound rails, is the summit of contentment and ease.

Engineering Department

Correspondent, O. K. EDEN

The "Prospective Business" card, enclosed with each copy of the MAGAZINE, is for each of us to use. While not everybody can solicit business, some of us have friends who patronize competitive lines and it is up to us to try and procure their business, be it passenger or freight, for our road. Boost The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad—the Company for which you work!

Our department was not lacking in Christmas spirit last year, as was indicated by the beautiful little tree and trimmings. Headed by our "wild Irish rose" "Jerry," who acted as buyer, Vernon Bromwell and Miss "Jennie," who did the decorating, and "Alf" Herr, who supervised and did everything but work, we soon had a tree that anyone would have been proud to own.

As in former years, a collection was taken up and the proceeds, amounting to thirty dollars, sent to The Baltimore News to be divided among the Twelve Opportunities.

We understand that Harry Thorne made a hit at the Christmas party given by the Auditor of Passenger Receipts, Sutton Building, with his "vocal(?) solo." Never knew you could "sing" so well, Harry!

A meeting of the Engineering Department accountants was held in Special Accountant Skilling's Office, Baltimore, on January 3, to devolve a method to expedite the handling of operating expenses in connection with 940 improvement work. It was decided that department bills, together with Form 930-B, will be sent direct to the district engineers for checking, distributing and approval, and be returned to the Engineering Department Accounting Bureau through the Chief Engineer's Office. The Stores Department bills, heretofore made up as one bill covering the System, will now be rendered according to district engineers' jurisdiction. If necessary, further meetings will be held. Those present at the meeting were: Messrs. C. F. Bennett, cost engineer; J. K. Skilling, special accountant; F. E. Johnson, assistant general storekeeper; H. L. Pfeiffer, inspector of accounts, Accounting Department; C. T. Kunkel, chief clerk to Mr. Skilling; H. C. Harrison, chief clerk, and C. L. Righter, accountant, District Engineer Mather's Office; C. H. Holtzworth, chief clerk, and F. C. Eberly, accountant, District Engineer Clarke's Office; J. J. Kolker, accountant, District Engineer Griffith's Office; D. M. Sauerhammer, head clerk, M. of W. Department; George Hohman and R. N. Frye, accountants, Cost Engineer's Office, and F. M. Schultz, chief accountant, Engineering Department.

Engineering Department Boys—A. Mitchell, Jr., and C. E. Zeman

The accompanying photograph is of two of our "shieks" from the Surveys Department, A. Mitchell, Jr., and C. E. Zeman. We understand that when they returned from Staten Island, after spending several weeks there working on plans, etc., they broke many a maiden's heart. "Alex" is quite a poet (even though he does know it) among other things, and "Charlie," well, the girls just have to dance with him to fall head over heels in love. That boy certainly shakes a wicked hoof! (George J. Goolic, please note!—O. K. E.)

With the experience recently obtained by our drafting force in the use of the newly purchased hair drier (in connection with preparing maps used as exhibits in the recent hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the proposed consolidation of railroads), it should not be difficult for any of them to secure employment in the most exclusive beauty parlor.

I want to thank those of you who were kind enough to heed the call for back numbers of the MAGAZINE. Bear in mind, please, that old numbers can always be used.

Office of District Engineer, Pittsburgh

Correspondent, J. M. WHEALAN

Our recent statement to the effect that if the public is once sold on Baltimore and Ohio service there would be no further need for worry, has been borne out by actual experience. Miss Ward has demonstrated the fact, and we hope to have the story for the March issue. Do not be afraid to talk your Railroad, in season and out. There are shippers and travelers without number who are putting up with indifferent or ordinary service elsewhere, who cannot be blamed, as they no doubt imagine that they have the best service obtainable. You and I know better and it is our particular job to sell them The Baltimore and Ohio IDEA. Once sold on that IDEA, my friends, and we have made a lifelong friend and customer for the Railroad. How can we let the opportunity go by?

Office of District Engineer, Cincinnati, Ohio

Correspondent, GEO. F. DAUBENMERKL

It is with deep regret that we announce the death of George Kopp, Jr., former stenographer in this office, on December 28. We all extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved wife and family.

Levelman "Joe" Rowan will be careful whom he snaps at in the future. You can't tell by the clothes they wear, "Joe." How 'bout it?

Assistant Engineer Callahan has taken up the side line of "Art Critic." Any aspiring students should confer with "Pete."

F. W. Klein is employed as stenographer vice the late George Kopp, Jr.,

H. L. Scribner is popular around the Cincinnati office. You can always hear the boys asking "You ain't worried now, are you?" What do they mean, "Scrib?"

Ask F. W. Klein how the butter and egg business—mostly egg, is getting along.

Levelman Rowan says that working along Mill Creek is not without its advantages, the air in some localities being surcharged with an aroma of by-gone (?) days. So near and yet so far, "Jide," what?

This is the wonderful little danseuse, whose exhibition at the Christmas Entertainment of the General Freight Claim Department was much appreciated. Miss Dorris Perry

We are sorry to report that Wallace Oest, clerk, is ill with diphtheria. We hope that the case will not be serious, and that he will be back soon.

Dan Cupid must have been a busy little fellow just before Christmas, judging from the number of diamond rings that have made their appearance. Ethel Stephens is the victim of his arrow in this office. As yet, she hasn't confided in us when it will be.

"Bob" Burnett, Information Desk, Camden Station, by his keen and well trained eye for a particular shade of green, won the gratitude of a passenger, Mr. H. M. Fleishman, using Train 524 to Philadelphia. Mr. Fleishman stopped at the ticket window to purchase his ticket and in taking out the money, unconsciously pulled out a roll of bills. It was not missed until enroute for Philadelphia. The conductor wired back, but the money, consisting of six ten dollar bills, had already been found and turned in by Mr. Burnett. Mr. Fleishman called in person to express his appreciation.

A Few Observations on Economy or Thrift as Practiced By This Office

Stooping six feet, two inches to pick up a pin.

Using memorandum paper, no matter how small, on both sides.

Borrowing your neighbor's pencil to make your own last longer.

Reusing the large, brown envelopes and file backs until they are "thread-bare."

Office of General Freight Claim Agent

We are told that "from little acorns, great oaks grow," so from the inception of the idea of a Christmas Entertainment (which was OUR Mr. Glessner's), this idea blossomed into a full grown tree, or in other words, a wonderful entertainment. We owe a vote of thanks to our entertainers, who were as follows:

Orchestra: Messrs. F. B. Weber, H. G. Carlisle, E. F. Chlan, E. P. Wooten, H. Bunn, R. Ryan, Miss Margaret A. Wagner. Soloists: Misses Fahey, Wagner and M. Bredehoeft.

Minstrels: Messrs. J. J. Hagerty, H. V. Chaney, E. K. Williamson, H. B. Stagge, C. P. Bullinger and C. M. Perry.

Also to Miss Dorris Perry, whose dancing was appreciated by everyone. She has every right to look forward to becoming a great artist. We are also indebted to Miss Ritter, Miss Katherine Costello, Mrs. Bredehoeft and W. W. Wood, chief, Welfare Department, known as the "Silver Tongued Orator," for their contributions.

Our Entertainment Committee is to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts in providing the entertainment as well as the Buffet Luncheon, which was enjoyed by all.

Last, but not least, we extend our thanks to Mr. Glessner for permitting us to have the Christmas tree and entertainment, all of which has created a better spirit of fellowship in the department.

It will be well for us to remember that the post card business getting campaign is still open. There is a card every month in our MAGAZINE for the purpose of securing business, either freight or passenger. You might tell some traveling friend that our Capitol Limited has been on time 450 times out of 466 trips and that our other trains also make good records.

If some one Askew, would you take a Chance and Gamble on the Day, or would you rather ask Hall to have a Heart and Loane you the Keys to Love a Fineman like a Brewer, a Goldsmith or a King, and Garner in the Horn of plenty so that you would be the Gaynor; or would you care to take a dip into the Waters of the Fountain of youth and drive a one horse Shea and Chew a Bow (of) Hay. THE OFFICE NUT

J. M. Wheeler, who has been absent because of ill health, has returned from a trip to California. He is much improved; the sights of Hollywood did a lot of good.

We are pleased to know that Carl Eger, former secretary to assistant chief clerk, has been promoted to private secretary to Foreign Freight Traffic Manager Couse. Having been a member of our department for nearly five years, we naturally preferred to have him remain with us. However, the chap who has succeeded him is a "Peach" (by name, if not by nature) and we welcome him, extending our congratulations and hopes for success to each of the young men.

Purchasing Department

Correspondent, S. I. O'NEILL

Edward C. Goldsborough, Purchasing Department, was married to Miss Elsie Shreck, at St. Paul's Church by Rev. Walter Hayes, on January 3. Talbott Mann, a fellow clerk, was best man and Mrs. Mary Long, bridesmaid. After a reception at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. Goldsborough left for New York on their honeymoon. Congratulations!

John Simmering, price clerk, Purchasing Department, is looked up to as the adviser of our boys. John is at his desk working at 8 a. m., and he is polite and obliging to all. This would be a good trait for all of us to acquire. John entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in 1884 and resides with his family at Elkridge, Md. We only find one fault with John, and that is that he won't get an automobile. His answer to his friends is that he will get one when his "old gray mare," Nell, dies. The animal has been in the family many years.

It seems that the Purchasing Department will be hard hit in the near future. From present indications, Miss Minerva Simon, Miss Katherine Swinger and Miss Maudie Quigley will leave our department for the purpose of making someone else happy, which, of course, will make the P. A. boys sad. These three young ladies have sunny dispositions, are good workers and obliging. Our best wishes to Maudie, Katherine and Minerva.

Harry Householder, order clerk, Lumber Department, entertained our boys at his home, 1716 Homestead Street, on January 5. After dancing, solos were rendered by Otto Kamberger and Chap Laupus (the Weber and Fields of the Lumber Department), accompanied by Miss Frances Sherlock on the piano. We were then entertained by "Pete" Evans and "Jake" Huber with their saxophones and flute. These boys were so noisy that they disturbed the peaceful slumbers of Homestead Street. After they were finally quieted, a buffet lunch was served. "Tommy" Ennis, while anxious to add his bit to the merriment, was somewhat handicapped, as his "girl friend" kept a pretty close eye on him. The boys then retired to the cellar and Steve O'Neil gave an exhibition of his skill as an acrobat, and almost dislocated the gas pipes. Chap Laupus was penalized by his better half for indulging in too many cigarettes. Homestead Street is just recovering from the shock of it all, and Mrs. Householder and Harry have sworn off the bunch for life.

Office of Superintendent of Telegraph

Correspondent, E. M. BRYAN

Early in January we experienced severe snow and wind storms on some of the Western Divisions, which interrupted many of our telephone and telegraph circuits; however, we wish to extend a word of praise and appreciation for the commendable manner in which the staff handled this serious situation. The road forces and linemen rendered admirable assistance in rapidly restoring the wires to normalcy.

The wide world is familiar with the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club, and we are proud to say we have a member of that wonderful chorus among us—W. C. Donnelly. When time permits, Mr. Donnelly gives us the benefit of his clear Irish tenor, his favorite selections being "Sweethearts and Wives, May They Never Meet" and "Kiss Me Darling." Apart from being a good singer, he is right there when it comes to getting business for the Capitol Limited. Good for you Mr. Donnelly, keep it up.

Oft times when people shake hands, they extend a hand that is almost lifeless, but not so with M. C. Allen, division plant superintendent, Western Union Telegraph Company. He gives you a hand clasp that rings true, and the charm and sincerity of his personality invigorate the whole office. Sorry we cannot have him with us all the time, but hope he will visit us often.

Big locomotives, drawing an endless chain of freight cars or swiftly moving passenger trains over gleaming rails, actually mean our daily bread in the form of a pay check at the end of every two weeks. Fellow employes, what are you doing to keep these cars filled with freight and passengers? Have you secured any new business for this year? Aside from office duties, let traffic solicitation be your second thought. Speak of the Baltimore and Ohio service to your friends and business associates. If you hear of people who contemplate a trip, send them time tables, let them know you really want their business, and you will probably get it. Think what the result would be if each and every employe would secure at least one passenger or shipper for the Baltimore and Ohio. Let's try it.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Goldsborough, the former employed in the Purchasing Department, Baltimore

Mable Hand Cross started the New Year in the proper way. She reported at the office on the morning of December 29, just to say, "I am going to be married this evening at 5.00 p. m. and then leave for a short honeymoon so that 'we' may be back for turkey dinner on New Year's Day with Papa and Mama." Our hearty congratulations!

Paul S. Smith, formerly in the Mail Room, was transferred to the Main Office on January 1. We welcome him among us.

Relief Department

Correspondent, H. IRVING MARTIN

"What are the wild (Radio) waves saying" to the members of the Relief Department Radio Club? They, like Prospero and Ariel, are conjuring tempestuous sounds and swelling music from the vast deep, the earth and the air. What would the voices of the air repeat to us if the dead and the living could tell of the good done by the Relief Department—if every widow and fatherless child could tell how the benefits paid at the death of the husband and father kept the family from going "on the rocks" or prevented the child from leaving school.

Twenty-five thousand employes, borrowers from the Savings Feature, could express their pride in the homes they have been enabled to create for their families. An army of pensioners would tell of the monthly checks coming regularly and punctually to the thirty-five hundred employes retired since 1884. Suppose that each Baltimore and Ohio rail could speak of the passengers or freight diverted from other rails and carried in Baltimore and Ohio cars. Each bolt and spike might give their story of painstaking devotion to duty on the part of each employe.

The ranks of the radiologists grow daily. "Brer" Ball and "Shake" burn the midnight electricity while New York, Cleveland, Atlanta, Louisville, Kansas City, Omaha, Montreal and near-by Pittsburgh unloose their canned music or broadcast the voices of their orators. One writer however, cautions, us thus against allowing the accessories of life to usurp the place of life itself.

"John Keats never had the treat of hearing a phonograph record conveyed by the wireless over five hundred miles, but he did once hear a nightingale, and it may be that there was more to be gained by listening to the nightingale's song and preserving the beauty and inspiration of the moment in immortal verse than hearing the uninspired strains of mechanical music even though it traveled twenty-five thousand miles."

Miss Katherine Meyers has been spending some time at the Hebrew Hospital getting acquainted with the nurses and studying New Year's cards. We hope that the operation for appendicitis will prove to have corrected all her troubles and that she will return made over and A-1 for her old job. Her absence gave us the opportunity to become acquainted with her substitute, Miss Marie L. Bavis.

The members of the "Gold Fish Club" are taking their duties as guardians seriously.

Death depleted the number of the fantails to such an extent that it was necessary to call in medical experts and now the meetings of the Club are enlivened by talks on Red Cross Work for ailing gold fish. As long as Miss Helfrich doesn't offer to give the fish swimming lessons she will hold their attention.

The Bowling Team is coming into its own. Under the directorship of H. C. Shakespeare it is getting within handshaking distance of the leaders.

General Superintendent of Transportation

Correspondent, PAUL L. FAUSTMAN

Miss Vogts has returned and we are glad to report that she looks better than ever after her prolonged illness.

Clifton Wilson is still taking the rest cure at Phoenix Sanitarium. He is gradually improving and we hope to have him back in the fold in the near future.

Some people are always breaking into print. I believe "Brose" Hardwick has been mentioned in every issue of the MAGAZINE since I have been correspondent. This time he has given a party to the boys on the desk, and from all reports, they had a big evening.

Our baseball team may not have shown to good advantage last year but some tennis champions may lose their crowns next season. There will be a tournament, if tentative plans materialize, for the purpose of determining the champion tennis player of the Transportation Department. Single and double matches will be arranged and the champions have already been challenged by Harry McCracken and Geo. McClellan, Car Service Department. Although I think a great deal of both Harry and George, I doubt if they will be able to even make things interesting for us.

Two of our Beaux Brummels recently went cavaliering. After spending a pleasant evening, their car suddenly stopped on the way home. It didn't take long to find out that the rear axle was broken. There they sat. What would they do? Then out of a clear sky came a taxi. After a little persuasion, the driver consented to tow them to a garage where they left the car, and were later driven home in the wee hours; incidentally they met the milkman at the door. It's a good thing these two fellows were of the higher social set. If it had happened to some of us, we might not have been able to pay a taxi bill. We would have either walked home or sat there.

The question of car supply is always a live one. In times of shortage, it's getting rid of them, but at all times it's a question of properly handling foreign equipment. Superintendent of Transportation Clarke recently spoke on this subject at a meeting of the Traffic Class, in the Assembly Room, Baltimore and Ohio Building, after which an old time quizz was held, which reminded me of my schooldays and which proved helpful to all those present. Since the present administration of the Transportation Department began there has been an intensive drive to educate the men on the ground as to the proper handling of equipment, and although results have been most gratifying, there is still room for improvement. Those on the outside will do well to keep their eye on the foreign car and handle it strictly in accordance with instructions.

Our old friend C. J. Fellows is sojourning in Florida. We would like to hear from him.

Nature fits all her children with something to do, He who would write and can't write can surely review.—Lowell

This expresses our sentiments exactly, so we shall spend our time reviewing and leave more space for boosting our Company.

We waited patiently for Christmas to announce the engagements of some of our fair sex. We can believe only what our eyes see, on the left hands of the following girls we see sparklers that foretell a tinkling of wedding bells: Loretta Grogan, Julia Eierman, Muriel Bricker, Amelia Fritz, Elizabeth Morgan and Ethel Rogers. Nellie Gray, Ellen Simms, Adelaide Eckmeyer, Hilda Stewart and Lillian McCann will be among the early 1924 brides.

We are glad Marie Bopp has returned after a long absence. Hilda Stewart and Cleons Cooper also returned with the coming of the New Year.

E. W. Greenfield, one of our older members, is still confined to his home, also Mr. Gilbert, another of our older clerks. These friends who have given many years of good service would be happy to receive a message from us. Let us not forget our friends when they are ill. Nothing helps to brighten a sick person more than friendly greetings from those with whom they associate daily.

Elsie Slingerland was forced to return to the sick room after a few weeks at the office but we hope, in a short time, to have her with us again, in good health. Amanda Aler and Katie Zimmerman were at home for a short time during the holiday season.

We hope things will be brighter for Mrs. Skinner is the New Year and that she will be in her accustomed place among us.

We are sorry to report the death of Mary Allen's sister and Margaret Haenschler's father. Our hearts go out to them in their hours of bereavement and sorrow.

Valuation Department

Correspondent, J. A. RENEHAN

The Mid-Western Mechanical Valuation Committee, composed principally of men who are responsible for the handling of mechanical valuation of about 40 carriers, mostly operating in the West, held their regular meeting, their first in this section, in our Central Office Building, Baltimore, on January 17 and 18.

A number of representatives from eastern and southern roads were invited to attend, and most of them expressed themselves as being glad of the opportunity to be present and learn of the activities of this committee on valuation matters.

An inspection of our port facilities was made by train.

Further report of the activities of this meeting will appear in the next issue.

James Spires, formerly of the Accounting Department of the C. H. & D. R'y but now of the Valuation Accounting Engineer's Office, was married in New York at the Little Church Around-the-Corner on January 19, 1924. The lucky girl was Miss Marguerite Gregg of Baltimore. After an extended honeymoon trip through New York, Canada and Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Spires will reside at 630 N. Gilmor St., Baltimore, Md. All of Jimmie's old friends extend to him best wishes for success and happiness. Cincinnati and Higgensport papers please copy. Jimmie extends to all his old friends on the old C. H. & D. R'y a cordial invitation to call when visiting Baltimore on business and otherwise.

Miss L. E. Burman, formerly of the General Freight Office, is now a member of the Valuation Department.

"Here lie the remains of Reed Harley Blight, who trusted his bootlegger. Lead Kindly Light."—Portland News.

Add last verse to Fred Stone's old but famous "Baffin Bay" song which is original and will interest our correspondents, bringing to mind an incident during the Conference:

'Twas on the good ship "Stoney Creek" we sailed for Curtis Bay—

But our coal piers weren't working as we passed 'em by that day.

A. D. October 26, 1923.

Lady: "What have you in the shape of cucumbers today?"

Grocer: "Nothing but bananas." Yes, we have no bananas—

Now the Baltimore and Ohio has neither cucumbers or bananas for sale, but the following brief conversation which is supposed to have taken place at Camden Station or some other terminal on our line will suggest our best advertisement:

Racing Fan (from force of habit): "What have you in the line of fast one's today?"

Baltimore and Ohio Ticket Seller: "Try our Capitol Limited, its' a sure winner."

The MAGAZINE recently contained a very good, inspirational jingle; it is rather long so I'll just quote the first and last stanzas and then conclude with my own spasm, as we are cautioned to be as brief as possible:

"If you can't be the pine on the top of the hill,

Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail,

If you can't be the sun, be a star;
It isn't by size that you win or you fail;
Be the best of whatever you are."

If you can't be an author in the hall of fame,
Be a writer in the ranks—but be

The best little writer this MAGAZINE has
To further our Company's good name.

After an illness of three weeks we are glad to see Assistant Auditor W. B. Dudderar with us again.

Cupid was busy in this office during the month of January, claiming Miss Esther Brannon, who resigned her position January 12, and was married on the 23rd. She will reside, after the ceremony, honeymoon, etc., at Greenville, S. C. J. J. Conroy also took unto himself a wife on January 23. The latter couple will visit Niagara Falls and other points of interest in the north.

We wish both couples all the luck in the world and a long, happy married life.

In view of the fact that several young ladies of this office seem to be casting covetous eyes in the direction of O. R. L. (of course, we do not censure them for doing so, because he is such a likely chap), we think it our duty to inform them that they are wasting good time. If anyone wishes to find out who "The Girl" is, let him or her first discover who gave him that stick pin; then their search will have ended.

December 12. Capitol Limited sprung a form reversal and took three from Royal Blues.

December 19. The first half of our schedule was completed tonight and showed the four teams as being pretty evenly bunched, with the final result a guess; any one of the four teams can finish in the lead. Several good scores were rolled: Pritchard, 328; Atwell, 322; Lehman, 320 and Reichert, 310.

January 2. By a strange coincidence the beginning of the second round of games started in the same manner as the first half, i. e., Royal Blues taking two from Head Lights and Capitol Limited taking two from Pull Men.

January 9. Cellar champs since October 31, Capitol Limited climbed out of that position over the prostrate form of the Royal Blues and are now riding one game back of second place. Standing of teams at this date shows:

	WON	LOST	PER CENT.
Pull Men.....	25	17	595
Head Lights.....	21	21	500
Capitol Limited..	20	22	476
Royal Blues.....	18	24	429

The first Christmas Entertainment arranged by our office was held on December 22 with the following program:

1. Orchestra—"The Bridal Rose Overture"
W. Fitzpatrick, Clarinet; C. L. Hammond, Piano; W. F. Henry, Cornet; L. G. Levee, Cello; J. Limpert, Violin; R. Limpert, Violin
2. Christmas Carol—"Adesta Fideles"

3. Short Talk.....L. A. Lambert, Auditor
4. Solo—"Night of Nights".....Miss Edith Ritter
5. Reading—"College Days".....Miss Lydia Starke
6. Christmas Carol—"It Came Upon the Midnight Clear".....Entire Office Force
7. Solo—"Jesus of Nazareth".....Miss Esther Brannon
8. Harmony Five—Selected
M. L. Dell, First Tenor; O. R. Lutz, Second Tenor; E. F. White, First Bass; P. E. T. Houck, Second Bass; E. B. Pierce, Second Bass
9. Cello Solo—"Traumerei".....L. G. Levee
10. Christmas Carol—"Joy To The World"
Entire Office Force

Refreshments ..... Dance

Entertainment Committee.....H. I. Bunn
Refreshments Committee—Miss E. E. Heidrick and Miss W. J. Marley, assisted by Misses Rose Dahne, Margaret Shea, Helen Lang, Ida Donovan, Emma Ray, Bertha Stansbury
Tree Committee—W. D. White and Miss Grace Wedmore Tree Ornaments Committee—Misses Olive Bryan and Ida Donovan
Music Committee.....J. Limpert
Piano Committee.....W. R. Johnson

The various committees worked hard and successfully. The entire program was rendered by office talent, with one or two exceptions, and all who participated are to be congratulated on the fine showing made. Here's hoping for a bigger and better entertainment next year.

Please read also in the forepart of this issue the many ways in which employees are helping increase our business. They're interesting!

Auditor Disbursements

Correspondent, LILLIAN E. SCHUELER

We challenge any office to beat Dan Cupid's A. D. record for the past month. Just cast an eye over this list.

Ramon Turner, Voucher, File and Index Bureau, after weeks of quizzing on the part of his fellow clerks, has finally admitted his engagement to Miss Tess, Western Maryland Railway Company. From what we saw of Miss Tess at the dance we admit that Turner has shown splendid taste.

David Williamson, Pay Roll Bureau, received a beautiful Elgin watch for Christmas and is proud of it. When one of our girls, who happened to be at the Charity Ball, met the lady who gave him the watch, she noticed on her left hand a sparkler that just about blinded her! We have been wondering why "Dave" wears that blissful expression and now we know.

On December 26, Miss Lillian Atherton, A. R. A. Bureau, and Phillip L. Gowen were married, and after a honeymoon went to Washington, where they will make their home.

The latest addition to our lighting system comes from the left hands of Misses Mildred Betsworth and Marie Whitfield. Proves our childhood lesson that Santa never forgets us when we're good.

On January 5, BANG, like a bolt from a clear sky, came the announcement of the resignation of Miss Rae Euzent; reason—matrimony. Chin dropping and question mark expressions were quite vivid, from the loft of the office to the coal bin, and through it all Rae swiveled merrily on her chair and proudly displayed a beautiful diamond set in platinum. The congratulations will bring her enough happiness to last 200 years now that she has become Mrs. Sigmund Libowitz. The wedding was on January 20.

To all who have just taken the important step, or have decided to, we extend our hearty congratulations and wishes for lives of happiness and good luck.

Well, what do you think of that! The stork made another visit to the A. R. A. Bureau, this time leaving at the home of T. J. Saddler, on January 2, a fine boy. A stronger word than "proud" will have to be coined before we can express Saddler's joy over this event. Congratulations!

Here's a good example of a Baltimore and Ohio business getter. A friend of Thomas Campbell's was going to St. Louis to bring another friend, who was very ill, to Baltimore. He was going to use a competing line because he had always used it. Mr. Campbell placed before him the advantages of the Baltimore and Ohio and so his friend decided to try it. When he returned he was full of praises for our service and especially for the courtesy extended to his sick friend. Since then this gentleman and a party had occasion to go to New York and, of course, they went via Baltimore and Ohio.

Did we have a good time at the dance? Well, I should say we did. Read the story of it on another page.

Auditor Freight Claims

Correspondent, GRACE L. STANFORD

"Christmas comes but once a year, Ever' nigger gits his shear" is an old plantation rhyme which I frequently heard in my childhood. (Remarkable that I have such a memory, you say? Well, that's a mean dig, but I'll accept it unchallenged this time, not being in a position to refute it.) Whether or not you all got your share I am unable to say, but if you didn't it was your fault, for there was plenty. Mr. O'Toole promised us a real treat, and we are ready to lick the first one who says he didn't keep his word.

The festivities were opened with addresses by Auditor J. F. Schutte, and Assistant Comptroller Deverell, who, knowing our impatience to get at the goodies waiting for us, cut their talks short, and bade us "go to it," which we did with a vim.

Sandwiches of various kinds, salads, relishes, hot coffee, ice cream and cake—the home made variety at that—all did their bit towards eliminating that aching void which is usually felt at that hour of the day (and 'most all day by some of us); "feeding our faces" is the most pleasing part of any program and from general observation this did not differ from others. I caught a glimpse of our editor stuffing (now, that's an undignified term to use on such a dignified gentleman, but truly that is the only word I can find for adequate description), yes, stuffing and gesticulating wildly at intervals, I presume to the waiter, to fill up his plate for the —th time. I haven't yet learned whether or not he got his share, but presume he did, for when I saw him again his countenance registered supreme satisfaction—that after-dinner, sleepy, contented look, don't you know.

(The look of supreme contentment, Miss Stanford, was occasioned not alone by the delicious lunch which I enjoyed, the good addresses, music and all—but by the satisfaction that I had in knowing that all I had to do was eat, drink and be merry—while you, poor girl, had to worry about this story—Yours in fun—The Editor.)

The orchestra struck up a fox-trot. Then followed the ever beautiful "Holy Night," sung by ensemble. Herbert Brown followed this with "I loved Her on the Back Porch." Well, if he can love like he can sing, oh boy! "Southern Melodies" sung by Messrs. O'Toole, Hines, Brown and Lauder, struck an answering chord on our heart strings. "Nuff Sed." A sketch from the humorist John J. Sweeny, brought forth chuckles, and not a few of us almost went into convulsions.

J. H. Krager favored us with a violin selection, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Edith Krager Bates. "Roses of Picardy" by Mr. Hines, and "Call Me Back, Pal O'Mine" by Miss Smith were thoroughly enjoyed.

Donald Frank and Miss Catherine Clark cleverly imitated Rudolph Valentino and Madame Hudnut, delighting the eye with a Spanish dance, which was not nearly long enough to suit the audience.

Miss Edith Ritter, Coal and Coke Department, surprised us with her song "Night of Nights" and Miss Charlotte Eitze gave us a piano solo.

A. V. Lauder concluded the entertainment with vocal selections, effectively rendered.

Because of limited time, many numbers were eliminated, among them "The Face on the Bar Room Floor," by J. P. McElgunn, and a vocal selection by R. G. Borrell. These omissions were greatly regretted.

The orchestra allowed us just three dances before they decisively packed up their instruments and departed, much to the disgust of the dancers.

(Right now I'm issuing a word of warning to that little "Tar Heel"—either she loses part of that popularity in our entertainments, or else we girls are going to pack her off to her native wilds.)

I do not believe it is necessary to write anything to emphasize "Everybody had a great time" for everybody knows that. We'll do this instead—come on everybody in unison—"three cheers" for our committee

In the midst of our joy and merry making we could not forget the sadness which has unfortunately come into the hearts of some of us this Christmas time. Mr. Schaeffer lost his father on December 24; at the same time his little seven year old grandson, the sunshine of granddad's life, lay very ill, because of a fall on one of his toys. E. J. O'Connor lost his grandmother on December 10, and his mother on December 28. John Prenger lost his uncle on January 1. Our deepest sympathy to the bereaved.

Miss Lillian Dittmar and Bruce Southerland have returned to work, after illnesses of long duration. Miss Alta Baker is ill—nervous breakdown, we are told. Best wishes for a speedy recovery!

Have you gotten YOUR passenger for the Road? The trains have to run and every extra fare is VELVET!

The annual Christmas entertainment given by the Welfare Association of our office was held on December 22. A beautiful tree, tastefully decorated, had been erected, providing the holiday atmosphere.

The program opened with group singing of Christmas carols, with Richard T. Luke accompanying at the piano. Auditor Passenger Receipts C. H. Poumairat, Assistant Auditor L. M. Grice and Chief Clerk G. W. Jentner made brief addresses, extending the season's greetings and dwelling on the spirit of cooperation and good fellowship which exists in our office. Howard E. Hullett, chairman of the Office Committee, speaking on behalf of the employees, tendered Christmas greetings to the Management.

We always expect a rare treat when Harry Holstein performs for us at the piano and were not disappointed in his rendition of Rachmaninoff's Prelude, in C Minor.

Your correspondent did his bit, singing a few songs, including, "Yes! We Have No Cincinnatis Today." The real surprise of the entertainment came in the brilliant performance of Joseph Morrison. We were not aware that he was such an accomplished musician. Harry Thorn sang "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses." He has a pleasing voice. Miss Helen Meeks, introduced as the star of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company players, entertained with songs and dances. Her title is well merited. Luncheon was served, after which an orchestra furnished music for dancing.

The affair was well planned and was enjoyed by all who attended.

Miss Netta Walter, formerly of this office, was married to R. A. Grubbs, on December 8, at Kensington, Md. Our best wishes are extended.

Head Clerk Wilson T. Jenkins, Statistical Bureau, boasts of the only group of clerks in the office, having "Harte" and "Sohl" in their work.

Miss Naomi Mason has recently become an ardent basketball enthusiast, following St. Andrew's team to such distant points as Westminster. What can be the reason?

At this season of the year, when railroad traffic has decreased let's think of personal solicitation of business for the Company.

Most of us do not come into personal contact with shippers of merchandise, but all of us should be able to persuade passengers to use the Baltimore and Ohio.

You only have to get them on our trains once. There was a time, not so long ago, when the Baltimore and Ohio was the butt of many jokes, but now the joke is on the fellow who doesn't know Baltimore and Ohio service.

We are interested to learn of the engagements of Louise Bowen, Claim Department, and Margaret Cronin, Revision Bureau. Both young ladies are the proud possessors of "the distinguishing ring" that tells the story. We wish them every happiness.

We would like to ask C. McAllister why he locked the safe and the clothes locker at the same time.

At Christmas, "Joe" Coffee carried three chicken heads for good luck.

There is a station known as Bellaire in Ohio, on the Baltimore and Ohio. About a month ago, we learned that there is also a Bellaire on Long Island. It was discovered by Louis Gouline (Robinson Crusoe) and his Man Friday, Nathan Serper, both of them now residing there. They eat breakfast every night so as to be at the office on time in the morning, and in addition, Nathan sings to "Louie:"

You and I now live in Bellaire

If we are late any more we will travel by air

We will pass the expresses all along the line
It's the only way we can be on time.

Frank Going told General Foreman L. Oswald that he, Frank, and "Tony" Ross are the only men that can work on the dock. Those who know "Tony" Ross will appreciate this.

Now that the holiday season is over, we must settle down for a vigorous and eventful year, one which, when time makes us old and grey, will bring back to our memories the thought that we made progress.

Let's make our work our pleasure and put our shoulders to the wheel, resolved that with the added impetus we may put into our work, we will derive the maximum benefit. If our employer prospers, we do also!

Presidential year is known as a slow business year. Let us regard this as heresy and make a firm resolution that the year 1924 will be the biggest, most prosperous and most eventful year of our lives.

With regret we announce the death of Mrs. E. E. McKinley, wife of Trainmaster E. E. McKinley, on the morning of January 9. The employees of the Staten Island Lines extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

Congratulations to Mr. Hasslebrook and wife, on the arrival of a baby boy.

Ha, Ha, Ha! Here we are again. We have with us today, the boy with the big feet, "Jimmy" Hyland, pipefitter's helper, Clifton Shop. "Jimmy" says every night he gets home from work, he takes his horse out for exercise. "Jimmy's" horse is so near the ground that when "Jim" gets on, instead of riding, he walks because of his feet.

Saves" and when the children burn wood in this boiler, and the flames shoot up through it, it looks very suggestive. Use your imagination!

Looks as though there was going to be another romance in the Division Account-walk down from the office together every night.

George Goolie's favorite saying—"Who got my pencil? Now my eraser is gone!"

Louis Keppler says that if he has to work overtime many more nights he will have to ride "Jim" Hyland's horse so he can get home early to go out with his gal to the movies.

Notice "Tony" Stuhl these days? He is practicing to go on the stage. He hops on one foot from his desk to the window of the cashier's cage, tells a few jokes and walks back, two, feet, to see the effect on his patient hearer.

Conductor Musier recently acquired a set of Christmas lights from his landlord.
Maybe the landlord has method in his madness. Might be contemplating a raise in the rent, and gave the lights so that Musier could be well lighted to see his way to pay.

Mr. Wright is now a full fledged process server. Anyone not paying bills to the Company better not let Wright see them.
Method: "Pay up or I'll sue you."

Milton Curry had better behave himself
now. The way he sprung that joke on Mr.
Gibb at the Minstrel so embarrassed our worthy trainmaster that he is out for revenge.

Notice the sad look on Frank Rebham's face these days? His wife kept him home
New Year's, and after having it all arranged!

*Lots of the boys on our division have friends

At last, our friend Ed. "Ham" Hughes

staith (dock) equals practically all the work done in teeming (the production of) 16 berths in a Tyne dock in one work. The Tribune's article was copied in the Baltimore Sun of December 24, 1923.

Here is a picture of our good old friend L. H. Martyne, who, on February 2 completed 37 years' service with the Baltimore and Ohio, and who has filled the position of general foreman at Camden Station for many years.

Mr. Martyne is not a big fellow in stature, but he has as big a heart for work as any man on the Railroad. For years hours meant nothing to him, it not being an uncommon thing for him to be on the job at seven o'clock in the morning and from then on until ten thirty at night. He is a friend of everyone down at Camden and is as much an institution here as is the tower on the passenger station. In his long years of service he has missed less than two months from illness and is still going strong.

Cupid has traveled up a flight of stairs at Camden, and darted his arrow at one of our inbound revision clerks, Andrew F. Bauernschub. Just when he will embark upon that well known Steamer "Marriage" is not definitely known, but judging from the rumors it will be soon. The lady's name as we understand it, is Miss Gertrude Litz, stenographer, Buck Glass Co. Here's hoping marriage will not interfere with the splendid cartoons with which Mr. B. has been entertaining our readers.

And still another one. Leo C. Hubbard, Inbound Freight Department was married to Miss Elizabeth Carr at St. Martin's Church on January 7. Congratulations, Pete!

Mrs. Lawrence, matron, Ladies' Rest Room, was the hostess at a luncheon tendered on December 26. The room was tastefully decorated in the prevailing holiday colors. Cream, cake and candy were served and an enjoyable time had by all. Mrs. Lawrence was the recipient of a handsome umbrella, leather purse and hand-bag, the gifts of the ladies of all departments in the station.

L. H. Martyne, general foreman, is the proud possessor of a handsome gold watch, the gift of the men under him. The presentation speech was made by Freight Agent W. E. Neilson. Mr. Martyne was much surprised but managed to express his thanks in a neat little speech. Mr. Martyne's picture appears in this issue of the MAGAZINE.

Dan Cupid's dart struck Miss Martha V. Fox, clerk, Agent's Office, who was married on December 17 to F. E. Bailey, fireman, Philadelphia Division.

We extend to Mr. and Mrs. Bailey (who, we understand, intend to reside at Wilmington, Del.) our sincere congratulations and wish for them a bright and happy future. May their honeymoon be perpetual.

We are glad to welcome J. H. Buckley, our fellow clerk, to the office after an absence because of sickness. His gentlemanly demeanor and smiling face, which have endeared him to all, have been sadly missed. May his return to health be permanent.

H. Snell, Pier 8, Locust Point, became the proud father of a baby girl on December 15. Congratulations!

Revery

Many times and oft I've wondered

As I've sat—at twilight glow,
Of the scenes of yore, and wondered
As through the mist, they come and go.

Whether scenes, as laid, were ordered,
Or whether flashed at fancy's will;
When the days were pleasure bordered,
And dull care we tried to kill.

Retrospection has its pleasure;
It has also thoughts of pain.
For of those, who "trod" the measure,
Many will not "tread" again.

So 'tis well to live the present,
With a hope for future's goal,
Let the past be ever absent—
Live to satisfy your soul. —J. R. G.

It is with much regret that we record the death of George W. Cromwell, 57 years of age, on January 6, 1924.

Mr. Cromwell was the third son of former Superintendent of Motive Power A. J. Cromwell, who produced some of the most successful classes of locomotives the railroad has ever operated. George was born in Piedmont, W. Va., and at an early age moved to Baltimore. After passing through the grade schools of Baltimore and Friends School, he entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio as a pattern maker apprentice, in July, 1884. He afterward held the following positions: mechanical draftsman, inspector of blueprints, gang foreman, round house foreman at Riverside, foreman at Mt. Clare and pattern maker. While serving his time as an apprentice he graduated from Maryland Institute, night classes in mechanical drawing. He was a member of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association and John H. B. Latrobe Lodge of Masons.

He is survived by Mrs. Marian E. Cromwell and three sons; Cameron, Custer and Robert; also by seven brothers and one sister, Mary C. Warner. Four brothers are now, or have been, connected with the Company: O. C. Cromwell, assistant to chief of motive power and equipment; A. Grant Cromwell, ticket agent, Mt. Royal Station; J. E. Cromwell, apprentice instructor, Mount Clare Shops, and H. C. Cromwell, mechanical draftsman, who was in the Mechanical Engineer's Office until January, 1919.

Mr. Cromwell, although afflicted, was a loyal worker and was known for his honesty, tenacity of purpose, his sterling character and manliness. His loss is mourned by many friends and relatives.

The Veterans' Association held their regular monthly meeting on January 7, at Moose Hall. M. V. Pascal, formerly chairman, Entertainment Committee, who was elected financial secretary for the year 1924, was presented with a beautiful ring by the Ladies' Auxiliary, as a token of their appreciation of the interest he has shown in the Veterans and Ladies' Auxiliary. The ring, which has the emblem of the Veterans' Association on it, will recall the many interesting times he has enjoyed while being faithful to his duties. We know he will continue his good work for 1924 as financial secretary.

The Freight Car Forces, after enjoying the holidays, have all returned to work.

Some spent their holidays out of the city, others made themselves useful around their homes. However, now that we are at the beginning of a new year, we will all put new vigor into our work and put the Freight Department on top.

The Business Men's Council, Pocket Testament League, had one of their representatives, "Bill" Shannon, at Mount Clare, and several meetings with the foremen and men were held. "Bill," as most of the men call him, gave a brief talk, telling us that formerly he was one of the rank and file of a railroad shop, and how this little book had helped him in his dealings with mankind.

Pocket testaments were distributed to the foremen and men, and it is felt that the majority of the men who accepted them will read at least a chapter a day, as an inspiration in their daily lives.

Ex-Correspondent H. R. Lincoln, formerly of the Baltimore Terminal Division, dropped into the office the other day straight from the Wilds of West Virginia—He doesn't show any bad effects yet, but—Time will tell.

Have had a number of changes in the office recently—H. L. (Goofy) Goodman has been appointed secretary to general superintendent, W. B. (Joe) Weis took his place as secretary to superintendent, E. L. (Slippery Elm) Mallery fell in line for the position as clerk to passenger trainmaster and B. E. Bell (The Boy Wonder—looks just like Harold Lloyd—girls) is the new correspondence clerk in place of "Slippery Elm." Congratulations to all.

We regret to say that so shortly after his appointment to his new position and just when he is getting to like it, "Slippery Elm" had to go away for his health. Here's hoping that he will be back with us soon.

Dispatcher I. S. (Old King Tut) Williams has been down in Miami, Fla. From the looks of the Postal Card he sent to the office we all regret that we are not with him—the wording on the card was—"What is waiting for you in Florida." A picture of a young lady—well for particulars see "Skeeter" Hubbard. He's better at describing that sort of thing than anyone else around Camden.

Dispatcher H. H. (Ham) Hamilton was stranded on his "Ranch" down on the Magothy during a recent cold spell. To make it worse when he did get started he had to leave the windshield of his machine open in order to see and he almost froze to death. Terrors of high life—"Ham." You ought to get a chauffeur.

We extend our sympathy to Dispatcher C. A. Hopwood and hope that by the time this goes to press his wife will be well and strong again.

Operator L. B. (Robby) Robinson knows a lot about the "True—Blue" Oakland. There is also an automobile show in town this month. Don't ever get him started. The boy is an orator from the heart.

Don't know whether Elizabeth Carr's marriage had anything to do with "Slippery Elm's" bad health or not. It was rather a shock, wasn't it?

Overheard a conversation on the train the other day—four traveling men were talking about service. Two of them had never traveled over the Baltimore and Ohio before and commented on the fine service and politeness of our trainmen compared with those of other roads. One of the other two men was a real "Baltimore and Ohio Booster," said he had been traveling over the line for about five years and did not have a complaint to make. That went for the entire System, of course, but we know he was talking principally about Baltimore Division trainmen.

We are glad to see Car Distributor J. F. Whiteley walking around the office again—"Joe" has been off since Christmas—not because of any celebration but because of sickness. We extend a regular Baltimore Division welcome to you, "Joe."

The Baltimore Division has been making some new records during the last few months. During the period—September, October, November and December, 1923, Philadelphia handled 5341 cars of fruit, which is a great increase over 1922 and a new record. All those concerned in the handling of fruit at Philadelphia are to be highly congratulated on this wonderful performance, which stands out as a Baltimore and Ohio record in one of the principal cities of the United States. It is further gratifying to have the Fruit Growers Association advise us that Philadelphia was the only principal city in the United States that handled fruit currently without the necessity of placing of embargoes. Well—we can only say that this is BALTIMORE AND OHIO SERVICE—the Best and Only.

The business handled through our Northern Gateway—at Park Junction has been increasing by leaps and bounds. On January 14, 1924 we made a new record of 1682 cars handled. This also indicates the kind of service that is being given by our Railroad, and can largely be attributed to the efficiency of our people at Philadelphia.

At Brunswick the Baltimore Division has again demonstrated its ability to perform new things to obtain better operating efficiency. During the period November 13, 1923 to January 14, 1924 there were 1148 cars shopped out of Trains 97 on arrival at Brunswick, which were repaired promptly by the car forces at that point and replaced in the same train from which they were shopped and the trains dispatched without a minute's delay. During the period July 9, 1923 to January 14, 1924, 3201 cars were shopped out of Trains 94 on arrival at Brunswick and were repaired and replaced in the same train without delay. Brunswick Transfer Shed has also made a record. Cars loaded at the shed are placed in Train 97 on the day loaded. Previously freight loaded one day did not go forward until the next day. This indicates teamwork on the part of all our people at Brunswick and they are to be congratulated on these performances.

Inspector J. J. Reiser, Dining Car Department, is proud of his 13 months old son, J. J. Junior (left). He has reason to be. Right: J. J. Junior's little cousin

Don't feel that Philadelphia, Wilmsere and Washington Terminals are being slighted—they have also accomplished much in the same kind of handling of cars. Brunswick performances have been mentioned in detail as this was our high point on the Baltimore Division.

The apple orchards on our Shenandoah District were heavy producers during 1923 and a large portion of this business was moved over the Baltimore and Ohio. During the season, up to January 15, we handled a total of 1725 cars of apples from Winchester and other points on the Shenandoah District, while during the season of 1922 we handled only 715 cars. Our service has been responsible for a large part of this increase in competitive territory. Teamwork on the "Valley" has been responsible for the good service.

As the MAGAZINE goes to press we are happy to know that we have broken another record—the Baltimore Division is in first place in freight train performance—a position we have been trying to reach and hold for the past several months. Increased train load and decreased overtime, brought about by strenuous effort on the part of all concerned, are responsible for this.

Upon showing the above notes to our superintendent he made the comment that "it was only through the help, teamwork and cooperation of the officers and employees on the Baltimore Division that we have had the wonderful success in all branches of operation."

We can make the superintendent have this impression all the time if we "Pull Together." Let's show him and the other general officers that we can do this all the time. The more records we make the more business we will get for the Baltimore and Ohio. Think of the record made by the "Capitol Limited." This has only been accomplished through the team-work and efforts of the conductors, brakemen, baggagemen, engineers, mechanical people and passenger department (the passenger trainmaster on this division). There has never been a complaint from any of the passengers using this train over the Baltimore Division.

Rae Edmonson, one of our employees living in Strasburg, Va., recently persuaded one of his friends to use the Baltimore and Ohio to New York, and with the following result:

My Dear Mr. Edmonson:

I have traveled quite a great deal on different railroads and am glad to say that I have found the Baltimore and Ohio one of the cleanest and most accommodating roads of them all. Even the porters are on the job to the limit, and one doesn't need to worry about anything. From my varied traveling I am sure that no one has a kick coming on the treatment afforded by the Baltimore and Ohio.

Respectfully,
(Signed) ROBERT H. SHERMAN

Frank Turner has resigned as cashier, Pier 12, to accept position of traveling auditor. Congratulations to "Mike" Torpey, his successor.

We all want to improve conditions and one of the best ways to do it is to take deep interest in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. Successful operation means more satisfied and contented employees. I ask the cooperation of every employee in the Terminal to keep our operating expenses at the minimum by turning off electric lights not needed, saving stationery, coal and all sorts of material.

Washington, D. C., Freight Station

Correspondent, W. L. WHITING

We are now fairly lunched into the New Year, a year that will bring many vital issues to the front. Of primary interest to railroaders are the hearings on Railroad consolidations that are being held in Washington. Then, for the politicians, it is Presidential election year, and that is "enuff sed." We must also remember that is is "Leap Year," at which time the ladies are, by an unwritten law, permitted to take the initiative in certain matters pertaining to their future health, wealth and happiness. Well, bless their hearts, we wish them joy in the use of their prerogative.

As far as business at this station is concerned, we are busy enough to keep us out of mischief, both in and outbound freight keeping well up to the mark for this season. Our automobile trade is still booming, the procession of machines along our platforms being as much in evidence as it ever was.

During the year 1923 we received over Three Thousand carloads of automobiles, about fifteen thousand machines.

Is it any wonder that the streets of Washington are not very safe for the ordinary down-trodden pedestrian!

The campaign for new business, of which we are ever being reminded by the editor, as well as in every issue of the MAGAZINE, is a good thing to boost. Let us, however, not forget that it is good to hold the business we have obtained as well as to get new customers. A case in point is that of a prominent minister in this city who comes from New England, and as most New Englanders have a habit of doing, usually patronizes other railroads than ours. Lately, however, he had occasion to go to Chicago and decided that the Capitol Limited would be a good train to travel on.

The beautiful Christmas spirit of giving where giving does good was finely exemplified by a number of our boys at the festive season. One of our force, who has been paralyzed for a long time, and has been unable to work, and whose circumstances are by no means prosperous, was called upon a day or two before Christmas by two of the boys, Chief Delivery Clerk T. E. Frey and Delivery Clerk C. J. Mattimore, who drove up to his house in Mattimore's automobile, which was loaded to its capa-

Those who participated in the happy thought may rest assured that the gift was "bread cast upon the waters," and will return to them in some form after "many days."

Please examine the reports of check weighing that are given in the MAGAZINE and note that Washington, D. C., holds her own with the larger stations on the System. The amount of $89.38 for November is gratifying.

Changes in force will always take place in the best of businesses. This time it is

It must have been an interesting journey, and one that was well earned by those who enjoyed it.

It is a long time since Wilmington has had anything to say in the MAGAZINE. With the New Year, however, we have turned over a new leaf and resolved that this important point will, in future, let the rest of the System know what it is doing.

One of the accompanying photographs shows the Cumberland Car Department Sunday Force. It was taken in 1914. It has been loaned to us by Yardmaster Hollen, Wilmington, who, at the time the photograph was taken, was employed at Cumberland. Reading from left to right you will find Chief Clerk B. J. He has left us to take up the duties of cashier, Pier 22, Philadelphia. Charles E. Warfield, also an old timer in the service, succeeds John as cashier at this station. Our best wishes to both.

Death has brought sorrow to two families of employees at this station. On December 7, William Floyd Provance, engineer, died. He worked for a number of years on the Metropolitan branch way train; he was operated on about a year ago for cancer of the stomach. He recovered sufficiently to resume work for a time, but about two months ago was taken with the same dread disease, and finally succumbed to it. He was buried from his home at Martinsburg, W. Va., on December 9, 1923.

On December 19, Loretta B. O'Leary, daughter of Timothy O'Leary, car foreman, died at the home of her parents in this city. Miss O'Leary was a native of Washington and a graduate of Notre Dame Academy. She was highly esteemed by her many friends, and leaves, besides her parents, three brothers and three sisters to mourn her loss.

Our sincere sympathies are extended to the sorrowing families in their bereavements.

Our other photograph is the wife and baby of Chief Clerk to General Yardmaster C. W. Bailey.

General Yardmaster W. M. Murphey is "right on the job" when it comes to moving cars. He does not permit them to stay in the terminal. His motto is "Keep 'em moving." By the way, Mr. Murphey and First Trick Booking Clerk "Buddy" Barrows were in Washington New Year's Day. It is said they spent the best part of the day with the President and General Yardmaster N. O. Clark.

The "Sheik of Wilmington," E. A. Herbert, is busy looking after his social official duties.

We read with interest the story in the December MAGAZINE about the Capitol Limited of freight service. We were sorry to note, however, that all the terminals where the New York sections might stop, were mentioned, with the exception of Wilmington. Wilmington is the first stop 97 makes after leaving Cranford Junction, where the Central of Jersey and Reading crews get it for movement to Wilmington. Our crews move the trains to Brunswick from here.

This is the Watch for You— If You Need Accurate Time

PRACTICALLY every railroad man must have a watch that can be depended upon—a watch that will keep accurate time.

That is why you'll find Hamiltons in the hands of Conductor Christner and Engineer Brown of the B. & O., Chicago-New York Limited. And that is also why you'll find Hamilton Watches predominating wherever accuracy and dependability are everyday necessities.

The Hamilton is a watch that owes its enviable reputation to faithful performance. It is a watch that will, with proper care, give you accurate service for a score of years or more. In other words, the Hamilton gives most accuracy and service per dollar of investment.

The favorite Hamilton among railroad men is the No. 992; this model is doing duty in engine cabs and coaches, signal towers and dispatchers' offices, from coast to coast. The Hamilton No. 992 betters the most rigid time inspection requirements and will serve you, as it serves thousands of other railroad men, day after day and year after year.

For other than time inspection service, we recommend the Hamilton No. 974 movement, which gives you the famous Hamilton workmanship in a watch of lower grade and lower price.

Your jeweler will be glad to show you the "992" and the "974." The next time you pass his shop drop in and ask to see them.

We will gladly send a copy of the Hamilton "Timekeeper"—our booklet about Hamiltons—to any railroad man requesting it.

These are the three big reasons why men who use a bag week in, week out, regularly are carrying Naugahyde Bags.

Naugahyde Bags are specially made to stand the hard knocks and punishment of constant travel. Built over a strong steel frame and vulcanized into a single piece with no seams to rip or rivets to come loose, Naugahyde Bags offer a combination of service and good looks that can't be beaten.

Designed with the special needs of railroad men in mind, they are both water-proof and heat-proof. The experience of thousands of railroad men is proving that Naugahyde will outlast anything at the price, or anywhere near it!

Naugahyde Bags are made with a handsome black grain finish, English check lining and solid brass fittings of the finest quality. Ask your dealer about them. If he cannot supply you immediately, write direct to us. Made in three sizes—16 inch, 18 inch, and 20 inch.

NAUGAHYDE BAGS

The late Supervisor A. O. Tedrick

to foreman, January 1, 1906, general foreman, July 13, 1910, and supervisor, December 1, 1913. Funeral services were held from his home at 2 p. m., January 4. He was well and favorably known by almost every employe on the East End of the Cumberland Division, and was considered an expert trackman. He was awarded first prize for several years, for having the best maintained track on his sub-division. Our condolences are extended to his family.

Recently, our attention was called to a case where the Baltimore and Ohio again displayed its right to the title of the "Good Neighbor Railroad." Mr. Webber, who operates a greenhouse near Oakland, Md., was about out of coal and it was badly needed to prevent the freezing of valuable plants, flowers, etc. He explained this to local offices and found that a car of coal for him was in train of local East. The local conductor arranged to have car set out at Mt. Lake Park, so that it could be returned and placed for immediate unloading, thus averting the delay which would have resulted from hauling car into Keyser for weighing in the usual manner. The prompt handling of this case was much appreciated by Mr. Webber.

The annual award of prizes for the best maintained track on the Cumberland Division resulted as follows: East End: best supervisor's district, Supervisor C. Foltz, Hancock. Best maintained main line section, Foreman J. F. Keller, Round Bottom, W. Va. Greatest improvement, Foreman L. E. Whisner, North Mountain, W. Va. Best branch line section, R. & P. Branch, Foreman L. R. Kasecamp, Glebe, W. Va.

West End: best supervisor's district, Supervisor M. W. Laffey, Rowlesburg, W. Va. Best main line section, Foreman J. S. Rhodes, Wilson, W. Va. Greatest improvement, Foreman T. E. Dunbar, Terra Alta, W. Va. Best branch line section, Foreman G. R. Buckalew, M. & K. sub-division, Dellslow, W. Va. Almost every section showed improvement, and everyone is to be congratulated upon the splendid work done during 1923.

Some of the boys received fine pocket knives for Christmas. Our division operator remarks that they must have been 1916 models, or why the corkscrew attachment?

Our genial agent at Newburg, W. Va., "went an' done it." Yes, he was married on October 9, at Kingwood, by Rev. Margussion. We are able to present a good picture of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Decker and their car, accompanied by Mrs. T. Beel, wife of machinist at Hardman. We wish the newlyweds much happiness. Mrs. Decker was Anna Lee Sager before her marriage.

Our old friend W. H. Virts, general yard master, Keyser, W. Va., is visiting Florida, no doubt looking for the fountain of perpetual youth. It is our opinion that "Bill" does not need this fountain. Although a veteran in the service, he is still a hustler.

We are always glad to note instances of prompt handling of cars, and particularly so when it brings favorable comment from our patrons. Such an instance occurred on January 3. Swift & Co., Cumberland Plant, were badly in need of a car of meat then in transit to them. It arrived about 1 p. m. and was placed on the consignee's siding less than thirty minutes after arrival, although it had to be switched out of Train 94 and moved through the East and West yards before placing. Local manager of the plant congratulated all concerned upon the splendid handling given this car. Keep up the good work, boys!

We are pleased to present a photograph of the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Minghini. Miss Irene is nine years old and is in the fourth grade, St. Mary's School. Irene has many friends, and, needless to say, is the pride and joy of her daddy, our popular clerk in Cumberland Yard.

Much has been said about the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad being a good neighbor—and here is another example. When an elderly lady died during the first week in the new year she was survived by her husband, who is 77 years old and in rather distressing circumstances. While friends were trying to make arrangements for the funeral, Yardmasters Helbig and Krouse kindly offered their cars and Yard Clerk J. H. Mosner and Yard Brakeman L. J. Blough attended the funeral as pallbearers. With the help of these boys and other friends from the outside, the old man was comforted by seeing his wife laid to rest properly. They had been together constantly since married, about 54 years ago. In the last few years, through a series of misfortunes, the case was made quite pitiful. We know our boys are equal to any occasion but when they go out of the Railroad family and assist, as in this case in no way connected with the Railroad, we cannot find words properly to express our admiration.

Genevieve and Elizabeth Trappe, granddaughters of Checker John W. Cole, Cumberland Freight House

We have been asking you to look into the Relief Feature and make an effort to own your own home. Here is the pretty home of Yard Conductor C. P. Arnold, No. 950 Maryland Avenue, Cumberland, purchased some years ago through the Relief Department. Don't you want to do likewise?

We are able to report a case of loyalty which shows the splendid manner in which our employes respond in an emergency. At 12.05 a. m., January 6, the roof of the sawmill in the Car Yards at Keyser took fire from an undetermined cause. An alarm was promptly sounded and a number of the day forces, members of the fire brigade and others, who were at home in bed, upon hearing the alarm immediately responded and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze in short order, the fire doing very little damage. They are to be commended for their prompt action, which prevented what might have been a serious loss.

One of our photographs is of Mary Hollen Gross, an accomplished young lady of the Division Accountant's Office, who has just completed six years' service with the Company. Mary was a great help in the offices during the war, doing her bit while the boys were away.

Our staff photographer recently secured a good picture of a familiar figure at the Queen City Station, Cumberland, George Anderson, baggage transferman. He has been handling baggage since September, 1885, and while almost all competitors have motors, George still sticks to his horse and wagon.

Don Kight, son of Travelling Passenger Agent Harry B. Kight, Cumberland, Md. Don's cousin Harley drew a cartoon of Don, but it was just so frightful we couldn't think of using it

All employees are to be congratulated on the fine showing made in the handling of the heavy holiday business, passenger, mail and express being handled without complaint. Favorable comments were made by Post Office Department, as well as many of our pleased patrons.

Another picture is of our Veteran Warehouse Foreman Geo. Fletchinger, Cum-are glad to give credit to Foreman John M. Fuss, Section 13, East End. While Mr. Fuss did not take first prize, he was a close second. All the boys were on the job and it took close checking to determine the winners.

The Veterans' Association is holding some enthusiastic and entertaining meetings during the present winter season. We look for some good stories from our fellow correspondent, Miss Vada Pearl Drumm. Vada is "some" singer and always in demand, and, with other entertainers, is much appreciated.

Our old friend G. Frank Messman, report clerk, Superintendent's Office, has been unanimously elected president, Diabolt Club, for the coming year, succeeding M. J. Fleming, now past president.

Agent Burr Flag, North Mountain, has been on the sick list for some time, his son filling the agency temporarily. Burr's many friends hope for a speedy recovery. In 1923 North Mountain had one of the heaviest apple seasons ever experienced when over 500 cars were loaded at that station. Agent Flagg is to be congratulated on the fine handling given these highly perishable shipments.

Our fellow correspondent Harry B. Kight, traveling passenger agent, was right on the job during the Christmas rush, looking after the comfort of our patrons, putting them on proper trains, etc. Keep up the good work, Harry!

One of our photographs is of Leonard and Eleanor, the pride and joy of Conductor and Mrs. C. P. Arnold. Leonard, age 15, attends Allegheny County High School, and Miss Eleanor, who is 13, is leading her class in Pennsylvania Avenue School. Both our young friends take a great interest in the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE and can boast of their father being a one hundred per cent. railroad man. Everyone likes "Pete" and there is none better as a conductor.

berland, who has completed 34 years' service. He is doing his bit in the Stop That Leak campaign by making a fine showing in checkweighing freight passing through his station.

We have heard many favorable comments on the manner in which Crossing Watchman "Mike" Diehl, Frederick Street Crossing, Cumberland, handles traffic safely over his crossing. We are glad to be able to present a good picture of him on the job.

Our sympathy is extended to Conductor W. H. Nolan, who lost his father-in-law on Christmas Day and his brother on New Year's Eve.

C. K. Hixson done gone and "did" it! Yep, on Christmas Day, and he is still sailing through space. Much luck, "Hix," but remember we haven't met the happy bride as yet. Do we get an invitation to that good home cooked dinner you've been talking about?

Talk about railroading! You should see one of the 6100 class engines pick up 10,000 tons and ramble down the East End of the Cumberland Division to Millers, with one stop. Come on, you faithful, get the business; we are hungry to handle it.

An interesting recent development in connection with the notes covering the Cumberland Division is the number of business men advertising in our columns. Go see them! They are asking for our business and you can rest assured that you are perfectly safe in giving it to them.

We extend sympathy to General Yardmaster J. H. Read in the death of his mother. This occurred just before Christmas. It is uncommon to see such a close bond of affection between mother and son. Her's is an eternal reward for a life's work well performed.

The various campaigns conducted during 1923 were not without result, but let us keep them in mind and redouble our efforts during 1924. Saving coal is an everyday job, getting more business is for our individual welfare. "Stop That Leak" can always be practiced. The Careful Crossing Campaign should never be lost sight of and to start the New Year right we have THRIFT before us. Plan your work this year and then work according to the plan, and ere another New Year rolls around we shall all have prospered.

Agent W. A. Vermilyea, Moorefield, W. Va., is to be congratulated on the showing made in checkweighing freight at his station during November, 1923. He was able to show a gain of sixty-three dollars, which is very good for a station the size of Moorefield, and shows what can be done.

Agent C. R. Grimm, Cumberland, made a splendid showing in checkweighing for the year 1923. He and his force are to be commended for the interest displayed. We believe an even better showing will be made during the coming year.

Our infallible twins, W. H. Shaw and W. E. Wall, are adept with the cue. They have challenged a number of "pool sharks" to contests and in every instance those that have been challenged refused to play. They are looking for some real opposition and any one on the Railroad who can play a good game should communicate with Mr. Wall. This is an open challenge and no one is barred.

We hope our employes will "come to the front" with the postal cards that accompany the MAGAZINE each month. Let's make it a point to get business of some kind each month. We owe this much to our Company. The cards are there for a good purpose and they should be used.

Special Offer To Railroad Men

I will Show You How Without Investment, Experience or Training, You Can Make From $30 to $50 Every Working Day In The Year

Railroad Men—if you are making less than $20 a day, write to me at once. I will show you how you can double your earnings. You can be your own boss—work when and where you please—and make from $4 to $10 every hour you work.

Head made $69.50
In One Day

I want Railroad Men in every community to act as my representative—to call on my customers and take their orders for Comer All-Weather Coats. If you only take four average orders a day, I'll pay you $96.00 a week. That's easy. J. R. Head of Kansas made $69.50 clear profit for himself in one day. George Garon made a net profit of $40 his first day. A. B. Spencer made $625 in one month's spare time.

No Experience Needed

It is not necessary for you to be a salesman. You don't have to know anything about selling. I give you all the information you need—tell you where to go, what to say and how to make money. E. A. Sweet of Michigan had never sold a thing in his life. Yet in one month he made $1,200 with this proposition.

There is no trick to taking orders for Comer All-Weather Coats. The Comer Manufacturing Company is the largest concern of its kind in the world, selling high-grade coats to the consumer through the mail. There is no delivering or collecting to do.

My representatives just take orders and they get their money the minute they have an order.

Get Started—Accept This Special Offer

— The important thing is to get started. I know that you can make more in a day than you sometimes make in a week. You can work every day—rain or shine—and you can make from $30 to $50 every day you work.

Just mail the coupon below for the facts of my special offer to Railroad Men. It won't cost you a cent. In return, I will tell you about the easiest, quickest, most pleasant way to make big money that you ever heard of. I'll show you how, without investment, experience or training, you can control a business of your own, be your own boss and make up to $1,000 a month. Don't delay a minute. Let me get you started at once in this money-making business, where you can make more money than you ever thought possible. Sign and mail the coupon to me NOW.

On December 14, the Social Club of Cumberland held their third annual dance, attended by many merry makers. It was held in the Offices of the Division Storekeeper and Superintendent of Shops, which were decorated under the supervision of Harry Childs, electrical shop foreman.

A Christmas tree greeted the guests as they entered the offices, and many lights of various colors dotted the walls and ceiling. Pine and laurel were used throughout the building, which presented an attractive picture.

Spates' orchestra of Frostburg furnished music which was exceptionally fine.

Delicious refreshments, prepared by the girls of the Storekeeper's Office were served throughout the evening. It was evident that our last dance was too much for Assistant Division Storekeeper W. E. Wall, who was among the missing, with a severe case of "High Fever."

John Phillips, the "Shiek" of the Stores Department was there in all his splendor and pomp, breaking hearts, and wrecking homes, but we know the boy means well and will some day repent for his many sins.

John Howe, our congenial superintendent of shops, and Division Storekeeper C. G. Sutton, were the honored guests of the evening, and enjoyed every minute.

Efficiency Expert E. E. Emerick and his gang endeavored to vamp a number of the young ladies, and last reports indicated that they won a great victory.

Dancing continued until midnight, and when the last strains of "Home Sweet Home" echoed through the corridors, it was voted by all that better dances are not held. Everyone is looking forward to the next one.

Our ever happy and smiling shop order clerk, D. M. Scott, has joined Company "G," Maryland National Guard. "Scotty," as he is better known, will make a fine soldier for Uncle Sam.

A number of interesting short addresses were made, including a brief description of the formation and progress of the original body of the Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1 (Baltimore) of the Association, by Mrs. Charles Shipley.

All business having been disposed of, the following program of music and elocution, arranged by Mrs. Elizabeth Menefee, was given, followed by a dainty buffet lunch:

Piano solo, H. V. Spring; reading, Miss Essex Botsford; solo, Mrs. L. A. Lanich, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Hauger; violin solo, William McDonald, accompanied by Mrs. T. E. Mewshaw; solo, Mrs. T. ### Cumberland Back Shop

Correspondent, J. C. GLENN

Our Rolling Mill and Bolt and Forge Shop are running full blast, the finished product being sent out efficiently. A place of this kind is a credit to our Road.

In the December issue of our MAGAZINE the girls of the Master Mechanic's Office claimed the Bowling Championship. This is news to the Girls' Team, Storekeeper's Office, as they played a number of games last year and didn't lose one. How could the Master Mechanic's girls claim a Championship Team when the Storekeeper's Outfit gave them a grand and glorious walloping when they came together? We believe in giving credit where credit is due, and in the Girls' Bowling Team of the Storekeeper's Office, we have what one would call—A Real Championship Team.

All Back Shop employes furloughed December 23 returned to duty January 2 with the determination to make 1924 the banner year. Everybody is working to the end that the Cumberland Back Shop will be the most efficient and best operated on the Railroad. Let's all get together and accomplish this.

The Shop Band held a meeting on January 8, and the following officers for 1924 were elected: Cliff Lewis, manager; S. Clark, president; L. Knoll, vice-president; E. F. Warner, business manager; E. Drenning, treasurer. The trustees are: J. Howe, A. Y. Wilson, E. F. Warner.

The meeting was attended by all band members and the prospects for 1924 were gone over. Indications are that this year will be the best in its history; already some important engagements have been arranged. We believe that we have in our Shop Band the best in Cumberland and probably the best on the Baltimore and Ohio System. A fair was held in Chaney's Hall in January under the auspices of the band, and a concert will be given in the Maryland Theatre on February 24. This aggregation is one of which we may be proud, and all officers and employes should give it their loyal support and cooperation.

Much is expected of the Shop Quartet, composed of the following: A. Y. Wilson, N. Krieger, E. Murray, E. F. Warner.

They have been practicing and are in readiness for the year. Everyone is looking forward to hearing them.

Keen interest is shown in the Jiggs being put into use on the various machines in the Cumberland Back Shop, which increase output and facilitate the manufacture and machining of various items. A bulletin board has been placed in the shop and mention is made of the individuals who devise the various Jiggs. In addition to this, Superintendent of Shops Howe sends a letter of appreciation to the various employes to assure them that their efforts are not unheeded.

Martinsburg, W. Va.

Caller Paul B. Johnson, Cumbo, and Miss Ranna Violet Johnson were married at Hagerstown, Md., on December 18. Congratulations!

Norman E. Whittler and Miss M. E. Tedrick were recently married in this city. The bride is a daughter of George Tedrick, employed in the local shops, and the groom a son of Carpenter Whittler, local shops. Congratulations!

We regret to report that the New Year brought sorrow to several railroad homes in and near Martinsburg. Supervisor Tedrick passed away on January 1. (A full report of his service will be found in Cumberland Division notes.)

Mrs. Amanda Catherine Peer, wife of Veteran J. H. Peer, died at her home, age 54 years. James W. Wilson, Cumbo, died at his home on East Perry Street, following an attack of Bright's disease. He was 51 years of age and had lived his entire life in this county. He had been in the Baltimore and Ohio service for many years.

E. Flick Hobbs, car repairman, Cumbo, died in the King's Daughters Hospital on January 7. While lighting a fire in a stove at his home, he used a can of oil; the oil exploded and the burning oil splashed over Mr. Hobbs and his wife. Neighbors, hearing their cries, hurried to their assistance, and succeeded in putting out the fire before Mrs. Hobbs had been seriously injured, but her husband was so severely burned that he passed away a few hours later. Their home, near Falling Waters, was completely destroyed. Mr. Hobbs was born in this city on January 31, 1899.

"From Stake Driver to Railroad President"

WILLIAM BENSON STOREY, President of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, started his railroad career forty-one years ago as a stake driver at twenty dollars a month.

The story of his life, as told in The American Magazine, should be an inspiration to every railroad man. It shows that there is no limit to how far a man can rise if he really tries.

Mr. Storey says that too many men deliberately choose small jobs.

"One of the great shocks of my boyhood occurred when I learned that the local telegrapher in the railroad station in our town had refused promotion to the dispatcher's office. He decided to stick to his key; and the reason he gave was the added pay that dispatchers received was not sufficient to compensate him for the added responsibilities that he would have in the higher office.

"To me his decision seemed almost criminal. I saw it as a step upward. But he was thinking of his ease. That man died a telegrapher in a small station. He didn't get further because he didn't want to; or, if you like, because he didn't dare to.

"There is only one way to win promotion, and that is by doing the job a little better than those around you—a little better than you are expected to do it. If you need special training, don't complain because you haven't got it—get it!

"Work along. If you put one foot ahead of the other, day by day, in pursuit of a worthy object, and keep on doing it for a lifetime, the sum of your acts will be the thing you are after—achievement."

years from now. Make it the right answer!

Our older employes will learn with regret of the death of Henry Clay Toup, at the ripe old age of 80. He was, at one time, an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio. His service dates back to the time of the "grass-hopper," one of which he operated. Many men still living will recall his work on the old camel engine, 103. He left the service many years ago. His greatest pleasure was to talk to old time railroaders, relating happenings of the past and he could tell many incidents connected with the early days of the Baltimore and Ohio. Another pioneer has "crossed the bar."

To the bereaved families, we extend sincere sympathy.

G. Stewart, an employe at Green Spring, and Miss Mary Virginia Pearrell, Martinsburg, were married recently; they will live in Green Spring. Congratulations!

Keyser, W. Va.

Correspondent, H. B. KNIGHT

It is with deepest regret that we report the death of another Baltimore and Ohio wife and mother. On January 4, Mrs. James P. Burns passed away at the Cumberland Hospital. She was the wife of Passenger Conductor J. P. Burns and mother of Miss Anna, clerk in Cumberland, and of "Jinx" Burns, clerk at Piedmont. We extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

The editor has requested that we solicit business for our Company. He wants us to use the cards that are placed in the MAGAZINE for that purpose. It is my duty to solicit business all the time, 24 hours a day if need be, and I am trying to take care of my end. Nothing pleases me more than to receive a traffic tip. Send 'em in, fellows, I will try to do the rest in my territory.

We extend to "Doc" Dickel and his brother Joe, our deepest sympathy in the death of their father.

"Ginnie" Ravenscroft, who has been absent for some time with an injured knee, has thrown his crutch away and is able to be about.

We extend congratulations to Henry Dayton and Miss Rosalee Tucker on their recent adventure on the sea of matrimony. Mr. Dayton is a switch tender, Keyser Yards. Miss Tucker was employed in the Keyser Coal Billing Office.

Sorry to report that Car Foreman W. D. Wright had the misfortune to break his ankle a few days ago.

We wish to thank Mr. I. M. Long, one of Keyser's leading merchants, for the use of his window in displaying advertising matter about the Washington Tours. Mr. Long realizes the historical and educational value of these trips and wants to do his bit so that Keyser people may visit the Nation's Capitol and learn more about the country in which they live. Mr. Long was a Baltimore and Ohio employe years ago, and he is proud to mention this to those with whom he talks. Miss Brown and Miss Nine, clerks in his store, are distributing Washington tour circulars to interested persons, and to them we also express our appreciation.

Some of these engines were built by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. No. 228 was built by Denmeade and Son in September, 1857, and No. 228 by the railroad company the same month. Nos. 104 to 196 were built in the early fifties, not later than 1854. The Perkins ten wheeler was constructed about 1863. Nos. 9, 13, 14, 18, 29, 35, 36, 136 and 147 were originally built with fire box combustion chamber, crowbar stays, boiler shell iron 5-16 diameter at smoke box, wheel diameter 47½; cylinder 19x20 inches.

I appreciated the greetings from my fellow correspondents during the holiday season. They brought me much happiness. I have tried to read between the lines of the notes of my fellow correspondents and I see there just the kind of people I want for friends. Now with the New Year in full swing, let's put our respective divisions on the map through our MAGAZINE. I shall appreciate the cooperation of employes in my territory in assisting me in furnishing our readers good, clean, constructive notes.

It was my good fortune, as all of you know, to be awarded a beautiful set of Ridpath's History of the World for MAGAZINE work done during the past year. I did not earn this alone; my thanks are due those who so kindly assisted me. We have an important division on which things of interest are happening all the time. Let us continue the good work and keep our division in the place it should be in the MAGAZINE.

Agent Stover and his force at Keyser brought happiness to several families at Christmas by the distribution of baskets. Good work, fellows!

The public, whom we serve and try to serve well, is sometimes hard to please, but when one rides the trains as I did during the holiday rush, finding passenger conductors and brakemen meeting our patrons with a smile, we cannot wonder that patrons were so good natured.

Are you boosting Washington Tours?

We are glad to welcome Claude Clevenger as correspondent. "C. C." is a former Keyser employe, now stationed at Painesville. We are watching your notes, Claude.

I had often been told that Engineer Jeff Buckner, Rowlesburg, kept a diary and could give information pertaining to railroad events, as far back as the stone age. I have seen that interesting diary. Part of it had passed through a flood and two of its pages were missing. It is indeed interesting, and Mr. Buckner feels mighty proud of it. I am after him for his photograph and a story of his railroad life. Watch for it.

The Wheeling Employes Seventh Annual Ball must have been fine, judging by the special edition of the MAGAZINE they used as their program.

Have you noticed the bulletin boards showing the time of trains on this division?

THIS HOUSE GIVEN!

SIX ROOMS

STOP PAYING RENT NOW

Surely you want a fine six-room house of your very own, and you can have one too, without a cent of cost to you, if you promptly answer this advertisement and do as I say. I am going to give this fine six-room house away just to advertise my business. Surely you have longed for the day to come when you could cease paying rent to a landlord and call your home your own. I am now offering you the opportunity and at no cost to you whatever. Send me your name and address, before you lay this paper aside. Just picture a handsome six-room house, nice lawn and pretty shrubbery and flowers growing in well-arranged beds, and you will have a picture of what I want to do for you.

Built Anywhere in U. S. It does not matter to me where you live—the house can be built anywhere you want it. I give the house away to advertise my business, and I don't care where you want it built—Maine, California, or anywhere in the U. S.

I Will Even Buy the Lot If you do not own a lot or have no place to build, I will arrange to buy a lot for you. This beautiful and comfortable home may be yours if you promptly send me your name and address and do as I say. This offer may never come to you again. Be first in your neighborhood. Rush name and address—QUICK.

Costs Nothing to Investigate You run no risk whatever. It costs you nothing to investigate this liberal offer. I would like to place one of my houses in each locality in the U. S. Rush me your name and address TODAY—a post card will do. Just say "I want one of your six-room houses."

C. E. MOORE, Pres., Home Builders Club, Dept. 22, Batavia, Ills.

They are a most important factor in the handling of the public who look for correct information on them. Keep them clean, properly dated and correct information on them at all times. I have heard many favorable comments regarding these boards recently.

One of our photographs is of Assistant Car Foreman C. B. Gosnell and Master Mechanic G. T. Hice, Sabraton, W. Va. Mr. Gosnell was born in Martinsburg—a long time ago. Dr. Baker, father of former Secretary of War Baker, named him. He is the son of former Conductor James Gosnell, deceased, who was employed by the Baltimore and Ohio for 33 years. He is also a brother of East End Flagman A. Gosnell, who has a service record of 20 years. Mr. Gosnell has three letters of commendation for preventing accidents. Mr. Hice was in charge of Sabraton when Mr. Gosnell was employed there.

Another photograph is the Potomac State Football Team, Keyser, W. Va. This team played in Charleston, W. Va., last November, moving from Keyser to Charleston in a specially chartered Pullman car. The trip was enjoyed by all of them. The photograph shows the following Baltimore and Ohio boys, who are members of the team. 1, Howard, son of Engineer W. H. MacFarland. 2, Stanley, son of Machinist Osear Spotts. 3, Howard, son of Engineer J. E. Holtzman. 4, Raymond, son of Ex-ticket Clerk Davis, Keyser. 5, "Chip" Grindell, ex-shopman. 6, Glenn McDaniels, ex-shopman. 7, Leo, son of Engineer L. J. Casey. 8, Herman Winters, ex-shopman.

Yowls of a Yardmaster

A touching story, pathetic but true
 If you'll listen a moment, I'll relate to you.
 Of tasks performed that are exceedingly hard,
 And how they do things around Keyser Yard.
 At midnight sharp comes our old friend Neil Fresh from his downy to take charge of the wheel.
 He sharpens his pencil, bites off a chew
 And in about one minute the air turns blue.
 What? No yard engine? In the name of Heaven
 How am I going to handle Ninety-seven
 And get them out in terminal time?
 If that is the prospect, I don't give a dime.
 Repair tracks to spot and OK's to pull Shop yard and way siding, both of them full—

A big six on for twelve-fifteen,
Don't it beat anything you've ever seen?
Haven't had any sleep for a week.
What time? You say 97 by the Creek?
Brownie, hustle that westbound over,
Then place that car for Mr. Stover.
Make up the local down in the hole,
And go to the hump and put up coal.
After which I'll give you half an hour
To explore the receiving yard up at "Z"
Tower

And dig up a condemned old steam ditcher,
Or there'll be comments in a. m. from our
Mr. Pitcher.

An S. O. S. now from Jawn Melody
Says, please put that caboose on three
And after that if you're still alive,
Get the 626 out for fifty-five;
For that's our regular morning function—
Sending that bloomin' cab to M. & K.
Junction.

But before you do that, we'll run the dinky—(Gee, but this head work makes my hair kinky).

Even too much is not half enough
When we yardmasters start doing our stuff.
What's next on the program? Now let me see,

Just slide on down to the T. M. & P
Take two cars out and set one in—
Hurry up now, don't stand there and grin;
You gotta do business and loop the loop,
Or I'll turn you in to one Leroy B. Stupp.
On this third trick you get a full measure.
It sure is one continued round of sweet pleasure.

No-bills, home routes, back-offs galore,
Work and more work in sight for evermore.
In comes a broadcast from W. H. Hare Saying: "Listen Bo, is O'Connell there?"

This is the last straw—Am I here?
Here, there and everywhere, never you fear.
The train dispatcher just treated me shabby, Says "Slip down to 21st and hunt for a tabby.

Get onto yourself and get things in line
Or we'll have to detour advance Twenty-nine."

Immediately following this part of the fun
Are instructions to call up Number One
And tell J. L. M. (who just now exploded)
What delayed 97 and why overloaded.
Come boys, snap to it and we'll try and see
If we can't get things cleaned up for W.H.V.
Yoo Hoo there Central! Good night and great Heaven!

Wake up, and give me two-seventy-seven.
The world's upside down, but still going strong.

When will the next QD be along?
Have a carload of apple sauce for Naragansett Pier

That I'd like to get moving some time this year.

Backed off for a brass, but feels cool to the hand,

"Stick" says it could have easily run to Japan.

Oh, what a night; and many are such,
It's sure my delight to find things in dutch.
By some hook or crook, plan, scheme or guess,

Try to decipher the diabolical mess.
Make molehills out of mountains, turn work into play,

Then go home and get breakfast and crawl in the hay.—Schnitzelheimer

I thank the supervising and clerical forces and also the men under my jurisdiction, in different positions I have held as a supervisor, for their kind and courteous treatment of me as their new foreman.

I wish each of you a Happy New Year and a continuation of the friendships that exist.

C. B. GOSNELL
Assistant Foreman

Car Foreman Wright and family spent the holidays in Washington, seeing the sights. "W. D." will be a Washington Tour Booster from now on.

Miss Longsdorf and Miss Tasker are to be commended for the efficient manner in which they handle the check board. Always ready to confer a favor, and it is appreciated.
And they always wear a smile. Smiles is ketchin' at Keyser. Thelma Harrison thought we were not going to say anything about her. Well, Miss Thelma, we include you with Miss Longsdorf and Miss Tasker.

General Car Foreman Gillum should feel happy to know that the men have pledged each other to help make his position the success he wants it to be. Cooperation—that's it!

"Jim" Steadman, night ticket clerk, had a dandy automobile. All the girls liked to ride in it. He doesn't have it now! The other night when the mercury registered four below, the car froze up. "Jim" got it to his garage and tried to thaw it out.
About that time the shrill fire whistle woke everybody in Keyser and the Fire Company made a record run to "Jim's" garage saving the remains. About all "Jim" saved was the 1924 license which he hopes to be able to use again.

B. J. Davis, freight house clerk, was recently stricken with appendicitis, his appendix bursting before he could be gotten to the hospital. His life was despaired of for a few days but he is now on the road to recovery. We hope he will be with us again shortly.

Green Spring, W. Va.

Correspondent, E. E. ALEXANDER

Faithful in whatever task assigned, for 42 years, with an unblemished record, without one single demerit mark, is the unbroken service of Michael Skelly, fireman helper and pumper at the Timber Preserving Plant, who celebrates his 76th birthday on February 28.

Mr. Skelly entered Baltimore and Ohio service on July 5, 1882 as trackman, Cumberland Division; promoted to pumper in 1906, and transferred to the Plant on January 1, 1914, when the pumping station at Green Spring was abolished, which position he is still filling.

Daily he performs his duties with a regularity and dependability pleasing to his foreman. "Always on time" is another of his slogans.

Mr. Skelly owns his lovely home at Oldtown, Md., which, together with pictures of his beloved helpmate, who was formerly Miss Emmaline Virginia Furlong, and his charming daughters, Carrie, Florence (Mrs. Chas. Shanholtz) and Grayce, we are glad to publish herewith; also a closeup of "Uncle Mike," as his fellow workers prefer to call him.

We wish Mr. Skelly many happy returns of the day. His clean record will be a satisfaction to him and such records should be an inspiration to young employes entering service. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

An Extraordinary Switch Design

In the handling of ties at our treating plant, a system of three rail tracks is used; connections to facilitate movements, at times, are found rather difficult to make. With the installation of new track No. 8 last December, two 5-point switches designed by C. C. Cook, maintenance engineer, permitting efficient movement of either standard or narrow gauge tie cars, were placed in service.

Believing this of special interest to track engineers, photograph on next page shows a view of two of these switches connecting tracks Nos. 6, 7 and 8, narrow and standard gauge, now in use and very satisfactory.

JIFFY KEEREEL

The Safe, Ever-ready Way to carry your Switch-Key

FASTENS SECURELY TO YOUR BELT

The sturdy metal loop on the back of Jiffy KEE-REEL holds it securely. Just run the belt through this loop and buckle it in its usual place. Can't work loose—can't come off. All Jiffy KEE-REELS are made with this loop unless otherwise specified. If you wish, however, yours can be had with either a heavy catch pin or safety pin fastened firmly to the back of the reel, or with a screw fastener to put through a hole in your belt. Be sure to specify the type of fastener you prefer.

STRONGLY MADE LASTS A LIFETIME

Jiffy KEE-REEL is made to stand rough treatment and hard wear. The body is of heavy gauge brass, heavily nickel plated. The spring is of special steel which has been given rigid tests. The chain is of special steel, 21 inches in length and the case is only 5-16 inch thick so you will never feel it at your belt.

Price, complete with chain and key ring ..... $1.50

Right at your finger tips—ready when you want it, never in the way

INVENTED BY A CONDUCTOR

Jiffy KEE-REEL was invented by F. W. Corey of Mobridge, S. D., a conductor on the C. M. & St. P. He realized the need among railroad men for a safe, handy, reliable means of carrying a switch key, where it would be ready for any emergency, and Jiffy KEE-REEL is the result of his labors.

WORKS LIKE A TAPE MEASURE

Jiffy KEE-REEL looks and works like an ordinary spring tape measure. Your switch key fastens to the end of a long flexible chain which reels up on a long spring reel when not in use, and the key hangs close to your body, out of the way but always handy. You'll appreciate your Jiffy especially in cold weather, for it isn't necessary to remove your gloves to find your key.

When you want to throw a switch it is out in a Jiffy—ample chain length to reach the lock—and when the lock is open just let loose and ZIP!—it flies back to its place at your belt.

SPECIAL OFFER TO RAILROAD MEN

Here is your opportunity to pick up some easy money on the side. We need a live representative in every locality to take orders for Jiffy KEE-REELS on a liberal commission basis. Every railroad man needs one of these handy accessories and you don't have to be a salesman to sell them—they sell themselves. Every one of your acquaintances on the road is a live prospect for a Jiffy KEE-REEL. Send in your order today for your Jiffy and we will outline our plan and reserve a territory for you. Do it NOW! Be the first in your community to get in on the big profits.

Switch used at Tie Treating Plant, Green Spring, W. Va., for narrow and standard gauge cars. For details see notes

Now that most of us have discarded all superfluous resolutions and finally acquired the ability to write 1924 instead of 1923, it is hoped that everyone will put forth an extra effort to make this the banner year, in all departments, on our division. Watch for your opportunity to win a passenger or secure a freight shipment and cinch it by explaining the merits of our service!

We are glad to acknowledge the cooperation of many employes in furnishing us with interesting items for publication in the MAGAZINE. The spirit is fine and with the coming months, and more cooperation, we expect our division notes to be A 1.

King Winter reigned supreme for the greater part of the week beginning January 6, and a number of the Superintendent's Force took advantage of the cold snap to go skating. We understand why Misses Stafford and Grace have shown an inclination to perform service standing.

Miss Loretta Rottler, file clerk, Superintendent's Office, has recovered her voice. The force thinks it was a case of worn out vocal cords, but the doctor, Loretta says, diagnosed it as laryngitis.

G. R. Beniston, switchtender, Connellsville Yards, was quietly married in Cumberland, Md., on January 14. Mr. Beniston was so anxious to get to Cumberland that he reached the station in plenty of time for the train but was overcome with happy thoughts of the future and permitted it to depart without him. Undismayed, he waited for a later train which carried him safely to his journey's end. Congratulations! Anyone with experience can understand how this could happen under the circumstances.

We understand that Miss Catherine Menster, clerk to Road Foreman of Engines Foster, is wearing a diamond. The lucky man is M. J. O'Conner, hostler, Connellsville Shops. We wonder when the wedding bells will ring?

C. E. Watson, passenger engineer, F. M. & P. Sub-Division, who has been off duty since the first of the year on account of a nervous break-down, is in Asheville, N. C., recovering. We wish him a speedy recovery.

J. R. Driscoll, age 59, general yard master, Johnstown, died of apoplexy, at his home, Johnstown, Pa., on January 2. He had been in railroad service for over 35 years. He began work on the Delaware Division, Penna. R. R., and later transferred to the Southern Railway, before starting to work for this Company 23 years ago. He was on the main line of the Connellsville Division between Connellsville and Rockwood for a short time before being appointed yard conductor, Johnstown. In 1916, he met with an accident while coupling cars near Locust Street Crossing, and has since served as yard master. Mr. Driscoll was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Funeral services were held at the Memorial Baptist Church at 1.30 p. m., January 4. He is survived by his wife and three children. We extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family.

Assistant Track Foreman Samuel E. Hoover died at Somerset, Pa., on December 10. Funeral services were held on December 13, and burial took place at Smithfield Baptist Cemetery. To the family of the deceased, we extend our sympathy.

At 6.45 a. m., January 1, a ten pound baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Huddleston, Cumberland, Md. The little one has been named Nannie Catherine. Little Miss Huddleston was the winner of the Daily News silver cup and prizes awarded by Cumberland merchants for the first baby to be born in Cumberland, Md., in 1924. Mr. Huddleston is a conductor on the Main Line. Congratulations! May the good luck of Little Nannie continue throughout the coming years.

A bowling contest has been started between Master Mechanic Schad and his foremen and the male employees of the Superintendent's and Division Accountant's Offices. Two matches have been played, three games each, each team winning one match. The next match will decide the victors.

W. Zinn, Section Man, whose close observation probably prevented an accident

Miss Emma Shaw, clerk to Master Mechanic Schad, is wearing a beautiful diamond on the third finger of her left hand. J. D. Butler, shop clerk, is the lucky man. Emma and John won't say when the happy event is to take place, but we'll be there with wedding bells just the same. Congratulations!

One of our photographs is Trackman William Zinn. We are glad to give him a place of honor in our columns. On October 13, 1923, Mr. Zinn discovered a broken wheel on car in the train of No. 94, engine 4628, at Meyersdale. He advised the train crew and car was set off. Mr. Zinn's close observation and prompt action probably prevented an accident.

I would like to call the attention of employees of the Pittsburgh and Pittsburgh Terminal Divisions to the little postal card found in each issue of the MAGAZINE for the purpose of soliciting business for the Railroad. Remember this is your Alma Mater, as it were! A boost for the railroad will often result in a passenger or a shipper trying our service. Be enthusiastic in your community and be a "Go-Getter" and keep the business getting idea constantly in mind, so that when opportunity presents itself, you will have done your part to stimulate the prosperity of the Railroad.

The stork made a visit to the home of J. J. Flaherty, yard clerk, Allegheny, on New Year's day and left a baby girl. This is starting the New Year right. Congratulations!

The accompanying photo is of Melva Louise Casswell, niece of Miss Alberta McCracken, one of our efficient operators at Hazelwood Exchange. Isn't she attractive?

Here also are the pictures of the son and daughters of Trainmaster W. J. Carroll. The younger Mr. Carroll is employed in the Freight House Office, Pittsburgh, and the Misses Carroll are attending High School. The doggie occupying such an enviable position in the photo is called "Shep" and "Bill" says he is a pest. He may be a pest, but his position between Constance and Beatrice indicates that he is a "good mixer."

We were grieved to learn of the death of Alexander Black, which occurred on the morning of January 14. Mr. Black was our Company's counsel at Pittsburgh. He was a graduate of Princeton and a member of the law firm of Gordon and Smith.

On January 8, Martin Devine, pensioned freight handler, celebrated his 99th birthday.

Martin came to the Baltimore and Ohio in 1871 as trucker in the Freight House. He never changed his occupation, but remained here until he was pensioned a few years ago. Before coming to work with the Baltimore and Ohio, Martin followed the sea. His remarkable memory still enables him to tell yarns of his seagoing ventures. Says Assistant Terminal Agent J. T. Campbell, "Martin can name more South Sea Islands than ever were published in any geography."

He enjoys visiting the boys at the freight house, and whenever you see Martin you see a smile. Veterans will recall how Martin demonstrated a clog dance at the Versailles picnic last summer. He is ready to repeat the performance whenever invited. His favorite pastime is to sit in a chair in Mr. Campbell's office, light up his pipe, and begin to spin his yarns.

Long live Martin Devine!

We see some new faces in the Master Mechanic's Office. Miss Anna Kartub, statistical clerk, left to take a position as stenographer to cashier, Freight Department; her place was filled by Miss Anna M. Donohoe. Welcome to our circle, Anna.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Engineer C. J. McGregor in the death of his sister, Bertha M. McGregor.

We are always glad to see visitors and especially glad to receive a call from our former Timekeeper Charles T. Francis, now pensioned and living the life of the "idle rich."

Another stenographer for the Baltimore and Ohio, and, as a result, General Foreman J. M. Applebe wears a broad grin; a little stranger arrived at the Applebe home on December 14, and was named Anita.

We have seen some of the gifts certain people received for Christmas, but I know one person who received a diamond ring. No, this happens to be one of our pipe-fitters. We don't blame Voltz for being conscious of it; it is a dandy.

Not long ago our well known friend "Jim" Conlin was absent for a day, and we all wondered what had happened. "Jim" came in next morning with a sad story of how he had his pocket picked and his wallet containing a large amount of money stolen, and the saddest part of it was that some of the money belonged to

Mrs. "Jim." Don't carry large amounts of money with you, "Jim," let Mrs. Conlin have it and I'll wager that no one will get it from her so easily. The Savings Feature of the Relief Department would be a safe place to keep it, too.

It is perfectly all right to receive gifts for Christmas, but we don't think it is right when it is the means of teaching a bad habit. Someone had the idea that R. M. Stock, chief clerk, might like cigarettes and presented him with a nice pipe and cigarette holder. The pipe is all right, but the holder doesn't look like our chief clerk. He is never able to smoke a cigarette! Someone is always coming in to admire the holder.

C. E. Chamberlain, pipefitter, has returned from a trip to California, having been called there because of the serious illness of his sister, who is now a little better. While there he called on W. M. Huston. "Bill" was formerly employed in the roundhouse at this station but now resides in California. C. E. reports "Bill" is looking fine, and was glad to see him. So, fellows, when you go down that way in your cars, don't forget to look "Bill" up, he will supply you with first class gasoline, he's in the business.

We are waiting to attend the housewarming we think Assistant Trainmaster Allen should give in his new home on Gertrude Street, Hazelwood.

E. E. Dean has been appointed car foreman, Pittsburgh, Pa., vice C. P. Bonifield. Mr. Dean was formerly employed at Wheeling. Welcome to our city, Mr. Dean!

Let's endeavor to keep the New Year going right by keeping our good resolutions—"Stop That Leak!"—"Cross Crossings Cautiously!" and "Boost the Baltimore and Ohio Whenever You Can."

Spring Gang Foreman W. W. Bowser thinks he has put something over on us, but it can't be done. We know that he was secretly married and wish he and his bride all the happiness in the world.

Joseph Courcey is contemplating sailing on the sea of matrimony. Here's wishing you smooth sailing, "Joe."

The next time General Car Foreman Battenhouse received a package resembling a catalogue he is going to investigate its contents before telling anyone he may have it. How about it, Mr. Whalen?

J. A. O'Malley, pipe shop foreman, recently lost his father. Our sympathies are extended to the family in this, their time of sorrow.

While we dislike to blow our own horn, we cannot resist the temptation of bringing to the attention of the wide, wide world that Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop turned out a Class L-1-a locomotive in seven days without overtime.

One of the most thrilling and pleasing sights is to see the "Capitol Limited" under way and we can fully appreciate the pleasure a passenger must enjoy from a trip on it. In this connection, we are quoting an excerpt from a letter received by Glenwood Shop Trial Engineer Weaver from William and Mildred Kossman, dated Richmond Hill, New York:

"We had a most wonderful and delightful trip. Train was exactly on time and the food we bought in the dining car was fit for a king and very

WATCHES! Yes, they are considerably more than an ornament—more than a something you have need of to comply with your watch inspection rules.

A watch is a good timepiece, a faithful companion, an additional safety first measure to its owner, as well as his fellowmen and the public in general. Therefore, your watch really being a something that is important, useful and necessary for the safe and efficient performance of your duties, why not exercise great care and precision in selecting your watch? Needless to say, these people are writing about their trip on the "Capitol Limited," which train is the pride of everyone connected with the Baltimore and Ohio.

Your correspondent frequently travels over the Pennsylvania District, and it was his good fortune recently to be in Somerset, Pa., with District Master Mechanic Pfahler, on an inspection tour. Because of the class of work performed in a roundhouse, it is difficult to keep the premises clean, but Somerset is almost faultless—everything in connection with the plant being as clean as a whistle. There is a lot of geniality existing in the Storekeeper's Office these days. Dame Rumor has it that Assistant Chief Clerk C. L. Tucker has popped the question and been accepted. We are acquainted with the young lady, and Charlie is to be congratulated.

During the holiday season General Car Foreman Battenhouse received a package, which appeared to contain a catalog. Having a bad cold, he was unable to detect that the package contained a delicious fruit cake. Chief Clerk Whalen's scent, however, was keen and he obtained a clear title to the package. Mr. Battenhouse, being a good sport, stood his loss admirably.

The accompanying photograph shows the first snow plow built in Glenwood Car Shop. This is a right-hand running single shear steel plow, which was built on a Rogers ballast car. It is considered the best of its kind for heavy work and was constructed for use on the Northern District, where the snow storms are usually severe. The length of the shear is 15 feet and the height from the rail to the front tip is nine feet: the width being nine feet. The mold board has a double steel tip made of  $\frac{5}{16}$ " sheet iron and rivetted neatly together. The cutter is made of  $\frac{5}{16}$ " sheet iron. Under the front tip of the mold board are two  $\frac{1}{2}$ " steel shoes, which ride the rail when the plow is performing a heavy operation or comes in contact with heavy snow.

In the small house built on the front end of the car is the flanger operating device, which is operated by air furnished from the train line. This flanger, when in operation, is  $\frac{1}{2}$ " from the rail and takes off any ice that may be frozen to the rail. At switch-over frogs, road crossings, etc., the flanger is raised by means of air so that it will not be broken off by obstructions. The back portion of the car is separated from the cab by an end gate and is filled with ballast to balance the car.

There is a neat coupler arrangement, which is used when it is necessary to pull the plow from the front end. In case the plow should drag on the rail, there is an arrangement for adjusting the rods at the front end of the cab, which, when tightened, raises the front end of the plow, thus releasing it from the rail and giving proper clearance.

Before the plow left our Car Shop, a test was made to insure the strength of the mold board frame, which is constructed of wood and channel iron, by jacking the car up at the front end and placing two blocks under either side of the mold board tip. The jacks were then removed and the whole weight of the car, from the back truck to the front mold board truck, rested on the mold board tip without showing any undue strain on any part of the frame.

With 709 men engaged in general repair work, including clerks and supervision, the output of Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop, during the month of December, 1923, where operations were suspended for eleven days, was as follows:

Engineer J. A. Cottrell and one of his pets,
Northern District

Northern District

Correspondent, D. H. KIRKWOOD

Born on May 10, 1861, on a farm, in Harrison County, W. Va., Engineer James A. Cottrell became a member of the Baltimore and Ohio family on his 17th birthday. He entered the service as a trackman on the Parkersburg Branch under Foreman T. D. Armstrong, who passed away many years ago. On New Year's Day, 1881, Mr. Cottrell transferred his activities to the position of freight brakeman on the old Third Division between Grafton and Keyser. At that time a brakeman's pay was $1.50 per trip, whether the trip was of 6 or 60 hours' duration. On January 1, 1890, Mr. Cottrell was transferred to the Pittsburgh Division, working on the W. & P. district as fireman until July, 1895. He was then transferred to the Pittsburgh Junction Railroad, and one month later was again transferred to the old P. & W. R. R. He was promoted to engineer in September, 1898. For the past three years he has been running trains 47 and 48 between Pittsburgh and Clarion Junction.

Mr. Cottrell's home is in Glenwood, and when not on the road he is engaged in looking after his pets, which consist of Funchie, a dog that spent his early life as one of the mascots of the 37th Division, A. E. F. in France; Girlie, a 47-pound raccoon, gentle as a kitten; Ted, a three-year-old fox that loves to romp with its master, and Boy, a large white cat with a successful record as a "Midnight Sere-nader."

One of our old and loyal employees, Mr. Cottrell has many friends on the road and among our patrons, and we hope he will be spared to be with us many more years.

On December 13, President Willard visited Butler as a guest of the city. He was accompanied by Vice-Presidents Galloway and Fries, General Manager Scheer, General Superintendent Peck, Superintendent Beltz and other officers. He arrived at 2.00 p. m.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce were at the station and took the party for a visit to the principal industries. A banquet in honor of Mr. Willard and party was held at the Nixon Hotel, immediately after which he was taken to the auditorium of the new Senior High School, where he delivered a splendid address. After Mr. Willard's address, Hon. Hart Graham, chairman, Board of Commerce, spoke briefly, telling his audience of several instances in which the Baltimore and Ohio had proved to be a "Good Neighbor" to Butler.

Through the courtesy of Trainmaster J. F. Miller a special train was run from Foxburg so that employes could hear the president speak. Agent C. A. Smith, Knox, Pa., hearing of this arrangement, mentioned it to citizens of Knox, who got in touch with Mr. Miller and arranged to have the train extended to their station.

Retired Superintendent R. M. Sheats, Foxburg, was much disappointed that he could not hear the president speak because of an accident which had occurred a few days before.

On page 46, December MAGAZINE, there was a reprint of a train order copied at Newark, on March 26, 1884, by Operator D. M. Lovejoy. It is interesting to know that Mr. Lovejoy is a Pittsburgh passenger conductor and has held trains 47 and 48 on our district several times. He is still a "crack brass pounder" and the "op" at the other end would have to move lively to put him under the table even today. "73" to "DM."

The dance held by the O. R. T. Club of Pittsburgh, at Moose Hall, on December 14, was well attended by Baltimore and Ohio folk. The music was furnished by Prof. Harry Signors' V. of F. W. Orchestra. More dances will be held during the winter.

Your correspondent recently received a note from Assistant Road Foreman D. B. Fawcett, Washington, D. C. Weather fine, radishes growing "N everything." We are kicking snow up here! Mr. Fawcett wishes to be remembered to his friends on our district.

Agent S. T. McDaniels has been transferred from Sheffield Junction to Renfrew. Relief Agent C. K. Holverstott is at Sheffield Junction.

The James City Glass Works were recently sold to the Durant Motor Co., and the town of James City re-named Durant City.

We are glad to show you a photograph of Conductors George G. Wise, right, and Charles Anderson. This was taken several years ago. They dressed up, left their cab and went uptown for some fun. In the midst of it, they met the photographer. "Shot in Kane" is right, but—by the photographer. Conductor Wise has been in the service thirty-five years and Conductor Anderson almost twenty years. Mr. Wise has many interesting stories to tell of the old narrow gauge days.

Hostler R. G. Johnson, Kane, recently killed a 34 pound wildcat.

On December 9, Extra 1359, east, light, Engineer McCoy, hit a doe weighing 190 pounds at Paint Creek Trestle, near Clarion Junction. The engineer did not know what had happened until crew of following train told him. The deer was brought to Foxburg, game warden notified. He had it dressed and sent to Butler Hospital.

We are sorry to report that Engineer J. W. Edinger is in a Pittsburgh Hospital undergoing an operation. We hope for his speedy recovery.

Northern District boosters are on the job. We have been told of several instances where our employes have persuaded shippers to say "Ship our orders via Baltimore and Ohio." Keep it up, boys. We're with you.

Machinist R. J. Millett, Foxburg Shop fire marshal, attended the first meeting of fire marshals at Cumberland on December 3. Many important subjects were discussed and those who attended were much interested. Full details of the meeting were reported in January issue.

A short time ago, on a dark rainy night, a King Eight was left out all night near the lower yards, Foxburg. In his rush to get inside, Inspector Ritts evidently made a mistake, as the owner found a card on his car next morning, reading, "Shopped for wheels, springs, seats, upholstery, etc." Blacksmith W. T. McDonald does not know who did it, but says his King will beat any other in town.

The roll has been called. All hunters have answered "here." Nobody lost this season. Have you heard "Curly" tell the story about the big black bear he "just missed?" Some of the boys did well, bagging jack rabbits, and other game.

One of our photographs is Train Baggage-master W. H. Yocum, who was a lieutenant in the World War. He has seen lots of country and is now away seeing more. Space forbids telling all the cities he will visit, but he finishes in Havana, Cuba.

Have you noticed the "Capitol Limited Freight Service" we are getting from Chicago and other points? Tell the other fellow about it and help increase the revenue. The liveliest subject before us just now is getting business and the liveliest bunch of business getters I know are on the Northern District. The other boys are good—but they will have to hustle to beat us.

One of our photographs is James Dent Powell, six months old, son of A. A. Powell, Accounting Department, Monongah Division. The other is Clyde Cabell. Mr. Cabell is 18 years old and weighs 301 pounds; his height is six feet, five and one-half inches. He is at present attending Parkersburg High School and will graduate in February. Our congratulations are extended to him. He is the son of J. R. Cabell, a well known engineer on the Parkersburg Branch.

We have received the following letter from Monongah Division Engineer Harry J. Meek, which shows what can be accomplished in securing business when we go after it with determination:

"Almost every time I pick up one of our MAGAZINES, I notice an instance where some brother has obtained business for us. I have an instance in mind now.

"Some time ago, I sold a Chevrolet car to a lady in Grafton. She came to Parkersburg from Grafton to see the car and have it demonstrated; it was satisfactory. The deal was closed and she wanted the car in Grafton immediately, so she suggested that I drive it through. I had the car cleaned and shining for this special occasion. I knew just what it would look like on its arrival at Grafton, so I decided not to drive it. I had railroaded on that territory since I was a youngster and knew the condition of the 135 miles of red clay, rock and water road would be in at that time of the year (April.) My suggestion was to ship it Baltimore and Ohio; it was then that I discovered our reputation was not good with my customer. The lady had more arguments to give me than Frank Gotch or Farmer Burns ever had in their wrestling school. I eventually succeeded in having it sent via Baltimore and Ohio by promising to pay half the freight charges, to load and unload and to deliver it to her door by a specified time.

"I went to Yardmaster "Charlie" Southworth and told him that I wanted an automobile car—quick. And that was just how he dug it out and placed it on the old freight house track. My car placed and moved before six o'clock, I left for Grafton, W. Va., on No. 4 with a normal pulse. My car was right after me on good old Baltimore and Ohio Train 90. My first thought, the next morning, was the East Yard, where the venerable John Haddix located my car and placed it in the hands of "Billie" Mitchell, now our stationmaster, then conductor on the Freight House Turn, who, with our Best and Only methods placed it alongside the unloading platform. Needless to say, I was not long in unloading and cleaning the car up and at 1 p. m. I delivered her to the house of Miss Jane Moran on Maple Avenue. Her Chevrolet was bought, shipped and delivered from Parkersburg, W. Va., to Grafton, W. Va., in just 31 hours via the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

"This, I know, changed that lady's mind regarding our freight service.

"Now, to those of you who have occasion to transact business with any railroad:

TRY OUR LINES!
OURS
SAFETY, QUICK SERVICE AND FAIR TREATMENT."

A. Smith, brakeman, who has been absent for some time because of illness, has resumed duty.

The heartfelt sympathy of the employees of the Monongah Division is extended to Arthur B. Cutright, relief agent, in the loss of his mother, who died recently following a short illness.

Sympathy is also extended to Curtis D. Fleming, weighmaster, in the loss of his father, who died suddenly.

Car Repairman and Mrs. J. B. Gatrell are the proud parents of a baby girl, born January 6. Congratulations!

C. B. Dailey, Benwood, W. Va., is the new night car foreman here. E. Burkhammer has been promoted to passenger car foreman, Wheeling, W. Va.

Miss Nellie Comer, posting clerk, Clarksburg Freight Office, accompanied by her father, Patrick Comer, signalman, returned the first of the year from a tour of the Southwest. They report an interesting trip which was, however, marred by an unfortunate accident. Mr. Comer was struck by an automobile while on the streets of San Antonio, Texas, and while he was able to continue the journey home, he has been confined to the hospital since his arrival. We all hope for his early recovery.

On January 11, Mr. J. W. Wilson, Jacksonburg, W. Va., discovered about two tons of stone that had fallen on the track at Knuckles Cut, just before the arrival of passenger train No. 46. He waited until the train arrived in order to flag it. Conductor C. P. Dunigan and Engineer W. W. Carr were in charge of No. 46, which was stopped in time to prevent accident.

Get your passenger yet? Every extra fare is "velvet." The trains must run!

On December 27, Supervisor Harry H. Tedrick, Fairmont, was given a banquet by his foremen and was presented with a thirty second degree Masonic charm. The presentation speech was made by Division Engineer A. H. Freygang; other speeches being made by Supervisor J. F. Shafferman, Mr. Hoffmaster and W. H. Nicholas. The banquet was given in the Virginia Tea Room, Fairmont, and at the same time a check was presented to Frank Sermo for having the cleanest yard on the Monogah Division.

At the last business meeting of the Veterans, the annual election of officers took place, and the following were elected for the ensuing year: F. H. Brummage, president; F. M. Wittman, vice-president; A. Atha, treasurer; E. Bartlett, sergeant-at-arms and J. A. Downey, secretary. H. G. Fletcher, the retiring president, arranged for an oyster supper to be given by Veterans and their wives on January 25, this being the last evening that Mr. Fletcher presided as president.

The many friends of Supervisor Harry H. Tedrick extend sympathy because of the death of his brother, A. E. Tedrick, supervisor, Martinsburg, W. Va.

W. W. Satterfield has resumed his duties as first trick operator at Monongah after a trip to California.

Agent George Morris has been very ill for some time. We hope for a speedy recovery; he is a faithful employee.

Assistant Telephone Supervisor D. S. Holton has returned to Fairmont from a business trip over the Charleston Division, including Gassaway, Elkins and Orlando.

Fairmont was well represented at the annual ball of the Baltimore and Ohio at Wheeling on December 27. A number of our employes attended and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Among the many there was a junior supervisor from Fairmont who wore socks so loud that all the girls wanted to play checkers with him.

Congratulations to Yardmaster and Mrs. W. B. Stewart on the arrival of a little son to brighten their new home on Field Street. "Bill" Jr. arrived on January 5.

Get your friends to try Baltimore and Ohio passenger service. The courtesy of our employes will win them.

Readers of last month's MAGAZINE will remember the picture of "Tony" Torchi, platform cleaner at Wheeling Station. "Tony" was hurt in a hand car accident recently, which prevents him from attending to his duties on the platform, and he certainly hates it. "Tony" can't wait for the doctor to "O. The following letter was written by Superintendent C. B. Gorsuch to Engineer W. M. Harden on January 2:

"I have a report from Assistant Road Foreman of Engines W. H. Powell that you showed unusual interest in why you broke loose while running west near BN Tower, December 23. You came from your engine, 58 car lengths, and assisted in repairing and correcting the trouble.

"We appreciate such actions and display of interest and it can only result in more efficient and safe operation of this division, which will benefit the Company as well as yourself and fellow employees."

Ivan Spear, of Spear & Riddle Co., 10th and Market Streets, Wheeling, presented to Wheeling Division Veterans' Chapter, No. 22, a Delco electric lantern, to be raffled for the benefit of the Veterans. Ticket No. 236, held by Mrs. Edward Dwyer, 34 Alley 15, won the lantern.

You Can't Beat an Irishman

The other day while the thermometer was at zero, Jones left the door of the lunch room open at noon. His buddy, "Sandy," yelled at him, "Shut that door! Where were you raised—in a barn?"

Jones shut the door—but "Sandy," looking at him a moment later, observed that he was in tears. Going over to his victim he apologized. "Oh, come," he said soothingly, "you shouldn't take it to heart because I asked you if you were raised in a barn."

"That's it; I was raised in a barn, and it makes me homesick every time I hear an ass bray."

Deaths

Mrs. James Maxwell, wife of Machinist Maxwell.

Mrs. Wheatley Frasure, wife of Yard Clerk Frasure.

Sympathy!

One of our popular car inspectors in the Low Yards recently emerged from a local hospital minus his appendix, also minus some cold cash. He vigorously denies all reports of any peculiar remarks he is said to have made while "coming to," such as "Kiss me, Miss—, M— won't care," etc. But he admits his regret that he has but one appendix as an excuse to stay longer. You've guessed him—it's little "Al" Marshall.

O. D. Cooper's son and heir has at last arrived and is making it warm for other members of the family. Atta boy! It may be interesting to know that "Coop" is still wearing his last Spring's Palm Beach.

Agent Van Valey, St. Marys, wants us to advertise him as still being in the horse and cow trading business. Of course Van is not in this business for your profit!

Ralph Nolan and Ira Burd have been busy gathering their yearly supply of calendars. Business men on the O. R. Division suspect, they are papering their homes with them.

I know a brakeman named Thomas Garrett, He is about as slippery as a well-greased ferret,

Quite a hand for growling and fussing,
And once gave Emery Williamson a cussing.
Time rolled on, Christmas drew nigh,
Tom asked Emery for a chicken to fry;
Apparently forgetting the past demonstration,

He got Tom a fine one without hesitation;
Tom was well pleased and well he might be
To have the nice chicken to put on his tree.
He turned it out to scratch in the hay,
Thinking some day a few eggs it would lay.
But after a long time Tommy's been told,
A chicken won't lay that's 100 years old.

The Yuletide season was saddened at the Freight House because of a death in the family of one of our force, 'C. C. Starkey, whose son was laid to rest on Christmas Day. Our sympathy is extended to Mr. Starkey and family.

"Sunshine" Harrison was in his usual role of chaperon to Campbell on the evening of December 27, escorting him to the Annual Ball at Wheeling, and seeing him safely home.

A snapshot of Harriet Irene Miller, age six months, and Grandfather R. Nolan, brakeman, O. R. Division, appears in this issue. Harriet is the daughter of Yard Brakeman H. O. Miller. Brakeman Nolan claims the distinction of being the youngest grandfather on the Baltimore and Ohio, he still being on the sunny side of forty. If any of you can beat this, send your picture to the MAGAZINE. There may be younger grandfathers on the System, but they will not be able to show any sweeter granddaughter than little Harriet Irene.

We left our heroine, little Mary Keenan, in Los Angeles, ready to start on her return trip across the continent, all by herself. Little did she dream of the adventures that were in store for her, or she never would have undertaken this perilous trip without a chaperone or two. With many admonitions from her relatives about the proper way to conduct herself en route, and especially not to try to vamp strangers she might meet, one sunny morning she boarded the Overland Limited and was on her way. All went well with our heroine until her train pulled into the historic city of Albuquerque, N. M., when her great adventure took place.

As every one knows, "Fred" Harvey conducts one of his famous restaurants at that point, and a stop of 30 minutes is made for lunch. Mary, whose appetite is always very delicate, had disposed of the generous lunch which her sister had packed in a shoe box just before leaving, and was the first one off the train, making a bee line for the chop house. So absorbed did she become in the pies and sandwiches that she did not hear the conductor shout "All Aboard!" and just as she was finishing her third piece of pie the train pulled out, leaving our heroine stranded in the heart of the Great American Desert, without baggage, money or friends.

To say that Mary was panic stricken would be putting it mildly. Rushing to the ticket office she insisted that the train be stopped at the next station and returned. When told this was impossible she demanded another train right away. As this was also impossible, Mary was inclined to walk, but as she takes such short steps, this plan was also abandoned. By this time the whole town was boiling with excitement, and an amateur aviator offered to carry her in his machine across the desert and overtake the train at a point about 100 miles distant, but as Mary can go up in the air as high as any other girl so long as she can keep one foot on the ground, this plan was also discarded.

THE DREAM OF "POLLY" B

Cartoon shows the ambition of his life. He is a nice boy, is the pride of the ladies and a regular Beau Brummel. Girls are asked to remember that this is Leap Year!

After the mayor of the town and a committee of prominent citizens had succeeded in quieting her, she immediately began to make the telegraph wires hum. Beginning with her mother, she wired almost everyone of importance connected with the Baltimore and Ohio at Parkersburg, also the mayor and chief of police, sending all messages "collect." After eight hours of nerve racking torture, Mary was rewarded by seeing an eastbound local pull into the station. With the entire town wishing her God-speed, she once more started on her way for home, resolved never to leave her car, regardless of any appetite that she might accumulate. After three days and nights in a day coach Mary finally landed in Chicago almost starved, and very much cramped from sitting up for so long. Can you imagine her joy when she stepped off the train to find her mother waiting for her? The reunion was pathetic. Mary's adventures ended then and there, and after several months she still maintains she will never leave her home town again under any circumstances.

Leap Year Idea

Dear Girls:

The photographs of Cassius M. Whittier and Charles O'Brien in this issue, will give you an idea of the good-looking eligibles with which the Freight House abounds. One is a widower and the other a "bach." We will let you guess which is which, or, if interested, you might find out by writing them. All communications must be addressed in care of the correspondent who will pass them on to them. This should interest you, "Miss Springfield, Ill."

From month to month, as we can persuade fond relatives to produce them, we will publish photos of other unattached males, and you girls can give them the "once over." If the editor does not put a taboo on us, we will try to make it interesting.

"Fish," known on Sundays as Adam Loebig, quit us cold a few weeks ago, for a few more iron men per month. Without so much as saying "goodbye," "kiss my foot," or any other little thing like that, he just disappeared and the next we heard, he was in the office of Division Freight Agent Barnhart. We understand the boss knew of his impending departure, but not so the rank and file. "Goodbye, 'Fish,' good luck!"

It will be interesting to our Parkersburg readers to know more about the Law Department of our Company, and I am therefore giving a few facts about one of our local legal lights, J. W. Vandervort.

Mr. Vandervort was born May 7, 1855, at Masontown, W. Va. He was educated at West Virginia University, and in law at the University of Virginia. He was admitted to the bar in 1877, has practised law in Parkersburg since October 10, 1881, and has been counsel for the Baltimore and Ohio for over 20 years. Mr. Vandervort has served as mayor of Parkersburg and also as city attorney. He has been Judge of the Criminal Court, Parkersburg, Special Master in Chancery, and was Master, U. S. District Court, in the controversy between the State of West Virginia and the Manufacturers Light & Heat Company. For several years he has been General Counsel of the American Bar Association for West Virginia. He is a Methodist, a member of Parkersburg B. P. O. E., and of the Rotary Club; a gentleman of whom one might stand just a little in awe at first, but one whose friendship, as time goes on, reveals the richness of his character; whose many kindnesses and acts of charity are not generally known as they are not preceded by a brass band.

PARKERSBURG FAMOUS PEOPLE

Some years ago your correspondent, just out of school, with inward trepidation, but apparently with as much crust as a loaf of Barrett's Bread, invaded Mr. Vandervort's office and asked for a "job." He did not order us out, but certainly did refuse to consider us. "What," he demanded of us, "would I do with a green stenographer?" etc., etc. However, we declined to take him seriously, and insisted that he give us a chance. We explained that it was necessary for us to receive a few dollars on a regular payday and we had picked out his office in which to get our start. (We wonder if Mr. Vandervort remembers this interview.) We knew if we once got in we could show Mr. Vandervort how truly smart we were. After a struggle he succumbed and we installed ourselves in his office the next day, and remained with him for five years, when he finally got rid of us. The experience gained in Mr. Vandervort's office was an education in itself to your correspondent, and has been invaluable in the years that have followed, but we doubt not that the wear and tear on the gentleman himself during the period he was getting used to an inexperienced stenographer, must have been terrific.

Mr. Vandervort is probably the best known lawyer in Parkersburg among the Railroad fraternity. The majority of the men are building homes, or have built them through the Relief Department, and he handles this feature of the law work here.

Nothing has been said about the social side of this busy man's life, but he is as thorough about this part as he is about his business during office hours. He is a fiend at golf, turns a mean ankle at every Charity Dance, and even joins the movie crowd when Jackie Coogan appears on the screen. So you see, he is a regular fellow after all.

Here you will see the four reasons why Conductor H. L. Berlin, works every day—Richard, Helen, Carl and Eileen. Papa Berlin talks a great deal about all of these little darlings, but we are lead to believe from the trend of his conversation that Baby Eileen is "Papa's Pet."

Harve McMullen, section foreman, Sistersville, is moving his extra shirt and sox to a new boarding house. Some one said Harve and the landlady fell out because Harve tried to make ice cream in her new electric washer. Harve says "It will not freeze."

Gassaway Notes

Our youthful cartoonist of Gassaway, Master Otis Fansler, son of Conductor O. C. Fansler, doubles up on us and brings to our attention both of those great Americans whose birthdays we celebrate during the present month.

We miss the smiling face of F. J. Lindoerfer, who recently left Gassaway for New Castle, Pa. We think he was in a hurry to get to the city. First, because it is a city, and second, because it puts him closer to Wooster, Ohio. (His girl lives there.)

We welcome R. M. Heflin to Gassaway and hope he will soon like Gassaway as well as we do. We know that Grafton has lost one of her good residents.

Weston

We are glad to announce the marriage of Miss Alice Rice, secretary to division engineer, to Mr. Ernest C. Holmboe, Clarksburg, W. Va. We have known for some time that such an event was contemplated and made every effort possible to tip our friends off in advance, but without success. Congratulations!

Two of our lady stenographers at Weston are now wearing diamonds. One was received as a Christmas present; the other as a birthday present. What fools we mortals be (to accept such statements as that). Someone will have to open up on another box of "stenogs" before long.

Southwest District

General Superintendent F. B. Mitchell has received a letter from Mrs. James T. Fought, Beaver Dam, Ky., complimenting a Baltimore and Ohio crew for courteous assistance given her on a trip from Detroit to Beaver Dam. Her letter reads as follows:

"On a recent trip from Detroit, Mich., to Beaver Dam, Ky., it was necessary to transfer the passengers from one coach to another at Toledo, Ohio, and it was my misfortune to leave my purse, containing my ticket, checks and money, under my pillow in the berth in the car that was switched out. I did not discover my loss until we had left Toledo.

"I reported my loss to the conductor and he immediately telegraphed back for the coach to be searched. He also telegraphed ahead and had a new ticket made out for me and when he learned that I had left my money in my purse he loaned me enough for my breakfast and lunch.

"I have never had occasion to call on a train employe, but I would not have expected the kind treatment that I received from this man and his helpers, and I thought that you would like to know that you had such men in your employ and to know what the public thinks of them. Every one on the coach knew of his kindness to me and I was given your name by one of the passengers so that I could report this to you.

"And, let me say in closing, that I will always travel on the Baltimore and Ohio when it is possible, and with Conductor J. C. Clifford if I can."

Conductor Clifford has been commended by General Superintendent Mitchell and Superintendent Iams. His photograph appears on page 104.

Freight Traffic Department, Cincinnati, Ohio

The General Freight Office is still living up to its reputation of keeping the office in good shape. We hope that during the coming year there will be no cause for complaint on this score.

The Tariff Bureau has issued a challenge to the General Freight Office for a bowling contest. We are confident the General Freight Office can knock the pins from under the Tariff Bureau.

Let 1924 go along with an honest effort TO DO BETTER on everyone's part. Do your tiny share of the big work ahead! In doing so you will do wonders for yourself.

How to begin?

Think more—talk less!

Use energy in doing, instead of planning.

Make up your mind to help others—if only with politeness and patience. Be a decent little bullet in that great ball bearing apparatus we call "civilization."

Control yourself—appetite, vanity, thirst, egotism, self-indulgence and all its foolish forms. Your first business is to rule yourself. Do that as a preliminary to any other success.

The Gest Street family has increased—the boys at Gest Street are congratulating Frank Penderghast and wife on the arrival of a bouncing baby boy.

We are all glad to see Yard Conductor Bill Bailey back. He met with a serious accident in October. Also glad to hear that Horace Moore, clerk, Gest Street, is convalescing after an accident which kept him at the hospital for three weeks.

Crossing Watchman James Cleary, Gest Street, met with an accident and is resting nicely at the St. Mary's Hospital. We all hope for his speedy recovery.

Elmer Feldman, receiving clerk, Gest Street, who was working at Brighton temporarily, is back on his old job.

Carl Buelterman is back at Smith Street after a month's stay at Gest Street as temporary receiving clerk.

The Superintendent's Office force is glad to know that M. Spurgeon, night chief clerk, is getting along nicely after an operation performed recently. We hope he will soon be able to resume duty.

It is with deep regret that we report the death of Fred Silvers, pensioned employe. Mr. and Mrs. Silvers have won the prize for the past several years for being the oldest couple on the grounds at the Employees' Annual Outing at Chester Park. We all extend to Mrs. Silvers our heartfelt sympathy in her bereavement.

Rare Honesty

Rats and mice love a home like the Baltimore and Ohio Warehouse. In order to get rid of the mice, we placed a premium of two cents on each, and furnished our men with traps. We soon had mice galore and we asked our men to turn in the tails only. As a mouse only has one tail we felt safe in paying for them that way.

A few days ago one of our men caught a mouse in a trap by the tail, and as it was a spring trap, the tail was cut off and the trapper refused to turn in the tail, because he had not personally seen the mouse from which the tail came. He threw the tail out the window. Strange to say the next day he caught the mouse without the tail, and as the mouse then had no tail, and he had disposed of the tail he had the day before, naturally we did not have to pay for one mouse at least that we knew was caught. This is what I call rare honesty.

Cleveland Correspondent Smith, a member of the Police Department, is getting together the material for a wonderful story. A man goes out on New Year's eve, falls down, gets a black eye and then turns up with two hats. The explanation of how it happened is a "knockout."

On December 19, J. J. Llewellyn, Cleveland Builders Supply Co., Cleveland, discovered box car on fire on siding leading to Shaff Plant. Other empty cars were moved away by use of pinch bars and trainmaster notified. Superintendent has written Mr. Llewellyn expressing appreciation of his assistance.

It is rumored that Andy Gump will choose a new partner from the Signal Organization, Akron Division. Andy lost a fortune and his faith in human nature and George lost—, but we are ahead of the story. At any rate their dispositions, characters and ideals so harmonize that this new partnership should surprise the world. George is not so well known as Andy and we will briefly outline the harrowing details of the loss that embittered another life. Barney Google enters the plot, but only incidentally, as George is constantly endeavoring to improve himself and was assiduously studying the life of this wonderful character when he suffered his loss. George is not the man to pine and darken the world with his sighs and frowns in time of trouble; while his heart is broken, his face, too, is broken, but in smiles. Ah, brave heart, the world will yet recognize this will of aluminum that so lightly casts off trouble and grief. George is honest. He admits he had the goods. He knows his faults almost as well as others do. It was in the train. They were right beside him. Barney Google filled his mind. He left the train and also left—(To be continued).

Assistant Engineer Feathers wishes public correction of the statement that he is a horn blower. It seems he doesn't blow a horn, but a clarinet. If there is any credit in this, he is certainly entitled to it!

Track Foreman Leo Waltzer, Canal Fulton, has been placed on the pension list and will take a well earned rest after long years of faithful service. Thomas McGee, former trainman and more recently crossing watchman at Canton, has also been pensioned. Both of these men have splendid records and have many friends who join in wishing them health and happiness.

Traveling Accountant P. B. McDowell wears another smile. This time it is a boy. Mother and son are doing well. Congratulations!

Louie Moehr, former assistant engineer, Akron, sends his regards from Redondo Beach, California. Louie also promises us some California weather about July 4.

Another bright, handsome boy has joined the Division Accountant's forces. As usual, the second story beauty walks off with the prize.

Martha and Frank have made no public announcement, but February is as good a month as any. There are a number of good books published on this subject, but Certha M. Blay's "The Frozen Foot," is highly recommended by "Eddie" Merriman.

In the Superintendent's Office, Mildred Roberts has moved her desk closer to the window. The beautiful diamond from Fred shows up to better advantage.

Assistant Chief Clerk Bachtel is making his first visit to Florida, getting as close to Cuba as he can and keep both feet on land. We will probably not enjoy the wonderful Florida fruit that Bachtel does not send us, unless he changes his mind.

Division Master Mechanic Tschuor was the recipient of a handsome mahogany hall clock from the foremen of the Akron Division at Christmas. It's a beauty, boys, and the "boss" was just as tickled as a kid with a new toy.

The spirit of Christmas was plainly in evidence at New Castle Junction during the holidays. Many exchanges of gifts and cards between employes, made for all a merry Christmas.

Fire Marshal "Ed" Scanlon represented New Castle Junction Shops at the meeting of the district fire marshals, held at Cincinnati on January 14. "Ed" was complimented at the meeting for the good work done by members of the Fire Brigade at the fire in Murphy's restaurant recently.

N. R. Butler, general foreman, was called into the office on Christmas Eve and presented with a handsome silver service set, the gift of shop foremen who are associated with him at New Castle Junction. Mr. Butler responded, expressing his appreciation for the beautiful gift, and also for the splendid cooperation given him during the past year.

One of our photographs is Phyllis Forbs Haines, three year old granddaughter of Conductor E. M. Forbs, Willard. The dog, "Trixy," belongs to Conductor M. G. Guthrie. Conductors Guthrie and Forbs have a great time with both Phyllis and Trixy; Phyllis spends most of her time at Conductor Guthrie's home showing plainly that she likes Mr. Guthrie better than Grandad, which naturally makes Mr. Forbs "peevish." Guthrie says if he can't claim the little girl he can at least claim the dog.

Conductor Guthrie was made grandfather on October 24, when a son was born to C. R. Guthrie and wife. C. R. Guthrie was formerly employed as yardmaster, New Castle Junction, but is now conducting a tire shop at Ellensburg, Washington.

Patrolman H. C. Harper and Lieutenant K. F. Wright are running opposition in catching "bums" coming into New Castle. Patrolman Harper arrested two negroes on Train 98 at New Castle Junction on December 21, relieving one suspect of a 38 special revolver, loaded with six cartridges.

Third Trick Eastbound Checker William Stevenson met with a painful accident on New Year's Eve on his way to work, and is now confined to his home. We all hope "Bill" will soon be able to be with us again.

MISSING—Traveling Car Agent John Hart! Any one knowing his whereabouts please notify New Castle Junction, Center Yard Office. (See story of the Wheeling Ball, Miss Agnes. —Ed.)

L. B. Nail, eastbound hump conductor, better known as "Tack," says that winter never made much of a hit with him. He has a hard time keeping icicles off his mustache and goatee.

Brakeman H. W. Goad and Frank Fanning indulged in a humorous bout of wrestling, resulting in Mr. Goad taking the championship from Mr. Fanning, who is known as "Kid Pee-Wee of Texas."

Since Assistant Trainmaster Green has announced to the Westbound Hump that he will start a class of brakemen for examination in the book of rules, for promotion to conductor, the "gang" has Lecomte melancholy, assuming that they haven't the necessary education to understand the book of rules. The chief object is to avoid red tape. My advice to you, "Fred," would be to make a thorough investigation of the romantic letters that these young men have written in the past. Names and addresses of the young ladies possessing such letters may be obtained upon request.

S. C. Jones, yard brakeman, is the proud father of a daughter born on December 29. She weighs eight pounds and answers to the name of Edith Regina.

Florida business is good. Agents Bane, Rosenblum, Sisley and Cummings are right on the job getting business as fast as the parties concerned can be located. Credit is due these men for their untiring efforts in securing business for the Baltimore and Ohio.

Former Engineer C. A. Reamer, now working for the Carnegie Steel Company, is to be given credit for securing five passengers for points in Georgia and Florida. Even though he is employed by Carnegie, his heart is still with the Baltimore and Ohio.

Ticket Agent Bane advises that the ticket office at New Castle (better known in this vicinity as Mahoningtown), is open 24 hours and he doesn't mean "maybe."

Engineer Weimer and Conductor "Jack" Talbot are absent because of illness.

General Yardmaster "Red" Updegraph received a handsome pair of roller skates for Christmas. Engineer Mairer reports receiving a little engine and a little brown wagon.

Crew Dispatcher VanCamp is at last in the limelight. Have been trying for months to get him into the news columns but "Van" does nothing but work. "Get going—Get going." "Don't look for the engine, look for the engineer," are two of his best college yells.

A meeting of the Aiken Auxiliary, Veteran Employees' Association, was held on December 10, in the Local Freight Office. Mrs. Geo. H. Glenn was elected president; Mrs. James Aiken, vice-president; Mrs. Geo. Kitchen, secretary and Mrs. J. K. Jolly, treasurer. Mrs. James Aiken was elected delegate and Mrs. W. W. Smith, alternate, to attend the Grand Lodge Convention.

The regular meeting of the Freight Claim Prevention Committee of Youngstown was held December 21. Routine business was transacted, many good points being brought out to "Stop That Leak."

The Veteran Employees' Association, Akron Division, held a meeting at Akron, Ohio, December 23. W. D. Reed, Niles, O., was elected president; J. R. Neiderheiser, Cleveland, O., vice-president; J. K. Jolly, Youngstown, O., secretary-treasurer. The question of forming divisions at Cleveland, Lorain and Painesville was discussed and it was decided to organize a Chapter at all three places. Grand President Geo. W. Sturmer, Grand Secretary James Wardley, Wm. C. Cox, Pittsburgh, Pa., H. G. Fletcher, Fairmont, W. Va., and James Aiken, Youngstown, O., Board of Directors, Grand Division, were present.

John Fuller spent Christmas and New Years with relatives in Chicago. John is a faithful employe and was missed.

Employees of Youngstown Freight Station held their usual celebration on Christmas Eve. A large tree was placed in the Freight Office and Agent James Aiken, in his usual capable manner, distributed useful gifts to the platform force from the office employes.

A new Chapter of the Veteran Employees' Association was organized at Painesville, Ohio, on January 6. G. W. Taylor was elected president; J. C. Huston, vice-president; F. E. Link, secretary; T. J. Rafferty, treasurer; G. G. Green, sergeant-at-arms; E. F. Creel, S. D. Poxen, J. W. Heidy, David Bradley and H. A. Geldbaugh, directors.

Mildred Konker, Freight Office, Youngstown, Ohio

A regular meeting of the Aiken Auxiliary was held on January 8. After routine business, refreshments were served to members and friends. At this meeting Mrs. G. H. Glenn, who was elected president at the last regular meeting, declined to accept because of illness in her family. Mrs. James Aiken was elected president. Mrs. M. Dempsey was elected vice-president, vice Mrs. Aiken.

Miss Mildred Konker, collection clerk, who left January 15 for a three months' visit to Los Angeles, was honor guest at a dinner given by Local Freight Office girls at the Y. W. C. A. Miss Konker was the recipient of many useful gifts.

After the questions of organizing and reading of rules were disposed of, a nominating committee was appointed. The following officers were nominated and elected: president, G. W. Taylor; vice-president, J. O. Huston; secretary, F. E. Link; treasurer, T. J. Raftery; sergeant at arms, G. T. Green. Directors: E. F. Creel, S. D. Poxon, H. A. Geldbaugh, David Bradley, J. W. Hiedy.

After organizing, a pleasant hour was spent making plans for the future of our local, such as organizing a Ladies' Auxiliary, having monthly meetings, social gatherings with speakers, musicals and other pleasures the families of members can enjoy together. No doubt the association will expand rapidly as there are 75 or 80 eligible employees at Painesville. Being able to attend meetings without having to make the trip to Youngstown will attract numbers. We invite all employees of the Baltimore and Ohio, who have been in service 20 years and over to attend the next meeting and join our association. We assure you we will have a live local which will help us to spend many enjoyable evenings together.

It is of interest to know that six of the employees, whose pictures appear in this issue, have served 25 years. G. W. Taylor, 33 years; S. D. Poxon, 42 years; E. F. Creel, 46 years; T. J. Raftery, 39 years; A. Thoires, 35 years; J. E. Gilbin 30 years. All these men are still in active service.

We congratulate our storekeeper and his good wife, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hathway, upon the arrival of a daughter, Mary Lee Hathway, born on December 25. What a wonderful Christmas gift! Congratulations!

Business may be falling off all along the line but not so at Massillon. Here we show an increase for December of $17,000.00 over November.

Conductor R. L. Long recently tried to demonstrate to his crew that he was a slight of hand performer, by reaching into his hip pocket and bringing out a white sock instead of a white handkerchief. "Shorty," much to his astonishment, made the mistake at home.

Agent and Mrs. E. P. Harries had the pleasure of riding from Chicago to Akron on No. 10, and while in the dining car, although they were only absent from home a short time, were thrilled when they found the current issue of the MAGAZINE, as they read about the family.

Terminal Agent C. H. Ferguson has left for a visit in St. Clairsville, Ohio, his boyhood home. We miss his genial presence.

Assistant Yardmaster "Bob" Kerr will leave shortly for a fishing trip in Florida.

Donald Campbell has a new heater in his baby Lincoln Coupe so he can take the girls out in comfort, but he stays clear of Elyria, Ohio.

Miss Florence Spademan, bill clerk, is visiting her sister in California.

Posting Clerk Miss Anne Stopp had a hard time starting her Lincoln, Jr., in the Zero weather, but finally got it running fine.

"Ed" Campbell, transfer clerk, is raising a cooky duster.

Charles DuRoss has been elected president of the Leap Year Protective Society and says he thinks he will pass through the year safely, as he has passed through a good many Leap Years.

Harvey Grubbs will soon take a trip to California. We wish him a pleasant trip this season.

Lorain docks are closed down, the only work being done is loading ore and flux stone from storage.

The lake is full of ice but we are pleased to note that the temperature is warmer here than farther south, where, in some towns along the Ohio River, it was ten degrees colder than in Lorain during the recent cold snap.

We note that Charles E. Stuart, Auditing Department, has disregarded the warnings of his friends and launched into the matrimonial "Stew Pot" or "Love Nest." The ceremony was performed at Our Lady Help of Christians Church on November 17. The young lady who has promised to love, honor and obey Mr. Stuart is Miss Veronica McMahon. A large circle of friends join your correspondent in extending all good wishes to the happy couple. Mr. Stuart is an accountant—now he can study to be a financier and a diplomat. Both these accomplishments will be valuable in his new state.

Road Foreman of Engines E. M. McCuen has been granted a much needed vacation. We are pleased to announce that when he returns he will be promoted to a higher position. While all our men will regret to have Mr. McCuen leave us as our immediate superior, we are all pleased to learn of his advancement. He was absolutely fair, honest and straightforward in his dealings with all and partial to none Comfortable ride.

A superb train worthy of the name.

Perfectly equipped and manned.

In every respect, all the most exacting traveler requires.

The best of everything the market affords. On time all the time—ask those who use it. Literally, a palace on wheels.

Leaves and arrives at most convenient hours.

Insures a safe, comfortable journey.

Maid, Valet, Barber and Stenographer for your convenience.

Important current news bulletined in Club car.

The train crews are picked men.

Every day and in every way a distinct pleasure.

Dependable and courteous service always.

Now I lay me down to sleep,

The Pullman conductor my ticket to keep,

If he should die before I wake,

What would I do for goodness sake?

—J. T. FROST, Pullman Conductor, Trains 9 and 10

The greater part of his life had been spent in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio. Over 40 years ago he commenced working for the Company and continued in service until September, 1916 when he was retired on pension. At that time he received a commendatory letter from J. M. Davis, then vice-president in charge of operation, which was valued highly by the veteran employe. Mr. Crampton, at the time of his retirement, was employed as foreman, water stations, Chicago Division.

He is survived by four children: Elmer J. Crampton, freight agent, Canton, Ohio; Mrs. Wm. J. Wensinger, Massillon, Ohio; Miss Mary Crampton and John Crampton at home; one grandchild, Miss Mildred Crampton, by his deceased son Wm. A. Crampton, who was chief clerk to freight agent, Tiffin, Ohio.

The accompanying snap-shot of Mr. and Mrs. Crampton was taken about a year ago.

George Woodruff, tonnage clerk, Accounting Department, narrowly escaped freezing to death recently. The train he ordinarily uses was one hour late, and being conscientious (he simply could not be late), he walked two miles (with the thermometer at 12 below zero), to catch a street car. In doing so he froze his third chin. Our advice is that he diet so as to be able to buy an overcoat of sufficient size to cover him.

The accompanying photograph is of Engineer Harry L. Copenhaver, who passed away at his home, 712 South Cowen St., Garrett, Ind., on January 7, at the age of 58.

Mr. Copenhaver had been in ill health for the last three years, but was able to continue his work as engineer during the first year of his illness. He was then absent about a year, and again resumed duty, but was not able to work constantly. He made his last trip on December 9.

Coming to Garrett from Defiance, Ohio, in 1882, Mr. Copenhaver entered the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio as locomotive fireman. He was promoted to engineer three years later, and at the time of his death was running on Trains 7 and 10. He was a member of the Masonic Order, Garrett Lodge of Elks and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He recently became a member of St. Peter and Paul's Catholic Church. Funeral services were held on January 10. Mr. Copenhaver is survived by a widow to whom we extend our deepest sympathy.

In the recent traffic solicitation contest, particulars of which appeared in the November issue, the paper submitted by Division Freight Agent Sullivan won third place. Mr. Sullivan is proud of this fact considering there was a large number of articles submitted.

Traveling Freight Agent McKee, while soliciting freight from a Ft. Wayne industry recently, learned that one of the members of the firm contemplated making a trip to Mt. Vernon, Ohio, intending to use a competing line. Mr. McKee immediately "got busy" and told him the Baltimore and Ohio could furnish the very best service to this point, and asked the gentleman to give our road a trial. He phoned the Freight Traffic Office at Garrett, who in turn wired the Passenger Department, Chicago, to reserve a berth on train No. 16 that night, with the result that the gentleman took the street car from Ft. Wayne to Garrett, and the Baltimore and Ohio to Mt. Vernon. This shows that the Freight Traffic Department is also on the alert for passenger traffic.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. George Gelhausen in the loss of their six year old daughter, Rachael, who passed away December 21. Mr. Gelhausen is employed as machinist, Locomotive Department, Garrett.

One of the blond stenographers in the Master Mechanic's Office has taken over a half interest in a Garrett Novelty store. The outlook is good for 1924!

A baby girl, Beverly Jean, arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Loutzenheiser, Covell St., on January 4. Congratulations!

The assistant shop clerk, Master Mechanic's Office, is wearing a broad smile these days. Wonder if a track supervisor of the Nickel Plate could throw any light on the subject?

A happy event in the life of Carman J. W. Wilondek was the recent arrival of a baby girl. He wears a smile from morning until night.

Charles B. Baker, car clerk, Car Foreman's Office, has taken a different attitude towards life since he received a "Western Union" from the University of Illinois, Champaign, Ill. It must be great to be in love! Good luck "Chassie," we're all for you.

Willard, Ohio

Engineer Cashbaugh, Willard Yards, held the lucky ticket, winning, the four door Ford sedan given away by Willard Elks at their recent Indoor Fair.

Central Yard Office has an addition to its force in the person of Miss Dorothy Walton. She is the popular daughter of our genial terminal trainmaster, E. Walton.

M. A. Gleeson has again been assigned to Willard as assistant master mechanic.

Machinists A. Behm, A. C. Trimmer and Geo. Kelly are spending the winter months in sunny California. Their families accompanied them.

Night Terminal Trainmaster C. J. Richards has resumed duty after a month's absence because of a severe attack of tonsillitis.

Word has been received that J. C. Wray, former yard brakeman here, died in Toledo recently. Our sympathy to his family!

C. H. Garing, car foreman, was the recipient of a 21 jewel Bunn Special watch presented to him by his force on Christmas Day.

Miss Helen Thornton and Miss Dorothy Walton, Central Office Force, are displaying nice diamond rings on the left hand. Wedding bells soon?

Accounting Department Gives Annual Party

The selects of the Baltimore and Ohio were out in all their glory at the annual party given by the Accounting Department on December 20, under the auspices of the ladies in the Division Accountant's Office. In addition to regular members of the force, the following wives of employes were present: Mrs. W. S. Hopkins, Mrs. W. E. Smith, Mrs. H. H. Strome, Mrs. S. S. Martin, Mrs. C. E. Mager, Mrs. L. L. Coburn, Mrs. A. H. Thomas. The office was appropriately decorated and a six o'clock dinner was served, consisting of turkey and all the good things that go with it, followed by pie and coffee.

After dinner, Santa Claus appeared in the person of Homer Strome. Mr. Hopkins was presented with a reading lamp by his force, and Chief Clerk Smith with a smoking set. Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Smith presented the male members of their force with neckties and the ladies, a box of handkerchiefs. There was also an exchange made by drawing names so that everyone, including the wives, received a nice Christmas present.

After the presentation the desks were pushed into the corners and, through the courtesy of Mr. Wherly, an Edison phonograph was installed for the evening for the dance. In addition there were tables of bridge, five hundred, seven-up, euchre and black-jack. Possibly, also way back in the corner, was a little game of penne ante!

Superintendent Hooper has resumed duty after being in quarantine because of his little daughter Louise having Scarlet Fever.

Joseph H. Crampton passed away at his residence, 54 Franklin St., Tiffin, Ohio, on December 24, after a short illness. Mr. Crampton was born in Pataskala, Ohio, May 6, 1849 and had made his home in the city of Tiffin for 50 years. He was married to Miss Frances M. Knott on October 2, 1876. She died three months ago. Mr. Crampton's health gradually failed after his wife's death.

"Phil" Collins, Car Department, is leaving the service of the Baltimore and Ohio and will go to California with the Chicago Cubs for regular spring training. "Phil" is considered one of the greatest curve-ball pitchers that ever came up from the minors. His friends here wish him every success.

We are glad to see John E. Hufton, chief clerk to Trainmaster Huggins, back at his desk after a long illness. Not only was he ill, but all of his children as well. We hope that his troubles are now at an end.

Lieutenant C. W. Geenan, Police Department, has left South Chicago for New York to take up his duties as Captain of Police. We regret to lose Mr. Geenan, but extend our congratulations and best wishes for his continued success.

We hear wedding bells in the distance. The writer understands that Louis Napierkowski has invested in a beautiful diamond for some lucky little Miss. Congratulations! What's the date, Louis?

We were sorry to learn of the misfortune which befell "Steve" Wagner, painter foreman, and A. Czajkowski, helper, and their families when they were burned out—everything being a total loss. A purse was taken up to express, in a small way, our sympathy.

Be a Booster! Use the card enclosed with the MAGAZINE for prospective business. Now that the holidays are over there is a marked depression in business. We, the employees, can do much to assist our Company by soliciting business—both passenger and freight. Let's approach our friends and business associates and impress upon them the advantages of using the Baltimore and Ohio.

Secure the business—or line them up and send your cards to the writer so that she may keep a record of business secured in this territory. I will forward them promptly to proper officers. Let's make 1924 a banner year for South Chicago and keep the Chicago Division in the lead.

We welcome to South Chicago "Fred" A. Chrismore, transferred from New Castle, Pa., as section stockman, Stores Department.

We were all agreeably surprised and pleased to have Aunt Mary with us at the meeting of the Veterans' Association, Newark, Ohio, on January 3.

As Aunt Mary always takes care of news at all such meetings we are not taking space to tell the story as we know that it will be well taken care of. We are still wondering why Newark was favored with a visit by the associate editor. The only good reason we can offer is that Newark is popular with all MAGAZINE representatives and they make it a regular stop when out on line.

Trafford Paul, secretary to master mechanic, is confined to his home with neuralgia.

Roundhouse Clerk Earl Hall is back on the job, after undergoing an operation.

Clerk James R. Cody, has returned after spending a week in John Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

Walter A. Reel, who was made general foreman, Ivorydale, in December, paid us a visit at Christmas. Walter says his new position is just fine. We congratulate him on his promotion.

Charles F. Gartner, former assistant round house foreman, Newark, was transferred to Garrett as round house foreman. He took up his new duties in December.

Our attention has been called to the use of the post card which is sent out with every copy of the MAGAZINE. This card was placed in the MAGAZINE for the purpose of calling our attention to the fact that the Baltimore and Ohio is desirous of having us take an active part in boosting business, thereby adding revenue which can be used in making for regular employment in all departments. This should appeal to every employee. This is a good time to start this campaign intensively. With the number of employees on our division there should be a marked increase in business if each employee will take every opportunity he or she has to speak a good word for the railroad for which they work. If you confine your efforts to your circle of friends only, you will be surprised at the amount of good you can do.

Let's show the Management that we are awake to the situation, which needs prompt and personal attention.

Americans are usually ready and willing to share their good fortune with the needy, or with those who have had misfortune, sickness, etc. The season of the year when this charitable feeling seems to be most pronounced is Christmas, when the world is filled with that Christmas giving spirit. In years gone by the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio at Newark, Ohio, have always helped out splendidly when asked to contribute to the "Charity Newsies," Newark, Ohio, an organization composed of hustling citizens of our town. We are proud to have as our Baltimore and Ohio representative on this committee, C. C. Grimm, general yardmaster, who turned in the largest amount of any member of the committee. Mr. Grimm wishes to thank all Baltimore and Ohio employees for their unselfish support in making this presentation to the treasury of the Charity Newsies.

IT TAKES 65 MUSCLES TO MAKE A FROWN, ONLY 18 TO MAKE A SMILE—SMILE!

We are glad to welcome F. C. Horn into the circle of MAGAZINE correspondents on the Newark Division. "Clay," as we all know him, is located at Shelby, Ohio, in Transportation Department. You will find him at the depot any time you may have a chance to stop there. He is to represent Shelby and vicinity commencing with this issue of the MAGAZINE. Among our photos in this issue you will find the Shelby force, all good looking fellows, who no doubt will be able to keep their station in the MAGAZINE columns in all future issues.

James Clifton Wray, aged 39 years, died at Newark, Ohio, January 8, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wray, South Fifth Street, from injuries received while at work on March 25, 1923. Mr. Wray was located at Willard, Ohio. He leaves to mourn their loss, a wife, Margaret M. Wray, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wray, one sister Mrs. J. U. Moore, Zanesville, and a host of friends who extend their sympathy to the family.

SERVICE is the greatest thing in the human calendar, and the better we equip ourselves the better we serve, because in the expansion of the mind comes better understanding of how best to serve. No matter what your fortunes in life, the greatest compensation that will come to you tomorrow or next year, or the closing year of your life, will be the consciousness that you have somehow been of service, either to your friends, your state or your common country. This is the greatest thing that can happen.—Warren G. Harding.

COURTESY—Haven't you often experienced a sort of disappointment in finding a flower without fragrance? On the other hand, no matter how brilliant its color, or how delicate its form, or how unattractive to look at, isn't there an unusual appeal and appreciation when the flower has a spicy or otherwise pleasing odor? COURTESY is like that. It is the little touch in personal contact that means so much. It's the fragrance of life. Many men and women of splendid qualities and attainment, possessing ambition, energy and ability, are never appreciated because courtesy to others is missing. And, Oh, what a lot of happiness they lose and what a lot of joy they keep from other people!

The flower without fragrance can't help it. Nature fixed that. But every human being had the opportunity—no matter how humble or poor in this world's goods—to develop the quality of COURTESY to an unlimited degree.—Rock Island Magazine

Photographs of Indian relics, arrow heads, appear in this issue. These were presented by General Yardmaster C. C. Grimm who delights in collecting them and takes pleasure in showing anyone his excellent collection. Mr. Grimm's ambition is to have the best collection possible and he is always on the market for anything that will make it more complete.

The writer had the pleasure of seeing this collection, which consists of several thousand arrowheads, axes, hammers, ceremonial stones, etc., and it is well worth while to visit Mr. Grimm's home and have him go over it in detail.

Recent check of System box car equipment shows that there is a good chance for car inspectors to do a great deal of good work in the way of properly classifying box car equipment for various commodities. It has been found that car inspectors have placed commodity card, Form 1126-Rev.,

OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO NEWARK DIVISION EMPLOYEES

2. Storekeeper W. T. Giblin and Carman Helper Albert Kolb, Sandusky.
3. The Shelby, Ohio, Office Force.
4. Painter Emil F. Andres and his new wife, nee Miss Alice Hess, Sandusky.

on box car equipment showing on the face of the card, good for merchandise or good for rough freight.

Marking the car good for merchandise when it is considered a good car for loading, is a common practice, the inspector being under the impression that this means a first class car, in every respect. Recent advice from Superintendent, Freight Car Department says there is a shortage of box car equipment for first class commodities, such as tin plate. With the thousands of new freight cars turned over the Baltimore and Ohio since January 1, it is thought that we should have sufficient box cars on line to handle our requirements. Inspectors will do well to be careful in carding the box car equipment so that every car possible can be used for first class freight instead of other commodities.

You have read in the January MAGAZINE that the month of January was devoted to THRIFT, and that one week in particular was designated as THRIFT WEEK. This not only meant THRIFT in our daily duties, but also THRIFT in our homes.

January was a good month to commence this campaign, but THRIFT should be carried out the balance of the year, and every one of us would be repaid many times over by the savings that would be made if this practice were carried out. So let us all get together and put this over, making 1924 a banner year. Remember, that Thrift in the home is just as important to us as individuals as Thrift in our daily work.

At the C. E. Memorial U. B. Parsonage, on December 19, Rev. B. C. Peters read the ring ceremony which united in marriage Charles L. Wallace and Miss Carrie M. Martin. Mr. Wallace is employed as M. P. distribution clerk, Accounting Office, and is receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Ray Redman on November 19. Mrs. Redman is the wife of Ray Redman, M. P. time clerk, who has been off duty for some time because of illness. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

Answering the bold challenge of the Division Engineer's bowling team that appeared in the December MAGAZINE, our friend Walter Greeley, Car Shop Office, got his team together and beat the Engineers by a grand total of about 300 pins. The Engineers were very much "blown up" since they defeated a scrub team from the Accounting Department, but have not issued any more challenges to that particular office.

The following resolutions have been suggested as being suitable for the various members of our office force for the new year:

W. L. Mellor—Not to give an alibi every-time he gets in wrong; also to stop blushing.

G. R. Steen—Not to call a certain person in the office by the name of "Kitty," and to stop whispering to Mellor across the desk. Even though Kitty's ears are apparently covered, she seems to be able to hear perfectly all that is even whispered concerning her.

"Hud" Richardson—To speak more quietly over the telephone.

R. H. Schantz—To exclude from his diet, pie and cake, also become more efficient in taking care of his baby girl.

J. M. Reed—To take some private lessons in 'phoning.

J. P. Kirwin—To stop arguing.

C. M. Reynolds—To retire earlier each night.

At the beginning of the New Year, it is well for us to take an inventory of ourselves to find out how we stand—first in the sight of our Maker, and secondly in the eyes of our fellow-men and co-workers. If we had any unkind feeling toward any of our fellow-men in the past, let us banish it from our hearts and be daily messengers of that beautiful message, which was heralded by the angelic choir on that first bright Christmas Morn: "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men." The past is done and we cannot undo it, but the future is ours, as long as we are permitted to live. Therefore, let us who are enrolled among that vast number of Baltimore and Ohio employees, perform our daily tasks with such cheerfulness and earnestness that Marietta, Ohio, may at all times be listed well toward the top of the list as an example of that splendid Baltimore and Ohio slogan—"Service and Courtesy."

An article in the Mansfield News recently stated that we are to have our new Freight House soon, work to commence early this spring. We hope that it is rushed to an early completion. It is evident that this will be a great benefit to the shippers, railroad and public in general at Mansfield.

At last Mr. Perry, our new freight agent, and his wife are finally settled in their new home in Mansfield. Let us all give them a welcome and make them feel as if they had always lived here.

H. MacDougall, Freight House, recently paid a visit to his home town of Fairmont, W. Va.

Mr. Sellers, ticket agent, reports a heavy business for Florida recently. We are sure that passengers will never regret traveling via our Road.

Telegraph Operator Gray reports the acquisition of an air-dale dog, but we notice in the lost and found columns of the local paper that it is lost. We hope that he soon recovers his valuable cur.

The mystery of why Painter Emil F. Andres was so thoughtful and silent was finally solved when Miss Alice Hess became his bride on December 17. The painters of the shop predict a year of big business for Heinz's 57 varieties as a result of this marriage, but we venture to say that Mrs. Andres will fool them. Our congratulations to "Dutch" and Mrs. Andres.

What is believed to be one of the best, and probably the best Paint Shop on the line, located in a freight car, is now at Sandusky. This is due to the special efforts of Painters C. Seibert, E. Andres and S. J. Smith.

Some artistic work was done in several instances by C. Seibert which helps to make it so good. The generous assistance of Car Foreman Cheshire and Assistant Shop Foreman Fisher contributed greatly to this work.

A Shop Safety Committee consisting of Martin Boisen, assistant foreman as chairman; Albert Kolb, helper carman as secretary; Charles Schmidt, freight carman; Louis Boehm, blacksmith, and Philip Nicholas, helper carman, has been organized. The committee meets every two weeks. Each member reports unsafe conditions or practices he has seen or that have been called to his attention, and steps are taken at these meetings to correct them. It is hoped that this will eventually make the Sandusky Shops a 100 per cent. safe place in which to work.

Ray Hines, operator, Black Lick, boasts of being the champion rabbit hunter of the season, he having killed 90 rabbits and two pheasants. At least, so he says.

Operator John Marsh recently had a sale at the "Soup House." From all reports he did a rushing business during the holidays.

Agent Page, Outville, was absent a few days recently. He was relieved by Clerk R. C. Shafer.

In alighting from his train at Grove City, Brakeman Charles Haughn wrenched his knee and cracked his knee cap. He is improving slowly but it will be some time before he is able to resume duty.

Operator "Bum" Hines was recently quarantined with Diptheria. We are glad to see him back on the job. The experience did not effect him, he having lost none of his surplus avoirdupois.

Stationary Fireman Johnson was badly scalded by steam while assisting in cleaning out the stationary engine. We understand that he is getting along nicely.

For special painting of any kind see Kerr and Griffin, oil painting a speciality. They are the boys that can smear it!

One cold December morning, as I was leaving the office, I was approached by an employe, with great hospitality, who kindly asked if I cared to ride home with him. The invitation was gratefully accepted (thinking I would save a five cent car fare).

We had not gone more than two squares when the driver said he had no side curtains. He didn't have to mention that to me as I was already shaking like a "Jazz Dancer." I didn't say anything but I wished Santa Claus would bring him a set of curtains, especially if I rode with him very often.

We arrived home safely and after thawing out the thought came to me, "why does anyone want to drive a summer car in the winter?" For the benefit of other employes who may have the same kindness thrust upon them, it has been decided that Car Inspector Cliff Cook will sing the following parody:

Yes, I have no machine curtains,
 I have no machine curtains today.
 I have blow outs and leaks,
 Wire trouble and squeaks,
 And all kinds of trouble and, say,
 We have no old fashioned winter,
 But, when you ride you do shiver;
 For, yes, I have no machine curtains,
 I have no machine curtains today.

James K. Hackett, then starring in Samson used this rather novel New Year's greeting to his friends. It consisted of a card whereon was printed his "Philosophy of Life," as follows:

"Did it ever occur to you that a man's life is full of crosses and temptations? He comes into the world without his consent and goes out of it against his will, and the trip between is exceedingly rocky. The rule of contraries is one of the features of the trip.

"When he is little, the big girls kiss him; when he is big, the little girls kiss him. If he is poor, he is a bad manager; if he is rich, he is dishonest. If he needs credit, he can't get it; if he is prosperous, every one wants to do him a favor. If he is in politics, it is for graft; if he is out of politics, he is no good to his country. If he doesn't give to charity, he is a stingy cuss; if he does, it is for show. If he is actively religious, he is a hypocrite; if he takes no interest in religion, he is a hardened sinner.

"If he gives affection, he is a soft specimen; if he cares for no one, he is cold blooded. If he dies young, there was a great future before him; if he lives to an old age, he missed his calling.

"If you save money, you're a grouch; if you spend it, you're a loafer. If you get it, you're a grafter; if you can't get it, you're a bum—so what the hell's the use?"

A smaller card enclosed bears this message: "Notwithstanding the Philosophy of Life, James K. Hackett wishes you a Happy New Year."

Congratulations will soon be in order. Another diamond appears. Lillie, don't make it holiday time; it is too expensive for us.

S. A. Bush and wife spent Christmas with Mr. Bush's mother and brother in Chicago.

The Christmas spirit never was finer than during 1923. Let us resolve to keep this spirit all through the year. You be glad, and I will be glad. Then everybody will be glad "For Everything."

Mrs. J. V. Price, who is a noted cook, supplied the girls with all their Christmas candies.

Mr. Van Tilburg, assistant chief clerk, recently moved into his new home in Linden, which he purchased through the Baltimore and Ohio Relief Department.

Sympathy is extended to William Davis and children in the loss of wife and mother on January 5. Mrs. Margaret Jane Davis' death was sudden and unexpected, although she has been in ill health for sometime. Upon hearing of the death of a neighbor, she suffered an attack of heart failure.

"NY" Tower, located at East Columbus, has been wired for electricity. This is a big improvement.

Will some kind Ex-Service man loan Mr. Broughton his manual of arms? He has the gun and all he needs is a little instruction in its use and he will be available when we are called upon.

Zanesville, Ohio

Correspondent, C. H. SOMERS

Effective January 1, the following changes have been made in clerical force in Local Agent's Office:

C. A. Cockins, rate clerk, promoted to rate clerk in Office of General Freight Agent, Wheeling, W. Va. W. E. Flanders, temporarily assigned position made vacant by transfer of Mr. Cockins. Mr. Flanders was formerly revision clerk. Claude Miller, former delivery clerk, temporarily assigned to Mr. Flanders' desk. L. B. (Larry) Morrison, appointed waybill and abstract clerk, being a newcomer among us has our sincere sympathy and most cordial welcome. We hope the Baltimore and Ohio will be benefitted by his presence among its employes.

Because so many people are continually finding fault with February and complaining about its bitter cold days, and the amount of snow it brings, it is high time some one should come to its rescue and speak a word in its defense.

This so-called growling about the kind of weather we will have in February, usually starts along about the middle of January. It appears that the only cause for it lies in the fact that people have forgotten about the good things they had to eat at Christmas and New Years, and about their Christmas presents. In order to keep their mind employed, they start a tirade against "Poor Old February." Everybody knows that February hands us some pretty raw deals so far as weather is concerned. It also gives us less time to recuperate from the effects of the monthly gas bills, telephone bills and various other bills, before we are again attacked by an onslaught of the same annoying missives.

Notwithstanding all the bad points, there are some good points about February, which should be mentioned:

First, there is not as much cold weather in February as there is in January, because there are not as many days in the former as there are in the latter month. Isn't that axiomatic? February has another good point. We all know how certain Februaries favor the girls by letting them take the law into their own hands, so that instead of being the "Clinging Vines" they become the stalwart aggressors. Good luck to them. I am in favor of letting them have all the rope they need. (You must be married, Mr. Somers—Ed.)

If it had not been for February, our Country would be in an awful predicament. It would not have any FATHER. Lastly, as February is a short month, it will be necessary that we work harder this month to get business for the Railroad than we did in January, in order that at its close the receipts will exceed those for January.

While you are thinking of February, even if you cannot forget its bad points, please remember its good points.

Shelby, Ohio

Correspondent, F. C. HORN

Commencing with this issue Shelby, Ohio, one of the coming stations on the Newark Division, is to occupy its place in the columns of the MAGAZINE. We hope that our readers will enjoy news from this station. We will do all possible to interest you in us.

Among our photographs you will find a faithful reproduction of the guardians of the thriving city of Shelby. Left to right, the force is as follows: O. P. Tresselar, yard clerk; F. C. Horn, rate and bill clerk; Fred Hanneman, agent, and C. M. McKeen, rate and bill clerk, also relief agent.

With the exception of Mr. Horn, all of the members of the Shelby force are proud fathers of fine boys and girls. We will present photographs of the children in future issues.

We have now introduced you to Shelby and its promising force. You can look for more news from us; we are going to do our part in making the MAGAZINE bigger and better than any railroad magazine.

Right now is the time for each employee to boost business. Don't forget the "Prospective Business" card in each issue of the MAGAZINE, use it. Get the business for the Baltimore and Ohio.

One diamond ring made its appearance at the Freight House Office after Christmas. This on the third finger of the left hand of Miss Barbara Barbe. We understand the lucky man is a Baltimore and Ohio employee.

Speaking of diamond rings—two others thought it "more blessed to give than receive." Each ring was taken a distance of fifty miles from Chillicothe. The first one heard of was taken to Columbus and presented with due "ceremony" by C. "Ray" Ortman, fuel clerk. The other was presented at Portsmouth, also with "ceremony" by W. T. "Bill" Rardin, car distributor. May the diamond rings bring much future happiness.

Walter "Doc" Kunzelman, trucker, Car Department, has taken unto himself a wife. Congratulations!

G. W. Plumly, division operator, displayed a new smile on December 13, when he reported that he was again "grandpa," a baby daughter having been born to his daughter, Mrs. James Workman. Congratulations to Grandpa Plumly and also to the happy parents.

Practice Safety At Home As Well As At The Place You Work.

The Veterans' Association, Ohio Division, at a meeting held December 18, elected the following officers for 1924: W. L. Allison, president; Jas. Botkin, vice-president; Geo. Miller, secretary; H. Figelstahler, treasurer; Wm. R. Fox, sergeant at arms. Directors: Wm. Ottman, L. C. Hyddell, J. E. Hyson, Chas. Armstrong, C. C. Pyle, T. A. Brown, D. Sheets, C. W. Gickler, T. E. Banks and W. W. Woodward.

Geo. W. Miller, veteran engineer, was honored on December 9 by Division No.

ON THE OHIO DIVISION

Home of Engineer W. F. Williams, purchased through the Relier Department. Mr. Williams and his grandson are standing near automobile 65, Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers, assisted by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Division No. 12. Entertainment was held in their hall, Majestic Theatre Building, followed by an excellent supper. Mr. Miller was presented with a gold badge and informed that he had been enrolled as an honorary member in the Grand Division. He was much surprised and it was with difficulty that he found words to express his feelings. He entered the service January 1, 1872, as machinist apprentice and on May 6, 1876, transferred to freight fireman. He was promoted to engineer July 20, 1879, and passenger engineer July 6, 1884, in which capacity he is still serving, being the oldest engineer on the Ohio Division seniority list. We wish him many more years of active service.

J. F. Pairan, machinist apprentice, and son of Chief Dispatcher C. D. Pairan, succumbed to "Dan Cupid's" wounds on December 20. The honeymoon was spent in St. Louis. Congratulations!

Old Man Accident Plays No Favorites. Practice Safety First.

In the December MAGAZINE mention was made of A. B. Long, track foreman, Washington C. H., being all smiles over the arrival of a baby daughter. In writing up our notes an error was made in this item. Mr. Long is track foreman, Blanchester, and was "all smiles" over his recent marriage. Fred Thomas, track foreman, Washington C. H., was the one who was "all smiles" over the arrival of the above-mentioned daughter. We apologize, but our mistake has enabled us to emphasize their happiness and our congratulations.

Carl H. Graves, brakeman, has joined the "married men's" club. Congratulations!

Our sympathies are extended to D. M. Ladd, yard conductor, Portsmouth, on the death of his mother.

We also express our deep sympathy to Arthur Queen, conductor, in the loss of his wife, who died following an illness of eight months.

TELL YOUR FRIENDS of the GOOD SERVICE that is always given by THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO, both in passenger and freight business. TELL THEM to ship "BALTIMORE AND OHIO WAY."

Frank Kramer, clerk, Road Foreman of Engines Office, has resigned, having taken up his residence in Chicago. We wish him success in his new territory. Miss Bertha Streitenberger, former stenographer to chief clerk, Superintendent's Office, has been appointed in Mr. Kramer's place. We are sorry to lose "Bert," but wish her success in the new position.

Freight claim prevention meetings are again being held monthly. By proper effort on the part of those who handle cars claims can be reduced materially. Projecting nails, etc., that would damage flour and other commodities, the proper stowing of freight, making note of overs and shorts with or without billing, and numerous other things, if closely watched, would result in considerable reduction in freight claims.

The many friends of Conductor "Dave" Butts are congratulating him on his marriage, which took place on January 14.

Speaking of GETTING BUSINESS and SAVING FUEL! For each scoop of coal used on a locomotive, one full passenger fare for a distance of one mile is required to meet the expense. See how many scoops of coal you can be responsible for by telling your friends to travel over OUR railroad, and getting them to do it. Also route freight shipments BALTIMORE AND OHIO. GET BUSINESS and SAVE FUEL.

The many friends of Wm. A. Coon, section man, were shocked to learn of his unfortunate death on December 27. Mr. Coon was at work on side track, about twenty-five feet from public crossing near the station at Leesburg, when an automobile, driven on the crossing directly in front of passenger train No. 4, was struck and thrown over against him, knocking him down and under a car, causing injuries which resulted in his death a few hours afterwards. He was taken to Greenfield Hospital on train No. 4, and everything possible done to save his life but to no avail. Mr. Coon had been in the service 39 years, having served as section foreman for a number of years. Recently he asked to be relieved of the responsibilities of this position because of his age, being afraid he would overlook or forget some important work. He was always a conscientious worker and had a host of friends on this division, who extend their heartfelt sympathy to his widow.

We are sorry to report a serious injury to Machinist C. Gallaher, who had his right leg broken below the knee when a cleaning vat, on which he was working, fell on him. Foreman C. Shriver, seeing the tank start to fall, attempted to catch it and prevent injury to Mr. Gallaher. He could not hold the vat and was also seriously injured, his right hand being badly contused. They are both recovering however, and we hope will be back before long.

On December 5, Engineer J. Ryan and Fireman E. Holt made an exceptionally good fuel performance on Train 55, engine 5008, running 202 miles between Toledo and Cincinnati, consuming 669 scoops of coal. Figuring 14 pounds per scoop, the performance was 9.2 pounds per passenger car mile. Engineer Ryan and Fireman Holt are to be commended for their interest in fuel economy. Photograph of Engineer Ryan, taken at Lima, accompanies our notes. Fireman Holt was absent when picture was taken.

D. F. Harker, secretary to superintendent, "the little fellow with the bigada chest," has become poetical. He criticized the correspondent recently because of lack of news from the Superintendent's Office. He went home, had a wonderful dream, and sent in the following:

The Eskimos sleep in bearskins

Up in the North I'm told;

Last night I slept in my bare skin

And caught a h*-ell of a cold.

Our old friend "Ed" Ledger was recently awarded a prize of one hundred dollars for the best section on this division. He is proud of the fact that his men are classed with the "Go-getters." In addition to being a first class supervisor, he is also a dog fancier. Next time you see him, ask him to tell you the tale about one of his favorite dogs.

Our Freight Claim Prevention Committee held their monthly meeting in the Crystal Room, Argoyne Hotel, Lima, Ohio, on January 9. Many interesting topics were discussed. This committee is going over the top with a "bang." They are doing fine work in Freight Claim prevention matters. Meetings are held the second Wednesday of each month, and are open to all employees. An important matter discussed was the question of securing business.

It is with regret that we report the death of Mrs. James Henderson, mother of R. C. Henderson, master carpenter, which occurred on December 30. She was 80 years old. The funeral was held on January 2 at Willard, Ohio. James Henderson, her husband, died in 1912. He was employed in the Maintenance of Way Department. They had eleven children, eight sons and three daughters.

We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Correspondent, GUY FAIR

Yes, I have been asked to be "side kick" for our correspondent and it is his intention to put the Toledo Division on the map in our MAGAZINE. In order to do so, he should have all the assistance we can give him.

Brother trainmen, if you have any news of importance that would interest the people on our division, we would be pleased to have you send it to me or to Mr. Thrasher. If you have any photographs of your families or kiddies, kindly send them in. Let's show "who is who" on the Baltimore and Ohio. We earnestly request your cooperation.

Conductor William Morgan, who has been, for the past forty years in service on the Toledo Division, celebrated his 65th birthday on December 16. The birthday cake was enjoyed by his crew and we hope to see many more birthdays and cakes!

Brakeman Henry Kuntz has joined the benedicts. Congratulations!

The population of Glendale is still increasing. Brakeman H. McCall is the proud father of a baby girl. Congratulations!

Brakeman Benny Hinie has been ill with pneumonia, but is improving. Hope he will be back soon.

Conductor James Kelley has returned from New York City where he spent the holidays with his son Paul. When he returned the snow was beginning to fly so he went to New Orleans, where the climate suits his clothes.

Some of our extra passenger conductors had to brush the cobwebs off their uniforms during the holidays. The holiday business was good this year.

We are sorry to learn of the death of our friend Fred Silvers, retired employe of the old C. H. & D. Railroad, on December 26, in his 74th year. Mr. Silvers was one of the oldest employes of the Toledo Division, having served this company 50 years. He was first employed on the C. H. & D. and was later transferred to the Little Miami Railroad, running between Cincinnati and Richmond, Indiana, narrow-gauge. It was later sold to the Pennsylvania Railroad. Mr. Silvers was again transferred to the C. H. & D., working as brakeman and baggageman until a few years ago when he had a slight stroke of paralysis which caused him to retire from active service. Mr. Silvers was widely known on the C. H. & D. and his many friends extend their deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

Wellston, Ohio

Correspondent, L. M. MASON

Before 1924 has passed, Wellston will be in the front ranks contributing her share of business to the Baltimore and Ohio. It is now certain that we will have at least two modern brick plants on the Buckeye Branch. The clay has been tested and it is said to be the best in this part of the country, the thickness of the bed is from six to eighteen feet. This business should be even better than our coal and we are looking forward to the best year we have had for some time. Wellston is the best located town in Southern Ohio, from a railroad standpoint, furnishing one day service to Cincinnati and Dayton; three days to St. Louis; four days to Chicago and as fast to points East. We have railroad facilities for good factories that want to locate here and that is one reason why we get the brick plants. People who are looking for factory sites consider railroad facilities first; they want to know if they will get cars and the kind of service. We welcome these new concerns to our midst and promise them the best of service.

The quick work of Conductor Fred Martin and crew, while running on the Ohio Division, between Byers Junction and West Junction, on No. 91, recently, averted serious trouble. They thought they smelled something burning and stopped their train. Examination disclosed that a car of sand had broken down and was on fire. The fire was put out and car set off. Mr. Martin and his crew have been commended for their prompt action.

G. E. Chrisman, our popular agent at Coalton, can always be counted on when something unusual happens there. Recently, during a heavy wind storm, a telegraph pole was blown across our tracks close to the depot. Although this happened about eight o'clock at night, Mr. Chrisman at once called the section men and had the tracks cleared. He knew that a train was to leave Wellston, and telephoned us to advise the train crew. Mr. Chrisman is always on the alert and several times prevented serious delays.

People who never find time to stop at railroad crossings usually manage to find time to attend the funeral.

A. E. Smiley, agent, Jamestown, and his little son Robert, paid us a visit.

H. E. Rowe, clerk, Agent's Office, complains that he never gets his name in the MAGAZINE. We suggest that he tell us about some business he has secured for the Road, or get us a few news items, then we will put him on the front page.

C. D. McCarty, our road supervisor, recently returned from his vacation in "Old Kentuck," his former home.

O. L. Wade, boiler maker, and family are spending a vacation in Miami, Fla., and other Southern cities.

Baltimore and Ohio employees. All will put forth an additional effort to carry forward the gospel of Service and Courtesy, which we should make known all over this country as emblematic of Baltimore and Ohio employees. All that is needed is for each and every one of us to take advantage of every opportunity to promote and advance Baltimore and Ohio interests.

Have you secured that new business, inbound or outbound, freight or passenger? You have friends or relatives in other activities who would be glad to give business to the Baltimore and Ohio. Do not think that because you can influence only a small shipment, it would not be worthwhile, but remember that it is the entering wedge and who knows what the results may be. Start something and watch it grow!

Next time someone asks "Jim" Herbst, Lima Freight Office, to get down some old record books from the top shelf, he better take out life insurance. If not already insured, see "Bee" Goebel about the Relief Department. "Jim" says the books came down, but he forgot to put them back. He considers himself lucky to have escaped the avalanche.

Night Yardmaster G. L. Sanders sustained a severe loss in the death of his wife on January 6. She had been ill for nearly a year and suffered a great deal at times. The Angel of Death finally relieved her sufferings and took her to eternal rest, where there is no suffering or sorrow, but everlasting life and joy. We all express our sympathy to the bereaved family.

W. S. Bishop, train rider, Lima, Ohio, was transferred to Dayton last month, moving his household goods on the 29th. Lima's loss is Dayton's gain. "Bish" proved himself an efficient and loyal member of our force at Lima. M. L. Baker takes his place at Lima.

One of our photographs is sent by former Passenger Conductor John Glancy, who ran passenger trains on the old D. & M., C. H. & D. and finally Toledo Division of the Baltimore and Ohio, for many years.

Famous Sayings by Famous People

"Bce" Goebel: Not one window open in this whole office!

Edna Black: —and, believe your Aunt—

C. C. Means: Is this a prepay station?

V. Day: Ten pounds of steam and no water in the boiler.

"Jim" Herbst: Well Brother, where's my stuff?

"Nelly" Maley: Oh yes, uh huh, I see.

"Tom" Davis: What's your figures?

Harry Kauffman: The thermometer registers 13 above this morning. It really was 13 below.

Otto Wallburg: "Jim," what's the next 707.

Neil Shockey: What kind of humor are you in this morning.

Florence Slygh (face covered with indelible): Is my face clean?

"Denny" Morrissey: Gimme the grease.

"Jack" Sweeney: Where's my clip?

John Cusick: How about the dope, "Jim?"

Fred Snyder: I loaded that car to Forest Hills.

Ruth McIlvaine: This isn't mine, it's Harriet's.

"Al" Morton: Now get those bills of lading up here.

Ira Alspaugh: I called that firm up today.

The Chew Realty Company has recently been purchased by two famous Baltimore and Ohio people of Lima, Fitzgerald and Barrett. The new firm will be known as the Fitzgerald and Barrett Real Estate Company. Congratulations are in order.

East Dayton, Ohio

Correspondent, EDWARD M. MANNIX

That was a fine New Year's message from President Daniel Willard. The confidence reposed in him as our Chief Executive will inspire us to do our utmost in assuring him of our full and continued cooperation to make 1924 the best in the history of the Baltimore and Ohio. "All together."

It looks like flattery for the correspondent to place East Dayton at the head of our various roundhouses but we can proudly boast of splendid management, cleanliness, thriftiness and safety. "Every day in every way, we're getting better and better."

The spirit of a Good Neighbor was fully manifest in our recent Community Chest Drive by the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio. Under the leadership of Division Freight Agent H. E. Warburton a creditable showing was made in Dayton. He used as his motto "Charity towards all, Malice towards none." He surely showed the standard of his work as division freight agent, in his efforts in the drive, and we all say, "Mr. Warburton, well done."

The Income Tax doesn't seem to have much effect on our single clerks at the Freight Office but look out, this is leap year, and right now I am told several of the boys are spotted. Go to it girls, the pleasure is all yours and remember they are Best and Only!

It is pretty hard to put anything over on our eagle-eyed Road Foremen of Engines M. P. Hoban or W. B. Kilgore. When they look around and walk away with that good natured smile it's a cinch they are satisfied. Come often, gentlemen, we are glad to see you.

Here is condensed dope on the roundhouse employees in a nut shell. Nobody died recently, nobody got married, no births to report, no sensations of any kind, but, the Volstead Act still remains in force. Every day in every way she's getting dryer and dryer—yet the world is two-thirds water.

It is pleasant for the writer to report that advertisers in the December MAGAZINE were pleased with their advertisements and needless to say they will profit by them as our employees appreciate their patronage.

Like a clap of thunder out of the clear sky, came a cold snap on January 5; a drop to 10 degrees below zero at this point. We were well prepared for this emergency, however, and fully demonstrated the stuff that makes real railroad men. Business moved along as serenely as on a July morn.

In answer to the query of Trainmaster T. J. Daly and several others—I have not heard a word from "Shorty" or "Percy" but from past accounts I am under the impression they are still sittin' pretty—but not in this climate.

The Machinists' Local broke into print recently by one of their old time spectacular entertainments and euvres, which was appreciated by all who had the pleasure of attending. The prizes were numerous and beautiful and the occasion will be long remembered as the best of the season. Try it over, its worth repeating.

The following letter has been received by Superintendent Stevens from G. W. Cooke, formerly manager, Junction Elevator Company, Junction, Ill., expressing appreciation of the service given him by employees of our division:

"This is to inform you that I am no longer manager of the Junction Elevator Company. I wish to thank you and your Company for the splendid and efficient service you have given me, also for the courteous treatment accorded me by your agents. If I continue in the grain business, as I now expect to do, I will be glad to continue to receive your good service, and, best of all, good will."

With the close of 1923 the Baltimore and Ohio, as well as other railroads, closed its books on one of its most profitable years. There were many reasons for this increase in business, and one of the main reasons was SERVICE. Good service to the shippers and passengers makes Baltimore and Ohio boosters of them and will result in their continued patronage. The prosperity of our Railroad is pleasing to all of us and now that the seasonal decline in business is here, the paramount issue before all employees is securing business so that we may again profit by a successful year. If you know of business which could move via our line, make every effort to get it routed Baltimore and Ohio. Let's make every effort to get all the business we can.

Assistant Freight Traffic Manager Hart, Division Freight Agent Ferguson and Trainmasters Pritchett and Smith recently made a trip over the St. Louis Division, visiting shippers and business men in all the cities and towns, the purpose of the trip being to come into personal contact with our patrons and to stimulate business.

That bandits are becoming bold is evidenced by the fact that they recently entered the home of Captain of Police W. J. Winman, while members of the family were absent, and rifled it. The guilty parties were apprehended and brought to trial.

We are glad to place an outside friend on our honor roll. Robert Dunn, residing near Enfield, Ill., discovered a broken rail, about one-half mile west of Sacramento, and remained there and flagged No. 79. Crew of No. 79 placed flag at the broken rail, and reported it to section men at Enfield. Thank you, Mr. Dunn.

Pensioned Track Foreman Frank Donmeyer, Flora, Ill., dropped dead on January 9, shortly after his house caught fire from a burning flue. It is believed that the excitement was responsible for his death. Mr. Donmeyer entered Baltimore and Ohio service on April 17, 1885, as trackman and was promoted to track foreman on May 1, 1891. On April 17, 1920, he was granted a pension. Employees who had the pleasure of knowing and working with Mr. Donmeyer deeply regret his passing.

Superintendent's Office, Shops

Assistant Correspondent, H. F. SMITH

A coal operator friend probably sent us the following poem, which was unsigned. However, we do not think the condition, as depicted here, would ever exist. They might write something about the moderate weather which has allowed our coal to stay "put" in the bin.

A coal man went to heaven one day
(As sometimes coal men do).
And they gave him the job (with princely pay)

Of running a coal train through
To the kingdom of hell, with instructions to haul

From the fiery brimstone bars
All the railroad men whom he could recall—
But they gave him, alas, no cars.

So a message he sent to the realms of hell
For the railroad men to be
On the watch for his train, and he rang the bell

With a chuckle of fiendish glee.
And the men lined up as they writhed in pain
On the fiery brimstone bars,
But when the coal man showed up with his train,

Alas! He had no cars.

And so through endless cycles of years
The railroad men lined up,
With hope dispelled, with groans and tears,
As they drained the bitter cup,
While the coal man makes his run on time
From the pearly gates to the fiery bars,
And the railroad men in anguish chime,
"Alas! Once more no cars!"

On December 28 Trainmaster Purkhiser was granted leave of absence because of the poor condition of his health and has gone south where it is hoped he will rapidly recover. T. C. Smith, formerly assistant trainmaster, Chicago Division, has been temporarily assigned to the vacancy.

January 31 will mark the closing of the Bedford Branch and the station at that point. All our property at Bedford will be turned over to the Monon, and we will probably use the line south of Bedford, to Rivervale, for storage purposes.

Brakeman W. J. Leeds, employed on through runs between Cincinnati and St. Louis, met sudden death on New Year's morning, when he fell from bridge at Huron, Ind. Leeds, who was 56 years of age, had been in the service of the Company for 34 years and held an enviable record. It is thought he fell from bridge while getting off train to handle switch for No. 3 to head in.

The territory of Trainmaster H. S. Smith has been extended from Mitchell to Seymour and now includes the old home town.

On December 29 Veteran Yard Engineer C. Schermerhorn, Flora, Ill., passed away at his home. Mr. Schermerhorn entered the service on December 1, 1885, and had rounded out thirty-eight years of continuous service. He had been unable to work regularly during the past eighteen months, after he underwent an operation for cancer of stomach. He was noted for his sunny disposition and always had a smile and a pleasant greeting.

Business on the St. Louis Division has been good, despite the efforts of the weather man to freeze us out by dropping the temperature forty degrees in twenty-four hours on January 5. The sudden drop handicapped the Mechanical Department and forced them to do their utmost in keeping power moving out of the roundhouses.

Storekeeper C. B. Welch, having been transferred to Keyser, W. Va., was presented with a traveling bag and the following letter from the Stores Department clerks who desired to show their appreciation of his fine treatment of them:

"In view of the fact that you will be leaving us in a few days for new fields of endeavor, those who have labored faithfully during your stay among us wish to show their appreciation of your directorship by giving you a present to always remind you of the good feeling you have created while at Washington, Ind."

Washington, Indiana, Shops

Assistant Correspondent, LOTTIE T. DOSCH

Washington Division No. 16, Veterans' Association, elected the following officers for 1924: John Kehoe, president; Winfred E. Ross, vice-president; W. M. Brennan, secretary; Thomas Cochran, treasurer; Austin Kelly, sergeant at arms. Directors: W. E. Ross, W. Long, Elmer Bell, H. H. Bryan, M. B. Hollis, Harry Mowery and Frank A. Evans.

In 1921, when the Management requested the Veterans' Association to solicit freight and passenger traffic, Division No. 16 responded heartily and ranked second, of which they are very proud. They are doing everything in their power to make use of the cards sent out with the MAGAZINE.

On page 10 of the December MAGAZINE, J. J. McNamara, a veteran employee "Makes Hay While the Sun Shines" and he has secured a large amount of freight to be routed via Baltimore and Ohio.

A number of our Veterans have stock in the Leonard Range Factory, now nearing completion, which is situated on our line and will be a source of revenue when put into operation.

Two of our Veterans, Superintendent C. G. Stevens and Trainmaster K. S. Pritchett, were instrumental in locating a Shoe Manufacturing Company at Flora, Ill., which will materially increase our freight business.

We have a live bunch of Veterans and they are doing all they can to assist the Old Road, with which they have been connected for many years.

Read the MAGAZINE, lend it to your neighbor—tell him about the Capitol Limited—our facilities for handling Q. D. freight—the courtesies extended on our line. Get business for the Best and Only and we will all keep busy.

Miss Blanche Wise, accounting clerk, and Miss Mayme Zinkan, storekeeper's secretary, have just returned from an enjoyable trip to Havana, Cuba, and various interesting points in Florida. They highly complimented the courtesy of an officer on a Peninsular & Occidental boat; special favors given them by a dining car steward on the Southern Railway, who informed them he had received special consideration from the Baltimore and Ohio while using our trains.

C. B. Welch, division storekeeper, has been transferred from Washington, Indiana, to Keyser, W. Va. Mr. and Mrs. Welch's many friends in Washington regret their leaving.

E. D. Phillians, erectingshop foreman, Washington Shops, has been transferred to E. St. Louis as enginehouse foreman.

We would appreciate contributions from St. Louis Division women during 1924 for publication in the Women's Department.

Cliff Morton's Circus expects to be on the road early this Spring with many new attractions, among them Eko and Iko from the Engineering Department.

She Saw Them Set Their Watches by the Capitol Limited

The following letter, from a descendant of Baltimore and Ohio employes of three generations, is simply an expression of the attitude of all who have had the pleasure of riding the Capitol Limited. We are glad to publish Miss Brown's letter.—Editor

Editor, Baltimore and Ohio Magazine:

Ever since my short trip on the Capitol Limited from Baltimore to Cumberland, I have wanted to write to you in appreciation of the real comfort; of the smooth, easy riding; of the courtesy of the conductor and the porter.

It was the most enjoyable short trip that I have ever taken. And, while riding along in the most luxurious way, I noticed that watches were being compared and set by the Capitol Limited time at the few stops made.

Since riding on this train I am a booster for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. And why shouldn't I be a booster when three generations of my family have spent years of service on the Baltimore and Ohio?

Yours for success,

(Signed) MARGARET TAYMAN BROWN

cently with a black eye which, she explains, was the result of a collision with a rocking chair in the dark. The boys in the office say that this is a poor explanation for a black eye.

We suggest to travelling auditors that when they come to Louisville, they leave their traveling bags at the hotel until ready to take the train. Oftimes they have discovered that they had been carrying extra luggage in the way of bricks, etc., but it remained for the young ladies of the office recently to fill one with paper weights and other pieces of furniture not then in use, etc. Auditor Davis has not yet told us when and where he discovered the slippers or what explanation he had to give. The slippers were returned by train mail the next day.

Henry Goodbub, trace clerk, Louisville, was boasting about his Barney Oldfield ability with his Chevrolet speedster. The boys in the office decided they would have a little fun and Henry would not be boasting so soon again. Upon his return to his desk from an errand on the platform, they told him there had been a telephone call for him from the Chief Police Office, stating that he had knocked down and seriously injured a man the night before while speeding down Broadway. He took it seriously and the joke was carried to a conclusion. Later in the day another phone call came, which Henry answered himself, and sure enough he said it was Chief Braden, who told him the victim was in a dying condition and to come to the hospital at once. We cannot describe here the feelings of Henry, the lack of color in his face or his nervous condition as he went to get his coat and hat and tell the chief clerk he was called away. It was at this point the chief clerk told him it was a joke being played on him by his fellow employes. All Henry had to say was that he was mighty glad it was not so, and we were glad for him. Henry has not been heard to boast since!

The opportunity for Saving, for wise buying is at your door. It is for you to give the answer. Will you, too, save money this Season on nearly everything you buy?

How Ward's Low Prices Are Made

Over 100 expert buyers have been at work for months finding and making these Ward bargains for you.

Fifty million dollars worth of merchandise has been bought whenever and wherever prices were lowest. America and Europe have been searched. Vast amounts of ready cash have been used to make possible for you and your family this great opportunity for saving.

"Ward Quality" is Your Assurance of Reliable Merchandise

Ward's is a money-saving house. We make low prices. But there is one thing always to remember when comparing prices. We sell only merchandise of "Ward Quality."

We sell only the kind of merchandise that will give you satisfaction—that will stand inspection and use. We do not sell "cheap" goods. We sell good goods cheap. At Ward's we never sacrifice quality to make a low price. And that has stood as our governing policy for fifty-one years.

Everything for the Home, the Farm and the Family

FOR WOMEN: Montgomery Ward's first catalogue contained mostly things for women. So for 51 years our best efforts have been given to the woman's and young woman's needs and wishes. And so in New York our own Fashion Experts live and work to buy the best New York styles for you. You can get at Ward's the best and newest styles in garments with the utmost wearing quality without paying the usual Fashion profits.

FOR THE HOME: All over America thousands of homes have been made beautiful, comfortable and convenient by articles bought from Ward's. Our experts are practical artists in home furnishing. Here in this catalogue you will find everything new for the home, everything beautiful, and at a saving that will enable you to do even more than you expected in beautifying your home.

FOR THE FARM: We know the farmer's needs. We have studied them for over half a century. And so we can say to everyone on the farm that at Ward's everything for the farm is intelligently chosen with practical knowledge of its use. Fencing, hardware, roofing, tillage tools, tires and everything for the automobile—of reliable quality is offered at a big saving.

FOR MEN: Suits, overcoats, shoes, everything the men, young man or boy wears can be bought at Ward's, not only at a saving, but with assurance of satisfactory service in everything you buy.

One Copy of this Catalogue is Yours Free

One copy of this catalogue with all its opportunities for saving is yours free.

The Commercial Development Department

---

THE Commercial Development Department is a division of the Traffic Department and specializes in industrial development on the Baltimore and Ohio System. It aims to render efficient, practical and economical service to those seeking industrial locations best suited to their needs.

To develop the latent industrial resources on the Railroad.

To further good feeling and understanding between the Railroads and the public, cooperating with the commercial organizations representing cities and towns along our lines.

To cooperate with the Traffic Department in preparation of data which will aid in the solicitation of freight traffic.

To work closely with farm bureaus in cooperative marketing, and to raise the standard and quality of farm products.

To obtain the best results an organization of this kind needs the earnest cooperation of every employe in every department of the Railroad.

The department includes four bureaus, each working along special lines of development, but all cooperating one with the other to attain the aims of the organization.

The Industrial Bureau is the sales department, and is directly engaged in location of industries.

The Geological Bureau is engaged in detailed studies of the mineral resources of the Railroad, and in interesting companies in mineral development.

The Industrial Survey Bureau makes industrial surveys of cities on the Railroad to determine their advantages for manufacturing industries. It is also compiling a commodity index showing the shippers and consumers of various groups of products, which will be a great aid in freight solicitation.

The Agricultural Bureau is working on advancement of the agricultural interests of the communities served by this Railroad, fully realizing that the prosperity of the farmer will reflect prosperity on the railroad.

Baltimore and Ohio employes can render valuable service to this department by their cooperation. In their travel and association with business men over the country, they will hear rumors of the removal of plants to more economical locations, or of new enterprises, reports of which may escape the notice of the members of this department. Such information, if reported to us, would be valuable and, as has already happened, might result in the location of a valuable tonnage producing plant on the Railroad. The cooperation of the employes in the traffic solicitation campaigns since 1921 has been of special benefit to the Railroad and has proved the advantages of such community of effort.

Our employes should remember that on the 5,000 miles of this Railroad there are attractive advantages for industries, with fuel abundant and adaptable to all uses, cheap power, raw materials, pure water supply, equable climate, good building sites, attractive and progressive cities, and excellent transportation on a Railroad which is devoting special attention to industries.

For economy, efficiency, and continuity of operation, industrial plants located near fuel and raw materials will have decided advantages over those more distant. Over 65 cities of 10,000 or more people on The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad are in or near coal fields, and near mid-west and west markets, a decided advantage through assembly and delivery costs over those with longer routes. In 83 cities of over 10,000 population each there are 77,000 factories employing two and one-half million workers. In the past decade their value of manufactured products has increased over 250 per cent.

THE READER AND ADVERTISING

Circulation of the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine is 50,000 copies per issue, our aim being to place it in the hands and in the homes of practically all English speaking employees of the Railroad. An examination of our advertising will show that it conforms to the highest standards. We do not guarantee it, but we believe that it means exactly what it says, and for that reason feel free to urge our readers to patronize our advertisers whenever they consistently can.

timekeeping instrument ever produced for the railroad man

The New "B. W. Raymond" - 21 Jewel

AS you read over the detailed description you will readily understand why the new "B. W. Raymond" (21 jewel) made a place for itself more quickly than any other railroad watch ever produced—

Balance Wheel—either The Elgin high-tempered Compensating Balance or the new design Invar Balance which gives the closest possible rating over the entire temperature range.

Main Spring—extra long, giving a safety margin of many hours' excess running power.

Regulator—positive in action, giving very close pocket regulation.

Eight adjustments—five of them to positions.

Dial—fine enamel. Large, clear figures. Wide reflector. Correct time visible at a glance in any light.

Case—expressly designed for the railroad man. Safety bow. Dust-proof pendant. Gold filled only. Extra heavy stock, to resist wear.

Each "B. W. Raymond" cased by the Elgin Watch-makers—special close regulation of each watch in its own case.

When you examine the new "B. W. Raymond" at your jeweler's remember, too, that it is an Elgin—the Professional Timekeeper for railroad men.

Our Business Getters

Now Tommy Brown, the "Old Broom Man" of lowly occupation,
Was never at a loss for words, was filled with information—
He knew his job from end to end, was strong on calculation.

When on your doorstep once he'd placed his curious collection
Of brooms and brushes, large and small, for your minute inspection,
He'd never leave until you'd bought, or shown cause for rejection.

No matter how you'd try to turn aside his conversation,
He'd deftly swing your words around to make an application,
Until you'd laugh and buy a broom to meet the situation.

Asleep or 'wake he sold his brooms, e'en when somnambulistic,
He always "brought the bacon back," for he was optimistic—
And we know lots of people who possess that characteristic.

Our business-getters may be found in every occupation,
And like Tom Brown, you'll always learn they're full of information—
Asleep or 'wake, they're on the job to sell you transportation.

And once they're camped upon your trail, they'll take a heap of pleasure,
In telling you about OUR ROAD—as Tom sang of his treasure—
Assuring you of service fine, heaped up in gospel measure.

Conductor Takes Issue with Magazine

Disputes Claim that the Engineer in Passenger Service is Foremost in Winning Friends for the Railroad

THE November, 1923 issue of the MAGAZINE contained an article headed, "Foremost in Winning Friends for the Railroad in Passenger Service is the Engineer." It attempted to show that the man at the throttle, in addition to being the principal guardian of the safety of passenger and crew, can also handle his train with a skill and precision and smoothness that mean comfort for the patrons in coaches and Pullmans, and that he thus becomes the best salesman in the crew for his Company's service.

But the article did not cite any authority for giving the engineer this preeminence. It was a statement that could not be proved by statistics—an assumption that was the result of but one person's observation and experience. And that it did not carry conviction in all quarters on the Railroad is clearly evidenced by a letter, written by a conductor and recently received in the MAGAZINE office. The writer does not want his identity disclosed but has given us permission to publish his views, which are as follows:

My Dear Mr. Editor:

I read the first article in the November issue, about the engineer, with a good deal of interest—and I agree with you that the engineer is a most important man on the train, whether passenger or freight. But when it comes to saying that in passenger service he has more to do with winning friends for the Railroad than any other member of the crew, then you and I part company.

Now don't get me wrong—, for there isn't a finer lot of men on the Road than our engineers. Many of them are my best friends and they deserve a lot of credit for the way they handle our trains. Furthermore, it takes lots of nerve sometimes to sit tight up there next to that roar of fire and noise and steam, with fifty loads pushing you down a piece of road and you depending on a good air line and track, and so many other things being just right. I know, because I've been a freight brakeman and ridden thousands of miles on the engine!

But getting back to the passenger engineer especially, I want to say one or two things in answer to that article:

First as to Safety. Now, of course, with every man on the crew Safety should be first. As our president said, "Safety Above Everything." And heaven help a railroad—and the people who ride on it—that hasn't got safe engineers.

Yet when you are speaking of the safety of train and passengers, who is more responsible, the engineer or the conductor? Now I happen to be a natural-born Safety man. Been interested in it long before it began to be talked about so much, and I know that accidents caused by the engineer aren't at all likely to happen in these times of automatic signals and all the other safeguards provided. The records will show how few people are hurt in accidents where the engineer is at fault. Of course, that's equal to saying that we have first-class, safe engineers.

But when you consider the conductor, so far as Safety is concerned, just look at what he has to do. He gets all train orders, just like the engineer, and is equally responsible for seeing that they are carried out (at the same time having many more things on his mind to look out for). Then he has the hard job of seeing that people get on and off the train safely. He must be sure before giving the starting signal, his doors must be closed at the proper time and he must always be watchful for everybody, but especially for the old and very young who are least able to take care of themselves. Maybe he has two or three hundred people to look out for, and in a crowd like that there's bound to be some who need watching, too, or they will get hurt.

Besides that he has all the train back of the tender to watch for such things as hot boxes and broken rigging, which, if not caught, cause accidents. Then he has to see that his flagman is out when he should be with proper lights, fusees, etc. Who is it, when you're running on the eastbound track, for instance, and find it blocked, that has to protect the whole movement when you run over to the westbound track to pass the obstruction? It's the conductor, of course, and the engineer takes all his instructions from him! Naturally a good engineer makes the job a lot easier and helps save time.

Finally, when anything happens to a train, who is it that gets called "on the carpet?" Nine times out of ten it is the conductor, and that is right, too, for he ought to know that he is in charge of the train and that he is responsible.

Now all the time that the conductor is handling these things, what is the engineer doing? Well, he has enough to do, too, and he has to be skilful and all that, but my point is that he hasn't quite as many things to watch out for in the safe operation of his train as the conductor has.

But so far as Safety goes I would not take issue with what you have said about the engineer. I know myself how satisfying it is to have a man in the cab who knows his business and is strictly on the job.

The article in our November issue on "The Engineer," to which the accompanying letter is a reply, was inspired by an old time engineer who is now an officer of the Baltimore and Ohio. There is at least one conductor on the Road who is unwilling to let the claim of the veteran engineer go by unchallenged. Read what he has to say, and if you have an opinion of your own on the subject, please send it to the Magazine!

However, there is one other thing I would like to say in answer to the last part of that article. You say that the engineer can win the most friends for the Railroad by giving them a smooth ride, without jerks and all that. Without doubt, that is very important. I've noticed, especially during the last few years, how skilful our engineers have become in handling their trains, and I've heard many passengers comment on it. Therefore, so far as you go, you are right.

But has it ever occurred to you that while the engineer is handling a piece of machinery on the head end, the conductor is handling a hundred or more different kinds of people in the coaches? Now I'll admit that a bump caused by a careless engineer is felt by every person on the train—but few people take it as a personal insult. They don't like to get jolted, of course, especially when they are sleeping, yet I think the average person would rather get jolted a dozen times than have an indifferent or unpleasant conductor take his ticket.

What I'm trying to say is this: While your engineer is handling a big and important piece of machinery, your conductor is actually handling people—and once in a while some queer ones. The engineer has no personal contact with passengers, while the conductor is the fellow to whom everybody tells his troubles and looks up to.

Just take the question of calling stations, especially on local trains where there are lots of stops. Don't you know that there are always people on the train, unaccustomed to travel, nervous and anxious to get somewhere? They are strangers in a strange land and so afraid that they will be carried past their destinations. Can't you see what it means to them to have a conductor who is really interested in accommodating them—in assuring them that he will see that they get off at the right station, and then doing so? Why the pleasure that a single passenger like that shows, more than repays me for all the trouble I take.

Then there are such problems as crowded coaches, persons whose tickets don't read right for the places they want to reach, helping old folks and mothers with children, making it possible for coach passengers to use seats to the best advantage without discommoding other passengers, proper placing of hand baggage and parcels in the racks, keeping cars clean and orderly, explaining tactfully the reason the train is late, if it is—why there are so many things that a conductor can do to please his passengers that the engineer certainly has keen competition when it comes to winning friends for the Railroad!

To be honest with you, though, this business of winning friends for the Road never appealed to me in just that light until I read the story about the engineer. I've always been friendly to passengers for friendship's sake, and courteous for courtesy's sake. Maybe that's just another way of putting President Willard's, "Not Because We Feel Obligated to Do So But Just Because We Want to Do So."

I don't want any credit for relieving a tired mother by helping her find a seat where she can let her little one stretch out and sleep. The look of contentment on the baby's face is enough for me. And there's a heap of satisfaction in making old folks dead sure that they are going to get there all right, by explaining all about it in a kindly way. When I quit my run each day I take my new made friendships home with me—in spirit at least. Maybe that's the reason the years have been easy with me, for I'm just about as young and hearty as when I started braking over thirty years ago. I've never been able to look at my job in any other way than that directed by the Good Book—and I can't help but think that being pleasant and friendly has brought me a return that few men have.

"Do unto others—"

Yes, friend, I'll admit that the engineer can help a lot in winning pleased patrons for the Railroad. Other members of the crew can, too. As Admiral Schley said after the battle of Santiago, "There is glory enough for all."

But if you want to see the real bread winner for the Railroad in passenger service, just come ride with me some day and meet the friendly family of folks outside the Railroad circle who always seems so much at home when they are on my train. Most of them have only a nodding acquaintance with the engineer—but they call me by my first name.

Conductor "Ed." Reynolds Has the Good Neighbor Spirit

THE following letters tell the story of the Good Neighborliness of Conductor "Ed." Reynolds of the Newark Division. What a wonderfully happy thing it would always be to work and travel and ship on the Baltimore and Ohio, if we all remembered as faithfully as does Mr. Reynolds the Biblical injunction about "loving thy neighbor as thyself."

Mr. H. G. Kruse                      Brokaw, Ohio
Superintendent, Baltimore and Ohio
Newark, Ohio

Dear Sir:

As I was traveling on Conductor "Ed." Reynolds' train not long ago, I could not help notice the kindness which he showed a small boy and his sister who had no money except a check that was written wrong. He gave them money out of his own pocket to meet their needs till they reached home. This is only one of the many such deeds of kindness that Mr. Reynolds has shown his passengers. Mr. Reynolds is the best and most popular conductor on the O. & L. K. Division of the Baltimore and Ohio and I write this letter as I think the Company should know that the people appreciate what he has done for them.

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) CHARLES MERRILL

Mr. "Ed." Reynolds
Passenger Conductor
Zanesville, Ohio

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing herewith a letter received from Mr. Charles Merrill, Brokaw, Ohio, which is self explanatory. It is certainly gratifying to receive a letter of this kind and while this is only one of a number of instances in which you have been commended for your service to the traveling public, and indicative of your popularity with them, I am sending it to you for your noting and return, as it should be a source of satisfaction to you to know that your services are appreciated by those with whom you come in contact, just as they are appreciated by the Management of the Railroad and myself. Yours truly,

Mr. H. G. Kruse
Superintendent, Newark, Ohio

Dear Sir:

Your favor of 5th received and contents noted. It pleases me to know that the patrons whom I have served so many years, feel I have fulfilled my duties. My work to me is a pleasure. Thanking you for your kind words of commendation, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Simple Readjustments Increase Efficiency at Mt. Clare Shop

And Prove That More Intelligent Handling of Work—and Not Necessarily Harder Work—Brings Better Production

By J. A. FINNEGAN, Foreman, Automatic Department, Mt. Clare

IN the relocation of the work bench shown in the accompanying photograph there is an excellent illustration of a real step towards efficiency. This bench, located in the extreme eastern end of the Automatic Department, in the section set aside for finished articles preparatory to their inspection, and adjacent to the inspection bench which is shown in the background, is used for the assembly of relief valves, water glass valves, gauge cocks, toggle joints, whistles, etc., which are made up in complete units before being shipped to the storehouse.

The movement of the various articles that go to make up the units described above, from their point of manufacture to this bench, where they are assembled, and then to the storehouse, contains practically no back lash, or lost motion, and presents a striking contrast to the movement that was necessary with the previous location of the bench, about 175 feet west of its present site. A number of the parts which are manufactured on the Warner & Swasey machine just opposite the new location, had to be carried back this distance under the old arrangement, and then after being assembled into a unit, moved back over the same route on their way to the storehouse. Other parts which are manufactured near the old location of the bench had to be moved to the inspection bench located as described above, back to the assembly bench and then back over the same route on their way to the storehouse.

The new bench is of ample size and is provided with a number of trays which are of sufficient capacity to hold the parts that go to make up any two or three of the complete units. This has made possible the issuance of instructions to the effect that no work shall be started on the assembly job until the parts for the complete unit are on the bench, and has made unnecessary the trips after material which the mechanic engaged in the assembly work frequently made under the old arrangement.

This move required practically no expenditure, and, in eliminating a great deal of the portage that was necessary under the old system with no additional burden placed on the workmen, offers a most conclusive proof that efficiency in its real sense has not as its end increased production by hard work, but on the contrary, the same result by intelligent arrangement.

In Defense of Present Freight Rates

By F. G. HADLEY, Agent, Mt. Vernon, Ohio

A GREAT deal has been said and written concerning the supposed fact that high prices are due to high freight rates. It is the opinion of the writer that this impression should be corrected, insofar as is possible. A case showing what we can do happened recently, during my conversation with a business man.

My friend stated that the high price of merchandise was caused by high freight rates and asked me when I thought they would be reduced. My reply was that I did not think rates would be reduced and then I asked him, "Do you honestly believe high prices are caused by high freight rates?" He replied "That is what some people tell us." I then cited a case where freight rates did not enter into prices. It was as follows:

"The other day I went to an orchard, about two miles from the city, to purchase some apples, nice sprayed fruit, selling at from $1.50 to $3.00 per basket. A day or two later a car of apples from Michigan arrived in the city, equal in quality to home-grown fruit. They were sold, delivered, at $1.40 per basket. How do you figure that this man could ship apples here from Michigan and undersell the home product after paying freight rate?"

My question remains unanswered to this date. We should never miss an opportunity to defend our freight rates.

"Let us look to the service rather than to the reward. Then shall we see in our industrial army, from the most exalted captain to the humblest soldier in the ranks, a purpose worthy to minister to the highest needs of man and to fulfill the hope of a fairer day."—Calvin Coolidge

Why He Was a Chief

Extract from "The Creation of Wealth"

By HARRINGTON EMERSON

AN EXPLORER was passing the winter on the arctic shore of Alaska in an Eskimo village, the guest of a chief. Between necessary sleeps the chief went forth into the darkness and cold, built a wind-break of ice blocks, cut a hole through the eight feet of ocean ice, and steadily, hour after hour, fished, thus accumulating great stores of frozen food.

"Why do you thus laboriously fish far beyond your own needs?" asked the explorer. Said the savage: "When the sun comes back, starving tribes from the interior will come to me for help. Because I am a chief I must be prepared to feed them."

This man had not inherited either wealth or chieftainship. He had had no opportunities beyond those of his fellow tribesmen, he was a chief because he had a greater sense of responsibility and this drove him to work while others idled.

In this Eskimo tribe, living now as their ancestors lived hundreds of thousands of years ago, there were two kinds of men; those who lived from hand to mouth and those who felt responsibility for the welfare of others. And elsewhere over the whole world we find numerous immediates who cannot or will not look ahead, and we also find the far-sighted ultimates who ceaselessly toil that others may have support.

Through all the thousands of years that humanity has existed, the many, like my Socialist brotherhood, have never been able to produce wealth. They have scarcely been able to produce the elemental necessities. The Arabs of Arabia live now as Abraham lived. The peasantry of Europe has toiled and moiled with a diligence and persistence inconceivable to an American, yet until recently they still lived as their ancestors did a thousand years ago; the Chinese are a race of 300 million frugal, diligent, toiling workers, the very ants among human beings, yet the ants have never grown rich.

Diligence and work supplemented by other qualities have never created wealth.

What is wealth? It is the margin above immediate need.

It is only the exceptional man, the natural chief, who creates opportunity to make wealth. It is only the self-denying man who resists the desires to spend all he can acquire.

Animals only come and go. The grizzly, the whale, the wild swan, even the lovely humming bird, is no richer than his ancestors of ages ago.

What wealth was there in the interior of Asia or interior of Africa or in the interior of the two Americas? What wealth is there among the patient, diligent, skilled, intelligent Chinese? They scarcely produce what they need.

Mere Labor is Limited

It is not true that labor creates wealth. Countless millions have toiled, have lived and died without producing wealth. Labor, unguided, unsupplemented, produces only enough to keep itself alive. Wealth is the surplus or excess above elemental needs. It is something saved that might have been spent, been squandered. In the past ages the surplus was very small and only those powerful enough to rob others of their small savings could acquire great wealth; but during the past century production has been increased as never before, not by harder work on the part of the many, but by intelligent combinations, by the few, of materials otherwise worthless, of savings otherwise unproductive, of labor otherwise futile.

The Chinese coolie equipped with a carry pole, the most efficient method of carrying known, totes 100 pounds 20 miles in a day; a ton mile a day for a compensation of $0.10. The coolie is worked so hard that he wears out in four years.

A James J. Hill conceived the idea of a transcontinental unsubsidized railroad from the head of the great Lakes to a Pacific harbor. The lands were there but not yet farmed, mines were there not yet opened, lumber was there as yet uncut. China and Japan needed American wheat, so Mr. Hill borrowed the savings of the economical Hollanders, $10,000 for every man he has to employ, and he created and directed a great transcontinental road, combining into one functionary whole, materials, equipment and workers. Instead of earning $0.10 a day like a Chinaman, these employes of his in shorter hours and in far easier occupation earned daily thirty times as much. The cost of transportation was reduced from the Chinese standard of $0.10 a ton mile to the American standard of $0.01 a ton mile; the distance per day was increased from 20 miles to 100.

J. J. Hill's genius and vision, skill and tireless supervision added at least a billion dollars to the wealth of the United States, and of this he was able to keep five per cent. for himself. I have used the Chinaman to exemplify the type of hardworking, unsaving, visionless man. I have used J. J. Hill to exemplify the up-builder, the counselor, the organizer and the creator who has immensely increased production. He made savings possible.

Production, consumed as fast as attained, never creates wealth, which is always the result of self-denial, of saving what might have been squandered. Increased production which makes larger savings easy is not due to harder work, but it is due to intelligently organized combination, of which the many are as incapable as have been the Chinese and as were my brothers of the social colony.

Talk Safety!

LIKE advertising, Safety, in order to be effective, must be kept continually before us. One advertisement won't forever keep the name of the product before the public. Neither will one Safety drive forever keep us reducing accidents. We've got to talk it all the time.

The need for intelligent cooperative Safety work is greater today than ever before. When we consider that 10 per cent. of all deaths in the United States are due to accidents; that on the average someone meets death by an accident every 8 minutes, we cannot help but feel that our own past efforts should be redoubled in the interest of humanity to save suffering and sacrifice.

It is not only necessary for each of us to keep constantly before him the fact that eternal vigilance is the price of Safety; but, further, by always being on the alert to keep another free from danger, we shall feel that we have done all we could to carry out the thought, "THOU ART THY BROTHER'S KEEPER."

Railroad Romance

To own a private car appears to be the pinnacle of luxury in popular imagination. The Pullman Company checks up and discovers that only five or six private cars are owned by Americans; others rent a car when they need it. The rich of our country run on yachts—they turn back to boyhood's inherited desire to be a sailor. The only real romance in railroading is in the engineer's cab. Ask the boys who hang around country-town depots.—Haverhill Gazette

Following the Lead

The Management frequently attempts to stimulate System-wide interest in some specific movement calculated to increase our prosperity. Often it uses the MAGAZINE to get the message down the line, but no one realizes better than the writer how inadequate this method is in attaining the best results, unless it is supplemented by the personal interest of the officers of the Railroad.

Take the present effort to increase our revenue through the individual solicitation of business, in which the Baltimore and Ohio has not realized results nearly comparable to those which might be attained. The MAGAZINE can only suggest, outlining the reason for such a special movement and what may be expected to come of it. The printed word is but a weak agency to draw responses from thousands of employes, unless it is supplemented by direct and prompt action by leaders of men all over the System.

This observation is prompted because of the fact that our individual business solicitation campaign, through the medium of the postcards inserted in each issue of the MAGAZINE, needs the stimulus of suggestion through personal contact. The cards have been inserted in the last few issues and were followed by a strong appeal in the December issue. It quoted President Willard to the effect that a coordinated effort all along the line through individual effort outside of the Traffic Department to secure business, would fill more freight cars, set more trains in motion and keep forces in all departments better employed than they otherwise would be.

This message was read by thousands of employes who undoubtedly want to help. Many of them are helping, and personal observation indicates that the tabulation of postcard returns appearing in the MAGAZINE does not represent more than a fraction of the business being secured through the fine interest and effort taken by individual employes to get additional freight and passengers for the Road.

But there are other employes to whom this appeal has but passing interest. They have the seed of interest in them, too, but it needs to be germinated by the stimulus of contact. It is these who can be helped to worth while effort by the personal leadership of officers. One of our general managers told me recently that fully half of an address which he made to a group of Veterans was devoted to explaining to them how they can get new business through individual effort. Agents at various points on the Road have called meetings of their employes to stimulate their interest in the securing of additional business. (These meetings, of course, are especially valuable because of the direct contact which station employes have with the shipping and traveling public.) This morning we got a letter from a superintendent advising how one of his trainmasters assembled a group of his men and had an agent talk to them on the possibility of their securing new freight and passengers for our line.

It is supremely important now to the interests of all of us that we help increase our business by intense individual effort. Is it not reasonable therefore to hope that at every staff meeting held on the Railroad during the next several months this subject of business getting be given more than passing notice? It is only through personal contact and persuasion of this kind that the best results can be attained.

The Fascination of Words

Of Special Interest to Our Puzzlers

I am close enough to the printing business to realize the almost unlimited possibilities for typographical errors.

Take the word "reacts." These six letters can be set to produce 720 different combinations; the same six letters can be formed into seven different words: caret, caster, caters, crates, reacts, recast, traces.

Any eight different letters can be shown in 40,320 different ways, and six words can be formed from the same eight letters: caterers, reactors, recaster, recrates, retraces, terraces.

Any twelve different letters can be shown in 479,001,600 different ways; although there are only two words containing the same twelve letters: conservation, conversation.

A proofreader bumps into his most serious trouble in detecting these transpositions. If "conversation" is set to read "coneversation" it is easily detected, but if it is set to read "conservation" it may slip by and destroy the meaning of an entire paragraph.

According to Jacob Backes, a typographic expert, one word in eight, in ordinary composition, can be changed into an entirely different word in transposition of letters.

Oftentimes these transpositions produce words of meanings so unrefined as to be utterly inadmissible in books or periodicals of general circulation.

Mr. Backes, who has made an exhaustive study of words, says there are at least 320 words each of which, spelled backwards, will show a different word, as: evil, live; drawer, reward. The longest pair in this class is: desserts, stressed.

At least 300 words may be changed into entirely different ones by simply shifting the letters from one end to the other, as: printers, sprinter; peculates, speculate; weeps, sweep.—William Feather Magazine

About the Tongue

(Mostly quotations)

*"In babbling, gorging food or quenching drought
All mischief comes through opening the mouth."*

ARTHUR GUITERMAN—"Chips of Jade."

Disregarding for the present the other two factors for creating mischief and concerning ourselves with the first, this chapter will deal with the tongue.

There is an American injunction or caution against the misuse of the mouth conveyed in the phrase: "When you open your mouth don't put your foot in it."

The tongue is a small affair anatomically, but it is a power for good or evil when directed by an able brain or a brain where not a cell is working. It can cheer or condemn, bless or curse, sooth or stab, save or kill. Like the pen, it is mightier than the sword. But it can also just wobble, and mostly does. When so engaged "talk is cheap."

Maybe not the worst, but surely the meanest thing it does, and the most despicable, is slandering—

'Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed."

So says someone in "Othello."

And in this connection, here is another of Guiterman's "Chips of Jade":

"If none would list, a lie would lack a handle,
It takes both tongue and ear to make a scandal."

Before passing along what "they say" let us ask ourselves: "Is it true—is it kind—is it necessary?" and, when in doubt, let us hold our tongues.

An English noble woman, Lady Brooks, earned the sobriquet "Babbling Brooks," and another English lady, who still both thinks and talks, was made the subject of a sensational poem as the "woman with the serpent's tongue." A babbling brook may be harmless, but a serpent's tongue drips venom and, like the devil's hoof, is cloven. "Speak easy," "go slow in talking," "think more, talk less," all point the same moral. Thinking never hurt anybody else; it might hurt the thinker.

Does Bigger Pay Make Better Workers?

For the past several weeks the City of New York has been regrading and repaving the wide water front property extending between the North River pier bulkheads and West Street. It is an improvement that is badly needed, and which, though causing much inconvenience to shipping and traffic, will prove worth while.

As I write the work has reached the front of our Pier 22, and as they commence operations early in the morning I have often stood awhile, before going to my desk, watching with interest the men and machines.

Some of the excavating and other machines seem imbued with human intelligence and inexhaustible energy. They bite off the old crust of stone blocks and cement foundations as a boy would bite into a cracker. They dig into the subsoil with steel fingers that scrape and grope until they have a fistful, and then release it into a dump-cart. And all is done at the bidding of an insignificant looking individual, who merely touches a button here or a switch there, but under whose greasy cap is hidden the actual controlling power.

At the same time I have noted the small degree of intelligence, conspicuous lack of initiative and the minus quantity of energy evidenced individually by the lowest class of labor on this job. Calling the attention of a fellow employe to one of the workers carrying a five pound piece of broken-up concrete from a pile to a hole in the ground, a distance of about one hundred feet, retracing his steps and repeating the performance at regular measured intervals, and to another "husky" who stood by the pile and tossed in a shovelful of dirt with the same regularity, my co-watcher remarked: "they do enough for what they get—four dollars a day." That is a mouthful in a nutshell.

But there is more to it than that, and I dare to offer it as my opinion, based on long observation of men and work, that bigger pay will not improve an individual whose ambition reaches no further than the next meal or the next payday. Such workers are just bodies possessed of life sensation and power of motion, and they move because they must in order to exist. I also believe that bigger pay will not improve those that "do their best" for the reason that one cannot take more than a pint out of a pint measure; and, in consequence, that no raise in wages will improve any working force. Of course, bigger pay will attract better men.

As an interesting contrast to the four-dollar-a-day-man "who does enough for the pay he gets" there is that man who works the levers of the machine. His pay is fifteen dollars for an eight-hour-day, and I was informed that with overtime he earned over one-hundred-sixty dollars in one week. If you should pay fifteen dollars a day to the man carrying the five pound lump one hundred feet every five minutes, he would continue doing it in the same way and still think he was doing "enough for the money he was getting."

Filling a sow's ear with gold won't make it a silk purse. We are what we are, with plenty of room for improvement, but it is not bigger pay that will effect the improvement. Think it out for yourself!

I heard a woman in the train tell her companion of a wonderful circus show she had attended at Coney Island. I wish that I could give all the details of the narrative in the dialect as I heard it, but the thing that excited the narrator the most, and that puzzled me for quite a while, was her description of an "apricot" who hung by his teeth "a thousand feet up in the air." You can guess what the "apricot" was. I did.

Radio of Westinghouse Company Helps Railroad Re-establish Communication between Important Points

By E. N. Fairgrieve, Car Distributor, Pittsburgh, Pa.

AN unusually severe rain, snow and sleet storm struck the Pennsylvania district during the afternoon of February 19, accompanied by a high wind, which continued throughout the night, interfering with telephone, telegraph and electrical wires and rendering them practically useless. Communication between Pittsburgh and Connellsville was entirely cut off, leaving the latter section isolated so far as telegraph and telephone communication was concerned.

The town of Connellsville was in darkness, all electrical plants being out of commission. Between Connellsville and Broadford, a distance of about two miles, there were 28 poles broken off, while the streets of Connellsville were strewn with broken poles, fallen wires and limbs of trees, paralyzing vehicular traffic and making pedestrian travel dangerous.

The Western Union Telegraph Company and the West Penn Power Company, whose services were so badly crippled by the storm, had gangs of men working strenuously to restore the lines of communication. The Bell Telephone Company was in the same position.

At 9.30 p. m. the Western Union Company notified our office in Pittsburgh that we could have wire No. 224 between Connellsville and Pittsburgh. There was no way in which Connellsville could be advised and an appeal was made to KDKA broadcasting station of the Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Company, East Pittsburgh. This company had previously offered to assist in any way possible. They broadcasted a message from Superintendent Beltz to Superintendent Martin, telling the latter to cut in on wire No. 224. The message was picked up by four or five receiving stations at Uniontown and Connellsville, one of which belonged to a Mr. Angle, who succeeded in getting the information to Mr. Martin. The message was also picked up by Cumberland, Baltimore, Atlanta, Ga., and Holly Junction, W. Va. The agent at latter station called chief dispatcher, Weston, W. Va., by telephone, but nothing could be done as there was no means of communication from Grafton or Cumberland.

After a trial, it was found that we could not get through on wire 224, and KDKA again attempted to broadcast another message to Mr. Angle. After receiving the address, however, his radio machine failed.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company made every effort to assist the Baltimore and Ohio in this serious emergency, and General Superintendent Peck says: "They were certainly 'Good Neighbors' in our time of need."

Practical Considerations in Securing a Home

MANY families have saved up a splendid bank account. It is sufficient to buy an excellent home, and pay for it. But it has taken long years of sacrifice, scrupulous care in expenditures and economy. Too often the cost of maintaining the home is not investigated. The income will not cover the many new and increased expenses entailed.

It has been truthfully said that: "The savings after building a small home will add more to your happiness than the luxuries of a big one."

Here enters the question: What is a small home?

Whether it be a twenty-room mansion, or a three-room cottage, a small home is one that will not cost more than twice the average annual income, nor absorb more than fifteen per cent. of one's average annual income to pay for taxes, insurance, interest, repairs and renewals.

The above rule may be accepted as absolutely safe for any family to consider in connection with home ownership. The smaller the income, the more rigidly does it apply. For it is astonishing how rapidly related investments and expenses multiply in proportion to the increased original cost of the home.

New furniture is usually required when moving into a new home. How much must be spent on this item depends, of course, upon how much increased in size is the new home over the present one. The items of carpets, rugs, shades, curtains, etc., increase proportionately with size. Heating, lighting and plumbing equipment are influenced directly by size. These items might be first placed under "investment."

Each one of the foregoing items of investment become a direct and permanent addition to the expense or cost of upkeep and maintenance. Depreciation means the cost of repairs and replacements. Depreciation expenses increase with the years. Usually the older the article of use, the higher the rate of depreciation.

Operating costs of a home follow upward in proportion to the size of the home. These items include coal, light, water and entertainment.

Fixed charges follow the same trend, viz., taxes, insurance and interest.

One might feel that home owning is an expensive luxury after considering all the foregoing. It is not.

You are paying all these bills right now, whether you own your own home or are a renter. The point at issue is: "The savings after building a small home add more to your happiness than the luxuries of a big one."

Is the price of your pride, in owning a big home, worth its cost?

"Something—Some Influence—Seems to Make the Baltimore and Ohio Different"

WILLIAM PENN HOTEL
PITTSBURGH

The Editor
Baltimore and Ohio Magazine
Baltimore, Md.

January 24, 1924

Dear Sir:

I have just finished a ride on the Baltimore and Ohio from Wheeling to Pittsburgh and it was so pleasant I wish it had been a longer one. Something—some influence—seems to make the Baltimore and Ohio different.

For example, when I got on Number 34 at Wheeling it was raining, and the car was full and most of the people in it must have felt as gloomy as I did. And when the conductor walked through, he might have been as gloomy as every-body else.

But he wasn't—he seemed to be glad to be on that train, at that time, and able to extend the hospitality of his train.

I asked if there was a dining car. He said; "Certainly is, and the best dinner you'll ever hope to taste. Try it." Punching my ticket he added: "This is the Baltimore and Ohio—and they treat you to a real good meal!"

Not feeling hungry I thought I'd wait until we reached Pittsburgh, and I could be sure of a hotel meal. But the man next to me (a traveler, I think) spoke up:

"Say, I just been back to the diner and they got a great meal. I took the Commercial Traveler's dinner for 75 cents and let me tell you the Road lost at least 100 per cent. on that dinner. Or else they're wizards at buying good stuff."

Pause—while I got hungrier. Then:

"Did you read in the paper 'bout that fellow who died of old age at 86? Paper says he was struck by lightning four times during his life and it never hurt him once. He must have been like the fellow that just punched my ticket."

"How do you mean?" I asked.

"A damn good conductor."

Then I went in and had dinner—and it WAS a good one.

Well, all of this is just by way of a sincere and spontaneous statement about your Road. It IS different—and the difference is a thing of the spirit. The cars are just like other cars. The road bed is (or seems) perfectly solid—and ordinary. The curves are like other curves. The whistles on the engines sound just like other whistles. And the men you see doing jobs for the Baltimore and Ohio don't seem any taller or shorter or stouter or handsomer or uglier—than those on other roads (or all the rest of us, for that matter).

But they smile more.

And they HELP more.

And they seem to take pride in their work.

I don't believe any of the fellows on the Baltimore and Ohio are kindly and polite because they want to be noticed for it, or promoted for it. Such kindness wouldn't ring true.

It must be due, I guess, to two or three things:

A reflection of the head of the road.

A temperate, reasoning attitude on the part of the management.

Cultivation of the team spirit of pulling together.

—And the selection of really good men to man the Baltimore and Ohio trains.

As an outside observer, I don't know how you people accomplish the expression of so intangible a thing as CORPORATE HOSPITALITY. But you do it—and I feel it. As a traveler on many roads I'd like to say the Baltimore and Ohio has my liking and respect to a greater degree than any other. I'm sure that a great many men who travel a bit feel the same way about it.

More power to you!

(Signed) W. H. OSGOOD

P. S. I would like to mention the conductor's name on Number 34, coming into Pittsburgh on January 24, 1924. It is J. B. Kist. He seemed to have a very pleasant, kindly personality, the kind which wins friends for the road. And by the way, I write this note to you because I saw a copy of your Magazine on the dining car.

Electrification of Staten Island Lines

ARRANGEMENTS are now being made for the electrification of our Staten Island lines. This improvement has been under consideration for a number of years, but the matter was brought to a head by the passage of an act by the New York Legislature in 1923 requiring the electrification of all railroad lines within the limits of New York City on or before January 1, 1926. Detail plans are being prepared for the first unit of this work, which will comprise the line from St. George to South Beach and Tottenville, a distance of approximately 16.5 miles. The equipment will be of the most modern type, and very similar to that used on the Brooklyn-Manhattan transit lines.

In this connection it is interesting to point out that the Baltimore and Ohio was the first railroad in this country to use electric locomotives for hauling trains, the first trip over the Baltimore Belt Line being made June 27, 1894.

H. A. LANE, Chief Engineer

Transportation Department

BUSINESS is increasing, and the car surplus has been practically wiped out.

Special efforts should be made to speed up the movement of loaded and empty cars.

Loaded cars should be placed promptly for unloading, with immediate notice given to consignees.

Cars released from inbound loads and not required for immediate outbound loading should be promptly moved from siding or warehouse to train yards for forwarding to stations in immediate need of equipment.

OPPORTUNITIES for securing business knock at our door daily.

Recently I met the traffic manager of a large concern in Cincinnati, who was going to Pittsburgh via a competing line. I asked him why not use the Baltimore and Ohio and his reply was that he did not know we had service to Pittsburgh. I gave him time of trains, etc., and told him that if he was not perfectly satisfied with our service, after a trial, I would pay his fare. Now, we must not only secure the traffic but we must give service that satisfies. I know we can do it.

"Close Harmony"—So to Speak

THE following is the leading item in the front page of an extremely clever department called "Gregg's Gyration" in the February issue of the National Hotel Reporter:

"There is no better train running from Chicago to Washington than the 'Capitol Limited' on the Baltimore and Ohio. There has been a complete metamorphosis in every department of the road since Daniel Willard became president. The Baltimore and Ohio passes through a beautiful country, the roadbed is well-nigh perfect, and the equipment and service testify that the officials are paying attention to every detail. Even the most critical cannot but be impressed by the dining car service of the Railroad. The food does not taste as though it has been manufactured, but is well seasoned and perfectly prepared. There is one steward by the name of J. C. Spengler—so the menu said. A traveller likes to know the name of a steward who is so courteous, attentive and able as he. He is interested, but not obsequious and has the tact to make one feel welcome without making himself obtrusive.

"Mr. C. W. Galloway, the vice-president in charge of operation and maintenance, says that they feel they have a genius in E. V. Baugh, the manager of their dining cars and commissary. Not only has Mr. Baugh given the greatest satisfaction in his particular job, but he has built up this service until it is a big business in itself. The result of his work is shown by the fact that the Baltimore and Ohio has just ordered five new dining cars to take care of their increased business.

"When a big official commends one of his assistants in such a manner one feels that two good men are under consideration."

High praise indeed from the paper of an organization whose specialty is fine food!

Locomotives of 1838

BULLETIN Number 6, issued by the Railway and Locomotive Historical Society, gives a list of the locomotives reported to the Congress of the United States in the year 1838; this including stationary and steamboat as well as railroad engines. The number of railway locomotives was about 350 owned by 54 railroads and with 39 builders, 11 of whom were English. There were 3,000 engines all told.

The largest owning railroad was the Philadelphia and Columbia with 34, the South Carolina Canal and Railroad Company being next with 27 and the Baltimore and Ohio being next with 18.

When it is considered that the Tom Thumb, Peter Cooper's first American locomotive, was tried out in 1830 on the Baltimore and Ohio, it is interesting to note how rapid was the progress in locomotive building during the succeeding eight years.

North Baltimore, Ohio

THE Radebaugh Hatchery and Poultry Yards at North Baltimore, Ohio, has recently issued an attractive circular covering its business, together with instructions as to care of chickens, shipment, etc., and in its foreword says:

"Our chicks are shipped parcel post over the Baltimore and Ohio System, the best and fastest trunk line in existence today."

Our North Baltimore folks are live wires!

Big Special Movement

READERS of the MAGAZINE will recall a story about the handling of the Chicago Opera Company on the Baltimore and Ohio about a year ago. The Opera Company is using two special trains over our lines again this year. They are making a trip from Coast to Coast, which commenced January 28, and they will return to Chicago on March 23.

Division Passenger Agent P. C. Benedict, Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago, accompanies the party throughout their trip and has charge of all transportation arrangements, cooperating with the officers of the Opera Company.

The Baltimore and Ohio transported the Opera Company over its lines, commencing February 15, from Cleveland to Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh to Detroit and Detroit to Cincinnati.

At Cincinnati the Opera Company was turned over to connecting lines for further movement.

Record from first trip, May 13, to March 1, 1924

Want to Help Get Business? Magazine Correspondents Suggest Dozens of Interesting New Ways

(The Editor of the Magazine recently asked all correspondents to report on what they had done in the way of individual business solicitation for the Railroad. Almost all correspondents responded promptly, thus indicating that they are making an individual effort to do what they are asking all employees to do. Some of the stories appeared in the February issue, some are here, and there will be more in the next issue. If you have a new business getting idea the Magazine will be glad if you will send it in and thus help put this big campaign across)

EVERYONE can boost the Baltimore and Ohio. We have the SERVICE.

I have had about ten years' experience as a ticket clerk and I know that every ticket and freight man can get more business by asking our patrons to use Baltimore and Ohio all the way where possible. They should give us the long haul. This can always be arranged in selling tickets by good salesmanship, and it can be done without taking extra time or effort.

Friendly and courteous treatment to our patrons makes many friends and costs us nothing.

OFTEN I meet people who are using service other than ours, and, of course, Baltimore and Ohio service is diplomatically brought to their attention. Last week a gentleman stopped me in front of a hotel in Pittsburgh and asked how to get to the station of one of our competitors. Having given this information, I asked his destination and found he was going to Washington. I persuaded him to use our No. 18, relieved him of one of his bags and walked to our station with him, where he purchased ticket and berth on our train.

THROUGH the efforts of the Traffic Department we were given a trial shipment from an industry located on main line of a competing line and a branch of another competing line. We promised about third morning delivery to connections in Chicago. Through the cooperation of our yard and dispatcher's offices it required only 18 hours from time car was delivered from connection until it was delivered to connection at Chicago.

A second car followed two days later and was given still better service, requiring only 15 hours.

ENGINEER SIMON GALLIVAN secured two passengers to Philadelphia recently. While in Chillicothe, he heard two men planning to go to Columbus to catch a competing train for Philadelphia. He stopped and inquired if he could be of any service. The men told him what they desired to do and Mr. Gallivan persuaded them to use Baltimore and Ohio Train 2.

CASHIER Jos. Weingates is a good solicitor. Some time ago he personally asked the head of a fertilizer company for business formerly handled by our competitors. We now get all the phosphate rock used by this firm, approximately 100 cars per year. We have also handled the first car of acid to be received by this company, and will get about 40 cars a year.

Bill Clerk Charles Abele secured 30 cars of stone for Jackson, Mich., over our road to Toledo, which was formerly handled by a competitor. In addition he secured all the carload beverage business from here to Wheeling, which has—to date—amounted to 35 cars.

Many passengers who went south via Baltimore and Ohio last year are again using our line this year. When we hear they are ready to leave we call on them and get their permission to route our way.

Conductor Dave Magill on a recent occasion noticed an empty double door car at the platform at Sandusky, Ohio, and told Agent McKee that if he could put it on his train, he would take it to Plymouth, Ohio, and get a load from there to California. With this car in his train Conductor Magill was able to secure the business, the revenue for which amounted to $300. If we all showed the eagerness of Conductor Magill and Agent McKee to so promptly meet the demand for certain types of cars the revenues of the Company would be somewhat larger at least.

Tries for Advertising—Gets Orders for Freight

ONE of our most conscientious correspondents tried to interest the proprietor of a large merchandising store in Baltimore in using our MAGAZINE for his advertising. There were certain good reasons why this man could not see his way clear at the time to do this, but he did the next best thing, as may be seen from the following letter:

BALTIMORE, MD., February 8, 1924

Dear Mr. Blank:

Have instructed our shipping department to use Baltimore and Ohio as far as possible for freight shipments.

Your loyalty to your road also prompted me to make a personal request to our buyer that he instruct manufacturers to ship or route via Baltimore and Ohio when possible.

AM using some of our pamphlets on The Capitol Limited to good advantage.

Our freight office is over a mile from the passenger station and by using the telephone and our literature we secure passenger business.

JUST before Christmas I learned that one of my neighbors contemplated a trip to New York. Next morning, before coming to work, I stopped in to see what her ideas on railroads were and I found she always used a competitor. However, I persuaded her to use our line and on returning from the office that evening left a time table at her door, marking thereon the New York trains in both directions so she would have no trouble. She, in turn, persuaded two of her friends to go our way to New York and I feel sure therefore that we have secured three new customers.

I MAKE it a point to talk Baltimore and Ohio to someone at every public gathering I attend, whether there are three persons or three hundred present. I find that people are much interested in our train service and begin to tell about how comfortably and dependably they can get from one place to another. They always have relations they would like to visit in a distant city, a vacation or business trip in prospect. I make it my business to find out what place interests them and then I either tell them what service we have or secure the information and give it to them later.

F. G. MENSCH, claim clerk, Canton, has secured a number of routing orders, covering inbound business for Canton, as follows: two cars beverage, during winter, and ten cars in summer, from East St. Louis. Two cars of registers from St. Paul, Minn. One car furniture from Grand Rapids, Mich., one from Columbus, S. C., one from Ypsilanti, Mich., one from Columbus, S. C., and two from Michigan City, Ind. One car salmon from Baltimore, Md., to Wheeling, W. Va.

K. C. Row Lee, chief clerk, Canton, has been instrumental in diverting some passenger traffic from competing lines to Pittsburgh and Columbus. Representatives of the La Salle Extension, traveling from Akron to Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh to Cincinnati and return to Columbus were looking over competing line timetables. Mr. Row Lee suggested they use our line. After securing time of our trains, they promised to use Baltimore and Ohio.

I asked him why not use our line, explaining connections, etc., and am convinced his next trip will be our way. I am also employed in the evenings in a theatre and often have an opportunity to speak a good word for the Baltimore and Ohio, securing information for different people as to connections, etc.

THE management does not ask employees to make a drive for business after their hours of duty, but there are times when it can be secured by just saying a good word for our Road. For example, a few days ago an employee waiting for a car overheard a conversation between two traveling salesmen who were also waiting. They wanted to go to a point located on this division, reached also by traction line. One of the gentlemen said there was a train on the Baltimore and Ohio at 5.35 p. m. but it did not stop, and that it was the last train that evening. The employee hearing this, introduced himself as an employee of the Baltimore and Ohio. He was well posted on train schedules and told them a train left at 7.55 p. m., which stopped at the station to which they wished to go. They thanked him and decided to wait for this train. This illustrates what can be accomplished if every employee will keep constantly before him the business getting idea.

At Clarksburg

MANY of our contributors are fond of referring to our friends in West Virginia as coming from or going to "The Sticks." Be this as it may, it is certain that our West Virginia friends are true blue "rooters" for the Baltimore and Ohio. Witness the following scene in Clarksburg station a few days ago:

A passenger asks for a ticket to Pittsburgh and inquires as to connections he can make from there to Detroit via a competing line. When his final destination was discovered, the good salesmanship of our ticket agent resulted in a ticket being sold to Detroit via Cincinnati and the Baltimore and Ohio, thus giving us the "long haul."

A few minutes later two passengers, who are going to a station in New Jersey, ask for tickets to Washington, stating they will transfer to a competing road there. Again our friend in "The Sticks" shows his good salesmanship. He tells them where our station is located in Philadelphia, how they can transfer there without serious inconvenience, with the result that two tickets are sold to Philadelphia instead of to Washington.

That's the kind of "salesmanship" we like to see. Our friends in Clarksburg are doing their share to increase the traffic on THEIR road, and the MAGAZINE is pleased to give them full credit. Who's next?

Traffic Solicitation

By D. E. SULLIVAN, Division Freight Agent, Chicago Division

This entry was awarded third place in the contest on "Traffic Solicitation" concluded in December

THE railroad solicitor, both freight and passenger, is none other than a salesman of service.

As the success of the commercial salesman depends on his intimate knowledge of the merchandise he offers and the intelligent manner in which he places it before the buying public, so too the railroad solicitor must know the various kinds of service his railroad offers and bring them understandingly before the shipping and traveling public.

A railroad solicitor comes in contact with the shipper of the product of mine, field and forest; with the manufacturer of every known article of commerce as well as the general traveling public, and therefore should keep well brushed up on important current topics.

Neat appearance, pleasing personality, tact and diplomacy in approaching prospective shippers and passengers are always winning points in salesmanship.

The solicitor should be thoroughly posted not only on the particular service he has to offer for the handling of a passenger or any particular commodity but likewise be conversant with:

- (a) Rates and Fares.
- (b) Routes and Junctions with connecting lines, if destination is not on our road.
- (c) Time required to reach destination.
- (d) In the case of freight whether delivery could be effected on other roads' tracks at common points by switching, and could such switching charges be absorbed—or should such terminal road be given a road haul?
- (e) Should know to what extent the routing on bill of lading determines this.
- (f) Should be familiar with rules and regulations covering Diversions, Reconsigning, Milling-in-transit, Car Service Rules, etc., in the case of freight, and with all forms of tickets, stop-over, etc., in the case of passenger solicitation.

Lack of knowledge is a serious handicap when such questions are put to the solicitor. He loses a golden opportunity to make a "sale" when he confesses, "I don't know but will 'phone the general office and find out."

The shipper usually has no time to waste with such a solicitor and, worst of all, he loses confidence in him afterwards.

The writer was once favored with ten carloads of high class freight by a shipper who had persistently refused for some months previous to favor the Baltimore and Ohio, by giving that shipper certain information "on the spot" that had to be "looked up" by the representative of the railroad then being favored with his business.

The railroad solicitor who keeps equipped with a general knowledge of the many details surrounding the packing and shipping of freight, time schedules of quick dispatch trains, etc., can usually approach the best posted shipping clerk or traffic manager and offer his roads' service with confidence of getting consideration.

From confidence comes courage and in courage lie all the elements of success.

Make yourself indispensable to your shipping and traveling friends by becoming dependable. Why do so many shippers and travelers ask for a certain solicitor, often even when such solicitor does not cover the territory where the inquiry comes from! It is because he has proved himself dependable.

The railroad solicitor should impress the shipper of freight, as well as the prospective passenger, with the dependable features of his railroad.

The Baltimore and Ohio has numerous dependable qualities—they are strong selling points and should be emphasized all possible.

Shippers and travelers judge railroads by certain standards, and here the solicitor can be a big asset to his railroad. Study carefully the likes and dislikes of methods of operation of your railroad. Complaints, no matter how seemingly trivial, should be given prompt and courteous attention.

Constructive criticism is always welcomed by your supervising officers.

Never promise in excess of your ability to fulfill.

Getting a carload of freight or a passenger or two by misrepresenting facts, thus misleading the shipper or passenger, is the worst kind of solicitation and only destroys that precious selling point—DEPENDABILITY.

A good thing to keep in mind is this: When you get a carload of freight or a passenger for the Baltimore and Ohio your interest in that shipper or passenger has only begun and should not end until the shipment or passenger entrusted to your care has been given proper attention. Furthermore it is a good thing upon your next call on the shipper or passenger to show continued interest by asking if service proved satisfactory.

Everyone has a hobby of some kind and it is not a bad plan to study those of your shipping and traveling friends. The writer once secured a nice shipment of high class freight by merely complimenting the traffic manager on his good judgment in buying a certain make of automobile. (His auto was his hobby.)

Never give up, no matter how discouraging!

I once called upon a shipper regularly for some three months before I was able to win his favor for the Baltimore and Ohio. I finally won. This shipper afterwards used to joke me about how he invariably "caved in" to persistent efforts.

Finally—never knock your competitor to a prospective shipper or passenger!

Your job is to show that your service is superior to the other fellow's. Above all, never criticize your officers or their methods to a shipper or passenger. If you do you immediately discount your own prestige.

Let DEPENDABILITY be your watchword—it is easily acquired. Now let's go!

Service "Worthy of the Highest Commendation"

HERE follows copy of a letter received from the Bureau of Mines under date of February 5, in connection with the handling of their mine rescue car from Bureau of Mines siding to the Pennsylvania Railroad at 33rd St., Pittsburgh, Pa.:

"On January 26 the Mine Safety Service Division of the Bureau of Mines received an urgent call for assistance following the occurrence of a serious mine explosion which was reported to have entombed 49 men at Shanktown, Pa. I immediately called your office requesting that Bureau of Mines rescue car Holmes, carrying a crew of men, be moved from the Bureau of Mines siding near the Forbes St. tunnel and transferred to the 33rd St. yard of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for movement by special train to the scene of the disaster.

"I am addressing you at this time to express the sincere appreciation of the Bureau of Mines as well as my own great appreciation of the prompt and efficient service rendered by your office and by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company employees who made the transfer of the car to the Pennsylvania Railroad yard.

"As a result of the service rendered by the Baltimore and Ohio Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company the Bureau of Mines rescue crew and apparatus were delivered at the mine in a remarkably short time, and the personnel of the Bureau of Mines was able to render valuable assistance in the rescue and recovery operations.

"Such services as were rendered by the railroad companies in connection with this disaster are worthy of the highest commendation."

This letter was addressed to Superintendent Booth, of the Pittsburgh Terminals. The car was delivered to the Pennsylvania about 7.30 p. m., January 26.

It must be extremely gratifying to the employees who handled this movement to note that their extraordinary effort to speed the car to the scene of the disaster, and their unselfish interest in the welfare of the other fellow, have brought this prompt recognition, more than repaying for the effort made.

WASHINGTON

A city of wondrous beauty and fascination

A NOBLE creation of the American Republic, no other city in the world surpasses Washington in grandeur and physical beauty. The wide, quiet, wooded avenues; the broad Potomac Mall; the charming circles and parks; the noble memorials and monuments; the palatial homes and embassies—these are only a few of the interesting scenes in Washington.

Here are the great halls of Congress in the Capitol, the Congressional Library; the Treasury; the National Museum and Smithsonian Institute, full of interest and instruction.

To go through the White House; to see the Washington Monument; to linger on the threshold of the Lincoln Memorial and gaze inside upon the heroic statue of the man it honors; to make your pilgrimage to the tomb of Washington at Mt. Vernon—these are experiences every American owes to himself and his children.

"See Mecca and die" is the prayer of the Mohammedan. "See Washington and live" is the aspiration of more and more Americans. The humblest citizen is welcome here.

Much of interest about the National Capital, its history and attractions, are set forth in the "Guide to Washington," issued by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Mailed free to any address on receipt of coupon below.

See Washington the Convenient Way

The fact that the Baltimore & Ohio is the only route east and west between New York, Chicago and St. Louis, passing directly through Washington, makes it possible for the traveler to see Washington conveniently and without extra cost. Liberal stopover privilege accorded.

"On to Washington" Advertising Campaign Resumed in National Magazines

BEGINNING the latter part of January, the Passenger Department renewed its campaign to attract business over the Baltimore and Ohio to Washington, the National Capitol city and called the most beautiful city in the world.

A half dozen different pieces of "copy" are being used, each showing some characteristic and charming vista immediately recognized as having its setting in the Capitol city. The different pictures are attractively described and each advertisement contains a coupon addressed to W. B. Calloway, passenger traffic manager, through the use of which the interested reader may secure, without charge, a copy of the 48-page Guide to Washington published by the Railroad.

This series of advertisements is scheduled for February, March and April in The Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Literary Digest, American Magazine and National Geographic.

The Baltimore and Ohio is the only railroad which runs east and west through Washington. It is the hub of our System in so far as passenger business is concerned and there is no other spot in the country which has as strong and enduring appeal to the patriotic interest of the American citizen as has this city, in which centers the most important governmental activities of the nation.

The Baltimore and Ohio is making a direct contribution to better citizenship through its effort to interest all classes of people in the Capitol city, for a visit there cannot be made without returning to the visitor an increased respect for the founders of the Republic, a greater interest in our history and a more profound devotion to the nation's ideals.

There are many ways in which employees at large on the Railroad can supplement the work being done by this advertising through their personal efforts. There are few employees who do not belong to some fraternal or social organization. What finer outing could be suggested to such an organization than one of the all-expense tours under Baltimore and Ohio direction to Washington? All of us have friends who would be interested in helpful hints as to where they can most profitably spend their vacations or part of their vacations. Why not Washington, city of equable climate, endowed by nature with an unusual beauty, and offering unlimited attractions in its landmarks of national progress and the many shrines of patriotism there present on every hand.

The Passenger Department will be glad to send to any employee interesting literature describing the Capitol city in the hope that it may be profitably used in securing

Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club in Indiana Makes Remarkable Showing

Exhibit the Feature of State Potato Show at Purdue University

By O. K. QUIVEY, General Agricultural Agent, Commercial Development Department

THROUGH the Commercial Development Department 250 Indiana farmer boys were enrolled last spring in The Baltimore and Ohio Potato Clubs. To each boy the Baltimore and Ohio gave four bushels of high quality certified seed potatoes which were brought in from the Northwest. Instructions concerning planting, cultivating and harvesting were given by representatives of the Purdue University Agricultural Extension Service and representatives of our own Agricultural Bureau.

A series of twenty-three county potato shows was held in the late summer and early fall, thus permitting the 250 Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club members to exhibit their best potatoes in friendly competition. The Railroad gave cash prizes in each county, and required that at least the winner and as many more as desired in each county exhibit their potatoes at The Fourth Annual Indiana Potato Show, Purdue University, week of January 14.

Feature of Show

The Baltimore and Ohio Potato Clubs' Exhibit, consisting of 64 individual exhibits, while representing only a small part of the hundreds of exhibits at the State

From the records of 250 Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club members in twenty counties in Indiana it is estimated that a total of 11,780 bushels of potatoes were produced at an estimated total cost of production of $3,752, an estimated sale price of $13,532 and an estimated net profit of $9,960 which profit was secured on a total of 62½ acres of ground. The average yield per acre was 200 bushels, which is most gratifying in contrast to the average yield for the State of 75 to 100 bushels per acre. John DeWitt, Auburn, Ind., secured the highest individual yield, namely, 416 bushels per acre.

Show, was easily the outstanding feature of the Fourth Annual Indiana Potato Show and the winners were arrived at on the basis of—yield, 30 per cent; cost of production, 20 per cent; record book, 25 per cent.; and exhibit, 25 per cent.

PRIZE WINNERS

First.....	$100 Scholarship	Henry DeLong.....	Waterloo, Ind.
Second.....	$ 25 Cash	Irma Knable.....	New Albany, Ind.
Third.....	$ 15 Cash	Cecil Sherman.....	Auburn, Ind.
Fourth.....	$ 10 Cash	John DeWitt.....	Auburn, Ind.

Eighth.....	Premium ribbon	Clyde May.....	Seymour, Ind.

The Baltimore and Ohio offered a series of prizes, which were won by those shown in the accompanying table.

Baltimore and Ohio Club Member Wins Sweepstakes

Frank Kelley, New Albany, Ind., a Floyd County Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club member, though not a winner of one of the Baltimore and Ohio prizes, was awarded sweepstakes for showing the best peck of potatoes exhibited in the Fourth Annual Indiana Potato Show. His peck of potatoes were grown from the certified seed furnished him by the Baltimore and Ohio, but unfortunately he did not secure nearly so high a yield as was secured by many of the other club members, and this affected his total score to such a degree that he was not "in the money," in spite of the fact that he scored the highest on "exhibit," being given 24.5 out of a possible 25 points. The Indiana Potato Show provided three distinct classes for exhibitors—Commercial Growers' Class, Farmers' Class, Club Members' Class. In spite of the very stiff competition offered by the commercial and farmer exhibitors Frank Kelley won sweepstakes over all classes.

Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club Exhibit, Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana, January 14-18, 1924

Frank Kelly, New Albany, Indiana, whose peck of potatoes, produced from Baltimore and Ohio Certified Potato Seed, was declared by the judges the best peck at the Fourth Annual Indiana Potato Show. The peck of high quality potatoes shown is Mr. Kelly's and he won in competition with hundreds of others, including many experienced adult potato growers

Winning Pecks to Officials

Frank Kelley's Sweepstakes Peck was shipped to Vice-President George M. Shriver, while Henry DeLong's peck, which won the Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship, was shipped to Vice-President Archibald Fries. Each vice-president lives on his own farm in Maryland, and both have signified their intention of planting these potatoes and themselves engaging in friendly competition with the young potato growers in the Hoosier State.

Next year, at the Fifth Annual Indiana Potato Show, perhaps there will be exhibits of some of Messrs. Shriver and Fries Maryland potatoes grown from the seed stock produced by the Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club members in Indiana.

Following is a list of the exhibitors, together with the score received by each club member:

The Weighing Bureau, Transportation Department, extends thanks to agents and station forces for the commendable work done in check-weighing and revising classification of inbound and transfer L. C. L. freight by which revenue for the Company was increased $69,181.97 in the year 1923, or 24.43% more than in the year 1922. In a general way it can be said this work is well organized at the principal important terminal stations, but there are many country stations and towns where it is believed more check-weighing can be done and that the revenue from this source can be still further increased in 1924.

Check-weighing carload freight (other than coal and coke traffic) received from connecting railroads on waybills which did not show definitely that authorized weights had been used in the year 1923 showed a decrease of 52.17% in the number of cars check-weighed and a falling off in the increases in revenue from this source of 44.22% as compared with the record for 1922. We would like to think this is due to the subject of weights receiving closer attention on foreign railroads, but it is feared, and the indications are, that those charged with examining waybills for such cars received from connecting railroads are overlooking the subject to see that authorized weights are shown on waybills, and if not, are failing to have cars check-weighed at the inter-change station if there is a scale, or if not, to attach Form 346-K (scale card) to waybill to have such cars check-weighed at a distant scale enroute to destination.

Accurate tare weights have an important bearing on revenue, particularly tare weights of coal cars which lose in weight as the years go by. In this respect it can be said Baltimore and Ohio equipment is well up-to-date, and it is hoped efforts will not be relaxed to keep tare weights up-to-date and accurate. It possible, where it can be done with economy, we should help other railroads that send their coal cars regularly to Baltimore and Ohio mines for return coal loading, to keep their tare weights up-to-date and accurate.

A. E. DAY, Chief of Weighing Bureau

Vacation Friend Proves Her Business Benefactor

LAST summer a stenographer in the District Freight Office, Baltimore, and a girl friend met the traffic manager of a very large manufacturing concern of McKeesport, Pa., while they were spending a part of their vacation at Mountain Lake Park. He proved a very interesting companion in that lovely country. Our stenographer told him how much she would appreciate his sending some business over the Baltimore and Ohio, and during the month of January, her wishes came true. For the traffic manager wrote her on not less than three occasions, giving her car numbers and destinations of 16 cars all told, routed over the Baltimore and Ohio, and cars which represented business which previously had moved over competing railroads.

In one of his letters the manager said in effect: "Don't let your people tell you that they would have gotten this business anyway, for we could have sent it just as conveniently over another railroad."

Sixteen cars of freight to the credit of just one little lady who is employed in the office of District Freight Agent E. S. King, Baltimore! What wonderful opportunities there are for all of us to get business for the Railroad if we will make the business getting idea instinctive with us!

A Wide-Awake Agent

LITTLE out-of-the-ordinary things that can be done by employees to sell our service are well illustrated by the following, a sign made by Agent Strode and hung in his station:

Mason City, W. Va., 7-21-23

Traveling Salesmen (Knights of the Grip) and All Concerned:

We have on hand stock of fifteen ($15.00) and thirty ($30.00) script books. We are here at any time to serve you. If we please you, recommend the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to your friends; if not, tell us. Try a good meal in any Baltimore and Ohio Dining Car. Smile and remember "The Careful Crossing Campaign."

Thomas Fitzgerald Now General Manager, Pittsburgh Railways Company

MANY of our employes and especially those who knew our late general manager, Thomas Fitzgerald, will be interested in knowing that his son, who also has many friends on the Baltimore and Ohio, has recently been appointed general manager of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, the appointment having been made by A. W. Thompson, formerly vice-president of Traffic and Commercial Development of our Railroad and now president of the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

Mr. Fitzgerald was graduated from Johns Hopkins University in 1898 and has spent practically his entire career in the employ of electric railway systems. He was an Army officer during the war.

Business-Getting the Theme of the Evening at Martinsburg Veterans' Banquet

NEVER was there an evening's program of the Veterans filled to the brim with business getting as was this one at Martinsburg on January 26. Many among our Baltimore and Ohio officers were present to help the Martinsburgers devour the delectable dainties as well as the substantial viands prepared by the members of the George M. Shriver Auxiliary, of which Mrs. C. E. Auld is president.

The party began at half-past seven. There were visitors galore. The tables were filled in a jiffy, and the party was well under way in a few moments. Candles and flowers decorated the long tables, and pickles, jellies, assorted meats, baked beans and celery, salads and deviled eggs, hot rolls and slaw, ice cream and coffee threatened to break the legs of the tables.

Vice-President Shriver and Brother Sturmer ran a race in trying to get away with the baked beans, and Old Man Fletcher drank two pots of coffee. Vice-President Galloway's smile caused a considerable amount of fletcherizing, and Brother W. W. Wood rubbed his silver locks in despair when the gravy ladle struck bottom. Sister Lewis and Sister Howard divided up the biscuits while John Michael Garvey's unmitigated tears flowed down his biled shirt when Brother W. J. Dudley reached for his favorite cut of fowl. Sister Garvey did full justice to the bouquets of celery, while Sister Wallburg failed to speak a word (she was too busy). General Superintendent Van Horn and Superintendent Brown were seized with fear and trembling lest they should later be called upon to deliver addresses, while General Manager Scheer sat undaunted and unhaunted and sawed away on a hambone.

The Martinsburg reverends were there to add their grace to the food and their yarns to the general merriment. Brother Fauver, president of the Martinsburg Veterans, was in his glory; Sister and Brother Auld went here and there making strangers welcome, as did also Sisters Van Horn and Burkhardt. Ray Russler's golden hair glistened in the glare of electric lights, and Brother Tabb discussed the merits of Tennyson with a maid of uncertain age. Senator Faulkner reigned king of the evening and played the part of the distinguished southern gentleman that he is.

Especially attractive were the women of the Martinsburg Auxiliary, each in a pretty apron of original design, who served the banquet. Daddy Harrigan and Brother Wardley were there from Connellsville. Miss Vada Pearl Drumm, Cumberland, gave several delightful solos, as did Mr. Troxell, also of Cumberland, accompanied by Miss Croggan. The quartettes from the United Brethren Church sang a number of pleasing selections.

The following officers of the Veterans Association of Martinsburg were installed for the year: President, H. W. Fauver; vice-president, Raymond Russler; secretary, C. E. Auld; financial secretary, C. B. Britt; treasurer, J. M. Aldridge; sergeant-at-arms, G. G. Kilmer; grand lodge representative, Raymond Russler. Grand President Sturmer installed the officers. President Fauver made a speech of acceptance, urging all to work for peace and harmony, friendship and sociability, and that co-operation be made the watchword of the Association. He urged all employees to get business and he paid a tribute to the brothers who have died during the past ten years. Their names follow:

J. C. Hutsler; J. S. Herrington; Frank Kearnes; J. H. Orem; A. J. Ringier; S. B. Smith; John W. Myers; Wm. Westrader; A. D. McDonald; Thos. A. Knuckles; G. R. Kindle; G. A. McDonald; Robert Keller; R. C. McGowan; D. A. McGinnis; C. C. Wise; Jos. E. Cox; T. E. Auld; D. F. Drenner; G. W. Dolwick; T. B. Chambers; C. W. Lowery; H. D. Airhart; W. E. Baker;

J. D. Burch; E. S. Barton; Z. T. Brantner; C. Grimes; E. B. Duvall; F. W. Trout; F. T. Brantner; J. H. C. Dailey; Joseph Show; E. A. Bowers; W. H. C. House; P. J. Shriver; J. W. Light; H. L. Marshall; J. W. Davis; Goe. Hobday; S. Scandlon; F. S. Gettle; E. B. Doyle; J. N. Linthecum; Lewis Dugan; John Young; C. R. Burkhart; E. E. Peacher; W. H. Rothe; W. A. Burkhart; John O'Leary; N. Olinger; Geo. Meadows; S. W. Walker; A. O. Tederick; M. Furr; James Powell; D. Connors.

Senior Vice-President Shriver, although declaring himself "too full for utterance," talked on many subjects which lay near to the hearts of Baltimore and Ohio employees. He spoke of the memorial service for, and paid a tribute to the late Superintendent of Shops Z. T. Brantner. He complimented the ladies of the Auxiliary and their culinary abilities. Said he, "I have never met apples and mutton under such delightful circumstances until this evening." He spoke of the naming of the Auxiliary in his honor, and of the lovely birthday cake which had been sent him. He talked of the progress of the Baltimore and Ohio, of its volume of business, of improvements and earnings, of the value of transportation service to the farmer, and of his pleasure and appreciation at being present.

At the conclusion of his address, Mrs. C. E. Auld, president of the Ladies Auxiliary, presented Mr. Shriver with a huge basket of Berkeley County apples, "the best in the land."

Vice-President Galloway spoke of the Veterans Association and of his early membership, of the work of the organization. "Without the Baltimore and Ohio there would be no veterans, and without the Veterans there would be no Baltimore and Ohio," he said, "and some of the things that make the Baltimore and Ohio conspicuous in the railroad world today are due to the spirit of hearty cooperation and support of the Veterans, and the good feeling that exists among employees and toward the Railroad. I have been with the Railroad all of Mr. Shriver's 38 years and two more, and never in all this time have I seen a better spirit than that which exists today; 'day by day it's getting better and better.' Where good spirit does not prevail there is no success."

Mr. Galloway spoke of present conditions on the railroad and the need of more business to take care of the idle cars and locomotives. He explained how furloughs are enforced as the result of lack of business, and not through any desire on the part of the officers.

At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Galloway presented a 50-year service button to E. C. Gletner, former foreman of a coal tippie. "You are still a very young man," said Mr. Galloway, "and you must have found the Baltimore and Ohio good to work for. They, too, must have found you good, or you would not have stayed."

May you live as long as you want, and never want while you live."

General Manager Scheer expressed his appreciation of the loyalty and whole-hearted support of the employes during the past year. He urged everybody to get business, and expressed the hope that a season of business solicitation on the part of employes might result in bringing all the white-leaded engines into service.

President of Veterans Fauver then made a motion, which was unanimously adopted, that each employe do his utmost to get these engines back into service. Grand President Sturmer urged strong support of the business getting campaign, and also spoke of increasing the membership in the Veterans' Association.

Nor were the ladies to be outdone, for when Grand President Mrs. Frank Howard, of Newark, Ohio, arose, she added her voice to tell the women that they, too, could help get business for the Baltimore and Ohio. Mr. Sturmer read letters from President Willard and from Hon. Newton D. Baker, expressing their best wishes for the success of the banquet and regretting their inability to attend.

Grand-Vice President of Veterans J. M. Garvey and Mrs. Garvey, of Wheeling, both urged the necessity of business getting. Mrs. Charles W. Lewis of the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary, Baltimore, added her plea along the same line, as also did P. J. (Daddy) Harrigan, of Connellsville. Mrs. Lewis also told of the excellent work of the Baltimore Auxiliary, of the mask ball, the memorial service, of addresses by the clergy, the annual luncheon, and of the work done by the members for the Florence Crittendon Mission.

Mrs. Barnette, president of the Cumberland Auxiliary, and Mrs. Menafec were guests from Cumberland.

The women who prepared the banquet deserve much credit. It involved much hard work, not only in the preparation of the dinner but in carrying the dishes from the station to the hall, in bringing other dishes and utensils from their own homes and in the splendid preparations made for serving the meal.

Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1, Baltimore, Md.

Correspondent, MRS. CHARLES SHIPLEY, Past President

I WONDER if we all appreciate our Baltimore and Ohio as we ought to? Every Baltimore and Ohio man and his wife can do his part in getting business for it. More business means more work, and more work means more employes and better conditions for everybody.

In the six years that I have been the presiding officer of this auxiliary it has been a labor of love. I want to thank the ladies for their kindness in presenting me with the lovely cameo pin watch. I shall always appreciate it and regard it as one of my sweetest memories.

We have elected Mrs. W. Williams to the president's chair for the ensuing year.

We have given her a good staff of officers and we feel sure that she will do the rest.

Our lodge has grown so rapidly that we now have a board of directors also to help take care of our business. Recently we raffled a centerpiece and made thereon the sum of $200, without any great amount of work on the part of any one person. We have over $500 now in the treasury to feed the "girls and boys." And oh, how they do love to eat.

The Veterans have elected a new staff of officers for 1924, and we expect to cooperate with them to the limit.

The Garrett Veterans Find the Fountain of Youth in the Old Fashioned Dance

By AUNT MARY

THE other day I says to my Ezra, "Ezra," says I, "I'm plannin' to take a trip west. I'm so tired o' settin' round here an' lookin' at you that I believe 'twould do us both good if I'd take a vacation."

"Humph! Rats in the garret!" says Ezra, layin' down his newspaper an' takin' his cornob pipe out of his mouth.

"Might be," says I, "but I'll bet there aint no rats in Garrett, Indiana."

"So that's where you're goin,' is it? Well, why didn't you say so first? That's a quiet sort of a one-hoss town. Might do you good to go there. Go ahead."

"One-hoss, is it?" I yells, "I'll have you know they've got a taxicab there—a real, honest-to-goodness taxi, what you can hire any day, 'ceptin' the days on which they have weddings on hand! Why, they've got lots o' streets an' a fine high school, an' a city hall, an' a fire department, an' what more do you want? One-hoss, indeed!"

So I gets out my best Sunday-go-to-meetin' bonnet an' sets out on No. 7 for Garrett. My, you jest orter seen that train crew. Everybody, from the Pullman conductor to the dinin' car man askin' me how is my rheumatiz, etc. The time went flyin' by so fast an' the ridin' so nice an' smooth that 'fore I knowed it the porter was bringin' me my hat an' my gooloshes an' sayin' "Aunt Mary, you'r gittin' into Garrett."

When I stepped off the train there was that little black haired Crow gal, the one what writes fer the MAGAZINE, you know, an' also Alma Elam, both gettin' theirselves ready to take a trip to Chicago. Don't it beat all how gals fly around these days? Wonder who was in Chicago?

The folks in the offices has got the world beat fer hospitality. I met 'em all from the Accountin' Department to the telegraft operators. My, the way them menfolks can send messages! A woman's tongue wouldn't have no show with them. In the midst of the sightseein' tour, along comes Brother Floyd Jones, who at that time was president of the Garrett Veterans, an' decides to look 'em over, too. An' him a Presbyterian deacon! An' oh, yes, you needn't tell, but Bro. Jones had his name at the bottom of the dance program. Glory be, but when they tall, don't they fall hard?

Sister Hopper, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, was on hand to do a lot o' entertainin', an' Sister Wallburg, of Lima, hung on to Brother Hopper like grim death.

The day was a sort of progressive party. At 2.00 p. m. the ladies held their meetin' in the O. R. C. Hall, an' was gettin' along fairly well when some o' the brothers had to stick their heads in an' tell 'em to come along an' go to movies. So to movies they all went, an' a good show it was, too. By that time Sister Howard an' Sister Lewis from Newark had arriv' on the seen, an' also Bro. Sturmer, from Baltimore, the Lings from Willard, an' a lot of other folks from towns along the way, includin' Walkerton an' South Chicago an' Bremen.

Sister Hopper nigh busted up the party when she fell down the steps an' lost her heel, an' her pore husband had to miss  $\frac{3}{4}$  of the show in order to get the shoe mended while you wait.

From the movies the party proceeded to the banquet hall, where we found everything goin' along like clockwork. Hats an' coats were shook off in no time, an' soon everybody settled at the tables an' waited for the blessin' to be said. Veterans colors decorated the tables an' the ceilin', an' the girls who waited on the tables wore aprons of red, yellow or green. Nearly 200 people were there. Among the notables was the followin': Dispatcher "Buck" Harding, an' Ex-trainmaster Eagan, all dressed up in their Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes. Sister Eberley, who's vice-president of the Ladies Auxiliary, an' Mrs. E. Smith, secretary, was happily welcomin' folks to the party. "Pap" Sherwin, crossing watchman, Walkerton, an' Engineer Obern was among the smilin' faces. Engineer Sem-bower also was ready to fill up the inner man, an' there wasn't nobody prouder to be there than Bro. L. D. Hart, of the Capitol Limited. Everybody in town knows that since the beginnin' of the Capitol Limited last May, Cap'n Hart has brung that train into Garrett on time every day 'cept one, an' that was a 4-minute delay over which he didn't have no control. An' the Shultz boys was there with bells on. Says one of 'em to me, "Would you think that my brother could of been sentimental enough to write them love letters to his wife what you published in the MAGAZINE?" An' I says "Yes, after lookin' at him I can b'lieve 'most anything."

Superintendent Hooper asked the blessin' an' ever'body fell to with a will. There was everything that heart an' appetite could wish for. Glory be, they must of killed the old rooster an' a whole flock o' hens, not to mention a coopful of pullets to get all the chicken that they had piled on the plates. An' there was pickles, an' green peas, an' jellies, an' I can't tell what else, 'cept when we got nigh to the end, what did they do but bring on the most wonderful pie as ever you put in your mouth.

Followin' the dinner came the speeches. Bro. Jones told of one of his childhood escapades, of how he snuck out of the house an' went to a dance when he was young, an' how he come nigh gettin' caught by his grandmother. Superintendent Hooper told of the true significance of meetin's like this one, of the pleasure at bein' present; of the part that the wives, mothers an' sweet-hearts play in the lives of the railroaders, an' of his fine appreciation of the Veterans Association.

Brother Sturmer, grand president of Veterans, took "Cooperation" for his theme. He told of the growth of the Veterans' Association, and of the Auxiliary, and urged all to do their utmost to get business in order to get some of the white-leaded engines and idle cars back to work; he thanked the members of the Auxiliary for the fine dinner and complimented the girls who served.

Sister Howard, grand president of the Auxiliary, brought greetin's from the Newark Associations, told of the work there, and extended an invitation to all Veterans to visit Newark. Sister Wallburg added another joke to the collection, and the party was over. The ladies went on to the dance hall, and the brothers held their business meetin' an' elected the followin' officers: President, Roy McKinley; vice-president, H. H. Marsh; secretary, E. E. Smith; treasurer, W. A. Clifford.

An' when the meetin' was over, Brothers an' Sisters, let me tell you that there was one mighty dance. Two fiddlers and Car Foreman Gibson as pianist furnished the music that banished rheumatism an' crutches, gout an' canes. An' they played until they was mighty nigh giv' out. Bro. Jones stood on a box callin' the figgers, an' all the old square dances was revived. Brother McKinley twisted hisself in a double twitch, an' Brother Lightner never could tell when the music stopped. The old fiddler couldn't resist the temptation to put on a real, sho' nuff jig, an' the brothers an' sisters did shore step high, wide an' han'-some.

'Twas long after time when old folks oughter be in bed, but you jest couldn't get 'em to go home until Bro. Shultz started doin' taxi service. Then when they did leave I went investigatin' 'round an'—now don't you go an' tell nobody—I found some Sloans liniment behind the door. In spite o' this, however, there was a sight o' limpin' 'round Garrett the next mornin'.

Mister an' Missus H. J. Ringle, from Bremen, Indiana, was also to the party. Mister Ringle, bein' chief clerk an' accountant at the station at Bremen, was tickled to tell us how much the Bremen Station's earnin's for 1923 amounted to. Can you guess? $359,283.82. Them's the figgers. Mister E. P. Leeper is the agent in charge there.

ent was asked to attend the monthly meetings.

A social meeting was planned for next month. At this meeting, also, a membership drive will be inaugurated.

Visiting Speakers Hobnob with Fairmont Veterans

THE regular meeting of the Fairmont Chapter, Veterans' Association, and the Ladies' Auxiliary, was held in the Knights of Pythias Hall, Fairmont, W. Va., on the evening of January 25. The meeting was well attended and those present heard a musical treat and some good addresses.

Grand President George W. Sturmer, who was introduced by Harry Fletcher, president of the local chapter, told the Veterans how they can be of service to themselves and to the Company. He stressed particularly the importance of everyone doing all possible to secure additional business.

Mrs. F. M. Howard, grand president, Ladies' Auxiliary, Newark, Ohio, explained how the Veterans and Auxiliary conduct their meetings in Newark. She said they hold joint meetings and that this method has proved the best, the attendance being kept up to a much higher percentage. She told of new auxiliaries being organized in Ohio and brought greetings from them to the Fairmont folk.

The next speaker was Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, president, Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary, Baltimore. She explained how meetings are handled in Baltimore. Mrs. Lewis said: "The Veterans and Auxiliary hold separate meetings. The Veterans' organization has a membership of over 1,700, while the Auxiliary has over 300. The men, after they have had their business meeting, have a program, which includes music and dancing, in which the ladies share. The auxiliary always has a prominent speaker." Mrs. Lewis also told of the memorial service recently held by the auxiliary and extended a cordial invitation to local members to visit the Baltimore Auxiliary.

The musical program was interesting and well arranged. It consisted of several songs by Frank Jordan, accompanied on the piano by Miss Miller; instrumental music by Misses Margaret and Eleanor Miller; songs by C. H. Bloom, who was accompanied by his wife on the piano, and a piano solo by Miss Naomi Hecker. Junior and Eugenia Reynolds sang a duet.

The musical program was arranged by Mrs. H. Fleming, chairman, Entertainment Committee, and Mrs. F. M. Wittman, assistant chairman.

After the program, refreshments were served. They were prepared and served by the Veterans and ladies. Harry Fletcher once more proved that he is a good cook; his brew of coffee was delicious. We are told that when Harry makes coffee, he insists on water being supplied from Lloyd Heffner's well and uses Arnold Lloyd as water boy.

Visitors at the meeting included Mr. Sturmer and Mrs. C. W. Lewis, Baltimore;

Mrs. F. M. Howard, Mrs. Chester Lewis, Mrs. R. E. Leonard, Newark, Ohio; Superintendent M. S. Kopp and Frank Keane, Grafton, W. Va.

During the evening a telegram was read from James Aiken expressing regret that he could not be present.

Officers of the Ladies' Auxiliary for 1924 are: president, Mrs. E. Bartlett; vice-president, Mrs. H. G. Fletcher; secretary, Mrs. Jessie Nuzum; treasurer, Mrs. F. M. Wittman; chaplain, Mrs. F. Workman; marshal, Mrs. Harry Fleming; outer guard, Mrs. Margaret Hession; delegate to convention, Mrs. E. Bartlett; alternate, Mrs. Walter Wrick.

From the Reporter's Note Book

Harry Fletcher is "some" cook. To see him, between times, with his white apron on, making coffee and—perhaps getting tastes of the ice cream and cake—was a treat. We think he missed his vocation. Mr. Baugh, please note.

"Joe" Layman, Fairmont Times, was an honored guest. His story in the next day's paper shows that "the road to a man's heart, etc." The Fairmont ladies have their publicity work down to a science.

Wonder what Mrs. Charles W. Lewis found in that little paper package in her mail box at the hotel! From the care she took of it, must have been valuable.

Why did Mrs. Bartlett leave her pocket book, shopping bag, etc., in the hotel? Some good reason, we assume. Is it for publication? By the way, one thing Mrs. Bartlett does not like is ice cream.

Mrs. Fleming had a busy time. Aside from the fact that she was kept running backwards and forwards filling her husband's plates and cups, as chairman of the committee she was required to look after the comfort of all guests. She did it, too!

One look at Mr. Wittman and you know he is well taken care of—in a culinary way—at home. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." He required the services of several ladies, picking up empties and backing off loads.

Mrs. Leonard had a bad cold. Back of this lies a story of a day in Fairmont—not for publication, she says.

Mrs. Howard, with her usual good nature, charmed the Fairmont folk with her talk. We declined to take a bet on the subject of the number of Fairmont visitors there will be at Newark's next Auxiliary meeting. The number will be large.

"The song bird of the Freight House," Frank Jordan, made a hit with his group of songs. No wonder the work in that office is performed so efficiently. "Sing while you work," is evidently his slogan. But the Ticket Office ran him a close second. Miss Naomi Hecker, daughter of the ticket agent, upheld in splendid style the reputation for musical ability of the Fairmont Station.

And the children did their part. Eugenia and Junior are the pride and joy of Engineer Reynolds. We fortell a great career for them—their duet was much appreciated.

The Misses Miller are daughters of the first motorman employed by the Monongahela Valley Traction Co. He's been in their service 23 years. They are both talented young ladies.

The clock struck midnight. "Let's go," said Brother Sturmer, "you know we have to make that train for Martinsburg at 6 a. m. and Baltimore and Ohio trains leave On Time." And so ended a pleasant evening with the Fairmont Veterans and their ladies. Credit is due to every one who assisted in making the entertainment the success all agreed it was.

Medical Examiners and Surgeons Honorary Members of Wheeling Division No. 22

By M. C. SMITH, Claim Agent, Wheeling

DURING the year 1923 Veterans of Wheeling Division No. 22, to show their appreciation of the medical examiners and Company's surgeons for services that have been extended to them and other employees who are not yet eligible to become members of the Veterans' Association, elected those from Holloway and Neff, Ohio, to and including Smithfield and Hundred, W. Va., as honorary members of Wheeling Division No. 22. It is believed that this territory belongs to our chapter and it would not be trespassing on another division's territory to include all in the Wheeling chapter.

This action was taken without the knowledge of the Medical Department and we did not know how it would be received, but the appreciation of the doctors surpassed our fondest hopes.

The motion that several active and honorary members of other divisions be made honorary members of Wheeling Division No. 22 was referred to the Board of Directors and after several months' consideration reported as follows:

"No member of the Veteran Employees' Association holding an active or honorary membership on one division can be elected as an honorary member of this division for the reason that when the total membership of all the divisions is reported to the Grand Division and a total of the membership is taken a correct total cannot be obtained."

This division believes that the Honorary Membership Roll was not created for that purpose but to take in such officials who by their length of service are not eligible to active membership.

A Message to the Veteran Ladies from Mrs. Howard

THE following letter was sent out on the given date by Mrs. Howard, grand president, to all of the Ladies' Auxiliaries:

Newark, Ohio, February 12, 1924

To All Officers and Members, Ladies' Auxiliary, Veteran Employees' Association of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad:

In an effort to carry out the suggestion of the president of our Railroad, Mr. Daniel Willard, when he said in his New Year's Greeting that he hoped the "good feeling and sympathetic understanding on the Baltimore and Ohio will continue to grow stronger with the passage of years," the Veteran Employees' Association was urged by its Grand President to use every means in its power to maintain the pros-

I feel certain, as grand president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, that we can do our part equally as efficiently and as cheerfully as the Veteran employees. Their success is our success. The steadiness of their earnings provide the home comforts that we and our children will enjoy. Our happiness and prosperity are closely allied with that of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad that when it succeeds, we likewise can look forward, without worry to a prosperous year.

There are many ways in which we can assist our brothers of the Veteran Employees' Association, and if you will permit me, I will suggest the following:

1—Keep our ears open when our friends and acquaintances are talking of traveling, and then try to induce them to use the Baltimore and Ohio lines.

2—Convince those with whom we have business dealings that in view of our patronage they should use the facilities of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for both personal travel and shipments of freight.

3—At every affair in our social life speak of the unsurpassed facilities of the Baltimore and Ohio for travel and freight carrying.

4—Enlist every member of our family in our campaign, and by cooperative endeavor we shall be able, mutually, to enjoy continued prosperity in 1924.

In each copy of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE a card is enclosed. Read it, use it, and if you need additional cards, these will be provided.

News from Martinsburg and Cumbo

By CLARA McDONALD TAYLOR

WE regret that President Willard could not be with us at our annual banquet.

He always brings us a worth-while message. We missed him. We also missed ex-Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, a former resident of Martinsburg, and whose father for a number of years was a Baltimore and Ohio surgeon.

Congratulations to Veteran E. C. Gletner on his 50-year service button.

We have here a picture of the little daughter of Theodore Newkirk, a well-known employe at Cumbo. Mr. Newkirk holds an interesting old document, a deed signed by Thomas Lord Fairfax. This deed was executed in 1678 and disposes of fifty acres of land near the "Patowmack" River to one John Davis. Mr. Newkirk also holds a deed dated 1752, in which a piece of land is granted by Barnett Newkirk to Cornelius Newkirk and Brothers. Mr. Newkirk's little girl is attending school in Kentucky.

perity which came to the railroad in 1923. Grand President Sturmer pointed out that empty freight and passenger cars and idle locomotives are an indication of enforced idleness for our "breadwinners."

In years gone by the Veteran Employees' Association has played no small part in securing shipments of freight, which kept many cars loaded and engines under steam. Our men did this by appealing to shippers in their vicinity, by urging the grocer, the coal dealer, the clothier, the department store manager and others with whom we have business dealings that goods shipped to them should come by way of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. We know that Grand President Sturmer's appeal this year is going to be productive of magnificent results, for the Veterans are spurred on again by the words of Mr. Willard when he said: "WE SHOULD BE HELPFUL, NOT BECAUSE WE FEEL OBLIGED TO DO SO, BUT JUST BECAUSE WE WANT TO DO SO."

Cumberland Veterans Entertain on February 5

THE Veterans' Association and Ladies' Auxiliary at Cumberland, Md., held an entertainment and banquet in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Cumberland, on the evening of February 5. Many interesting speeches were made by the visitors and the musical program was everything that could be desired. The banquet, served as only the ladies know how to serve, was excellent and consisted of ham, chicken, vegetables, coffee and ice cream. The orchestra rendered selections while the guests were at supper.

The business meeting of the Veterans, under the direction of President H. W. Bloss, was short and snappy. Communications were read, bills ordered paid, new business handled and everything finished in short order, and then Mr. Bloss turned the meeting over to the ladies, Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Menefee taking charge.

The program was as follows:

Selection by orchestra—Piano, Miss Thelma Hawk; first violin, C. W. Lemmert; second violin, Samuel Blank; cornet, M. D. Tenney; tenor saxophone, Jacob A. Lemmert

Reading—Mrs. E. T. Prichard

Solo—Master John Niland, accompanied on piano by Miss Rebecca Dantzic

Selection by orchestra

Solo dance—Miss Alice Brinker

Violin solo—Prof. Antonio LaManea

Reading—M. N. Barnett

Quartet—“Pop” Warner's Harmony Four

Solo—John Troxell, accompanied on piano by Miss G. Wise

Orchestra selections

Solo—Don Leber, accompanied by Miss Dantzic

Reading—Miss Emma Botsford

Piano solo—Miss Gertrude Warner

Piano solo—Mrs. Vernon Spring

Miss Elizabeth Hauger assisted at the piano throughout the evening. The program was well arranged and credit is due to the committee, under the able direction of Mrs. Menefee, for the fine selections made. The committee in charge of the banquet, consisting of ladies of the Auxiliary under the direction of Mrs. Barnett, are deserving of special praise for their hard work in serving about 300. “The way to a man's heart is—” the ladies know how to finish it!

During the evening speakers were called on between the musical numbers. Mrs. Barnett read letters from Vice-President Galloway, General Manager Scheer and Grand President Sturmer, expressing regret that they were unable to be present.

Chief of Welfare Bureau W. W. Wood expressed pleasure that he had been able to attend the meeting. He said that he desired to extend greetings to every man and woman in the room. He further said that all railroad men should be proud of their occupation. “We have reason to be proud that we are members of this big family,” said Mr. Wood. “The railroads are an important industry. They are the basic industry. If the railroads shut down, how long is it before all other businesses must of necessity shut down also?” He also called attention to the fact that the ethical idea of the railroad is service, and asked that the Veterans and their friends and families do all they can to bring business to our rails.

Harry Fletcher, Fairmont, chairman of the Board of Veterans, said he did not come to make a speech. In fact, his principal interest seemed to be in the banquet which was waiting in the room below.

Mrs. Frank Howard, Newark, grand president, Ladies' Auxiliary, brought greetings from the Ladies' Auxiliaries of the Western Lines and stressed the importance of the ladies doing all they could to assist in getting business for our Road. She also extended a cordial invitation to the Cumberland Veterans to visit Newark.

Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, president, Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary, said that there are now 21 auxiliaries and that shortly there will be 22. She explained how the meetings are conducted in Baltimore and said a warm welcome awaited the ladies of Cumberland at their meetings. She also stressed the importance of securing business.

Mrs. Wallburg, Lima, brought greetings from her Auxiliary and invited the Cumberland folk to visit them.

Superintendent of Shops John Howe, who was given a warm welcome by everyone, said he did not care to make speeches but that he was never afraid to say a few words to the Veterans. He said that railroad people do not advertise enough and that the entertainment this evening showed how much talent we have in Cumberland. He called attention to the falling off in business, resulting in the furloughing of a number of men, and said, “We have the finest officers in the country to work for. Let us, for our part, do all we can to make the Baltimore and Ohio operations a success. Let us cooperate to the fullest extent and do not forget that whenever you have an opportunity—and you all have them—you can put in a good word which will result in bringing freight and passengers to our Road.” Mr. Howe was enthusiastically applauded as he left the platform.

After the banquet, dancing was in order until a late hour.

Visitors from out of town included W. W. Wood, Baltimore, Md.; Harry Fletcher, Mrs. E. Bartlett, Mrs. H. Fleming, Fairmont, W. Va.; Mrs. Frank Howard, Newark, Ohio; Mrs. Otto Wallburg, Lima, Ohio; Mrs. Clara McD. Taylor, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Mrs. C. W. Lewis, Baltimore, Md.

While the Rain Drops Fell Outside

Everyone inside had a good time—a good “dry” time, too.

A disappointment for the visitors was that the program was so lengthy that it had to be cut, and we did not have an opportunity to hear “The Cumberland Songbird,” Vada Pearl Drumm, although we did see her—occasionally when the crowd around her opened for a moment.

Miss Alice Brinker is a fine dancer. We are told she is one of eleven children. A fine future is predicted for her if she takes up dancing as a profession.

Master John Niland, who is only nine years old, captivated the hearts of everyone by his singing. Who got all the candies he threw to the audience? We noticed one young lady “eating kisses” all the evening, just as though she was used to it!

But—“After the ball was over” and some of the folk had to wait at the station for trains leaving at 4.00 a. m., let us charitably draw a veil.

John Howe tells us he is still single. Cumberland girls, wake up! This is Leap Year. Why let such an attractive “prospect” go begging?

Mrs. Wallburg said she was going home and going to stay there. Said she'd been on the go for a week. Poor Otto! No wonder he's getting thin. He can't attend the banquets.

Who was the young lady with Mrs. Barnett? Someone said it was her daughter. We believe it was her sister!

Teacher—“Who can name one important thing we have now that we did not have one hundred years ago?”

Tommy—“Me.” [—Los Angeles Times

Many Make Merry at the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary No. 1 Mask Ball

By M. W. JONES

ON January 18 the Ladies of Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary No. 1 entertained their husbands and friends at a mask ball, held in Claggett's Hall, Baltimore. Vice-President C. W. Galloway, for whom the auxiliary is named, and his wife and Grand President Veterans and Mrs. G. W. Sturmer were among the invited guests present. Music was furnished by Nelson's Imperial Orchestra, some of the musicians being employees. About 300 people were present, 75 of whom were masked and in fancy costume. Refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, ice cream, coffee and cake were furnished by our own John Bopp, in standard Baltimore and Ohio style, and were much enjoyed by everyone.

Prizes were given for the best costumes, the following being judged winners:

First prize, ladies: $2.50 gold piece, Mrs. Hergenroeder as Lady Baltimore.

First prize, gentlemen: $2.50 gold piece, Charles W. Lewis as a mandarin.

First prize, men, comic: Messrs. G. James and Jack Purdy as negro man and woman.

First prize, ladies, comic: Mrs. Wall as a minister.

The winners of the latter two prizes were awarded a case of ginger ale each. The judges were Mrs. E. Parlett, Mrs. A. Bathgate, Mrs. J. R. Orndorff.

The committees in charge of the ball, under the general direction of Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, were as follows. General Committee: Mesdames E. Stier and W. T. L. McCaghey. Reception: Mesdames Charles Purdy, L. James, W. Bentley. Refreshments: Mesdames E. Parlett, J. A. Zimmerman, M. Robinette, J. Bopp, J. T. Spriggs. Dance: Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Blair. Announcer, Joseph W. Swikert.

After the prizes had been awarded, masks were removed and much merriment was caused by the revealing of the features of many characters whom no one had been able to guess. Favors consisting of swag-sticks, small paper umbrellas and fancy paper hats were given to each one present. The evening was a success in every way, and many congratulations were offered to Mrs. Lewis for the perfect handling of all arrangements for the ball. Her various committees were "on the job" every minute and were instrumental in seeing that everyone enjoyed the fun. Dancing continued until midnight.

To mention all the characters represented by the fancy costumes would not be possible in our limited space, but our reporter mentions several which were particularly striking.

"Looking behind the Masks"

Miss Lola Isaacs made a very pretty country maid in her pink checked dress.

Mrs. Della Leffler, as an engineer, with overalls, goggles and oil can complete, was particularly effective. Not knowing her, without the mask, the observer, from a distance would have been sure that we had with us one of our real engineers who have helped to make the Capitol Limited famous the country over.

As a tambourine girl, Mildred Albrecht was "fetching," her dance with the tambourine being entirely in keeping with her costume.

Mrs. Flaherty as a Chinese lady was in a class by herself, while the old fashioned bride as portrayed by Mrs. Mercer was a thing of beauty and joy forever.

Not to be outdone by her Chinese friends, Mrs. J. B. Blair, in the dress of a Japanese dancing girl, made a pronounced hit with all who were fortunate enough to see her.

The "Yum Yum" of Lillian Schley and the Lady Baltimore of Mrs. Hergenroeder were perfect, while the Gypsy represented by Mrs. Stier carried us back to our younger days when we sat by the country roadside and watched the roaming bands pass by. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. E. T. Stevens, and her father, Geo. R. De Falcon, who helped so much to give us a pleasant day at the shore last summer. Hubby was on hand too, but we could not pick him out, although Mrs. Stier insisted we should.

A "Spanish Beauty" was represented by Mrs. Wiebking in splendid style, while the Chinese Mandarin of Mr. Lewis was so perfect that no one could ascertain who it was until masks were removed.

Purdy and James as negro and negress caused the most fun by their antics. Many ladies tried to get them to say something so that they might appease their natural curiosity, but for the first time in their lives our two friends were "dumb." The hit of the evening was Mrs. Wall. Dressed as a man, carrying a cane, and leaning on the arm of a lady, she carried her part off to perfection. Many guesses were made and many inquires for Mrs. Wall during the evening did not give a clue, and it was not until masks were removed that any one—except perhaps her husband—knew her.

During an intermission Mrs. C. W. Lewis, president of the Auxiliary, introduced as the honored guest Vice-President Galloway. Mr. Galloway said that he did not come to make a speech and he would not do so. He said: "I am glad to be with you tonight. I hope everyone will enjoy themselves. I am strong for these meetings. There is nothing finer than to get together and become thoroughly acquainted in this way. While I am 18 days late, this is the first opportunity I have had to wish you all a happy and successful New Year."

As the party broke up, while going out we were stopped by Mr. Sturmer, who said: "I want to introduce you to my friend Mr. Blank, he was an engineer and ran engine 753. When he got through with her, he turned her over to me." "Yes," remarked Mr. Blank, "and when you got through with her, no one could run her."

Now, what did he mean? We wondered and are still wondering, but in any event that fine joke on "Uncle George" gave us the final touch for the end of a perfect evening.

Newark Veterans and Auxiliary Meet in Joint Session

By B. A. OATMAN, Magazine Correspondent

THE Veterans and Ladies' Auxiliary opened their joint session on February 7 at 7:45 p. m.

Six applications for membership in the Veterans and seven for the Auxiliary were received and accepted.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so after a busy session (too busy to have any "eats," something out of the ordinary) the Entertainment Committee, in charge of Mrs. Lewis, announced that it was their turn. The program started with the Misses Lewis, piano and vocal, in "Hall of My Dreams and Garden of Prayer." They were heartily applauded.

Miss McFarland was then introduced, and, in her quaint way, rendered the jolly and popular piece, "Maggie." The rendition of the popular song was high class; her dancing, her costume with all the trimmin's, were in contrast with the tuneful melody of the popular song. Miss McFarland responded to an encore, after which she was heartily applauded.

The usual penny march was then held and resulted in the collecting of a goodly sum, always placed in the flower fund. This fund is usually drawn on heavily during the winter.

Ladies Organize the C. R. Emery Auxiliary at Seymour, Indiana

By MRS. C. R. EMERY, President

ON December 14 Grand President Mrs. F. M. Howard, with four of her co-workers from Newark, Ohio, and one from Washington, Ind., came to Seymour for the purpose of installing a chapter of the Ladies' Auxiliary here. Thirty-six ladies responded to my invitation to join in the organization, giving us 37 charter members. The meeting was called to order with the following temporary officers filling the chairs: President, Mrs. F. M. Howard; vice-president, Mrs. Chester Lewis; secretary, Mrs. R. E. Leonard; treasurer, Mrs. Cameron Harrod; marshal and outer guard, Mrs. Huffman; chaplain, Mrs. Helfinger.

Mrs. Howard gave us an interesting address on the subject of organizing the Auxiliary and the purpose of the meetings. The following officers for 1924 were then elected: President, Mrs. C. R. Emery; vice-president, Mrs. W. E. Hamer; secretary, Mrs. C. W. Frey; treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Lloyd; chaplain, Mrs. John Lemen; marshal, Mrs. Harry French; outer guard, Mrs. Mike Fox; musician, Mrs. George Dixon; delegate to convention, Mrs. C. R. Emery; alternate, Mrs. W. E. Hamer.

After installing the officers, Mrs. Howard presented Mrs. Emery with an Auxiliary gold pin, for her untiring efforts in the organization of our chapter.

After business was completed, a social hour was enjoyed, the program including a vocal solo by Mrs. M. C. Black and humorous readings by Mrs. C. W. Frey. A lunch of mock chicken sandwiches, ice cream and cake was served, "Hoosier Plate" style.

On January 11 and February 8, joint meetings with the Veterans were held, at which a social hour and lunch was enjoyed.

We extend to the ladies of Newark and other Auxiliaries, an invitation to visit our meetings, which will be held on the second Friday of every month at 7:30 p. m., in Masonic Temple, Seymour, Ind.

Edward C. Massman, supervising agent, who is also secretary and treasurer, Veterans' Association, who was operated on at a Cleveland Hospital, is now out again. His many friends extend congratulations.

A. A. Phillipps, engineer, Nos. 23 and 24, with his wife, is often seen around Seymour in his new Willys-Knight.

John Donnels, engineer, Nos. 1, 2, 12, 3, is the oldest engineer in service, but not in years. He enjoyed his home during the cold snap.

"Ed" Boyles, engineer, Nos. 1, 2, 12, 3, Cincinnati, and his wife, were recent visitors at Seymour.

Trainmaster and Mrs. J. B. Purkheiser are recuperating at West Palm Beach, Fla. We hope they will return fully recovered on April 1.

"Link" Durland, Cincinnati, was a recent welcome visitor here, spending some time with relatives.

Pensioners Peter Reagan, Cincinnati, and "Tom" Ackley, Washington, Ind., were recent visitors here.

"Mort" Seymour is absent because of illness. We hope he will soon recover.

At a meeting of the St. Louis Division Veterans, held in Seymour on January 18, the following officers were elected for 1924: President, W. E. Hamer; vice-president, Frank Gilbert; recording secretary and treasurer, E. C. Massman; delegate to convention, Frank Gilbert; alternate, W. E. Hamer.

George M. Shriver Ladies' Auxiliary

Correspondent, W. L. STEPHENS

WE are glad to report that Mrs. D. M. Keller has recovered from her recent illness.

Mrs. Ida Wolford is recovering from two broken ribs and a sprained wrist, these injuries being sustained in a recent fall.

Mrs. Frank McBee, who has so faithfully filled the office of chaplain in our Auxiliary since its organization, has been made a life member. She still fills the office of chaplain.

We regret to report the death of Mrs. Harvey Peer, one of our members. Our members extend sincere sympathy to her husband.

Mrs. Joseph H. Copenhaver, one of our active members, is in the King's Daughters Hospital for a major operation. We hope she will recover promptly.

It gave the members of our Auxiliary much pleasure to entertain our patron, Vice-President George M. Shriver, at the Veterans' banquet January 26. We hope he will visit us again soon.

Division No. 22, Wheeling, W. Va.

By R. S. NESBITT, Secretary

AT a well attended meeting on January 21 the following officers were elected for 1924: President, J. B. Smith; vice-president, W. P. Cogley; secretary, R. S. Nesbitt; sergeant-at-arms, J. H. Harter; treasurer, C. J. Proudfoot; chairman, Finance Committee, J. B. Smith; chairman, Membership Committee, W. P. Cogley; chairman, Entertainment Committee, C. J. Proudfoot; Board of Directors, J. T. Sherry, A. Rodewig, Wm. Kennedy, C. C. Hoffner and M. C. Smith.

Officers and members are planning to make 1924 a banner year in soliciting freight and passenger business. Several affairs of a social nature are being planned as well

New York Stages Farewell Dinner to Former Superintendent Hamner

By G. J. GOOLIC, Magazine Correspondent

ON February 2 the employees of the New York Division tendered our Former Superintendent E. J. Hamner, a farewell dinner at the Elk's Club at Stapleton, Staten Island.

Mr. Hamner has been assigned to the staff of Operating Vice-president Galloway at Baltimore. His successor, M. L. McElheny, from the Connellsville Division, was also a guest at the dinner.

The affair was an entire surprise to the retiring superintendent.

Trainmaster B. F. Kelly arranged the details and acted as toastmaster. Mr. Kelly, like Chauncey M. Depew, is a veteran on such occasions and was in his customary happy mood. The toastmaster called upon the following to make some short remarks: Messrs. W. L. Dryden, E. E. McKinley, W. B. Biggs, J. F. McGowan, T. McKeon, E. Morton, J. L. Suesserott, E. W. Murray, W. C. Cornell, A. L. Mickelsen, J. F. Bowden, E. A. English, J. N. Godman, Mr. Greenan, J. D. Gibb, J. W. Turner, W. P. Slattery, A. Lienhardi, E. A. Brown, J. B. Sharp,

W. E. Pettigrew, J. McCaffrey, J. G. Westbrook.

All the speakers expressed regret at Mr. Hamner's leaving and at the same time congratulated him on his deserved promotion, and pledged to the new superintendent the same hearty support that they had accorded to Mr. Hamner.

After the remarks by the various employees, Mr. Kelly presented Mr. Hamner with a handsome Gladstone Bag with a brief case to match, and a folding umbrella as a mark of esteem on the part of his former associates.

Mr. Hamner then told of his regret in leaving New York and thanked those present for their support.

The toastmaster then introduced Mr. McElheny, who, in a few well chosen remarks told something of his past history and also how he hoped to meet each man at an early date and get acquainted. The applause with which his remarks were received showed how favorably everybody was impressed with the new superintendent.

The feature of the evening was reserved until last, when the toastmaster called upon General Manager White to make some remarks. Characteristically Mr. White did not have to talk a great deal to say a whole lot.

In addition to the speeches a pleasant entertainment was provided by the Royal Blue Novelty Orchestra and in songs by the Messrs. William Jones and Jack Mahoney.

Mr. Hamner first entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on March 4, 1896, as B. and M. clerk on the Ohio Division. He held this position until April 1, 1897 on which date he was made chief clerk. On April 15, 1900 he was appointed agent at Hallgate, Ohio, and furloughed on September 12, 1904 until February 1, 1905. He then returned and was appointed relief agent until December 18, 1906, at which time he was appointed assistant traveling auditor. From October 1, 1909 to August 1, 1911 he was made traveling auditor. August 1, 1911 he was made supervisor of station service. On January 1, 1916 he came to New York and acted as terminal agent with headquarters at Pier 22, North River. On January 1, 1918 he was promoted to assistant superintendent at St. George and held this position until September 1, 1918 when he was made superintendent.

Cumberland Social Club's Valentine Party

RECENTLY we received an invitation from John Howe, president, and Vada Pearl Drumm, secretary of the Baltimore and Ohio Social Club, Cumberland, to be present at a dance to be given on Valentine's Day. "We'll be there," we replied, "but, never having been in Cumberland, how do you find the Back Shop Office?" "Better look for a tall, thin man and a short, stout girl on the platform when No. 1 arrives," replied Miss Vada. We did, and sure 'nuf, there was Miss Vada waiting to escort us, with—no, not Henry, his name was George, and it wasn't a Ford either. And so we arrived.

The Office in the Back Shop, used by Mr. Howe and the storekeeper, was beautifully decorated in white and red. All lamps were covered with red paper, casting a warm glow over the interior, which was pleasing to the eye after the cold driving sleet and snow outside. We are told that the decorations were taken care of by Assistant Storekeeper Wall and Electrical Foreman "Harry" Childs, with the assistance of several Efficiency Bureau employees. The large letters, "Baltimore and Ohio" on one side of the room, together with hearts placed artistically on the steel pillars and walls, made a pretty combination. The young ladies were responsible for the tasty punch (strictly Volstedian) served between dances. The music, furnished by "Bill" Spates' Orchestra, was good.

With our nose for news we discovered the solution of a mystery which has been puzzling Cumberland for some time. The agitating question has been "Why did Mr. Glenn always receive such fine telephone service from the P. B. X. at the station?" Answer, he married Miss Anna May Throat, formerly telephone operator, on February 8. We assume Miss Anna May was showing him "Service" and it finally captivated him. Unfortunately Mr. and Mrs. Glenn were not in Cumberland for the dance, being still absent on their honeymoon, and so we could not congratulate them personally. We do now, heartily.

Frank Hopkins was at the gate, and he's an expert ticket taker, too! Mr. Gettle looked after those who had no partners, and it was not his fault if everyone did not dance.

Ever see the "long and short" of it? "Bill" Shaw stood for a moment talking to Miss Adams. The contrast? Ask those who saw them.

W. C. Guthrie and his wife from Keyser, and Mr. Kellar, of Cumbo, were on hand to join in the fun, while Miss Goggin carried her "heart" in her hand during the dances. The youngest dancer present was little Miss Earle, who told us she was four years old.

The "Fashion Parade" commenced about 9 p. m. and lasted until midnight, when everyone went home tired but happy.

Right: Superintendent M. L. McElheny, New York Terminals

During an intermission Mr. Wall asked us if we would like to look over the store-room and the back shop. Never having been in Cumberland, we agreed readily. The trip was well worth while. Under the able direction of Storekeeper Sutton, who was also at the dance with his wife, the Cumberland Stores Department has been brought to a high state of efficiency. Everything is in its place, floors and windows clean, material neatly piled in orderly rows and rooms well lighted. It is evident that Mr. Sutton and his force are living exponents of the Baltimore and Ohio slogan "Good Housekeeping" on the property as well as at home. The back shop is also well worth a visit. Superintendent "Jack" Howe is proud of his shops and his men, and from the little we saw of both, we agree that he has every reason to be.

Congressman Box Addresses Accounting Association on "Immigration"

By J. W. SWEITZER, President

ON Friday, February 15, we had the pleasure of listening to a splendid address on "Immigration," made by Hon. John C. Box, Representative from Texas, who came to Baltimore from Washington, accompanied by Mr. B. J. Hamm, Manager, Traffic Bureau.

Representative Box, who is a member of the Congressional Committee on Immigration, gave us quite a bit of interesting information about the number of immigrants arriving in this country, the number deported because of physical disabilities, and the manner in which this vast multitude is taken care of after reaching our shores. We could see that this momentous question is one of vital importance, and one that should be given deep consideration by Americans.

Representative Box explained clearly why the Government must watch so carefully the extent to which the privilege of allowing foreigners to settle in this country should be exercised, principally because of the existence of so much hatred and strife and ill-feeling among the natives of the various foreign countries. The Government realizes that it is almost impossible to bring about a change in the sentiments of these aliens, and to instill in them that happiness and contentment which is to a great extent enjoyed by Americans. Experience has taught that these immigrants do a great deal to stir up strife and bitter feeling, and it would be only a matter of a few years when the country which our forefathers worked so hard to bring to its present state, would be converted into an over-crowded, discontented and unhappy nation.

Another point to which Congressman Box called attention is the fact that if restrictions were not placed on immigration, about fifty per cent. of the population of the other countries would be hurrying to our shores, and that the peoples of one nation in particular, China, would be journeying towards this country ninety-seven per cent. strong—just as fast as vessels could carry them.

His closing remarks were to the effect that we should sympathize with and help these immigrants in their great distress, but that it would not be well for us to undo what our forefathers have accomplished (instilling in our minds the great principles of Americanism.) It is for us to instill these principles in the minds of those who follow us.

Margaret Bondfield, Under Secretary of Labor for Great Britain

First Woman Member of Cabinet a Laborite and Former Shop Girl

AMONG the most interesting stories that come to us through the press is that of Margaret Bondfield.

Did you know about Margaret? Well, a few years ago nobody else did, for not long ago she was a shop girl in an English town. Today, however, at the age of 50, she is a member of Great Britain's Labor Cabinet, a position heretofore unheard of for a woman. She is the first woman to hold ministerial office in Great Britain. And realizing the continental attitude toward woman's sphere, we can readily believe that only a woman of unusual personality and strength of character could gain such heights in that country. Her rise from the position of a 13-hour a day girl worker to the position of Under Secretary of Labor in the British Cabinet might well be an inspiration to any girl who is moved to complain about her job.

"Margaret Bondfield has been creating precedents all her life," says Felix Morley in the Baltimore Sun of January 29.

"Just a quarter of a century ago a lonely woman delegate appeared at the annual Trades-Union Congress as a representative of the Sales Clerks' Union (in England they are known as Shop Assistants). Eighteen years later this same woman was elected as a member of Labor's Parliamentary Committee, the first of her sex to receive that signal mark of confidence from the trade-unionists of Britain. Last September the same little woman, then turning 50, but showing even greater energy than as a girl, was chosen chairman of the General Council of the Trades-Union Congress, the highest industrial Office British Labor can bestow. And in the December election Margaret Bondfield was elected to Parliament from Northampton with a majority of more than 4,000 over her Conservative opponent, and a few more votes than that ahead of the Right Honorable C. A. McCurdy, a Minister under Lloyd George and right-hand lieutenant of that fallen idol. While not technically a Cabinet member the scope of her experience is such that she will probably be summoned to its meetings not infrequently.

"Perhaps it is not mere coincidence that every personal triumph for Miss Bondfield has coincided with a mile-stone in the development of the British Labor movement. For in that movement she has been an integral part and a brilliant dynamic force since as a girl of 23 she became assistant secretary of the Shop Assistants' Union. . . . But, unlike some Labor leaders she has never lost the simplicity of nature and the spirit of democracy of her early years.

"There are many in this country who have heard Miss Bondfield speak and few who have ever heard her will forget. She is no advocate of violence; always her text is the appeal to reason and good will. She speaks in rounded sentences, with ringing phrases, which rival the best traditions of British oratory, and with a background of industrial knowledge and experience which few can rival. As fraternal delegate to the 1919 convention of the American Federation of Labor she made a speech at Atlantic City which aroused wild enthusiasm among our own rather 'hard-boiled' trade-union delegates. But that is a customary experience for Margaret Bondfield. When one congratulates her on her gift of oratory she smiles deprecatingly out of her kindly eyes 'It is not the way I say it, but what I have to say that is convincing,' she protests."

And the moral of the story is this: While it is quite probable that not one of those who read this story from this MAGAZINE may ever be eligible to membership in the Cabinet of Great Britain, this woman's work inspires us to make ourselves a part of the job that brings us our daily bread. And who knows but that, through this, we may some day attain heights that stand yet unscaled in the realm of Womanhood?

Miss Helen M. Kodet, Now Passenger Representative at Cleveland

WE are pleased to present here a picture of Miss Helen M. Kodet, recently appointed passenger representative at Cleveland.

Miss Kodet was born in Cleveland in March 27, 1893. She is a graduate of East High School, Cleveland, of Dyke Business College, and of Central Institute. She has specialized in secretarial work and speaks several languages besides English. After serving in the capacity of secretary, she became identified with the law firm of Guthery, Guthery, Binyon and Williams.

Miss Kodet was one of the passengers on the Cleveland-Washington tours of 1923; at this time she became quite interested in Washington and its beauties, and thereafter became an ardent booster for the Washington Tours, later arranging another tour of Washington. Through her affiliation with the travel bureau of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Bank in Cleveland, she came into contact with many persons seeking travel information.

Having a desire to meet and acquire new friends in the business world and believing herself to be particularly adapted to solicitation work, she made application for the position of passenger representative at Cleveland, and her application was accepted.

Since coming to work with the Baltimore and Ohio, Miss Kodet has proven her ability to solicit passenger business. At present she is giving much time to mapping out educational tours for the night classes pro-

We welcome Miss Kodet to our rapidly growing circle of passenger representatives. Who's next?

Tested Recipes

Empenada

The empenada is a Spanish meat pie. The following recipe was contributed by Miss Barnes, who conducts the Mt. Royal Inn, near Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, and who makes a specialty of this dish.

About one cupful of minced cooked meat (do not grind it), beef preferred. Add a rich gravy, thickened with browned flour until almost pasty. A few small, red, hot peppers are chopped into the mixture with a bit of onion. Roll out short flaky pie crust, cut round. On one-half place the meat in the form of a roll. A quarter of a hard-boiled egg is placed at each end of the meat roll. Sprinkle over the whole a few raisins and nut meats. Fold over the other half of the crust, roll over the edges, bake in a hot oven and serve hot. A meal in itself!

Fudge

The following recipe is by Louise, daughter of
B. A. Oatman, Master Mechanic's Office,
Newark, Ohio

2 cups sugar,
2 tablespoons cocoa,
½ cup milk,
1 tablespoon butter,
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Mix sugar and cocoa. Add the milk and stir until smooth. Place over a low fire. Stir occasionally until sugar is dissolved. Add butter and let boil until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Remove from fire, add vanilla and place in a pan of cold water. Let it stand until bottom of pan cools. Beat hard and add nuts. Pour into a buttered pan.

A Little Girl with Auburn Curls Likes Her Pretty New Dress

THE little girl with her mamma in this picture is the attractive little daughter of Composer Leonard B. Heron, of our own Baltimore and Ohio Printing Department, where the MAGAZINE is printed. Mrs. Heron made this dainty little frock for Lenora from one of our patterns. Mrs. Heron says that the pattern is simple and easily handled; that the dress is inexpensive, neat and becoming.

Mothers who would like to make dresses like this one for their little girls may obtain this pattern, post paid, by writing our Baltimore and Ohio Pattern Bureau, 1188-1190 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, New York, enclosing 10 cents in coin or stamps, and asking for Pattern No. 4351. Use the regular coupon on our pattern page, or give the same information on a separate sheet of paper if you do not wish to clip your copy of the MAGAZINE. All patterns will be sent by first class mail, so that the best service possible will be given our readers.

The Spring and Summer Fashion Book shows many other lovely little frocks for girls between the ages of 10 and 14, as well as patterns that suit every other member of the family. The pattern book may be had by sending 12 cents to the same address given above.

Pattern 4351 is cut in 4 sizes, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12-year size requires 4 ¼ yards of 32-inch material. Lenora's dress is made of brown serge, trimmed with collar and cuffs of tan, embroidered in brown.

Little Lenora Heron, wearing a dress made from Baltimore and Ohio Magazine pattern No. 4351, with her mother, Mrs. L. B. Heron, who made the dress. Mr. Heron is a compositor at our Mt. Clare Printing Department where the Magazine is printed. The price of the pattern is only 10 cents. Please use coupon when ordering

Up-To-Date Book of Fashions

Send 12c in stamps, check, or money order for our UP-TO-DATE BOOK OF FASHIONS

All patterns are sent direct to customer by first class mail 4659. A dainty yoke dress and a comfortable "barrie" or petticoat is here depicted.

The dress could be of lawn, batiste or fine nainsook. The barrie coat of flannel or cambric.

The pattern includes both designs.

It is cut in one size and requires 2 yards for the dress and 1½ yard for the barrie coat. To make the waist portions of the "barrie" of cambric will require ¼ yard.

4645. Easy to adjust and withal comfortable is the style here depicted. Mohair with plaid suiting for the facings would be very new and serviceable. This style is also good for gingham, linen, pongee, and wool crepe.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 4¾ yards of 36-inch material. Collar and pocket facings of contrasting material require ¾ yard. The width of the dress at the foot is 2 yards.

4654. This is a practical play or school suit. It may be developed in linen, pongee, seersucker or kindergarten cloth as well as in serge, or flannel—or, one may have the trousers of cloth and the blouse of wash material.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. A 3-year size requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material.

4667. Figured woolen and serge are here combined. Velvet and crepe, or taffeta and velvet are also a good combination for this model. Gingham and linen would combine well, as would also pongee and crepe.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. An 8-year size requires 2½ yards of one material 40 inches wide. To make as illustrated requires 7½ yard of plain material and 1¼ yard of figured material.

4650. This style is very effective with the front turned back to form revers. It is equally smart and popular with the straight side closing. Mohair, twill, wool rep, as well as linen and silk may be used for this model.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 5½ yards of 40-inch material. The width at the foot is 2¾ yards. To face revers, collar and cuffs with contrasting material requires ¾ yard.

4673. This model is good for the new figured silks and printed cottons. It will also develop well in linen and alpaca.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A

38-inch size requires  $4\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 40-inch material. The width at the foot with plaits extended is 2 yards.

4695. Crepe, gingham, printed voile or linen could be used for this style. The pockets may be finished at the edges with fancy stitchery, and the paws, eyes and tail worked out in embroidery, or stitchery.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 6-year size requires  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 27-inch material.

4668. Printed crepe in blue and tan tones with facings of blue crepe, is here shown. This is a good style for velveteen, wool, rep and serge.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12-year size requires 3 yards of 32-inch material.

For collar, belt and sleeve facings of contrasting material  $\frac{3}{4}$  yard is required.

4670. Bordered goods, embroideries, crepe, kasha and linen would all be attractive for this model. The dress is in wrap style. The fronts are turned back to form revers. The closing may be from left to right or the reverse. One may have this style with the short sleeve cap, or entirely sleeveless.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18-year size requires  $4\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yard.

4675. Cretonne was selected for this apron, with facings of white linene embroidered with "stitchery." Crepe with bands of contrasting material, or gingham with bias binding would also be effective.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires  $3\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 27-inch material.

4694. Pongee, linen, kindergarten cloth, gingham and seersucker are good materials for this design.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 2, 4 and 6 years. A 4-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 27-inch material. To make collar, cuffs, belt and pocket of contrasting material as illustrated will require  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard, 36 inches wide.

4646. This style is especially suited to stout figures. It is in slip-on style. The sleeve may be in wrist length, or cut short in shaped outline.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 42-inch size requires 5 yards of 36-inch material. For collar, facings and vest of contrasting material  $\frac{5}{8}$  yard is required. The width at the foot is  $2\frac{1}{8}$  yards.

4663. Twill, serge or alpaca, as well as linen or rep, could be used for this model.

If preferred the fulness of the fronts may be held with belt or string girdle portions attached at the side seams.

This pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16-year size requires  $3\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 40-inch material.

4672. Linen, rep, gingham, serge or chambray would be good for this model. The closing is reversible, so that the dress may be worn buttoned from right to left or left to right side.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $4\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. The width at the foot is  $1\frac{7}{8}$  yard.

4690. Figured silk was used for this model. The collar and vest may be of self or contrasting material. This is a good style for linen, silk, alpaca or flannel.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure.

To make the blouse for a 38-inch size requires 3 yards of 32-inch material.

To make the collar and vest of contrasting material will require  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard 40 inches wide.

4689. Satin, sateen or drill are good materials for this model. It is a style that is suitable for slender and stout figures.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires 1 yard of 36-inch material.

4640. Figured cretonne with bindings of black sateen is here portrayed. Four sizes: Small, Medium, Large, Extra Large. Medium size requires  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material.

Our Little Railroaders

Dear Girls and Boys:
Here's Mary Ann,
Who brings us quite a store

Of funny tales
And if you like
This one, she'll tell you more.

Where the Cat Got His Fiddle

By MARY ANN

ONCE upon a time Old Mother Goose wrote this jingle:

Hey, diddle diddle,
The cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon;
The little dog laughed

To see such sport,
And the dish ran away with the spoon.

Didn't you ever wonder where that cat got his fiddle? Of course you did. So did I. But you never knew, did you? Neither did I until the other day when I met the Man Who Knows Everything, who told me all about it.

Many, many years ago the cat had a lovely voice, oh, a most lovely voice. And every night he used to sing, oh, so beautifully that every night all of the animals in the forest and all of the people of the towns came out to listen to him.

"Hush," the big rabbits would say to the little rabbits, "the great Professor Pussy Cat is beginning to sing."

And "Hush," said the mammas to their little children, "the great Professor Pussy Cat is going to sing."

And "Hush," said the mamma birds to the little birdies, "the great Professor Pussy Cat is going to sing."

Then they would listen to the cat's lovely voice until 'way late in the night. And all the little rabbits and all the little babies and all the little birdies would fall asleep listening to the voice of Professor Pussy Cat.

But one day a sad thing happened. Professor Pussy Cat lost his voice. Do you know why? I shall tell you.

One day Professor Pussy Cat took a stroll through the wood. He met Mr. Mouse.

"Good day, Professor Pussy Cat," said Mr. Mouse. "How are you today?"

"Why should a little mouse ask me how I am?" growled Professor Pussy Cat, twisting his big, white whiskers. "You are nothing but a little cheese-eater."

"I beg your pardon," said Mr. Mouse, "I meant no harm, I'm sure."

"Say no more or I shall eat you," growled old Professor Pussy Cat.

"But I meant no harm——," began the mouse.

Snap!

Pussy Cat had seized the poor mouse and eaten him right up. Oh, what a naughty pussy cat he was!

Just then the lovely Forest Fairy came and touched Pussy Cat.

"For this awful thing that you have done," she declared, "you shall never sing again." Then she went away.

Then Pussy Cat tried ever so hard, again and again, but he could not sing. On his way home he met an old man with a fiddle.

"Give me your fiddle," he said to the old man, "or I shall eat you, too."

So the old man gave up the fiddle. The cat tried again and again to play it, but he could only make a screeching noise.

So that's how the cat got the fiddle that Mother Goose wrote about. But not many days afterward, the cat became so ashamed of the way he had treated the old man that he went and hid the fiddle. And to this day nobody has ever found it.

But Pussy Cat, I am sorry to say, never grew ashamed of having eaten the mouse, and that's why his lovely voice never came back to him. Sometimes you may hear him trying to sing, but all that he can say is "Me——ou——ow! Me——ou——ow!" And I don't call that music, do you?

WELL, well, well! That certainly was a hard puzzle, that Jack and Jill story. Many little people sent in answers which were almost correct, but only two little people solved it correctly. These were Alice Taylor, Aiken, Md., and Elizabeth Sullivan, Bradshaw, Md. Alice received as her reward the dollar, offered by Mrs. Frank Howard, grand president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and Elizabeth was awarded a little fountain pen, donated by Miss Edith Coplan, Transportation Department, Baltimore.

This is the way the puzzle should read when finished:

"Jack was a very SPRUCE young man and he PINE-D for Jill, who was the APPLE of his eye. In her bright CHERRY ribbon and her FIR (fur) trimmed coat, he often CEDAR (seed her... bad use of "saw her;" that was hard, wasn't it?), and finally got his courage to pop the question. He feared that she did not care a FIG for him; however, she accepted him, although she regretted that he was not very POPLAR (popular). They took their wedding trip in a BIRCH canoe. They were a fine PEAR (pair). Jill looked quite PEACH-Y as she served Jack's cakes at breakfast with MAPLE syrup. But feeling that this story is now a CHESTNUT, I shall end the narrative."

But just to show you some of the funny answers that we received, I shall fill in the blanks with some of the funniest:

"Jack was a very PEACHY young man, and he SYCAMORE-D for Jill, who was the LIGHTWOOD of his eye. In her bright PLUM ribbon and her PUMPKIN (I didn't know that pumpkins grew on trees) trimmed coat, he often CAMPHOR-A (came for her), and finally got his courage up to pop the question. He feared that she did not care a JUNIPER for him; however, she accepted him, although she regretted that he was not very PLUM (plumb, I suppose). They took their wedding trip in a GUM TREE canoe. They were a fine PEAR of CHRISTMAS TREES. Jill looked quite ASHY as she served Jack's cakes at breakfast with WILD CHERRY syrup. But feeling that this story is now a LEMON, I shall end the narrative."

I.

My whole is a word of ten letters. Letters 1, 2 and 3 spell the name of something used in writing; it may be made of steel or of gold. My 4, 5 and 6 spell the name of the creature who was given charge of the earth when the earth was first made. My 7, 8, 9 and 10 spells the name of an object that sails the seven seas. My whole is a study that every little girl and boy must take in school. What is it?

—By W. BAYLESS STEVENS, Lothian, Md.

II.

Little Margaret Anderson, of Relay, Md., sends us this one: I picked up a penny and found some fruit on it. What kind of fruit did I find? That's easy. Guess it.

Send all answers, as usual, to Aunt Mary, Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Md.

My Autobiography

By MARY KATHERINE HARRISON

MY name is Mary Katherine Harrison. I was born in Brunswick, Maryland, on August 24, 1909.

I attend the East Brunswick school, and am in the sixth grade. Miss King is my teacher. My favorite studies are reading and health lessons. I like reading because I enjoy books. I like health lessons because they tell me about my body and how to care for it.

Every evening when school is dismissed I go home and help with the work and run errands. On Saturdays I help with most of the house work.

My favorite game is speed ball. When I go to high school I hope to be captain of the team.

My favorite book is called "Little Women." It is written by Louisa May Alcott.

I have no pets but hope to have some soon. I would like to have a pair of rabbits and a pony.

My chum is Helen Danner; we go together everywhere.

I hope to become a head nurse in a hospital when I am older. That is what I have planned to be.

Jack's Gold Medal

By VICTOR KIFER, East Brunswick

JACK is my dog. He has a gold medal. I believe you would like to know about it, would you?

Well, one day in May Mr. Jacob had made a visit to Perry to buy a bear hound. Mr. Jacob lived four miles from Perry on the Arkansas River, in a little log cabin. He owned five acres of fine timber. In the summer he was going into the lumber business, as he had five hundred dollars put away in a cave back of the house. When Mr. Jacob got home with the hound all the little boys nearly went crazy over it. They called the dog Jack.

That night, Mr. Jacob took a severe fever and was very restless. In the morning little Jimmie got on old Mollie and went for the doctor, taking Jack with him.

On the way back a big brown bear stepped from the bushes and started toward the horse. The horse shied and threw the boy off and then galloped away.

Jack ran and caught the bear by the leg, breaking it. There was a fierce fight for five minutes and then the dog finally killed the bear.

When Jimmie came to himself Jack was licking his face and the dead bear lay a few feet away. The dog then led the way home.

When Mr. Jacob got well again, he went to Perry and bought Jack a gold medal.

Hazel Louise, daughter of Operator Harry Grimes Martinsburg, W. Va.

Auditor Passenger Receipts Folks Have Pleasant Social Evening

ON the morning of February 15 we started making inquiries as to how to get to Walbrook Hall. "Take the 14 car to North, and then transfer east," said one. "No, you take the 31 east and transfer at Schroeder," said another. Finally, however, after many trials we arrived there in time for the dance of the Auditor of Passenger Receipts Welfare Association, at 8.30 p. m. No, it did not take us quite all day to get there, but nearly.

Going upstairs, we found our old friend Veteran C. R. Purdy at the door. "Tickets, please," said Mr. Purdy, and no one got through who did not have the documents.

Chairman G. Fred Miller, assisted by Rowland B. Hasson and Carl F. Grund, made the arrangements, while Thomas Cook of the A. P. R. Office, at all times had his automobile at their disposal to assist in carrying out their plans. The music was furnished by Nelson's Imperial Orchestra, some of whom are employes of the Baltimore and Ohio, and it was real music. Dancing continued from 8.30 p. m. until midnight. About 11.00 p. m. refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served, and during an intermission we were entertained by Miss Helen Meeks, U. S. F. and G. Co., who sang, in her own inimitable way, a number of sentimental songs.

We have always heard that Irene Castle was a splendid dancer, but she has nothing on Miss "Mag" O'Leary. And who is this we see with her? Yes, it is our old friend Rudolph Valentino Zimmerman! His wife sits still watching the fun—and doesn't seem to mind her husband's popularity with the fair sex one little bit.

In the Paul Jones, we had an opportunity to test the dancing qualities of about every young lady in the A. P. R. Office, and they CAN dance, too. Some of them left us in a hurry—but we couldn't blame them.

"You look very familiar," we remarked to one young lady. "I ought to be, you saw my face on the MAGAZINE cover not so long ago," she replied. Sure enough, 'twas Miss Leah Radcliffe, of fishing girl cover fame.

Chief Clerk G. William Jentner was on hand, escorting Mrs. Jentner, Mrs. Bentley, Mrs. Albrecht and Miss Mildred, but with four ladies to choose from, and the large number already there, it was only with considerable difficulty that Mr. Jentner was persuaded to dance ONE dance. "He can dance," said his wife, "but he's naturally bashful." Maybe so, but we are, we hope, permitted to doubt the bashful part.

Being of an inquiring mind, we asked several young ladies who was the best dancer in the room. They all answered, but we won't tell what they said, except that natural modesty prevents our publishing the reply of one of the number! Details may be secured by telephone, or mail, the latter only provided return stamp is enclosed. We also inquired of several gentlemen who was their ideal from a standpoint of beauty, dancing, etc. Now, girls, don't crowd, we won't mention names in public.

Midnight found us downstairs waiting for the "Toonerville" trolley, and soon we were on our homeward way, voting, one and all, that the evening had been a splendid success and that our thanks were due everyone who had helped to make it so.

We almost forgot to mention that MAGAZINE Correspondent Charles C. Warwick was among those present, but—being bashful—like Mr. Jentner, he did not dance, and we also wanted to ask Mr. Zimmerman one question. "What did you say about bobbed hair, 'Zimmy'?" We know now who is boss."

Two return tickets, New York to Baltimore. Girl and her grandfather went to N. Y. via competing line. Talked to them after ticket had been purchased and they promised to return via Baltimore and Ohio. They did.

Gentleman came from Pittsburgh over competing line. Paid me a visit. Result: One ticket, Baltimore to Washington; another, Washington to Philadelphia, via Baltimore and Ohio.

"I can't come to your house, for I'm going to Pittsburgh next week," said a member of the Ladies Aid Society of a local church.

"And how are you going?"

"I don't know; from.....(name of station of competing line), I guess."

"Why not come down to Mt. Royal Station and let me see you off on our Best and Only. Try our new Capitol Limited."

Result: She asked me to get her reservation for her, Baltimore to Pittsburgh. And she is the aunt of an employe of the competing road.

Sent a Methodist minister some literature and time-tables with the following note:

Most of my friends and relatives in Baltimore are now and always have been regular patrons of the Baltimore and Ohio. They would consider it quite out of order to use any other than the "home" road.

Isaac H. Baldwin

Was born in 1859. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on February 1, 1894, as car repairer. In 1902 he was appointed car inspector under Forman J. W. Ravenscraft. He was later transferred to the classification yard, Keyser, as air tester, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

Michael McDonaugh

Was born on February 16, 1855. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service at Grafton, W. Va., on April 1, 1876, as engine wiper. In March, 1881 he was transferred to Newark, Ohio, as laborer and in 1905 was made engineman in Shop Yard. In 1913 he was appointed hostler at Newark, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

August C. Hoffman

Was born on January 2, 1857. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service in January, 1883 as laborer, Baltimore Division. In 1885 he was promoted to carpenter, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

William J. Barber

Was born in Hamilton County, Ohio on September 1, 1858. His first employment was in a cooper shop at 8th and Eggleston Avenue, Cincinnati, where he remained until 1878. In June, 1878 he entered the service of the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore Railway, now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio, as trucker. In 1890 he was promoted to delivery clerk, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

John H. Howard

Was born on February 5, 1853. After leaving school, he was employed by the old M. & C. Railroad for about two years as messenger boy, during which time he learned to telegraph. After this, he entered the employ of his father, who was an undertaker in Chillicothe, remaining with him about six years. In 1876 he left his father to accept a position as operator at Lawrenceburg, Ind., on the old O. & M. R. R. In 1890 he decided that his health was being impaired by indoor work and was employed as brakeman, serving as such until he was placed in charge of the Express Office at Chillicothe, where he remained one year. In 1899 he again took service as brakeman and in 1906 was promoted to conductor, which position he held at the time of his retirement.

Cleveland's "Ferry Car" an Important Innovation in Rail Export Service with United American Lines

By J. ROSS GOULD, Magazine Correspondent, Locust Point, Md.

THE accompanying photograph is the American Steamship "MOUNT CLINTON" of 10,000 tons dead-weight, now operating in the Intercoastal service of the United American Lines, Inc., out of Baltimore.

One of the important lines docking at our terminal is the United American Lines, Inc., frequently referred to as the Harriman Lines. They operate an Intercoastal service as well as a service to Hamburg, Bremen and Baltic Ports.

A new feature has been added to the Intercoastal service of the United American Lines with the inauguration of a weekly "Ferry Car" from Cleveland, via the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. The first car left Cleveland on November 13 and after that date on Monday of each week.

This ferry car is a consolidation of less carload shipments made by various shippers. The lots are assembled by our less carload station in Cleveland and loaded in one car for the United American Lines. This insures the shippers prompt delivery and absolute connection with the steamer with a minimum of handling of shipments.

Mr. Noblett, freight traffic manager, United American Lines in New York, has informed us that this service is in line with the policy of the Company in giving shippers an intelligent solution of their needs, at the same time cooperating with the railroads—their natural allies in the Intercoastal trade.

Since the commencement of the service with the sailing of the Steamship "Sudbury" from Baltimore on September 8, the United American Lines dispatched from Pier 9, Locust Point, up to December 1, eleven steamers. Their schedule calls for a weekly sailing on Saturdays hereafter. These sailings are to be maintained by first-class steamers, of which the "Mount Clinton" is representative.

The "Mount Clinton" was formerly in transatlantic passenger service out of New York but because of her speed and adaptability to freight carrying, she is now being used in coast to coast service.

Mr. John Sonderman (for many years office manager for Furness Withy & Co., Ltd.) is the Baltimore manager for the United American Lines, Incorporated. Prior to going into the steamship business Mr. Sonderman was connected with the Foreign Freight Department of the Baltimore and Ohio for seven years. Captain H. A. Burns, of F. Jarka Co., Inc., is superintendent of pier operations at Locust Point for the United American Lines.

Both of these gentlemen are great factors in promoting the mutual interests of the United American Lines and the Baltimore and Ohio and give ample evidence by the immense tonnage brought to and carried from the Baltimore and Ohio by their line, that the spirit of cooperation so constantly emphasized by President Willard in his address at the Correspondents' Conference is strongly in force.

Brakeman J. R. Johnson a Business Getter

BRAKEMAN J. R. JOHNSON, Connelville, Pa., was recently instrumental in securing a passenger for our company.

While on his way to report for duty, Mr. Johnson was riding on a street car and overheard a passenger asking for information as to how to get to New York. Mr. Johnson told the gentleman he could go via Baltimore and Ohio at 11.40 p. m. and also explained our service in detail. Instead of alighting from the car at trolley station to make connection with competing railroad, the gentleman was taken to our station by Mr. Johnson, where he purchased a ticket to New York via Baltimore and Ohio.

Brakeman Johnson has been commended by Superintendent Martin and passenger officers for his interest and good work.

"Whatsoever Things Are Honest . . . Think on These Things"

THE conscience fund of the Baltimore and Ohio may not bulk very large on the credit side of our ledger from year to year, but that it has been made a real asset in the life of one person may be judged from the following letter recently sent anonymously to Senior Vice-President Shriver:

February 12, 1924

Dear Mr. Shriver:

Inclosed you will find $15.00 in payment for a ride I once took on your railroad free of charge. I have figured out that honesty is the best policy. At the time I took the ride I was financially embarrassed, and now that I have a few pennies I am paying you back. Thanks a lot for the service you rendered me, I am

A FAITHFUL BOOSTER

P. S.—I hope you will see to it that this money is given to the right department.

We appreciate the remittance of an old obligation by an unknown party and trust he will have all the comfort and success that his honest effort to correct past mistakes justifies.

The fifteen dollars have been sent to our Treasury Department.

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBECK

I have a nose for news and use it in my calling as Law Department correspondent, but when new arrivals appear upon the scene after I have dispatched my copy to the MAGAZINE and items are thus lost for the next publication, it does look as though I was losing my grip.

Miss Jane Frances May, entered the service in this department on January 16.

Miss May is an experienced stenographer. Her first day's work indicated that, and it was just as though she had been continuously engaged in the department.

The Law Department is now well supplied; has a full quota of girl stenographers, and they are of the best. Hurrah for the girls!

She lived in my neighborhood, and in returning from a visit to New York, employed a taxicab at Union station. Reaching her home, she found to her dismay that her hand bag, with money and other valuables, was reposing in the inner recesses of the vehicle. The chauffeur, anxious to be at his post at Union station, hastened away. Hence the visit to my domicile of the lady in question, to use the telephone. Before leaving it, a message was received that the hand bag had been turned in.

Here was my chance. "I hope when you go to New York again," I said, "you will take the Baltimore and Ohio. You will find it will meet all your requirements, and serve you well." She smiled and remarked that my suggestion would have full consideration, and I felt rewarded.

Women students in Michigan University are charged with extreme carelessness in the use of marcel waving appliances, chafing dishes and electric irons and the like, to the extent that the fire hazard at the University has been increased. It is said they forget to turn off the current under the coffee pot and similar things. I do not believe this to the extent that it is pictured, but I do believe that man's carelessness in the use of the cigarette is responsible for a great many of the conflagrations. I shall always entertain the view that the cigarette was at the bottom of our big fire in 1904.

"What are the six most important words in the English language?" was the form an inquiry took at Princeton University. Word lists from ten students demonstrated that "Loyalty" was in the lead on six of the ten lists.

Here is the dictionary definition of the word—

"Constant and faithful in any relation implying trust or confidence; bearing true allegiance."

It strikes me that it applies with remarkable clearness to the railroad man in whatever capacity he may serve.

I fear I am peculiar, but I do not like to sit next to anyone in Mr. Bopp's lunch emporium, if the fork is handled as you would manipulate a rake or a hoe, and I positively have a fit if any one in my hearing calls for "bread pudden."

The Garrison Boulevard Improvement Association gave a dinner dance at the Hotel Emerson recently, three hundred guests being present. Our Edgar W. Young is president of the Association.

Francis Ralston Cross, assistant general attorney, is to be married. Miss Charlotte C. Gittings is the name of the bride elect. Mr. Eben J. D. Cross, a brother of our Mr. Cross, is also to take unto himself a wife. In all my experience as a MAGAZINE correspondent, I have never had an opportunity before to narrate such glorious news, and I am really excited over it for fear I will not give it the proper tone. Both of these young gentlemen are just as nice as they can be, and positively just a little bit of envy is finding a lodgement in my breast. What luck some men have!

I have occasion to make frequent visits to the Treasury Department. These are pleasurable events, for the atmosphere is congenial. The door of E. M. Devereux's office is always ajar. There is one thing that always attracts my attention and admiration and that is the practice of interchanging the clerks from one desk to another as the work requires. This is to familiarize all the clerks with the work of different desks. If a holiday intervenes and banks are closed, the department has other work, and idleness does not prevail. Everyone is busily engaged all the time. The young ladies are polite and positively charming. Perhaps this has something to do with my frequent visits.

Thought for Today

Rise to the day!

If it be dark with trouble,

And all the sky is gray,

Get up with courage double;

If bright and fair the day

Let not your soul be dreary,

Set forth upon your way

And be you also cheery.

—Detroit Free Press

It won't be long before candidates for our baseball team get out their equipment and begin warming up. With most of the oldsters back and some young blood to inject new life into them, our captain and manager are looking forward to a successful season. Batter up!

"Wittie" Warren, Drafting Room, and also one of the Engineering Department bowling team's mainstays, made a name for himself the latter part of January in the tournament held at the Recreation Bowling Alleys under the auspices of the Baltimore News. From a field of 200 aspirants, by consistent bowling, "Wittie" drew away until he was eighth. On the night before the finals, however, he was taken ill, and so lost out in the final reckoning. We might mention, however, that in the last five games that he bowled, "Wittie" spilled 599 pins! Some bowler, eh? Here's wishing you better luck next time, "Wittie."

We congratulate J. E. McKibben, chief clerk to District Engineer A. H. Griffith, Cincinnati, on securing the business referred to in the January MAGAZINE. Boy, page the Traffic Department!

Freddie Gempp, saxophone virtuoso and clarinet player par excellence, has recently been made director of the Order of DeMolay Orchestra, and we understand it is making wonderful progress under his able leadership. And because that isn't enough to keep him busy, he has taken Everett Kennedy, the speedball of the department, under his wing and is teaching him the gentle art of playing a sax. It won't be many moons before these two young men will be billed at Keith's as "speed-up" artists of the past degree.

Funny thing, but while every one else was talking about Thrift, a notion came to me to join the Savings Feature, Relief Department. Although my semi-monthly check is slightly depleted each pay day, I have the satisfaction of knowing that a certain amount of money, at least, is being saved. And if I can do it, why can't some, or all, of us? A few dollars each month won't be missed, especially if you don't get your hands on it first, and at the end of a year you will find yourself the possessor of a neat little sum of money. Try it and see!

When a fellow needs a friend! When you have been invited to a dance, given in honor of a young man's twenty-first birthday, that promises to be "some" party, and your escort suddenly develops an abscessed tooth. How 'bout it, Miss Fox?

The pennant chances of our baseball team are seriously threatened by the breaking up of the famous Bridge Department infield. This famous quartet will be deprived of the valuable services of its star third baseman, who is now spending most of his time on the road. However, the captain and manager, remembering how Babe McLaughlin, the Utah "whirlwind," came through in the game with the Transportation team last year, are not discouraged. The fact that he is a southpaw is the least of the difficulties they expect to encounter, as his remarkable slugging and brilliant base running amply make up for his fielding.

Our friend Count Schanze, recently took his last year's vacation and hid himself to California and the Mack Sennett girls. At the time of this writing, February 13, he has not returned, but we will vouch that more than one girlie fell for the Count and his cute little moustache.

We have another musician of note, by name Charles Raymond Boxwell, who performs on the snare and other makes of drums, and their accoutrements. We understand that Raymond wields a wicked stick.

Cooperate with your correspondent by sending in worth-while news about your friends or yourself for the MAGAZINE. Also some pictures, please. Help brighten up our department.

And while you are cooperating with your correspondent, don't forget to cooperate with your fellow worker, and especially with the Company for which you work. Your employer pulling one way and you trying to pull another won't bring home the bacon!

And speaking of cooperation, there are several ways to do so. Cooperate not only in your particular line of work, but help to keep down expenses by practicing economy in everything you use, whether or not you pay for it personally. If it is possible for you to secure business for the Company for which you work, try your hand. And if you are unable to give the desired information yourself, get someone who can. Cooperate!

We understand that "Empty" still continues his weekly trips to the farm, in spite of the fact that the mud has been so thick that he could hardly navigate Henry. You simply can't keep a man from what he wants!

Pittsburgh District

Correspondent, J. M. WHEALAN

Those of you who are familiar with the sort of winter we have been having in the Pittsburgh District, will appreciate the nature of the accident suffered by Miss Emory recently. She went coasting with several of her friends a few nights ago and got dust in her eye.

A prominent young man from Baltimore was a recent visitor, on business, it was said.

Chef Chew appears to have started something with his famous Sally Lunns. We understand that his recipe has been given a thorough tryout by some of our department cooks and the result was eminently successful. Miss Henderson thinks them delicious.

Miss Ward has secured some through business to the Coast via both Cincinnati and Chicago, but declines to give details until she has secured more volume. Miss Ward is an enthusiastic worker in the cause and we hope soon to give you details of the results of the work which she has been doing.

Brothers Borland and Leasure are with us after cleaning up the "Pike." Seems like old times.

We welcome to our organization Messrs. Wright and Merriwether, who assume their new duties with the best wishes of the entire department.

Our compliments to our co-worker, McKibben, at Cincinnati, who has set a difficult mark to meet in the production of business.

The engineering accountants met recently at Pittsburgh in order to discuss the details of the meeting held in the office of Special Accountant Skilling at Baltimore.

General Baggage and Milk Agent

Correspondent, MABEL L. MENGES

Wallace Oest has brightened our office once more with his smiling countenance. He has been at home for more than a month recovering from an attack of diphtheria.

Chief Clerk and Mrs. C. H. Frederick and their daughter Edith left on February 7 for a trip to Florida by boat. Mr. Frederick will return from Jacksonville. Mrs. Frederick and Edith will go to Miami to visit friends.

We were delighted to have a call from our friend "Brad" Worthington and to see him looking so well again. Mr. Worthington, T. B. M., Trains 77-78, is recovering from a serious illness of nearly a year's duration.

The late Frank Waters Ridgely

We are glad to report improvement in the condition of Baggage Agent F. Watkins, Parkersburg. Some weeks ago Mr. Watkins was severely injured while on duty in an accident caused by a passing train. He has now sufficiently recovered to be moved to his home, although his leg is still in a cast. We sincerely hope that he will soon be entirely well.

We have often wondered what the terrible and frequent commotions were on the floor above us. Now we know. (See third item of Telegraph Department's notes for January.)

Ten additional milk-cream refrigerator cars have been assigned to this department for transporting the increasing volume of dairy product. These cars were selected to conform with the latest requirements of the American Railroad Association. Sectional shelves are being added to double the carrying capacity, and the cars are constructed to permit operation in fast passenger service, this being a much needed requisite. Four cars have already been released for service; the others are to follow as fast they are completed.

This department would be grateful for any information concerning prospective business in line with the freight and passenger solicitation campaign now that equipment is available. Much of the increased business has come through timely tips from employees and friends of the road, and was appreciated.

The Chestnut Farms Dairy, Washington, D. C., is making arrangements to erect a 12,000 gallon capacity shipping plant at Frederick, Md. This new plant will, no doubt, be an incentive for more intensified dairying in the Frederick district and result in greater prosperity to the community.

The Harmony Creamery Company, Pittsburgh, is also arranging to equip a fourth car with thermos tanks for hauling an additional supply of cream. The value of tank equipment in transportation of milk is just beginning to be realized, and it is a matter of only a short time until it will be used universally.

Frank Waters Ridgely died in Baltimore on January 14.

Some of the older baggagemen and other employees of the Company will remember Mr. Ridgely as the last baggage agent at the old Baltimore and Ohio Station, Washington, D. C., and the first assistant baggage agent at the new Union Station. He resigned the latter position shortly after the opening of the new station to go into other business.

Mr. Ridgely entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in 1871 as a brakeman. Two years later he became baggage agent at the Baltimore depot where he remained until the extension of the Philadelphia Division in 1885, when he was transferred to Philadelphia. Later he was transferred to Washington, D. C. During his employment at this station there was a large volume of baggage handled, especially during the presidential inaugurations, when people came from far and near. In those days it was the custom to carry an elaborate wardrobe and each person took with him several trunks. This meant a deluge of baggage whenever there was an important public affair in Washington. The baggage forces and facilities were taxed to the utmost, it being necessary to have special buildings to care for the baggage.

Mr. Ridgely was a typical Southern gentleman. He was gentle, deliberate, courteous and unusually refined; he was well liked by all who worked with him. He was also an intimate friend of former General Baggage Agent B. E. Petticord.

After Mr. Ridgely reached the age when he was compelled to give up business activities he was a frequent visitor at this office, and was always looked upon as representative of the days gone by.

Office of General Freight Claim Agent

Correspondent, NORMA H. APPLIGARTHE

Our sympathy is extended to Assistant Chief Clerk Olson, who recently lost his father, in Topeka, Kan. Also to F. L. Schepler, assistant to general freight claim agent, who recently lost his brother.

Our old friend "Jimmy" Love has received a well-deserved promotion to the position of traveling freight claim adjuster, Akron, Ohio. Good luck to him.

Our O. S. & D. Division "gladiators," Guy Seemers and Morris Friedman, gave an exhibition of wrestling at the Y. M. C. A., both participants rolling on the mat until out of breath. Of course it was a draw.

Many of our young ladies have recently purchased miniature cedar hope chests. We are at loss to understand the reason. Is it that their hopes are small, and it is only by looking into the dim and distant future that there is any chance of realization that that much hoped for day may materialize? Or is it that the good old idea of storing up linen, lingerie and the like has passed and it is now the fad to store up jewelry, knickknacks, etc? What next?

Dear Horace:

Why so many dolls with fancy paper dresses? Did you buy them to show you the state of the weather, and whether a storm is brewing? We all know the female sex is changeable enough and you can stir up a storm any time you wish by mentioning the other girl.

And now comes a belated Christmas present in the form of a beautiful diamond ring! Do you know any more good jokes, Miss Messick? Save your pennies, folks, you may need them soon.

Sleep is sweet but radio is sweeter, so C. L. Brown forgets the hour and listens to the voices of the night.

Young and old, they fall sooner or later to the fads of the day. Who will be the next to have her hair bobbed? It's leap year and it behooves us all to be as young as possible.

Have you gotten YOUR passenger, the one who might have used another road? Please someone by telling them of the BEST AND ONLY.

Relief Department

Correspondent, H. IRVING MARTIN

We have seen many enter the service of the Relief Department and many leave, none whose departure caused more regret than did William T. Dixon, when he served notice on us that he had accepted a position as secretary to superintendent of the United States Industrial Alcohol Company. Now that the 18th Amendment has linked up Alcohol with Industry, it only needs William to see that the job is done right. William never nursed a grouch and always put a smile into his work. Unnecessary to predict that he will make friends and win success.

Another new name on the payroll: Benjamin L. Ode succeeds Walter R. Carroll as messenger. Ben is another one who is "toiling upward in the night." He is studying mechanical drawing at the Maryland Institute and we are going to hear of a high average on graduation day. He realizes that he is acquiring something that will be a permanent asset on his balance sheet.

H. Baker Tall has received his honorable discharge from the National Guard. He served three years and says it was a happy day when he signed up but a much happier day when he came out. With drilling, hard work and roughing it, he is as hard as nails and is now in the class from which the advertising poster artists and Charles Dana Gibson drew their pictures of vigorous young American manhood. Unless he wears out his eyes studying the "Marquis of Queensbury's Rules," his training at Saunders Range and the Edgewood Arsenal will be of lasting benefit to his health.

The picture of the fair lady on page 50 is of Miss Marie E. Siegrist, stenographer to our fire insurance expert, Sam Griest.

"Lady Betty," daughter of J. R. Graham, building inspector, whose illness gave her father much concern, has entirely recovered and Bob again wears a smile.

Bob Smith had some anxious hours because of the serious illness of his daughter, Helen, who suffered with scarlet fever, but at this writing she is on the way to full recovery.

Building Inspector Dan Shivers is overhauling his Pierce-Arrow preparatory to taking his annual summer tour. Last summer he found the mountains too hard on his tires. He proposes to choose sandy soil or ocean board-walks for his next tour. It is said that Dan filled one section of his museum with articles picked up by his tires or entangled in his car wheels.

Mrs. Sarah A. Fleming, mother of James P. Fleming, reception hall man, died on January 22, in her ninetieth year. She was a native of Derbyshire, England.

Asleep at the switch! Your correspondent regrets that he did not have this department represented in the February MAGAZINE.

The boys in the Composing Room expressed in a tangible way the high esteem in which they hold Foreman L. B. Frey by presenting him with an electric percolator during the holiday season. The presentation speech was made by Compositor L. L. B. Heron. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Heron quoted from Mark Twain. Since that time Compositor "Rev." Hicks has been endeavoring to ascertain just who "Twain" is and how he happened to have his name mentioned.

We congratulate Operator Keller on the arrival of a young son.

Feeling that Congress might need some help and valuable suggestions from him, Compositor Feusahrens has left Baltimore and taken up his residence in Washington.

We extend our heartiest congratulations to Compositor Grund, who, at twilight on January 9, in all his glory, as a gallant knight, sped with his bride-to-be, Miss Marie Lehr, to the parsonage of Martin Evangelical Lutheran Church, where they were made one. Mr. Grund is an energetic young man, well liked by his brother craftsmen.

'Twas the month after Christmas and all through the house
There were toys strewn and broken, e'en the little tin mouse;
And the sock that once hung by the chimney with care
Has had lots of washing and a great deal of wear.
Hark! Out on the lawn baby hears a great clatter—
She runs to the window to see what is the matter.
As she pulls back the shade, to her sad surprise,
There is pussy cat playing with one of dolly's blue eyes;
And down by the front gate that leads to the street,
Lies dolly's old bonnet and her two broken feet.
"Ah, 'tis long 'til next Christmas, but I s'pose I can wait,
The best I can hope is that 'twill not be late—
So I'll be very good and as quiet as a mouse,"
Says little Miss Charlotte Lee Hum-ric-house.

No matter how busy he may be, you can always be sure of a courteous reply from him.

We are very glad to have Mr. Plumly with us again after his serious illness.

Recently we had the pleasure of meeting T. E. Rinker, who is acting as foreman in one of the camps during the illness of Foreman Yost. Mr. Rinker's camp is at present engaged in the construction of new circuits between Cumberland and Pittsburgh, and under his skillful supervision rapid progress is being made. We thoroughly enjoyed Mr. Rinker's visit, and we are sure he did also. The fair sex made a lasting impression, especially Miss Nortrup. The boys on the road display good taste. Watch out Margaret, "Ted" is coming to see us soon again.

Our sympathies are extended to the family of Frank Cavey, who died February 1. Mr. Cavey rendered services of merit and was popular among his friends. He was buried at Granite, Md. Correspondent, PAUL L. FAUSTMAN

A great statesman has passed away. Regardless of political affiliation, the deep thinking and far-sighted public agrees that Woodrow Wilson stood for what he thought was right. This is a great achievement for any man.

Speaking of service records, here are the first five on our roster: A. E. Day, 1875; J. A. McCaghey, 1881; J. B. Joynes, 1882; T. A. McCann, 1891; T. A. Murphy, 1891.

This might not be a record for the System, but it is a mark for many of our departments to shoot at.

"Phil" Wood, Mine Rating Department, has just completed a traffic course and received his diploma from La Salle University. I have always had a great deal of respect for the fellow who tries to elevate himself during his spare time.

It has probably not occurred to many of us that every holder of a life insurance policy is really a railroad stockholder, as railroad securities are held, to a great extent, by insurance companies. Incidentally, the Bethlehem Steel Company has just inaugurated a plan whereby its employees will have an opportunity to purchase preferred stock in that company effective April 1, 1924, by making small payments each pay day, or by having the amount deducted from their pay envelopes. Many of us would welcome the opportunity to do likewise in our own Company, but up to this time it has not been deemed advisable.

While listening on the radio to the trans-continental test of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company a short time ago, I was especially impressed by a little incident, to which probably no one attached much importance. General Carty, vice-president, American Telephone & Telegraph Company, was calling the roll of stations from Cuba to California to see if they were all there, and when he came to Terre Haute, Ind., a brisk and live voice said: "This is Terre Haute, Ind., Mr. _____ speaking." The General stopped a moment to say "Young man, you sound to me as if you are wide awake." That remark cost the General nothing, but if you could have heard the little chuckle and appreciative reply you would have known that that man out in Terre Haute had received something that money can't buy—a few kind words from his chief. There are some people on our Railroad like that. Give credit where credit is due, but draw the line on idle flattery, which is both insincere and worthless.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." Have you ever seen "Joe" Cooney, the fellow who comes around when the radiator, or electrical apparatus, or what not fails to operate properly in the Central Building? He is one of the cleanest and neatest mechanics I have ever seen and others say the same thing. Many of us in the offices could take a lesson from "Joe." He makes a complete change of attire at noon and when you see him upstairs in the lunch room, you would pick him out as someone's chief clerk or secretary, rather than a man whose work continually takes him into grime and soot. There is something about a well groomed man or woman that demands respect.

Well, we held another dance at Tuttle's on February 6, and, as usual, it was a great success. About two hundred attended and apparently everybody had a fine time. Roy Mansfield, who labors unusually hard to make these affairs successful, wielded the whistle in the Paul Jones. We take this opportunity to thank our friends in other departments for their assistance, especially those from the Car Service Office, who responded nobly.

If the editor will permit me, I shall "step out of my character" for a moment to say a word for the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club. Did you know that you need not be able to sing to become a member? Well, it's a fact. There are what are known as "associate members," and in looking over the list the other day I was surprised at the comparatively few enrolled. In the present day, when the value of music is being recognized all over the land, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent annually for its furtherance, it is only to be expected that the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club should keep abreast of the times. If you are interested, communicate with A. S. Hardwick, care of General Superintendent Transportation, or our editor, R. M. Van Sant, or any member of the club, who will be glad to give you details. Remember, you need not be a resident of Baltimore. Your name would look well on the list of associate members. Five dollars will put it there and give you six tickets for the Glee Club's Annual Concert.

We were grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Walter A. Kraft, wife of supervisor of

Among the speakers at a recent meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers were the president of the Great Northern Railroad, and vice-presidents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Pennsylvania Railroads. The main topic of the evening was the record-breaking tonnage moved by American railroads last year, and it was agreed by all that this was made possible only by the wonderful cooperation evinced by railroad employees.

While some people are saying "It can't be done," they are constantly being surprised by somebody doing it. This little thought was exemplified by a group of girls one week-end in January. Mildred Hussman, Rose Hull, Amanda Earle, Elizabeth McQuilton, Monnie Elloff, Marie Schmidt and Mabel Hull had talked for a month about hiking to Washington. Of course, everyone thought this was some hike—40 miles—why, they can't do it! To the girls, every knock was a boost and only helped to spur them on to greater determination. They left Baltimore, Saturday, January 26, at 1.30 p. m. The day was clear and cold—about 12 above—but with spirits undaunted they started out intending to make Laurel before dark, which they did, arriving at 5.30 p. m. They stopped at a hotel for shelter over night but alas! there was no heat. After walking so far in the cold, one could hardly expect them to sleep in a refrigerator, so the proprietor, being a good hearted fellow, said he would build a fire. Then the natural thing happened—the water pipes burst, and our plucky girls decided to get out and hunt for warmer quarters. They found them with a kind lady and her daughter who took them in and made them comfortable for the night. The next morning, early, they continued on toward the goal. After walking for several hours, fatigue came upon them—you know how it is, your feet seem to weigh a ton each, and then you feel as if you were carrying someone on your back and each step seems to grow heavier and heavier. When Berwyn was reached, feet and backs seemed too heavy to move further and all but two, Miss Earle and Miss Elloff (who must have met Mercury and borrowed his sandals), dropped out. The two pressed on to their goal and reached Washington in the early afternoon, no worse for the hike, but with the feeling in their hearts which only the Victor knows.

We need people today with this spirit, young men and young women. Set your goal and don't give up until you accomplish that for which you aim. May it always be a high and noble purpose!

Mr. Hawxhurst has taken over the management of the Ladies' Bowling League. "Abe" likes to be with the ladies, and we notice one young lady in particular, who had dropped out of the league, has renewed her membership since he became manager. How about it, Miss 4, 5, 6? We wish Mr. Hawxhurst success and hope that every girl in the office will be a member of the Bowling League. Roland Tucker was a fine manager but, Gosh, he's married!

We are sorry Miss Sherwood has been ill and are glad to have her back again. Flora Simms suffered a sprained ankle and was confined to her home for three weeks. We are glad to report her return, although she is not able to run in the fat ladies' race yet.

E. W. Greenfield was in the office for several days. We were glad to see him. One never sees E. W. without a smile, even though he has suffered much!

"If I knew the light of a smile might linger the whole day thru' And brighten some heart with a heavier part, I wouldn't withhold it, would you?"

Mr. Gilbert is still on the sick list, improvement seems to be slow but he possesses that faith which never gives up. We hope he will soon be given health and strength to continue his work among us.

Wedding bells will again ring out when Adelaide Eckmeyer, Ellen Simms, Jane Ward and Grace Jacobs become happy brides. We extend our best wishes.

By the time these notes are printed the boys of the office expect to have heard and enjoyed a radio concert, broadcasted by H. Becker, at the home of our radio expert, R. L. Collingsworth.

Wilson Auld was heard to remark that he would like to get a job in a radio broadcasting station so that his wife could tune in and he could get the last word in once.

As mentioned in the February MAGAZINE, a meeting of the Mid-Western Mechanical Valuation Committee was held in the Assembly Room, General Office Building, Baltimore, on January 17 and 18.

At the close of an interesting morning session on January 17, Senior Vice-President George M. Shriver extended a cordial welcome to the members and their guests, outlining in his remarks his personal views on depreciation.

A luncheon followed at the Engineers' Club. W. I. Cross, counsel for the Baltimore and Ohio, briefly and wittily addressed the sixty odd present.

A special train was waiting at Camden Station, and at 2.15 p. m. a trip of inspection of our terminal facilities was made, under the personal direction of Special Engineer M. F. Steinberger. Locust Point was visited and a fine view of the new elevators and piers under construction, as well as the business section of Baltimore and its harbor, was obtained. The famous Curtis Bay coal pier, with its wonderful facilities for quick loading of ships with coal for export trade, was next on the program. Keen interest was exhibited in the extensive equipment here.

Upon returning to Camden Station, several of the members enjoyed an excellent seafood supper at one of our local restaurants.

Early in the second day's session, Mr. J. Howland Gardner, vice-president, New England Steamship Company, and chairman, Equipment Committee, President's Conference Committee, addressed the meeting, giving valuable suggestions in connection with the reproduction, for valuation purposes, of locomotives, cars and floating equipment, in accordance with the methods as prepared by his committee. His remarks were supplemented by H. E. Hale, engineer, Eastern Group, President's Conference Committee.

Interesting reports were presented relating to reproduction of mechanical property of railroads, as well as service, life of equipment, and other subjects of general and vital interest in connection with valuation work.

At the close of the session the representatives were guests of the Baltimore and Ohio at a luncheon prepared under the able direction of John Bopp.

Before final adjournment, unanimous appreciation was expressed to our Company for the interesting and hospitable program.

Representatives were present from twenty odd railroads, covering all sections of the country.

The marriage of our correspondent, John A. Rupp, to Miss Mary Josephine Egenhoefer, took place on Wednesday morning, February 20, at St. James' Church, Baltimore.

The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of bridal satin embroidered with pearls, and trimmed with Duchess lace and orange blossoms. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Egenhoefer, who was dressed in gray.

Mr. J. Albert was best man. Master John Henchel was train-bearer. Little Mary Jane Sweitzer, daughter of our chief clerk, was flower girl. Her gown was of blue georgette, with hat to match. She carried a basket of pink sweet peas.

After the ceremony a large wedding breakfast followed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence G. Egenhoefer.

We extend to Mr. and Mrs. Rupp our most hearty congratulations, and hope that they will be happy in their new state.

A new and powerful Sheik has arisen to dispute the throne held jointly for many moons by Ekas and Lutz (the last named being the author of the famous "Spinal Column Twist"). This Sheridan person is a dashing young sprout from out Relay way, and, judging from the influence he has over the young and good looking girls of this office, it won't be long before he outsheiks the two aforementioned gentlemen.

The young ladies of the office gave Miss Esther Brannon a "shower" on January 21. What this "shower" consisted of we do not know but—putting bits of information together—we surmise an enjoyable evening was had by all present. Some of the high spots of the gathering were that Miss Johnson took a great liking to the cakes; "Lil" could talk of nothing but Howard; Maggie O'Shea nearly sprained her knee when the chair slipped and she kicked the top of the table; Elsie and Lilburn were sitting pretty on the piano stool. What was in the big bag "Bess" Lewis carried? Kate Dempsey was fond of the presents, one in particular. Last, but not least, Mattie nearly went to Dorsey without her hat.

The male contingent, usually on hand on these occasions, was strangely absent, but the fact that it is leap year may explain the situation.

Bowling News.

January 30. Mr. Lutz was listed on the score card as a "star." The "star" failed to shine. The "star" not only failed to shine but seemed to be in total eclipse with a game of 78 and another of 80. Denton was high with a 113 game.

February 6. This was a large night, with Royal Blues monopolizing the limelight. Pritchard rolled high for one game with 139, which is a season mark, while his three games for a total of 355 is a league record. The team also set up a season mark for three games with a count of 1157. The only old mark left standing was high team score for one game, which is still in possession of Capitol Limited.

February 13. Capitol Limited assumed the lead by taking two out of three from the Pull Men. Starting the second half of the schedule, January 2, in last place this team, by a complete form reversal, climbed right up the ladder to the top rung. Standing of teams to date is:

	Won	Lost	Per Cent.
Capitol Limited	32	25	561
Pull Men.....	31	26	544

Well, how's this for "putting one over." In the February MAGAZINE we told of the marriage of Miss Rae Euzent on January 20, and we believed what we said to be the truth. But what was the surprise of the Transportation Bureau when, on January 29, they received a box of fudge and stuffed dates, a sample of the bride's first cooking, and an announcement which said that the marriage had taken place on January 6 instead of the 20th. As an expression of their good wishes and as a proof that they all survived eating the candy, the Bureau sent the following Round Robin letter:

January 29, 1924

File 31990-A

Subject—99 Year Lease—Renewable Forever—

Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund Libowitz
2133 E. Fairmount Avenue
Baltimore, Md.

Dear Honeymooners:

We were quite surprised to receive announcement of your wedding as occurring on January 6, 1924.

Perhaps the box of dainty sweets was intended to express that January 20, 1924 was a "fudged date," as we would say in accounting terms.

As one, we all join heartily in wishing you success and the happy life we know you deserve.

MOZEL TOV, Transportation Bureau

The picture on facing page is of little Margaret Judith McHale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. McHale, St. Denis, Md. Yes, you guessed it, the daughter of "John of the Transportation Bureau." Mrs. McHale was formerly our own Helen Patterson, Voucher Bureau, and there we have the reason for Judith's good looks. Don't blame John for that extra chest expansion!

Charles Carroll Doud, Voucher File and Index Bureau, has a galloping tea-wagon of the Ford type. Evidently it sees considerable service traveling to and from Hamilton. "Twas quite a good show at the Auditorium on Monday night, at least so Anna thought, eh Charlie?

The latest addition to our office force is J. C. Meyer, who hails from Richmond. Girls, there's no chance for we hear he's married. We hope he will like Baltimore and the Coupon Bureau.

We take great satisfaction in announcing that after soaring for eleven years over the home of our esteemed friend, Herbert Corkran, traveling disbursements auditor, without even dropping a feather, the stork suddenly did a nose dive and lit squarely on top of the chimney, leaving a nine pound boy. Now Herbie sings:

He scratch mine face,
He pull mine hair
He crawls me ofer eferyvare.
But vot I care?
He iss mine needle bapy.

What did you think of the Thrift Issue of our MAGAZINE? Fine, wasn't it? Somebody said he didn't know thrift could be applied in so many ways as were found in the MAGAZINE, but it can and with good results, too. Then, I heard two men talking in the street car about the improvement of our MAGAZINE. One of them said: "They're making it more interesting every issue. It doesn't seem to be written for just the superintendents or the fellows who run the trains and know all about signals and switches and car miles, but there's something in it for everybody connected with the Baltimore and Ohio. My wife doesn't stop at reading the Woman's Page but reads all through and she's everlastingly asking me who's so-and-so and I have to read so's I don't look so dumb. As for Alice and Jim, well, they must come to blows over who is going to get it first for that children's part. Of course, I—" but right there I had reached my street so couldn't eavesdrop any longer. Although I didn't know who the man was I do know that what he said is the truth—it pays to read the MAGAZINE through.

The office bowling team has been improving rapidly in the last few weeks and from all appearances will finish close to the leaders of the League. Because of an unfortunate beginning, our "Champions" were held back, but nothing can hold them now. All teams beware, for Henecke, Whalen, Sherman, Shanahan, Mettle, Hayden, Williams, Burns, Scott, Clancy and Schacker form a combination difficult to defeat. Even greater things can be expected next season as a few of the best bowlers in the League, employed in this office, are playing on other office teams but are expecting to be with our team next year. These are Beck, Boring, Pinkerton and our old friend "Cap" Zimmerman. "Cap" fell several months ago and sprained his leg but all of us are looking for a speedy recovery. "Cap" is one of the most ardent Duckpin fans and prior to his injury was considered one of the best bowlers in the League. All old-timers are anxious to see him back in the game.

Frank Starke is boasting of the finest nephew in the world. Your correspondent contradicts that, she has a nephew who has borne that title for more than two years. Of course, it may take more than this article to convince him of the truth in this statement, but it is none the less correct. Some one hopes "Uncle Frank" will commemorate the occasion by treating himself to a new fountain pen. We did not inquire into the "why" and "wherefore" of this wish, but it's obvious that they are in earnest. Our curiosity is unlimited.

The following is an excerpt from a letter written by a patron of the Baltimore and Ohio regarding a claim filed with and adjusted by this department:

"In conclusion, I am very glad to see the Baltimore and Ohio get business, because they render service, are considerate of the shipping public and pay claims promptly. If we got as much cooperation from other Railroads, as we do from the Baltimore and Ohio, our difficulties would be greatly reduced."

This pleases us and makes us proud that we are more than just a cog in this great wheel.

Office Auditor Passenger Receipts

Correspondent, CHARLES C. WARWICK

Miss Mollie A. Hamlen, formerly of this office, was married to Emory Shipley at the Parsonage of Catonsville M. E. Church on December 31. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Edgar C. Powers, who is well known to us through his interesting addresses at the office. Our sincere good wishes are extended for a great measure of happiness.

The Valentine dance of the Welfare Association was held at Walbrook Hall on February 15. A detailed account of the "finale hopping," "pivot shaking," etc., will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Mention was made in these columns last month of "Harte and Sohl." We wish to assure Miles and Akers that we have not overlooked them.

Miss Margaret O'Leary has a remarkable suit of hair. Having it bobbed four or five times a month has no apparent effect. It remains as long as ever.

Been reading the stories about employees who have secured business for our Road? The MAGAZINE is full of them. The correspondent will be glad to report results secured by members of this department.

Agent C. E. Floom, Pier 21, E. R., met with an accident on January 19, and will be out of active service for some time.

Thomas Lenehan, assistant foreman, Pier 22, fell from a float at this station on January 18, and is now at St. Vincent Hospital, New York, with an injured knee cap.

F. W. Nelson, terminal cashier, Pier 22, N. R., has returned after a short illness. Fred was at home with tonsilitis, and said there was "A spot in his throat no gargle could touch."

On January 21 a shower was given at Pier 22, to Miss Margaret Cronin, Rate Revision Bureau, by the Misses Louise Bowne, Mary Caffrey, Anna Marshall, Josephine Marshall, Mary Monahan and Loretta McLindon, all of Pier 22, with the exception of Josephine Marshall. We were not invited, but sat down and helped ourselves plentifully to some of the very good "eats."

A bachelor girl's dinner was given to Catherine Zoerner, who resigned February 1, after being employed at Pier 22 since 1917. Miss Zoerner expects to become Mrs. Bernard Jordan. "Benny" has been with the Company since 1915. We expect to lose a number of our girls this year, as we hope they will take advantage of the privileges of "Leap Year."

Society Note—Take your gentleman early before they're all gone.

On our Children's Page in a future issue you will find a drawing by Helen, daughter of Traffic Solicitor John Bradely, 25 Broadway, New York. As we have occasion to use the address of 25 Broadway, we hope they will read our items and cooperate with us in order that we may make New York notes interesting, particularly in the line of increasing passenger and freight traffic.

James Lynch has spent some of his good evenings drawing and helping to make the "Among Ourselves Notes" a success. We wish to thank him.

On February 11 a noticeable change for the better was made at Pier 22. Every desk is in either good condition or replaced by a new one, and the pier was newly painted inside and out.

New York, mecca of travelers, is a specially good field for personal solicitation for passengers. Have you mentioned the Martha Washington and Mt. Vernon—the beautiful new Colonial dining cars, to your friends? A meal in them is a treat indeed!

On February 2 a dinner was given to Superintendent E. J. Hamner, at the Elks Club, Van Duzer Street, Stapleton, Staten Island, as a mark of respect after his stay here of 8 years. He has been assigned to other duties, after starting with us as terminal agent and finishing as superintendent. At the dinner Mr. Hamner was presented with a Gladstone traveling bag, brief case and umbrella. Mr. Hamner's friends in New York will miss him.

M. L. McElheny, Connellsville Division, is Mr. Hamner's successor.

Agent Joseph J. Bayer, Pier 22, is in Roosevelt Hospital, New York, after a successful operation for ulcer of the stomach. We hope Joe will be with us when this item is printed.

The Lighterage Department is kept busy at present. A number of improvements have been made here within the last few months enabling us to give better service to our patrons.

Tonnage figures for January, 1923, were 64,235 tons, 2,927 cars; March, 62,415 tons, 3,422 cars; October, 58,059 tons, 3,266 cars; November—30-day month—62,837 tons, 3,160 cars. January, 1924, was our banner month, with 71,705 tons, 3,206 cars. Watch New York for additional business!

Lighterage operations here are under the jurisdiction of Assistant Terminal Agent A. L. Mickelson, Pier 6, Staten Island, and J. P. O'Reilly, lighterage agent, 25 Broadway, New York. The services rendered by these gentlemen elicit favorable comment.

Regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Employees' Mutual Benefit Association was held on January 14. Officers for 1924 are: B. F. Kelly, president; E. E. McKinley, vice-president; J. B. Sharp, treasurer; G. J. Goolie, recording secretary, and J. V. Costello, corresponding secretary. Executive Committee: W. P. Slattery, J. J. Lestrangle and F. T. Metcalfe. Dr. Francis DeRevere was appointed association surgeon.

During 1923, eighty-two members received sick and injury benefits. The following men died during the year:

Peter Iandioro, trackman; Edward Viner, retired; Michael Lenza, crossing watchman; Charles Peterson, retired; J. H. Junius, conductor; Peter Hansen, ticket agent.

The accompanying photograph is of Emil Colberg. Emil is night electrician at St. George Terminal. Every time you see him he has an oil lantern in his hand, ready for work, in case of darkness on our passenger trains.

The accompanying picture may look like a schoolroom; it is the Division Accountant's Office Force, St. George, S. I. Front to rear, left: A. Offerjost, M. P. timekeeper; J. A bathtub salesman called at the home of Trainmaster J. B. Gibb with a view of interesting him in the purchase of a new up-to-date bathtub. Mr. Gibb informed the salesman that at the present time he had a ten-foot bathtub. Does Mr. Gibb use this as a swimming pool in the summer and a skating rink in the winter?

Another man gone wrong. "Dan" Reynolds, Division Engineer's Office, St. George, informs us he had taken a bride on February 4. She was Miss Ruth Osterlei. Congratulations!

Talking about getting married, Metcalfe, is slow. He and Santoro are the only fellows in the Division Engineer's Office still single. Watsa matter? We'll excuse Santoro as he is not far off, judging by the way he is planning honeys. When "Fred" went to Albany we thought it would be a honeymoon, but it doesn't seem that way. Again, Metcalfe, we repeat, Watsa matter?

At the regular monthly meeting, held on January 25, the Veterans' Association, New York Division, held at the Staten Island Railroad Club Rooms, the following officers were elected for 1924: President, S. I. Achilles; vice-president, Charles Weaver; treasurer, R. F. Farlow; secretary,

At a staff meeting on February 12 our new superintendent, M. L. McElheny, expressed the desire that all present give the correspondent of the MAGAZINE their full cooperation to make the notes of interest. Well, Mr. Correspondent, we are all with you, for when the superintendent sends the "gang" out to do something, they are going to make a good job of it. Thanks, Mr. McElheny.

Do you want a good man for a minstrel show? See A. Schoeffler, St. George Yard Office. He is well recommended by his fellow-workers, and if a star actor is needed he will fill the bill with music. He plays (?) the saxophone.

On January 2, Miss Beryl Gibson was employed as stenographer, Lighterage Department, St. George. The young men of that office are now being told to keep their minds on their work.

While walking around the freight yards, St. George, Frank Rebham observed a frog in a very dangerous position and immediately reported it to track supervisor who had it replaced with a new one.

Good work F. R!

Note: B. Loftis has a new hat two sizes larger than his old one. Why? He is now leader in the North Shore Bowling Tournament, and when he saw the headlines in all Staten Island papers he had to buy a new sky piece.

Superintendent Shriver says that it is very gratifying to receive letters such as the one quoted below, sent by the Standard Guano Company:—

"C. M. & St. P. 506233, loaded with bags for export shipment, was moved from New York Saturday night, and I thank your Mr. Fitzgibbons for lining this car up in the Baltimore Terminals so that it reached our plant at 7 a.m. this morning, and thereby saved the day. Mr. Fitzgibbons is to be commended, as it is really this kind of service that counts in a pinch."

W. T. Fitzgibbons is employed as clerk, Car Distributor's Office, Camden. This letter shows that a little earnest effort will make friends and secure business for the Baltimore and Ohio. Keep up the good work, Fitz!

There has been organized at Locust Point an Athletic organization known as the Locust Point Athletic Association, all employees, with the following officers; Phillip Hill, president; Charles Reichenberg, vice-president; J. V. Houck, recording secretary; M. Moeller, assistant recording secretary; H. W. Doegan, treasurer; M. H. Ridgeway, financial secretary.

These athletes have already established a high grade Soccer Team and also a Basket Ball Team, and expect to get results. A Base Ball Team is also under way, and it is hoped will be able to carry the pennant for 1924.

The organization would like to hear from other good teams, and will attempt to demonstrate their prowess on the field of honor, either Soccer or Basket Ball. All information and arrangements may be made with who takes F. X. Doefler's place as stenographer to Chief Clerk Sparks.

E. E. Woodward, Locust Point

All contributions will be gladly accepted in order to secure funds to purchase an alarm clock for George Crocker, so he may get up in time to catch Train 142.

One of the nicest things about being employed at Camden Station is the courtesy enjoyed by those who patronize the station restaurant, at the hands of Mr. Shadburn, the manager, Mrs. Shadburn and their force. They are doing all they can to please their customers and many pleasant comments are heard about the standard of service. Several months ago they began a special luncheon service consisting of several choices of meat, vegetables, desert and tea or coffee, which is offered to employees at a very reasonable figure, this specialty having become quite popular. Our picture shows this pleasant couple. They have made many friends during their stay at Camden.

Our fellow clerk, George Viscosil, we understand, has become a "violin virtuosa" and is very accommodating. When he appears in public with that permanent wave and draws his bow, his appearance, coupled with his exquisite performance, captures the feminine portion of his audience and they fall by the dozen.

Go Get 'Em

The following excerpt from letter from an attorney-at-law in New York City, dated January 12, to his friend, George Abbott, Baltimore, an employee at Locust Point, gives evidence that our boys at the Point want to get on the firing line in getting business for our road.

"The last time I was down there (Baltimore), I took your advice and travelled on the Baltimore and Ohio for the first time and so far as service and comfort, as well as punctuality, is concerned, the Baltimore and Ohio has far superior service to its competitors in my opinion. It was such a pleasure to arrive at my destination on time. Well, you live and learn.

"Hereafter I will not have to keep my friends wasting time, waiting for me at the station. Thanks to you."

Bernie Higdon & his Character

Your correspondent showed the above to Frank E. Beck, who has been temporarily assigned to Locust Point Office, and, after intercession by me, reluctantly (he being of a modest nature), agreed to give me the following experience occurring in the last 30 days:

"I secured two passengers for Lamara, Iowa, who were about to book their trip on a competing line to Chicago, by offering to secure their tickets to destination without putting them to this trouble. They left Baltimore on our train No. 7, February 21 and arrived in Chicago the next day, after an enjoyable trip. I received word from them saying the Pullman and Baltimore and Ohio train crews were very thoughtful and polite, extending to them every courtesy. They also spoke of the excellent service and reasonable prices prevailing on the dining car; and they said when they return to Baltimore they will come from Chicago via the Baltimore and Ohio.

"I also secured one of the constant users of a competitor, between New York and Baltimore, by offering the services of my auto to carry him to our Mt. Royal Station to catch our train No. 528, leaving at 1.25 a. m. This man is a frequent visitor to Baltimore, and he is now a satisfied patron of the Baltimore and Ohio and intends to use our road entirely whenever he travels from New York to the West."

Here are two of the many examples of loyalty to the Baltimore and Ohio, which employes are constantly showing.

A bowling team has been organized by the employes of the Agent's Office at Locust Point. Wm. Becker, captain of this team, would like to hear from teams of Baltimore City that would like to arrange match games to suit the convenience of both teams. Communications may be addressed to Mr. Wm. Becker, 1218 W. North Avenue, or by phone Madison 3790-J.

We are glad to report the return, on February 1, of Andy Miles, alias "Andy Gump," who, owing to a serious illness (necessitating an operation), has been on the sick list for about six weeks. His interest in his work could ill brook further confinement to his room.

It is the earnest wish of his many friends that no ill effects will result from his effort and that he may enjoy good health for many years.

The accompanying photograph is of E. E. Woodward, who is connected with our Police Department at Locust Point.

Mr. Woodward was born in Frederick, Md., on July 17, 1866, entered the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio on October 19, 1910, at Brunswick Transfer Shed under W. E. Shannon, as an abstract clerk. Then he assisted in handling the Eastbound mail and had charge of it until transferred to the Police Department on April 19, 1917 as a watchman, under Lieut. H. J. McCall, and was stationed on the north end of grain elevator B, recently destroyed by fire. Mr. Woodward has filled all watchmen positions from Pier 1 to Pier 10 and at present is stationed at the Baltimore and Ohio Police Department Office, foot of Andre St., as a watchman and telephone clerk from 12 midnight to 8 a. m.

Woodward was at one time foreman of the Brunswick Volunteer Fire Department and has taken active part in all Baltimore and Ohio fires, day and night. He also served as a volunteer in Company "K," District of Columbia volunteers, Spanish-American War, and had the honor, as a company clerk, of writing his own discharge and promotion papers. These he has framed at his home, 17 East Barney St. He served with honor under Col. Geo. H. Harries, commander, and Maj. Charles Delane Hines, 2nd battalion, who, in 1917, was connected with the Baltimore and Ohio at the Central Building.

Mr. Woodward is a member of the General Henry W. Lawton Camp 5, S. A. W. V. and is also a member of the Tribe of Ben Hur, South Baltimore Court, No. 15.

MAGAZINE correspondents especially will be interested in reading the following clipping, given me by a friend who has had it for thirty years. Attempting to read it to a few friends, I was almost seized with lock jaw and a serum was about to be administered. However, fortunately, I quieted down and my jaws became unlocked. After careful study, if my readers are unable to understand just what it is all about, I suggest they do as I did, namely, "Pass it to the editor."

"In promulgating your esoteric cogitations, or articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable, philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensibility, coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of fraudulent garrulity, jejune babblement, and assinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous descantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, pompous prolixity, psittacous vacuity, ventriloquial verbosity, and vaniloquent vapidty. Shun double-entendres, prurient jocosity, and pestiferous profanity, obseurant or apparent."

Superintendent of Shops Office

What a GRAND and GLORIOUS feeling it was to wake up on the morning of February 5, and be filled with the thought that today is the day we move to our new office building. December 17, 1922, was the date our former office building went up in flames, and today on the same spot stands a newer, more up-to-date and substantial office building, covering the same space, but with one more story added to it. There is ample space for everybody, and, it is a daylight building owing to the number of windows. Part of the new building will be occupied by the M. C. B. Bureau.

T. R. Stewart, superintendent of shops, when he entered his private office on the morning of February 5, was surprised by its sweet fragrance; foremen of the various shops, as well as clerks in the office, presented him with several baskets of flowers.

Chief Clerk C. W. Serp was also the recipient of several bouquets of flowers, from his wife, son and nephews.

J. E. Tatum, superintendent of the building, who has been busily engaged since we occupied our new quarters, was also presented with several bouquets by his wife and grandchildren.

To Miss Elsie M. Demitz, file clerk, Mechanical Engineer's Office, goes the honor of selecting the name for one of the two new colonial diners recently built. She conceived the idea that one should be named "Dolly Madison," and sent her suggestion to Vice-President C. W. Galloway. She received a reply thanking her for the suggestion and informing her that this name had been adopted for one of the new diners. The other car is to be named "Betsy Ross."

Freight Car Department

We are glad to announce that our old friend Johnnie Sobens, assistant foreman, has returned to his position as assistant foreman on box cars.

Albert L. Hafner, our new assistant foreman, is congratulated upon his promotion to assistant shop foreman. We are all with you, "Al."

EXTRA! After a peaceful married life of several years, a new musical instrument has arrived at the home of W. S. Caples, Accounting Department. He is now the proud father of a ten and one-half pound boy, born on January 23, who will be known as Gerald—not Jerry—William Caples. "Bill" lives in Halethorpe and is the happiest man in 48 states and two territories. In days past, it was only with considerable trouble that Bill was able to keep in line with the "Twelve minute" gang, in their daily walks from the station to Post Office at Halethorpe. Now, the rest of them fall behind. Bill walks on air and passes Washington Boulevard far in the lead. Oh, well, there is only ONE first born son, and, in common with his fellow employes, the "Twelve Minute Gang," extends hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Caples.

It is reported by the Halethorpe news gatherer that Mr. Caples is busily engaged fixing up the old "Henry" so that young Gerald will be able to take his exercise helping dad run it this summer.

Roland A. Garrett, the father of twins born last October, reports they are doing well, but they sleep all day. Maybe that accounts for daddy's sleepy eyes in the morning.

Millard Traband has had his share of trouble during the past month. His two children have been confined to the house because of illness. When the youngsters recovered, mother had her turn. We all know what it means when mother is sick. We are glad that all are now improving.

Mrs. Armstrong, wife of one of the "Twelve Minute Gang" has returned after an operation performed at St. Agnes. Congratulations on her recovery!

With regrets to the Cumberland Division

After many months of anxious waiting, but with our shoulders to the wheel, our efforts at last bore fruit, the Baltimore Division not only passed the Cumberland Division but leads all divisions on the Eastern Lines in Freight Train Performance for December, 1923. To show that this was not a mistake, or luck, we repeated in January. It is fine to look down upon the Cumberland Division with the feeling that the foundation we have constructed during these long months of waiting will support us in this lofty position for some time to come.

We now understand why W. H. ("Jack") Tarr wanted to give up the job of correspondent. A few days ago "Jack" laid off: a very unusual thing. Three days later he returned and said, "It's a boy! A seven-pound boy!" Congratulations, "Jack"! We understand—you can't write articles and tell bedtime stories too.

Engine 5203, a photograph of which will be found on these pages, is the pride of Master Mechanic J. P. Hines. However, the East End is not the only place they have pets. Ask General Foreman M. E. Mullen about the 5076, relief engine, Brunswick, better known as "Spark Plug." We hoped to have a picture of "Sparky," but because of weather conditions and photographer's absence, we are unable to do so.

Miss Elizabeth Carr, now Mrs. Hubbard started something when she married "Pete." Her friend Miss Cora Ekin has followed her example and taken unto herself a husband. Congratulations, Cora!

Miss Florence Goodman, former secretary to division engineer, is now filling position in "DO" made vacant by the marriage of Miss Ekin. Watch your step, Floss, you know the fate of your predecessor.

Miss Esther Auld, stenographer, Division Engineer's Office, has been appointed secretary to division engineer, vice Miss Goodman.

F. X. Doefler has been appointed clerk to Passenger Trainmaster Mewshaw during the absence of "Slim" Mallery. Everyone wishes Frank luck.

Chief Clerk W. M. "Bill" Devlin was ill for several days with the grippe, but is now back, smiling as usual and looking strong and healthy.

On February 1, a farewell dinner was given at the Arcadia, Philadelphia, to General Freight Agent John H. Carroll, Jr., prior to his departure for Pittsburgh, where he is now located. District Freight Agent Babneu was toast master. General Superintendent Van Horn, Superintendent Hoskins, Terminal Trainmaster Gallary, Division Engineer Harveson, Terminal Agent Sands and District Passenger Agent Haase were among those present and made short addresses. Following the festivities, Mr. Carroll was presented with a handsome chime clock by Mr. Babneu on behalf of the guests present, as a token of their esteem. Mr. Carroll had many friends in Philadelphia and while we are sorry to see him go we are glad of his promotion. To G. S. Harlan, his successor, we extend a hearty welcome.

Our accommodating and smiling red cap porter, Arthur Simmons, who holds forth at 24th and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia, has developed into a poet. After conducting a party to the Capitol Limited

Chicago Sleeper he struck off the following poem:

"The Baltimore and Ohio—The Best and Only"

Here we are, boys, running on time,
Years ago you said we ran behind time,
Now all our equipment is up-to-date;
Nobody can say the B & O is late.
The Capitol Limited is awfully fast,
Boys, we are giving our enemies H— at last.
They are fighting us from every side,
Once tried, this train you will always ride.
Five and Six—we call's 'em dat—
Washington to Chicago in nineteen hours flat.

Oh! The dining car service is simply grand,
The best you can find in all the land.
There's a barber shop and maid service too,
The Pullman Porter will shine your shoe,
You can get a hair cut, shave and massage,
At the very same price your barber would charge,

It is a very fine train, that is true,
And every employe will be courteous to you,

Terminal Trainmaster R. C. Davis, Brunswick, is proud of his children. La Vern, age 15, and Howey, age 13. We don't blame him, but wait 'till Jack Tarr springs the photo of that seven pound boy of his!

The Baltimore Division, which we cheerfully admit is the best on the System, not being satisfied with having the best roadbed and track, has started to improve the high-ways adjacent by making the road crossings not only the smoothest, but the best protected. We have recently installed standard flash-light signals at Winchester, Keedysville, Ridgeville, Terra Cotta, Lamond, Takoma Park, Gaithersburg, Lansdowne, Eddystone and Glenolden. The new form of protection has met with favorable comment of motorists and County and State officials and we feel it will only be a matter of time until we will discard other forms of road crossing protection and make the protection at these points compare with the other standards we have on our Division.

Have you been signalled to STOP by Signal Supervisor B. H. (Bert) Prinn, better known as "Flash-Light," and LOOKED AND LISTENED to his description of his great achievement in the construction and installation of the famous Flash-Light Signals? Bert's story starts with the first signals installed at Winchester, on the Valley, where the movement over the crossing is very slow; up through the City of Washington, to the placing of one of his signals in the Banquet Hall of the Emerson Hotel, Baltimore, which was displayed for the "Wise Men." Bert has not stopped yet and expects to exhibit one of his signals at the next automobile show in Washington so that senators, representatives and other high dignitaries may view his work. We are interested in you, "Flash-Light," and feel that your success is also ours.

The stationmasters at Philadelphia have lost their "home" and are now located in a room under the stairs in the station. This room is equipped with a large boiler, which is kept hot by the power plant at all hours of the day and the stationmasters are "sweating blood," but they say—"for a worthy cause—wait until you see our old home remodeled." They expect to be back in their office by Easter. We bet they'll make a run on the passenger trainmaster for buttons, devices, etc. then. Still, it is just as Passenger Trainman M. R. Bujac (if you don't know him, get acquainted with him) says—"Little by little we accomplish great things." He looks forward to the time when the Baltimore and Ohio will have a station at New York and a new station at Philadelphia. Here's hoping his prediction will come true.

We extend our sympathy to the family of Conductor W. W. Shay who was fatally injured at Lumbrook, Del., on January 9. Conductor Shay entered the service as a freight brakeman on March 24, 1904 and was promoted to conductor on March 20, 1916. He had many friends and was well liked on the East and West Ends of the Baltimore Division.

The hero of DO, Dispatcher E. F. Kelly! "Ed's" sister was recently taken ill and an operation was performed necessitating the transfusion of a quart of blood. "Ed" stepped to the front and made the sacrifice. His sister is now getting along nicely and "Ed" is still his old sweet self.

Superintendent Hoskins says the performance of Trains 94 and 97 improved during the month of January. Engineers L. K. Heck, C. Richter, T. B. Stringer, F. E. Weightman, O. L. Welsh and A. W. Ecker are in this fast freight service and have made a number of creditable runs. Next month we hope to announce a record performance.

Material Clerk E. E. Myerly's slogan is, "Keep that desk clear." No correspondence lingers there. Recently he dictated letters at the rate of two every three and a half minutes. Fifteen minutes later he came to, suddenly realizing that he had been dictating to empty air. He had forgotten that he had sent his stenographer out. Tie a string to your finger, hereafter, "Ed."

We went into the Division Engineer's Office to interview Division Engineer C. B. Harveson and Assistant Division Engineer T. Bloecher concerning notes for the MAGAZINE. They both said that they did not know anything of interest or anything funny except themselves—take a good look at them, sometime.

Dispatchers H. H. ("Ham") Hamilton and W. S. ("Baldy") Eccleston are watching the sun—measuring it in every way imaginable—keeping a daily record of the height it reaches, the heat it throws, etc. "Ham" has a fine place at Manhattan Beach and intends to spend the summer there. "Baldy" has his machine out of the shop and is getting the old hack all spruced up for weekend trips to Pine Bluffs, where he has his summer mansion.

Chief Dispatcher M. T. ("Tom") LaMar has a Cleveland. He recently made the statement that he ran his machine for a month on ten gallons of gas. Upon going into this a little deeper, it was developed that during the month he had used the machine three times to run to the market, located about two blocks from his home. You ought to trade it in for an Oakland, "Tom." See "Roby" for further information.

Operator W. L. ("Roby") Robinson put his machine into the garage the other night. Next morning he was unable to get it out.

PRIZE WINNERS—BALTIMORE DIVISION

1. Foreman F. L. Harwood, East End. 2. Foreman C. E. Asher, East End. 3. Foreman A. Ferruccio, East End. 4. Supervisor C. E. Wolfsberger, East End

The lock on the door had frozen. You can talk the public into buying a machine, "Roby," but you can't talk a machine out of a garage. From reports of the language used that morning the lock should have melted.

Here's a customer, "Roby"—Dispatcher C. A. ("Goose") Gosnell sent his machine to a repair shop recently to be overhauled. Through forgetfulness on someone's part (he won't admit it was his) the radiator was not drained. Result, a new radiator and motor and a drained pocket-book. He'll never forget to drain it after this.

H. N. Constantine and O. L. Hamilton, Division Accountant's Office, have finished a pleasant hunting season of several days on Herring Bay, Patuxent, Magothy and South Rivers. Their report follows: Ducks 104, rabbits 42, quail 14, doves 42, reed birds 460, woodcock 2, jacksnipe 5. We don't know what kind of a story to call this—they didn't shoot any fish. For pointers on the art of gunning, see "Buck" or "Ham."

A hot race is on in the Division Accountant's Office Bowling League. If you don't believe it ask Cox. Anyone wishing games write C. M. Machin and "Charlie" will have the money.

A delightful week-end party was held recently by Messrs. Childs, Roche, Hamilton, Priel and Swein, Division Accountant's Office, and Moriarity, General Superintendent's Office, at the cozy bungalow of Mr. Childs at the head of South River. The journey to the mansion was made in the old faithful "Henry Ford," which groaned beneath the weight of these huskies and the substance for their existence over the week-end.

Bountiful meals were prepared by Chef Roche. It became necessary to assist Priel and Swein from the table after each meal. Moriarity still uses the "Clean-up-Broom." Hamilton took his usual tour through the woods with his gun, looking for a "shot." He generally goes to the same tree. All had a pleasant time and returned home Sunday night.

A. F. North, Division Accountant's Office, has become a "Rough Rider"—it's very rough on him, he's sore from one week to the other. Yep—he joined the 110th Field Artillery, Battery F. If you want to see some real riding go out some Tuesday night.

Did you ever hear a candy-liner, dog knoter and tabby get together in an argument about why the Baltimore Division is better than the Cumberland Division. For educational purposes stop in the "Eel Pot," as the Trainman's Room on Camden Street is known, between 12 and 1 p. m., anyway. We're back of you—Baltimore Division men—don't let the Tabbies put anything over on you.

The cartoon, "The Terror of Susquehanna Flats," is the artist's conception of Division Operator H. K. Hartman, better known as "The Chief," killing those ducks for the banquet which was held by those well-known nimrods—Conductor Howard Lane, Assistant Trainmaster J. C. Basford and Division Operator H. K. Hartman. From all we have heard and from the back view of a duck-cating "bon viveur," who attended the festivities, it must have been some banquet. See page 60.

The publicity which the Cumberland Division has derived from the fact that that division is located at Harper's Ferry has made some of our fellow employees thoroughly acquainted with the "reason why," feel that it would be an easy matter to surpass this famous historic and beauty spot by fixing up a spot of our own. They have elected Point of Rocks (formerly Washington Junction) to have this distinction.

Point of Rocks is a natural beauty spot and has many advantages which have not been set forth, both historical and otherwise. Watch Point of Rocks. For further particulars address Assistant Trainmaster J. J. McCabe, mayor of that beautiful community.

Several of our friends have been spending their vacations on the Shenandoah and Valley Railroad of Virginia; others are contemplating going to that part of the railroad for a few days' rest. "Mayor" McCabe has been very busy entertaining. He states that there are still plenty of fine apples in cold storage; the chickens are coming along fine but that the cider barrel is getting pretty low.

The Freight Claim Prevention Committee is doing some wonderful work under the leadership of our amiable and efficient Terminal Agent "Bill" Neilson. The minutes of these meetings are being spread broadcast over the division and are having a great effect in educating and instructing employees in this important matter. All are invited to attend these meetings, which are held in the office of the superintendent of the Baltimore Division at 10.30 a.m. on the second Wednesday of each month.

SAFETY FIRST. Don't fail to be present at one of our Grand Rallies and dances to be held in the interest of Safety First; Philadelphia, April 2, and Brunswick on May 13. From the preparations being made you will be sure to enjoy yourself. Bring your family and your friends.

We are glad to learn of the promotion of "Johnny" Hayes, our friend and former division freight agent, to the position of assistant general freight agent, Baltimore. "Johnny"—a Baltimore Division man, mind you—grew famous over the entire System by winning first prize in presenting the best paper on "Freight Solicitation." Believe us, John practices what he preaches. He has our best wishes for success.

The Davis, Bissett, Mullen Company, located at Brunswick, and commonly known as the "Keep Them Moving Gang," have been doing a considerable amount of entertaining lately. Mechanical officers and others have been visiting Brunswick to get a few pointers on how to repair cars while in motion and to pick up the finer points of terminal operation. We trust that their visits have been profitable.

General Foreman H. L. Bach, our "One Man Band," and General Yardmaster W. M. Murphey, the "Maintracker," with the assistance of G. L. Hennick, our sprightly ear foreman, have been making some wonderful records at Wilsmere, with Assistant Trainmaster J. C. Basford standing on the side line singing "Here She Comes—There She Goes."

We extend our deepest sympathy to Clerk Arthur J. McKernan, on the death of his little son on January 26.

Welcome to "Willie" Lawrence, former delivery clerk, pier 24.

Our "business getter," Edward Mitchell, has been transferred from Pier 62 to Pier 64. Success to him!

Bobbed hair fever has reached the Cashier's Office at Pier 22. Mildred Blackburn and Anna McGinley are among the victims. Who will be next?

Edna McFadden, stenographer to terminal agent, Pier 22, asks, "When are they going to put sleeping cars on the Manayunk Line?"

The story is told of a railroad president, who, hearing of a worker who had not, in twenty years' service, missed a day from his duties, or been reprimanded for carelessness, idleness or mistakes, called him into his office to compliment and commend him.

"I have heard splendid things about you," he said to his model worker. "Now tell me just what your duties are."

"Well, sir," replied the employee, "it's my job to stay on the platform, and every time a train pulls in, I walk along it and tap all wheels with a hammer. I've been doing that steadily ever since I worked for the company."

"And what do you do that for?" demanded the president. The model worker scratched his head for a while and then answered candidly: "I'm derved if I know."

Don't be afraid to ask questions. Be an eternal question mark.

Learn what relation the work you are doing has to other operations of the company. Understand what you are doing and why you are doing it.

Success comes only to those who know.

The one who merely goes through the motions soon finds that opportunity has lost his address.

Ask questions and grow.

The Ladies' Auxiliary at Brunswick recently presented W. C. Compton, secretary, Veterans' Association, with a beautiful monogram ring, showing their appreciation of his securing Pullman accommodations for their trip to the Galloway-Fries celebration in Cincinnati.

John Talbott, clerk, Motive Power Department, who has been absent since last February, has resumed duty. He has taken a position with Mr. Shannon at the Transfer Shed.

The accompanying photographs are of Wilma Jean, daughter of Ezra Baker, employee, Transfer Shed, and Richard Fisher, brother of correspondent.

We are indebted to Charles W. Smith, tool room attendant at Brunswick, for the following historical data of the Baltimore and Ohio, which was extracted from the Business Guide of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company published in 1860. This Business Guide at that time sold for $1.00 per copy. Mr. Smith's father, Christian Smith, was employed as a fireman for four months and then as engineer, his last position being road foreman of engines on the Second Division. He took the first engine west and his brother, John R. Smith, who was general foreman of of April, 1832, the whole line was completed to Point of Rocks, 70 miles. We will here remark that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was the first railroad in operation in the United States, and consequently attracted considerable attention, not only in this country, but also in many parts of Europe. During the summer of 1831 the Company commenced the construction of the Branch Road to Washington, D. C., and during the same summer, the first locomotive, called the 'York,' and built at York, Pa., was run upon the Road. (This was the first locomotive built for the Company. The Tom Thumb, Peter Cooper's locomotive and the first one built in America, had been tried on August 25, 1830.—Ed.)

"On the 20th of July, 1835, the Washington Branch Road was opened, and on the following 25th of August travel between Baltimore and Washington commenced. During the first four months the travel averaged 200 passengers per day.

"On the 1st of June, 1842, the Road was opened for travel to Hancock, Md., and on the 5th of November, same year, it was completed to Cumberland.

"On the 22d day of June, 1852, the Road was opened for travel to Fairmont, W. Va., and on the 1st day of January, 1855, the first train of cars ran over the entire Road from Baltimore to Wheeling."

We are very much pleased to have a photograph of Mr. Smith to be printed with these notes.

While pulling out of the yard, Engine 1712 had brake rigging dragging and this defect was discovered by our Patrolman Regenauer. We appreciate the interest that Patrolman Regenauer takes in things that ordinarily are not his regular duties and for his watching this train and others, too, for such defects.

The last few days have wrought wonderful changes in the Rest House. All the walls in the hall ways and bed-rooms have been washed and painted. Everything is now shining like a new dollar. This work was supervised by Manager Parrish.

Lots of credit is due to our General Yard Master Murphey for the manner in which the fast freights are moving through Wilsmere. They are making better time through our terminal now than ever before. Interest is taken by everyone to keep these trains moving. In the early morning hours you can hear Assistant General Yard Master Stifler and Yard Master Densmore on the 'phone asking the chief dispatcher for information on first and second 697. They believe the sooner 'he' comes the sooner 'he' goes. At night you can see Yard

Second Trick Yardmaster L. F. Kirk, Wilsmere

Master Tommie Gaynor asking the train booker if he has heard any "dope" on 94 or the stock train. Our motto is "Keep the freight moving."

We are glad that our scale track, which until very recently was a stub end track, has been connected to the ladder in the East Bound Yard. This addition to the scales is not only a great time-saver, but it prevents the yard masters who weigh the cars losing their patience. We used to have to put the car on the scale, weigh it, then pull it off. Now, since the scale has been connected up with the ladder, all the crew has to do is to weigh the car and push right through the track, saving much time.

Our stenographer is taking special courses in English in Philadelphia, going to classes three times a week. He can hardly wait until class night comes. Perhaps there is something more in Philadelphia than the English class. It won't be long now and I hope that they will give us an "invite."

We take pleasure in announcing the arrival of a young son to Yard Brakeman T. J. Dolan and his wife. Both are doing finely. On the other hand, we don't see any cigars. May! they will come later. Good luck to the family!

Chief Crew Dispatcher A. L. Wilson was recently observed writing out requests for transportation covering a trip South. He's not going alone, either! We all think that the party of the second part has plenty of "nerve" to take over our friend Wilson, but—we wish them all good luck possible, and hope we will at least get a piece of the cake.

Our photograph is of Second Trick West-bound Yardmaster L. F. Kirk. When you need any information about westbound movements after 3.00 p. m., just ask "Larry" and you'll get it.

Extra! A few days ago Mr. Cooper called her hubby, Machinist Cooper, on the telephone. Told him to hurry home a baby had just cut a tooth, she also told him to bring a roll of films along! Send baby, or rather, some tooth!

Yardmaster Williams and his wife may be seen almost any day, after hubby leaves work, riding in their new Chevrolet coupe. George might bring the "Chev" down to the yard and give us all a ride, we think.

An employee at Piedmont furnishes picture of engine 104 taken in the year 1865, in charge of Engineer Charles Helms, who died a few years ago. At that time, Piedmont was the end of the division and the yard had a capacity of 300 cars. It was considered a well equipped terminal, having two roundhouses and a square shop; the shops were equipped with all the latest machinery, and were training schools for many young men, who, after learning their trade, branched out into other important fields. There was a swinging bridge over the Potomac in the rear of the shops, to permit employees living on the Maryland side to get to and from their work; an old bell in the tower tolled the hours and called the men to work, this practice being general on the System at that time, before steam whistles came into general use. The old bell was donated to the local Presbyterian Church, many years ago, and is still in use calling the members to worship.

Everyone seems to be making a record these days. Our old friend "Bill" W. B. Sonners, operator, WC Office, Cumberland, feels that he has made a record himself in completing more than two thousand days of continuous service without losing a day. He also has been able to get his garden in first each spring.

Our Social Clubs seem to be vieing with each other in arranging good times. The Queen City Social Club entertained with a card party and dance February 12, in the Division Accountant's Office; the Baltimore and Ohio Social Club, held a Valentine Dance in the Superintendent of Shops' Office on February 14, the committees are to be congratulated on the success of these affairs.

On February 4, a banquet was tendered Messrs. T. K. Faherty, assistant Superintendent, Monongah Division, and Wm. C. Baker, train master, Connellsville Division at the "Queen City Hotel," Cumberland, upon their recent promotions, by the staff and friends on the Cumberland Division. Superintendent R. W. Brown was toast-master, while almost every one present had something to say, wishing them every success in their new fields. A letter was read from General Superintendent Van-Horn, who was unable to attend, because of a previous engagement.

V. N. Carrico, assistant train master, M. & K. Junction, has been promoted to assistant train master, East End, Cumberland Division, vice W. C. Baker, promoted. W. Henry has been promoted to assistant train master, M. & K. Junction, vice Mr. Carrico. These men are well known, and their many friends wish them every success.

We frequently hear of a commendable act on the part of our patrons and friends along the line. On February 10, Mr. A. P. Wentling, Paw Paw, W. Va., while at our station, noticed a car off center in a west-bound train. He immediately advised Operator Hardy at Okonoko. Train was stopped and car set out. Mr. Wentling has been thanked for his prompt action.

Our fellow correspondent, Ben Tasker, assistant shop clerk, Keyser, is continually telling us about the wonderful checker club he has organized at Keyser, and sending his challenges to the four winds. We claim the Championship and if Ben thinks he knows how to play checkers, we are willing to give him a chance at the nickleplated umbrella before the end of the season.

Our old friend Jake Miller always talks of the beauties of Sandy Hook, but we have been unable to get him to give us a story, so we will have to look to our old friend "Bill" Toomey for it.

eat, and a fine musical program at each meeting.

The Safety Department is arranging for a big Safety Rally at Cumberland early in April. This is a subject that is always foremost in the minds of our employees. Anything to promote their welfare is bound to meet with success.

Freight Agent C. R. Grimm has been promising to let us have a picture of his efficient force but to date, we have no record. "What's the matter C. R." The great work the boys and girls have been doing, together with that record breaking crew of the warehouse deserves recognition. After this, no picture, no notes. WHEN DO WE GET THAT PICTURE?

Engineer William M. Kelly, Connellsville Division, working out of Cumberland, died on January 28, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Baltimore, after an illness of six weeks. "Brother Kelly," as he was known by practically every man on the Maryland and Pennsylvania Districts, was one of the most popular engineers on the System. Thirty-three years of active service, with a clean record, a friend of every man he met, will be the memory of "Brother." Mr. Kelly was one of the old school, working day and night, always ready with a joke and ever trying to make the way a little easier for the other man. The writer, some years ago, when first entering the service of the Baltimore and Ohio was a brakeman on the Pike, and will ever remember the fatherly interest of Brother Kelly; his teachings of safety first, and his interest in his fellow man, years ago earned him the name of "Brother" as he will ever be remembered. Mr. Kelly is survived by his widow, the second wife, and by four sons, Rev. Father William M. Kelly, Baltimore; Frank J., Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.; Anthony J., Washington; and John T. Kelly at home, and to them we offer our sincere sympathy.

Agent Burr Flag, North Mountain, W. Va., died at his home on February 17, after a short illness. Mr. Flag was known by every employe on the East End of our division and enjoyed an enviable reputation as a railroad man, having been an agent on our division for over thirty years. While seldom absent from duty he was always a welcome visitor to the offices in Cumberland and we deeply sympathize with the family in their bereavement.

It must have been gratifying to all employes of the Baltimore and Ohio to read General Freight Claim Agent Glessner's supplement No. 2 to bulletin 61 of January 14, which indicates the decrease in claim payments, down to less than one per cent. of the freight revenue for the year of 1923. All employes have a share in this and we trust that this division will do its full duty and get behind the slogan "Reduce our claim payments to .75 per cent. in 1924."

Boys, how many remember the 1170? Here is a picture taken in Cumberland Yard in 1907 with "Bern" Reeder, "Dan"

Kitzmiller, "Andy" Lewis, J. S. Smith and John Helfrick. Wonder which way she would grab one of the trains that the 6100 class engines are bringing into the yard today!

Talk about interest in your work and in your railroad, here is one for you. J. W. Driscoll, Cumberland Yard brakeman, known to all of us as "Bulleye," was visiting in a city on a western division and overheard a complaint by one of the merchants on Baltimore and Ohio service. Knowing this to be very unusual, "Bulleye" made a complete investigation, then went back to the merchant advising him that he was a representative of the Baltimore and Ohio and understood there was some complaint about the service. The merchant told his story and J. W. advised him the car in question had been received from a connecting line at 1:15 p. m. and had been switched out and placed on the consignees siding at exactly 4:10 p. m. or less than three hours after it had arrived on the Baltimore and Ohio Lines. The merchant thanked him and said: "In the future, guess I'd better see who is responsible before I make a complaint." Just another case where our Railroad might have gotten a whole lot of bad advertising from a man who was sore on slow movement and was too quick to blame the delivering road.

Hear a lot of jokes about stationmasters every once in a while but here is one that is full of business and not much time for joking on the job. Night Stationmaster L. M. Rausch at Cumberland. "Snookums," as he is better known is a young man but has been with us a little over ten years.

Someone is using those business getters, soliciting cards. On February 14, we received 18 trains in the Eastbound yard in seven hours and forty-three minutes.

Keep after them. While this is handling business, sure enough, we can still do better.

Who remembers the fourth man on this picture? We know "Happy" Law, "Eddie" Mills and "Bob" Valentine and will leave the other one to our readers. This picture was taken about 15 years ago in Cumberland and no doubt will bring back happy memories.

Division Freight Agent R. J. Beggs is still going up the ladder and we are happy to announce his appointment as assistant general freight agent, Baltimore. Mr. Beggs made many friends on the Cumberland Division while stationed here. While we are always sorry to lose a good man we are happy to hear of his well merited promotion.

Mrs. Mollie McDonald, index clerk, Superintendent's Office, is getting to be quite a regular visitor to Paw Paw. That's all right, "Mollie," on the home town stuff but watch your step.

When you are boosting The Capitol Limited, don't forget our other crack trains, all steel, well lighted, comfortable and four other east and westbound trains that carry observation cars, and best of all operating ON TIME with dependable regularity. No wonder we are proud of our road.

With profound sorrow, we report the death of Conductor Patrick J. Mackin on January 16, while inspecting his train at Mt. Lake Park. Mr. Mackin was a respected citizen, true christian and a thorough railroad man and his record of thirty years continuous service with the Baltimore and Ohio, absolutely clear, speaks volumes of the high esteem in which he was held, not only by the officials of our railroad but by all men. Conductor Mackin was a kindly man, always ready to lend a helping hand to the new man in the service and many a green brakeman was thankful to be called for his run; men all along the line knew "Paddy" and he was never too busy to talk to everyone, after he had arrived at his terminal and was relieved from duty. Mr. Mackin was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Knights of Columbus and the Holy Name Society. Pallbearers representing these Societies were Patrick W. Burke and Patrick Coyle, the Knights; J. W. Minear and J. Packett, the Trainmen, and Joseph King and J. Codire, the Holy Name. Mr. Mackin is survived by his widow, who was, prior to her marriage, Miss Mary Carney of Oakland, and two sons; James F. Mackin, night general yard master, Cumberland, and Lawrence A. Mackin, and one daughter, Miss Louise Mackin, Cumberland. Another pioneer of the West End of the Cumberland Division has been laid to rest and we all join in the supplication, Eternal Light Shine Upon Him, Oh Lord; May He Rest in Peace, Amen!

P. O. Barger and J. F. Taylor, two of our assistant chief crew dispatchers, are seeing America First. Just received a card from Los Angeles telling of their wonderful trip. Maybe we won't have to listen to SOME stories when they return.

One of our pictures is some car repairmen, West Yard, Cumberland, taken in 1910. Come on, boys, pick them out as they are all in the service yet and no doubt will be surprised to see how they looked in the "Old Days."

Another big wedding in the family. Miss Anna May Trost, charming telephone operator in the Queen City Building and James G. Glenn, chief clerk to storekeeper, Cumberland, were married on February 8. Congratulations!

We extend sympathy to G. Frank Messman, report clerk, Superintendent's Office, in the death of his mother on February 3.

We are glad to present a photograph of Conductor W. H. Nolan, taken off duty. While "Nig" is one of the most popular conductors in Cumberland Yard, don't think any of us appreciated his good looks before. When you need a helping hand "Nig" is always first on the job and his greatest pleasure is playing the part of a friend in need—who is truly a friend indeed.

Cumberland Back Shop

Correspondent, J. C. GLENN

The Efficiency Department employees at Cumberland Back Shop are doing splendid work and are to be commended on the manner in which they handle their duties. They are increasing production and are setting a high mark for our employees to shoot at.

Reverend Harding, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, spoke on "Victory" at the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday, February 3. A large attendance greeted him and his speech was indeed a delight. A duet was rendered by E. F. Warner and A. Y. Wilson.

We welcome our new file clerk, George McDermott. George is a hustler and we are glad to have him.

The Champion Stores Department bowlers, Shaw, Wall, Glenn and Kington are all tuned up and ready to meet all comers. They are contemplating a trip to Keyser soon and later intend going to Baltimore to clean up the best of that city.

Employees of the Cumberland Back Shop were visited on January 18, at lunch period, by Rev. Harry V. Wheeler, pastor of Belmont Church, M. E., South, of Roanoke, Va., who gave an interesting talk on applying the "Golden Rule" transposed to suit present day needs.

The talk was masterful and was delivered in Mr. Wheeler's peculiar style. He was pastor of Trinity M. E. Church at Cumberland from 1915 to 1919.

The Baltimore and Ohio quartette, consisting of A. Y. Wilson, E. F. Warner, Earl Murray and Nelson Kreiger, sang a suitable selection. We will welcome another visit from Mr. Wheeler.

It is rumored that inducements are being offered by local theatrical concerns to have Master Mechanic E. H. Martin commercialize his comic wit. It may not be long before he and his co-star, Mr. Michael, the bass singer, will appear in a sketch at a local theater, under the caption of "The Laboring Man's Favorites."

Among local favorites, we have Alfred E. Howe, Jr., Rolling Mill clerk, who answers to the nickname of "Deedy," and Stoner Dowlan, energetic yard foreman, Stores Department.

Andrew Companeck, forging machine instructor, is a new arrival in our midst, hailing from the Metropolis of Baltimore. Incidentally we neglect to mention that he is already making provision for our future force. Yes, it is a boy!

We were agreeably surprised when informed by C. R. Merryman, yard foreman, that he had taken unto himself a "better half," the "girl he left behind" in dear "Ole Baltimore." He will take up his residence in the exclusive suburb of Frostburg.

The Bolt and Forge Shop continues to show splendid progress in the present efficiency drive, exceeding all previous records. The Rolling Mill output is continually on the increase, under the watchful guidance of Superintendent Charles T. Carney.

The team of "Merryman & Rupp," no rivals of Gallagher and Shean, but our yard foremen, continue to make the condition of the Piling Shed and the Yard a feature to be proud of.

The Veteran employees of the shop and other members of Martinsburg Chapter enjoyed their meeting on January 26. They were especially grateful for the hearty responses made by visiting officials. It always gives our members pleasure to extend hospitality to any of our officers who can find time to visit us. We especially enjoyed the manner in which Vice-President Shriver "hefted" the basket of apples.

It was a pleasure to meet again Miss Vada Pearl Drumm, MAGAZINE correspondent, Cumberland, Md. Her pleasing personality and charming voice added much to the success of our program. We hope it will be our good fortune to hear Miss Drumm sing again soon.

Aunt and Uncle's natural modesty prevents saying very much about Aunt Mary's visit to Martinsburg. She is a member of the family and it would not look just right to "blow our own horn."

Veteran Yard Brakeman Minor Furr died at his home, 210 East King Street, on January 14, at the age of 63. He had been confined to his home only a few weeks before the Angel of Death took him, but he had been in poor health for several years. He was born near Keyser, W. Va., and was a son of Franklin and Hannah Furr, his parents having moved to a home near Keyser, from Loudon Co., Va. When a young man he entered Baltimore and Ohio service at Piedmont Shop. After serving a short time, he was transferred to main line train service. After his marriage to Miss Lena Lashorn he came to this city to live and was transferred to yard service here. He was in yard service at the time of his death. Practically all his active life was spent in our service. For 25 years he was a member of the B. of R. T. and he was also a member of the Martinsburg Chapter of Veterans. He is survived by his widow and one sister, to whom our sincere sympathy is extended.

That this may be the happiest and most prosperous year of our lives is a common wish, but it covers about everything a railroad employee wants. May it come true for all of us. 1923 has gone and with it our past trials and sorrows. May 1924 bring better things for all of us.

The great apple crop of this territory has been gathered and shipped. Business here is now back to normal.

On the afternoon of Christmas Day, one of our prominent citizens, S. D. Moser, with some young folks, started on a pleasure trip in his new Dodge car. For unknown reasons, the car went down an embankment, about two miles from Paw Paw, turning over. Mr. Moser received injuries from which he did not recover, passing away the following night.

Some time ago, Mr. Moser was a large orchardist and fruit shipper, but retired a few years ago. He leaves a widow and several children, to whom we extend sincere sympathy. Booth Moser, train dispatcher, Cumberland East End, is a son of the deceased.

"Uncle" John Shipley, who has been working for our Company many years, is still young, he says. Tried to persuade him to go to the Veterans' banquet at Martinsburg but he would not. Says he will go next year.

Of course your correspondent went to the banquet, with Brother A. C. Hardy, who has been limping ever since. We enjoyed the banquet from beginning to end, especially the speakers, and above all the good things to eat. "Ed." Fournety filled his pockets, but Charles Auld caught him and "squealed."

Newburg, W. Va.

The Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE for January, 1924, contains the following statement:

"Frank Mayolo, a boilermarker's helper at Hardman, has been off duty the past few days taking up a special course in law. Mr. Mayolo is an efficient interpreter and his greatest ambition is to become a criminal lawyer so that he can ably prosecute all Blackhanders."

I wish to say I am not a lawyer or interpreter, and I have no desire to be. I am a working man attending to my own business. I did not want to interpret the cases against the so-called Blackhanders in the Clarksburg Criminal Court in April, 1923, but I was compelled to do so by the law of the land. I am only sorry to see the poor boys pay the death penalty as they did. The statement in the January MAGAZINE was a joke by some of my best friends at the Hardman Shop, where I am employed, and I give them credit as an extra sport toastmaker. I am sure that this friend did not mean any harm, but that it was a joke. At the same time he did not realize the seriousness and circumstances in the future to print such a statement. He did not realize what he was doing. This is, as usual, a railroad man's joke, only this joke is more material than others.

I wish to say to all that I am not opposed to a Blackhand Society, if there is such. I have read and heard about such a society but I do not know anything about it myself and if there is such a thing, I wish to say I am not against them, nor am I for them. I have nothing to say one way or the other. I have plenty to do to attend to my business, and if that friend of mine who sent that article to the MAGAZINE would do the same, he would be in the same position. The so-called Blackhanders have never bothered me and I have never bothered them and never intend to.

Local papers recently carried an article regarding a block of coal mined at Consolidation mines, Monongah. This block measured four and one half by four and one half by eight feet, and weighed six tons. It was shipped via the Best and Only on its trip to Genoa, Italy, where it will be displayed at an exposition to be held there.

Our Capitol Limited is the most talked of train in the world today. It is being used by officials of foreign roads who are loud in their praise of the excellent equipment and of our dining car service. Not only do our competitors tell us of the quality of this train but we hear it from everyone.

Agents, I'm depending on you to have your Bulletin Boards kept in the best possible shape, showing information which should be there. The public depends on that information; let's see that it is correct.

Have you made up your mind to send your family on one of our personally conducted all-expense tours this season? Every school in the territory is talking about these tours and many are planning to accompany us.

At Rowlesburg, W. Va., on February 2, Supervisor M. W. Laffey, Sub-Division No. 5, a prize winning territory of the Cumberland Division, entertained his foremen and the West End staff officers, at a banquet and musicale in the parlors of the Methodist Church. The dinner was prepared and served by the Ladies' Aid Society and, as "Pop" Wigal expressed it, contained everything from "soup to nuts."

Assistant Division Engineer John Edwards presided as toastmaster and interesting responses were made by Trainmaster Welshonce, Road Foreman Carney, Master Mechanic Dixon, Assistant Road Foreman

Browning and Supervisor T. A. Laffey. State Senator E. Bunker Reynolds, who happened to be passing through, was present and pleased everyone with his wit and humor. He spoke at length on his impressions of the loyalty and service of Baltimore and Ohio men.

Mr. Carney entertained with a sleight of hand performance with his disappearing anvil. The orchestra played many selections during the dinner and Messrs. Mankins and Hooten entertained with saxophone and vocal solos. The feast was concluded with remarks from Toastmaster Edwards and an address by Supervisor Laffey.

Those present were: E. P. Welshonce, M. A. Carney, J. Edwards, Jr., W. J. Dixon, F. R. Browning, T. A. Laffey, Hon.

Supervisor M. W. Laffey, Rowlesburg, whose territory extends from Terra Alta to Grafton, was the winner of the $100.00 cash prize for the best sub-division. More familiarly known to his friends as genial "Mike" Laffey, he has presented the best example of what may be accomplished by the dogged perseverance and fighting spirit that makes soldiers into generals. A territory with the roughest of grades, washouts and slides from the mountain torrents, peaks where the winter lasts longer, territory where the hot summer sun kinks and buckles the track quicker.

And then, when the ties have been renewed and new rails placed, their lives are made shorter by the pounding and impact of the never ceasing procession of monster Mallets, carrying the precious black nuggets from the mines, across the connecting link, to the homes and industries awaiting heat units.

But with all these difficulties, at the close of the season, he was able to present a clean, orderly, well drained right of way, straight edges of ballast line enclosing tracks whose line and surface presented to Engineer of Maintenance E. G. Lane and his experienced assistants an appearance that could only be rewarded with the first prize. Well done, "Mike" our best wishes. Long live the King!

Foreman "Joe" S. Rhodes, Swanton, Section No. 39, whose territory is the famous 17 mile grade for its last two miles, was awarded a cash prize of $50.00 for the best section. Foreman Rhodes is deserving of much credit for his work. His motto in employing men is that they must register up to his own standard for work performed.

"Joe" divides the credit with his men and we notice some of them are wearing new hats.

Foreman Thomas E. Dunbar, Terra Alta, Section 44, whose territory extends from Terra Alta to Hopement, was awarded a cash prize of $35.00 for the section showing the most improvement during the year.

"Tom" is another "working foreman" who works with his men at all times. Good work, boys, make 'em "Try to get it next year."

We note our jovial paymaster, George R. Bramble, comes around in a mounted Studebaker. He looks fine in his new car and hands out a prize in every package.

Foreman Flanigan at Deer Park established a new record last week when he disposed of three sacks of Mail Pouch. The excitement that day was too much for "Gum."

General Supervisor I. S. Sponseller held his annual shoot at Rhodes Lodge, just north of Wilson, and the affair was well attended. Laffey and Schmidt furnished the hounds and the hillsides resounded all day to flashes of powder and the death cry of birds and bunnies. G. S. carried home an abundant supply of game and it was unanimously agreed that he had redeemed his last season's work and that his initials stand for "I Shoot Straight."

Gloom was cast over the West End when the news was received that Conductor John M. Smith had passed away at Hoffman Hospital, Keyser. Mr. Smith was fatally injured in an accident at Blaser on the morning of January 13. Brakeman Fred Arve and C. J. Ott were also injured painfully but not seriously. A special train took all three to the hospital at Keyser where they received medical attention, Brakeman Ott later going to his home. Arve is still in the hospital.

Conductor Smith was of a kindly disposition and was loved by all his fellowmen. He was an earnest Christian and a devoted husband. He is survived by his wife to whom we extend our deepest sympathy.

Cumberland Division employes were shocked on January 16, when they learned that West End Conductor P. J. Mackin had been found dead beside his train as it stood at Mountain Lake Park at three o'clock in the morning. While I write this I have not heard the details but it is supposed that he died of heart trouble. There were no marks upon him to indicate that he had been injured, or of foul play. His watch and money were intact.

I regret that I failed to report in the February MAGAZINE the death of Conductor Wm. R. Wenner, which occurred at the home of his sister in Keyser in December. "Friday," as he was familiarly known among his fellows, has been a sufferer for years, but bore his suffering without a murmur and in his passing we shall feel his loss. To the bereaved family we extend our deepest sympathy.

One of our photographs is of the two sons of Brakeman J. F. Kerns, Richard and Russell. These boys are also grandsons of Engineer R. E. Craig, Rowlesburg, W. Va. Mr. Kerns lives at Westernport, Md., and says he reads the MAGAZINE through every month and is much interested in it.

Another of our photographs is of Veteran Engineer J. M. Buckner. His first railroad experience was with the C. & O. Railway. He commenced work as fireman, firing with wood, on April 1, 1870. On October 5, 1872 he resigned and moved to Parkersburg, W. Va. He was given a position as fireman by I. N. Kalbaugh, then master mechanic, on the Parkersburg and Grafton Branch. In April, 1873, he was transferred to the Third Division, running between Grafton and Piedmont and has remained there ever since. He lives at Rowlesburg, W. Va. In writing to us, Mr. Buckner says: "I served ten days at one time and seven at another, but have never laid off on a legal holiday or pay day. I think I have worked for the Baltimore and Ohio about seventy-five years, if all my time is counted and figured at ten hours per day

"I thank all the Veterans and all officers of the Baltimore and Ohio. They have all been very good to me, and I appreciate especially the letter sent me on completion of fifty years service."

"I Was Partial to the Hamilton Years Before I Owned One—and I've been timing my trains with a Hamilton for over fifteen years." Thus does Conductor T. M. Thatcher of the Santa Fe endorse the Hamilton watch.

Conductor Thatcher has been running trains since 1888, and is at present in charge of the California Limited on the Illinois Division. He is a man whose judgment of a watch is bound to be sound. Like thousands of other railroad men Conductor Thatcher was partial to, and chose the Hamilton, because it combines both accuracy and dependability to a high degree.

You can depend upon a Hamilton to serve you all the time, no matter how far "up the ladder" you go. The next time you pass your jeweler's, stop in and have him show you a Hamilton No. 992. This is the watch that times America's fastest trains and is, in truth, "The Railroad Timekeeper of America." This model will better than pass time inspection requirements on any railroad, and like all Hamiltons will serve you dependably and faithfully for many years to come. Thus the Hamilton is really the most economical watch you can buy.

For other than time inspection service you will find the Hamilton No. 974 an excellent timekeeper. It is a seventeen jewel model that is built up to Hamilton standards throughout.

Send for a copy of the Timekeeper which illustrates and describes the various Hamilton models. A postal card will bring a copy of this booklet to you by return mail.

Our sympathy is extended to Boiler Inspector Wolf on the death of his father, which occurred during the early part of February.

The accompanying photograph is of John Robert, age 5 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Murphy. "Murph" says he does not know if the little one will develop into a radio operator or movie director. His father is quite proficient in both.

We congratulate C. R. Wheeler, formerly chief clerk to local storekeeper, on his appointment as storekeeper, Brunswick. We wish him success in his new position. Carl Welch has been appointed as successor to Mr. Wheeler.

R. T. Ravenscraft, assistant car foreman, wishes to express his gratitude through this column, to his fellow workmen for the donation he received, as well as the many tokens of sympathy extended during the period he was confined to his home because of injury.

Air Brake Foreman "Bill" Ravenscraft has the Sunny Jim smile on his face since the arrival of the nine-pound boy.

C. Inskeep and W. D. Wright, assistant car foremen, received painful injuries in performing their duties during the latter part of January, which will prevent them from working for some time. Foreman Inskeep had his left ankle broken by a bin of brass bearings falling on him. Foreman Wright had his left ankle broken by falling from a car. We are glad that the injuries, while painful, are responding to treatment.

The Veterans' Association at Keyser appreciate the courtesy of the officials in allowing them to use one of Murphy's Rest Rooms as a meeting place. The Veterans have put this room in good condition, installing new electric fixtures, steam heat, gas, running water, etc., as well as securing a piano donated by the carmen. This room is also supplied with games, magazines, etc., and is open to Veterans each evening during the week.

J. C. Liller, assistant train master, Newburg, is spending his vacation at Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Florida. C. E. Chidester, our efficient crew dispatcher, is looking after Mr. Liller's duties during his absence.

"Dutch" Shrader, second trick Store Room attendant, celebrated his 38th birthday on February 6. "Dutch" invited about thirty of his friends to donate something in honor of his short and eventful life and from the number of handkerchiefs, socks, shirts and ties that were presented to him, we think he will not have to purchase any of these articles for the next 38 years.

We are sorry to lose the following efficient employees at this station because of furlough: Machinists John Vansandt and Paul Ellis, Boilermaker T. H. Bell, Machinist Helper Clyde Sheetz and Engine Wiper "Vic" Lucas. We hope to have them back with us in the near future.

C. O. Shay, machinist helper, is reported on the sick list.

Connellsville Division

Correspondents, CHARLES E. REYNOLDS and EARL SHANK

On February 3, the stork visited the home of Yard Conductor and Mrs. Harry Sivits, South Connellsville, Pa., and left an eight pound baby girl. Congratulations!

General Night Yard Master and Mrs. J. R. Porter, Connellsville, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of their first daughter, January 14; the other child is a boy. The babe has been named Thelma Mae, for her mother.

One of our photographs is of J. S. Flickinger—better known as "Jake," and his little grand-daughter, four months old. Mr. Flickinger is local freight conductor, main line, Connellsville Division, and has been in the service about twenty years.

On January 30, members of the Connellsville Division Staff gathered at the Pleasant Valley Country Club at a seven o'clock turkey dinner in honor of Train Master Matthew L. McElheny, who on February 1 took up his duties as superintendent of terminals, New York.

There were 32 guests present, including R. W. Brown, superintendent, Cumberland Division, and the following from Pittsburgh—F. P. Pfahler, district master mechanic, T. E. Drake, station master and C. D. Grow, night terminal train master, also T. H. Robey, assistant road foreman of engines, Pittsburgh Division.

Superintendent Martin was toastmaster. On behalf of the division staff he presented Mr. McElheny with a fine gold watch, chain and Masonic charm.

There were some good talks made by the toastmaster, the honored guest, and other members of the party, and the evening was enjoyably spent.

Mr. McElheny has the best wishes of the employees on the Connellsville Division.

He has been succeeded by W. C. Baker, formerly assistant train master, Cumberland Division. Mr. Baker is welcomed to our division and we are sure our association with him will be pleasant.

The Superintendent's Office is graced with a new face—that of Miss Mildred Furtney. This young lady is a dark-eyed beauty, with a pleasing personality. If you don't believe us, ask Simon Burns—he knows—also Assistant Chief Clerk Shank, who, since this advent, wears a continual smile.

On Sunday, January 6, we had a broken rail west of Cheat Haven, which resulted in a delay of one hour and twenty-five minutes to No. 69. Section men were not working. The following employees were riding train 69 on this date:

Fireman M. B. Coughenour, Brakeman R. J. Mason, Brakeman R. N. Solenday, Fireman Walter Sheering, Brakeman L. Burnsworth.

These men, as well as Engineer J. W. Turner and Baggage-master G. M. Harker, on No. 69, assisted in replacing the broken rail.

The action of these men merits hearty commendation especially in view of the fact that the thermometer registered four degrees below zero.

The Connellsville Shop Bowling Team, composed of Messrs. Schad, Spence, Russell, Gallagher and Haney, recently played the second game against the team from the District Master Mechanic's Office at Glenwood, which is composed of Messrs. Powell, Miller, Voltz, Hopkins and Strotsky at Connellsville and took the latter team over by a total of 164 pins for the count. Some creditable bowling was done by several men. The Glenwood team defeated the Connellsville team at Pittsburgh by a total of 191 pins, and naturally the third and deciding game to be played is looked forward to with great interest, as quite a lot of friendly rivalry obtains.

We were sorry to lose Assistant Storekeeper Howard Dean who was recently transferred to the same position at Glenwood, but wish him success in his new position.

Miss Alice K. Kramer, secretary to Master Mechanic Schad is a fanatic on basket ball and is connected with one of the fastest female teams in Connellsville. Miss Kramer's photograph is in the MAGAZINE this month and possibly explains why so much difficulty is experienced in accommodating the crowd when she plays.

Engineer J. D. Evans, who was severely burned oiling his engine while on duty in 36th St. yard on January 24, died in the St. Francis Hospital on February 5. Engineer Evans was born January 31, 1873 and entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio, August 21, 1895 as a yard fireman, being promoted to yard engineer, April 17, 1901 and to road engineer September 12, 1918.

The death of Engineer Evans removes from our midst a loyal and faithful employe, whose loss is mourned, and we extend to the sorrowing family our sincere sympathy.

Our old friend Bill ("Duck Pond") Evans, Pike dispatcher, who owns a Durant machine let it balk on him one day recently, and when he went to wind it up (it won't go unless you wind it), the cranky crank flew off the squeemadink and soaked Brother Bill in the arm, breaking his wrist. Hard luck, Bill. Better sell the pesky thing and get one of Henry's self starters!

Paul P. McGrail, energetic young man from Car Record Office, is dabbling so we understand, in dramatics, learning to be an actorine. Go to it, Paul. A good actorine makes a hit with the goils, and it should be your long suit.

"Who buys most of your Naugahyde Bags?"

"Men who have to carry a bag regularly," was the answer. "Men who want a bag to stand the wear and tear of day in and day out use."

Everywhere the answer has been practically the same—and everywhere railroad men are finding Naugahyde the most practical bag they can carry.

Built over a strong, steel frame, every Naugahyde Bag is vulcanized into a single piece. No seams to rip and no rivets to come loose. It's waterproof and heat-proof. No wonder Naugahyde outlasts all ordinary bags!

Unexcelled in appearance, Naugahyde Bags hold their good looks in spite of the hardest treatment. They are made with a handsome black grain finish, English check lining, and solid brass fittings of the finest quality. Unusually moderate in price.

tory in handling of the same business reached a total of 24. This is an excellent showing and is the result of a systematic system of education for good marking, and the cooperation of all concerned in the handling of this business. Every employe is to be commended for his or her support.

Your correspondent has enlisted the aid of a certain employe in the train service, who, for the time being, will be known as "Bill." He has entered into his duties with a vim and presents the following:

ON THE PITTSBURGH DISTRICT

Noting that other departments of the Pittsburgh District are having a word to say in Our MAGAZINE, from time to time, we, the passenger trainmen of this territory, desire to voice our commendation and appreciation of the MAGAZINE, its purport and results. Having a desire to start right, we pick on the two oldest young bloods in the District, Tucker Hunt and Dennis Devine, who, though both retired, are looking fine. How about coming to the conductor's room for a little dis(cussing) of the merits of the Post & Times! Wow!

How many of the boys can remember the fine, hot breakfasts Uncle John Cowan used to fix up for the crew on old Nos. 1 and 2. Come and see us, John, we sure would welcome you.

We have a fine looking lot of men gracing our extra board just now. This is pleasing and means we will continue to stand high on the list with respect to appearance, courtesy and efficiency.

It is quite a task for some of the boys to keep up their personal appearance as they would like to, but let us all keep trying.

How true it is that a man's efficiency respecting his work can be gleaned from his conversation. Dissatisfied and disgruntled employes, no matter where they are employed, are never in that frame of mind necessary to render efficient, effective service. What can you do to increase your efficiency? Your correspondent will welcome any news items from any train men. Please drop them into the suggestion box and I will receive them. This applies to conductors, baggagemen and brakemen.

The accompanying photograph is of Foreman D. Chiovitti. On January 15 he was working with his gang near Coulter Station when Train 94 passed. Mr. Chiovitti looked over the equipment as train passed and observed a defective wheel on one of the cars. He attracted attention of Lineman S. Hovermill, who was riding on rear end of caboose, and train was stopped before serious damage was done.

Mr. Chiovitti entered Baltimore and Ohio service as trackman in 1906, and was promoted to foreman in 1913. He has been commended by Superintendent Beltz for his close observation and prompt action.

The first annual dinner and dance of the Baltimore and Ohio Traffic Department was held at the Seventh Avenue Hotel on January 28.

General Freight Agent Blakely, toastmaster for the evening, made an entertaining address, after which he called on the following officers and employes: Manager Commercial Development H. O. Invitations were sent to a number of employes of the Operating Department, many of whom were present, adding materially to the success of the entertainment.

The Royal Syncopators furnished music during the evening. After dinner, the floor was cleared and dancing enjoyed until a late hour.

The committee in charge consisted of C. Rochrig, chairman; J. W. Swoger, Misses Mary Harkins and Leona Walker, F. J. Yeager, H. G. McLaughlin and L. Van Zandt.

Pittsburgh Freight Station

Correspondent, G. OBERDICK

In 1922 there were 64 employes at the Pittsburgh Freight Station injured while in the performance of their duties, while in the year 1923, there were only 44 injured—a reduction of 20 accidents. I believe the interest taken by our Safety Committee is reflected in this showing. Members of Pittsburgh Freight Station Safety Committee for the year 1923 are: Messrs. C. J. Maloney, M. J. Flavin, P. Melia, J. F. Hines, W. E. King and J. T. Campbell, whose motto is "SAFETY—FIRST, LAST AND ALWAYS."

We were sorry to learn of the illness of B. T. Lansker, foreman's clerk, who was taken to the hospital on January 17. "Barney" is getting along well and it is hoped he will be back soon.

Many of us are kept busy trying to chase the wolf from our door, but would someone kindly ask Mary if she would chase a "Wolf" away from her door!

Is it colder in the winter than it is in McKeesport—how about the second floor, Colonel?

What's the matter with Braddock, "Bob." I always thought it was a nice town.

Northern District

Correspondent, D. H. KIRKWOOD

One of our old timers gives me this story. The engine was failing badly for steam; the engineer went to the telegraph office and started to write a "night letter" to the dispatcher. "Be Brief," said the operator. "Don't you see those words on the corner of the form?" A boomer fireman took form from the "eagle eye" and wrote, "C. C. C. St. L." "What's the big idea?" said the "ham." "You said be brief," said the fireman, "that means, 'Can't come cockey, steam too low.'"

Our dispatcher, Mart Ross, you "ops" can see, is some speedy man on a telegraph key.

When he calls with a clickety click, that means get on and that mighty quick.

He's the boy boomers tell us, makes them all sit up and take notice.

One thing makes him "just foam" is to call and call and find nobody home.

This Book Offers a Saving on Everything for the Home, the Farm and the Family

Are you using this book? Do you look through it every week to find the right price, the lowest price for everything you want to buy?

This Catalogue is now at work saving millions of dollars for the people of America. Are you getting your share of this saving?

This page is printed to remind you of your opportunity

You have a copy of this big complete Catalogue or you can easily get one by writing to us. If in immediate need borrow your neighbor's Catalogue until yours comes. You can save money. The opportunity for Saving is now yours.

Fifty million dollars' worth of new merchandise is ready for your selection. Fifty million dollars' worth of goods manufactured and bought especially for this Catalogue, bought when prices were lowest, bought where prices were lowest—and paid for in ready cash to make our prices lower—to make your savings larger.

Over one hundred expert buyers have been working for you, at home and abroad, carefully choosing the best, skillfully buying at the lowest prices—and the fruit of all this work, the benefit of all this experience, the advantage of all this vast buying power and ready cash—is now yours.

Low Prices and Ward Quality Make Your Savings Double

A low price means nothing without quality. It takes quality—serviceability—and low price to make a bargain.

Ward quality stands for satisfaction in actual use. It stands for serviceability. It means the kind of goods that stand inspection and use.

We do not sell "cheap goods." We sell good goods. Our prices are low—but they are not price baits. We never sacrifice quality—serviceability—to make a low price.

Look Through This Catalogue Again

You buy something every week. This book, therefore, offers you a saving every week. Before you buy, look through your Catalogue—Compare prices. Remember our Guarantee of quality. Remember our Guarantee of Satisfaction—"Your money back if anything does not please you."

Use your Catalogue. Study every department of this book. There is a saving for you in everything you wear and use. There is a saving for you on everything for the Home, the Farm and the Family.

FOR WOMEN AND MISSES: New York is the home of fashion. Therefore, Ward's Fashion Experts live in New York to select all of the best styles for you. And when you buy your clothes at Ward's you get the newest, most beautiful styles without paying the usual "Fashion Profit."

HOME FURNISHING: It is a delightful task to select from Ward's Catalogue. Experts on beautifying the home, artists in the selection of furnishings choose everything for this big Catalogue. And the saving you make enables you to buy many more things than you expect.

FOR MEN AND BOYS: This Catalogue will interest you for hours if you will study the hundreds of articles for men, young men and boys. Everything you wear, or like, or use, from suits to sporting goods, from a knife to all kinds of tools are offered, always at a saving.

FOR THE HOUSE: Roofing, fencing, poultry supplies, plumbing, electric lighting, furnaces, stoves, and the most wonderful bargains in furniture, you even to doors and mill work and the house itself. All can be bought at Ward's with certain satisfaction and at a big saving.

FOR THE AUTOMOBILE: Riverside Over-size Ford Tires, guaranteed for 10,000 miles and lasting longer than that, will save you one-third. Why pay more? The same saving is offered on tubes, batteries, radiators—everything for the automobile of standard make and quality, and with a big saving for you.

FOR THE FARM: For fifty-one years we have studied the farmer's needs. For fifty-one years we have been friends with the American farm. We have experts in every branch of farm life. To study what farm is longest, what gives the best satisfaction in actual use. Quality first, for the farmer is our policy, but always we offer a saving.

24-Hour Service

We have perfected our service for you. After much study and testing new systems and employing experts we have perfected a system that makes certain your orders will be shipped promptly.

Our records prove that during the past year most of our orders were shipped in 24 hours—nearly all of our orders within 48 hours.

First he calls "J" and she gets the Dickens for being out so long, "Feeding the chickens."

Next call "OU," where have you been? I've called since the clock struck ten.

Then comes a click and it says, "CB, if I go out for a while in my Ford would you miss me?" "No," says Mart, "not at all, only that I'll miss making your call."

"And that call 'F' Foxburg," says Mart, "I know by heart in my sleep."

"BR. Bruin, wake up there, Heine, what's the situation at the refinery."

"WC" what's the weather, please let me know. Says SI we have just three feet of snow.

And that's that. Dispatcher Ross has so many duties that it would surely peeve Barney Google and his famous horse but he gets them all done and he's one of the Northern District's real live wires.

Our country has suffered another severe loss in the death of Ex-President Woodrow Wilson. He will live long in the hearts of his countrymen and will go down in history as one of the world's greatest men.

Our Company conducts what is known as "All expense tours," to Washington, D. C., on March 12, April 12, 16, May 10, 27, June 4 and 28. These tours include all expenses for five days, such as round trip transportation, meals en route, hotel, sight seeing tours, etc. Passengers desiring to do so can secure railroad tickets only at reduced fares.

Washington is a city that every one should see and know. It is the heart of our Government and there are many beautiful public buildings to be seen there.

Let's boost the tours. Tell your friends to try the "Friendly Way." Any ticket agent will give you full information.

The Capitol Building is near the Baltimore and Ohio Union Station in Washington; you can see it as you step out of the station. To tell of the wonders of Washington would require too much space. Take the Baltimore and Ohio trip, seeing historic Harper's Ferry on the way.

We regret to report the following deaths in the Baltimore and Ohio Family. Evelyn, six years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Gross. The mother of Thomas W. Grays, conductor. Our sympathy is extended to the families.

Flagman D. B. Shoup is absent because of illness. We hope he will return soon.

R. S. Howe, joint agent, Mount Jewett, has been appointed cashier of the bank, Mount Jewett; E. W. Anderson is acting agent.

Passenger Conductor W. A. Mattern has purchased the Commercial Hotel at Mount Jewett. It is now under the management of Mrs. Mattern. Good meals and good beds are the order of the day. Let's stop there next time we go to Mount Jewett. Mrs. Mattern will make us welcome. Previously, this hotel was under the management of "Bobby" Leach, the only man who went over Niagara Falls in a barrel and lived to tell the tale.

O. D. Titts and L. R. "Abe" Martin, who were furloughed, have been recalled to duty. They are car repairmen at Foxburg.

One of our photographs is of Baggagemaster Thomas J. Rainey, Trains 51 and 52. This photograph was taken several years ago and was handed to Mr. Rainey a short time ago by Agent C. B. Smith, Parkers Landing. It reminded Rainey of olden times, and he said, "Those good old days! A dance every night." Probably he referred to the days of the oil boom. He is a good musician; we hear that he helped to furnish the "jazz" in early days. Mr. Rainey has been in the service about 48 years and is still a young man. He owns a nice home in Kane, Pa. It is said here that he is the oldest baggageman in the service.

Another of our photographs is the Kane Local crew, taken in 1913. Left to right they are Brakeman D. S. Parsons, Flagman Dick Fowler, J. C. Smith and Conductor C. D. Newman. Mr. Fowler has left the service and is now on the police force at Kane.

Another photograph is M. A. Sheely and his family. Mr. Sheely is a retired carpenter foreman and now resides in St. Petersburg, Pa.

The following clipping from the Pittsburgh Gazette Times is of special interest to Northern District employees:

"Kane, Pa., January 19.—Urged by a mysterious impulse, he says, Sylvester Hopper, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad engineer of Kane, stopped his train at noon today just in time to avoid crushing two children who were playing with a sled on the track. Hopper, who was running his train out of a siding near the Baltimore and Ohio station here, declares that he did not see the children until after he had stopped the train and his attention was attracted to them by excited spectators who expected both would be killed."

Foreman J. P. Kane is proud of the performance of his forces in Glenwood Blacksmith Shop in reclamation work during 1923. The saving effected by reclaiming material in this department amounted to $140,323.69 during the year and was accomplished by the reclamation of flues, springs, couplers, etc. Had new material been purchased, it would have cost the amount given above in excess of the actual reclamation cost. The Blacksmith Shop forces firmly believe in the old adage "Waste not, want not," and we anticipate that the saving during 1924 will be even greater.

We are glad to announce that District Motive Power Inspector P. T. Poole, who has been confined to his home with a severe cold, has returned.

The Baltimore and Ohio Magazine Announces a Special Sale of the Famous Book

"The American Government"

By Frederic J. Haskin

Which Has Been Entirely Rewritten, Enlarged and Brought Up to Date

"The American Government" is one of the world's best sellers among non-fiction books. It is not a book on Civil Government. It is not a history. It is a master reporter's straightforward account of Uncle Sam at Work, what he is doing and how he does it. It is as interesting as a fairy tale and as accurate as arithmetic. It gives you all the striking, interesting facts about Uncle Sam's seals and soldiers, dollars and dodos, airplanes and ambassadors, battleships and buffaloes. It is a mine of information to which you will refer constantly, and it is right up to date. You have not read a book in a year, not even barring "best sellers," that will hold your interest as this book will.

A Remarkable Book

It has run through 80 editions and its sales are mounting steadily toward the million mark.

It has been translated into 11 languages.

It has been made into raised point for the blind. The Government sends sets anywhere in the United States, free to blind people who can read by touch.

It has been made into a moving picture production called "Uncle Sam at Work."

It is a standard textbook in schools and an authoritative reference in libraries.

It has been purchased by practically every foreign government for state use.

Before publication every chapter was read and approved by a Government authority.

The Baltimore and Ohio Magazine's Offer

The sale of this book is not undertaken by this magazine as a profit-making ven-

"The American Government," new and enlarged edition, has 484 pages, including a 32-page section of beautiful half-tone illustrations. There are 42 chapters, containing over 150,000 words. It is 8x5 3/4 inches in size and durably bound in forest green cloth stamped in gold. It is in a class with books that often sell for $3 or $4, but because of its educational value it is being offered by this Magazine at the nominal price of $1, postage prepaid to any address in the United States. Money back if not satisfied.

THE PRIDE OF GLENWOOD SHOP

Engine 5051, which handles The Capitol Limited on the Pennsylvania District

"Mental anguish" is a legal term, but it aptly describes the feeling of your correspondent when he was recently compelled to relinquish his old stand in the office. However, when elements of efficiency and acceleration are introduced, we must follow the tide and bury all sentiment.

It is with pleasure that we announce the promotion of H. F. Schwab, chief clerk to storekeeper, Glenwood, to be assistant storekeeper, Fairmont, W. Va. We frankly admit that Glenwood is the loser, as Mr. Schwab endeared himself to all his associates by strict attention to business, his impartiality, as well as his gentlemanly and courteous attitude to all with whom he came in contact. We wish you the best of luck Harley—we know you will make friends wherever you go.

The Connellsville Shop Bowling Team visited the Glenwood Shop Bowling Team on January 17, playing three games for total pins. The score resulted in Glenwood administering a defeat to the visitors by 191 pins. On January 31, the Glenwood team returned the visit and were defeated by 161 pins, leaving them with a lead of 28 pins in the two series of the three games each so far played. A close contest is anticipated between these two teams, as they are evenly matched. Glenwood is represented by Messrs. M. R. Powell, J. E. Kerr, J. Stratosky, J. Miller, M. Hopkins, C. E. Rider and Joseph Shedlock. Connellsville is represented by Messrs. J. W. Schad, C. Spence, L. A. Russell, W. E. Finn, W. T. Gallagher, R. Mahoney and B. Moyres.

Air Brake Instructor W. C. Garaghty, has been at Glenwood for the past six weeks, instructing engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, inspectors, etc., in the operation and maintenance of air brake appliances on locomotives and cars. During this period, he has instructed 1,212 men and examined 29 firemen for promotion. This is an exceedingly interesting subject in addition to being one of vast importance. In the operation of trains it is absolutely essential that every member of the crew be familiar with, and fully understand the operation of air brake appliances. It may be stated, in this connection, that firemen are not promoted to the position of engineer until they pass an examination on air brake appliances. Mr. Garaghty has added to his course of instructions a stereopticon outfit, which shows the latest Westinghouse passenger air brake and this feature of his lecture is helpful to all passenger crews. Employees who attended these lectures were greatly benefitted and expressed themselves as being glad to have had the opportunity of receiving this practical demonstration of the use of air brake appliances.

W. H. Dean has been appointed chief clerk to storekeeper, Glenwood, vice H. F. Schwab, promoted. Mr. Dean comes from the Connellsville Division and has the best wishes of his associates.

The accompanying photograph is of locomotive Number 5051, which has recently been overhauled in Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop. This locomotive is assigned to "Capitol Limited" service on the Pennsylvania District and, like all other locomotives assigned to this service, receives a thorough daily inspection by competent and experienced mechanics. Daniel Quinn, who is the proud engineer of the 5051, in speaking of it says: "Engine 5051, recently overhauled at Glenwood Back Shop, having received class five repairs, has had all the work reported on the engine by me given special attention and I have never known her to be in better condition. This locomotive on her last visit to the Back Shop was cleaned and polished to such an extent that it presents a fitting appearance when coupled to the 'Capitol Limited' and it makes me feel like being called to my second home when I am assigned to take her out, for I know I will have easy sailing over the stretch of road

Lee Union-Aalls and Overalls

Give Worktime Satisfaction

LEE Union-Aalls and Overalls are built to endure the hardest kind of wear and strain. They give longer and more satisfactory wear than any other work garment made.

Feel the cloth—it's close-woven, long-fibre cotton cloth, thoroughly tested for tensile strength. Notice the high quality workmanship—triple-stitched seams, reinforced strain points, riveted, rustproof buttons and rip-proof buttonholes.

Men who demand long wear in work garments insist on Lee Union-Aalls or Overalls, for they know that they are getting not only longer wear, but better tailoring and greater comfort, also. Look for Lee on the buttons.

on which I handle this high class train. The locomotive has a good square valve, always has a full head of steam, the reverse bar being one notch ahead of center most of the time on this run, and I feel sure if all our locomotives were kept in similar condition, there would be no complaint from the traveling public. I have been running an engine for thirty-three years and the 5051 is the most perfect I have ever handled."

The foregoing is not only a high tribute to the locomotives furnished by the Baltimore and Ohio, but also indicates the high class of work Glenwood Back Shop is turning out and demonstrates fully that "Capitol Limited" locomotives are being given the utmost care by the mechanical forces at Glenwood.

We regret to announce the illness of Shop Superintendent C. M. Newman. Mr. Newman is in Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, Pa. We sincerely trust he will be able to return to his duties in the near future.

During the recent shut-down of the Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop for four days, the foremen gave their general offices on the balcony of the shop an overhauling and painting and they are now up to the Glenwood standard.

West Virginia District

In connection with the Washington All Expense tour from West Virginia on June 4, please note that arrangements are being made to hold a West Virginia Day in Washington on June 7.

Full details will be given later and it is hoped MAGAZINE correspondents in that territory will do all possible to boost "West Virginia Day." It is the intention to hold afternoon and evening "Get together" receptions for West Virginians in Washington, and those taking the tour, at one of the largest Washington hotels, and it is hoped that prominent West Virginians will be on hand to speak to their constituents.

The friends of Miss Christina Finch extend their deepest sympathy to surviving relatives of this young lady, who had been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for six years. Miss Finch was employed in the Westbound Yard Office, where she made many friends, not alone among the employes but also among our patrons. Her services were cheerfully given to everyone requiring them. Her death came as a shock to all of us as she had been reported as recovering nicely from an operation, which she had undergone in Baltimore. Miss Finch was 32 years old, and was born and educated in Grafton. She is survived by her mother, three married sisters and two brothers. The survivors have asked us to publish the following letter: "We, the mother and relatives of Christina Finch, who died on January 31, wish to express our thanks and appreciation for the many favors extended, sympathy given us and the generous tokens of flowers, during the illness and death of our daughter and sister."

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Maxwell are the proud parents of a baby girl, Marion Lee, born last December. Congratulations!

Walter McFarling, assistant shop clerk, is rapidly recovering from the effects of an operation which he recently underwent in the city hospital. Best wishes are extended for his early recovery.

George Welsh and Ruth Haddix were married on February 6. Mr. Welsh is a yardmaster at Grafton. We think his position would be very trying to a young man, but his efficiency in his duties leads us to believe he will prove to be a good husband. Miss Haddix is a popular Grafton young lady. Our congratulations! The newlyweds will reside here.

J. P. Lannon, who died recently, was born on January 29, 1882. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on December 25, 1901, since which date his service reflected efficiency and faithfulness in his chosen line of duty, namely telegraph operator. For several years past he has been first trick operator at D. K. tower. Mr. Lannon is survived by his wife and three children to whom our sincere sympathy is extended.

We are not surprised that Charles C. Smith has such a good disposition when we see the happy group of youngsters surrounding him after his return from duty in G. R. office each evening. Look at them in our photograph gallery this month.

"Monty," as A. C. Montgomery is known here, always has a smile. Betty Jane is the reason. A good one, too.

The Clerk's Organization held a Valentine Party on February 6, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all of us. We hope for a larger attendance next month.

We extend sincere sympathy to friends and relatives of J. W. Garner, who passed away on February 6.

Mrs. John Tackett was recently called home. We extend sympathy to her husband and children.

The Veterans held their monthly meeting on February 4, a goodly number being present. A pleasing program had been arranged and refreshments were served—much to the delight of the men. All men seem to love to eat!

The death of Captain "Jim" Morgan, on January 21, came as a shock to his host of friends. Our sincere sympathy is extended to his surviving relatives. The following is part of story of his life and death as taken from the Parkersburg and Grafton Sentinels:

"The sudden death of Conductor James C. Morgan, one of the oldest and best known passenger conductors on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, came as a terrible shock to the family and will be generally regretted.

"Mr. Morgan had gone up earlier in the morning to Vienna, where a home was being built which he and his wife expected to occupy in the near future and which he had been frequently visiting. He had been suffering for the last year or more with attacks of high blood pressure and it is thought that he must have felt an attack coming on and decided to return home on the street car on which he died.

"Mr. Morgan was born in 1861 in Man-nington, Marion County, and was one of the oldest conductors in the service, having served on different branches of the Baltimore and Ohio system. For at least fifteen years was employed on the run between here and Cumberland, Md., and in two years' time would have rounded out the allotted period before retirement. For the last year, however, ill health necessitated a vacation but he was preparing to resume duties within a few weeks.

"A man of genial temperament and sterling character he was most popular with his associates and with other friends and his death will be universally regretted. Mr. Morgan was a member of the First M. E. Church, a 32nd degree Mason, a Knight Templar and a Shriner and he also belonged to the Order of Railway Conductors. In addition to his wife he is survived by one sister, Mrs. Frank Keane, of Grafton, and four brothers as follows: J. R., E. A., D. M. and J. N. Morgan, all of Grafton."

Dr. Edward Davis, Salem, W. Va., has been appointed Company surgeon, Monongah Division. He takes the place made vacant by the death of Dr. E. B. Fittro, who served the Company for a number of years.

L. C. Fowler, cash clerk, Freight Office, is making frequent trips to Charleston. One guess is enough; we are almost sure she is a blonde.

Watch T. F. Cornwell, car clerk. Tom, too, is making a good many out of town trips. We are sure they are not for the sake of his health. We never heard of Altoona being a health resort.

A great improvement on our Railroad is five miles of new track, which was put into service on January 28, marking the completion of ten miles of double track from Grafton to Flemington, W. Va. Five miles from Grafton to Brydon were completed more than a year ago, then the stretch from Brydon to Flemington was begun. Two more miles, from Flemington to Rosemont, will be built this year, it is said, making a total of twelve miles of double track, which is more than half the distance between Grafton and Clarksburg. The double track will greatly facilitate freight and passenger traffic.

The Clarksburg Traffic Club met at the Waldo Hotel on January 25.

There was a large attendance of the members and one of the best meetings in months was held. The principal subjects discussed were railroad legislation and probable bills to come up before Congress.

It was said in the speeches that the railroads believe it to be in the interest of the country as a whole to keep the Transportation Act of 1920 intact.

P. M. Neigh, traffic manager, Wheeling Chamber of Commerce, told of the probable bills that will come up before the present congress and he asked that the Chamber of Commerce and civic bodies wire their representatives to allow the present laws to stand. According to Mr. Neigh, the last year has been one of the best, and in point of service the most satisfactory, the railroads have ever had. In addition to Mr. Neigh, H. H. Marsh, general freight agent, Wheeling, W. Va., made a short speech in which he declared that the railroads wanted further to try present legislation and see whether it will prove satisfactory. He cited the record railroad business moved in 1923, the present condition of cars, engines and roadbed, as proof of the ability of the railroads to give ample service under present conditions.

On January 29, when the streets of Fairmont were so slippery that one could scarcely take a step without falling, Third Trick Baggage-master James Morrow obtained a barrel of sawdust and scattered it on the sidewalks of the hillside leading to the Baltimore and Ohio station so that patrons and employes could reach their destination safely. This was done after the completion of Mr. Morrow's eight hours of duty as baggage-master at Fairmont station. Credit is due him for his consideration of others, as no doubt serious injury was prevented by his safety device.

A delightful party of one of our Baltimore and Ohio families was given on January 27 at Blueville, a suburb of Grafton, when the 89th birthday of "Grandmother" Wittman was celebrated.

Thirty-two of Mrs. Wittman's children and friends attended the party, and she was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. Each year, on her birthday, a party is planned and given by her daughter, Mrs. E. Kinsler, and at this time her children and many friends come to greet her and to wish her still another year of health and happiness. A story of "Grandmother" Wittman will shortly appear in the MAGAZINE.

At a business meeting called Sunday, February 3, by the executives of the Veterans' Association special arrangements were made for a full attendance at a meeting to be called for Sunday, February 10. It is the desire of the officers in charge that members who have been negligent in their duties as Baltimore and Ohio Veterans cooperate with the new president, F. H. Brummage, and not only do their duty in a financial way, but to help the organization by attending meetings.

A plan was discussed to urge delinquent members to pay their dues and to put new life into the organization, showing by their attendance that they appreciate the efforts of the new president.

A resolution was passed, which is to be submitted to the Ladies' Auxiliary for their approval, is that a regular schedule be arranged for all meetings and entertainments hereafter.

Glad to see Gassaway coming to the front in the "A. O." column, Charleston Division, for this issue. It seems that it takes Car Department employees to do things.

On January 24, Car Department employees held a social and "Get-to-gether meeting," in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. building, Gassaway. It was well attended. After an opening selection by the orchestra, there was prayer by the Rev. Harold, followed by an address of welcome by Mr.

U. C. Stewart. Followed then a selection by the Shop Quartette, a reading by Miss Stump, violin solo by Master John Garber, vocal solo by Miss Geraldine Hostettler, banjo solo by Earl Duncan, vocal solos by Miss Huff and Mr. Stanley, an exceptionally fine address by Superintendent Trappnell, and a specially arranged selection by the Male Quartette. At the conclusion of this excellent program refreshments were served, and everyone enjoyed himself during the social hour which followed. Not only did the Car Department employees favor other employees and the community in general with an excellent program, but they did more. Substantial prizes were given for the largest family in attendance and to the person bringing his or her family the greatest distance. Both prizes were won by James Miller, a Car Department employee, who paraded his family of eight.

Space forbids our covering this gathering as we should and we trust our readers will content themselves with the knowledge that we have merely touched some of the "higher spots" lightly.

We are glad to have back with us Major Richard Brooke, division engineer, who was granted a leave of absence because of severe illness. He is now fully recovered and "rarin' to go."

Business in the Richwood-Camden-on-Gauley territory has been so heavy during the early part of the year that it has been necessary to double-head the Richwood district engine. Indications point to continued prosperity in that territory.

The Smoot Lumber Company's Mill, Arcola, W. Va., burned down on February 11, resulting in a heavy loss to that company, and, of course, will result in a loss of business for us temporarily. The fire was confined to the mill building and did not reach the lumber in the yards.

During the remaining months of the present year let's all try to take the "I" out of accident.

Old Things Made New

In an effort to revive interest and cultivate enthusiasm in the Monday morning meetings a departure from former methods is now in evidence. At the meeting held on Monday, January 28, after careful consideration, it was decided that the meetings would be known as "Employees' Cooperative Conferences." If the first two of them are a sample of what is to follow there is no doubt but that they will be of a type altogether different from those of the past and that they will savor of a zest and enthusiasm that has not been in evidence heretofore.

Faith plus determination will make anything go. With enthusiasm added, it can't be stopped. To the personnel of the Charleston Division the superintendent says, "These are your conferences, with me acting as chairman for the sole purpose of assisting you all possible. You can supply the enthusiasm, both at the meetings and on the outside, that will not let the thing stop. I know I am calling your attention to a familiar thought that has been expressed by President Willard when I ask you to become a part of this movement 'because you want to, and not because you have to.'"

A committee of five was appointed by the chairman of the Employes' Cooperative Conference in session on February 11 to canvass thoroughly the situation on the entire division and to make recommendations as to methods to be employed in an "Every Man Drive" for the securing of more business for our Company. Their report will be awaited with interest.

Someone has said, "Push: If you can't push, pull. If you can't pull, please get out of the way." As the colored man said to the rabbit, "Move 'long, chile, an' let somebody run what kin run."

Agent T. A. Richardson, Richwood, was a business caller in Weston a few days ago and says that the items we have seen in the newspapers about wildcats and other "varmints" in the outskirts of the town are correct. He reports in some cases it is necessary to "shoo" them off the back porch before it is safe to go out. He is certainly picking up "yarn" telling fast since he went to Richwood. Evidently he believes that when in Rome, do as the Romans do.

At 10.00 p. m., February 3, Third Trick Operator F. E. Friend, Bower, W. Va., was advised at his home by Mr. Arden Stout that there was a rock slide in cut near Bower. Mr. Friend called dispatcher but was informed that an extra south had passed the last telegraph office at which it could be reached. Operator Friend, in company with Dr. E. W. Shaffer, John Burdette, C. J. McCusker and Arden Stout, went to the cut, and while Mr. Friend flagged the train, the other four gentlemen cleared the track so that train could proceed.

Operator Friend has been commended and Superintendent Trapnell has thanked the four gentlemen for assistance given in this case.

The Claim Agent's Dream

(With apologies, and many of 'em to Edgar Allan Poe)

On a warm September morning as the clock struck three it seemed, While I sweated and I sweated as I dreamed and dreamed and dreamed;
Dreamed of clains and fair and radiant ladies I had seen.
Then I dreamed I heard a tapping, tapping,
As of someone loud rapping, rapping on my window screen.
'Tis the wind, I muttered wearily, beating new and then the stately branches of the tree against my window screen;
Only that, 'tis plainly seen.

Indistinctly I remember it was in the month of September,
And the moonlight east its shadows here and there upon my chamber floor;
Still I wondered what could cause the rapping,
As again I heard the tapping, tapping, louder than before.
Then upstarting in amazement, nearly falling to the floor,
As a white-faced form came tumbling, tumbling in upon my chamber floor.
"Who are you?" I cried, affrighted, frightened as I'd never been before;
"Collier," was the answer, only that and nothing more.

If you don't think there is truth in poetry in the above, ask Workmen or Collier.

On January 21, Mr. Thomas McPherson, of Burnsville, W. Va., discovered a broken rail at Mile Post 49. He flagged Train 64 and reported the damage. The conductor asked Mr. McPherson if he would remain there and flag any eastbound trains, which he promptly agreed to do. Superintendent Trapnell has written Mr. McPherson expressing appreciation of his action.

On January 20, Mr. Charles McCoy, of Cogier, W. Va., discovered broken rail near Cogier. He reported it by telephone to division headquarters and arrangements were made to repair the defect. He has been appropriately thanked by Superintendent Trapnell.

Mr. H. U. Taylor, employed by the Standard Oil Co., at Weston, W. Va., found broken rail in main track near Bendale, on January 19. He reported it to train dispatcher and also flagged an eastbound train, advising the crew of the defect. Superintendent Trapnell has expressed the thanks of the Railroad to Mr. Taylor in an appropriate letter.

On January 8, J. D. Degarmo, Silica, W. Va., found broken rail east of Silica station. He arranged with Mr. G. H. Reader to flag passenger train and notify crew of the defect.

E. L. Nixon, Buckhannon, found a broken rail on Liggett Road Crossing on December 28. He notified yard clerk immediately and repairs were made, thus averting delay to passenger trains. Superintendent Trapnell has written a letter to each of these gentlemen expressing appreciation for their assistance.

We understand "Bill" Kearfott, Jr., arrived in Connellsville,

Pa., at two-thirty a. m., on February 11. "Bill" Sr., must have been happy; they say he called, the old folks on long distance at three-thirty a. m. and got them out of bed to hear the glad news. Mr. Kearfott was formerly located at Weston as assistant division engineer. Mrs. Kearfott was formerly Miss Bernice Borneman, of the Office of General Foreman at Weston. How we would like to see "Old Bill" now! Say, Bill, does "Jr." have those waving chestnut colored locks, or is it too soon to tell?

The photograph on page 88 is Car Inspector E. R. Brown, Hamden, who discovered a broken flange on Baltimore and Ohio 173941, in train of No. 90, en route Cincinnati to Parkersburg. Mr. Brown has been commended for his close observance.

Our other photograph is Donald Richard, the fourteen months old son of Agent W. A. Kibbey.

Reports persist that C. J. Moeves is, or will be soon, an honest to goodness man with a wife. To support the contention, it is pointed out that "Charley" has started smoking a pipe instead of the usual dream-sticks.

In this issue is a photograph of Charlotte Lauther, comptometer operator in the General Manager's Office. It is a matter of regret that we could not furnish a photo which would do justice to Charlotte; however, it is her own fault; she was asked for a photo but said none were in existence; brother "Art" to the rescue. The verdict of all who observe Charlotte operate the comptometer is that while probably there are some just as good, she is not excelled by any. We are informed that Charlotte will soon take the fatal step into the sea of matrimony; her host of friends know that with such a disposition as she has, there is nothing in view for her intended but happiness. The best wishes of the General Office to you, Charlotte.

Even though it is long past, there are still some echoes of the Veterans' Dance at the Grand Hotel—"Sheik" Charley, who missed out on the cake; Marie Oliver, who did some tall stepping; "Ferdie," who showed 'em what he used to do; Marie Hughes, who trod the light faftastie with a couple of eligibles; George Lange, who smoked his lemonade through a straw.

Because of a reduction in yard force, Charles Brown's sojourn as yard clerk ended and he has returned to the General Manager's Office as assistant file clerk. This brings back to the Transportation Department the miniature Luis Firpo, who, it is understood, is taking an advanced course in astronomy, particularly the stellar feature.

In recent issues of the MAGAZINE stress has been laid on a campaign for "More Business."

This does not mean necessarily that we should go out after working hours and solicit business, but it does mean we should be glad to sell our Company's services whenever it is possible to do so.

Every business man you talk to is a prospective shipper for our line. In the course of conversation with him, mention the matter of shipping. Find out if his company is shipping anything in the near future. If they are, such information, when placed in the hands of the Traffic Department, generally results in "More Business." Every tip you get is of value to the Company.

It is gratifying to see how much interest has been displayed by employees and the amount of business they have turned in. Every little bit helps, and we hope other employees will do their part in the campaign for "More Business."

The excellent work of John Maxwell put the last two games "on ice" for the General Freight Office. The two heavy men for the Tariff Bureau were Witte and Studer.

The outstanding feature of all the games was the wonderful footwork of "Shuffling Mincow." Mincow thinks the man who invented the game has nothing on him. Someone passed the word around that Mincow was once a student of Classic Dancing. We believe them. All he needed was the clothes to finish the act.

The Tariff Bureau had better step lively if they want to take home the bacon in the next game as the General Freight Office boys think they have it "cinched."

Funeral services were held on January 16, at 8.30 a. m., at St. Joseph's Cathedral, Columbus, Ohio, for Miss Mary A. Lynch, secretary to District Freight Agent Max N. Freese. Miss Lynch had been ill for several months, but did not give up her duties until a week before she died. Her death followed an operation for tumor.

Miss Lynch entered Baltimore and Ohio service on August 1, 1896, and she was employed in the Traffic Department until her death. She made many friends and was loved and respected by us all. Her life was devoted to her work and her friends. Her outstanding characteristics were loyalty, kindness and inestimable patience.

The kindness of Miss Lynch was far reaching. She was always ready to lend a helping hand and her services were rendered in an unostentatious way. She was always looking for opportunities to voluntarily render service. Her activities were not confined to business; she was an enthusiastic worker in the church she loved so well. She was secretary of the League of the Sacred Heart, the Altar Society, the Catholic Women's League and the Benevolent Association.

Besides many friends, Miss Lynch leaves her mother to mourn her loss. We extend sincere sympathy. Her pleasant, kindly presence will be greatly missed in our department.

Mr. Haas was ill for some time and every available means to regain his health was resorted to, but the Grim Reaper had laid his hand upon him. On January 30, Mr. Haas quietly passed from this life. "Big Dick," as he was known to his intimates and friends, was 42 years of age and was just reaching the zenith of his usefulness when called. He leaves a devoted wife and many friends. His popularity was symbolized by the number of floral offerings. The number of friends who called to offer their sympathy to Mrs. Haas and to look for the last time upon Mr. Haas was so great that their home was not large enough to accommodate them. The Baltimore and Ohio has lost a useful employee, and all who knew him a real friend, whose life was one of big heartedness, justice, duty and love of humanity and will not soon be forgotten by us.

The accompanying picture is a snap shot taken in front of his office sometime before he was stricken.

He entered the service of the C. L. & W. as trackman in 1898 and continued in this service when the line was taken over by the Baltimore and Ohio in 1906. In 1915 he was promoted to track foreman and held this position until retired.

The campaign to increase business is bearing fruit but we can still further improve the showing. Opportunities are presented daily to divert business to our line and we should be ready to take advantage of them. Whenever you hear friends or acquaintances talk of traveling or shipping, remind them of the exceptional services given by the Baltimore and Ohio.

The late Shop Superintendent E. T. Haas, Cincinnati, Ohio

Train Dispatcher Phelps uncovered a whole bag of tricks in manipulating a Ford half way down a steep grade, then making a sudden turn and negotiating the balance of the grade backward. The pole at the bottom of the hill was not seriously damaged, but the Ford needs a little overhauling.

In Akron, we have inaugurated a move to rubberize the world. We have dispensed with street cars and will use busses and motor cars to stimulate the use of tires. We have all signed a pledge to wear nothing but rubber collars, boots, gloves, etc., and a few other clothes, of course. Inside facts and opinions will be furnished anyone sending us a sheet of high class asbestos writing paper and return stamps.

the goods. It seems the train then left the station, at any rate it's gone. A well trained mind responds quickly and after an interval of several hours it dawned upon our hero that something was wrong. Without unnecessary or undignified haste he searched his clothes and his mind but nothing could be found. It is customary to hand it to George and instinct told him that he should be carrying something. Starting on this basis he worked back to the starting point. He knew now his real condition. Not for nothing had he read the synopsis of "Tarzan" and he remembered that the way to overcome all obstacles was to beat his chest and yell. Unfortun-nately, he beat his chest so hard he couldn't yell, but his mind continued to function. He knew he was a better musician than Tosti was a prophet and he hummed sourly "Goodbye Forever" and felt relieved, as he certainly had been. With his back to the wall and one ear to the ground listening for the tread of Opportunity, he is again ready to step out in fast company, confident of his ability to finish anything he undertakes.—FINIS.

Advice has been received of the death of James Hershberger, pensioned employee, residing with his daughter, Mrs. Dan Kline at Aultman, Ohio.

The Freight Claim Prevention Committee postponed their meeting this month but will make up for lost time in connection with the rally day at Cincinnati. This is a live committee, handling one of the most important railroad subjects. Results are apparent on the division.

The sudden death of W. A. "Bill" Cavany came as a shock to us. In his years of service on the New Castle District he had acquired the friendship of many employees, who sincerely sympathize with the wife and children, and who also mourn the loss of a true friend.

The marriage of Martha Adams, clerk, Division Engineer's Office, and Frank Hert, Division Accountant's Office, took place on February 15. Congratulations!

L. E. Martin, assistant engineer, has been transferred to Dayton, Ohio. Martin is one of the tallest engineers in captivity, but this has no bearing on our belief that he is destined for higher things.

Assistant Engineer R. M. Beckett is the proud possessor of a new radio outfit and now hears everything except his wife's lectures. Any employee doing any broadcasting work can obtain accurate information by advising Beckett in advance of the event.

Miss Bernice Meek is training for a David Harum life. As a "swapper" she is "there" and "then some." This is written for the benefit of the unwary.

The digestive apparatus of the Baltimore and Ohio Company is not yet strained to the danger point and if you can "dig" up any food in the way of freight or passenger business, get it coming. No matter how good business is, we can make it better.

Engineer "Dad" Willard, Akron Jct., on the pusher engine, is developing his literary ability. His article appeared in the Akron Press replying to criticisms of the crossing protection at one of the street crossings in Akron. His article showed that the Company has spent considerable money in placing one of the most modern protective crossing devices there and demonstrated that drivers are not exercising proper care.

On January 20, Mrs. Fred Stoll R. F. D. 1, Box 77, Rittman, Ohio, discovered and reported a broken rail near Easton, and repairs were made without delay to traffic. Mrs. Stoll is not connected with the Baltimore and Ohio and our thanks are extended to her for her prompt action.

East Akron, Ohio

Correspondent, J. B. DRAKE

It is with deep sympathy that we record the untimely deaths of Mrs. Dora Warner and daughter Hazel, mother and sister of our foreman, C. A. Warner. They were struck by a truck while walking on the road near their home near Beach City

Ohio, about 6.00 p. m. on January 2. This is a peculiarly sad case because it leaves only Mr. Warner and a sister living out of a family of twelve children. At 3.00 p. m. on January 9, just after Mr. Warner had returned to duty, he received a telegram advising him that his mother-in-law had dropped dead at Winamac, Ind. The Baltimore and Ohio family extends to him their deepest sympathy.

It seems pertinent in connection with the above accident to add a word in connection with our campaign of "Safety First." This accident was said to be due to an autoist driving with bright headlights, while meeting another machine, thereby blinding the driver of the other machine as well as the people who were walking along the road. Automobile drivers of the Baltimore and Ohio family, take this to heart and set the other fellow a good example!

Our genial rate clerk, A. Earl Thompson, met with a painful accident the evening of January 7. The furnace in his house is heated by gas, and as the house began to get chilly, "Tom" went to the cellar to investigate. He found that although the gas was turned on, there was no blaze. After shutting off the gas and waiting a minute or so, he lighted a match, thinking the gas had been drawn out through the chimney, but soon found that even people coming from the country which furnishes our gas supply can be fooled, as there was an explosion which saved "Tom" the price of a shave and a hair cut, even taking eyebrows and lashes as well. "Tom" says he prefers to shave in the usual way and will try to remember "Safety First" in future.

Our wide awake demurrage clerk, J. E. Tritt, better known as "Si," demonstrated the fact that he can see other things besides car numbers, when he found a piece of iron driven between the rail joints on the main track and removed it before any train had passed over it. He deserves honorable mention in these columns. We fear that if our "Valley Flier," No. 42, had found this piece of iron first there would have been another tale to tell.

A Safety-First Invention

The Santa Fe Magazine has an idea for an invention which should attract the attention of railroad men the world over. Here it is. "Automotive talent is being directed to the perfection of a device that may be attached to the speedometer of an automobile and register in this manner:

"At 20 miles an hour a green light flashes.

"At 30, a yellow light flashes.

"At 40, a red light flashes.

"At 50, a gong rings and a phonograph starts playing, 'Nearer my God to thee.'"

We are glad to welcome Francis Coalo. Mrs. Coalo is with us during Miss Mildred Konker's visit to California.

Much truth is contained in the following extracts from an address delivered by Dr. Frank Crane before the New York Life Insurance Convention at White Sulphur Springs:

"If your voice is disagreeable and your manner of speech indistinct, see specialists. Don't get mad. I like you to be sunny, but I don't want you to get freckles.

"Tell the truth. If you are working for a concern where you cannot tell the truth, quit and go elsewhere.

"If you tell a man you are going to do a thing, do it if it costs a leg, be dependable.

"Be human. If the company merely wanted to disseminate information, they would use a catalog, not you."

These commandments of selling are just as applicable in the selling of transportation as in selling life insurance.

Aunt Mary's recent visit to Youngstown was an agreeable surprise and a most enjoyable one.

Road Foreman of Engines W. M. Canfield, New Castle Junction, has returned to duty after an illness of several weeks.

According to the rules of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE, as we, at New Castle Junction, understand them, all advertisements must be bonifide and represent the true article, otherwise they will not be accepted. However, we note on page 87 of the January issue, "The most brilliant aggregation of brains on the System," and we think that this advertisement was not thoroughly investigated before being inserted in our worthy monthly, or else the printer made a typographical error. There is nothing in the world like boosting, especially your own stock, and we don't hate ourselves one little bit, but we would hesitate some time before telling the WORLD that we are the "MOST BRILLIANT AGGREGATION OF BRAINS ON THE SYSTEM," as the Baltimore and Ohio covers SOME territory.

Two of our young engineers, "Banjo Face" Beahm and "Crow" Peterson have become interested in the game of "Mah Jong" and, according to several observers, "Banjo Face" (who never gambled in his life) won $700.00(?) which will never be paid by "Crow". The game was played recently in the parlors of Tea and Social

The many friends of Engineer W. J. Osburn will be pleased to learn that he is recovering rapidly from injuries sustained while on duty a few weeks ago.

Mary Young, eldest daughter of Assistant Terminal Train Master Young, is recovering from a recent operation for appendicitis.

Many of the "fems" at New Castle Junction have had their hair bobbed, and they all look "nifty." A few more are falling slowly.

W. J. Spurrier, booker, has been on the sick list for about two weeks. We all wish him a speedy recovery. "Old John," as he is known, is missed at Center Yard Office.

C. R. Duncan, chief clerk to General Superintendent Stevens, was a recent visitor at New Castle Junction.

The "BANDOS" have again come into the limelight since the basketball season opened. On January 23, the Baltimore and Ohio quintet journeyed to Youngstown and handed the Bretschneider Drugs a 23-22 defeat at Lincoln gymnasium. The teams were evenly matched and staged a lively battle.

The accurate field goal shooting of Buckingham and Jimmy Burnett (location clerk, New Castle Jet.), enabled the "BANDOS" to win; these two players scored every point. "Buck" was dropping the spheroid through the hoops from all angles, counting six during the setto, while Burnett garnered four double-deckers.

The Cleveland Terminal Welfare Association, at its dance at the Winton Hotel on March 1, put over the biggest and best party ever attempted locally. All departments were well represented. Again the superior leadership of their worthy president, "Joe" Clines, was demonstrated. "Our Joe" showed the boys how they should do their stuff. Burdge was on the door equipped with a razor for some unknown reason. "Al" Gensley did not succeed in reducing very much. The young lady employees surprised the boys with their "Style Show" stunts; however, George Littell was unable to find that Dan Cupid had made any headway. There were many visiting employees and their families and friends from Youngstown, Canton, Akron, Elyria, Lorain and other nearby points.

Cleveland Terminal Division No. 19, Veterans' Association, was organized on February 14 by Grand President Geo. W. Sturmer, who made an eloquent address in which he explained the origin of the association, its objects, growth and success.

H. G. Fletcher, Fairmont, W. Va., chairman of the Grand Board of Directors, assisted Mr. Sturmer in organizing the new division. Among those in attendance were O. S. Lewis, freight traffic manager, and J. H. Carroll, general freight agent, who made interesting addresses.

The following officers were elected: J. R. Niederheiser, president; C. A. Burdge, vice-president; S. C. Holcomb, secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Niederheiser was elected delegate to the Grand Convention.

The many friends of former Track Supervisor Hugh McDonald will regret to learn of his passing away at Des Moines, Iowa, on January 12.

Mr. McDonald started his railroad career in 1892, on the Chicago Great Western Railroad, as track laborer. He was later promoted to foreman, and in 1900 was promoted to roadmaster, which position he held until 1905, when he was employed as track supervisor by the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal.

In May, 1921 he was obliged to take a furlough owing to ill health, and had been unable to work since. He was laid to rest at Churchill, Iowa, on January 14.

December 29, 1923, proved to be a red letter night to a number of our engineers and wives; also to a number of engineers and wives from the C. G. W., C. & N. W., and C. M. & St. P. Mrs. J. F. Latshaw, president, Ladies' Auxiliary of the Engineers and wife of Engineer Latshaw, entertained railroad friends at an informal party given at the Columbus Park Recreation Center. Such a fine gathering of engineers and wives has not been held in many a day. Cards and bunco and an old-fashioned Virginia Reel were the amusements of the evening. Judging by the number of prizes won by our engineers, we are convinced that they can do more than run an engine. It was the consensus of opinion that they should organize a regular Bunco Club.

Fancy paper caps were distributed during the supper march and pretty, colored balloons floated about the hall, adding to the festive appearance. The dining room was a glimpse of fairyland in Christmas colors. A profusion of poinsettia artistically decorated the tables; baskets of this flower and red candles made a pretty picture. White candle holders of fancy paper, concealing the napkins, made welcome souvenirs. Credit is due to Sisters Williams, Humphrey, Mather, Lindsey and Wells for preparing the bountiful luncheon.

On February 5, Conductor "Jerry" N. Mahoney, Garrett, had both legs crushed under the wheels of a freight car at Willard, Ohio, which resulted in his death a few hours later.

Mr. Mahoney climbed onto the side of an empty stock car which was being run off the hump for track 15. The stock car slowed up and was caught by a car of coal that followed. When the coal car struck the stock car, Mr. Mahoney lost his balance and fell to the track. He was taken to the Blaine Hospital, but died shortly after.

Mr. Mahoney was born in Valparaiso, Ind., in 1864, and came to Garrett twenty-five years ago to enter the service of the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Surviving are his widow, a son, Joseph Mahoney, of South Bend, Ind., and two stepchildren, Mrs. George Valos, Garrett, and A. G. Weller, of Chicago.

Interment was made in the mausoleum at Calvary.

C. Hooven Griffis, the lieutenant who attempted to capture draft dodger Bergdoll in Germany, passed through Garrett February 12, on Train No. 7, en route to Chicago. He was met at the train by representatives of the American Legion, and the Ladies' Auxiliary, also a number of citizens. Mr. Griffis said he was glad to be home again, and was very grateful to the American people for their efforts to secure his release.

Neighbors in the vicinity of the Chas. Hopper residence, on South Randolph Street, are still wondering why F. N. Shultz, who "happened" to drive to that end of town on Sunday morning after the Veterans' banquet, apologized so profusely to a certain "policeman" while he was attempting to call on a lady from Baltimore. We never knew "Fred" could be so polite. Perhaps the policeman had been tipped off that he intended kidnapping the lady. From all reports he nearly got by with it as the lady in question wired back for some articles, which in her mad rush for No. 10, she had forgotten.

At the next Veterans' banquet we sincerely hope the guest of honor will not be monopolized by the "Shultz Boys."

The time is ripe when all live members of the Baltimore and Ohio Family should endeavor to secure additional revenue. You, as an employee, if you have been in the service for any length of time, have noticed that the depression in business occurs with regularity semi-annually. So the present lack of business is according to custom. Such being the case, why not make preparations semi-annually for this dullness in business, which always finds its way down through the rank and file, necessitating curtailment of operations? This, of course, has its effect on the pocket book of every employee who is furloughed, requiring him to seek a new position at a time when business is poor on all railroads. The fact that you know in advance that this dull period is bound to come should be an incentive to do everything possible to secure additional business. Let's get busy, take advantage of every opportunity to secure extra passenger and freight business for the Baltimore and Ohio and I am sure that we will all be happier for any efforts that we have made toward this end. Your assistance will go a long way toward keeping forces at work in the shops and on road. COOPERATION should be our slogan; this is the key note to success in any organization.

Employees on the Newark Division are taking an active part in the solicitation of business, freight and passenger, during the present dull period. Your correspondent is receiving frequent reports of the good work done. Agents have been asked to make reports of all such cases, so that credit can be given through the MAGAZINE. We have the following cases to report:

Pensioned Baggage-master Howard Hufton, Zanesville, Ohio, secured two passengers Zanesville, Ohio, to Tampa, Florida.

Mrs. R. E. Leonard secured passenger Newark to Chicago recently, and four passengers, on their way to California, used the Baltimore and Ohio between Newark and Chicago, both ways.

Mrs. Frank M. Howard, grand president, Ladies' Auxiliary, has to her credit two passengers, Baltimore to Newark; one passenger, Baltimore to Cincinnati; one passenger, Newark to Washington, D. C., and return, one passenger, Newark to New York and has secured many passengers between Newark and Cincinnati and between Newark and Columbus where the public is served by a competitive steam road, traction line and interurban bus lines.

THRIFT HAVE RETAIN INVEST FORTUNE THRIFT

January was THRIFT month, selected because it is the first month of the year and an appropriate time to start to save. Now we have been on the way about two months; how much have you saved by this time? Have you kept up your set amount for the two months, January and February? Thrift requires following a definite plan of saving, else you will fail to reach your goal. In the above lines, you will note that the word THRIFT appears first. If you endeavor to be thrifty, you will HAVE. If you HAVE, you can RETAIN, but if you do master the situation this far, you will not accumulate much unless you INVEST. When you have your savings invested safely it will only be a matter of time until you are well on the way to FORTUNE, which is the result of THRIFT. Relief Department Savings Feature has paid 5 per cent. interest almost every year! It is safe.

On January 31 members of the G. I. A., B. of L. E., entertained their husbands with a birthday dinner at Engineer's Hall, Newark, Ohio. Dinner was served at six thirty. After the after dinner talks were made by those at the table, Mrs. Joseph Robe, wife of Engineer Robe, presented Mrs. E. M. Little, their president, with a beautiful corsage from Division No. 41.

Mrs. Little expressed her appreciation of their kindness.

Mrs. Albert Altmeyer gave several selections on the piano, which were enjoyed by the entire assemblage, after which the evening was spent in dancing and cards.

Foreman William R. Browning, Tin and Pipe Shop, is confined to his home because of illness. His condition is serious.

Frank Lippencott, who has been on the sick list since September 25, is slowly regaining strength.

James Teagarden, machinist, has been on sick list since October 1. His many friends hope that he will soon be with us again.

J. R. Karnes, boilermaker, injured, is still off duty.

Crafts, the Veterans and shop foremen. He leaves to mourn their loss, his wife and step-son, Edward H. Ritter, two sisters, Mrs. John Shuttleworth and Mrs. Bernice Bentfeld. We extend our heartfelt sympathy.

James Wilson Wray

Born on May 30, 1858, died January 26, 1924, as a result of accidental injury while on duty as crossing watchman for the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania Company, near the Baltimore and Ohio Passenger Station. Mr. Wray had been in the service twenty-seven years and while on duty as brakeman suffered the loss of an arm. Since that time he has been employed in minor capacities. Mr. Wray was a man who was liked by all who knew him, he was sociable and always had a smile and word of good cheer for every one who came in contact with him while on or off duty, was a faithful workman and always had the interests of his employer uppermost in his mind. He was a member of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife, one daughter and one brother, a son having

Have you ever noticed Engineer "Jim" Campbell look over the tank of his engine before going out on his run? He places all lumps of coal that are likely to fall off in a pocket or next to the side board of the tank.

This is a good practice, not only preventing loss of coal, but it may be the means of preventing accident to some employee or other person who might be struck by lump of coal falling off tank.

W. F. Staugh, veteran boilermaker, on sick list, is regaining strength slowly. He paid a visit to the shops recently.

A. E. Grimm, passenger car inspector, is on sick list.

John Edward Schramm

Born on December 26, 1865; died January 21, 1924 at the home of his step-son, Edward H. Ritter, district boiler inspector, 562 East Main Street, Newark, Ohio after a lingering illness. Mr. Schramm entered the service at Newark, Ohio, on July 19, 1882 as apprentice boilermaker, was made boilermaker, July 19, 1886 in which position he served the company until January 1, 1918 when he was made boilermaker layer-out, this position he held until he retired because of failing health.

Mr. Schramm was expert in his chosen craft, and well liked by all shopmen, who will miss his friendly advice. He was always ready to instruct and help in any particularly intricate piece of work.

Mr. Arnold leaves a wife and two small children, who live at 354 Eastern Avenue, Newark, Ohio, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Arnold, Cleveland, Ohio, a brother and sister who also live in Cleveland, one sister in Cincinnati. Funeral was held from the United Brethren Church, East Newark, January 31. We extend our sympathy.

FAIR BUSINESS GETTERS SET THE PACE AT NEWARK, OHIO

An example of personal effort on the part of employees' wives to secure additional revenue for the Baltimore and Ohio

In connection with the campaign to secure business for the Baltimore and Ohio, we are pleased to give deserved credit to the wives of two employees in the service at Newark, Ohio. We naturally expected a goodly number of employees to take part in this campaign and while we thought there might be a possibility of enlisting the support of the wives or families of employees in this work, we really did not think that they would undertake it so enthusiastically. We congratulate Mrs. Frank M. Howard, wife of Passenger Engineer Frank M. Howard and grand president, Ladies' Auxiliary, and Mrs. R. E. Leonard, wife of Engineer R. E. Leonard, on their efforts to secure passenger business. Mrs. Howard secured a passenger Newark to Washington, D. C., and, not content with this, agreed to make the trip with the passenger to be sure that it would be enjoyable and remembered by the new patron of Baltimore and Ohio service.

Mrs. Leonard secured a passenger, Newark to Chicago, after considerable difficulty; a competing line had always been used by the prospective passenger because she was acquainted with the train crews through frequency of her trips to Chicago. This woman, being a cripple, felt that she needed attention enroute to Chicago. Mrs. Leonard was equal to the demands intimated in the course of their conversation and agreed to accompany her passenger to Chicago. The prospective passenger agreed and Mrs. Leonard made the trip, taking good care of her. On arrival at Chicago, Mrs. Leonard met the daughter of the passenger who thanked her for her kindness. The husband of the daughter of our new passenger, a doctor in Chicago, asked Mrs. Leonard how they could repay her for her kindness.

She replied that any time they cared to travel and could use the Baltimore and Ohio, she as well as the Management would be glad to have them do so. When Mrs. Leonard was asked, "Why do you take such an active part in this canvass for additional revenue for the Baltimore and Ohio?" her answer was, "Since I get my bread and butter through the compensation received from the Baltimore and Ohio for services rendered by my husband I feel that it is a duty I owe our Company."

If more employees could see this in the same light as Mrs. Leonard does we can surmise what effect the concerted efforts of our large family of employees would have on our revenue.

One of our photographs is of Stationary Engineer Walter Barlow, who was born July 2, 1858. He entered the service of the old Midland R. R. in 1887, and when the Baltimore and Ohio took it over, Mr. Barlow came to his present position at Columbus round house on April 2, 1891. He has been in the service for 33 years, and 4 years on the Midland R. R. "Walter," as we know him, is a familiar figure at Columbus, a firm believer in SAFETY FIRST and always has the interests of the Baltimore and Ohio uppermost in his mind. It is a wonder that Walter could spare enough time from the power plant, to step outside and have his photograph taken!

Agent Waller informs us of a change in his forces. There was an opportunity for him to wax poetic. He might have said "My poor Dolly Gray, they have taken him away"—and made him a ticket clerk. So we chronicle the promotion of one of our best and most trusted mail porters to the position of ticket clerk.

We are pleased to announce the addition of a commuters' train between Zanesville and Philo. This train makes three round trips daily between Zanesville and Philo and is necessary to accommodate employees of the Ohio Power Company, the largest power plant in the world. While this train was principally for Ohio Power employees, it incidentally serves the people between here and Philo, and should, in time, be a source of revenue for the Baltimore and Ohio. If any readers desire to see some beautiful scenery, as well as the largest power plant in the world, let them come to Zanesville and take a ride on the Philo Special.

By the time the March MAGAZINE reaches its readers, it will be near the time when the women are beginning to think of the great festival of house-cleaning. To those who have gone through many of these trying, profanity-producing times, there is little in store but work, but to the newly-weds, there is a novel experience awaiting them.

Agent Perry says, "the only hard work he has to do is to get up these cold, cold mornings." More power to Mr. Perry, but let us all make a wish that the cold winds of March will soon blow over and leave us Spring in all its beauty.

Amzy Bird, yard conductor, is again laid up with rheumatism. We all hope to see him back soon.

R. L. Bookman, "Booky," brakeman, is also on the sick list.

Yard Master Stockwell reports the addition of another crew. Among the new men are found Charles Hees and M. Russell, also our old fellow employee, Tom Kithcart.

Mansfield is gaining monthly in inbound revenue. This looks fine for this time of the year. We predict a heavy business for 1924.

Fred Mikesell is a proud man! He has the only electric light in the office except one on the agent's desk. When some hopeful remark is made that we will soon have one at each desk, it is squelched by Miss Wright or "Bill" Severns, saying we will get them when we get the new Freight House.

Forget each kindness you have done
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls to you
As soon as you have won it.
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it,
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer
Wherever you may meet it.

Remember every kindness done
To you, whate'er its measure;
Remember praise by others won
And pass it on with pleasure.
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter;
Remember those who lend you aid
And be a grateful debtor.

—Author unknown

We have three future great men working in our office, judging by the way they talk and plan. Cashier R. H. Schantz, oil magnate; Rate Clerk W. A. Mellor, fish rod manufacturer; J. M. Reed, head of the national egg producers association, with which firm Baggage-man H. J. Henry will no doubt be associated as chief orator, broadcasting his lectures by Radio.

There seems to have sprung up in the office a so-called discussion group, which is functioning in the interest of all. Each morning some important topic is discussed from all possible angles, and it is really surprising to hear some of the wonderful ideas expressed by members of this group. With our able critic, Mr. Henry, we feel that these discussions will prove beneficial to all of us from an educational standpoint and help to make us wiser each day. These discussions are also especially pleasing in view of the fact that for the past eight or ten months the boys have discussed three subjects only, to the exclusion of all others, namely; fishing, chicken raising and bear hunting. These are all interesting subjects, we admit, but anything becomes monotonous when carried to excess. Shakespeare said, "Variety is the spice of life." Let's have a little of the spice and continue to take even a greater interest in our discussion group in the future.

Our two marriageable young men in the office, seem to be perturbed these days, because no girl has, as yet, proposed to them. Remember, young men, that faint heart never won fair lady, and it might be well for you to muster up enough courage to try to capture some nice girl without waiting for her to show all the bravery of the proposal game. Good luck to you!

Members of the Car Repair Shop Force have noticed that Helper Carman Norman Joseph Hirt has been acting strangely of late. It has been reported that he has made a number of "dates," with dainty farmer girls in the vicinity of Castalia, Ohio. Various older and more experienced Shieks employed at Sandusky have tried in vain to warn this handsome, dashing young man that such actions will terminate fatally if a young hired man, beau of one of these rustic Shebas, should intrude upon the scene at the moment he was about to imprint a kiss upon rural rosebud lips. Unfortunately, this daring young Romeo does not heed these warnings and it can only be hoped that no casualty will occur.

Car Foreman Frank E. Cheshire has accepted a position on the Chicago Division.

An illustration of the high esteem which the largest shippers of this city have for the Baltimore and Ohio is evidenced by the fact that one concern in our city recently sent to our office a list of 67 cities on a competitive road, asking us to route and give junction point of delivery to foreign road so as to give us the longest haul possible. This concern expects to have carloads for these points and took this method to show that they prefer our service.

If Theodore Roosevelt were alive, he would take much pleasure in the following announcements of arrivals in our midst. We take pleasure in congratulating the happy parents as follows:

Cashier and Mrs. Joe Weingates, on the arrival of Mary Jean, January 23. Conductor and Mrs. Harry Spiegel, a baby girl, on January 31. Bill Clerk and Mrs. Charles Abels, on the arrival of William Charles, February 3. Painter and Mrs. Clarence Siebert, on arrival of Clarence Jr., February 10 and Hostler Helper and Mrs. George Stegman, who announce the birth of Warren Woodrow on February 11.

Louis Traut, car inspector, is smiling over the arrival of a grandson on February 9. Nearly all the men we know, who are grandfathers, have a somewhat aged appearance, but not Mr. Traut. He looks ten years younger.

The smokes and candies were enjoyed by us all. May it be an annual event!

The regular meeting of Ohio Division Veterans' and Ladies' Auxiliary was held at the Eastern Star Temple, Chillicothe, Ohio, on January 12 at 7.30 p. m. Installation of the newly-elected officers was the principal business of the meeting. Membership, finance and sick committees were appointed by the newly-elected president, W. L. Allison. The Veterans are planning a membership drive to get the hundred and forty employees who are eligible for this association and who are not now members to join. With this added membership and proper working of the committees appointed, prospects are good for a successful year. President Allison stated that regular meetings would be held each month and special entertainment features will be arranged. An appeal was made to each member to pay his dues for the year promptly, this being necessary to enable the officers to carry on the work of the organization.

The Ladies' Auxiliary held a business meeting at which the following officers were elected: Mrs. Wm. Allison, president; Mrs. Elmer Hyson, vice-president; Mrs. Charles Hummel, treasurer; Mrs. James P. Britton, secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Schwarzel, chaplain.

Charles Jr., son of Engineer Gilbert, and Rhode Island Red rooster "junior," which also took first prize for cockerels at Ross County Poultry Show

At the conclusion of the business meeting a delightful social hour was enjoyed and a tempting lunch was served by the ladies. This was thoroughly enjoyed by all, especially the Veterans, who literally "cleaned up everything in sight."

An earnest call has been sent out by the newly-elected presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Allison, asking all members of the Veterans' and Ladies' Auxiliary to attend regular meetings during the coming year.

The stork stopped at Charles Paul's residence on New Year's Day and left a fine son and daughter. Mr. Paul is one of our reliable trackman at Washington C. H., Ohio. Congratulations!

Henry W. Snider, trackman, Washington C. H., and Miss Matheney, daughter of James Matheney, coal chute foreman, were married on January 20. Best wishes, and may their married life be a happy one.

Conductor C. F. Yaus has our sympathy in the death of his father, who was killed in an automobile accident on January 16 at Newark, Ohio.

On January 14, as Train No. 145 left Madisonville, a young lady attempted to get on after it had started, fell on platform and rolled towards the moving train. The engineer, observing the accident, stopped as quickly as possible. In the meantime, however, Sectionman James G. Able, who was on his way to tool house, saw the dangerous plight of the young lady, and went to her assistance and probably prevented her from rolling under the train. The young lady was very grateful to Mr. Able, and after a few minutes rest went to her home and later to Cincinnati, where she was employed. Her injuries consisted of a slightly bruised shoulder and back. Mr. Able is commended for his quick action which possibly averted a serious or fatal accident.

G. D. Gurney has been appointed assistant engineer on Maintenance of Way Corps. We welcome him.

A number of clerks from the Division Accountant's Office enjoyed a regular skating party during the cold wave. It seems, however, that "Bob" Myers had considerable difficulty in locating a boy friend on the ice, who was supposed to be wearing a white sweater. We are told that he now realizes there are several "white sweaters" usually worn among skaters. Apply to "Bob" personally for details.

Miss Eva Eberle has been assigned to the position of stenographer to chief clerk to superintendent. Miss Dorothy Dunlap is the "new" clerk employed to fill Miss Eberle's place. Success to both!

It is with regret that we report the death of Bernard Corrigan, carman, on January 24 after an illness of two years. His fellow employes extend sympathy to his family.

Careless workers always have a good supply of alibis—but alibis do not prevent accidents. Do your task the right way—THE SAFETY FIRST WAY.

Carl F. Boll, demurrage clerk, Freight Office, Chillicothe, while looking over orders for cars to be placed, noticed an order for a car from a manufacturing firm at this point to be loaded to Indianapolis, Ind., routed v'a other roads. He immediately called this firm, asking if they could not give this business to the Baltimore and Ohio, and was informed that it was the consignee's request that it be routed as given. He then asked if they had any objections to our taking the matter up with view of having routing changed and this was agreed to. Agent Moore's attention was directed to this, matter taken up, consignee gave consent to route via Baltimore and Ohio, and the revenue of a car load of freight to Indianapolis secured through the efforts of Mr. Boll. As this will show, Mr. Boll, has the interest of the Company at heart in his work and is a thorough believer in "GETTING BUSINESS FOR THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO."

We have many live "Get the business for the Baltimore and Ohio" employees on this division, but the following case is worthy of special note:

On the morning of February 9, Brakeman J. F. Harmon was entering the Union Station at Cincinnati to go out on his run, Train 12. A lady, noticing his uniform, asked him about trains to Detroit. Mr. Harmon told her about our No. 56 which leaves Cincinnati at 8.00 a. m. Inciden-

We have been wondering why all the improvements have been made in General Yardmaster's Office, Hamilton. The general yardmaster has a new "Private Office," the place has been painted, the floor is spick and span, and a new electric sign "No Smoking." There is a reason. It is that a pretty young miss has been added to the official staff. We welcome her to our family.

Mr. Irwin has been in ill health for the past two months. We hope for his speedy recovery.

Our old friend Supervisor McCarthy, Wellston Division, has been transferred to Toledo Division, headquarters Toledo. We know one person who is sorry to see "Mac" leave the Wellston Division, but we dare not mention names. Mr. Bowman, Division Engineer's Office, takes his place at Chillicothe.

Born to Assistant Division Engineer and Mrs. P. W. Elmore, a fine baby girl. All of the boys have been furnished with cigars, and the ladies with plenty of chocolate candies. (Although the poor "scribe" has not seen any cigars, he lives in hope.)

Have you ever seen more accommodating clerks than we have in the Union Depot Ticket Office, Dayton? These boys are there when it comes to rendering service. Ask them for a match, and you get one. Ask them for a hair pin and they'll get you one and ask them for a ticket and they'll sell you one. And they are there in all varieties. Short ones, fat ones, tall ones and lean ones. But the best part is they all wear perfect smiles.

A baby boy was born to Assistant Chief Clerk and Mrs. George Stoecklein, Dayton. Congratulations!

Division Engineer R. E. Chamberlain met with a serious accident recently. While boarding Train 56 at Second Street he slipped on the ice and broke his arm. He now is well on the road to recovery.

Chief Clerk to Superintendent L. E. Fenner has returned from a vacation in the Sunny South. Lou likes to tell us about the fine fishing he had. He can tell fish stories and of course a fisherman is judged by the number of BIG ones that got away.

Depot Foreman "Bill" Ireland came to work a few days ago wearing a new fur lined cap. Now we want to know whether "Bill" killed his cat for the fur or whether it was a neighbor's kitty.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, is the pioneer in rail transportation, and this is one reason why this wonderful System should receive a good portion of the business offered today. This can only be accomplished by the loyal spirit of our employes, who are in close touch with the shippers, their friends who contemplate a trip on business or vacation.

Persons should not deprive themselves or their children of the opportunity to travel in this age. Some of the older folks think that traveling is a luxury, but the modernists say NO—that it is a necessity. For educational value alone it is worth a hundred times the price you pay for a railroad ticket. To the child in school what could be any more interesting and educational than a trip to Washington to visit such notable sights as the Washington's Monument, Lincoln's Memorial, a trip down the Historic Potomac to Mt. Vernon?

I announce with regret the death of Miss Maud E. Veidt, former secretary to division freight agent, Dayton, Ohio.

Miss Veidt was born in Ludlow, Ky., but spent her girlhood in Morrow, Ohio. She entered the service in 1916, was identified with the Local Agent's Office from March, 1917 to April, 1920 when she became secretary to Division Freight Agent H. E. Warburton. While serving in this capacity her health became impaired and she resigned August 7, 1923 returning to her home in Lancaster, Ohio. Although everything possible was done, she passed to the Great Beyond on February 6.

Miss Veidt's services while with the Baltimore and Ohio were satisfactory in every respect. She won her way into the hearts of those with whom she was associated in business and social life. Miss Veidt was engaged to be married to G. F. Aring, freight representative, in September, 1923 but their happiness was marred by reason of the illness which finally resulted in her death. Chas. Veidt, a brother, is employed in the Division Accounting Office, Dayton, Ohio. We extend to the family our sincerest sympathy.

The Baltimore and Ohio Freight House is still located at Third and Webster Streets. We make this announcement for the benefit of those coming to the building. It is the same building and the only difference is that it has been given a new coat of paint which gives it a decidedly different appearance. Just a word to those who work in the building—do your share toward keeping it nice.

Business is booming on the Toledo and Wellston Divisions, with every indication of a continuance. Shippers are beginning to realize the many advantages the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad offers them in prompt and speedy movement and courteous treatment. The year 1924 bids fair to excel 1923.

Our MAGAZINE has taken the lead in Business Solicitation. Keeping employes informed of the latest developments is stimulating. Every employe can be a good solicitor for business.

With the approach of Spring everything brightens up and looks more cheerful. General Foreman W. A. Gilmore has already started activities. The installation of the Water Softening Plant, a general clean-up and a few additional improvements puts us in a better position than ever to give A1 service.

Master Mechanic T. C. O'Brien is about the busiest man on the railroad at the present time, watching every movement. He is always careful of the company's interests and the well being of the employes, and ever vigilant in the prompt discharge of his duties. Mr. O'Brien's motto is "Respect all and you will be respected."

Our old friend Thomas Grady, until recently yard master, second shift, has moved to third shift at East Dayton, and, by the way—I guess that new car is the cause of it.

Ivan Van Hall has taken the second shift as yard master. "Van" is adept at the game.

We are glad to note that Brakeman Robert Mundy and Switchman Frank Harness, who have been confined to their homes by illness, are convalescing and will be back soon.

Don't forget that the railroads are starting one of the greatest Safety Campaigns ever undertaken, especially against crossing accidents. The statistics they present are appalling and it behooves every employe to be a missionary, spreading the gospel of Safety, that the public may be warned against carelessness in approaching railroad crossings. Remember Shop Safety at all times, and, "DO NOT DO IN AN INSTANT WHAT AN AGE CANNOT RECTIFY."

Three thousand years ago there lived an Egyptian King, Tut-ank-ha-men. The name sounded like a stutter, so fellow luxurites called him "Tut" for short. When "Tut" reached the dangerous age, and finally succeeded in producing the "Staycomb" effect, with somewhat luxuriant locks, he died. Dying was one of the leading indoor sports then, and "Tut's" death was a major league event. They proceeded to wrap him in a series of layers and finally deposited the remains in a tomb in the valley of departed Kings.

Three thousand years later a party of Anti-Voisteaders, while exploring for a fit

ON THE TOLEDO DIVISION

spot for "still" development work, dug up "Tut's" tomb with all the medieval relics buried with him. Then the advertising man stepped in and took charge, and in a few weeks gave "Tut" a reputation which puts "Charley" Chaplin, "Doug" Fairbanks and Mary Pickford into oblivion by comparison.

Dead three thousand years! Forgotten! Lost! then "Bang"—advertised and the whole world clamored for more news of "Tut." If advertising can put that much life into something dead for three thousand years, what will it do for a live subject? A subject like ours, our business, our Railroad? By talking we can make the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad a by-word with everybody. They might have dug up a hundred "Tuts" and if they kept the news to themselves only a few bookworms and historians would have ever heard of it. Moral: You may have the best product in the world, but unless you tell the people about it your business will slumber peacefully to death. What more advertising would we want than to have each employe in his daily walks of life ask his friends to give us business?

It is with regret that we lose our good friend C. D. McCarty. Mr. McCarty, who has been road supervisor, Wellston Sub-Division, for the past four years has been transferred to Toledo as supervisor, North End. He made many friends during his stay and we will miss him. Mr. McCarty's successor is D. R. Bowman, who has been connected with the Engineering Department for several years. We welcome Mr. Bowman.

Section Foreman Edward Blake, Zimmerman, Ohio, takes the prize for the second time in as many years for the best section on our division. He is all smiles since he is the only section foreman on this division who has accomplished this feat.

It is very gratifying, to know that the public on our Division takes an interest in our Road. Recently, an extra train going west out of Jamestown, dropped a brake beam that caught between the rails and a crossing plank. Mr. Sheeley, a farmer, living near by, discovered the beam and it was wedged so tight that he was unable to remove it. Knowing that train No. 68 was soon due he called Agent A. E. Smiley, Jamestown to get section men out and made arrangements to flag No. 68. Mr. Sheeley's action averted serious trouble, and the Baltimore and Ohio appreciates his close observation. Thank you, Mr. Sheeley!

Trainmaster Dick Mallen recently had the pleasure of being best man at a colored wedding. While he was staying at a hotel in Portsmouth, the porter and a maid decided to embark on a wedding journey, providing they could raise enough money to pay the minister. Mr. Mallen came to their rescue and made a donation. After the ceremony had been performed, Mr. Mallen said he thought he should be the first to kiss the bride. The bride quickly consented and proceeded to throw her arms around "Dick's" neck. EXIT Mr. Mallen. We hope he will be caught the next time.

On January 27, Mrs. C. E. Jones died at her home in Dayton, Ohio. She leaves to mourn her loss Operator F. B. Jones, Chillicothe, Ohio and Supervisor F. A. Jones, Dayton, Ohio, and a daughter at Celina, Ohio. Our sympathy is extended to the family.

On January 8 Mrs. Geo. Christman, wife of agent at Coalton, Ohio, died. Our sympathy is extended to Mr. Christman and family.

The demand for locomotives is increasing. Why don't auto drivers look and listen at crossings?

T. C. O'Brien, our new master mechanic, recently visited Wellston to get acquainted with the force. We were glad to see him.

We are having the best business on our division that we have had for several years. All stations are increasing revenue and everyone is looking forward to a good year. Our through business is getting better from day to day. We are now receiving from the Norfolk and Western at Renick, from two to three solid trains a day and the indications are that we will get more than this. This is all through business for Chicago and gives us the long haul. In order to hold business we must give good service. Keep the cars moving. Shippers want the best movement and if we can't give it to them, they will give business to someone else.

Trainmaster W. B. Kilgore recently left for New York, where he will attend a meeting with other officials from all over the system. The meeting, we understand, is in connection with air tests.

A freight claim prevention meeting was held at Hamilton, Ohio, on January 21, which was attended by J. Reister, agent; C. C. Collins, chief clerk; "Clem" Borscher, cashier; Edwin Alstatter, general foreman; Paul J. Collins, delivery clerk; Lester Scarborough, utility clerk; Mrs. Jennie Sharp, utility clerk; Miss Mary Connell, claim clerk; Miss Gertrude Guyler, stenographer, and Tallymen Ruhl and Schmitz.

The proper way to mark and accept "Order Notify" shipments, also the inspection of damaged or robbed shipments, and notations to be placed upon the delivery receipt and paid freight bills were discussed in detail. The proper way to handle carload or less carload freight when in U. S. Bond was also discussed.

The monthly meeting of the Traffic Council, Hamilton Chamber of Commerce, was held on February 5. This council is composed of the traffic managers of the larger manufacturers of this city. This meeting was attended by Agent J. Reister and Cashier Borscher.

Paul J. Collins, who was in charge of delivery office for the past year, was appointed freight bill clerk on February 1. James Schmitz, tallyman, was appointed delivery clerk.

Martin Philabaum and Miss Gertrude Guyler, of this office, had a contest to see who could secure the most freight for movement via the Best and Only. At present it is a tie, each having secured several carloads and the promise of several more.

Does everybody know exactly what use to make of the solicitation cards sent out in the MAGAZINE each month? When you hear of a shipment of freight, car load or less, that is going to be shipped from Lima, or when you hear of someone who will make a trip, get the information, fill out the card and give, or send it to freight or ticket agent. Action will be taken on the information supplied. Let's go!

On February 2, a farewell party was held by the Local Freight Office girls in honor of Beatrice Goeb and Ruth McIlvain who left on February 4 for a trip to the Pacific Coast, visiting friends and relatives en route. They were also given a send off at the depot by the office force when they left.

Safety Representative Braden, Baltimore, Md., stopped here on February 6 to make arrangements for a Safety Rally to be held at Lima, in Memorial Hall, on April 29. His visit recalls our rally at Lima on February 11, 1921 held in the Elks New Ballroom, when we had to turn hundreds away. Everytime the Koch twins see us they sing snatches of Frank Guinan's song of the evening "The Wildflower."

It is planned to repeat another all star performance on April 29. Memorial Hall was considered the only hall here large enough to hold the people.

The Veterans' Association, Toledo Division, held another of their famous card parties on the night of February 6, at the Oddfellows Hall, Wayne and Main Sts., Lima. All had a fine time. The party was composed largely of Baltimore and Ohio employes, their families and friends. Announcement was also made of the get-together meeting held on February 20, in same place, to which all Veterans and their wives were invited. Superintendent Iams was also invited. Invitations were sent to all members on the Toledo Division.

Yes Marion, yes Florence, I think since you have had your hair bobbed it has added to the beauty of the office. There seems to have been added a touch that may account for the increased business we have been enjoying.

Some of the things your correspondent observed at the Veterans' Card Party:

Frank Snyder, the watch dog of the Veterans' treasury, checking up to the cent.

Mrs. R. M. Lane, conducting the card party and distributing the prizes in her usual delightful manner.

Jim Jay holding a "lone" hand and passing. John Schnable, in the kitchen, looking for a piece of pie.

Ed. Brennan in a deep study while playing (no doubt thinking of the pillow slips he donated for "Doc" Hutchinson to raffle again for the benefit of the Ladies' Auxiliary).

Pat Leahy enjoying himself, as usual, with the ladies.

Brother Van Horn, president, Veterans' Association and Sister Wallburg, president, Ruth Shindledecker, granddaughter of Conductor J. M. Barnett, Toledo Division

Ladies' Auxiliary, in earnest conversation together, no doubt planning the big time on the 20th.

A fine sociable spirit prevailed. Everybody enjoyed himself.

On January 5 all railroads entering the Union Depot, Cincinnati, had to vacate because of high water. Baltimore and Ohio trains used the old Eighth and Baymiller Streets Depot. Trainmaster Fitzpatrick wants to borrow Barney Google's puddle jumper so he can be everywhere at the same time in case of another flood.

Conductor James Kelly has returned from the sunny south. It was so cold down there it reminded him of home, so he got homesick and returned to the Buckeye State, only to find it twelve below.

We extend our sympathy to Switchtender George Hannum and Baggage-master "Cal" Hannum, whose wife and mother respectively passed away after illnesses of several months.

Former Operator James Wiley, retired on pension after fifty-one years' service, now resides in Chicago, Ill. He has been visiting his son and friends in Glendale.

Mrs. Charles Fouch, wife of brakeman, died on January 22 after an illness of over one year. We extend to the bereaved family our sympathy.

To every department of our Company the word has gone out GET MORE BUSINESS. Being employed on a passenger train naturally my thoughts are of this service. From an experience of twenty years on passenger trains, it is my opinion that a passenger train is not only to carry passengers, but to serve as an advertisement for the Railroad. Suppose you see an article advertised in a daily paper or some good magazine, and it appeals to you as a good thing; you try it out and it proves satisfactory. Would you then discard it for something else, not so good? You would not. The same applies to a passenger train. If a new customer got on your train and received the service and courtesy he expected, he would be a booster as well as a customer. Once a customer is satisfied it is hard to make him believe another road is better. How can we increase our passenger and freight business? Experience has taught me that the way to make friends and increase the revenue is to give service. Service means courtesy, to be obliging and helpful, to answer questions, and if you do not know, try to explain to your passengers that you do not know but that you will try to secure information for them. This sometimes means looking up connections, sending telegrams, or giving information as to hotels, etc. Such information can be secured from our Passenger Department and other officials, who are always willing to assist a trainman. Let us make the Toledo Division known as THE DIVISION WITH THE MOST COURTEOUS TRAINMEN. Remember that a passenger does not know much about railroading and may ask you a lot of apparently unnecessary questions. Don't lose your temper, but do all in your power to make our guests comfortable. The result will be full passenger cars and heavy freight business, which will keep you and me at work three hundred and sixty-five days out of the year. Above everything else, SMILE!

Baggage-master and Mrs. Chas. Radcliff are touring the principal cities of the West.

Conductor Thomas Meagher, who was removed from his train at Lima a few weeks ago because of illness, has reported for duty.

Conductor "Phil" Austin, who has been ill for several weeks with pneumonia, is improving. We hope he will soon be with us again.

Small acts of courtesy and helpfulness to the traveling public often result in our railroad being remembered by the traveling public and shippers giving us more business. When Conductor J. Swartz, Train No. 68, found a pocket-book lost by a passenger and returned it to him, he made a good friend for the Baltimore and Ohio.

It is with regret that we announce the death of Veteran Car Oiler John Stotts, East St. Louis, who was struck and killed by Train 68 on January 28.

The February meeting of the Claim Prevention Committee was postponed and a Claim Prevention Rally was held at Cincinnati on February 21. Claim Prevention and stopping leaks go hand in hand.

Why the happy smile on Brakeman R. Berry's countenance? Twins, people! No wonder that he grins broadly.

The 1924 Bass Club was organized recently and Conductor H. Johnson again elected president. Being president of the Bass Club means that you have to catch the most bass during the year. Henry is well qualified.

Fireman C. J. Palmer, on February 11, stopped a leak by preventing delay to a train. Palmer was called East from Flora for 8.30 a. m. and train called West for 7.45 a. m. was getting ready to leave town. A lump of coal fell on fireman's foot, mashing it so that he could not work. Palmer was at the roundhouse and took the train called West out on time, another man being called to take his run.

Burning question of the day among the dispatchers:

"Have you seen Boots' new shirt?"

Baggage-master Floyd Van Hoy, while riding in smoking car of Train No. 2, February 3, one and a half miles east of Fleming, Ind., felt the car give sudden jerk. He reported to operator at North Vernon that he felt sure it was caused by a broken rail. Trackmen were ordered to investigate and located the broken rail which was immediately repaired and perhaps prevented serious accident.

Someone sent the following advertisement in but did not pay for it: "Lost—40 hours by Division Accountant's Force account attending lecture. $50 reward."

Chief Clerk F. A. Conley visited different points on the division on his way to Beaumont, Texas, where he will endeavor to regain his health.

Some new business has been added to the family of Traffic Employees Russell Phillips and "Roger" Bean. Phillip's is a ten-pound boy, while Bean is the proud possessor of a lady. Congratulations and thanks for the cigars!

While Traveling Freight Agent Wright's chief duty is to secure freight traffic to fill our coffers, he does not hesitate to pick up passenger business. While in a hotel dining room he heard a fellow guest discussing a contemplated trip to Detroit, Mich., via a competing line. Mr. Wright secured an introduction to the gentleman, looked up train connections and asked him to travel our way, which he did. Velvet!

Agent Kellar, Washington, is seriously considering presenting a bill to the Mexican Government (whenever they have one) for services rendered when a party of Mexicans were unloaded at Washington because they had no transportation. Mr. Kellar immediately got in touch with their destination and secured transportation for them. However, some of them wandered away to view the sights and returned in time to see No. 2 roundin' the curve, leaving town. Rather than leave them alone any longer they were placed under the watchful eye of the city officers until train time and everybody was satisfied.

Conductor "Red" Toombs and Brakeman Lewis were commended by a Big Four official, who, while boarding our No. 44 at Springfield, had his pocket picked. Toombs and Lewis instituted a search for the pocket-book and found it, for which he has expressed his appreciation. Here's the point—the crew's apparent desire to help and their courteous manner brought forth many complimentary remarks from other passengers on the train.

It may be a sign of an approaching millennium, but the other day some correspondence from an industry located on our rails appeared bearing a rubber stamp, "Quit nagging at the railroads." When shippers, the traveling public and others can be impressed with this idea, then our burdens will be lightened "muchly!" It may not be given to all of us to set forth a comprehensive view of the railroad's economic problems, but when your railroad is criticized, often by a person who is not thoroughly informed, do you try to set him straight? Perhaps you know of a condition, possibly unavoidable, which has caused his complaint. Not long ago I heard a disparaging remark about the Baltimore and Ohio dining car service. Three employees who heard this remark immediately took issue with the man, offered to pay for all he could eat on a Baltimore and Ohio diner, provided he was dissatisfied with the food and its price. He was then convinced that he must have been "off his feed" at the time he dined.

A passenger detraining from No. 2 at Flora left her purse and did not remember it until a short time before train was due to leave. She was distressed, but when Conductor Crump assisted her, with a pleasant smile, in locating the missing purse her thanks were profuse. Here is another friend.

Will you be at the big Safety Rallies we are going to have in April?

Miss "Mar" Duncan, who was planning a trip around the world, called on R. M. Allen, ticket seller, Taylorville, for some information concerning trains to New York over a competing line. Mr. Allen, with Baltimore and Ohio interest at heart, skillfully mentioned the advantages of going Baltimore and Ohio way. Result, she bought ticket from Taylorville to New York over our lines. Our dining car service was highly commended by Allen and he later received a card from Miss Duncan stating that the "Baltimore and Ohio eats were all you claimed for them!" This is selling transportation.

G. H. Barclay has been appointed regular third trick operator at Springfield and has moved his family to the capital city.

"Joe" Gearhart, clerk, Taylorville, has joined the benedicts. He was married to Miss Eva Kramer, of Taylorville. "Joe" is a courteous and efficient clerk. Mrs. Gearhart for a number of years has been secretary to superintendent, Taylorville High School.

A special train handled officials of the Indian Refining Company from an eastern point to Lawrenceville, where their headquarters are located. The Indian Refining people are among our very best neighbors as well as a good source of revenue. A cordial welcome has been extended to them.

Two war veterans were assigned to Delhi and Cincinnati Junction, where, in accordance with arrangements made with the War Veterans' Bureau, these men will learn telegraphy and the handling of station work. These places are given to the "Vets" who were wounded or disabled. They will receive compensation from the Government and at the same time be instructed in the work by our agents.

The eleventh annual banquet of the Transportation Club of Louisville was held on January 29 in the ballroom of the Brown Hotel. The ballroom was decorated with railroad signal lights and flagmen's lanterns. The Kentucky and Indiana Terminal Railroad constructed a perfect model of a yard engine about six feet high as part of the decorative scheme. The two principal speakers of the evening were Samuel O. Dunn, editor, Railway Age, who spoke on problems confronting the railroads of the United States, and Prof. W. J. Hutchins, president, Berea College, who painted a word picture of the Americans of the mountains.

The president of the Transportation Club is J. D. Marney, assistant general freight agent, Baltimore and Ohio, and seated with him at the speaker's table was G. H. Campbell, assistant to President Willard.

Trainmaster J. B. Purkhiser has rushed the season by buying himself a new straw hat. But "Purk" is down in St. Petersburg, Fla., with Mrs. Purkhiser because of ill health. T. C. Smith, who is filling the vacancy, still wears the winter beaver.

Among the special items handled by the Freight Claim Prevention Committee at its last meeting was Docket No. 7, covering "Special committee appointed to cover the Indiana District and report any delay to cars cut out short of destination or failed to move from point of origin when due to leave." A great deal is being done at this time to cut down claims and statistics have been compiled which show that our loss and damage claim payments on the entire System for the year 1923 were 0.99 per cent. of the freight revenue, which is the lowest percentage we have had.

On the morning of January 11 Henry Goodbub, trace clerk, received a hurry call home. Soon after, he 'phoned, "eight-pound boy!" He is known as Edgar Eugene. Congratulations!

E. S. Ferguson, posting clerk, invested in a new Dodge and was the recipient of suggestions that he take out heavy life insurance, protecting his family in the event of accidents due to "amateurish" driving.

B. Bailey; treasurer, Mrs. Elmer Pickett; outer guard, Mrs. Neil O'Kane; chaplain, Mrs. J. W. Kessler.

After business was transacted, a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments served by the hostess.

Lillian Margaret, weighing eleven pounds, arrived at the home of Gene Ingle, brakeman, West End, on January 19. Being well satisfied, she has decided to remain.

Storekeeper T. E. Britt has been transferred from Lima, Ohio, to Washington Shops, in same capacity. Mr. Britt entered Baltimore and Ohio service at Washington Shops and his many friends are glad to have him return.

Andrew C. Rafferty
Age 104
Baltimore and Ohio Veteran

The passing of Andrew C. Rafferty, 104, oldest resident of Daviess County, terminates the life of the oldest Baltimore and Ohio Veteran on the Railroad. Mr. Rafferty celebrated his 104th birthday anniversary on August 3, 1923. Death came to him at 10.45 on February 6. He never liked to be called an old man; he had no rules for longevity and smoked tobacco for many years.

Mr. Rafferty was born in County Down, Ireland, on August 3, 1819 and came to New York in 1833, thence to Zanesville, Ohio, where with two brothers he took up the work of constructing railroads, which were then spreading into Southern Indiana and Kentucky. Their work as railroad builders took them South, where they suffered loss of life and financial misfortune during the Civil War. Mr. Rafferty and his associates constructed the Louisville and Nashville Railroad from Louisville to Nashville, and did similar construction work for other railroads of the early days. In 1864 he came to Vincennes where he engaged as a machinist with the old O. & M., now the Baltimore and Ohio. In 1889 he moved to Washington, Indiana, along with the removal of the Baltimore and Ohio shops to that point. He continued with the Baltimore and Ohio until his retirement in 1910, at the age of 90 years completing 46 years of service.

He was actually 104 years of age. Records found in his possessions show that he made an affidavit in the year 1864 setting forth at that time that he was 45 years of age.

He was a powerful man, one of his principal duties being to drive up crank pins, using a sledge. This work is now handled with a 400 ton press; he was also known to pick up a pair wheels off a track and turn them around to meet his requirements.

Mr. Rafferty was of a jovial nature, and until the last few years was a very active man.

The photograph on page 92 is of Howard Fleming, clerk, Division Engineer's Office. Outside of his regular duties as a clerk Mr. Fleming is known on our division as a hero. On January 21 he returned from lunch earlier than usual, and upon entering the office discovered a fire. With great presence of mind Mr. Fleming grabbed a fire extinguisher and after a struggle subdued the flames. A passerby, seeing the smoke coming from the windows, turned in the alarm, with the result that the Fire Department responded, but arrived on the scene too late, as Mr. Fleming had already extinguished the flames. The city fire chief commended the Company very highly for the good condition of the fire extinguishers, that is, the chemical cans. He also commended Mr. Fleming for his good work.

We are proud to present, on page 93, this issue, the photographs of "Fred" Fulk, supervisor, Subdivision No. 1, to whom was presented the prize for the best supervisors' territory. Prize for the best main line section was awarded to Arthur Powell, section No. 6, Barnesville, Ohio. The prize for the foreman having made the most improvements has been awarded to E. C. J. M. Bassani, District Freight Agent's Office, is getting mileage from his can (I mean Ford). With all roads down hill there is no reason why he shouldn't make it in high.

Traveling Freight Agent Carl Mosure is working hard in the business getting campaign and his efforts are bringing results.

Correspondent, R. KENNETT

With deep regret we announce the death of Lawrence Smith, son of Night Yard Master and Mrs. Roy Smith. On January 14, with a boy friend, he was coasting on a sled and hooked on behind an automobile. The driver pulled over to let a machine in the opposite direction pass them, but the sled failed to clear the oncoming machine which struck them killing both boys. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the family.

STOP THAT LEAK—GET CAR NUMBERS CORRECT—SAVE DELAY TO CARS!

F. P. Copper, retired division passenger agent, is reported seriously ill. Mr. Copper was retired in 1921 after having been in the service for 45 years as traveling and division passenger agent. Since his retirement he has been serving in the capacity of special passenger agent. Mr. Copper is 70 years old.

STOP THAT LEAK—ROUTE CARS CORRECT—SAVE THAT MILEAGE!

On February 6, Stock Train 2nd 92, engine 2741, in charge of Conductor Rhodes, was pulling over crossover from Piqua to Baltimore and Ohio lead. C. B. & Q. 59123, loaded with hogs for Pittsburgh, jumped the track and was being pulled along on the ties. Fireman Frank Newbery noticed the derailment and had train stopped. Fireman Newbery has been commended. Yard Conductor Schultz and crew, as well as Acting Yard Master Thomas, were commended on their good work in rerailing car and getting the train out with only 25 minutes delay.

STOP THAT LEAK—SAVE STATION-ERY!

Train Master Broughton, who was confined to his home with a severe cold and sore throat, has resumed duty.

STOP THAT LEAK—LET'S ALL CO-OPERATE AND SAVE!

J. M. Murphy, assistant general yard master, who has been off duty some time because of ill health, has gone to Florida with his family.

DON'T FORGET EVERY DAY IS "THRIFT DAY" FOR ALL OF US

Walter A. Johnson, stationary engineer, Round House, died suddenly on February 8. Mr. Johnson was severely burned about the head and hands by escaping steam from the stationary boiler on December 17 and had not resumed duty. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives.

STOP THAT LEAK—SAVE COAL, OIL AND ELECTRICITY!

Again the wedding bells ring. George Valentine, Maintenance of Way Department, recently took unto himself a wife. Yard employes presented him with a percolator and a pound of coffee. The presentation speeches were made by Brake-men "Doc" Hartman and "Puss" Ryten-tion. Congratulations!

STOP THAT LEAK—WATCH CAR WEIGHTS—INCREASE OUR REVENUE!

Courage!

Courage! What if the snows are deep, and what if the hills are long and steep, and the days are short and the nights are long and the good are weak and the bad are strong.

Courage! The snow is a field of play and the longest hill has a well-worn way. There are songs that shorten the longest night, there's a day when wrong shall be ruled by right. So Courage! Courage! 'Tis never so far from a plodded path to a shining star.—Exchange

OVERSIZE CORD Tires

10,000-Mile Guarantee and You Save $\frac{1}{3}$

What more can any other tire do for you? Riverside Oversize Cords will run 10,000 miles—guaranteed—often up to 18,000 miles. What is the use of paying one-third more?

One-third on tires is a big saving. And this saving is sure—because Riverside Oversize Cords are guaranteed for 10,000 miles' service on your car.

And this guarantee is fifty-one years old. It has back of it fifty-one years of straightforward dealing.

Quality Gives the Mileage

The big mileage of Riverside Oversize Cords over rough roads is put into them in the factory. It is the mileage built in by quality. High, thick, strong treads—firsts in every particular—built with the largest amount of good live rubber.

This extra Quality of Riverside Cords has made us the largest retailers of tires in this country. One user tells another. Just try Riverside Oversize Cords. You, too, may as well save one-third.

You Don't Risk One Cent

Before you buy any tires send for Riversides. Inspect them. Compare them with tires selling for $5.00 or $15.00 more.

Then, if you don't find them the equal of any first-quality oversize cord made, send them back. We will refund your money.

These prices buy 10,000 miles of service—and more.

Our Freight Traffic

---

Do you know—

- that in 1923 our Freight Revenues were $208,587,986?
- that this was about 82% of our operating revenues?
- that our operating revenue was exceeded by only two other roads in the world?
- that a very large percentage of our freight traffic is highly competitive?
- that like many other things, it flows along the lines of least resistance?
- that its routing is controlled by human beings who appreciate prompt, efficient and courteous attention?
- that both the Freight Traffic and our patrons who furnish it are susceptible of mis-handling?
- that good service in every branch is necessary to secure and hold the traffic?
- that in our 1923 achievements we also achieved a most enviable reputation for that good service?
- that we must live up to that reputation?
- that one discourteous word or deed or one little instance of inattention may cause the diversion of thousands of dollars worth of business from us?
- that we are constantly striving to improve our handling and trying to find the best ways in which we may serve the shipping public?
- that the Freight Traffic Department welcomes your ideas and suggestions?
- that the continued prosperity of the road is dependent upon AN EVER INCREASING VOLUME of freight traffic?
- that YOU can help secure it?

Let us all work together to the end that the year 1924, regardless of what the general business conditions may be, shall set a new high record on the Baltimore and Ohio. With every employe a solicitor, it can be done!

Lee Union-alls and Overalls

Give Worktime Satisfaction

LEE Union-alls and Overalls are built to endure the hardest kind of wear and strain. They give longer and more satisfactory wear than any other work garment made.

Feel the cloth—it's close-woven, long-fibre cotton cloth, thoroughly tested for tensile strength. Notice the high quality workmanship—triple-stitched seams, reinforced strain points, riveted, rustproof buttons and rip-proof buttonholes.

Men who demand long wear in work garments insist on Lee Union-alls or Overalls, for they know that they are getting not only longer wear, but better tailoring and greater comfort, also. Look for Lee on the buttons.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO MAGAZINE

Published monthly at Baltimore, Maryland, by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to improve its service to the public and to promote efficiency and community of interest among its employees

VOLUME XI

BALTIMORE, APRIL, 1924

NUMBER 12

System-wide Cooperative Program Adopted by Shop Crafts Organization and Baltimore and Ohio Management Plan Put into Effect on March 5 at Principal Repair and Maintenance Points

AT a conference between the General Chairman of the Shop Crafts Organization on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the management a program has been formulated which provides for the utilization of the facilities of the Railroad Company to the fullest possible extent for the maintenance, rebuilding and remodeling of locomotives and car equipment, as well as for the manufacture of supplies and material needed for mechanical and other purposes.

This program is intended to help the stabilization of employment on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, thereby producing a situation of satisfied and contented personnel, with improved morale, and consequently improvement in the service and production by greater efficiency and better quality of work.

The welfare of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and its employees is dependent on the service which the Railroad renders the public. Improvements in this service and economy in operating and maintenance expenses are greatly promoted by willing cooperation between the Railroad management and the voluntary organizations of its employees. When the groups responsible for better service and greater efficiency share fairly in the benefits which follow their joint efforts, improvements in the conduct of the Railroad are greatly encouraged.

To fully realize from this spirit of cordial understanding and cooperation, the local officers representing the management and the local representatives of the employees will convene periodically to discuss questions relating to shop operation, output, etc.

Specifically the plan is to have the local shop committees at the points designated below meet with a like number of local officers of the management for frank discussion of questions relating to the planning and carrying on of work, and at which suggestions and ideas advanced will be given the fullest consideration, having in mind that the specific purpose of these meetings is mutual helpfulness and not one of criticism or fault finding.

For the purpose of carrying the general plan indicated above into effect it is proposed that the following joint machinery or cooperation be organized:

a) Joint Local Cooperative Committee

At each of the points indicated below, one committee, to be known as the Joint Local Cooperative Committee, will be organized to represent both car and locomotive departments:

Mt. Clare; East Side, Philadelphia; Riverside; Curtis Bay; Baileys; Locust Point; Brunswick; Cumberland Roundhouse, Repair Track and Transportation Yard; Cumberland Locomotive Shops; Keyser; Cumbo; Connellsville; Somerset; Glenwood Locomotive and Car Shops; Glenwood Roundhouse; Allegheny; 10th Street, Pittsburgh; Grafton; Fairmont; Benwood; Holloway; Gassaway; Parkersburg; Chillicothe; Storrs; Ivorydale; Stock Yards; Mill Street, Cincinnati; Washington, Ind.; Flora; Cone; Dayton, Lima;

Editor's Note

For years the Baltimore and Ohio has solicited the earnest cooperation of its employees. It recognizes the fact that it is the employees in all branches of the service who actually furnish transportation to the public, and that without their willing help this service could not measure up to the standard desired. Furthermore the Management has, as its part, been glad to extend its cooperation in any practicable way.

As emphatic evidence of this, attention is called to the accompanying article describing a conference between the general chairman of the shopcrafts organization on the Baltimore and Ohio and officers of the Railroad, and at which an agreement was concluded to extend to the principal construction and repair centres the cooperative plan that has been developed in actual practice between Management and employees during the last twelve months at Glenwood.

As editor of the Magazine it has been my privilege to keep in close touch with this movement almost since its inception. I have talked with the general officers of the Railroad, with the representatives of the shopcrafts, with some of the supervising officers and with many of the men in the rank and file, and the outstanding impression received has been that of the absolute sincerity of all the parties to the agreement and their determination to support it in every reasonable way.

The courage and confidence with which this plan has been put into effect augurs well for its success, and if it fulfills the expectation of those who brought it about it will undoubtedly mark an important milestone of progress in the relationship between Management and men, and point the way, at least, to the solution of an old and difficult problem.

This Committee is to be composed of the Local Federated Committee representing the employes, and a like number of Local Supervising Officers representing the management, the latter to be designated by the Mechanical Officer in charge at the point. The Local ranking Mechanical Officer in charge of the point will be the Chairman of the Joint Committee, and among others he will designate as the management's members of this Committee, the Local Storekeeper and a representative of the Shop Practice Bureau.

The meetings of the Joint Local Cooperative Committees will be held bi-weekly on Wednesday afternoons, meeting to be convened at 1.00 p. m., and first meeting to be held at each point Wednesday, March 5, 1924.

Minutes of meetings will be kept, containing a brief synopsis of subjects discussed and action taken thereon. A copy of these minutes will be furnished each of the following:

General Superintendent of Motive Power,

Superintendent of Motive Power of District,

Superintendent of Shops, Master Mechanic or Local Officer in Charge.

President of the System Federation, mittee to be known as the Joint System Cooperative Committee, will convene at Baltimore in the office of the General Superintendent of Motive Power. This Committee will be composed of the Staff of the Chief of Motive Power and Equipment and the Executive Board of System Federation No. 30.

The purpose of the meetings of this Committee will be to review and advise upon the recommendations of the several Local Joint Cooperative Committees and to develop more intensive cooperation.

The Local Officers will make immediate arrangements with the various Committees at points enumerated to perfect these arrangements.

Canadian National Invites Relations with Employees Long Encouraged by Baltimore and Ohio

Youngest of Government Owned Railroads Follows Lead of Oldest of Privately Owned Railroads

By THE EDITOR

IN a recent address to the employees of the Canadian National Railway, Sir Henry Thornton, its American born and trained president, said in part:

"I do not want those in our service to feel that they are mere employees, performing day by day a duty in which there is but little interest, which is largely drudgery and which is forgotten as soon as the day's work is over. That constitutes a poor form of existence. Rather I want our employees to feel, as I am sure they do, that the work they are performing is interesting, and that each one is contributing an important and useful part in making our railway a success, and that both on and off duty their alert minds can be thinking of ways in which more business can be obtained and the service improved. When such a spirit exists, then work becomes interesting, and something in which we may all have a pride. But our employees have an additional incentive, which is denied to those who work for private enterprises, in that in their daily work they are performing a patriotic duty and are contributing materially toward the welfare of a railway system in which the whole of the people of Canada have an interest."

Any Baltimore and Ohio employee who has followed the policy of his Railroad will recognize in the first part of this paragraph the same effort to establish a feeling of community of interest between the management and employees of the Canadian National as has long been emphasized among us.

The inspiring quality of real interest in one's work, the dependence of the railroad upon its employees to develop superior service, and the cordial invitation to employees to submit suggestions for the betterment of that service—all these things have been stressed in the pages of our MAGAZINE and in other ways. This very issue of the MAGAZINE, in fact, contains an article describing an extension of the cooperation idea among the mechanical forces of our Railroad to a degree not before attempted on any other railroad so far as we know.

In this connection the statement of our president, Mr. Willard, made about two years ago, that he wished the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio to help in the improvement of our service, "not because they feel obliged to do so, but because they want to do so," will be well remembered.

We are glad to note therefore, that the youngest government owned railroad—and one of the largest in the world—is about to adopt an idea which has already been successfully developed on the Baltimore and Ohio, the oldest privately owned railroad in America.

We cannot, however, let the last sentence in the statement above credited to Sir Henry, go unchallenged. In that sentence he says:

"But our employees have an additional incentive, which is denied to those who work for private enterprises, in that in their daily work they are performing a patriotic duty and are contributing materially toward the welfare of a railway system in which the whole of the people of Canada have an interest."

I question very much if the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio will agree with this statement. I doubt if they feel that as compared with the employees of a government owned railroad they have less interest in their work, less desire to serve the public in an efficient and courteous way, less of an incentive to increase the prosperity of their country by producing transportation as economically as possible.

As employees of a railroad whose record of service to the country in peace and in war over a period of about one hundred years has been a notable one, I believe they know what it means, for instance, to the grain growers of the west to have their products moved safely and swiftly to eastern markets; and to the great industries to have their fuel and raw materials supplied when they need them, through dependable rail transportation; and to the small town merchant to feel certain that the goods which he orders will shortly be deposited in the nearby freight station, ready for him to unpack and sell.

These are only illustrations chosen to suggest the dependence of a few groups upon efficient rail transportation for their prosperity. The illustrations need only be multiplied to prove the dependence of all groups—of the whole nation—upon efficient transportation for its prosperity.

The big question is whether a railroad can be operated more efficiently when it is IN POLITICS, as are government owned and operated railroads, or whether it can be operated more efficiently when it is OUT OF POLITICS, as is the case with the railroads of our country.

And here I believe that as public spirited citizens the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio, while recognizing in principle the wisdom of government control of railroads as we have it, are at the same time mighty glad that our railroads are OUT OF POLITICS.

I am sure that it would hardly be encouraging to them to work to the best of their ability if the Baltimore and Ohio, for instance, were tossed into the Pork Barrel in Washington at each session of Congress, and new stations and other facilities provided on the basis of political considerations instead of on the basis of economic demand.

I am also sure that as residents and property owners in the communities served by the Baltimore and Ohio they are glad that political pressure does not affect one way or the other the measure of the facilities provided them and their families,

Canada Rail Employees Approve Baltimore and Ohio Work Plan

Montreal, Mar. 29.—A vote approving the Baltimore cooperative plan, which provides that shop crafts shall have a voice in shop management, was taken today by the convention of a division of the railway employees department of the American Federation of Labor.

The convention went on record as desiring introduction into Canadian railways of the plan, which was said to be in successful operation on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

—Baltimore Sun, March 30, 1924

THE January MAGAZINE contained a large number of thrift suggestions intended to help us live comfortably and economically. One very important item was not covered because of lack of space and that was the subject of insurance.

The casual citizen little realizes the enormous ramifications of the great insurance companies. There is hardly a thing which cannot be insured today. From great buildings like our own $5,000,000 grain elevator now being erected at Locust Point, to chicken coops which represent a small investment; from the liability insurance which protects steamship companies from payments of claims in case of losses of cargo, to rain insurance which is sold to prize fight promoters staging fistic encounters—everything seems insurable.

There are, however, two fundamental forms of insurance which almost every person ought to have, namely, life insurance and fire insurance. Of the two the writer (speaking his own opinion only) thinks that life insurance is more important, especially for the man or woman on whom others are dependent.

The Relief Department of the Baltimore and Ohio places insurance up to the value of $1,250 on the lives of employes and at a rate lower than any commercial insurance company offers, so far as our knowledge goes. But $1,250 isn't enough for the man supporting a family, and such an employe could do nothing more to the advantage of his family than to secure this first and then other forms of insurance protection through beneficial associations, brotherhoods, etc., with ample assets, or through the standard life insurance companies.

When your house burns down without insurance you have lost a very valuable material thing, but as long as a man is in good health he can often recoup from such misfortune if given enough time. When a man dies or is killed and leaves his family without insurance protection, however, the prospect which faces them is distressing, indeed—want, embarrassment, charity.

However, it is probable that fire insurance is much more widely in effect even than life insurance. It is an older form of insurance, for one thing, and during the long years of its existence has come to be considered by intelligent people to be just as important in protecting a property as a roof is in protecting a house. So that we strongly urge all employes who have no fire insurance on buildings in which they live or which they own, to make it a point to get such insurance as quickly as they can. Fire comes when least expected and strikes hard and disastrously. Furthermore, fire insurance is very cheap and hardly a man can fail to place it on his home because of the expense involved.

Our Cover Design

Almost surrounding the basin of the Potomac River and seeming to rest at the base of the Washington monument, the lovely Japanese cherry blossoms delight the heart of Washington in the springtime. Visitors from all over the world sing their praises and many exquisite paintings and photographs of the blossoms are to be found in artists' shops everywhere. One of these photographs, by H. H. Rideout, has been adapted for our cover this month by our art editor, C. H. Dickson.

These beautiful trees, whose luxuriant pink blossoms against the background of Washington's blue skies form a magnificent setting for the great white obelisk, were planted along the speedway during the term of William Howard Taft as President of the United States. It was Mrs. Taft herself who received the young trees as a gift from Japan, and who had them arranged in a manner symbolic of the good will existing between the two countries.

"Long after Mrs. Taft's music is silenced and the keys of her beloved piano are mute," says a writer in the Baltimore Sun, "the cherry blossoms on the Speedway will keep fragrant her memory."

A good example of the soundness of the policy of placing fire insurance on property is the case of our own Relief Department which, as soon as it loans money on the property of an employe, automatically has fire insurance placed on such property to cover it. And the Relief Department has helped secure some $40,000,000 worth of homes for employes during its existence.

Don't let another week come around with your home unprotected by fire insurance or your life unprotected by life insurance. These are twin guardians of the material welfare of yourself and your family and it is worth making almost any sacrifice in order to establish and maintain these safeguards.

but that these are allocated within the measure of the Railroad's resources solely on the basis of unbiased business consideration.

I repeat, therefore, that they will hardly agree with Sir Henry's conclusion. For they know that they have every incentive which the employes of the Canadian National Railway have to give the best service they can in the interest of the public, and their country at large. And in addition to these incentives they have that other incentive which comes because they feel that their labor will be put to 100 per cent. usefulness under the private management of trained and unbiased railroad men, and not be discounted in any degree whatsoever by political influence.

Death of Mrs. H. B. Voorhees

THE death on February 27 of Mrs. Voorhees, wife of General Manager H. B. Voorhees, occurred after the closing date in the Magazine Office for the receipt of notes from the Western Line correspondents. Hence there is no mention among those notes in this issue of this deep bereavement which has come into the life of Mr. Voorhees.

Under the circumstances, therefore, we know that we are but carrying out what would be the wish of all officers and employes on the Western Lines when we extend to our general manager on their behalf, as well as on behalf of the entire Railroad, deep and sincere sympathy.

The Prize

It has been repeatedly stated that 1923 was the most successful year in the history of the Baltimore and Ohio. It has also been emphasized in many ways that an outstanding reason for this success was the whole-hearted and willing effort made by employes all over the System to bring it about. And this evidence of friendship has been most logically explained by the fact that the personnel of this Railroad from top to bottom believes in its ideals and its policies and puts behind them the force which only comes from the conviction that they are worth working for.

There is another reason why 1923 was such a successful year for us, and which has not been sufficiently emphasized. It is explained in such expressions as "Everybody loves a winner," "Success begets success," etc. In other words, there is a certain something in superlative performance which is tremendously gratifying to everyone who has had a part in producing that performance.

The Capitol Limited is a good illustration. Think you that this train could have made an on time record of better than 95 per cent. for its more than 500 trips between Baltimore and Chicago since May 13 had not the very atmosphere of the whole Railroad been surcharged with that contagious feeling that "the Capitol Limited must be made the best train in the world?"

I well remember riding the engine from Cumberland to Connellsville on the night of that thrilling first west-bound trip. First I was on the helper with the road foreman of engines, and it seemed to me that if the fate of a nation had been dependent upon him that night he could not have been more alert, more tense, more determined that he and his locomotives and his division would do the part that was expected of them.

And so it was with all the men operating that train (and I met everyone of them), and so it was with that army of other employes—the roundhouse forces, the car forces, the dispatchers, the operators and all the rest of those who had to do with its successful inaugural trip. They were like the men of a football team in a championship game at the second before the first kick-off—actuated by one purpose, carefully coordinating their efforts, subordinating self-aggrandizement to the good of the team and determining to win if winning was in any way possible.

Last year, during the open season, there were 130 athletic meets conducted in the City of Baltimore by the Public Athletic League with thousands of boys and girls participating—and not a single prize was offered. They practiced, trained and struggled in keen competition solely for the satisfaction of winning.

We have the winning spirit on the Baltimore and Ohio today and no material prize is needed to spur us on to our best efforts. We are on the up curve, with accomplishments which seemed impossible in the past, but which seem easy now that they are history.

There will, we hope, never be a time when we are not striving for better and better records. There is no goal at which we can cry quits and rest on our oars. The winning spirit is ours by virtue of what has already been accomplished, and the winning spirit becomes more and more an integral part of our organization and our activities as, day by day, month by month and year by year we put more accomplishments to our credit.

This Conductor's Service is Superservice

I got to talking with Conductor "Zack" Biddison, Baltimore Division, recently. He used to run a train from Cumberland which arrived at Washington at 8.00 p. m., just in time to make a close connection with an important train to the south and due to arrive in Richmond at 1.00 a. m.

When he found out from tickets or otherwise that he had passengers who wished to make this train he would get word of this fact to the engineer, who could usually be depended upon to get our train into the station a few minutes ahead of schedule and thus permit a comfortable change to the other train. Whenever he had such passengers, however, he always tried in a diplomatic way to find out if they lived in Richmond and were going home, or if they expected to put up in a hotel in that city. In the latter case, he always advised them to take a train leaving Washington about midnight, using the inexpensive sleeping car accommodations, instead of using the earlier train, getting into Richmond about 1.00 a. m., and having the expense of hotel accommodations for a short night's sleep.

Such personal thoughtfulness and interest on the part of an employe comes under the heading of superservice. What wonderful opportunities there are open to all our trainmen all the time to give such superservice in thoughtfulness and courtesy. It cannot be purchased through the pay check—it can only come because employes think they are so much a part of their Railroad and it is so much a part of them that they want to do everything possible for it and the people it serves.

Off Broadway

Every visitor to New York makes it a point to see the "great white way," Broadway, and its sideshows. Everyone who has not visited New York hopes to see it some day. Probably in every town with a main street, and every hamlet reached by R. F. D., there is some discontented soul yearning for a career—on Broadway, N. Y. Every immigrant landing in the U. S., who knows nothing about the country, except that it is "Amerika," has heard of New York and its Broadway, and varied are the conceptions formed about this locality in foreign countries. Only recently the newspapers reported the visit of a "noted" European, who, for several days after his arrival here, was afraid to leave his hotel at night, having been advised to be careful and to duck into the nearest doorway or cellar "when the shooting began."

But except for Broadway and its lights and lures, how many of the casual visitors to the metropolis know anything about the city itself? Ask them! Yet it is a city full of worth while attractions. Just now I want to speak of its Museum of Natural History, well worth a trip across the continent, or the sea, to visit.

I once spent six days of a week looking through the famous British Museum in London, and though it is probably richer than any other museum in the world, especially in its departments of archaeology and art, there are more attractions for the people as a whole in the New York museum than in any other.

This is largely due to the manner of display. The groups of aboriginal peoples in life size models and set in panoramic scenery, and, most of all, the beautiful "habitat groups" of animals in their natural surroundings, are masterpieces of realism and a source of delight to the thousands who visit this free show.

This is but one part of the great exhibit—there are five floors covering more than ten acres of floorspace all told, all crowded with exhibits embracing every branch of natural science from geology to anthropology. One day will barely suffice to walk through the building.

Among this great collection there are some particular objects that have always stood out to me as powerful stimulants to thought and imagination. One is a slab of California redwood, a cross-section sixteen feet in diameter, cut off at a height of some twenty feet above the ground in 1891. It is almost perfectly circular in shape and the cross section shows 1341 saprings or "year rings," making an absolutely dependable birth certificate that fixes its beginning in the year 550 A. D.

Since that time, except for the hardly perceptible, though continuous geological processes during the elapsed fourteen centuries, no noticeable changes have taken place in the physical construction of this planet. But many and great have been the changes wrought in the affairs of its inhabitants—and always for the better.

Viewing this dead slab, it becomes alive with pictures of past events. One can pick out certain rings and connect them, through "association of ideas," with momentous historical events. For instance the 942nd ring shows the girth of this patriarch at the time Christopher Columbus was navigating the Santa Maria within our twelve mile limit. And the 1070th ring marks the year in which the "Mayflower" brought to these shores the wool stocking ancestors of the silk-stocking American aristocracy of today.

Another exhibit that "raises questions" is the "largest meteorite in the world," weight 36½ tons, brought here by Admiral Peary from Greenland. "Whence came this 'shooting star' to Greenland?" Questions like this become myriad as you encounter one surprising exhibit after another.

In the hall of amphibians there is a set-up skeleton of a Brontosaurus found in the Jurassic clay beds of Wyoming. It is sixty-six feet and six inches long, sixteen feet high, and is estimated to have weighted thirty five or forty tons when alive. Geology places its age at anywhere over three million years. It was no doubt useful once, in the sequences of evolution, but would serve no purpose now—it could not even compete with a Ford, let alone a locomotive. Three million years hence a race of beings as superior to us as we are to this big lizard, may be viewing a reconstructed skeleton of the extinct "homo sapiens" (you and I) of this day, and remark on the smallness of the bony cup that carried its brain. "Homo sapiens," they will say, and then they will laugh.

One very interesting exhibit is a seismograph in operation. This instrument, though located in the museum building, is entirely isolated from it and rests free on a foundation of bedrock, the backbone of Manhattan Island. Records of its past performances are posted in the room where it works in silence, listening for rumbles and feeling for tremors of the Earth.

When you come to New York, erase Broadway from your program for one day and take in the Museum's hundred million dollar show. It is free, gratis, for nothing, and you'll have something to talk about and think about for many a day.

The Wright Brothers

Recently I picked up a scrap of paper, a remnant of a business letter from which the head and signature was missing, on which the following words caught my eye:

"Meet the Wright Brothers:

Checkem Wright—Billem Wright

Loadem Wright—Handlem Wright

They are worth knowing."

The word-play is well devised, and the brothers referred to truly are worth knowing, but where are they? If our railroad could connect with and employ them there would be no further use for the claim department

What Good Operation Brings

THE following from the March issue of the C. & O. Magazine is worth quoting:

"Service is an essential thing. Without it we cannot expect to get business, and without business a railroad is as useful as an automobile without gas. Bear in mind at all times, that—

"Good operation makes good service,

"Good service makes good business,

"Good business makes good earnings,

"Good business permits even better operation and that better operation makes easier the securing of additional business."

West Virginia District

LET me give you an honest to goodness one—Hot Off the Griddle. Miss Stevens, better known as "Aunt Mary," associate editor of our MAGAZINE, came to Wheeling to attend the Wheeling Division Employees' Seventh Annual Ball, December 27. There she met Mrs. Scott, and in discussing matters of common interest to all employees and their families, the MAGAZINE was mentioned and Aunt Mary asked Mrs. Scott about the different features of it, and whether or not she had been interested in the trip of the "Good Will" girls to France.

Right there the trouble started. Mrs. Scott, being very careful with the truth, told Aunt Mary that she did not get the MAGAZINE regularly, that she did enjoy reading it but had not followed the travels of the "Good Will" girls through every month's issue because some of them had not been brought home. (Since that date she has read all the articles—Aunt Mary sent them to her.)

MORAL—Please remember that if you are doing anything worth while, your family will find out about it without your having to blow your own horn, if you take the MAGAZINE home for the family to read. Also remember that the Safety items in it not only have to do with railroad tracks but are very interesting and educational to your children even though they are not walking railroad tracks all the time.

It might also be well to remember that if you take it home every month and some item does not appear occasionally showing that you have been able to do something worth while and thereby causing the mention of your name in the MAGAZINE, your own family may think that you do not amount to much. So it is a stimulant all around. Am I taking the MAGAZINE home every month? I'LL SAY I AM! Come again, Aunt Mary!

Performance of Engine No. 5227—Capitol Limited—Between Washington and Cumberland

ENGINE 5227 made the initial trip handling the CAPITOL LIMITED between Washington and Cumberland on May 13, 1923. From that date until January 23, 1924, inclusive, she handled this train 376 out of a total of 552 trips, and on each trip made time or better.

Between May 1 and January 23 this engine made a total of 69,391 miles without a failure.

Record Movement—Cumberland Division

The Cumberland Division on March 8 moved, eastbound, by Patterson Creek, 3,274 loads, as compared with 2,795 loads, the best previous record, made on January 31, 1923.

On the same date we made another record, viz., 2,052 loads eastbound from Cumberland, overshadowing the record of 1917, made on February 19, 1922.

The number of loads that were moved on the Cumberland Division on March 8 was 5,474, as compared with the best previous record of 5,224 made on March 27, 1920.

TOO often, in the hurly burly of Railroad life, outstanding accomplishments of individuals and groups are overlooked. This is not intentional nor because they are not appreciated but we are always glad to see letters conveying the thanks of the Management to the men on the firing line for making the most out of their opportunities, as in the following:

Mr. R. R. Perry

Agent, Mansfield, Ohio

Dear Sir:

I have received a copy of form 763 that you sent me covering the statement of operations at stations and transfers, month of February, 1924, as applied to your own station.

I desire to congratulate you on the very splendid showing that you have made with an earning for this month of $178,402.20, which is approximately $60,000 larger than last year and about $50,000 larger than our previous largest month, and this is a particularly good showing in view of the fact that it was made in a short day month. It has also been made without an increase in expense in the operation of the station which is an additional credit and I think fully justifies the action we took when we put you in charge of the station.

I hear good reports about your activities with the shippers in Mansfield and am glad to know that we are so well represented there. I have just received an invitation to speak in Mansfield on April 7, and will be glad to see you at that time.

Yours very truly

THE development of power possibilities on the Baltimore and Ohio now being undertaken by some of the large utility corporations, is of interest.

At Philo, Ohio, on the O. & L. K. Sub-Division, a few miles below Zanesville, Ohio, the Ohio Power Company, a subsidiary of the American Gas & Electric Company, as the result of an investigation covering a period of several years, has started upon the construction of the first unit of a large power plant which ultimately will consist of three units and represent an investment in excess of $20,000,000.00. When fully completed this plant will consume 5,000 tons of coal daily, or approximately 30,000 carloads per annum. An abandoned canal paralleling the Muskingum River at this point is to be utilized by the Power Company for the storage of coal, of which it is expected 300,000 tons will be kept in storage at all times. The location of this large power plant should go far towards industrially developing the territory between Zanesville and Marietta, Ohio, through location of plants requiring electric power, which will be available at low cost.

At Fort Hill, Ohio, at the confluence of the Big Miami and Ohio Rivers and practically at the Indiana-Ohio State Line, the Columbia Power Company, a subsidiary of the Union Gas & Electric Company, has also recently started construction of a plant to cost $10,000,000. The Power Company has taken over a tract containing 1,500 acres, a considerable portion of which will be used in the establishment of a factory colony with homes for workmen. As the location is but 20 miles from Cincinnati, a considerable industrial development in this territory is anticipated, efforts being put forth to attract industries requiring electric power which will at this point also be available at low cost. It is estimated that 300,000 tons of coal, or approximately 6,000 carloads, will be used annually in the operation of this plant.

AS an illustration of the spirit which prevails among our employes, the following examples will be of interest to our readers:

M. T. Sergesketter, accountant, Local Freight Office, Louisville, was a member of a committee organized to solicit clothing for suffering German children. Understanding that this clothing was to be forwarded to New York for export, Mr. Sergesketter advised the committee that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad would cooperate fully and promptly, and when word was received that this clothing would be transported free, he was able to advise his committee in advance of any other railroad representative.

It so happened that this Relief Committee included members of an order to which Mr. Sergesketter belongs, and a week later, when they decided to send their basket ball team to Cincinnati, it was voted unanimously to use Mr. Sergesketter's railroad with a party of twenty-five people.

A Good Cure for Insomnia

ONE day we handed a copy of the most recent issue of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE to a friend employed by another company who was about to start on an overnight trip on the Baltimore and Ohio. Accepting it with a smile, he said: "I suppose the Baltimore and Ohio guarantees that liberal use of the MAGAZINE on sleeping cars is a sure cure for insomnia."

It was a nice bit of sarcasm anent the sleep-provoking possibilities of the MAGAZINE, but we accepted the jibe in the good spirit in which it was meant.

Which reminds us that one of the MAGAZINE correspondents who is employed in a large office recently observed several men in the waiting room idly killing time until they could see the Railroad officers on whom they had called. He suggests that in every such office it would be a good idea to have several copies of the MAGAZINE available as a possible method of interesting such individuals in what the Baltimore and Ohio is trying to accomplish.

A good suggestion and we hope it can be put into effect generally!

Developed Wealth of Information on This Important Subject

By M. W. JONES, Assistant Editor

A MEETING of the Western Lines Division Freight Claim Prevention Committees was held in the Grand Hotel, Cincinnati, on February 21, about three hundred employes being present, including general superintendents, superintendents, road foremen, trainmasters, agents, chief clerks, conductors, engineers, truckers, representatives of the Traffic and Mechanical Departments, etc. Visitors from Baltimore included Assistant Comptrollers F. A. Deverell and J. P. O'Malley, General Freight Claim Agent C. C. Glessner and Assistant to General Freight Claim Agent F. L. Schepler.

Meet Your Neighbor!

The meeting was called to order at 9.00 a. m. by F. L. Charles, assistant to general freight claim agent, Cincinnati, who acted as chairman. In opening the meeting Mr. Charles said:

"The keynote of the meeting is cooperation. The first essential of cooperation is acquaintanceship. As a symbol that this is your meeting, in which you have an active part, I am going to ask you to look to your right and left and if you are not acquainted with the man sitting next to you, if you do not know what switch shanty, roundhouse or office he operates out of, shake hands with him, tell him your name and the excuse you have for being carried on the Baltimore and Ohio pay roll and ask his."

Mr. Charles then explained the objects of the meeting and why it had been called at Cincinnati. He said: "Cincinnati is the general headquarters of the Western Lines, but it seems to me that there is a better answer than that. It is the fact that the community of interest between the Baltimore and Ohio and the shipping public is probably greater in Cincinnati than in any other city on the Western Lines, in fact, greater than in any other city on the entire System with the possible exception of Baltimore. I have heard it said on reliable authority that between 65 and 70% of the industries of Cincinnati are served directly by the Baltimore and Ohio rails."

Mr. Charles then introduced Mr. A. Julius Freiberg, president, Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, who welcomed the visitors and told of his early recollections of claim collecting. He said, in part:

Mr. A. Julius Freiberg

"I can remember, and it isn't so very long ago, when we did not know much about the Baltimore and Ohio in Cincinnati; we knew it as the O. and M. and we had the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore. I can also remember that as a little fellow I wondered why all the C. W. & B. locomotives had the letters M. & C. on their steam chests. The Marietta and Cincinnati was the original railroad. The C. H. & D., I think, was looked on by the small boys of Cincinnati as more or less of a joke, but that was largely because they had a station down in the west end where we boys used to play and interview the engineers and baggage men and various functionaries of the railroad. It was an enterprising outfit in those days. Today the Baltimore and Ohio System is looked upon by the business men and professional men, and men who are prominent in the city's work, as being one of the principal activities in the city. * * *

"In the matter of claims—and the smaller the claims, the more ridiculous is the stand taken by the claimant and also by railroad—we lawyers in modern times have a habit (I am glad to say it is a correspondingly universal habit when it comes to small things) not to aggravate, not to pay so much attention to little things, but if possible and no great principle is involved, to settle the matter, and even give the other fellow, if occasion demands, the best of it. Too much time is wasted generally on small things. * * *

"We like to have you here. We think you ought to be here because this is really, in a sense, your home, and we want your deliberations today to be so fruitful and so happy that you will come back again and come frequently."

Mr. Glessner

Mr. Charles announced that Mr. Medosch, of the General Manager's Office, would act as secretary of the meeting, and introduced General Freight Claim Agent C. C. Glessner, who, after expressing his appreciation of the invitation to be present, explained in detail the organization of division freight claim prevention committees

Claim payments on the Baltimore and Ohio in 1923 were over $2,000,000, or 0.99 per cent of freight revenue. Let's reduce them to 0.75 per cent in 1924. IT CAN BE DONE! In the circle on left the top two white segments mean "Loss of Entire Package" and "Loss of Other Than Entire Package"

It had been hoped that Comptroller Ekin would be present to address the meeting, but a letter was received stating that business engagements made it impossible, and that he was sending Assistant Comptrollers Deverell and O'Malley to represent him.

Mr. Winburn told a story of the old darkie who called all his mules "Kate," so that when he spoke to them they would all move together in the same direction. Mr. Deverell suggested we call them all "Baltimore and Ohio" and all pull together to reduce claim payments

F. A. Deverell

Mr. Deverell explained the comptroller's viewpoint on claim prevention and gave figures showing payments made during the past four years. He said that out of every dollar received in freight revenue in 1923 one cent was paid in settlement of claims. He said in part:

"Nature abhors a vacuum. Railroad men should abhor loss and damage; it means waste. Someone, somewhere, spends time and energy in producing that which is needed somewhere else, and this article is damaged or destroyed. It then becomes an economic loss from which you and I and all society suffer. It is bad enough if the damage is unavoidable but it becomes a crime if the damage can be prevented."

Mr. Deverell asked that we endeavor to cut loss and damage in half for 1924, showing that the saving would buy 500 new freight cars or furnish much needed freight station and yard facilities. He pledged the support of the Accounting Department to the claim reduction campaign.

J. P. O'Malley

Assistant Comptroller J. P. O'Malley discussed the claim prevention campaign as an incentive to increased net revenue. He said that his department takes a vital interest in everything that furthers the interests of our Road. He also explained the working of the new Revision Bureaus which have been installed at larger stations for the purpose of insuring the issuance of correct waybills. He contended that 50% of the losses would be eliminated if the waybill and shipment started RIGHT AT THE SOURCE. Mr. O'Malley said that 291,000 exception reports were issued last year, and the endless and useless correspondence, etc., easily cost the Baltimore and Ohio $291,000, or $1.00 per exception report. In conclusion, he said:

"We don't want anyone to forget that the Accounting Department is on the map * * * and it should be remembered that every dollar paid out in loss and damage claims is just so much money thrown away."

G. D. Brooke

One of the most important items in claim payments is that made for delays, and Superintendent Transportation G. D.

Brooke gave an interesting address on this subject, and explained how, in his opinion, many delays could be eliminated. He called attention to the many ill effects of delays, among them being loss of business, payment of claims, increased per diem expense, reduced car mileage and reduced car supply. Delayed trains are an important item in claim payments and much can be done to eliminate causes such as hot boxes and other mechanical defects. In concluding his particularly interesting address Mr. Brooke said, "Our energies available for freight claim prevention can, with the greatest assurances of success, be devoted to perfecting our transportation methods and practices. This means the systematic instruction and reinstruction of our employees and the bringing to them, through educational means, of the realization of their responsibility in the general scheme of transportation and of the importance of thoroughness on the part of the individual."

W. M. Malthaner

Chairman Charles next introduced Superintendent of Motive Power William Malthaner, who discussed claim prevention from the mechanical viewpoint. Mr. Malthaner discussed in detail the growth of railroad facilities in recent years and the general development of rail commerce. He said: "This program has, of course, called for locomotives of greater tractive power, cars of greater carrying capacity and longer trains. Like the automobile salesman teaching his patron to drive a new car, there has not only been the problem of learning how to make the 'goll hanged thing' move under all conditions, but what is more important from the standpoint of preventing damage, also a means of stopping it." He explained the improvements made in braking power, the use of automatic couplers and many other improvements made in mechanical devices.

Mr. Malthaner called attention to the responsibility of shippers in seeing that shipments are properly packed and loaded and said:

"A. R. A. Mechanical Division loading rule No. 34 requires doorway protection on carload bulk freight. During August, September and October, 1923, the Baltimore and Ohio was billed on by Toledo connections for applying doorway protection to 61 loads which originated on our rails, shippers failing to comply with rules. It is further developed that 6 of these cars originated with one shipper and four with another and twenty-six other stations are involved in this widespread disregard of carriers rules."

Mr. Malthaner made the startling statement that at one of our important yards cars were damaged by rough handling in 1923 to the extent of $33,769.53. He concluded by saying:

"I hope that when another year has rolled around we shall have another meeting of this nature and that we shall have another story to tell, a better understanding will have been arrived at and a better showing made."

H. B. Voorhees

At this point General Manager H. B. Voorhees entered the room and was introduced by the chairman. In his address he said, in part:

"I want you to feel that your interest in our claim prevention problem which has brought you together today is deeply appreciated."

"Some of you have been put to considerable inconvenience to come here; some have come a long way; some have spent a night on the road and all will go back to face the added duty of cleaning up work that has accumulated while away."

"But I feel that this question is one in which we are all interested and I believe an analysis of the situation will be worth while. Circumstances have been such that I have not had an opportunity to prepare an address for you or to go into details of the subject as I would have liked to do, but I do want to urge upon you in a general way the necessity of reducing these payments."

"The thing that has always impressed me about loss and damage figures is that for every dollar spent (and we spent over one million last year) you are just a dollar out—you get no benefit whatever. When we spend money in other directions, for improvements, etc., we have the satisfaction of knowing that we are doing something to attain an end, that we are really doing something constructive."

"Another thing comes to mind now. We see the figures covering our claim payments and we know what each item cost us last year, but the lesson doesn't seem to reach us—it doesn't come home to us in a practical way."

"If each man can be brought to realize the importance of watching details at his station, in his yard or in his particular line of endeavor, I believe we will stir to action the material factors in reducing claims."

"I hope in your meeting today you will promote a will and desire to find the detail causes of loss and damage to freight and the proper remedies to apply, and when you return to your homes put them to work, and I am sure it will have a decided effect in minimizing the amount of our Freight Claim payments."

The Police Department is an important factor in the reduction of claim payments

F. J. Young

The next speaker was Superintendent of Police F. J. Young, who gave details of the arrests made during 1923, the goods recovered, protection afforded by train riders, freight claim payments, unlocated losses and how to prevent, and many other items of general interest. He said:

"I desire to say a few words on co-operation. This is the most sought after and yet the most elusive thing on railroads. *** There is no department that needs more of it than the Police Department. To be real and effective cooperation must be kept working 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. *** Remember that the Police Department is only one vein of this great body and in order to make this great vein function properly all other veins must function 100%." Mr. Young also emphasized the importance of positive seal records at interchange points and explained the necessity of spiking doors because of defects.

F. L. Charles

At this point Chairman Charles said:

"We have dealt in statistics involving hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars. *** We read that the Baltimore and Ohio paid 160,914 claims, amounting to $2,072,216 and simple calculations tell us the average amount paid per claim was $12.87. *** Thus we have reduced this thing to a simple game of "penny ante" with a ten cent limit, so that we can all afford to sit into the game so to speak. I dare say that there is not a man among you who could not prevent a $6.74 claim in some manner and induce others working under you to do the same."

Mr. Charles then introduced General Superintendent Stevens, who said:

D. F. Stevens

"I think it is only fair to that department to mention that the best piece of freight claim prevention work has been done by Mr. Young's department and I think he should be credited for it." Mr. Stevens further said that it did not make any difference how much Mr. Charles knew about the work, or how much those present knew about it, but he wanted to suggest that when they returned home they call a similar meeting of their own forces and pass the information received down to the man who seals cars, checks freight, etc. He said:

"It won't do you any good to keep it to yourself—you should bring it home to the man you have really got to reach if your claim prevention work for 1924 is to be effective. I am going to take it upon myself for 1924 to see if we cannot cut damage to lading and cars 50% on my territory."

F. B. Mitchell

General Superintendent F. B. Mitchell, the next speaker, said that every employe on the railroad has some responsibility in claim prevention work. "Our job is to accept shipments from shippers and our responsibility starts from that moment. *** A great deal of loss and damage is caused by derailments, so that the trackman has his duties to perform, the operator has his, and in fact everyone on the line. There is something for everyone of us to do. I ask the same thing of you gentlemen in my territory that Mr. Stevens asked of the Northwest District, that is, that you go back home, call a meeting of your forces and lay the thing squarely before them."

This concluded the meeting, and Chairman Charles thanked everyone for their attendance. Some time was then spent in becoming acquainted with employes from all parts of the Road, Mr. Charles performing the introductions. Ideas and experiences were exchanged and the men who had been present left for their homes feeling that the day had been well spent and many new ideas secured. The parting thought given us was "Cut loss and damage for 1924 to 0.75 of 1%. It can be done."

General Manager H. B. Voorhees and Assistant to General Freight Claim Agent F. L. Charles are to be congratulated upon bringing so many freight claim specialists together to present the latest thought on this important subject.

He Learned from Conductor W. T. Francis

WE have recently received a letter from Mr. D. M. Glick, chairman, District Sunday School Board, Eastern District of Virginia, reading as follows:

Honor to Whom Honor is Due

"Having traveled over every transcontinental railway in the United States and Canada, I have had an opportunity to observe the different dispositions of the men who serve the public.

"With few exceptions, all railroad men are courteous in ministering to the comfort of their passengers, but there is something about Baltimore and Ohio men which places them in a class by themselves. I notice it as soon as I board a Baltimore and Ohio train and I have wondered if it is the class of people they handle, or if it is a requirement or rule of the company. Your men

"Noah was the first Common Carrier. He was not troubled with claims, as he took care to see that his cargo was properly loaded," said Mr. Harr seem to be better 'mixers.' Dignified, yet impartial, courteous and unselfish. This is noticeable from the man who shovels coal to the highest officer.

"Traveling from Chicago to Wheeling on February 9, I was forcibly reminded of this difference as I watched the conductors approach passengers for their transportation. Especially was I impressed by the attitude of Conductor W. T. Francis, who, I learned, has been in your service for more than 50 years. I ventured to ask him what it is that keeps a man 'sweet' although so long in the service. I had several short chats with him and learned some of the secrets of the Baltimore and Ohio's success in handling (so often) a complaining and unappreciative public.

"Public servants seldom receive the credit due to them. Many take things for granted and show no appreciation whatever for Good Service. Think of the many questions a conductor must answer, and the many discourtesies he must meet with a smile, day after day and year after year. The man who can meet these conditions successfully and keep his balance, has more than ordinary patience, which is acquired only through unselfish interest in the welfare of others. The Baltimore and Ohio people have learned this lesson with excellent results."

Conductor W. T. Francis was recently presented with a fifty year Veterans' emblem, and the MAGAZINE takes pleasure in recording this additional tribute to his loyal and intelligent service.

Consignee Praises Quick Service

ON February 12, a car of roofing was loaded at Parkersburg, W. Va., for Helena, Ark., moving on second 97, at 4.00 p. m. It reached destination and was placed on consignee's siding on the 17th, covering approximately 785 miles, or an average of 157 miles per day.

The consignees have written Agent F. A. Carpenter, Parkersburg, W. Va., in part as follows:

"*** And we want to commend you for the excellent service rendered in the transportation of this car *** and assure you it will give us pleasure to let you handle any cars for us originating on your lines."

Complimenting a man on his care in handling potatoes, Mr. Glessner was told "These are my potatoes." Handle all freight as if it were your own and claim payments will be reduced

Conservation of Railroad Fuel

Prize Winning Paper of Those Submitted by Baltimore and Ohio Employees in Contest of International Railway Fuel Association

By GEORGE J. STEIN, Locomotive Engineer, Wheeling Division

THIS is an engineer's views on the question of Fuel Economy, a subject which has been discussed at times by almost everyone connected with railroad operation, and which seems to afford a far greater field for saving and an opportunity to accomplish something more extensive than any other item of operation so far reckoned with. It is my own observation on what can and ought to be done by all involved from the master mechanic to the hostler.

Losses at Coaling Stations

I have always contended that the first effort in the saving of fuel ought to be made at the coal dock or the coaling station along the road, especially where the coal is taken direct from mines on coal check requisition.

The first thing that comes to one's mind here is the proper loading of locomotive tenders. There is too much coal spilled at these points, and while it may not be entirely lost to the Railroad, at the same time it is virtually wasted as far as its credit to gross ton miles is concerned and the Company has to go to the expense of picking it up. There are two reasons why coal is spilled, (a) over-estimation of what it takes to fill the tank, and (b) tenders improperly spotted. Both are due to negligence—there is no excuse for their existence. Engine crews should be taught that the Company will not stand for any loss of coal on this account.

How do we always know that we are getting the correct measure? From personal observation I fear that we are not. There was a time when tests were conducted on this at least once a month, but these tests, nine times out of ten, proved everything "apparently" all right. What recourse, however, has an engineer when he stops at a mine coaling station, calls for so much coal and when it is received knows that he and the Company both have been "buncoed." Unless he is one who cannot help giving vent to his feelings to the tippelman, all he can do is to take it out in thinking, and mention it to his supervising officer. In any event, any investigation conducted after the engine moves away from the tipple is almost worse than ancient history.

The engineer's distress is further accentuated when he observes that in addition to having been "short-changed" on his coal, he has been given a tank of mine cuttings and slack for a hand fired engine. While the Company's contract may call for run-of-mine coal, there is no excuse for loading such stuff as this on the tender of a hand fired locomotive.

The master mechanic and road foreman of engines attribute a great many failures each year to the poor quality of coal received at certain tipples. Some well informed mechanical men will tell you there are just as many heat units in this slack coal as there are in lumps. This may be true if this slack is fired with a stoker, but take hold of the scoop with a hand fired Mikado and attempt to get the same heat units out of this slack coal and see the difference. If we pay as much for the slack as we do the lump, let us insist upon getting something reasonable for our money.

On a trip of 75 miles there is at least a saving of two tons of coal, almost regardless of the condition of the engine, in firing with clean run-of-mine coal as compared with the mine cuttings and slack we frequently get. There is no question but what this can be corrected. It is not a question of the coal being handled excessively and causing breakage. The coal comes direct from the mine and is loaded on the tenders. The question, therefore, is the method of mining, and I do not think our fuel inspectors should have any hesitancy in telling mine operators supplying such coal that they should check up on their method of operation and see if they cannot produce a cleaner grade.

Losses at the Shops

There is entirely too much coal wasted from the time the engineer leaves the engine on the cinder pit until it is set out on the ready track. I have in mind an instance where an engine was placed on the pit with a FULL tank of coal. When the engine was called eight hours afterwards there were close to four tons missing. No report was made of the engine leaking and I do not believe that the fire had been knocked, yet about four tons of coal had been used to hostile the engine. When this engine was set out on the ready track, at least half a ton of green coal was in the firebox, the greater part of which constituted a "bank" built high and deep along the firebox door and plugged good and tight along the back corners. The balance of the coal was distributed over the firebox something about like the State of Colorado looks on a relief map. The engine had 200 pounds steam and how many more than three gauges of water it is hard to estimate.

Here you are now—the crew is on the engine and she has to be gotten ready to haul a tonnage train right out of the yard. The fire is in no condition to start out with. The first attempt the fireman makes to straighten up this fire the engine commences to pop. The casual observer blames this on a dilatory engine crew. The master mechanic ought to be brought out and shown these conditions, but unfortunately this, like a great many other conditions that ought to have some action, is simply taken out in a whole lot of unnecessary "cussing."

The efforts that have already been made in establishing the actual number of scoops of coal that should conservatively be used to hostile an engine under the different conditions, (a) where it is necessary to draw the fire for boiler work, and (b) where the fire is only cleaned,

The Prize Contest

(Editor's Note)

During 1923 the International Railway Fuel Association conducted a national contest open to the engineers, firemen and conductors of all American railroads on the subject of the conservation of railroad fuel. Over two thousand papers were presented and of these 56 were written by Baltimore and Ohio men, an excellent showing for our Railroad.

The winning paper for the entire country was written by Engineer W. L. Richards of the Union Pacific Railroad. The judges decided that the accompanying paper written by Engineer George J. Stein, was the best of those submitted by Baltimore and Ohio employees, and Mr. Stein was therefore awarded a trip to the annual convention of the International Railway Fuel Association to be held on May 26, 27, 28 and 29 in Chicago, and also a cash prize offered by the Railway Review.

Engineer Stein points out many ways in which greater fuel saving can be effected on our Railroad and shows a comprehensive knowledge of the practical aspects of this subject. It should be remembered, however, that all the points which he stresses are constantly being emphasized in our fuel conservation program and that all of the methods which he suggests have been in successful operation on our Road for sometime.

The presentation of such articles as this cannot help but increase knowledge and interest among those responsible for fuel saving on our Railroad. It is interesting to note in this connection that the American Railway Association has requested the International Railway Fuel Association to choose the best papers presented in the contest and publish them in a pamphlet for general distribution.

Much favorable comment has been made on the result of this contest, the Railway Age pointing out that the number of papers submitted evidences a very live and wholesome interest in this important subject on the part of the men on the line who can help most in cutting down the fuel bill.

have resulted in a considerable saving. We also have a definite method of watching engines on the ready tracks, but I sometimes fear that the railroad companies are altogether too negligent in choosing the hostlers and engine watchers, because they have a great bearing on the saving of fuel and as such ought to be given more recognition.

The road foreman of engines ought to designate how he wants fires maintained in locomotives standing on ready tracks and in roundhouses and the master mechanic should see that these instructions are carried out. The hostlers should also be educated along the lines of properly using the blower and injector. The excessive and unnecessary use of the blower is often the cause of engines leaking long before they leave the ready track; of course, when an engine gets in this condition, the coal pile pays the bill. The shop forces should also see that the coal on back ends of tanks and bulk-heads is cleaned off after every trip.

Condition of Power

Next to locomotive operation, which I shall dwell upon later, here is what "rocks the ship of Fuel Economy"—condition of power. There are so many contributing factors here that one hardly knows where to commence. Right off the bat everyone says "valves out" is what burns it up; I feel, however, that firebox conditions are far more the enemies of the coal pile than the reverse bar. What is the saving made on an engine with a "good valve" and a man who knows how to use it, compared to the at least two tons of coal unnecessarily burned to overcome a whole lot of leaky flues, flues stopped up, honeycombed over, etc.

I often feel that here is the "golden key to the coal bank." I fear that the Mechanical Department does not give this the attention it deserves. I can hardly imagine an excuse of any kind for allowing an engine to run with flues leaking, or bad flues which the Motive Power Department know will give trouble before the engine is hardly well started on the trip.

What about the engines handled and dispatched from outlying stations whose facilities are limited, and where fires are seldom knocked, but cleaned. And what is the resultant condition of the flues and arches? An engine operating with flues stopped up or part of the arch missing, or top of the arch covered over with dirt, is an enemy of the coal pile. No stoker fired engine should be allowed to run with arch brick missing for when one is dispatched in this condition, we are certainly breeding trouble.

So far I have had in mind only hand fired engines, but the same principle applies to both, although my experience has been that firebox conditions must be better for a stoker fired engine than a hand fired engine, especially as regards the arch. It is a flagrant waste of fuel to dispatch a stoker engine with part of the arch missing, as under this condition it is almost impossible to carry the proper kind of a fire to maintain maximum steam pressure over the entire trip. It eventually ends in having to clean the fire once or twice over the trip and whenever this is done it means the unnecessary use of one or two tons of coal. Therefore, the necessity for seeing that the arches, flues and other firebox conditions of our locomotives are in shape to make steam, cannot be impressed too strongly upon the Motive Power Department. After that is done someone else is properly responsible for making this steam at the least possible cost and for the proper distribution of it in the cylinders.

Valves Out

Now we can say something about "valves out." It is unfortunate that an engine should be allowed to operate in this condition, and next to poor firebox conditions, this helps most to waste fuel. An engine with valves out should be promptly called to the attention of the road foreman of engines, who should invariably have these conditions corrected.

Engineer Geo. J. Stein, Wheeling Division

When a large number of engines with valves out are found operating on a division, it indicates either that the engineer's work reports are not being given the necessary attention by the shop people, or that the engineers are not reporting the valves out. Frequently the Motive Power Department passes this work up "this trip," and unless the road foreman gets in on it, it will not be done for several trips. In time of heavy business, too much of this important work is neglected in favor of the Transportation Department. As long as engines seem to be able to haul the trains and get over the road, everything is lovely until the fuel bill comes in at the end of the month. The additional few hours necessary to "square" the valves on an engine should not be taken into consideration at all; this work should simply be done. Not to do it when it ought to be done is like saving at the spigot and letting it run out the bung hole.

A great many engineers underestimate the amount of coal that can be wasted by valve blows. All blows should be properly tested for and intelligently reported. On our stoker fired engines a thorough inspection should be made by the engineer to see that no coal is lost through holes in the conveyor trough or other causes. Two-thirds of a successful trip on a stoker engine depends upon the start. Therefore, no efforts should be spared to see that the fire is properly prepared before leaving the terminal and all adjustments to the stoker are properly made. At times stoker engines are dispatched with distributor sleeves missing. Whenever this is done it is hard to maintain the proper fire and the intention of correct stoker firing is defeated.

Front End Trouble

In no small degree does this enter into engine performance. Engines may operate over the road and fail for steam day after day before it is eventually ascertained that the steam pipes are leaking, superheater units leaking, or perhaps the exhaust pot is loose on its base.

If there is anything that tries the patience of an engine crew, it is this. The firebox conditions seem perfect; the fire cannot be improved upon, yet the engine will not steam. Eventually it becomes necessary to clean the fire once or twice over the road and a whole lot of coal is simply thrown away. No condition like this ought to be allowed to exist over a trip. No efforts should be spared on the part of the Motive Power people to locate and remedy these troubles.

Engines operating with exhaust nozzles too large or too small should be intelligently looked after. No one ought to just take a "pot shot" at a condition like this; an engineer should be absolutely certain that he feels justified in reporting nozzles one way or the other. In any event, they should be so arranged as to make steam at the least possible cost. After this it is up to the engine crew to see that the steam is properly conserved and used to its best advantage.

Front ends getting air should be promptly reported. There is a possibility that this is neglected to a certain extent. Anything that would impair the draft of the locomotive, all of which eventually reacts on the coal pile, should have the engineer's most careful attention when making out his reports.

Locomotive Operation

Here is a place something can be done; here is where the engineer can "play" his part best. In fact here is where he ought to "star." In my opinion successful locomotive operation comprises—

(a) Knowing where to find the proper cut-off for the reverse bar and haul your tonnage.

(b) Knowing how to properly throttle an engine.

(c) Knowing how to successfully pump an engine.

(d) Proper lubrication.

(e) How to acquire the cooperation of the fireman in conserving fuel.

All the Motive Power Department's best efforts to cooperate, as well as the efforts of everyone else, are wasted if the engineer persists in running over the road with the bar down five or eight notches further than it ought to be; with the water regulating valve to the injector open so far that the boiler is being thoroughly over-pumped and the engine only partly lubricated.

The Negligent Engineer

A great many of our firemen are new in the service and do not realize conditions of this kind. They do their best to maintain maximum steam pressure. In starting out, the negligent engineer has just enough water in the boiler and it becomes necessary to put the injector on before they have moved a half train length; in fact he had to put the injector on before the fireman gained back what steam was lost in starting the train. Wherever the hostler left the water regulating valve to the injector, that is just where this engineer also works it, and six times out of a half dozen it is wide open. Before they are very far out of town the steam pressure is way back. The fireman does not realize what the trouble is. He grabs the hook and gives the fire a thorough raking over. The engineer has gained a whole lot of water by this time so he knocks the injector off. The fireman is now baling in coal for all he is worth. The steam pressure is running up very rapidly and when she gets hot the injector is put to work again (wide open, of course) and the steam pressure starts right back again.

The fireman comes to the conclusion that it is his fault. He grabs the shaker bar and shakes a whole lot of green coal through the grates and frequently when grates are shaken under these conditions, they are left half cocked; he then bales in another gorge of coal. The engineer is busy viewing the scenery. When they have run about 25 or 30 miles like this the fire is clinkered over solid and the engine is getting about on her last legs. It becomes necessary to clean the fire. They look at the coal pile and come to the conclusion that the engine "burns" too much coal. The engine is only half lubricated and the resultant strain on the valves and reciprocating parts soon tells and the engine is "crippling" over the road.

This engineer is primarily responsible for such work as this. He is personally responsible for the unreasonable coal performance. The effect of such operation as this with our present day hand fired Mikado engines is just like feeding peanuts to a hungry elephant—the coal pile can hardly stand up under the strain.

The Dependable Engineer

The other engineer starts out in a different way. He has enough "stored energy" in the boiler so that the fireman has a good chance to build up his fire and get the engine hot. When it becomes necessary to put the injector to work, the water regulating valve is so adjusted that the water level is just about maintained. If he has a superheater locomotive he is thoroughly awake as to the proper water level to be maintained in order to get the highest efficiency out of it. His engine is hooked up to where the train is being handled successfully and making the time; the throttle is regulated accordingly and everything on the trip points to true economy. But—

Where the Fireman Comes in

The fireman has just popped the engine. The engineer then calls him over and tells him in the proper manner that before he puts in another fire to look at the steam gauge; that if he had looked at the steam gauge before he put in that last fire he would have observed the maximum pressure thereon and it would not have been necessary to put the last fire in at the time he did, which only resulted in the engine popping. He tells the fireman that he might just as well have thrown this coal on the ground because it was wasted through the pop valve anyhow. He explains to this fireman the first time they are in a siding, or has the time to talk to him, that every time an engine pops, in addition to the resultant waste of coal, it also results in a loss of that much water; that to gain back this water he

OFFICE SUPERINTENDENT FUEL AND LOCOMOTIVE PERFORMANCE - BALTIMORE, MD 7-23

A Fuel Standard Chart like this is worked out and available for comparison for every regular run on the Railroad must increase the supply through the injector; that when he increases the water supply it takes just that much more coal to maintain the steam pressure under the adverse condition of the boiler being over pumped.

He explains further that before the fireman puts in a fire he should ALWAYS look at the steam gauge, then at the water glass, and by comparing them he can tell just how the engine should be fired. He explains to this fireman that in watching an engine standing in a siding, or switching, he should always look at the water glass and steam gauge before putting in a fire and he will find that frequently when he feels that the fire ought to be replenished, right at that particular time it should not be, because the engine may be hot and would hardly stand any more water in the boiler.

There are altogether too many firemen who throw coal in the firebox at the very time the engine is hot and full of water. This is because they have not been properly instructed by the engineer that this should not be done for the obvious reason that it is a flagrant waste of fuel.

Here is where the real economy comes in, watching just such things as this. Is it not aggravating to any engineer who has any regard at all for fuel economy, to see a fireman get down and throw in a lot of coal with the engine on the verge of popping and perhaps not enough room for any more water in the boiler without getting too much therein? Yet there is no one to blame for conditions of this kind except the engineer. He should properly instruct the fireman. And the fireman should be guided by the long experience of the engineer who certainly must have shown ability and knowledge to get where he is.

These are not fine points in operation, but they are the obvious causes for waste of fuel. The road foreman of engines has been trying to make them right for years and in order to be successful he must have the co-operation of the engineers. An engineer can make conditions desirable for a fireman and can almost command his cooperation without any effort. This is necessary to save the coal.

The Motive Power Department should leave nothing undone to make conditions pleasant on an engine for a fireman. Shoveling sheets and aprons should be given more attention. It is not pleasant for a fireman to go out on an engine with a big snag in the shoveling sheet where, every time he goes after a scoop of coal, he racks every bone in his body pumping into it. High and low aprons make it miserable to work with, in addition to permitting loss of considerable coal out of the gangway. These conditions do not lead to good operation and good operation is what is required to produce fuel economy.

The Individual Fuel Record

A great deal has been said concerning the value of the individual fuel record. This is almost a necessity nowadays to stimulate the interest the Company desires from the men in locomotive service. However, every effort should be made to see that this record is correct as far as possible, because there are so many conditions occurring in the daily work that would materially change the intention of the record that I fear a great many enginemen are somewhat skeptical as to its absolute correctness.

Our present system is elaborate and entails considerable work and expense, viz.: keeping an individual record of the engineers and engines, and the intention of this record is defeated unless the men who are using it have sufficient faith in it to feel that it is authentic and represents just what ARCHIE: Greasy, you are forever bragging about your "gangs!" This "gang," that "gang" and the other "gang!" What is a "gang" anyway?

GREASY: Ah boy! You can't stump me on that one, Archie; I looked it up in my apprentice days and I've been proud of the title ever since. Mr. Webster says a gang is "a number of persons associated together for a particular purpose." How's that for a Bulls-eye?

ARCHIE: Good work, Greasy, if the "particular purpose" is O. K. How about this Roundhouse gang you are so puffed up about?

GREASY: The "particular purpose" of that gang is to turn our engines over to the engine crews with properly fitted binders, having sufficient draw and tight bolts; with properly adjusted shoes and wedges, which insure extended life of brasses and bushings as well as reduce the likelihood of frame breakage; with good valve gear, no lost motion in pins and bushings; with good cylinder and valve packing; with tight superheater units and front ends; with good arch; with good appliances, sand, water, coal, tools and supplies; with clean flues and clean fires. And that gives the gang a clean slate!

ARCHIE: Sounds like a large order all right! Let's take a look around!

they have been doing for the past thirty days. There is still a lot of missionary work to be done concerning the individual fuel record.

My idea of an individual fuel record is where a STANDARD coal allowance has been set for a certain run with a certain class of engine. The individual record should show correctly the amount of coal used under or above this standard. Whenever it runs over, the engineer should be asked to explain the cause. This should at least develop something. The engine is at fault or perhaps there is poor performance on the part of the engineer or fireman, or maybe poor transportation practice obtained on that particular trip.

It is simply a waste of time to compile a big record of something that goes over the dam the next day after it is gotten out. The name of "record" should be changed to "report" because there is no reason why any railroad company should not have a report on the fuel performance of an individual engineer for any specific trip. Whenever an engineer learns that he has to go from A to Z on so much coal, that is just when he is going to get busy and accomplish something. But what does he care whether he is at the foot of the list or half-way up as long as he is not called to account for his stewardship?

My suggestion would be that the railroad companies work out a set of STANDARDS for specific runs. These Standards should not be made from one trip but should be a study of different trips under varying conditions. When the Standard had been set and declared reasonable, then every man should be expected to "come across" or tell the reason why. Under this system it should not take the road foreman of engines long to single out the cause of poor coal performances and to correct the trouble promptly. It would show up the power as well as the "poor performers."

It has been made quite evident to the Magazine Staff that this cartoon was published very widely in the newspapers, because we have received it from so many sources, not only along our own line but from other sections. In fact, one correspondent sent it from the New England section, and said that we ought to run it in our Magazine and call it, "The Capitol Limited of the Central Vermont." It isn't often that we take orders from an outsider on the conduct of the Magazine, but we are going to take a chance in this case and reprint the cartoon in the belief that it will be enjoyed not only by the rank and file on the Road but by Mr.

Willard himself. It will be remembered in this connection that Mr. Willard was born in North Hartland, Vermont, and entered service with the Central Vermont Railroad, April 8, 1879, as track laborer. He remained in their service about three months, and then became a locomotive fireman with the Connecticut & Passumpsic River Railroad, now a part of the Boston & Maine, staying with that Company as fireman and locomotive engineer until October, 1883, when he went west and became a locomotive engineer on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern.

Railroad Helping Farm Boys and Girls Build Characters and Fortunes

By O. K. QUIVEY, General Agricultural Agent, Commercial Development Department

THE desire of thousands of young men and women in the universities of America for an education was inspired some years ago when these same young men and women as boys and girls were drawn into agricultural club work and there caught the spirit of the now famous "Four H Clubs."

These "Four H Clubs" are aimed to train and guide boys and girls during those formative years from 10 to 18 to lead:

1st—morally clean lives, thus assuring health;

2nd—mentally active, thus developing the mind;

3rd—socially helpful, thus broadening the heart;

4th—industrially active, thus training the hand.

Health, Head, Heart and Hand—thus the "Four H Clubs." Go into any state university, particularly the agricultural colleges, and you will find these young men and women whose lives of usefulness and devotion to service are entirely the result of their "Four H Club" days.

These same young men and women will in most cases return to agricultural communities, where as farmers, county agricultural agents, home demonstration agents or agricultural vocational teachers they will be the leaders of thought and action in their respective communities.

It is with no small amount of pride that the Baltimore and Ohio looks upon these young leaders with the knowledge that it has helped them attain their positions of usefulness, both to themselves and the communities in which they live.

Up to January 1, 1924, the Baltimore and Ohio had awarded to 31 Four H Club boys and girls a total of 17 scholarships, 10 educational trips and 4 cash prizes for purchase of poultry equipment or breeding stock. They are as follows, the "S," "T," and "C" in last column standing respec-

Space does not permit us to publish each club member's story, and we have selected what we regard as the best story by a 1923 girl club member and the best story by a 1923 boy club member for the MAGAZINE, the honor falling to Miss Dorothy Idleman, of Sherr, W. Va., and Mr. Henry DeLong, of Corunna, Ind.

The following is a brief statement regarding each Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship or trip winner of 1923:

Donald Snook

Oxford, Pa.—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship to Pennsylvania State University for being the Champion Boy Potato Grower in his state. He produced 417.6 bushels from one acre, certified to by his county agent. Donald is the first boy to win membership in the 400 Bushel Potato Club of Pennsylvania, with an enrollment of 2103 members.

Richard Renalds

Timberville, Va.—Won an educational trip to the International Livestock Exposition and Second Boys and Girls Club Congress in Chicago, December, 1923, as a result of outstanding pig club work and the influence which his work has had on the community in which he lives.

His club work was awarded a grade of 99 out of a possible 100 per cent. His pig won first champion and Grand Champion in the club classes at the Virginia State Fair and cash prizes totaling $57.00.

Harley Burton

Elizabeth, W. Va.—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship to the University of West Virginia for beef calf club work and efficiency in club work generally, including a strong desire to lead others into club work.

Dorothy Idleman

Sherr, W. Va.—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship to the University of West Virginia. Her story speaks for itself.

Henry DeLong

Waterloo, Ind.—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio educational trip to Washington, D. C., for his success as a Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club member. In competition with 250 others, his work was awarded a grade of 95.7 out of a possible 100 per cent., thus making him the Champion Potato Club Member of Indiana.

Ivah Stebbins

Dayton, Ohio—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship for efficiency in both clothing and canning club work. In the former, she made 25 garments, a table runner and did all her own mending. In the latter club she canned 29 pints fruit, 43 pints vegetables, 5 pints meat, made 12 bakings of bread, planned and prepared 10 meals, and exhibited her work at the fair.

Hugh Johnston

Blue Ash, Ohio—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio educational trip to Washington, D. C., for outstanding poultry club work. In 1923 the average size of his flock was 111 hens; he hatched 227 chicks, raised 220; his profit was $394.85 or an average profit of $3.56 per hen.

Faye Courtright

Fairfield, Ill.—Won a 1923 Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship to University of Illinois. From Baltimore and Ohio egg settings. She raised a pen of Rhode Island Reds which won over all exhibitors at the Baltimore and Ohio State Poultry Show, Taylorsville, Ill., December, 1923, and has consistently won the blue ribbon wherever she has exhibited her birds.

Dorothy Deal

Poultry Club Member, Morrisonville, Ill., who started with Baltimore and Ohio egg settings, now has a flock of fine poultry from which she received during 1923 an average net profit of $4.01 per hen. This club member is only nine years old and is going ahead with poultry work on a business like basis.

Maude Thompson

Poultry Club member of Grayville, Ill., started with Baltimore and Ohio egg settings, says her flock is putting her through High School. She is going ahead with poultry and this spring will purchase 1000 day old chicks.

Lyman Gurley

Raised a flock that laid 1422 eggs in 12 months. Set 240 eggs and raised 110 chickens, sold 35 cockerels, 20 culled pullets, 5 breeding cockerels, 16 egg settings for a total of $69.80. Has 50 fine pullets, besides the pen of five which he won as a prize in this contest. Going ahead in the development of commercial poultry.

Edith Hobbs

Silver Springs, Md.—Started in poultry club work with Baltimore and Ohio egg settings from which she raised a pen of birds which won first place in the Baltimore and Ohio Poultry Show, December, 1923. The prize was a trip to the Madison Square Garden Poultry Show, New York City.

Margaret Poole

Sykesville, Md.—Started in poultry club work with Baltimore and Ohio egg settings from which she raised a pen of birds which won second prize at the Baltimore Poultry

Hollis Zepp

Clarksville, Md.—Started in poultry club work with Baltimore and Ohio egg settings.

From these eggs, he raised a pen of birds which won third place at the Baltimore Poultry Show, the prize being a trip to the Madison Square Garden Poultry Show, New York City, January, 1924.

What I Did to Win the Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship

By DOROTHY IDLEMAN, Grant County, West Virginia

I HAVE just finished four years of club work, and they have been the fullest and most worth-while years of my life. The first year I was a member of the Four-H Club I took poultry as my project, and succeeded fairly well with it. When camping time came around I was given an opportunity to attend. I was very glad to go because I knew I would have lots of fun and a good vacation.

At first my biggest idea in going to our county camp was to have a good time. The second day, however, I learned about the charting class for club members fifteen years of age or older, in which Four-H development was taught and tests given to determine just how well we were developed in each of the four H's; Head, Hand, Heart and Health. Since I was old enough to be eligible for the class I took it up as a matter of course. I must admit that I did not care very much at the beginning of the week whether I made a success of the charting tests or not. By the end of the week I found myself eagerly waiting to find out how many of the H's I had earned.

When the results were announced I had won only two of them, but I went home from the camp with a determination to do my best and to win the other two H's. During my second year I tried hard to make normal gains in weight and in many other ways to reach the Four-H standard. Again I had poultry as my project and that year my chickens did exceptionally well.

I could hardly wait till camp time—I was so anxious to go. I was sure I could make my other two H's, and I did. I will never forget the joy I felt when I was given my Four-H pin. At the close of my second county camp I felt more than ever that club work was something worth while.

In the fall I went away to high school and as I knew that I could not be at home in time the next spring to take up third-year poultry as I wanted to, I took up first-year sewing as my project for my third year's work. When I came home in the spring I found that all the other club members had dropped out and the club had been broken up. I tried to get them interested again and to reorganize the club, but was not able to do so. I lost heart and was almost ready to give it up myself, but I realized that if I gave up so easily I would not be worthy of wearing the Four-H pin, so I stuck to it alone. In the fall I won first prize in Grant County, which was a free trip to the West Virginia Four-H Camp at Jackson's Mill the following summer.

I went away to school again and took up second-year sewing as my club project for my fourth year in club work. The time passed rapidly but none too quickly for me. I wanted to get back home and I could "hardly wait for the time to go to the state camp. I shall never forget the ten days I spent at Jackson's Mill. There were "Tipi" and "Mother" Horsfall and all the other instructors who were putting the very best of their lives into the work to make the camp a success, and the boys and girls were all so much in earnest about it. Everyone was so genuine; there was no sham. Everyone was "himself at his best."

The greatest surprise of the whole camp came to me when I was taken into the All Stars. I was overjoyed but I felt so unworthy of belonging to the organization which means so much both to its members and to the other club members. It did not seem to me that I had done enough for other people really to merit membership in an organization whose motto is "Service," but I determined right there to make my life count for more in helping others. It was at this camp that I got a full realization of what club work really means, the high standards it holds up, and the fine friendships I had missed before I became a club girl.

I went directly from Jackson's Mill to our own county camp where I taught a class, helped with the charting, athletics, and everything I could to help make it the best camp we have ever had in Grant County. A few of the club members failed in their tests, and I think it hurt me almost as much as it did them; I wanted so much to see them all make good.

I came home from camp and finished my sewing project. Mr. Middleton, our county agent, encouraged me to enter the contest for the Baltimore and Ohio Scholarship. I shall never forget the surprise and joy I realized, a few weeks later, when Mr. Middleton handed me a telegram stating that I had been awarded the scholarship. But through it all I felt a pang of conscience; I felt and still feel as though there are many who deserved to win so much more than I did. I could hardly believe that there hadn't been a mistake.

I cannot begin to tell what club work has done for and meant to me. It has meant work, of course, but the work is nothing as compared to the pleasure and benefit I have derived from it. I probably would not be graduating from high school this year if it had not been for the inspiration I received from club work. It has given me a bigger and broader view of life, as well as made me realize that the little things are important, too, and that if one is to get the most out of life he must not neglect them.

Through club work I have made many friends that I cherish highly. I have tried to be of service to the people I come in contact with and to help them in every way I can. I have learned a great deal about our state and I think West Virginia is just the greatest little state in the world. I wouldn't exchange her for a dozen others twice her size; her scenery is the most beautiful to be found anywhere, and her people have the biggest, kindest hearts I have ever known. Club work has helped me to live up to Christian ideals and to try to keep my name and character clean and unblemished. I know that if I ever accomplish anything worth while in life I shall owe a great deal of it to the help I have received from club work.

I found a little poem some time ago that I think is a good ideal for club boys and girls to live up to. It well represents one of the ideals of club work. It is as follows:

"I have to live with myself and so

I want to be fit for myself to know;

I want to be able as days go by

Always to look myself straight in the eye.

And hate myself for the things I've done.
I don't want to keep on my closet shelf
A lot of secrets about myself,
And fool myself as I come and go

Into thinking no one else will know
What kind of a girl I really am;
I don't want to dress myself in sham.
I have to live with myself and so

"Bill Spud and His Scrub Cousin"

By HENRY DELONG

I LIKE club work of any kind. I have been a member of the Pig Club for two years and from it have learned a great deal about raising hogs.

This year I decided to join the Potato Club for there is quite a lot to learn about growing potatoes. Our seed was getting very low in quality. I went to one of last year's potato club members and bought four bushels of seed. These potatoes were solid while the potatoes we had on hand were all wilted.

The plot I chose for my potatoes is situated in the farthest corner of our farm. The soil is dark loam in which potatoes thrive if it is any kind of a year at all.

On April 30 I broke my plot, plowing to a depth of about seven inches. Considerable time elapsed between the breaking and the planting; this gave nature a chance to fill up the air spaces that were in the soil.

On May 15 I treated the seed by soaking them an hour and a half in corrosive sublimate. The solution was seven ounces of sublimate to fifty gallons of water. This prevents all fungus diseases which might be present. I placed the seed on top of our granary. There were no direct rays of sunlight to damage them. They were left there for about two weeks in which time they grew an average sprout of about three quarters of an inch long.

On May 28 I prepared the plot for planting. I harrowed it twice and went over it once with a double disc. This left the soil in good condition with no large clods in the plot.

On May 29 I cut the potatoes, examining each carefully for any disease. I found two that were wilted and threw them away. After marking out the plot I planted a row and then scattered fertilizer and mixed it in the soil. I covered the seed right away after they were dropped to conserve the moisture.

I planted a few of our old seed by the side of my plot. Potatoes appeared in two weeks after planting but the potatoes from the new seed were up a long time before the old ones began to break through the soil. The new potatoes grew much faster than did the old. I cultivated for the first time a week after the plants appeared. I also hoed those that were up nicely but did not disturb those that were just breaking the soil. On June 23 I sprayed them to prevent any disease from entering the patch. This spray kept away the insects.

On June 30 I cultivated the potatoes again. Each time I cultivated them I never set the cultivator more than two inches deep. This broke the soil thoroughly and did not disturb the growing plants. It was raining after this and the ground was in no condition to use a horse on, but it dried enough for a horse to be used on July 17 and again on August 3. On August 7 I sprayed the potatoes again, for they showed a little sign of tip burn. I sprayed them with as strong a solution as possible without injury to the plant. This warded off the disease.

On October 12 the vines were dead and had been for three or four days. I began digging but did not expect such a yield for the outside of the patch did not produce as many tubers as the center—the ground was richer in the center than on the outside. The new potatoes yielded twice as much as the old. This proves that it does not pay to plant run down seed potatoes just because you have them on hand and to keep down expense by not getting new seed. If you do you lose in the end.

I hauled the crop to the storage where I had two witnesses who weighed the potatoes. The yield was figured up at seventy-eight bushels from the one-quarter acre or at the rate of three-hundred and twelve bushels per acre as against seventy-five to one-hundred bushels per acre, the average for the state.

Anonymous Letters and Articles

IT has been suggested that many employees would like to write for the MAGAZINE if they could avoid the publicity attendant on having their names published as authors.

We have always felt that an article is much more interesting if we all know who the author is but the publication of articles in the MAGAZINE is not conditioned at all upon the use of the authors' names. Where employees wish to "talk" through the MAGAZINE without being known and so advise us we will be glad to give consideration to their articles and observe their request that their names be not used.

We will not, however, consider for publication any article or letter the author of which we do not know.

Constructive articles on practical operating problems are especially solicited. Here is an opportunity for the men of train and engine crews to help.

One of the most enthusiastic supporters of the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club in Baltimore is David E. Roberts, the writer of the melody of this beautiful hymn. Mr. Roberts is connected with the Congressional Library in Washington, but lives in Baltimore and has commuted between the two cities on the Baltimore and Ohio daily for twenty-seven years. He is a great booster for our Road and praises the efficient service and the unflinching courtesy of our train crews.

The words of this beautiful hymn were written by Dr. Edwin Hatch, an English clergyman, graduate of Oxford and professor at the University of Toronto, Canada for twelve years. The poem made such an impression on Mr. Roberts that he wrote the music for it and dedicated it to the McDonogh School for Boys in Maryland, many of the graduates of which are Baltimore and Ohio officers and men.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Great Britain has adopted this hymn as its consecration hymn and it is used widely throughout Wales, the land of Mr. Roberts' birth. It has also been sung most effectively by the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club and is published in our Magazine because of the simple beauty of words and music, and the strength and breadth of its appeal.

Machinist J. R. Brown and Adjustable Trepanning Tool which he suggested and helped perfect. The story explains the pictures

Credit Machinist J. R. Brown, Glenwood, with New Adjustable Trepanning Tool!

By EDRIC C. GREAVES, Secretary to District Master Mechanic

WE are indebted to the Shop Efficiency Bureau for the accompanying photographs showing three views of a locally-designed trepanning tool in use in Glenwood Back Shop for blocking out side rods for brass fit.

View No. 1 illustrates the tool in operation while blocking out the hole. After sections have been forged, slabbed, milled, etc., a two and seventh-eighth inch hole is drilled for arbor used in milling contour on ends. The pilot of trepanning tool was designed for a free and easy running fit in this hole. This pilot sets the work up in proper position to be clamped. It has been found that much better results have been obtained by cutting half way through the rod from either side. This eliminates the necessity of having such a long cutting tool and also overcomes strain on tool.

View No. 2 shows the tool as it has finished the blocking out operation. The blocking out tool is set to leave one-sixteenth of an inch for a finishing cut. In making the finishing cut, the blocking out tool and bar are removed and finishing tool inserted in the pilot. The slot in the pilot for this tool can be seen in this photograph.

View No. 3 illustrates the trepanning tool in operation on a Duplex Rod Borer. Observe the five blocks on the bed of machine—the product of this tool. Machinist J. R. Brown is shown operating the machine. Mr. Brown suggested this tool to the Shop Efficiency Bureau and assisted, in a large measure, in perfecting it to the stage of its present value.

Before adopting the tool Glenwood Shop experimented with a three-cutter tool, and while it worked successfully, it did not fill the requirements because of so many different classes of engines passing through the shop, and naturally a variety of sizes of holes. In view of this fact it was found necessary to design an adjustable trepanning tool as herein described.

On Time

TO be on time always is to be ahead of time now and then.

This means simply that the punctual man or woman often gets there a little bit before the minute.

This is the kind of minute-man we take off our hats to.

Not the one who is packed up and ready to leave on the minute—but the one who arrives before the minute to begin.

One would think, observing some people, that they made up for coming in late by leaving early!

One of the marks of interest is eagerness. The man who is eager to start will not be denied in the race. He has the will to win it.

Great business organizations are built of such men and women.

They are alive!

They are going somewhere—and they know where that Somewhere is, and what it means to get there.

The unpunctual man or woman is a man or woman that has never grown up.

What in the schoolboy or schoolgirl has been punished for ages has no excuse whatever in a business man or woman.

There is no such thing as an habitually late Business-man.

For business depends on punctuality; in getting off, in getting on, in getting there—ON TIME.—Graphite

"Well, things aren't so bad yet! Why I saw a sign in a store down street today which said, 'Chicken dinner—ten cents!'"

"I went in, laid down my dime and called for a chicken dinner, and the fool clerk handed me a hand-full of corn."

Efficient Railroad Service Helped Build Profitable Truck and Apple Business for Marietta Growers

By E. N. KENDALL, Division Freight Agent

THERE is a small corner in southwestern Ohio, which is not very well known to many of our fellow employees on this great System. It is Washington County, of which Marietta is the center. This territory furnishes a large revenue to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from the movement of garden truck.

About 13 years ago a small start was made raising garden truck in this vicinity. It was sent to Pittsburgh and sold so well that there was soon a heavy demand for more. The result has been a constantly increasing movement from year to year. Within two years after the first shipment was made, a special train was established to handle the truck from Parkersburg to Pittsburgh, cars being switched from Marietta to Parkersburg in time for movement the same evening and for delivery early the next morning.

The movement has grown from a small start until in 1923 approximately 915 cars were handled by us. If an improvement had not been made in the packing, there would have been a movement—based on car packing of 1916—of approximately 1200 cars.

The garden truck has brought into Washington County a revenue of about $800,000, distributed among the various farmers, the bulk of the business being handled by the American Fruit Growers, Inc., with headquarters in Pittsburgh. In Washington County this year, there was also produced about 200,000 barrels of apples which brought approximately $3.50 per barrel. Thus from these two articles alone, truck and apples, the farmers in the county will receive one and one half million dollars.

A few years ago, it would not have seemed possible that Washington County, with its many hills, would distribute to the farmers within the county over one and one-half million dollars from the sale of two commodities alone. Out of these hills also comes some of the finest sand stone for grindstones, which are sent all over the country, bringing further revenue into the community and adding much to our freight receipts.

The Marietta Truck Growers Association, numbering 500 members, holds a picnic each year, which is generally addressed by Mr. J. S. Crutchfield, president, and Mr. W. A. Baggs, vice-president of the American Fruit Growers, Inc. who have heavy interests in the south, middle and far west, and also by the writer.

The annual picnic for 1923 was held at the Masonic Park, five miles up the river from Marietta, there being about 2500 people present. Mr. Crutchfield spoke of the marketing and what had been accomplished by cooperation and what would be accomplished by further cooperation, all of which would be of advantage to the grower, the consumer and the railroad.

Mr. Baggs spoke particularly of the railroads. He asked that everyone give the roads a chance in view of the splendid service now being rendered—service that has never been equalled in the history of our country. He paid special tribute to the Baltimore and Ohio for building up and maintaining an excellent passenger and freight service, which is being commented on favorably all over the United States.

The accompanying photographs show the officers of the American Fruit Growers, Inc., the Marietta Truck Growers Association, a truck farm and train being loaded at Marietta. To the officers of the two associations appreciative acknowledgement is made by the writer for assistance rendered in securing photographs and data for the article.

A fine booklet has been issued by the American Fruit Growers, entitled "Con-

Career of A. H. Smith, Late President, New York Central Lines, an Inspiration to All Railroad Men

THE whole railroad world was greatly shocked to hear of the sudden death of A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central Lines, on March 8. While riding his favorite horse in Central Park, New York, with a fellow railroad official as companion, he pulled up sharply to avoid a woman who had ridden directly in front of him, and was thrown, striking on his head and never regaining consciousness. Private services were held at his farm home at Chappaqua, New York, on March 12, his remains then being conveyed by train through mourning groups filling the stations of his railroad, and past draped locomotives and railroad buildings to New York, where, at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, the services were conducted by the rector, Rev. Ernest M. Stires, assisted by Rev. F. M. Clendenin. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity with sorrowing friends, including groups from the New York Central selected to represent all departments, and officers of other railroads. President Willard, Senior Vice-President Shriver and Vice-President Operation and Maintenance Galloway were present from the Baltimore and Ohio.

His Railroad Career

The life of Alfred Holland Smith was an impressive exemplification of what a friendless boy who has the right stuff in him can make of himself. He was the son of a farmer in modest circumstances, the youngest of five children. He was born April 26, 1863, on a farm then on the outskirts of the thriving little city of Cleveland, Ohio. Today that farm is within the limits of the fifth city in the United States.

When he was 12 years old his father died, thus making it impracticable to carry out his plans for a college education. At the age of 14 he left school to take a job at $18 a month as messenger boy for the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, the headquarters of which were in Cleveland. This road was then closely affiliated with the New York Central and has since been amalgamated with that system.

The boy was so bright and eager that he was soon promoted to a clerkship, then was put in charge of the stationery bureau of the Purchasing Department. By the time he was 19 years old he was drawing a salary of $50 a month. He was then old enough to understand the desirability of getting out into the actual physical work of the railroad. So, although he was light in weight for his age and soft muscled, he gave up his clerkship for a job as laborer in the bridge gang. By studying nights in the boarding camp and helping the foreman to make out his reports, he supplemented the development of a fine physique and an exceptional capacity for manual labor by understanding and willingness to do more than his daily stint.

ALFRED HOLLAND SMITH
Late President of the New York Central Lines

He was made foreman by the time he was old enough to vote, then general foreman. In 1890, at the age of 27, he was appointed superintendent of the Kalamazoo Division. His conspicuous success won assignments to various divisions in Michigan, Ohio, and Pennsylvania until in April, 1901, he was appointed assistant general superintendent with headquarters at Cleveland. Three months later he was made general superintendent.

In less than a year he was called to New York as general superintendent of the New York Central Railroad. Seventeen months later he was made general manager; then, in 1906 vice-president and general manager; in 1912 vice-president of the New York Central Lines, east and west; in 1913 senior vice-president of the New York Central Lines in charge of operation, construction and maintenance. Finally, on January 1, 1914, he became president of the great system which he had served so well.

When the Government took possession of the railroads, December 28, 1918, he was appointed assistant director-general of railroads, and three weeks later he was made regional director of the Eastern Region. On May 31, 1919, he resigned this position to return to the New York Central Lines as president, the position he held for the rest of his life.

Mr. Smith's genius as a railroad executive won recognition abroad. He was invited to accept an appointment as chairman of the Royal Commission in 1919 to work out recommendations for the guidance of the Government of Canada. He could not agree with the report made by the British and Canadian experts, so wrote an independent report.

In 1923 he was made chairman of the trustees appointed to formulate plans for the consolidation of the railroads of Cuba.

It will be of particular interest to the readers of our MAGAZINE to know of the long and intimate friendship which existed between President Smith and our own president, Mr. Willard.

In October, 1883, Mr. Willard, then a locomotive engineer on the Connecticut and Passumpsic River Railroad in New England (now a part of the Boston and Maine), went west to Elkhart, Ind., and became an engineer on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern. Mr. Smith was working as a foreman on a bridge gang for that railroad at Adrian, Mich., and the two men met, and became friends. And it is a very engaging illustration of the quality of real friendship to know that despite the fact that as presidents of two great competing railway systems, Mr. Smith and Mr. Willard were on several occasions brought into the position of sharp opposition and conflict of interest, the warm regard each had for the other continued unabated until the sudden death of Mr. Smith.

Entertainment and Dancing Galore at Divisional Safety Rallies

By JOHN T. BRODERICK, Superintendent Safety Department

ALL officers and employees are cordially invited to attend the Safety Rallies, entertainments and dances to be held under the auspices of the Safety Department in many of the principal cities on our System.

At each rally there will be an entertainment in which our own fellow-employees or members of their immediate families will take part. There will be vocal and instrumental solos, novelty dancing, minstrel skits and other vaudeville numbers, besides exhibitions of magic, community singing and speeches, and an interesting motion picture entitled "Human Waste." Following each entertainment there will be dancing.

Admission will be by ticket, which can be obtained free of cost from the division superintendents and other supervising officers.

Places where the entertainments and rallies are to be held, together with dates, are in the schedule given below.

We hope you will avail of the opportunity to attend one or more of our rallies and bring your families and friends.

Goggles Save Helper's Eyesight

ON February 8 Harry C. Albrecht, molder helper at No. 1 Shop, Mount Clare, had finished pouring a brass end plate for a driving box and was moving on to the next box when the metal exploded, badly burning his arms. Some of the metal was also thrown against the right glass of his goggles with such force that, although it did not break the glass, it flattened the frame of the goggles around his right eye. Had he not been wearing the goggles at the time he would not only have suffered a terribly painful burn but would also undoubtedly have lost the sight of one eye, and possibly both. He was working with Frank Galloway, who was also badly burned, both being helpers to Molder William R. Hoos.

Mr. Albrecht entered the service of the Railroad on July 15, 1912, as a car repairer. He volunteered during the war, being assigned to the 19th Engineers, saw service overseas and took up work at Mount Clare on his return to the Baltimore and Ohio in 1919.

Pouring hot metal is only one of the many jobs on the Railroad in which the eyesight may be impaired through accident unless goggles are worn. The Company furnishes the best goggles it can secure to the men without charge and expects nothing unreasonable of them when it asks them to wear the goggles and protect the eyesight.

Machinist Helper Harry C. Albrecht,
Mt. Clare

Ask any blind man what he would give for his sight. Seeing is unquestionably the most valuable of the five senses. Don't take any chances with your eyes! When in doubt as to whether or not to wear goggles, wear them and keep out that element of chance which otherwise may make you spend the rest of your life in darkness.

Likes Chef Chew's "Sally Lunns"

IN a recent issue of the MAGAZINE we published a picture of Chef Chew of our Dining Car Department, whose "Sally Lunns," baked on the car, were so greatly enjoyed by President Willard. The story was read by O. A. Roedell, general baggage agent of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway, and he was good enough to send Chef Chew the following personal note concerning his "reaction" to the Sally Lunns:

Chef Chew:

Your recipe for "Sally Lunns" is great. Just as an experiment and a surprise to the good wife I got up early today and made a batch and when the household saw 'em they said that I was a real artist. Thanks to you and the wonderful Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE through which I gained a recipe for friend wife (tested by me first) for a breakfast dish fit for presidents of railroads to eat.

Truly,
(Signed) O. A. R.

The Rebuilding and Repairing of Locomotives—Article 2

The A-B-C's of a "Classified" Job

By EDRIC C. GREAVES, Secretary to District Master Mechanic, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE locomotives on the Baltimore and Ohio, having received what is known as classified repairs, which means that the general condition of the locomotive is improved, are expected to perform a required amount of service, this, of course, depending upon the type of locomotive, the district in which it works and the kind of service which is assigned to it.

When a locomotive reaches the stage where it again requires classified repairs, its condition is carefully gone over and a form, enumerating in detail the work required, is prepared by the master mechanic for the guidance of the shop in repairing the locomotive. A meeting is held monthly by the superintendent of motive power, at which time the various locomotives which are offered for classified repairs are gone over in detail. From this list a shopping schedule is prepared and the locomotives appearing on this schedule are withdrawn from the service, sent to the shops designated and placed on what is known as the "Dead Line" track.

The first operation in preparing a locomotive for classified repairs is to thoroughly wash and sand blast it. This process removes all grease and scale from the driving wheel centers, fire box, smoke box, dome cap, etc. This preliminary feature having been accomplished, the tank is disconnected and sent to the tank shop, where the necessary repairs to the frame, cistern and trucks are made.

The locomotive is then moved into the shop and put over what is called the "Stripping Pit," where it is stripped of all parts requiring repairs or renewal, and is unwheeled.

The parts removed while the locomotive is on the "Stripping Pit" are put into the "Lye Vat" where they remain for a sufficient length of time to permit the removal of all dirt, grease, scale, etc. There are two objects attained by cleaning the parts: first, to readily permit the detection of any defects; second, the men handling the parts are working with clean material. This operation having been finished, these parts are separated and distributed to the different departments or units of the shop for the necessary repairs or renewals.

There are numerous parts to a locomotive, all of which must be maintained in good order to insure its successful operation. We will only endeavor, however, to dwell on the operations which are pursued in respect to those parts which are subjected to the greatest strain and which are as follows:

The main and side rods are removed from the "Lye Vat" and taken to the blacksmith unit, where a coat of cold water paint is applied. The rods are then hammered to detect cracks, heated and annealed; again inspected for defects and finally straightened and polished. The piston rod is also given a thorough inspection for any defect that may exist, especially cracks at the key-way.

The cylinders and heads, exhaust steam pipes, superheater units, etc., are inspected and tested for leaks, by means of the application of a hydrostatic test of approximately 200-lbs. water pressure to the square inch. This is done for the purpose of insuring that these parts are absolutely tight.

The wheels are taken to the wheel unit, where the tires are turned, renewed or re-set, and the journals and crank pins are trued up or renewed if necessary.

To the frame of the locomotive is applied a coat of white cold water paint, after which an inspection is made for cracks and fractures, loose bolts, nuts, etc. If any portion of the frame is found to be broken or cracked, it is welded, using the electric or thermit process, or placed in a forge and welded in the old method, according to the nature and the location of the break.

The air pumps, stoker, injectors, lubricators, water gauges, etc., are examined and if found defective are either repaired or renewed by the air unit.

All piping, steam, air and oil is taken to the pipe unit and tested for renewal or repairs.

The flues are taken out and placed in the flue rattler for the removal of any accumulated scale. Those found defective are scrapped and those in serviceable condition are returned to the boiler unit for re-application.

The draft rigging, which consists of the pulling bar, pins, couplers and attachments, is examined, heated and inspected for fractures.

The guides, crossheads, valve gear, frame braces and guide yokes are painstakingly scrutinized while still in place on the locomotive and are not removed if found in good condition.

When these repairs or renewals have been completed, the various parts enumerated above are assembled and applied to the locomotive as soon as the boiler, frame work, etc., is finished and the locomotive ready to be "wheeled." Each unit of the shop is furnished with a schedule, showing the time at which each operation is due at the locomotive, so that the various independent units furnish their portions of the work at the required time.

In our next article, we will deal with the operations on the locomotive while it is on what is known as the "Working Pit."

Above: Engine being sand blasted on dead line, Glenwood. Below, left: engine on stripping pit, Glenwood. Right: Lye Vat, Glenwood, in which all material taken from locomotive, requiring repairs and testing, is cleaned

Traffic Solicitation

By C. S. HENDRICKSON, Traveling Freight Agent, Baltimore Division

This entry was awarded fourth place in the contest on "Traffic Solicitation" concluded in December

IN the first place it is essential that the solicitor, whether he be an official or subordinate, should make a favorable impression upon the firm or individual interviewed, and this cannot be done unless he has a pleasing personality, is neatly, though not necessarily expensively dressed, and approaches the prospective customer with confidence.

He must be well informed and have a thorough knowledge of what he is offering for sale, i. e., Transportation. This embraces up-to-date information as to train schedules (passenger and freight), classification applicable to different commodities, rates, available car supply, current embargoes and familiarity with the different routes over which shipments solicited can travel, including those which will give the carrier he represents the greatest possible revenue. He must always keep in mind, however, that the shipper and consignee must have service which will compare favorably with that of competing routes.

Just as a commercial traveler, life insurance agent, or solicitor in any other line studies the needs of his customers, so should a traffic solicitor study the requirements of shippers who patronize his line. This requires considerable study, for he should be a student of commercial conditions, sources of supply and consumption, labor conditions, etc., as well as be informed on railroad matters.

One of the most important features of solicitation is to impress upon the man interviewed that you are interested in his success and will assist in every way possible, e. g., by keeping in touch with shipments secured for movement over your line, giving him advance information as to contracts for construction work, whenever possible, or any other matters in which he may be interested, such as names of prospective customers. One of the best ways to convince a shipper that you are really trying to help him is to give immediate attention to all requests he may make for information; inattention to matters of this kind is one of the surest ways I know of losing a good friend and patron.

A correspondence file for every firm interviewed is a good plan. Try to ascertain, diplomatically (and frequently this must be done by degrees), names of persons from whom they buy, and names of concerns to whom they ship. That is not enough, for some lines are seasonal. For example, a wholesale grocer stocks up on fruit jars, cereals, California dried fruit, salt fish, etc., at certain seasons of the year. After you get a pretty good line on firms from whom they buy, solicit them two or three weeks, and, in some instances, a month prior to the season. Profit by your mistakes; for all of us have made mistakes. If you were too late this season in soliciting, say a car of fruit jars from Muncie, Ind., or salt fish from Cleveland, make a notation on your file to that effect and go after them two or three weeks earlier next season. I have followed this plan with success.

Turn Short Hauls or Switching Hauls into Road Hauls

This is another feature of solicitation which, in my opinion, is given too little attention. When you ascertain that a firm is making purchases at points off the line, giving us but a short haul from some nearby junction point, or perhaps only a switching charge at destination, put such firm in touch with shipper of same commodity at some point on the Baltimore and Ohio, insuring our line long haul and entire revenue on future business.

Who Can Help in This Solicitation Game?

Every employe of the Baltimore and Ohio, no matter in what capacity he is employed, can help. Here are some suggestions:

Local freight agents can help, and particularly at competitive points, by giving prompt attention to requests for cars when equipment is scarce, and advising solicitors when they notice we have apparently lost business from certain concerns on account of slow service, unsettled claims or for any other reason. Keep in close touch with the local freight agent. He is the "man behind the gun," and is in daily touch with receivers and shippers. A word of commendation from a division freight agent, traveling freight agent, traveling auditor, tariff inspector or other representative for work well done, rather than an inclination to criticize every little sin of omission or commission, will go far in the direction of encouraging rather than discouraging the local freight agent who is constantly in touch with the traveling and shipping public, and upon whom so much depends in "holding the trade." Agents can greatly help the Traffic Department by calling attention to shipments on which we received short hauls.

The Freight Claim Department can help by bringing to our attention carload shipments diverted to our Railroad in transit, so that we can interview consignee, ascertain why car did not travel from shipping point via Baltimore and Ohio, and secure future business, if any. They can also report to Traffic Department when shippers threaten to divert business on account of unsettled claim, so that the situation can be watched and loss of business prevented. The Traffic Department is interested in knowing about settlement of important claims, and especially in cases where claimant is a heavy shipper.

The Superintendent of Car Service can help by bringing to the attention of the Traffic Department instances where tracing develops the fact that the shipment never reached our line. A recent case of this kind follows: A Richmond, Va., firm asked that we trace carload from New York State. Shipment did not travel via our line so we posted division freight agent in charge so that his traveling freight agent could follow up and secure future business.

Freight agents at competitive points can help traffic solicitors if they report all cases like that given in the following communication from shipper or broker:

"Upon arrival of Baltimore and Ohio 85643, lumber (frequently other commodities as well) from Jackson, Miss., deliver to (name)———." It often happens that the broker or shipper hasn't specified any particular route and the car arrives at destination via competing line. If cases of this kind were reported to Traffic Department they could have both shipper and consignee interviewed so as to insure next shipment arriving via our line.

Traveling freight agents and freight representatives might find some valuable data by occasionally looking over agents' delivery records of this kind.

The Transportation Department can help by supplying equipment promptly and giving best service possible. On the other hand any solicitor can sell good service. But it takes a real solicitor to keep shippers and consignees in line when equipment is scarce and unavoidable delays occur.

And right here, let me offer the suggestion that our traffic representatives should never lose an opportunity to introduce important shippers to Transportation Department officials. If superintendents, trainmasters, yardmasters and other Transportation Department officials are personally acquainted with shippers with whom they are dealing, better results and increased tonnage will result.

The MAGAZINE can help by keeping everybody wide awake to the possibilities of individual business getting as suggested by the "Prospective Business" postals inserted in each issue.

And now, a question for our freight solicitors—what are you doing for the "Capitol Limited" and our other fine passenger trains and excellent dining car service?

And our passenger solicitors—what are you doing for us freight solicitors. Are you talking about our TRAIN 97 and the other splendid fast freight and expedite trains? Every employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad can help by keeping the Industrial Department posted as to INDUSTRIES SEEKING LOCATION—getting in on the ground floor, before competitors interview interested parties. The PROSPECTIVE BUSINESS postals have a space of two lines for this information; don't overlook it. Traffic solicitation in industry lots.

Every employe can assist by reporting, for investigation, any complaint as to service, car supply, or any other matters adversely affecting our line. I don't mean by this that we are to solicit these complaints just for the sake of reporting them; rather, if they do come to our attention UNSOLICITED they should be reported through the proper channel, not in a spirit of criticism, but with view to locating the trouble and having a remedy applied. A dissatisfied patron is a poor advertisement for any railroad.

More Team Work

In the performance of our daily duties we should always remember that we are all employes of the Baltimore and Ohio and should work for the advancement and perfection of every department of the Road—freight, passenger, transportation, freight claim, accounting, etc. Let us have a little more TEAM WORK instead of trying to "fatten" our individual batting averages. Let's make a record for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad as a System. What does it matter whether the Transportation Department, the Traffic Department, or any other department gets the most credit, so long as our Railroad gets the freight to which it is entitled.

"Bill" Becker Wins Scholarship in Journalism

GEORGE W. BECKER (better known as "Bill"), Office of Senior Vice-President, was one of five winners of scholarships for a course in Journalism at the University of Maryland, given by The Baltimore American. The contest for the scholarships was open to anybody desirous of taking the University's new course, the requirement being a letter telling why the applicant wanted to become a "newspaper man." Mr. Becker's reasons for wishing to take up journalism appeared conclusive enough to the judges—Dean Clemens and Dr. W. A. Speare, of the University faculty, and R. C. McCabe, managing editor of The Baltimore American.

Mr. Becker has been in the service of the Company since August 9, 1918, starting as an elevator boy in the Baltimore and Ohio Building, shortly after becoming identified with the Publicity Branch of the Office of the Senior Vice-President.

Forty Years' Service Brings Pleasant Surprise to E. J. Diggs

By NORMA H. APPLGARTHE

EARLY in January our junior clerks observed the older fellows putting their heads together during the lunch hour, which made them wonder what was on foot; but there was no leak, and no doubt the juniors are still wondering what it was all about.

On January 19, when Chief Traveling Freight Claim Adjuster E. J. Diggs came to the office, he was requested to remain until Mr. Glessner sent for him. One o'clock arrived, and no sign from the chief's office that he would see Mr. Diggs. Ten minutes later, still no sign. Finally, after getting restless and wondering what the delay meant, Mr. Diggs was suddenly informed by Assistant Chief Clerk LaMotte that Mr. Glessner wished to speak to him. He went in and stood in front of the desk. Mr. Glessner paid no attention to him, but kept right on signing mail. In the meantime all the oldtimers, chief clerks, assistant chief clerks and others had filed in. Mr. Glessner arose and said to Mr. Diggs, "Please stand here in front and take your medicine." He then made a short speech, congratulating Mr. Diggs on his forty years of service with the Baltimore and Ohio and on behalf of those present gave him a beautiful gold watch and a box of cigars. Mr. Diggs was so surprised that it took his breath away, but after collecting himself, he responded, thanking all his fellow workers and Mr. Glessner for their many kindnesses during his association with them and for this beautiful memento of their friendly feeling, which he would treasure with loving remembrance of the sentiment expressed in this gift. He also said that his 40 years had passed like 40 weeks and he hoped his services would always be as satisfactory to the Company, his fellow employes and himself as they had been in the past.

All the men present congratulated Mr. Diggs, and one of the young ladies present—well, I won't tell stories out of school, you can guess the rest!

The accompanying photograph shows how young a man our senior traveling freight claim adjuster is.

Ridin', Friend, upon the B. & O.

By ARTHUR D. BURKE

The author is a member of the faculty of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, Stillwater, Oklahoma. His verses were inspired by the fine courtesy of the crew of one of our trains running between Cincinnati and St. Louis. Mr. Burke is the son of the late Thomas C. Burke, who, for a number of years, was our passenger and ticket agent at Wheeling, W. Va., and is only one of many of our passengers who see in the courtesy of our employes their desire to make the Baltimore and Ohio the Best Railroad in point of service in the world.

If you cuss in desperation,
But can find no explanation
Why your train gets always later as you go;
Just sit down and 'list to reason
While the puffy engine's wheezin',
You ain't ridin', friend, upon the B. & O.!

If the train's best noonday luncheon
Busts a tooth while you are munchin'
And it costs eight times the price it should in dough;

If the meat and sweet pertaters
Taste like hides of alligators,
You ain't ridin', friend, upon the B. & O.!

If conductor and the porter
Make you feel you owed a quarter Every time they answered, "Yes!" and hollered, "No!"

If they make you feel like fightin' .
And your face in anger whitin',
You ain't ridin', friend, upon the B. & O.!

But when every word you mention
Brings you smiles and true attention,
And you feel the crew is with you as you go;
When your every exclamation
Gets real true consideration,
Just remember, friend, you're ON the
B. and O.!

Valuable Devices Invented by Employees at Cumberland Locomotive Shop

By J. C. GLENN, Chief Clerk to Storekeeper

RECENT months have seen a number of new and helpful devices invented by employees at our Cumberland Locomotive Shop. In the following list the name of the foreman is first shown, then the name of the employe, his position and description of the one or more devices perfected by him. It would be difficult to make an exact estimate of the labor, material and time saved by the installation of these devices. Undoubtedly it is considerable, however, and we are more than glad to thank these men through the MAGAZINE for their help in this respect. We also hope that the fine interest which they have taken in their work may be a stimulus to similar action in other shops.

Foreman H. E. Childs

Robert W. Ehrbar, machinist: device for quickly chucking generator shafts; device for quickly chucking generator frames; device for quickly chucking turbine covers; device for quickly chucking turbine casings; device for quickly chucking governor valve cages; device for rebucketing turbine wheels; device for chucking and turning eight nozzles at one time; device for pressing turbine wheels on and off shafts; device for chucking and rolling up steam cut edges of valve stems.

P. A. McHugh, craneman: clamp for conveying main and side rods; clamp for handling tires; clamp for lifting crank pins and applying in wheels; hanger for hydraulic press for blocking to press out axles and pins.

Foreman E. R. Coakley

Joseph J. Bender, sheet metal worker (ldg): oil forge for brazing and annealing pipe joints (this does away with coal forge); die for stamping out collars for around wash-out plugs and jackets.

M. J. L. Brady, sheet metal worker: device for grinding and facing off pipe joints (this does away with the use of gaskets).

Foreman H. N. Earle

Henry Bosenberg, moulder: pneumatic device for making lead hose gaskets.

John T. Burns, machinist: jig for grinding packing gland joints; jig for reclaiming piston rod packing.

Robert A. Hanley, machinist: surface plate for bedding down valve strips.

Frank V. Pimm, machinist: jig for reclaiming piston valve packing rings; device for holding valve body while dismantling or assembling; device for pressing bull ring off piston valve follower head; jig for turning piston valve bodies.

Foreman R. M. Hopcraft

Harvey F. Peters, machinist helper: jig for drilling bolt holes for false valve seats.

Foreman P. T. Kavanaugh

William Hollingsworth, laborer: filtering device for water used in lavatories to prevent stoppage of pipes.

Foreman F. J. Kiffner

Emory L. Smith, machinist: gauge for grinding drills; countersink tool for drill press; jig for turning off crank arms.

Foreman V. J. Lucas

John W. Shannon, welder: Removing valve cages and cylinder bushings and all cast iron by electric carbon arc.

Foreman F. R. McFarland

Melvin F. Dreyer, machinist: jig fastened to faceplate of lathe to bore left main valve heads for air compressors.

Albert N. Hook, machinist: jig to face off babbitt joint on lubricator filling plug; jig made of babbitt to use in connection with air motor, oil and emery to grind pipe joints on injector starting valves, etc.

Charles P. Shaffer, machinist: jig to face off, reseal and recenter regulating valve bushings for feed valves.

Edward F. Warner, machinist: jig to reseat globe valves by hand.

Foreman W. Pollock

Francis Carbine, boilermaker: tap for tapping out flex spud holes; wrench for taking off flex and tate caps (this does not damage caps—all can be reclaimed).

Foreman F. R. Warner

Edward B. Johnson, machinist: combination boring and facing bar for spring rigging, hangers and equalizers.

Foreman W. C. Wilson

Harry N. Cornwell, machinist helper: adjustable screw on clamp (this does away with loose blocking).

George E. Derrick, machinist: self-oiling center for lathe—see lathe cu-254.

Robert M. Englebach, machinist: air power saw for use on work bench; air power drill press for drilling from  $\frac{3}{8}$ " to  $\frac{1}{2}$ " holes—this for use on bench; (in conjunction with Machinist Harry H. Yeager) ratchet wrench and grease cavity filler for use in greasing rods.

George R. Graham, machinist: dog for holding knuckle pins while being machined.

L. H. Middlecamp, machinist: spur holder for holding down side and main rod forgings; set screw for taking out cutter on slab miller.

Harry H. Yeager, machinist: (in conjunction with Machinist Robert M. Englebach) ratchet wrench and grease cavity filler for use in greasing rods.

Engineer "Bill" DeCamp's Counter Scoop a Fuel Saver

By A. E. ERICH, Magazine Correspondent

IN the November MAGAZINE there appeared a photograph of Engineer W. "Bill" S. DeCamp, and the counter scoop shovel which he invented. Since that time Mr. DeCamp has had tests made of fuel that could be saved by the man handling scoop, knowing exactly how much coal he was using.

The accompanying photograph is of Fireman C. E. Greathouse (holding the shovel) and Engineer McFuler, who have been using this counter scoop. On the first day used it registered 688 scoops of coal on a round trip of 135 miles; the second day 593 and the third day 387. Forty-six stops were made by their train on each round trip.

Another photograph is of James E. Hale, pumper, Riverside Pumping Station, Chilli-cothe, who used the scoop on a ten days' trial, starting with 166 scoops of coal in eight hours, reducing this until 158 scoops of coal were used. 180,000 gallons of water were pumped each eight hours. He made a saving averaging about one bushel of coal a day, and saved himself considerable labor.

Mr. DeCamp is endeavoring to make six more of these counter scoops, and expects to give them further trial.

Savings Effected by New Method of Getting Materials at Newark Shops

By B. A. OATMAN, Magazine Correspondent

FOR many years it has been the practice at Newark, Ohio, to secure material required in the shops by sending any man, who did not seem to be occupied, to the Store Room. Last December, however, a new plan was worked out whereby savings, conservatively estimated at $3,500 per annum, have been made.

Where the Material Procurement Efficiency Plan Centers at Newark, Ohio Shops

The shops at Newark are divided into four units, one laborer handling material between Store Room and each unit. Unit No. 1 covers Lower Machine Shop, Tool Room, Pipe and Tin Shops and Air Brake Room. No. 2, Erecting Shop. No. 3, Upper Machine Shop, Boiler, Carpenter and Smith Shops. No. 4, Roundhouse.

Stations are provided in each shop, consisting of a bench on which material is placed when brought from Stores, and two tin boxes to hold cards, one marked "Material Needed from Stores," and the other "Material Not in Stock." There is also a schedule in frame over bench to show time material messenger is due at his station. Because of distance from Stores, it is not possible to have all messengers on the same schedule. Therefore messenger on Unit 1 operates on hourly schedule; No. 2, fifteen minutes; No. 3, thirty minutes; and No. 4, twenty minutes. The schedules are arranged so that messengers will arrive at Stores at different times. This obviates delay in their being waited on.

The working of the plan is simple. When an employe needs material, his foreman makes out card Form 2311, which is placed in box at messenger's station. Messenger secures material, places it on bench at station and workman or foreman secures it, using on job for which required. In case material required is not on hand, card is returned and placed in box marked "Material Not in Stock." At the end of each day these cards are turned in to shop material man, who takes steps to secure material not in stock.

The messenger keeps record of time consumed at Stores and this report is given to general foreman each day, which enables him to check excessive delays. If the messenger arrives at his station and finds no material cards, or returns from his trip earlier than his schedule, he cleans the shop or does any other light work assigned to him by foreman.

Material distributors at the Stores say the new plan lightens their work; they can wait on messengers promptly, eliminating waste of time of the employes who were formerly sent for material, a line of whom could be observed standing at the counter at any time under the old plan, awaiting their turn.

Shop foremen say the new plan is of great assistance to them. The men do not leave their posts to secure material as in the past, their work is uninterrupted and better performance results. There are no long waits for material; each foreman knows the hour it will be at the station. Emphasis is placed on the strict observance of the messenger's schedule and their daily reports must show any delays which may have occurred during the day.

A photograph of a messenger's material station accompanies this article.

Another Record Run on Baltimore Division

THE accompanying photograph is of Engineer W. F. Myers and Fireman H. J. Sheckels. On October 7, these men left Baltimore at 11.30 a. m. with Engine 4492, 34 loads coal, arriving at East Side, Philadelphia, Pa., 3.33 p. m., or four hours and three minutes for the trip.

Speed limits were strictly observed and all rules observed. They did not, however, make the run without a stop, although they could have done so. A stop was made at Stanton in order to give the train crew an opportunity to inspect the train. The distance from Baltimore to the first stop, Stanton, is 70 miles.

Messrs. Myers and Sheckels have been

"Always Received Utmost Courtesy from Employes"

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

Takoma Park, Washington, D. C.
October 24, 1923

Mr. W. V. Shipley, Division Passenger Agent
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad
323 Homer Bldg., 13th & F Sts., N. W.
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

On October 18, through the courtesy of your office, arrangement was made for Number 8 to stop at Takoma Park, accommodating twelve delegates of the Seventh-day Adventists who had been in attendance at an annual business council at Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

In behalf of our party I desire to express to you and those associated with you in your office, our thanks and appreciation for this favor. I also wish to include the conductor from Cumberland, who was exceedingly gracious and accommodating to us.

I take this opportunity to express appreciation for numerous other courtesies and helpful favors extended to passengers connected with our office both to and from various parts of the world.

I have travelled many thousands of miles, during the last twenty years over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, having made numerous trips between Washington and Chicago, Washington and Cincinnati and St. Louis, besides many local trips, thus far without accident. I have always received the utmost courtesy from the officials and employes of the Road with whom I have come in contact. Other railroads may have equally good equipment, and make as good time, but the feeling that one is regarded as a guest is pleasant to a traveller, and appreciated more than fine equipment.

Very truly yours

Akron Division Folk Shake a Foot

As Told to "Aunt Mary" by One of the Members of the Harris Famous Entertainers

SAY! White Boy, was you all at dat party down at Akron on March 3?

Well, if you wasn't you done missed de time o' yo' life fo' shore. Ah'm heah to state dat it was some shout, an' it's a wondah dat Ah's still alive to tell de tale.

Lissen. You know dat big boy Groninger, de districk freight agent at Akron? Well, one day not so long ago, Superintendent Mann sez to Mistah Groninger, sez he, "Clarke," sez he, "it's about time you was finding yo'self a wife. You've been hangin' 'round dese heah diggin's long enough to be married three times, pervidin' you've had a couple o' divorces, an' if you aint goin' to be in style we'll put you out o' de service. So there aint no more to it. We've got to git you a wife. An' Ah don't know of no bettah way to git her than for to have a big party for all these heah folks, invite the young ladies from far an' near, an' let you pick out whichever one what makes the bes' proposal."

"Go along, boss man," says C. M., blushin' to his ears, "there aint no single women folks left 'round these diggin's."

"Where you gettin' off at?" sez the Supt. "Even if all of 'em 'round Akron is married, why we've still got Cleveland, Youngstown, Holloway, Lorain, Dover, Painesville, New Castle an' Canton to draw from. We'll get a special train out of each place. An' don't you overlook the corn-feds down at Holloway. Miss Persons down there, for example——"

But the D. F. A. was already beatin' it fer home to git one o' them settin' up collars with turned down ends what he wears, an' manicure his nails, etc.

When the evenin' come along it sho' was a big night. All the gals and boys, little ones an' big ones, old ones an' young ones from Road Foreman Angel down to me, was dere. You see Ah b'longs to dem Harris Famous Entertainers an' we done furnish de music for dem white folks to shake a leg by. An' shake it dey did.

De Lorain folks had a sho' nuff band o' deir own; mos' of 'em was little boys. an' dey played some. Look like to me as if one time dey would bust deyselves a-playin'. Superintendent Mann was at de door all dressed up in his long-come-down and biled shirt, an' Mrs. Mann she was havin' de time of her life. An' even General Superintendent Stevens was dere wid Mrs. Stevens an' their daughter, Virginia Lee, who nigh 'bout vamped all de young fellers on de division. Marse Kimes an' de missus was dere from Cleveland, an' little Tessie Pembroke, all dressed up in a pretty green dress. 'Pears like dat gal ought to drag some guy under de mistletoe dis year fer certain.

De Goodrich Tire Company's Glee Club was on hand in all its glory. I thought shore dat big tenor singer nigh de end would bust fer certain. He shore knowed his stuff. An' who you reckon was leadin' glee club? Mistah A. C. Harris, chief clerk to division engineer an' nobody else but! Gentlemen, but dat boy was dressed up like a sore toe! Talk about yo' biled shirts an' swallow tails! One of de ladies wanted to go up an' cut off de end o' his coat tails an' make herself a dancin' frock!

An' de traffick men from Youngstown as well as dem from Akron was struttin' deir stuff. Billy Welsh, Youngstown Steel an' Tube Company, had a turrible time. He lost his hat an' overcoat, an' went round 'ravin' an' tearin his hair, saying' "It shore is de truth, but how kin you make a woman believe it?"

His old side kick, Traffick Manager E. F. Kidd, wasn't doin' so much to help him out, an' among the other folks what was laughin' at Marsh Billy's sad predicament was our own D. F. A., C. A. Farmer, from Youngstown; Marse Clyde Haynes, Standard Slag Co.; Marse F. M. Russell, General Fireproofin' Company; Marse H. D. McKnight, Newton Steel Company; Marse C. L. Maxwell, Truscon Steel Company; Marse W. J. Jones, Carnegie Steel Co.; Marse E. T. Butler, Trumbull Steel Co.; Marse E. R. Griffith, Sharon Steel Hoop Co. Old Friend Duffy from Baltimore,

The Art Editor of the Magazine has one of these new Radio Thingamajigs—he can see from Baltimore to Akron was buzzin' 'round like a presidential candidate. Uncle Billy Wood set up in the gallery like a Spanish nobleman at a bull fight. Mr. an' Missus J. R. Easton, Kent, Ohio, was shakin' a wicked foot, an' little Miss Barnes, from Newcastle, was runnin' 'round with bobbed hair. J. A. Jackson had to come through de door sideways. Dat big boy sholy aint shrinkin' none. Pearl Schmutz, who made de Youngstown Freight Office what it is today, was on the job, an' almost persuaded Uncle Jim Aiken to dance with her. Brother Reed an' de Missus, from Warren, set on de long bench an' watched to crowd, their hearts dancin' wid de young folks.

An' say, dat little Miller boy was dancin' wid one o' de pretties' gals on de floor, although Yardmaster Eichelberger told de world dat de best lookin' ladies was de ones what he brung along. Marse Angel was a-floppin' his wings with Mrs. Angel. Brother Sturmer an' Brother Wardley was holdin' down de side lines, an' a certain gentleman from Garrett, Indiana, was goin' aroun' de armory sayin, "Look at me, folks; Ah'm heah." At least 99 per cent. of Youngstown was dere, an' Cleveland followed a close second. An', say, White Boy, did you see Loot. H. B. Smith, of dat Cleveland Police force? Ah'm heah to say he was throwin' a wicked jazz. An dat Tucker fellow, of de Akron Press, was busy countin' de folks. Last time I seed him he was a sayin—"three thousand, nine hund'ed and forty-seben—"but Ah couldn't lissen no more; anything dat has a sound of a seben in it is too much fer mah constitution.

Gen'l Agent J. H. Carroll come all the way from Pittsburgh, an' so did Assistant General Freight Agent A. L. Doggett, who wielded a swift heel. Settin' 'round on de back seats Ah found Brother Ferguson, president of de Lorain Veterans; J. Phelps, train dispatcher, an' ovah on de yother side was Marse W. A. McGaughey, chief clerk to de Superintendent. Brother T. M. Duncan, Bridgeport, who entered de service in November, 1885, was settin' next to Agent C. E. Berry, Elyria, who come to work for de Baltimore an' Ohio in April of dat same year. Engineer an' Missus E. A. Frye had come from Dover, an' Marse T. L. Milburn, telegrapher, Lodi, since 1889 was chinnin' wid Agent C. E. Craig, Chippewa Lake. Agent Craig done had 24 years in de service. Division Engineer an' Missus Correll had de time of deir lives, an' dere aint nobody, not even de youngest flapper what looked as pretty as did Grandma Bagley, wid her little bo'quet o' white carnations. De Hamiltons was in de second Heaben, an' Big John Hart didn't hab no alibis 'bout comin'. De Glancys—"Ah Does an' Ah Doesn't"—raised de dust from de floor, an' Mistah H. O. Hartzell from Baltimore was mighty occupied wid learnin' de intricacies (see de dictionary) of de old fashioned waltz.

De time flew by like a house afire, an' soon 'twas time fer de Holloway folks to Poor Clarke Groninger! So many girls and he didn't know how to say "No" to any of them go home on de "Hoodle-Bug." Everybody done declared dey done had a monstrous good time.

Hey, what's dat? Mistah Groninger? Did he find a wife? Well, you kin ax him ef you wanten, but last time I seed him he was busy totin' a armful of goloshes across de dancin' floor. "Gosh dog," Ah sez to mahself, "dat fellow must think de superintendent must be goin' to gib him de vacant job o' Sultan o' Turkey!"

Steppin' It Off at Cleveland Welfare Party

THE Cleveland Terminal's Welfare Association held an entertainment and dance in the Winton Hotel, Cleveland, on March 1. About 150 couples were present. Music was furnished by The Robitoys and refreshing punch was "on tap" between dances. Officers of the association are: President, J. L. Clines; vice-president, H. J. Glancy; treasurer, Miss G. Carey; secretary, Miss Louise Bayonette.

The committee in charge of the dance was as follows: K. Thompson, J. I. Malone, E. J. Mahoney, Miss Agnes McHugh, M. F. Moran, C. W. Thompson, T. Brennan, Mrs. G. Totten, Miss Mary Conroy, Jack Riley, F. T. Grimes, Chester R. Smith, J. Fahey, J. Kuehn, G. Bell, E. Ackerman, Mr. Keating, W. M. Lampert and C. Brouse. All departments were represented in the committee and their untiring work contributed much to the success of the evening.

The music was good and dancing was enjoyed by everyone until midnight.

Lieutenant of Police H. B. Smith, while not on the committee, did much toward making the dance a success. His "Henry" was in frequent use, bringing arriving guests from the passenger station and taking them home.

Among the guests were General Superintendent and Mrs. D. F. Stevens, Assistant General Freight Agent and Mrs. J. C. Kimes, Division Passenger Agent Strickenburg, Passenger Representative Helen Kodet, Division Freight Agent E. N. Ferguson, Division Freight Agent C. M. Gosnell, the Groningers and the Glancys.

Mrs. Oldham does not care much for dancing! If she missed one dance, we didn't notice it.

Representatives of our neighbor, the Nickel Plate Railroad, were present and Mrs. Totten saw that they did not lack partners. As a reception committee she was a host in herself.

Coal Freight Agent Shinnamon was conspicuous by his absence. Brother Kirkwood was as happy as a lark.

Tessie Pembroke, Traffic Department, did not lack partners; she was the life of the ball.

Miss Marie Slatterick, MAGAZINE correspondent, Wheeling, W. Va., was a guest. The Police Department and a representative of the Transportation Department, Baltimore, got their "dates" mixed. We did not hear the end of the argument, but suppose it was settled by each one getting a dance.

Terminal Agent G. R. Littell and his daughter were among those present. Mr. Littell is "easy to find," his six feet odd towering above all others in the room.

"Meet my friend John Hart," said someone. Where have we heard those words before? Oh, yes, it was at the Wheeling ball. But John was On Time this trip!

Ever meet "Goldie?" She's in the Police Department at Cleveland station, and she wandered round the floor keeping order and seeing that no one was "left out in the cold."

It was entirely by accident that the girl from Wheeling and the man from Baltimore came up on the same train.

And where, oh where was Ticket Agent Ashley?

Mr. J. B. Scott
General Eastern Passenger Agent
The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company
New York City

Dear Sir:

About two weeks ago my three little daughters were on their way to school at New Lexington, Ohio, and found that they had neglected to check their trunks, having only the Union Transfer checks for same. Arriving at Point Pleasant they explained the matter to your baggageman, Mr. L. O. Shiflet, who got in touch with Huntington, had the trunks forwarded to Point Pleasant and thence to New Lexington.

The writer desires to express his appreciation of the service rendered by your Mr. Shiflet and his kindness and courtesy to my children on this occasion.

Yours very truly,

Newark Division Veterans Hold Ninth Annual Banquet

ON February 21 the Newark Division Veterans and the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary held their ninth annual banquet. Everybody who knows the Newark Veterans knows also that whatever they do is done well. This party was no exception to the rule, and the success that has crowned the eight previous banquets seemed to double itself in this.

The banquet was held in the Knights of Pythias Hall at six o'clock, and nine o'clock found the tables being cleared and the musicians tuning up, for, as is customary, a dance must always follow.

The tables were attractively decorated with potted plants and cut flowers. A delightful three-course dinner was served under the able direction of Mrs. Frank English. Big Dave Murphy served as toastmaster in the absence of the president, Dan Moriarty. Rev. H. H. Cartney, Central Christian Church, pronounced the blessing. Mrs. Charles Markham took her place at the piano and "America" was sung by the assembly. An entertainment took place between the courses, and many were the fine compliments passed concerning the Baltimore and Ohio talent that produced it. Mrs. F. E. Cooper made quite a hit with her interpretation of "The Highwayman" and "Finnegan to Flannigan." Misses Ruth Lewis and Virginia Wheeler sang two pleasing numbers, and Miss Nellie McFarland, in a ridiculously funny costume sang "Irene" and "Maggie" in a way that "brought down the house."

Robert Laird, son of chief clerk to the superintendent, gave several fine violin solos, accompanied by his father at the piano.

Among the speakers of the evening were: W. W. Wood, chief of Welfare; Frank M. Howard, vice-president, Newark Veterans; Grand President George W. Sturmer, Baltimore; Grand Vice-president J. M. Garvey, Wheeling, W. Va.; Mrs. Frank M. Howard, grand president of the Ladies' Auxiliary; Mrs. J. M. Garvey, Wheeling, W. Va., grand vice-president of the Ladies' Auxiliary; Mrs. Otto Wallburg, Lima, Ohio, grand secretary; Mrs. Anna Hopper, Garrett, Indiana, grand outer guard; H. W. Fletcher, Fairmont Veterans; Master Mechanic F. E. Cooper, and William Ryan, who was honored by being presented with a 50-year service button. Mr. Ryan has been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for 54 years.

Brother Sturmer, after paying tributes to two deceased members, John Doyle and Mrs. D. Moriarty, launched into the business-getting idea and urged each member of the association to use his influence in every direction to get business for the Baltimore and Ohio. He also invited all present to attend the convention of the Grand Body in Baltimore on May 8.

Mrs. Howard expressed her appreciation of the great number of visitors that were present from all along the lines, from Baltimore to Cincinnati and Garrett, Indiana.

Mrs. Garvey told of the earlier days of railroading and of what it meant to the women as well as to the men, and the credit that is due them for "sticking by" and helping the men build up the great Baltimore and Ohio System. Mrs. Wallburg and Mrs. Hopper expressed their pleasure at being present.

W. W. Wood spoke of his long connection with the Baltimore and Ohio, and urged the "Brothers and Sisters" to love one another. He was given a rousing cheer.

"Old Man" Harry Fletcher spoke of the increase in railroad business and of the formation of new Veterans organizations at Painesville, Cleveland and Lorain.

Brother William Ryan also received a cheer when his 50-year service button was pinned on by Grand President Sturmer.

In addition to the speakers there were several other out-of-town guests. Mesdames Howdon, Richter, Neal, Gurder, Edrick, Roll, Moran, Fisher and Crumm came up from Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Russler and Mrs. C. E. Auld from the Martinsburg chapter and President and Mrs. G. K. Bell, Willard, Ohio, were among the guests.

The orchestra which furnished the music for the dance was ably conducted by Robert Laird, son of Chief Clerk Walter Laird. Frank M. Howard was the shiek of the evening when it came to leading the dances, and Brother Wiley was on the job for 'most anything; "He's a handy man to have around the house," as some good lady expressed it.

Brother Little sat demurely in a corner, lookin' 'em over, smoking a cigarette, but thinking a lot. Big Dave Murphy went back into the kitchen for another helping of chicken salad, and the reporters on the Newark papers had as good a time as anybody.

And Pop Sherrard was in his glory. Forty years of engineering had not deprived him of his pep, nor did it take him long to "get on" to the new dances. Brother and Sister Leonard were on the job welcoming everybody who came in. Chairman Helfinger saw to it that nobody was lonesome or hungry, and Mrs. Chester Lewis, chairman for the Ladies' Auxiliary, helped to make things pleasant for everybody.

Toledo Veterans and Auxiliary Stage Leap Year Party

By O. L. WALLBURG

OUR veterans' Association and Ladies' Auxiliary held a Leap Year party in Oddfellows' Hall on February 20.

Dinner was served at 6 p.m. by daughters of the Veterans. It had been prepared by the following ladies: Mesdames Conley, Graham, Schnable, Schulz, Winters, Jennings and Harvey. It was much enjoyed. Our Veterans have an Auxiliary of which they are justly proud and they say there is none better on the System, especially when it comes to cooking.

After dinner cigars, which had been donated by Treasurer Frank Snyder, were given to all the men.

Miss Dorothy Day, talented young daughter of our own Cass "Happy" Day, gave several pleasing recitations.

Marian Morton followed with a fine exhibition of graceful dancing, illustrating old time dances, as contrasted with those of the present day. She was ably assisted by her sister, Gae, at the piano. Our "Jim" has reason to be proud of his daughters.

Misses Johnson and Armstrong gave a selection of songs and recitations. They kept the audience in a continual uproar during the recitation of "The Dutchman." President Van Horn is to be congratulated on securing such a fine number.

Announcement was next made that 500 coons had been hidden in various parts of the hall and the brother or sister finding the greatest number would receive a prize. The hunt afforded plenty of fun and was participated in by all present. Mrs. C. W. Jennings, wife of Yardmaster Jennings, was declared winner and Mrs. Bowdle, wife of Foreman Edward Bowdle, won the Consolation prize.

The "scream" of the evening was the bean carrying contest. There were four candidates, Brothers "Pat" Finn, "Jack" Harboldt, "Frenchy" Sircoulumb and John Schnable. "Frenchy" carried off the honors by a wonderful exhibition of steady nerve. John Schnable got the booby prize.

Brother John Maas, Custar, Ohio, 80 years old and a 50 year pensioned member of the organization, was present; also our own Patrick Leahy, over 80 years old and another 50 year "boy." They thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Mrs. Charles Hopper, Garrett, Ind., grand outer guard, was with us the entire day and expressed herself as having had a splendid time with one exception; that was the interruption by Mrs. Wallburg of any conversation Mrs. Hopper tried to have with Mr. Wallburg, or, as Mrs. Fleming, of Fairmont, would say, Mrs. Wallburg's husband. Mrs. Wallburg seems bitter and determined to break up any budding romance concerning Mr. Wallburg.

Mrs. Wolfom, Dayton, Ohio, and Mrs. Hopper, Garrett, Ind., gave a beautiful exhibition of dancing.

Mrs. O. L. Wallburg, president, Toledo Division Ladies' Auxiliary, was general chairman in charge of all arrangements in connection with the Leap Year Party and deserves great credit for its success. It demonstrates again her untiring loyalty to the cause of the organization. Mrs. Wallburg left during the night for Newark, Ohio, to attend a similar event at that point.

The J. M. Scott Ladies' Auxiliary

By MRS. HARRY FLEMING

MRS. MINNIE BARRACK HORAN, 46 years of age, wife of Michael Horan, Fairmont, recently died at her home here, after a lingering illness.

About a year ago Mrs. Horan's health began to fail and she went to the Mayo Brothers hospital, Rochester, Minn., where she underwent an operation. After her return, she seemed to improve, but a few weeks ago she took a turn for the worse and for some time had been in a critical condition.

Mrs. Horan was born at Burton. After her marriage she removed to Cameron, and then came to Fairmont. Her husband is an engineer in Baltimore and Ohio service. She was a member of the Rebekah Lodge and of the Baltimore and Ohio Ladies' Auxiliary, taking an active interest in the work of both organizations. During the World War she was an enthusiastic worker and was identified with the local chapter of the Red Cross. During the political campaign four years ago she took an active part in the work of the Marion County Women's Republican organization. She was a member of the Baptist Church at Cameron and during her residence at Fairmont, attended the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Horan is survived by her husband, mother, Mrs. Frances Barrack of New Martinsville, and four brothers; Martin of Arden, Fred of New Martinsville, John of Fairmont and Herschel of Spokane, Wash., to whom our sincere sympathy is extended.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church, Cameron, W. Va., representatives from Fairmont being Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Heffner, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fleming and several others.

Mrs. Horan was an ideal friend and a true Christian woman and her loss will be deeply felt in our organization.

The Washington's Birthday Entertainment

In observance of George Washington's birthday, February 22, the newly elected officers of the J. M. Scott Ladies' Auxiliary, Fairmont, held an entertainment at the Knights of Pythias Hall. After the business meeting, a social hour was enjoyed and a lunch consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, cake and coffee was served by the ladies.

The hostesses of the evening were Mesdames E. Bartlett, H. G. Fletcher, Jessie Nuzum, F. M. Wittman, Fred Workman, Harry Fleming and John Hessian. Favors consisting of small hatchets were given to each one present.

THE WELSH FAMILY HAS GIVEN 235 YEARS' SERVICE TO THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO

Standing, left to right: Engineer J. G. Welsh, 20 years; Engineer C. T. Welsh, 35 years; Engineer M. H. Welsh, 37 years. Seated: Operator J. P. Welsh, 22 years; Engineer M. E. Welsh, 27 years; Engineer W. A. Welsh, 27 years' service. Their father, Michael Welsh, Sr., died while in the Baltimore and Ohio employ in 1896, after 31 years' service. Another brother, J. R. Welsh, died in 1918 after 34 years' loyal service.

The house shown in the photograph is where the Welsh Brothers were born. It is located alongside the Baltimore and Ohio tracks on the Barnesville Grade, and was built in 1859.

The absence of Harry Fletcher in Newark was deplored by all. It was rumored that he would reach Fairmont at 5.30 p. m., but the hour passed and he did not appear. Investigation developed an interesting reason for his absence, but respect for his grey hairs makes us refrain from giving it publicity.

Fred Wittman proved himself an adept in the art of fixing tables for the lunch, but his wife seemed to become a little mixed when she tried to "count plates." Her remarks on the subject of "cobblestones" were much appreciated, especially by one gentleman from a large town in the state of Maryland.

Mrs. Bartlett, on her first evening as president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, handled the gavel like a veteran. Some one said "Where did she get the practice?" Mr. Bartlett might throw some light on the subject!

The services of an expert engineer were required to "switch" tables from a storage track to the main track, but Harry Fleming was not there to handle the throttle. He says, "Some one has to work."

Mrs. Workman had a busy evening trying to prevent her husband eating everything in sight, while the excitement of having a photograph taken earlier in the day made it impossible for Mrs. Hessian to attend the evening meeting.

Mrs. Fletcher was an ideal hostess. True, at times a far away look appeared in her eyes, as she gazed longingly toward Newark—but we understand that hubby's alibis were accepted without question!

Mrs. Nuzum seemed to develop a longing for hatchets. We saw her with three or four. We were unable to ascertain why she needed so many.

A guest of the evening was the local manager of the C. & P. Telephone Company, who made an interesting address on the subject of telephone matters in general. He found the ladies of the Auxiliary "Primed" for him, and he was kept busy answering their questions. Who was it said, "Curiosity, thy name is——."

President Brummage of the Veterans gave an interesting talk during the evening, calling on his members to support the association by their attendance. It is his hope that 1924 will be one of the most successful Fairmont Chapter has seen.

Newark Division Veterans and Auxiliary Meet on March 6

By B. A. OATMAN

AFTER a pleasant ride with Veteran Dave Murphy, who picked up your correspondent on his way to the monthly meeting of the Veterans and Auxiliary, we found the hall comfortably filled with Veterans and their wives.

The meeting opened with President D. H. Moriarty in the chair for the Veterans and Mrs. F. M. Howard for the Auxiliary. After prayer, the members stood silent in reverence for deceased members. The report of treasurer showed a tidy sum on hand. The report of the banquet committee was followed by the reading of a letter from Grand President Sturmer in regard to solicitation of business for the Baltimore and Ohio. President Sturmer urged all Veterans and members of the Auxiliary to do their best to increase in every way possible the income of the Company and thereby provide the means for employment of additional men on the road and in the shops. Cards for solicitation of business were passed around to everyone present.

The Ladies' Auxiliary opened their meeting at eight-fifteen. Mrs. Smith made a report for the Relief Committee, stating that Veteran William Savey, passenger conductor, had died at two forty-five on the 6th. Many potted plants were distributed to the sick during the month. Some members were reported improving while others continued with little change in their condition. Several of the recipients of flowers during the period between February 7 and March 6, were present and expressed their thanks for the kindness of the association and chairman of relief committee, in visiting them at their homes. Applications for six new memberships were read and favorably passed on by the Auxiliary. The penny march netted six forty nine. The Telegraphers Organization at Newark added three dollars to the fund produced by the penny march. This amount was turned over to Mrs. Smith, chairman, Relief Committee, to be used for flowers for the sick. The penny march is unique. It creates a feeling of good fellowship, and provides money to defray expense of providing flowers for the sick members, without taxing the treasury of either branch of the organization.

President Howard of the Auxiliary took the Veterans under her wing and announced that in the near future, when partaking of lunches at the meetings, they would be provided with trays on which their lunch would be served. This is the result of efforts of the Entertainment Committee. Mrs. Lewis, chairman, announced that her committee wanted to provide this luxury if the committee could get the sanction of the organization. There was no objection, so the Veterans will each be provided with a "Lap" in the future.

Veteran D. H. Murphy, who so ably acted as toastmaster at the banquet on February 21, was given a vote of thanks. Brother Murphy responded with his usual humor and said he was interested in providing the best for the Veterans at their banquets and that the treasurer's report was encouraging, so much so that a larger fowl (Turkey), would no doubt grace the banquet table at the 1925 banquet. "Dave" likes chicken, but he likes turkey better.

A fine lunch, as is the custom, was served. Brother Wiley had his New Radio Set hooked up in the hall and furnished entertainment prior to and after the business session. Thank you, Brother Wiley, for your thoughtfulness.

Ladies' Auxiliary No. 21, Harter Division, Wheeling

By MARIE SLATTERICK

ON February 25 Ladies' Auxiliary No. 21, Harter Division, held their monthly meeting in Duger's Hall, Wheeling. The meeting was called to order with all officers present but Outer Guard Mrs. S. Gardner, who was called out of the city because of illness in the family.

After the reading and approval of the minutes of the previous meeting and of the various reports, President Mrs. Crow introduced Mrs. J. M. Garvey, grand vice-president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, who expressed her desire to help the Harter Division as much as she could, and her surprise to note the growth of this division since its organization in July, 1923. The Harter Division, while it really is "young," boasts of thirty-two members, two being added at this meeting. Mrs. Garvey then proceeded with her usual delightful and entertaining talk and promised to come soon again. She was tendered a rising vote of thanks.

The delegate was then elected for the Convention in Baltimore May 7, 8 and 9. The decision was unanimous in favor of Mrs. C. P. Bishop, with Mrs. J. H. McConnell as alternate. We have Mrs. Bishop's picture and that of Mrs. J. Vaughn, the newly elected marshal.

The next meeting will be held on March 24. The ladies served ice cream, homemade cake and coffee, a regular treat. There were about six different kinds of cake and enough for everybody to get a generous taste of each kind. Look for the recipes soon!

McMechen Veterans and Auxiliary Meet

By MARIE SLATTERICK

THE Baltimore and Ohio Veteran Employees Association of Mr. Mechen, W. Va., and Ladies' Auxiliary met at their hall in the bank building at McMechen on February 27. There were fifty Veterans and ladies present and an interesting meeting followed. The organization is progressing nicely; new members of both the Veterans and the Ladies' Auxiliary are coming in at every meeting. After the evening's business was disposed of a dainty lunch was served by the ladies.

The following were elected to serve as officers for the ensuing term of one year:

Veterans: M. M. Connors, president; Geo. Dean, vice-president; J. W. Kettlewell, secretary; H. P. Scultz, treasurer.

Board of Directors: H. P. Scultz, chairman; John Gillingham, C. Logston, Geo. Addlesberger, John Coxon.

Ladies' Auxiliary: Mrs. W. E. Hicks, president; Mrs. Mary Donovan, vice-president; Mrs. John Coxon, secretary; Mrs. Henry Scultz, treasurer; Marshal, Mrs. J. W. Kettlewell; Outer Guard, Mrs. John Kerrigan.

Delegates to Convention: J. W. Kettlewell; alternate, W. R. Lowe. Mrs. Ray Chamberlain; alternate, Mrs. W. E. Hicks.

Addresses were made by J. M. Garvey, grand vice-president and by Mrs. J. M. Garvey, grand vice-president of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Each of the officers elected also gave an interesting talk. It was decided to hold their meetings on the last Wednesday of each month. Visitors from Wheeling attended.

"Smokeville's Social" Staged by Baltimore Veterans

ON February 27, the Baltimore Chapter, Veterans' Association, entertained their members, families and guests at a "Smokeville's Social" held in the Fourth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, presenting the City Wide Minstrel Company, the majority of whom are employes of our Company.

The Armory is a large building, having a seating capacity of about 2700. All seats were filled early, and several hundred people stood in the balconies and at the rear of the hall throughout the fine entertainment. It was estimated that 3500 people were present.

The officers of the chapter, Messrs. R. S. Collingsworth, Charles B. Snapp, C. R. Weir, M. V. Pascal and P. W. Shewbridge, were on hand and made all arrangements possible for the comfort and convenience of their guests. The entertainment was arranged by the following committee: Chairman P. W. Shewbridge, C. H. O'Hara, C. R. Weir, G. W. Galloway, C. H. Pennell, C. E. Hood, F. E. Whitson and F. P. Klinesmith. Particular mention is made of the services of C. H. O'Hara, who assisted in taking tickets at the door and in many ways rendered invaluable aid in making the entertainment the pronounced success it was.

The entertainment opened with a selection by the Jazz Buddies, a number of whom are Baltimore and Ohio employes. Robert Craig, employed in Mr. Skilling's Office, is the pianist of the Buddies and also accompanied the singers during the evening. President Collingsworth welcomed the visitors in a short, able address. He expressed his pleasure that so many were present and said, "We appreciate your presence, we will try to give you an enjoyable evening. Such an attendance cannot but encourage your committee and officers to work hard for success. Let us cooperate with each other, cooperate with our Road, the best in the country, and we must be successful in whatever we undertake, whether it is for ourselves or for our Company. We all agree that their success is ours, don't we?"

Smokeville's select minstrels then took the stage, the characters being:

Upper, interlocutor.....J. H. Vannosdeln, pipe-fitter
Jumbo Jim.....G. A. Rinick, boilermaker
Zip Johnson.....J. F. Mosley, machinist
Socrate Fizzle.....R. L. Brophy, boilermaker
Skinton Squiggle.....H. S. Bergman
Ephraim Jefferson.....C. A. Ayers
Washington Lee.....C. Lowe, machinist helper
Rufus Fertilizer.....C. Riggins
Isador Knobb.....G. E. Nash, pipe-fitter apprentice
Pickels.....Miss Virginia Lowery, daughter of veteran machinist

Passenger Conductor W. T. Francis,
Newark Division

The musical numbers were as follows:

"In the Evening by the Moonlight"..... Company
"You Tell Her I Stutter"..... Jumbo Jim
"O You Little Son-uv-er-Gun"..... Skinton Squiggle
"O'er the Billowy Sea"..... Mr. Uppers
"That Old Gang of Mine," violin solo..... Ephraim Jefferson and Company
Interpretative Dance..... Miss Virginia Lowery
"I Never Knew"..... Socrate Fizzle
"Midnight Rose"..... Washington Lee
"Mamma's Little Coal Black Rose"..... Skinton Squiggle
"Nimble Feet"..... Rufus Fertilizer
"I Wonder Who's Dancing with Her Tonight"..... Ephraim Jefferson
"Till We Meet Again"..... Company

After the program was completed, dancing was enjoyed until midnight, the Jazz Buddies furnishing the music.

Seen and Heard from Our Arm Chair

Jumbo Jim fast asleep in his chair when the curtain went up.

Skinton Squiggle not requiring a ladder to reach the high notes. He's over six feet tall.

The door knob trying to break his chair.

Mr. Upper's story of watermelons as large as pumpkins in Alabama and his remarks on the subject of climbing a fifty-nine story building without elevators or stairs. The climate does it!

Every number on the program was heartily applauded, and every member responded with an encore. The acting of Mr. Riggins, with his nimble feet, was particularly appreciated and he was called back half a dozen times. Finally his breath—or his nimble feet—gave out and he declined to respond again.

Jumbo Jim had an inexhaustible supply of stories. The best one was when he insisted that women do nothing but talk about men. Mr. Uppers disagreed with him, but Jumbo cinched the bet saying they did, even in church. They say "A-men," sing "hymns" and even when they laugh they say "He-He." And his final story, when he closed the evenings entertainment, was the best, his last words being, "and the record of the Capitol Limited cannot be beaten."

Captain Charles Shipley was present, but said he could not join in the dance, because the music was not written in "Capitol Limited time!"

It is, of course, impossible to mention all those present, but among our well known people we saw Master Mechanic Fritchey, Assistant Master Mechanic Bowers, Assistant Chief Clerk King, Mr. and Mrs. Vitrow, Mr. and Mrs. Stier, Jim Riley, Magazine Correspondent Starklauf, Mrs. C. G. Flaherty, Mrs. Leeffler and Station Master and Mrs. Schley.

Fifty-Year Service Button Presented to Passenger Conductor William T. Francis at Willard, Ohio

By B. A. OATMAN, Magazine Correspondent

WITH his record absolutely clear, William T. Francis, passenger conductor living at Willard, Ohio, and handling Trains 45 and 46 between Willard Ohio, and Wheeling, W. Va., has completed fifty years' service. On January 30 our Veterans' Association, assisted by General Superintendent D. F. Stevens, Northwest District, presented to Conductor Francis the much coveted fifty-year gold button. General Superintendent Stevens said that his record had been seldom equalled on the entire railroad system and that it has attracted the attention of President Willard and other officials. General Manager H. B. Voorhees, and Superintendent S. U. Hooper, Chicago Division, were also present.

Mr. Francis, who is still in service as passenger conductor, expects to continue to serve in this capacity for some years to come. He feels that he is too young to retire now.

Mr. Francis entered the service on May 5, 1873, as freight brakeman, Newark Division. Later he was promoted to freight conductor and was made passenger conductor on October 21, 1882. With the exception of two years, 1885 to 1887, when he was yard master, he has been a passenger conductor continuously for more than 41 years. He has never been in a serious wreck, and has suffered no serious injury during his entire service.

The Woman Who Rode Engines in Panama

Helen Varick Boswell Holds the Title of Vice-President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Cooperative Trust Company

SOME day when you are in New York and have a few minutes to spare, stroll out of the Pennsylvania Station, cross Thirty-third Street and you will find yourself face to face with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Trust Company's place of business. You can't miss it, for the big signs tell you all about it. Then go right in, and if you see a bright-eyed, gray-haired, up-to-date little woman walking toward you, that's Miss Boswell, vice-president.

Helen Varick Boswell is a Baltimorean by birth. She was educated in Friends School, and at the age of seventeen, came to New York.

"And what did you do when you were seventeen?" we asked her.

"Just what any other southern girl of seventeen would do," she laughed, her eyes bobbing up and down like a jack-in-the-box. "I sat around and played the piano, read books and ate candy."

Miss Boswell's mother died when Helen was quite young, and the girl became identified with the family of Mrs. J. L. Fader, then a woman well known in political circles. Naturally the influence of her work found its way into the life of the little girl who longed to be of service in the world. It was not many years before Helen Varick Boswell found herself before the public, connected with any number of women's clubs, and finding a lot of pleasure in them. Her fame spread over the country by degrees, and she was called upon to do public speaking. There is not a State in the Union in which Miss Boswell has not spoken at some time or other.

And it was at the time of the building of the Panama Canal that Uncle Sam got busy. It was then that Theodore Roosevelt used his "Big Stick" to build the Canal, and as its accompaniment came that gentler weapon, the "Women's Club" of Panama, for thence Miss Boswell was sent by the Government to organize women's clubs.

"The type of man who went to help dig the Canal was the type of man who was worth while," says Miss Boswell. "If he was not he did not stick. And those who stuck brought their families with them. The American man is so constituted that he wants his family with him. The women came down. But when they had been there for a little while, they began to realize the fact that there was nothing for them to do. They had been accustomed to women's clubs back home. There there was nothing. Then came the necessity for organizing women's clubs and this was my work. At the beginning, of course, there were troubles. The social distinctions indigenous to the soil in the United States spread themselves also in Panama. But it did not take them long to learn that 'Judy O'Grady and the Captain's Lady' might be classed on an equal footing.

"The serious problem of transportation for me was easily solved. I had a good bit of traveling around to do, and since I could not get a private car, they simply placed engines at my disposal, and I just rode here and there in an engine cab."

In her dealings with the public Miss Boswell became acquainted with thousands of prominent men and women. She was made chairman of committees for the organization of women's clubs; she became famous as an organizer, and her work brought her into contact with labor leaders and capitalists. And besides, she was graduated in law in Washington in 1902, "although," she whispers confidentially, "I was down near the 'tag end' of my class. Although I never actually practiced law for a living, it became a great help to me; it was the thing that made me concentrate, that helped me in my relationship with women and men. And it was this relationship that brought about my being placed in the position which I now hold.

"Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Cooperative Trust Company, and who is also president of various banks operated by the B. of L. E., is a man of broad views, keen perception of the moulding of public opinion, and with an exact justice that has no sex discrimination.

"In planning the opening of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Cooperative Trust Company at Seventh Avenue and Thirty-third Street, New York (which is but the first of a series of such banks in New York), Mr. Stone and his Directorate elected a woman to the office of vice-president. They did this because they felt that it would be a help both to this particular bank and to the banking world in general, and that further, it would be recognizing, in the only way, the fact that women are contributing much of value to the banking system of the country.

"The position appealed to me because of its cooperative feature and because it gives an unusual opportunity to the small depositor, particularly to the women of small incomes in the home, and to those who are just starting out in the business world. These can open a checking account and maintain a balance of as little as $50, and with no charge if the balance should inadvertently go below that sum.

"More than four million five hundred thousand women in the United States are bank depositors, and this number is increasing daily.

"When it is realized that only a little less than 25 per cent. of all the depositors in the nation are women, it is not hard to understand why the banks of the country are increasingly attentive to them as potential customers.

"What this great body of women depositors may signify in the economic life of the country is interesting to contemplate. The power that lies in the possession of money is conceded, and there are few who will doubt that it will be used to the good of the nation at large. It may fairly be assumed that the development of a large class of women depositors will be an effective check to the adoption or spread of communistic doctrine in the country, and that the age old conservatism in women in financial matters will tend to stabilization and solidity in the financial affairs of the great mass of depositors.

"Women are the real financiers of the home. Throughout the centuries they have been the conservers of the human family and the human family's possessions. They have resorted to makeshifts and to subterfuges, but they have made one dollar do the work of two.

"Women may be new voters, and fairly new in the business world, but they are old in training that makes for success in business. They have patched and pieced, and by combining their hands with their brains, have succeeded in helping the family keep up a 'good front.' In other words, they have been largely responsible for the fact that the average American man and the average American child have had three good meals a day."

"And do you believe," we asked her, "that the business of establishing banks by the Brotherhood is going to result in a better understanding between Capital and Labor?"

"Indeed, yes," replied Miss Boswell. "With people like Warren S. Stone, LeRoy Wilbur Baldwin and Charles M. Schwab sitting down together to talk things over, how can it be otherwise? All life is a compromise, and Capital and Labor, as well as the rest of the world, will learn that there must exist the system of give and take in mutual understanding."

"You seem to be quite business-like. I thought the newspapers said that you didn't know a 'pesky thing' about business."

"Of course, I know business," declared Miss Boswell with emphasis. "If I didn't, do you suppose I'd be holding down this job? I've been dealing with business people all my life."

She opened a desk drawer and took therefrom a dime bank.

"Here's something nice to put your dimes in," she said to me. Then added, "and when you come back to New York you can bring this along with you and use your little bank full of dimes to open up an account here."

If you don't call that business, I miss my guess!

Orange Marmalade

By MRS. H. W. JONES, Mother of Assistant Editor of the Magazine

Ten oranges, thin skinned and juicy. Pare six of very thin rind. Cut this rind into small pieces and put in about three cups of cold water. Let it boil until tender, two or three hours may be needed, adding water if necessary. Then take the rest of the rind and pare off every bit of white. Cut your oranges into small pieces with a sharp knife, taking out the middle core. Put one cup of the boiled rind and the water it is boiled in, two cups of the sliced orange and one cup of sugar, alternately, until you get all your fruit into your saucepan. Boil gently, taking off the scum as it rises, for two or three hours, until the mixture clarifies and thickens enough to set like jelly. Seal tight.

This is a real Scotch recipe.

A House Built of Cards

(An Easter Box)

By MRS. J. V. Klier, Wife of Chief Clerk, Valuation Department

THIS house, made of Easter picture post cards, pasted and sewed together, is really a handkerchief box, planned to charm and delight the small child who has handkerchiefs of his very own. One side of the gabled roof can be lifted and dropped and forms the lid of the box.

If you want to make a really happy box, choose cards showing life (animal or human) full of good fun, and done in pleasing colors. Last Christmas I used pictures of red birds and the birds flitting among evergreen boughs all laden with snow; children in bright sweaters tumbling about in the snow and coasting on sleds, people carrying home Christmas trees and holly through snowy streets past festive-looking houses.

Choose fourteen cards of uniform size, ten cards having horizontal pictures and four having vertical pictures. Besides the cards you will need red or green embroidery thread—a pearl silkine is very good—a strong sewing needle and library paste.

1. Lay out the cards in pairs and paste each pair together so that the mailing sides get the paste and the resultant card shows a picture on each side. This pasting is done so that the cards will hold together firmly while you sew them.

2. Now take up the two cards having vertical pictures and cut them to make the gable ends of the house as follows: Measure three and a half inches from the bottom of each card up each vertical side. Connect these points with middle of top edge of card. Cut along lines and you will have the gable for your house.

3. At this stage in your work you must have a happy mind and remember that you are going to sew the house together to give to a little child. Stitch around every side of all seven double cards, using a blanket stitch with stitches about one quarter inch apart. This is the hardest but most effective part of the making of the box.

4. Now arrange the seven sewed cards and choose which pictures you want to use for the outside view of floor, sides, end and front and back of the gabled roof. Start to build by sewing each long side of the house to the floor. Sew by using a hemming stitch in and out of the blanket stitches around the edges of the cards. Next sew the gable ends to the floor and to the sides. The house now stands ready for the roof.

Sew each short edge of one roof card to a slant of the gable ends. Then sew the top horizontal edge of the remaining card to the ridge of the roof and leave the other edges free.

There stands the card house, with one side of the gabled roof that can be lifted and dropped like the lid of a box. It stands waiting for the handkerchiefs—or for the Easter Bunny's gift to delight the heart of a little child.

On with the Sewing!

By PEGGY

WITH such an array of simple but lovely styles as are shown on these pages this month, our fingers just tingle to get at our sewing. Here are blouses, and aprons; clothes for the little folk; underwear, and a pretty evening dress that is becoming to most everyone.

If you want quick service on patterns, please send all orders for patterns on these pages to our New York Office (see address on coupon), NOT to the Magazine Office at Baltimore.

4693. What dainter frock for a little tot than this one made up in batiste, China silk, crepe or pongee? The pattern is cut in sizes 1, 2, 3 and 5 years. The 2-year size requires  $1\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 27-inch material. Price 10 cents.

4711. This will be neat and simple as a school or day dress, without the "trimming" and very attractive and dressy, with the trimming, which forms a smart revers collar, and soft girdle. Crepe de chine in the new peach, moss green, or flesh shade could be used, with the trimming of a contrasting material or color. In white or gandy or voile or in two toned taffeta, this style will be very pleasing.

The pattern is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. If made as illustrated it will require  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material for the dress and  $\frac{5}{8}$  yard for the trimming. Price, 10 cents.

4716. Beltless straight line dresses are much in vogue. The style here portrayed may be worn with any blouse or shirt waist.

The pattern is cut in sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. To make the dress for a 38-inch size will require  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 40-inch material. The guimpe will require 2 yards. The width at the foot is  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards. Price, 10 cents.

4715. Tulle, organdy, chiffon and crepe de chine are desirable materials for this design. Changeable taffeta would also be attractive. As illustrated the dress was made of peach color crepe de chine, with corded pipings of satin, and embroidered chiffon for the yoke portions. A rosette of chiffon and narrow braided girdle finish the waistline.

The pattern is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 32-inch material. Price, 10 cents.

4704. Dotted voile in blue and white, with bindings of blue is here depicted. The guimpe may be of batiste, lawn, crepe or voile. This is a pretty style for pongee or gingham.

The pattern is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 4-year size requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for dress and guimpe. For the guimpe alone  $\frac{7}{8}$  yard is required. Price, 10 cents.

4719. Embroidered voile or Swiss, organdy, lawn or percale could be used for this model. It will also be attractive in saten or alpaca with binding of contrasting material, or in organdy with a plaited frill at the free edges.

The pattern is cut in one size: medium. It will require  $1\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material, cut lengthwise. If cut crosswise  $1\frac{3}{8}$  yards is required. Price, 10 cents.

4392. This style has slenderizing lines and is becoming to youthful and to mature figures. Gingham with linen would be fine for this, or ratine with binding in a contrasting color. Taffeta too will be attractive for this style.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $6\frac{1}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material. The width at the foot of the dress is  $2\frac{1}{2}$  yards. Price, 10 cents.

4718. In smart simplicity, or gracefully embellished with cuffs and flounces, this style is nice for linen, and for the new striped or plaid gingham.

The pattern is cut in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16-year size requires  $1\frac{5}{8}$  yards of plain material and  $3\frac{3}{8}$  yards of the figured material 32 inches wide, if made as illustrated in the large view. With short sleeves and without flounces  $3\frac{3}{8}$  yards of one material is required. The width of the skirt at the foot is  $1\frac{3}{8}$  yards. Price, 10 cents.

4705. This is a good model for percale, seersucker, drill, linen or linene. The blouse may be of the same material as the overalls, and may be finished with the sleeves in wrist or elbow length.

The pattern is cut in sizes 2, 3, 4 and 6 years. A 3-year size requires  $2\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 36-inch material. The blouse alone requires 1 yard. The overalls may be worn over any blouse or shirt waist. Price, 10 cents.

4701. Wool or silk alpaca would be very attractive for this model which lends itself also to linen, silk, or crepe, with equally good effect. The cuff may be omitted as well as the wrist length portion of the sleeve.

The pattern is cut in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material, if made with long sleeves. If with sleeve, cap and cuff  $1\frac{7}{8}$  yards are required. Price, 10 cents.

4710. This "costume" is quite up-to-date, and attractive for any of the material now in vogue. The jacket may be omitted, or it may be made of contrasting material.

The pattern is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $2\frac{1}{2}$  yards for the dress, and 1 yard for the jacket of 40-inch material. Mustard color linen with stitching in brown floss would be nice for this model or pongee in a natural shade with pipings or bindings of white or green. Price, 10 cents.

4702. This is a good style for a suit

"coat" as well as for a separate garment. Wool mixtures, silk or wool alpaca, pongee and linen would be suitable for this design. The collar may be rolled high or low as illustrated.

This pattern is cut in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. Price, 10 cents.

4684. This becoming little model may be of gingham, pongee, sateen or printed voile. It is also good for linen, serge or wool crepe. The guimpe may be of lawn or batiste.

The pattern is cut in sizes 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. A 6-year size requires  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards of material for the dress and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards 36 inches wide for guimpe. With short sleeves the guimpe will require 1 yard. Price, 10 cents.

4698. This model is especially desirable for stout figures. It may be made of sateen, flannel, serge crepe, albatross, linen, satin or silk.

The pattern is cut in sizes small (27-29), medium (31-33), large (35-37), extra large (39-41) inches waist measure. Medium size requires  $1\frac{7}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. Price, 10 cents.

4677. Serge, crepe or linen could be used for this design, with velvet satin or organdie for collar and cuffs.

The pattern is cut in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 40-inch material.

For collar and cuffs of contrasting material as illustrated  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard is required. The width at the foot with plaits extended is  $1\frac{3}{4}$  yards. Price, 10 cents.

4686 is a smart middy dress for the little girl from 6 to 12. Plaid gingham is combined with white Indian head. Wool repp, serge, linen or pongee might also be used to advantage in this pattern. A 10-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 36-inch material. To make as illustrated requires  $1\frac{1}{4}$  yards of plain material and  $2\frac{1}{4}$  yards of plaid material. Price 10 cents.

4669 shows a dainty morning frock of cretonne, gingham, linen, chambray, repp, crepe, or striped seersucker and linene combined. Black sateen with pipings of cretonne would make this a morning dress which you would be proud to wear. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: small (34-36); medium (38-40); large (42-44); extra large (46-48). Medium size requires  $4\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. To trim as shown, requires  $\frac{3}{8}$  yard of contrasting material. Price 10 cents.

The Gingerbread Boy with the Red Hair

By MARY ANN

(A Story for the Tiniest Railroaders)

ONCE upon a time there were three little brown boys, all made of gingerbread. They lay in a pretty tray on the table. And they all had eyes made of nice fat raisins, and noses of spice, and mouths of cinnamon. There were five little currant buttons down the front of each vest, and each gingerbread boy had a rose made of pink icing in his buttonhole.

Now, I am sure that you think they all looked alike. But they did not, for one of them had red hair. Now where do you suppose he got it? I shall tell you.

When Mother made these gingerbread boys and put them into the oven to bake, they looked just exactly alike, so that you could not tell one from the other. But the big kitchen stove was the cause of it all. As soon as he saw the gingerbread boys going into the oven he began to laugh to himself.

"Oh, wouldn't it be fun," he thought, "to burn one of those gingerbread boys black? I think that I shall do that." And he laughed again.

But Mother was such a good cook that she knew just when the gingerbread boys ought to be done. And she opened the oven door just in time to keep them from burning. But when she took them out she found that the gingerbread boy that lay on the side of the pan farthest away from the oven door had his head scorched just the tiniest bit.

"O, I wonder what I shall do?" cried Mother, "I am so sorry."

"That's nothing," laughed Grandma, "all you have to do is to scrape away the burned part and put some icing there."

So that's just what Mother did.

"I shall not use white icing," she said, "for that will make him look like an old man. I shall make him red, and then he will have red hair."

When the children came home from school they laughed at the red haired gingerbread boy, and he was so funny that they made up a little song about him. And this was the song:

Red head,
Go to bed,
You're only made of gingerbread!

Aboard a Burning Ship

By HAZEL BARNUM, Daughter of Fireman,
Parkersburg, W. Va.

IT was one hot day in July when the ship "Matalaka" set sail for the South Seas. It was crowded and more would have gone but the captain said there were too many aboard now. There were old people, lovers and newlyweds, also children on the ship. The Matalaka was a ship well constructed, being five hundred feet long and sixty-five feet wide, with three decks. Her banners, floating in the sunlight, could be seen many miles away. Soon darkness came—many were in bed early while others were up late.

On the morning of the fourteenth day out, the water was very smooth and sailing easy. In a few days we were in the Mediterranean. Some of the people got off at ports along the way, but there was still a large number when we reached the South Sea. The water was rough now, and the ship was moving slowly. The sky darkened and one by one the people left the decks until every one was empty. The thunder rolled and the lightning flashed, while the rain poured down. The ship still moved on but the storm got worse.

A crash came. Women screamed, men were running to and fro and children were crying. The ship had been struck by lightning and was ablaze. Many were burned, while others were drowned. Only 123 were saved out of nearly a thousand. The ones saved were let down into the water and the wind carried them to a small island.

This island was inhabited only by a few black natives, and no one could understand their language. We thought they wanted to know where we came from but they allowed us to stay.

The natives lived on things so bitter and hot we could not eat them, but someone found a cocoanut tree. There was only one and not many nuts on it. One by one the people died of starvation until only 79 were left, principally middle aged men, women and older children. The time came when we were almost starved and practically without clothes. Then a ship came. It was a bright one like the Matalaka. We hailed it and told our sad story. Those of us left were fed, taken care of and then brought back to our sad homes. Many were orphans while others grieved for the children or brothers and sisters. Those who could not go because of the crowded ship thanked God they didn't. I don't think anyone on that ship will ever want to take another pleasure trip on a steamer. I know I won't.

Flowers

By FAE AMBROSE, Fourth Grade, East Brunswick School

I THINK flowers are the most beautiful things on earth. Flowers make the world beautiful. Without flowers I think it would be very dull. When spring comes and flowers are beginning to bloom everybody seems to be happy. You can see women and children working in their flower gardens. Children are seen gathering the pretty violets, buttercups and other spring flowers.

Flowers are also useful. They cheer the sick and brighten dingy rooms. When a person is sick and you take him a bunch of bright colored flowers, such as roses and carnations, he seems much brighter. It makes the room look cheerful by the contrasting colors and odors.

Why I Like Baltimore

By FLORENCE M. GROSS

Sister of Stenographer

Car Service Department, Baltimore

IT IS nice around my home. I like it because it is not so quiet. I know Willard Eckman, the little boy who was named for President Willard. He lives down the street from me.

The town gets its name from Lord Baltimore. I guess that you all know about Druid Hill Park. It is so nice. It has swings and all kinds of things. When I go there I like to play red-line, I-spy, stooping catchers and run-a-mile.

There are about one thousand schools and churches in Baltimore. My father keeps a grocery store.

"Tillie, the Toiler," was drawn by Mary Tempkins, Pittsburgh. Jiggs was drawn by a little boy whose name we lost. If he will write us, we'll be glad to give him credit

Dear Girls and Boys:

The answers to the February puzzles are: TOOTH PASTE and CLEAN YOUR TEETH. There was a slight mistake in the second puzzle; this made it hard to guess, but most of our little people guessed it anyway.

Note:

All puzzles published in this department will be defined, as far as possible, from the New Standard Dictionary, edition of 1920. It is permissible to use both geographical and biographical words in the construction of puzzles, but when such words are taken from any authority other than the New Standard Dictionary, the name of such authority must be stated at the end of the definition, in parenthesis. Obsolete words will be marked at the end of the definition thus—"obs"). Variant spellings of a word must be marked at the end of the definition thus—"var."). Address all communications concerning this department to G. H. Pryor, Room 800, Baltimore and Ohio Building, Baltimore, Maryland, and mark the envelope "Puzzles."

1. CHARADE (6)

I ONE TWO by my friends as a bank;
No deposits—withdrawals you'd say;
They just tap the till for as much as I will Let them have on a promise to pay.

I ONE TWO to their flattering ways,
As they touch me for liberal loans;
They lay it on thick when preparing to nick
Me for twenty or twenty-five bones.

I ONE ALL by their method so crude,
But what is a loan between friends?
I have learned, by the bye, that the popular guy
Is the fellow who cheerfully lends.

Bandoville, March 6, 1924.

Mr. S. Keeper:

Dear Sir:

I take my FIRST in hand, our TWO is running low,

Our COMPLETE needs a brand new pipe, to stop the overflow.

The FIRST where TWO is always kept, is shy a rail or two,

But we will fix that up ourselves, and make it good as new.

So kindly have this item sent and we'll be satisfied,

For just as soon as it's received, the pipe will be applied.

You'll surely get the thanks of all who wished this order sent.

We need the COMPLETE, hustle now!

Yours truly, A. G. Ent.

Sin

A Fable of the Badger and the Buckeye

By HAPPY THOUGHT (Mrs. M. E. Burrell), Puzzler of Baltimore

(With apologies to Mr. Muchmore (Roscoe), of Wisconsin, and Mr. Wickham (Wick-o-cincy), of Cincinnati)

Roscoe and Wick-o-Cincy met

In Wick-o-Cincy's city;

The Badger to the Buckeye said:

"It seems to me a pity

To advertise as you do

How naughty you all are;

Sin piled on sin! I'll say you've been

More frank than some, by far."

Upspoke the modest Buckeye:

"The palm belongs to you;

Your candid State, sad to relate,

Blazons what she will do;

But first, I do assure you, friend,

You read us all awry;

We don't say 'Sin-Sin-naughty,'

We say 'Sin? Sin? Not I!'

Standing so straight, mayhap we bend

A trifle over back;

But better that than rush ahead

Upon the downward track!

It's rather hopeless, Roscoe,

I'm sorry for you, too;

The State you're in must end in sin

No matter what you do."

* * * *

Well I declare! It's only fair

To check such celebrations;

They didn't meet, nor yet repeat

Unkind insinuations.

But don't forget that if they met,

This thing they first would mention;

With one accord they'd shout the word:

"Hurrah for the Convention!"

"The twenty-second!" "Oh how I've reckoned!"

Muchmore they'd say in haste,

For moments such as these are rare,

And may not go to waste.

Puzzler's congeniality!

In its strong current caught—

No time for triviality

Like "nat" and "not" and "naught!"

*National Convention of Puzzlers, Washington, D. C.,
February 22, 1924

I cried: 'Good Land!' and on the run,

I beat it for the street,

As, glaring at me from the wall,

A red-eyed calendar did call:

"I told you 'twas COMPLETE!"

*Oh, blest retirement! friend of life's decline—
Retreat from care that ever must be thine:
How blest is he who crowns, in shades like these,
A youth of labor with an age of ease.*

OLIVER GOLDSMITH—"The Deserted Village"

George M. Carr

Was born in Howard County, Maryland, on November 10, 1858. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on September 19, 1892 as a fireman. In January, 1903 he was promoted to freight engineer, which position he held until his recent retirement.

Robert Barkley

Was born in Baltimore, Md., on March 29, 1857. He entered the service on August 10, 1877 as a trucker, was appointed delivery clerk in 1881; chief delivery clerk in 1889 and general foreman in 1895, the latter position he held continuously until his recent retirement.

A. A. McGuire

Was born in McHenry County, Ohio, in 1859. He entered the service as a track laborer on March 1, 1880 and was appointed foreman in 1899, which position he held until his recent retirement.

Charles L. Stutler

Was born in 1857. He first entered the service in 1881, under J. W. Hyatt and C. D. Furby. He worked intermittently until 1894 when he was appointed trackman, since which time he has filled positions of sub-foreman, extra foreman, watchman and track walker. He was employed in the latter position at the time of his recent retirement. In 1880, Mr. Stutler was married to Miss A. M. Athey, and of this union four boys and five girls were born. His wife, two daughters and one son have since passed away.

Mr. Stutler says that the best investment he has ever made was the purchase of a home through the Relief Department, and he recommends this course strongly to all employees of the company.

Just between You and Me

The National Puzzlers' League held its 81st. semi-annual convention at the Occidental Hotel, Washington, D. C., February 22, 1924. About forty puzzlers spent a pleasant day in going over the reports of the various committees, in devising plans for the future and in renewing old friendships. The following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: William H. Smith (T. Hinker), Bangor, Pa., President; Mrs. John Q. Boyer (Pearlie Glen), Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; Mrs. Margaretta Burkholder (Margarette), Phillipsburg, N. J., Second Vice-President; Lewis Trent (C. Saw), New York City, Secretary; William W. Delaney (Willie Wildwave), New York City, Treasurer; and Rufus T. Strohman (Arty Ess); Scranton, Pa., Official Editor. The next meeting will be at Scranton, Pa., on Labor Day. Among other puzzlers present were: A. F. Holt, the master term builder, Nypho, Guidon, Enavliem, Jack O'Lantern, Jemand, K. T. Did, Happy Thought, N. Jincer, Primrose, Pearlie Glen, L. M. N. Terry, Sammy, Atlas, The Major, Kenneth, Poly, Gemini, Miss Pitts and others. It was an exceedingly pleasant and enjoyable day for all hands.

The memorial to Ernest W. Ager (Ernest), who died in the fall of 1922, has just been issued and it is a beautiful memorial to one of puzzlerdom's greatest devotees. It contains many samples of Ernest's high grade work with reminiscences of his life by those puzzlers who knew him best. The book is a gem well worth preserving and reflects great credit on the editors, Guidon, Nypho and C. Saw. Copies may be obtained from Lewis Trent (C. Saw), 1391 Jesup Ave., New York City, at $2.50 each, the proceeds to be devoted to the publication of the Enigma.

In No. 20 of this issue we present our first Cryptogram. A Cryptogram is simply a transposition of letters as printed, the letter "A" represents some other letter, the letter "B" still another letter, etc. The puzzle is to find the real letters represented by those published and these will be found to make words which in turn will make a complete sentence. You will find lots of fun in solving cryptograms.

Puzzles for the Youngsters

Here is another good health puzzle. Each little girl or boy who sends in a correct answer will receive a sample tube of Pyro-dento Tooth Paste.

The answer to this puzzle is made up of two words. It is something that everybody needs at all times in order to keep in good health.

My first (letter) is in half, but not in whole
My second is found in turn and roll;
My third in eat you'll always see,
My fourth and fifth in wish and she.
My sixth the alphabet begins,
My seventh is found in right and wins;
You'll find my eighth in run and read,
My whole, for good health, children need.

Send your answers to: Aunt Mary,

Station, Baltimore, Maryland.

Fireman Baumer "Swapped" Good Engine for Bad

And Gave Inexperienced Fireman a Big Lift

ON October 7, Engine 2702, Train 80, failed badly for steam because of leaky flues and an inexperienced fireman, who was unable to keep her hot. Engine 2373, also an Elm Grove turn, caught up to Engine 2702, and upon learning the difficulty, Fireman M. Baumer offered to take Engine 2702 to Glenwood, allowing the new man to handle Engine 2373, with which no difficulty was being experienced. This he did, and handled Engine 2702 to Glenwood without trouble, maintaining a steam pressure of between 160 and 200 pounds. Mr. Baumer has been commended by Superintendent Beltz and General Manager Scheer has written him a nice letter pointing out how his cooperation makes for the success of our entire organization, and expressing his gratification over the fact that a commendatory notation had been placed on Mr. Baumer's record.

Baltimore and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio Annex Building

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBEEK

I entered the Central Building recently much ahead of my usual time and witnessed an interesting scene. A throng of officials and clerks darted in from both entrances to the building, hurrying to the elevators. It was 8.25 and I judge they were due at their desks at 8.30.

J. J. Ekin, comptroller; George H. Pryor, auditor of disbursements; J. P. O'Malley, assistant comptroller; Jenks B. Jenkins, valuation engineer were in the throng and others. The girls were just as eager to be able to answer "here," as the men, and why not? If we want something well done, don't we ask Miss so and so to do it? In the MAGAZINE letters, I first read the contributions of the young ladies, and then the other letters follow, but the ladies first always!

Did you read Miss Stevens' story of Mrs. W. G. Brown getting business in Chicago, in the February MAGAZINE? When I tell you it was a crackerjack story, you will find yourself scurrying around for the February number in order to read it.

Henry Duncan Boyd, secretary to General Solicitor Herbert R. Preston, met with a serious accident the last week in February breaking his wrist while cranking his car. He gave me a full explanation of how it happened, but when it comes to explaining the mechanism of an automobile, my head is too thick, and though I nodded affirmatively, I did not understand a word. He is a splendid fellow, and I have wished many times I had his fine disposition, and yet he is a bachelor, with the Central Building and the Annex full of the nicest girls in Baltimore. I do not know what some men are thinking about!

The Law Department had occasion recently to call upon a leading law firm in Jacksonville, Florida, to perform a service for it, and when a request was made for a bill, the firm replied.

"We shall be glad to render any other assistance possible. We have no bill to render. We have enjoyed using the excellent trains and delightful dining car service of the Baltimore and Ohio. An opportunity to reciprocate in a slight degree is appreciated."

General Solicitor Morrison R. Waite, paid us a visit recently. We are always glad to see him. He has a fine staff in Cincinnati and all under his supervision are as busy as bees.

I wish some correspondent, conversant with transportation, would say something nice about train dispatchers. I think of them every trip I make, particularly where a track obstruction requires the switching of trains to other tracks. On a recent Sunday night, No. 9 was crossed over to the east bound track and when conditions became normal, there were trains waiting for it to pass. I mentally exclaimed, "That is the work of the train dispatcher." How well it was done, with practically no delay. Our train dispatchers are among the best.

And now before I close, as the minister would say, I wish to observe that we have in the Central Building a fine class of workers, located generally in the basement, men who make various repairs when needed and so on. I admire the man in overalls. They are all polite to me and I appreciate it. I do not believe in so many young fellows seeking white collar jobs. Give me the man who is not afraid to don overalls. This is not a sermon!

Car Service Department

Correspondents, H. V. OBERENDER and C. P. BAYN

The Car Service Department Baseball Team has been organized for the coming season. Here are the boys who hope to capture the pennant for the Car Service Department: J. E. Peters, A. Debs, R. B. English, N. A. Grafton, E. J. Williams, J. D. Bryan, R. D. Barnes, A. G. Donald, J. Heil, G. Heusley, R. I. Boteler, R. O. Smith, G. C. Crosswell, R. L. Vardy, J. C. Parrish, P. G. Minderlein, N. Reider. Wilson Auld, business manager; H. E. Weidman, field manager; C. P. Bayn, secretary; H. P. Wette, mascot.

Little Hiram Wette, Trace Desk, who has a service record of about 23 years in the Car Service Department, has a fondness for eggs. In the last 23 years he has brought nothing but egg sandwiches for his lunches. Hiram says he is lucky; he has never had one bad egg.

"Bill" Decker has built a nice mansion in Hamilton.

"Roy" Brown and "Col." Schley are getting their fishing tackle ready for those big black bass.

Misses Hammond and McDowell have returned from their vacation. We are constantly hearing of the wonders of the Pacific Coast, movie studios and the nice looking men. Lucy made a hit with a certain Pullman conductor on the Baltimore and Ohio.

Everything indicates Hazel Keller will soon join the Car Service brides. Heard someone say "it won't be long now."

Engineering Department

Correspondent, O. K. EDEN

"I have a rendezvous with Life
In days I hope will come
Ere youth has sped and strength of mind,
Ere voices sweet grow dumb;
I have a rendezvous with Life
When Spring's first heralds hum."

WAIT! You May Lose! Such is the warning to be printed on a poster to be distributed in connection with the careful crossing campaign sponsored by the American Railway Association. Ostensibly to promote greater safety at railroad crossings, this apt slogan can, and does apply to pedestrians on the broad highway. "Wait! You May Lose!" applies to YOU.

As mentioned in last month's MAGAZINE, "Count" Schanze went to and came back from California, and great was the coming back thereof! He informed us that somewhere out west, when the train stopped for water, or something or other, he got off to look around. And then the dirty work began, for while he was looking around somebody was kind (?) enough to look in and borrow his belongings, including priceless (to him) souvenirs which he was bringing for his friends in Baltimore. Tough luck, C. G. It could have been worse—some fair maiden could have borrowed you!

Radio fans are growing thick and fast around here. I believe that next to engineering (or should I say eating?) radio is the subject discussed most. The fellows, and I should say the ladies too, as Miss George has a set, have gotten everything "gettable." Every day some one comes in with a new location that he heard the night before. Now you tell one!

Well, she's gone and done it. Who? None other than Miss Kathryn L. Fox (the red fox) of our department. What? Why bobbed her tresses. "It's all off now," said the hair dresser when he had completed the operation. Who's next?

From reports we understand that Safety First should be exercised in assisting young ladies to put on their galoshes. Does the shoe fit you?

Although not heard of often, our friends in the Blueprint and Photographic Departments keep pluggin' away. In 1923, the Blueprint crew (Messrs. Newlin, Scott and Baker) made almost 1,500,000 square feet of blueprints. If the paper contained in these blueprints were made into a strip one foot wide, it would measure 281 miles in length, or the distance, over our tracks, between Baltimore and Connellsville. We might add that the prospects for an even greater total this year are bright, as up to the time of this writing, March 4, the daily average has been 500 square feet more than the daily average last year.

The people of Jacksonville, Daytona and St. Augustine, Florida were given a treat by the appearance of our friend "Herb" Dawkins.

Your correspondent and several other tennis enthusiasts are impatiently waiting for the tennis season to begin. Last year a round robin was played in order to pick a team to represent the department, and besides getting exercise we had a lot of fun. "Ozzie" says he is going to lick Vernon Bromwell, the Bill Tilden of the department, this year. We wonder!

Office of District Engineer, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Correspondent, J. M. WHEALAN

We wonder if the girls have been successful in securing that long promised box of candy from one of our prominent bachelor engineers. How about it, Walter?

Miss Emory used her influence with the Water Company. The result is a new and very attractive water cooler. We are grateful, Miss Emory.

There was a demand in the office recently for left-hand scissors. After much delay they were found with the four-foot yard stick and other tools. Our south-paw found them very useful, and she is free to admit that she did not know there was such a thing.

We are glad to welcome genial Mr. Cunningham back to work after an illness of several weeks. "Grove" is looking much better.

Please keep your locker doors shut.

That alleged Chinese game, Mah Jong, had a tryout in the office recently at lunch time, but the enthusiasm must have fallen flat as we have heard nothing about it since. Are our players afraid of the "Mah Jong" itch?

Have you noticed the many splendid ways in which employes are getting business for the Company? Why not try your hand? You will find it interesting, and both the Company and you will be the gainers.

Our compliments to D. A. Williams on the occasion of the completion of his fortieth year in the service of the Company. We hope he will have many more celebrations.

We enjoyed a demonstration of the new motion picture camera and projector recently. The camera is about the size of the ordinary hand camera and the projector can be used by placing the plug in any light socket in the house with perfect safety.

Miss Ward enjoys the distinction of having her friends call on her for service via the Baltimore and Ohio whenever they decide to take a trip. This has happened several times within the last six months, and Mr. Miller, our local passenger representative, and she have developed a high grade of teamwork, with the result that in practically every case a new friend has been secured for our Railroad. Miss Ward, within the last three months, has been responsible for two passengers to California and five to Florida.

To be certain that Baltimore and Ohio service is used, Miss Ward makes practically all arrangements and then checks with Mr. Miller so as to be sure that there is no break in the arrangements and that competition does not finally persuade the customer to use a rival line. We feel that Miss Ward's position in the matter of traffic solicitation is practically unique as she has progressed beyond the point where she must solicit, in most cases, the business coming to her unsolicited. Would it not be great if a reasonable percentage of our employes could establish such a clientele?

Office of District Engineer, Cincinnati, Ohio

Correspondent, G. F. DAUBENMERKL

The stork is still busy. Transitman H. S. Davis announced the arrival of a bouncing baby boy on February 15, weight 8½ pounds. Congratulations!

P. A. Callahan goes to gym every Wednesday evening and on Thursday morning you hear something like this: "Gee, that boy gave us an awful workout last night. My shoulders, back and the calves of my legs just ache," etc.

H. L. Scribner is now a radio bug and says he gets Hastings, Neb., Pittsburgh, Detroit, etc., but nobody seems to be able to substantiate his claims. Assistant Engineer Ray says whenever he visits Herbert the latter is lucky if he gets Northside, and Ray leaves in disgust. The next morning "Scrib" tells Ray: "Oh 'Jim,' you should have stayed. After you left I got Pittsburgh, Detroit, Buffalo, Chicago, Des Moines, etc." S. O. S.

Accountant J. W. Kathman is an enthusiastic reader of the Literary Digest, and it aggravates him if some one should accidentally pick up his copy and forget to return it.

Our district engineer has joined the colony of radio enthusiasts. Who'd a thunk'd it? He is now taking instructions in hook-ups.

Should any of the organization require legal advice, they might confer with F. W. Klein, who is now a student of Commercial Law.

Does anyone know of any celebrities from Middletown, Ohio? If so, speak quickly. "Tad" Jones comes from Ex-cello, not Middletown.

Office of General Baggage and Milk Agent

Correspondent, MABEL L. MENGES

"What I Saw"

Our Editor rushing breathlessly into this office all the way back from Relay, for a tag which he forgot to stop for at Camden Station. Judging from his breathless condition, he must have considerably out-distanced the Marathon runners and no doubt returned in time to meet the winners coming into Baltimore.

O. P. Green and Guy Fain, the former train baggagemen, St. Louis Division, and latter of the Toledo Division, recently paid us a friendly but hurried call. We hope the rest of our western friends will remember to call on us when they are in the home city.

Several years ago, the Western Association of General Baggage Agents started a "Right-Way" campaign to arouse interest among the baggagemen—as the name would suggest—in the right handling of baggage.

They have been holding meetings at the principal terminals in different sections of the west so as to make it convenient for everyone to attend. All Baggage Department or other interested employes are invited to attend the meetings, suggest subjects and participate in the discussions.

The benefits derived from personal contact and the interest aroused have been worth the effort.

The last meeting was held at St. Louis, March 20, and as this Company's men were invited we know that the Baltimore and Ohio was well represented.

This Department has lost a good friend in the death of C. D. Honodle, ticket agent, Akron, Ohio, on February 10. While Mr. Honodle was not connected with this department, he always responded promptly and cheerfully to any request made of him.

His cheerful disposition and readiness to serve not only the Company, but the public at large, won for him a host of friends who will miss him.

Mr. Honodle and Mr. Dugan have long been friends, and whenever Mr. Honodle had occasion to be in Baltimore he always made it a point to call at this office.

Office of General Freight Claim Agent

Correspondent, NORMA H. APPLEGARTHE

We extend our sympathy to Foreman Samuel Lewis, handling Refused and Unclaimed Freight at Camden Station, who recently lost his wife.

Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?

I mean K-E-Double L-Y, Kelly with his wonderful smile. Your correspondent pleads guilty of overlooking Mr. Kelly as one of the comedians taking part in our Christmas entertainment. It was not intentional, neither has the size of Mr. Kelly anything to do with it; I am sorry to be the cause of so much "spoofing." As a sweet singer of darkey melodies Mr. Kelly is hard to beat, and while he might not be so tall or heavy as some of the other minstrels, I don't believe any of them had anything on KELLY.

crossing the street and an auto backed against her; thinking it was somebody she knew, she tried in vain to push him out of the way. "Jan" was surprised when the object did not move and lo, when she turned and saw an auto she played "quits" and quietly removed her 98 pounds.

Are you a grouch? If so, take a tip from LeRoy Konig and learn to smile. Follow him to the telephone booth on the first floor at lunch time (any day he's there) and watch the effect produced over the wire. She must be a "peach" to be able to produce the varieties of smiles. A smile is what makes life worth while, so let's put aside the grouch and smile. A man with a smile is a man worth while—and the same holds good with a girl.

On a recent Saturday afternoon our Sidney was seen towing a competitor's passenger into Camden Station for New York. Good work!

Women usually get the blame for everything good, bad and indifferent—but Mr. Olson blames prohibition for his sprained ankle (his wife at the time was in Cincinnati). We are glad to have him back.

Assistant Chief Clerk Bittner, head of the Reconsignment and Diversion Division, has returned after a serious illness. We trust he will reconsign his troubles to someone in Hong Kong.

Relief Department

Correspondent, H. IRVING MARTIN

We present the shining morning face of Margaret E. Mitchell, daughter of File Clerk H. T. Mitchell, Relief Feature. Margaret, although only thirteen years are recorded to her credit, is no light and shadowy youngster, but a well-muscled person of 140 pounds. She looks as though she is fit to take care of any emergency that may confront the basketball team, or come out first after tackling some knotty problems in algebra, arithmetic or geometry. A good sample of healthy American girlhood. She is enrolled as a seventh grade student at Saint Andrew's School, Monument and Washington Streets, Baltimore.

Our last look at Baker Tall, also of the file desk, showed Baker ornamented with a strip of adhesive plaster across the bridge of his nose. Baker hadn't been "knocked out," but had passed through the hands of Dr. Edward A. Looper and undergone an operation for the removal of a tear duct, thus correcting a condition that had been very troublesome for many months. Baker hereafter, like the American Indian, must accept pain with stoical indifference, being without the power to shed tears. He says he doesn't need tears anyway, so what's the difference if he is shy a tear duct?

We have had more than our usual share of illness this season. Miss Meyers has signed off at the hospital and is back at her desk, just as ready to eat up work as she was before she joined the "Hospital Club." All others who were laid up for shorter periods are again on the job except "Web" Erdman, who expects to be with us on April 1. "Web" has been one of our healthiest specimens, losing but little time during his twenty years of service. We hope that his enforced absence will soon terminate and that he will stage a come-back in 100% condition.

We join in congratulating George Harlan, general freight agent, Philadelphia, in securing second place for the article submitted by him in the recent contest on traffic solicitation. The treatise appeared in the February MAGAZINE, and careful reading and analysis shows the reason for his success and many promotions since the days when he was an efficient junior clerk in the Relief Department.

Now that the bowling season is nearly over, congratulations are in order to the boys representing the Relief Department, namely, H. C. Shakespeare (Captain), H. G. Shakespeare, J. L. Brooks, C. L. Smith, T. P. Scott, J. R. Graham, D. J. Shivers, A. F. Owens, H. B. Tall and A. E. Frankton. A glance at our standing in the league will show the vast improvement over last year and the Relief Department team should be a top-notch next season. All the boys deserve credit, but it is fitting to cite the exceptional work done by our captain and his brother, better known as the two "Shakes." More power to them and the good right arms of the others in the season to come.

Arrangements have been made for match games with several well-known teams around town and, confident of the outcome, we press on to victory.

Printing Department

Correspondent, H. TOFT

We thank Compositor Humrichouse for his assistance in compiling notes for this issue.

Compositor Spicknall has been absent because of illness; Compositor Dotterweich and Keyboard Operator Pauline Humrichouse have been absent because of the severe illness of their "little sunbeams," whose photographs appeared in our last issue.

When you want the afternoon off and you are too timid to approach the foreman, we advise that you see Compositor Adler, who recently penned the following:

My dear Mr. Frye:

While the spirit is willing, the flesh is weak—

My bones do ache and tired my feet;

My hands lack touch; my memory gone;

Please you, kind sir, may I go home?

C. ADLER

He got results!

Even the enchanted walls of the Garden of Eden were not sufficient to guard a woman's secret. And even our own Miss Minnie Clifford, Press Department, who on November 17 was married at Washington, D. C., to Dr. John J. Varga, Bridgeport, Conn., returned to her duties of press-feeding, believing in her heart that she was harboring a most precious secret. However, as each new day came and went, this little secret could no longer hide itself from view; so Miss Minnie let the fluttering secret fly to the ears of her comrades, then to others, until it became a bit of news, and congratulations were forthcoming. Her friends then showered upon her many tokens of the occasion.

And now, since all has been said and done, Miss Minnie has heard the call:

"O, come with me to the happy isle,

In the golden haze off yonder,

Where the song of the sun-kissed breeze beguiles,

And the ocean loves to wander."

And alas, it was too much for a feminine heart to bear, and she decided on February 16 to bid farewell to her friends of the Printing Office and to join her husband in Chicago, their future home. We all join in congratulating the happy couple. May the cradle of life that rocks the binding ties sing for them one long and continuous lullaby.

The spring thaw is working on baseball "bugs" in our department. A baseball team has been organized, with the following officers: E. H. Otto, manager; S. D. Bowers, treasurer; D. S. Huber, secretary; E. A. Lowe, captain and coach.

With the talent we have we hope to be able to put a formidable nine on the diamond. One of our most promising candidates is "Cannon Ball" Boring, the Ex-Black Sox star, who batted close to .400 in the Alley League. General Unger says he can accept any position on the team, including mascot, but that position, as well as "Bat Boy," has been assigned to the elongated "Dick" Kosta. P. J. Burke will act as official scorekeeper, as well as look after the boys if any difficulties arise. He will be assisted by "Horatio" Alling. "Benny" Coburn will transport the team to the grounds, using a trailer attached to his Jewett. We will hold an oyster supper in "Tal" Mann's Dancing Academy, Hamilton, to improve our financial condition. The support of our readers is solicited. Our representative will call on you to distribute invitations. Some of our married men, while eligible for the team, are restrained from taking an active part because their better-halves refuse to allow them time to attend practices. Franton, who has had several years experience as a coach, will assist Mr. Lowe in whipping the team into shape.

Tie Inspector P. H. Fallen, while on an inspection trip, accompanied by General Tie Inspector Rowland, over the Charleston Division, met with a serious accident. After making an inspection of ties at Hyers, wishing to get back to Burnsville in order to make connection with train No. 61, Mr. Rowland and Mr. Fallen boarded a freight train; in stepping from the freight train to platform at Burnsville, Mr. Fallon's ankle turned throwing him to the ground. With Mr. Rowland's assistance, he was taken to Weston where an X-ray picture was made showing a fracture of the knee. He is improving but his accident has caused general regret as he is well liked by his fellow employees.

In the February MAGAZINE, three ladies in the Purchasing Department were named as being engaged. Miss Maudie Quigley says she has never been engaged. Your correspondent regrets the error.

Miss Fannie W. Carscaden, our genial scrap clerk, has resigned. The General Storekeeper's Office Force join in wishing her every success and happiness for the future. Karl H. Peltz, the office "Midget," has been promoted to position of scrap clerk and John Dietrich to requisition clerk.

J. V. Klier's sister, who on February 28 underwent what was thought to be a successful operation at the Woman's Hospital of Maryland, later contracted pneumonia and died on March 16. We extend our sincere sympathy to Mr. Klier and his family in their bereavement.

On February 27 the home of L. W. Porter, bridge pilot engineer, was visited by the stork, who presented him with a fine baby boy. Oh my! That was some segar! On March 6, A. B. Sheve received a similar visit and was presented with a fine baby boy. It seems that the boys are in order. Get your mouth set for another good Segar! Congratulations!

In a future issue you will see some drawings by Master Stephen Turner, young son of L. C. Turner, Valuation Department. If Stephen learns to draw as well as daddy can sing, he should be a real artist some day.

The number of radio fans in this department increases daily. It would seem that a great deal of interest should be centered in a Baltimore and Ohio Radio Club. We have a Veterans' Association, Accounting Association, Bowling League, Baseball League, various auxiliaries, now how 'bout a Radio Club? The benefit of the experiences of fellow employees should prove very worth while.

Office of Superintendent Telegraph

Correspondent, E. M. BRYAN

Words fail to express our surprise when William Seibel announced his intention of leaving. "Billy," how could you tear yourself away from winsome Miss Porter and fascinating Senorita Reum? Now that you are in your new environment, it remains only for us to extend our best wishes and to say that if your work is as satisfactory as it was here you will succeed.

Carroll Pinkney White Myerly is breaking through the walls of China. Oo-la-la! He plays Mah-Jong! And when the four winds of the earth blow in the four seasons of the year, Carroll can be found in the late hours of the night rambling among the flowers, bamboo trees and dragons calling "pong" and "chow" until he captures Mah-Jong.

We are pleased to introduce Harry Sisselberger, a bright young man, who very tactfully and cheerfully takes care of all our needs.

Often during the course of your travels over the System, or even in the performance of your daily duties, an idea may occur to you, which if carried out, would result in the betterment of our service. If you have any suggestions, don't hesitate to send them to the "Suggestion Box" of the MAGAZINE. Possibly your suggestion is the very one the Baltimore and Ohio is looking for.

Those who did not take luncheon in the Camden Dining Room March 13 have something to regret. It is pleasing to learn that the superintendent of telegraph is rapidly convalescing from his recent illness, his appetite is good and his avoirdupois increasing to such an extent that his weight broke the leaf off the table. The embarrassment was bad enough, but it nearly broke the big toe of his right foot!

We thought Mr. Donnelly would be on a soft diet and light food for a while, but we see he lost no time in getting his second set of purchased teeth. They are very becoming and make his cheeks round and plump.

District Freight Office, Baltimore

The local traffic manager, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, Baltimore, has written us as follows:

"My attention has been called to the very efficient way you handled the carload of wheels consigned to us from Akron. * * * We highly appreciate this excellent service and personal interest you have taken in connection with it."

We are glad to bring this to the attention of our Operating Department friends through the MAGAZINE.

hope to have their photos for a subsequent issue. These men are scattered all over the system and although we communicate with them regularly, we seldom see them. All of them would like you to feel that in pointing out errors in car handling, they want to help you and are not trying to "get something on you." They will always be glad to answer questions or explain any instructions that may not be fully understood. The interest in our column should also be increased materially as they have promised to contribute items of interest picked up in their travels.

I am not a stenographer, but I could not help marking the following passage while reading the autobiography of Edward Bok, who has recently donated so much of his time and money to the furtherance of universal peace:

"It is neither just nor considerate to a conscientious stenographer for an employer to delay his dictation until the end of the day's work, when, merely by judicious management of his affairs and time, he can give his dictation directly after opening his morning mail. There are two sides to every question; but sometimes the side of the stenographer is not kept in mind by the employer."

It isn't exactly ego, but I suppose most of us feel that everything in this country is far superior to anything similar in any other land. You will probably be as much surprised as I was to hear that there are some "crack" trains on the other side of the ocean. Special reference was made to a railroad in Sweden, one-third of which is owned by the State and two-thirds by private interests. Part of this road is electrified and the sleeping and dining car service is said to be excellent.

Mr. Fellows has answered our call in the February MAGAZINE. He has been hibernating at St. Petersburg, Fla., and reports that life down there is real. I have asked him to become our "Special Traveling Correspondent." Surely no one loves to travel more than he, and we should be both entertained and enlightened by an occasional word from him. Here's hoping that he will be a regular contributor to our column.

When someone calls on your 'phone in error, do you merely say "Wrong number" and hang up, or do you ask the operator to try to get the desired party? That is a part of our service.

The heavy snowstorm on the night of February 19 played havoc with the operation of our railroad. Incidentally, it gave us an opportunity to play the role of Good Neighbor, and it is interesting to note that the radio was involved. A station at Pittsburgh broadcasted a message to the effect that the conductor of a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train wanted to get into communication with the dispatcher at Altoona about some trouble he was having with his baggage car. One of our radio fans picked this up and 'phoned it to Mr. Syze, night assistant to general superintendent transportation, who in turn gave it to the chief dispatcher of the Pennsylvania at Union Station, who thanked him and said he would get it to Altoona at once. Not to be outdone, however, the General Superintendent's Office of the Pennsylvania at Wilmington called our office on the 'phone about 10 p. m. stating that they had just heard a radio message from Pittsburgh to the effect that the Baltimore and Ohio superintendent at Pittsburgh wanted the Baltimore and Ohio superintendent at Connellsville to come in on Western Union wire. This was 'phoned to Cumberland at once in an effort to get it to Connellsville by train wire, but before it could be done the Western Union wire "went up."

You need not become discouraged or even seriously concerned over the fact that you are not a college man or woman. Higher education is a great asset, but some of our foremost citizens are men and women who left the little red schoolhouse in their early years and graduated later from that wonderful "University of Experience."

Our sick are all back in the fold except Roy Mansfield, Harry Sherry, Clifton Wilson and Howard Bramble. We wish them a speedy recovery.

I was amazed the other day to hear an expert say that from a long and careful study it is estimated that the average business letter costs seventy-two cents. I am sure that this does not apply to a corporation such as ours, but even if it is true when taking all classes of business into consideration it makes you sit up and take notice. I was also informed that it is estimated that nine-tenths of all business is transacted by letter and that 95 per cent. of all vacancies are filled directly or indirectly by letter. If these facts are true (and I have every reason to believe that they are) the success of those in offices depends, in a large measure, upon our ability to write an intelligent letter. Have you ever thought of the number of people with whom we correspond for years and years and never have an opportunity to meet face to face? The letter goes out to this vast number under the signature of the head of the department and opinions of him and of the policy of the railroad are formed by the impression created by our letters. You have probably noticed in looking over your mail in the morning that there is often one letter that you will pick out of the pile and handle first or to which you will give special attention. Why is this? It may not necessarily be because it comes from a high official or a big shipper, but its very construction and style demand immediate attention. Probably the chief fault in letter writing is not knowing when to stop. I am sure that you have often read a two-page letter that could have been written in less than one, and have had much more weight than the longer form. Get all the facts, say what you have to say, and stop. Courtesy, of course, is one of the first essentials, but let the other fellow feel that you know what you are talking about. From experience, I find that the long letter is often employed in an attempt to cover up ignorance of the real subject matter, by couching it in confusing and uncertain terms, and then again, some people just seem to have the unhappy faculty of hashing things over and over again.

In 1923, the railroads of the United States transported nearly 50,000,000 carloads of freight, excelling by 5,000,000 carloads the banner year of 1920.

The railroads put into service last year 3,750 new locomotives and 200,000 new freight cars, the second greatest number of locomotives and the greatest number of freight cars put into service in any year since 1907.

This new equipment, backed by higher standards of efficiency, made 1923's record of railroad service possible.

The foregoing welcome paragraphs are excerpts from an advertisement in a leading Magazine of the Country, inserted by The Consolidation Coal Company, March 13, 1924 issue, and headed "Our Railroads." This coal company congratulates the railroads of the United States upon their splendid service in the past twelve months. The Baltimore and Ohio, of course, has contributed greatly towards bringing about these results.

Some of our male bowlers might do well to follow the example of Miss Emina Ray, who recently put over three games of 107, 98 and 91.

The boy with the perfect knot in his tie has been discovered. "Al" Lehman has tied his tie the same way for the past ten years. If it were not for the fact that the color changes once in a while, we would say he always wears the same one. (Note: Maybe he hooks it in the back—Aunt Mary.)

"To play on the fire, turn upside down." This is not to be taken literally. Merely instructions on fire extinguishers.

The accompanying photograph is of "The Jazz Buddies," whose solo cornet player is none other than Roland Pumphrey, of this office. We are told these boys have broadcasted several times over W-E-A-R and the possibilities are that some of our friends at distant points on the System have listened in on their concerts.

During February, Miss Elsie E. Heiderich, secretary to chief clerk, spent her vacation in the Sunny South. Miami, Palm Beach, St. Augustine, Orlando, Jacksonville and other points of interest in Florida were visited, and while we were bundled up in overcoats and furs this young lady was basking in warm sunshine, enjoying summer breezes. The photograph of Miss Heiderich was taken on the sea wall at Palm Beach. Is she trying to hear what the sad sea waves are saying?

February 27. Still on its winning way, Capitol Limited grabbed a pair from Head Lights, while Pull Men lost two. This gives the leaders a three-game margin. Capitol Limited set a new season record for three games with a 1,160 mark.

March 5. With only six more games to go, Capitol Limited practically clinched the lead for the office championship. With a six-game lead over Pull Men, it appears to be all over but the shouting. High total for three games was smashed twice; first Head Lights rolled a 1,169 score but this was overshadowed by Capitol Limited who put over three games of 379, 426 and 397 for a 1,202 count. The 426 game is also a season mark.

Some freak scores and performances have been pulled; several "Brown Derbies" distributed during the current season, but the C. C. gets the celluloid frying pan for perfect control; rolling on No. 4 alley, he sent a ball crashing down No. 3 alley.

It was a big event for this office when the M. C. B. Bureau moved to its new location, on February 16, on the third floor of the new office building at Mt. Clare. The move was made primarily to provide the necessary space to develop some new ideas in foreign car repair billing which, it is expected, will result in economy in handling this business. The bureau is ideally located for its purposes in a large, well-lighted and ventilated room and with facilities close at hand for the personnel to keep thoroughly posted on the makeup of freight cars. Livingston Martin is in charge of the bureau and is ably assisted by Henry Sparrow and John Whelan. Mr. Pryor expects to get considerable exercise from the frequent trips he will make between the Baltimore and Ohio Building and Mt. Clare in order to keep in thorough touch with the new arrangement. The space vacated here affords the remaining clerks additional space.

The Misses Emilie Tripp and Selma Herzog, Pay Roll Bureau, are back from their wonderful trip to Cuba. They were to stop at Miami on the return trip but they found Havana so alluring that they spent all their time there and returned direct. From the accompanying picture we can readily understand why Cuba was so "interesting." The girls advise everyone to see Cuba.

We are glad to see Miss Irene Hulse back at her desk in the Pay Roll Bureau after successfully nursing her mother through a severe case of pneumonia.

The bowling team, Pay Roll Bureau, was going strong until Mr. Thomas, our head clerk, sprained his ankle. It appears that he tried to knock himself down instead of the pins.

A surprise party was given to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gerber at the home of Mrs. Lottie Fuller, Irvington, on February 27, in honor of the bride who, until January 15, was Miss Marie Hohman, Coupon Bureau. After a social hour, during which the bride and groom were showered with congratulations and good wishes, they were escorted to a heavily-laden table by Mr. Purnell Leatherberry and Miss Aubrey Silance. After the wedding cake had been cut, a beautiful silver carving set was presented to the bride by her office friends.

We hope that Rae and Sigmund will always be happy and as much "At Home" as they were that night.

We also extend sympathy to Joseph Heine in the death of his father.

You've seen the business-getting card in each issue of the MAGAZINE. You know that bothersome little card that slips out every time you open the book. Well, here's a dandy way to get it out of the way. On the day the MAGAZINE reaches you, fill out the card and put it in "Outbound Mail" and our follow-up sharks will do the rest. Have you ever ridden the Gallop'n' Goose which traverses Morgan County? It takes you where you're going just the same. Among its passengers on Washington's Birthday were F. E. Benzinger, G. Westerfield, Henry Gardner and G. W. Helm, who took to the fresh air on Capon Mountain, from whose summit one of the finest views in America may be had. On this particular day everything was snow clad. What cared these boys for the clear cold as long as the wind did not blow? On arrival at Great Cacapon we called on Agent Brown to borrow some of his heat until train time. We noticed the neat, thrifty, businesslike atmosphere that exists at Mr. Brown's place. Posters are about for the benefit of employees and the traveling public. Such subjects as Fire Prevention (Forests, Company), Relief Department, Savings Feature, the ever-popular Washington, D. C., tour (T.P.A.H.K. please note), and many other things, show that the agent is alive to the spirit of the times.

Finn took a trip to the House of Correction on March 4, 1924. They were shown the various tasks that are assigned to the prisoners in the institution. The assistant warden, Mr. Dulaney, was very courteous and kind in pointing out to them the various things of interest.

They have a clothing factory, shirt factory, wire factory and handkerchief factory, in which the inmates of the institution are assigned various tasks to perform and for which they receive a stipulated amount of money for their services. Men or women committed to the institution who have dependants on the outside allot a certain amount of their money to be sent home to these dependants. These amounts are kept by the general bookkeeper and checks are made out payable to these dependents.

With his desk gayly-bedecked with garlands of flowers on the morning of March 8, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of his service in the Baltimore and Ohio, we come to pay homage and reverence to one of our veteran clerks, A. Frye Bayley, who entered the service at Camden Station on March 9, 1874.

On the afternoon of March 8 an aggregation assembled on the sixth floor Annex Building to make manifest the above event (the same day of the big Laurel to Baltimore Marathon event). Mr. Rittenhouse presented Mr. O'Malley. Mr. O'Malley stated that he had known Mr. Bayley intimately for over half of the period of his activities with the Baltimore and Ohio; he could speak of his good qualities since he and Mr. Bayley had worked together some twenty-three years ago as rate checkers. Mr. O'Malley presented, on behalf of the force, a purse containing one hundred dollars in gold. A rocking chair also was sent to his home as a further remembrance, purchased with the residue of the contribution.

The next speaker was Mr. Ekin, who spoke of the gigantic strides in commerce and transportation and the evolution of the Baltimore and Ohio into the great factor of transportation that it is today, and which, surely, Mr. Bayley has witnessed with pride. Mr. Ekin stated that, as comptroller, he knows of Mr. Bayley's record and that he was pleased to be present. On behalf of the management Mr. Ekin presented Mr. Bayley something with a flannel covering. "Gold," someone to my right said. Well, we'll look and see. Yes, it's gold. Then everybody said "Speech, Mr. Bayley!" With all this fettering, who wouldn't have a lump in his throat and be at a loss for words? Anyway, Mr. Bayley stated his appreciation. Again we wish him many years of usefulness.

Among the official family present were: Comptroller J. J. Ekin, Assistant Comptrollers J. P. O'Malley, F. A. Deverell, W. D. Owens; Auditor Merchandise Receipts, W. E. Rittenhouse; Assistant Auditors Merchandise Receipts N. F. Davis, H. S. Mac-cubbin; Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts L. A. Lambert; Assistant Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts Walter Dudderar; Auditor Passenger Receipts C. H. Poumairat, and employees from other departments as well as our own organization.

Your correspondent might add that sometime ago Mr. Bayley stated he had known me before I had known him, he having been a friend of my father's when I was a tot; then, too, his daughter was a classmate of my helpmate. Again we wish our veteran employe well on his journey.

We are glad to have Miss Lillian Timm and Harry Stidham with us after extended sick leave.

Last month, in these notes, we had some fun at the expense of Miss Margaret O'Leary. The joke is on us. She did have enough courage to have it bobbed and we apologize.

Your correspondent is missing many items of good news. If you know of anything interesting in the office, pass it along. It will be appreciated.

Are you doing anything to secure business for our Company? Keep yourself posted on the time of departure of our through trains or carry one of the condensed schedules. This information is often instrumental in obtaining passengers. The writer recently had the pleasure of routing two passengers to New York on our Train 524, and received a letter from them a few days later praising the Baltimore and Ohio, mentioning particularly the dining car service on the "Martha Washington." Your friends will thank you for your advice after using the Baltimore and Ohio.

A proud and happy man! Tug Dispatcher W. Wilkins is back at his desk after a mysterious absence of several days. He was still mysterious when he returned. After exciting our curiosity for about two hours, he announced the safe arrival of Lucille May on March 4. Congratulations were showered on him and he became complacent. Experienced "papas" say he will recover. Mrs. Wilkins is growing stronger and our cynics say "Bill" will too, from the night walking tours he will soon take!

Anna Elizabeth Marshall, East Bound Department, has had her red hair bobbed. I dare not comment—because friend wife, whose hair is the same shade, also had hers bobbed; but they must have been done by different "bobbbers."

Harrison Lodge No. 783, B. of R. C. held its annual banquet on March 1 at Healy's Golden Glades, New York. All members of this lodge are employees of the

Margaret Shirley, four-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Clarke. Mrs. Clarke was formerly Miss Shirley Vane, and was employed in Auditor Passenger Receipts Office

The following letter was addressed to President Willard by the Indian Refining Company. We are glad to know that our services were satisfactory and appreciated:

"In the forwarding of our office furniture, records, etc., by freight, your Mr. W. F. Richardson, freight traffic manager, and his assistants, were of much help to us and their efforts were ably seconded by the local freight office and operating forces at your Twenty-Sixth Street Station.

"In transferring the personnel, we are indebted to Mr. J. B. Scott, general eastern passenger agent, and Mr. E. J. O'Hearn, city passenger agent, for their efforts to provide in every way possible for the comfort and convenience of our people.

"We are not unmindful of the help we have received in this very trying situation and desire to express to you and through you to your assistants, the appreciation of our Company, our personnel and the writer personally, of the efforts made to provide 100% efficiency and service."

Allow us to introduce our "Jerry on the job" at this station. He is a prodigy, who is a perfect little gentleman; he is exceedingly obliging and an interesting career is predicted for "Johnny." Oh well, now that you know his first name, he is Johnny Connors, our messenger. He is always smiling in his spare time, that is, when he is not reading Frank Merriwell novels.

Any noon hour we expect to see Johnny make a drop kick over the Brooklyn Bridge or pitch a curve ball the length of Pearl Street.

As a reminder to those who may have forgotten, and for the benefit of those who do not know, we have a large and commodious warehouse at 26th Street under the supervision of Edwin Morton, who is always glad to show visitors through the warehouse in order that they may be familiar with it. He is always glad to handle new business.

Staten Island Lines

Correspondent, G. J. GOOLIC

To Employees of the Staten Island Lines:

Superintendent M. L. McElheny held a meeting of correspondents of the New York Terminal and Staten Island Lines, at his office on March 5, and a campaign has been launched with a view of making the Staten Island and New York notes more interesting and educational.

J. V. Costello, P. L. Santoro, Frank Rebham, W. P. Slattery, P. J. Dever and "Ben" Davis were appointed assistant correspondents. We have before us the task of putting Staten Island on the map, via the Publicity and Educational Route, which is interesting and pleasant work.

We would like to have each one share this pleasure with us. You can do so by giving your hearty cooperation in furnishing suitable and interesting material for the MAGAZINE and we appoint each one of you, a member of our staff. We know you will do your utmost to send the best material or pictures you can get. If not, if you have some suggestion or articles for the MAGAZINE send them to any of the assistants or direct to the correspondent and it will be appreciated.

A few suggestions are:

Facts concerning service given some of our large shippers,

Extraordinary performances of our large shippers or consignees,

Pictures of parts of our Railroad that show conditions, facilities, etc., that may be interesting and educational to employees on the Baltimore and Ohio Main Line who have never been to Staten Island or New York.

If an article or picture that you may send in is not printed, do not be disappointed or discouraged but continue your efforts. Sometimes lack of space will not permit everything to be printed that is sent in. Be sure that all pictures are good and clear.

As you get your articles or pictures send them in promptly, and we will try to have them inserted in an early issue.

Remember, your cooperation will play a big part in making this campaign a success.

There will be placed, in the near future, a MAGAZINE note box at the Station Master's Office, St. George and one at Clifton Shops. Items will be picked up from these boxes a few days before the notes are written and sent to the MAGAZINE. If you cannot mail your notes or pictures to the correspondent or assistants drop them in to the boxes.

The accompanying picture is of General Foreman B. J. Devins, Arlington. "Barney" as he is known, entered the service October 10, 1916 as foreman. On June 1, 1917, he was made general foreman in charge of the construction of new yard, Arlington, S. I.

Another picture is of "Dan" Carney, tinsmith helper, Maintenance of Way Department. "Dan" entered the service on December 15, 1915. He was instrumental in making our recent minstrel show at the Staten Island Railroad Club, a decided success. He is a little man with a big voice.

"Jim Henry Sez"

Empty vessels make the greatest sound, likewise empty heads.

Watch the man with a hard luck story; he has an axe to grind.

Some fellows think they are unfortunate when they are caught doing wrong; then the boss is accused of unfairness. Why not try to be on the level, then our misfortunes will disappear.

"Oom" Paul Egeler, clerk, Tariff Bureau, has taken us into his confidence. Every morning he walks from West Brighton to St. George to work up an appetite and then he waits around the ticket booth at St.

Miniatures at Pier 22, North River, N. Y.

George to take the agent to lunch; somehow his courage fails him when the time comes to make his request. Paul asks what he can do for his nerves. We suggested Moxie but Paul tried that. Someone suggested Nervura but that costs too much for Paul, so we finally decided that he ask Pecorara for a prescription for some Roscbank Red Ink. Now for results!

Something happened to Leonhardi's messenger boy. He told the Missus that Leonhardi was crossing down at the Elk's Club February 2 and then the fun began. But he squared himself; all the boys were at the testimonial dinner to Mr. Hamner, so everything is O. K. in Great Kills now.

Speaking of Great Kills, some of the boys are spending considerable time at the Station these nights. Must be some attraction there. "Page 'Clet' Butler."

"Bill" Slattery has been singing so much that he is suffering from a sore throat. We sympathize with him.

Wonder if Groeling told his Sunday School class the story of Cleopatra and the water fall. He took notes as the deacon told the story.

What did "Joe" Fannella do with the chicken at the Elk's Club on February 2.

Some of the boys' eyes opened when they served "White Rock" but they were disappointed when the found out it was only water.

Dryden missed his vocation. He should have been a minister. Did you see his pose when he was called upon to speak? That boy has talent. He ought to amount to something when he grows up!

Our Veterans

The regular monthly meeting of the Staten Island Veterans and Ladies' Auxiliary was held at the Staten Island Railroad Club Rooms on February 29 at 8.45 p. m.

In 1923, thirty-five new members were initiated. At this meeting Engineer George Hartman and Conductor Thomas Meyers were voted in as members.

It seems that we cannot keep Mr. Kelly's name out of the MAGAZINE. He is the live-wire of the Veterans' Association and at this meeting he gave them a nice talk. The subjects were "derailments and injuries to persons," and "handling of freight and waste of material."

Mr. Lewis, of Staten Island, expected to be present to talk to the Veterans about the new hotel which is coming to Staten Island but he failed to show up. The Veterans were disappointed; they are interested in this proposition.

Mr. Kelly said that on February 28, four hundred and twenty-six cars were floated from St. George, the best record in the history of the New York Lines.

A committee was appointed for a dinner which will be held in the near future. The following will be in charge of arrangements: B. F. Kelly, chairman; Arrangement Committee; Dr. F. DeRevere, Owen Boylan, J. B. Sharp, J. E. Romer and F. Pierce.

A bowling team has been organized by W. Becker, clerk in Office of Agent, Locust Point, composed of employees of this station who are willing to try their skill with any team on the Baltimore Division.

The agents have been making a fine showing, for example: February 21—Superintendents Office, 1537; Agents, Locust Point, 1411. February 26—Agents, Camden Station, 1416; Agents, Locust Point, 1473. ### "Who's Who"

There is one, not unknown to fame,
We can truly say he knows a claim;
And always "dops" out who's to blame,
'Tis "Cappy" Brower.

He has worked them out for many years,
Regarding not the culprit's tears;
He does his duty and no one fears,
Does "Cappy" Brower.

And when at last arrives death's claim,
"Cap's" record shows he fears no shame,
And clearly proves he's played the game,
Has "Cappy" Brower.

Safety First

Our friend "Bill" Brown, just off the ship,
Decided life the boys would slip,
And with his "flivver" take a trip,
To pass the time away.

So "Bill" rode on as in a trance,
Rails tried to cross, without a glance.
The train was due! He took a chance
And now "Bill's" passed away.

So let this thought with you remain,
A minute lost may your life gain.
Watch railroad tracks, both branch and main,
Or you will go "Bill's" way.

G. A. Abbott, Locust Point

Miss Loretta Margaret Handly and John T. Canty, Police Department, Locust Point, were married recently at St. Ann's Catholic Church by the Rev. John F. Leary. A wedding dinner was served following the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Handly of Baltimore. The groom was formerly a member of the crew that put into commission the Superdreadnaught Maryland.

Miss Marie Handly, sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid, while Richard Curley, a friend of the groom, was best man.

Here is a picture of George A. Abbott, whose service record shows 33 years. Up to the time of the fire on July 2, 1922, Mr. Abbott was foreman of Elevator "C." All who know him agree that he has been dependable, faithful and conscientious in the pursuit of his duty.

Miss Dorothy Gosnell, employed for the past 9 months in the Agent's Office, has been transferred to the Foreign Freight Office, Central Building. We congratulate the Foreign Freight folks on obtaining her services and wish her a bright and useful future.

Our readers will be interested to learn that the steamship Ostego, which sailed from this port on February 27, was formerly the Prince Eitel Frederick, the German raider during the World War. This will be her only trip to the coast where she will ply between Frisco and Alaska, under charter of her present owners, Libby, McNeil & Libby. Her agents from this port were the Norton Lilly Co.

At last, we are enabled to report an increase in the family of C. A. McBeth, clerk in the Agent's Office. On March 1, the stork left at his residence a fine baby boy. We hear the mother and baby are doing well and all wish him many happy returns. We suggest to him the Biblical instruction to "be not weary in well doing."

We have a little red box down here which has a sign on it—"First Aid Fund. If you can't talk without swearing, DONATE 5 cents." The first week we had it we made about $1.25, but since then the men have gotten so good they hardly say "Gosh" anymore.

We are very sorry to lose our A. R. A. clerk, Miss Cox, who has gone to Mt. Clare, but at the same time we extend our welcome to Miss Gaither from Bay View and hope she will remain with us—even if she does get lost coming to work!

The second annual oyster roast of Mt. Clare Welfare, Athletic and Pleasure Association, held on Washington's Birthday at Frederick Road Park, was voted a grand success by all members and their families who attended. The "eats" were delicious.

The Association is increasing its membership, and plans are being considered by officers and committeemen for a May Ball.

The baseball fans are beginning to wake from their winter slumbers. From the amount of enthusiasm shown it appears we will have even a better team this year than last.

Frank Eder, second shift, Welders' Gang, is the proud father of a bouncing boy. All the rest of the gang are anxiously awaiting the christening party.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. A. L. Hafner, wife of Albert Hafner, who underwent an operation several weeks ago, has returned to her home and is improving.

A few furloughed men have been recalled. We sincerely hope that it won't be long before we will recall all of them. We believe that in a month or so there will be a heavy demand for cars and locomotives.

The little daughter of Car Foreman and Mrs. A. H. Keys, Curtis Bay

Many railroad men, especially older ones, are backward about taking an interest in First Aid because they think that to secure knowledge of it they will have to study anatomy and other medical subjects, going back, they say, to the drudgery of school days.

There is no real foundation for such an idea, as without study of books one may become sufficiently expert to meet any ordinary emergency. Too much knowledge is apt to mislead the judgment and to tempt one into undertaking what should be left to the surgeon.

The chief need is good common sense. You will never be concerned with actual treatment of an injured person—that is the surgeon's job. What concerns you may be stated in three simple propositions:

1—To shield the injured man from needless suffering.

Baggage Master C. G. Flaherty, who was in the service about 40 years, and who died in April, 1921. His wife is an active member of the Ladies' Auxiliary and his daughter is married to Flagman H. A. Hergenroeder, Baltimore Division

2—To move him, when absolutely necessary, without increasing his injuries.

3—To do your best to save his life, when his life is threatened.

Cooperation is the pass word in the Car Department, because it secures these results:

1—More cars can be restored to service.

2—Better work can be performed.

3—Steady employment to all.

4—A greater saving for the Company.

5—Better working conditions.

6—Less furloughs.

So, boys, lets all cooperate and show what we can do.

Baltimore Division

For the month of February we again finished in first place in Freight Train Performance. This proves conclusively that it was not due to luck that we attained this lofty position in December and have held it each month since that time, with expectations of holding it forever. Although we are in this high position, as we should be, we are not "stuck-up" or anything like that, and we are willing to give the Cumberland Division a few pointers on how to hold second place for the balance of the year. We wouldn't like to see them drop back any farther than they are now.

Mrs. H. A. Hergenroeder, wife of Flagman and daughter of the late Baggage Master C. G. Flaherty, in the costume which won first prize at the Ladies' Auxiliary Mask Ball

This year's winter force on Tuscarora Section No. 40 on the Metropolitan Branch consists of a foreman and three men. This section has 5.1 miles of single track, .8 of a mile of branch line and 1.4 miles of side track. For several years the object has been to get this section in such shape that it could be carried in good condition through the winter months with a moderate section force and during 1923 this objective was reached through hard and earnest effort. It is noteworthy that this was accomplished with comparatively small forces, carrying out programmed work through six summer months. The program called for the laying of four track miles of new rail, cleaning three track miles of ballast, widening banks and dressing the entire section, dressing three miles to standard section, straightening up ballast shoulder and putting in orderly condition the tracks not standardized. This work was largely accomplished by a gang of 18 men under Section Foreman J. R. French, acting as extra gang foreman.

Cross sections of roadbed sections were determined by cutting cross channels and largely from this information the program for standardizing was worked up. It was found that ballast material beneath ties between rails had depressed the subgrade, causing it to rise under the ballast shoulder, and to correct this condition it was necessary to dig the ballast shoulder down until it was lower than the depressed roadbed under ties between rails. In some places the ballast shoulder and the top of slope of subgrade had to be dug down almost three feet below base of rail. This excavation then was filled with cinder to one foot four inches below base of rail, which was done to allow for about one inch settlement and also allow for surface and raise on clean ballast after roadbed shoulder had been widened and standardized.

The program has been very effective, and whereas, previous to the 1923-24 winter season, many complaints were received concerning the riding conditions on this section, this winter we have received none. Previously this section has had a force of from six to eight men and a foreman, supplemented occasionally by a small extra gang force.

Tuscarora Section No. 40 was the 1923 prize-winning section on the West End of the Baltimore Division, and a photo of a part of it and the gang which has been and is keeping it up to standard appears on these pages.

We extend to the family of Wm. C. Mackey, late passenger car foreman at 24th and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia, our sincere sympathy in their recent bereavement. Mr. Mackey entered the service of the Company on October 9, 1886 and during his long service made a host of friends. Those who have been associated with him for some time feel that they have indeed lost a true friend.

Our 24th and Chestnut Streets Passenger Station, Philadelphia, is rapidly taking on the aspect of a real up-to-date station now that we have new floors in the waiting rooms, ticket office and Station Master's Office, and a real barber shop always ready for business. Night Station Master "Smoke" Miles and Clerk "Dick" Curren are the "Sheiks" of the station—all of the ladies love to ask them questions about the trains.

Miss M. Elizabeth Bell, General Superintendent's Office, Camden Station, in the costume she wore at the Ladies' Auxiliary Mask Ball

One sees many queer things at the station in the course of a day's work, such as John Rupp and his inevitable pipe, "Joe" Messenger with his pockets full of A. & P. orders, "Jockey" Hayes and his annual pass, Conductor "Al" Ritchie and his trick coat, Dill and his straw hat, "Kid" Miller and his cuspidor and Honorable "Joe" Fisher in his full dress.

"Kitty" Boyle, our sweet young relief telephone operator, was hostess at a Leap Year Party on March 3, but as yet we have been unable to ascertain the extent of the damage done. This is an awful year for us single fellows—what protection have we from the female of the species?

It is supposed to be a known fact that a woman can't keep a secret, but we have evidence to the contrary. On September 22, 1923 Miss Elizabeth Steele, Road Foreman of Engines "Pop" Sentman's secretary, became Mrs. W. H. White. A few days ago she broadcasted the news and now "Pop" is looking for another secretary.

Division Operator Hartman has been stung by the bug which causes wives to leave home. Says he has been trying to get Cuba—for what reason we can't say, if he was going to Cuba that would be a different story.

Prize Winning Tuscarora Section No. 40, West End, Baltimore Division. Foreman J. R. French, with level, J. N. Barnhouse, M. O. Barnhouse and M. O. Haines

Owing to the death of Mr. Mackey, John Gill has been appointed assistant day car foreman and J. J. Hodges, Martinsburg, night car foreman. Our best to them.

In an issue of the MAGAZINE several months ago an article was published complimenting a Baltimore and Ohio fireman for using a single shovel for five months. C. R. R. of N. J. Engineer Hance, running Baltimore and Ohio No. 20 from Philadelphia to Jersey City, advises that his fireman has used one shovel since April 1, 1923, almost a year, making 4200 miles each month, and the shovel still has a straight edge. Can't a Baltimore and Ohio fireman beat this record?

The agents on the East End certainly are cutting up. Agent W. I. Barron, Havre de Grace, took a two months' vacation in Florida, returning to the north with the birds. Agent Gatchell, Joppa, has become a Benedict. Yep, he has a better-half now. Congratulations, Russ!

On January 17, Extra 4614 east, in charge of Conductor H. B. McNeal and Engineer J. J. Scanlon, left Brunswick at 11.50 p. m. with 120 loads and arrived at Locust Point at 7.30 a. m., January 18. Trainmaster Stringer at Riverside says that this was the largest train ever handled into Locust Point Yard. Another record for 1924!

On February 28 Conductor T. A. Ross and Engineer R. R. McClelland with Extra 4617, left Brunswick at 8.30 a. m. and passed Halethorpe at 12.13 p. m., handling 104 loads, 7253 tons. They were called for duty at Brunswick at 7.20 and 7.40 a. m. This may not be a record performance but it is a run which will not be forgotten for a long time.

Chief Dispatcher Ralph Powell has been seen viewing the displays of fishing tackle in the windows of sporting goods shops. He knows the difference between a spoon and a fly, has leased a shore and expects to catch some fish. Whether it is because he thinks he will have luck or not, he as recently joined "Moon Mullin's 'Order of the Fish.'"

From all reports Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Machin are getting acquainted with Baltimore and are beginning to like our old town. Stick around, Charlie, the longer you stay the better she'll get.

"Governor Al" Smith will be able to close up his "Bachelor Hall" now that Mrs. Smith has returned home after spending two weeks in the South Baltimore General Hospital.

We extend our sympathy to Miss Ruth Grimes and her family in the death of her brother.

The late Edward Crabtree, who was for many years operator at Green Spring, W. Va., used to relate the following:

"A passenger arriving on the Romney Branch train one day bought a ticket to Cumberland, Md. He was very nervous and excited and the news that the Cumberland accommodation was twenty minutes late only increased his anxiety. 'I'm in an awful hurry,' he said, 'how far is it to the next stop?' He was told it was about two and a half miles. 'Do you think,' said he, 'if I hurried I could walk there before the train overtook me? I'm in an awful hurry and I'd be that far on my way.'"

Our cartoonist has tried to portray in his cartoon of Division Operator Hurlock, the deep thought expressed on that gentleman's face a few days ago at dinner time when he was trying to decide whether to turn to the front page of his newspaper and read about the oil scandal, or turn to the back page and read about the murders. By the time this deep thinking was over it was too late to read the paper.

Mrs. Earnest Frazier, nee Miss Florence Wortman. See Wilsmere notes

W. H. (Jack) Tarr—the checker champion of Camden Station, is looking for opponents. "Jack" warns us that he uses what he calls "science."

Assistant Road Foreman of Engines G. D. (Barney) Coleman rode uptown in a street car a few days ago and when he got off the conductor closed the door and started the car—as usual—but—Barney's coat happened to be caught in the car door, and caught in such a way that he couldn't take it off. Barney says he was able to keep up with the car until the next stop, but that if the next stop had been half a block farther he would have failed for steam. We feel that if Barney had saved his breath for running and had not so profusely blessed the conductor, he would have been able to go two blocks.

Dispatcher "Ham" Hambleton says he can't keep his mind on his work and women too, and has decided to grow his "woman chaser." "Ham" has one of the finest goatees you ever saw.

Sickness does awful things to some people. Operator G. L. Kauffman was off sick for two or three days. Previous to going off Kauffman had a cute little "Charlie-Chaplin" moustache—when he came back he had a clean face. Wonder what happened?

Wilsmere, Del.

Correspondent, C. W. BAILEY

On February 16, because of a derailment, it was necessary to detour a Wilson stock train via the P. R. R. and West Yard. The train consisted of 77 cars live stock. It was handled at West Yard by General Yardmaster Murphey and Conductor W. C. Schemm, the latter being in charge of movement from Baltimore. Both these men showed real Baltimore and Ohio spirit in the handling of this stock, "Not because they were obliged to do so, but because they felt it was to the interest of their company," and we know their efforts were appreciated. The train arrived at West Yard 1.50 a.m. and cleared at 2.25 a.m., which might be called an unbeatable record. Many employees of our competitors looked in amazement at this fine train.

On February 19—the day of the heavy snow storm—all track men available were pressed into service to keep our passenger and freight trains moving. They were busy keeping switches cleared of snow, etc. The Best and Only again showed their thoughtfulness for employees, who were not only serving their company, but the traveling public also, by serving sandwiches and hot coffee to the men who had to brave the cutting winds and the driving snow of open country.

Yard Clerk Burrows has proved that he does not think of the Baltimore and Ohio only when he is called out of bed. He recently had two cars of freight diverted to our line which had come from Massachusetts over a competing line. Congratulations, "Buddy." Small things always lead to bigger ones, and every car load helps.

We are glad to report the marriage of Miss Florence Wortman, daughter of Boilermaker Wortman, to Earnest Frazier, a chemist. After the solemn ordeal, the couple left on Train 7 for Baltimore. The bride was given a shower—no, not water, but linen and silk, by the sisters of the groom. No mention was made of the banquet, but the bride's father informed your correspondent confidentially that he had to ask to be excused from the table as he did not know whether to tackle some of the viands with a fork or a spoon! Some eats! Your correspondent had to go to Baltimore on the same train with the newlyweds and was given a bag of confetti to shower on them at Baltimore, but they fooled him.

"Barney" Coleman, Baltimore, failing for steam in mix-up with street car

They got off at Mount Royal instead of Camden. (Too bad you didn't tip off the Magazine staff, Mr. Bailey—Ed.) We understand they will spend their honeymoon in the south—possibly South Baltimore. We extend our heartiest congratulations. The accompanying photograph is the bride before she said the fatal "I will."

The Baltimore Sun, February, 24, carried the following story from Wilmington:

"William Leach, an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio, yesterday saved three small children from probable death when he stopped a runaway automobile in which they were seated. The owner of the car, which bore a Maryland license, had left the machine with engine running, on Pennsylvania Avenue, near Union Street.

"In some manner, the brakes were released and the car started down a steep incline, gaining speed with each second. Near Scott Street the car brushed a telephone pole and was turned completely around, but continued on down hill. Leach, working near by, heard the screams of the children and making a running jump to the running board of the automobile, stopped the car."

Mr. Leach is employed under Water Station Foreman I. E. Kelly. We take off our hats to him and are proud to number him among our fellow employes and friends.

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks held their annual dance under the auspices of William Penn Lodge, No. 518, on Washington's Birthday, at the Studio Dansant, Philadelphia. About 200 clerks, representing all stations in Philadelphia, with their wives and sweethearts, spent an enjoyable evening. Music was furnished by "Jack" Blum's Jazz five-piece orchestra. Their performance left nothing to be desired.

When checking their wraps the men were given a red, white and blue carnation button hole bouquet, and the ladies received folding fans which, when opened, formed a United States flag. The effect of the colors and flags was pleasing.

Among those present as spectators were Engineer and Mrs. Jett; Agent J. R. Morrison, Pier 98; Agent L. A. Rogers, Race Street; Frank Fitzgerald, amateur lightweight boxing champion, Philadelphia; Chief Clerk J. C. Farr, East Side.

Interesting People and Events Observed

"Joe" McGovern, with his long legs and graceful glide, dancing with every girl he could find.

Pretty Marie McAleer and Martin Garland, Shop Yard, deeply engrossed, enjoying every moment.

"Joe" Carney, former stenographer, Storekeeper's Office, East Side, and his wife.

Of course "Andy" and "Flossie," both expert dancers were there.

"Sox" Emmanuel, Roundhouse Office, with a beautiful girl in blue, from whom he never strayed.

Little "Bobby" Miggins, with the "Honey Dolls," seemed to have on the correspondent's "Singer collar,"—Picadilly. He made a hit.

Our messenger, little Harold Fenstermacher, was too happy for words.

The "Rebellious Rebel" brought his handsome sister, Miss Orrell, and the Misses McCartney and McGinley.

Miss Margaret Cameron did not suffer from lack of partners.

Miss Isabelle Gillen and her sister were in the midst of the crowd at all times.

"Bill" Congar and his attractive young wife both graced the floor—they are splendid dancers.

To add to the enjoyment, Charles Hicki, West Side's popular idol, appeared, with his ever-smiling countenance. I understood just how much he enjoyed himself when I observed him with the handsome Miss Barrett in one wonderful dance after another.

"Ed" Mitchell, Pier 62, was on hand to get business—he got lady partners instead—so he says.

Little Miss Helen McDevitt attracted attention by her graceful dancing of the finale hop.

Harry Nielson was still as long as possible, then he could not resist the music longer and was soon seen gliding around with Miss Orrell.

The orchestra warmed up and finally, just to show that they are not old men, "Poppie" Land and "Old Man" Miller stepped out in a way which was surprising to the young folk.

At 11 p. m. Chief Clerk J. C. Farr and "Jake" Jackson, one of the three musketeers, appeared after spending a thrilling hour at the movies. "Jake" kept his eyes glued on the drummer, but we know he did not miss any of the pretty girls.

"Jake" Hamburg, Race Street, danced with all the pretty girls he could find. So did "Pete" Perlson.

Frank P. Brennan, famous banjo player, was there without his banjo. He did not lack partners.

"Sam" Hoy, Jr., made a hit with the ladies, as usual.

"Lew" Rogers, agent, Race Street, dropped in to look us over.

On hearing applause, I went to ascertain the cause and found "Rebel" Wm. G. Orrell, East Side, doing the "Finale Hop" with Miss Isabelle Gillin. As this was "Reb's" first appearance in public, he was heartily applauded and was awarded first prize.

Later, I heard more noise and found that the centre of attraction was "little Toby" McKeown and his wife in their first public appearance together as dancers. "Toby" was much excited by the applause which greeted his first efforts (he has been taking private lessons at home). He was awarded second prize.

Among others present were Messrs. Morrissey and Goldberg, Race Street, posing as star basketball players, while "Barney" Cohen stood by laughing. A vocal number, "A Girl That Men Forget," sung by Mr. Henry Velarida, tenor, interchange clerk, R. R., Point Breeze, Philadelphia, was appreciated.

The committee, to whom credit for an enjoyable evening is due, were: Chairman, H. Hamburg; Myer Perlson; secretary, R. M. Miller; Anna McGinley; David Alten and William Miller.

Treasurer Andrew L. Smith was on the job in Box Office to collect money and tickets and keep the financial affairs straight.

One of our customers, Mr. S. Jacobson, who takes great interest in our social as well as business affairs, was present and enjoyed the evening's entertainment.

On January 23 Patrolman Granville Dougherty was killed, falling in between the cars of an inbound Park Drag coming into East Side. Mr. Dougherty was well known and liked by all who knew him. His sudden death was a great shock to all of us here and particularly to John Wilhare, also of the Police Department, who was closely associated with him in his work. We express our sympathy.

Thomas Barron, section stockman, and J. H. Peters, chief painter, spent March 1 at Grafton, W. Va. Mr. Peters is a Veteran

Wilmington, Del.

Correspondent, CHARLES W. HAMILTON

Greetings to everyone! We want to add Wilmington to your genial circle, and give you news of the representatives here in the offices of District Passenger Agent J. A. Miller, District Freight Agent G. W. Bumpas and Local Freight Agent A. D. White. Later, you may learn our names and see some of our photographs in the MAGAZINE. This time, we will be modest in our appeal to the editor for space.

Wilmington will hereafter be on the Baltimore and Ohio "map" in the MAGAZINE. Our friend C. W. Bailey is supplying news from the yards and shops at Wilmers.

Chief Clerk W. R. King, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is gradually recovering strength. He resumed duty a few days ago.

A carload of Florida oranges and grapefruit, sold direct from trees to people here, was quickly disposed of to appreciative buyers in our Freight House Yard. The shippers promise a further supply soon.

We are pleased to learn that the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club will give us another of their delightful concerts in the near future. Wilmington people are responsive and appreciate the excellent entertainments given by this fine musical organization.

We are grieved to report the death of Mrs. Mary Moreland, wife of Engineer Thomas F. Moreland, on March 5. Mrs. Moreland was an estimable lady and a good friend. She will be sadly missed because of her activities in fraternal organizations here. We extend our sympathy to Mr. Moreland.

Local Freight Agent A. D. White says that there was a material increase in freight revenues at Wilmington during February as compared to January, 1924. Prospects for good business in March are encouraging.

Washington, D. C., Freight Station

Correspondent, W. L. WHITING

The absence of notes from Washington, D. C., in the March issue was caused by sickness, partly my own and partly that of others.

The accompanying photographs show some of the heavy work that is accomplished by our great gantry crane. The immense stone portrayed is the base for the main shaft of the First Division Monument that is being erected in this city. The base weighs twenty-eight tons and was unloaded by our crane without receiving a scratch. The main shaft, weighing about fifty-five tons, is expected to arrive over our road, and will, without doubt, receive the same careful attention from our crane operator, "Charlie" Leaman, that he gave to the base.

During the latter part of 1923 we set a mark for our hoped-for increase for that year over 1922 of one million dollars. We succeeded in making $1,002,000.00 plus, for which we are very naturally shaking hands with ourselves and resolving that this record shall be beaten this year! A little word here and there on everybody's part will be very helpful in obtaining the wished for results. Let us all try and make this the banner year for Washington, D. C., Freight Station.

We have had the pleasure of assisting a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania in obtaining some insight into railroad affairs as handled at this station. Mr. Som Charatsing, the gentleman in question, was permitted to come here at the request of the Siamese Minister to the United States, and we trust that he has received the valuable instruction and information that he sought.

Our collection clerk, "Jack" Mullikin, has been in Dothan, Ala., for some time with his good wife, in an expectant state of mind, and his fondest hopes were realized on February 27 when there appeared on the threshold a chubby little boy; "Jack" is still in the South attending to affairs, but we expect him back very soon, baby, mother and all. Good boy, "Jack;" let the good work go on!

Yard Conductor T. L. Birge announces the arrival at his home of a pretty little girl. This makes a happy little bunch of two boys and one girl. The remarkable fact about this is that the baby just missed by one hour having a birthday every year like ordinary folks, she having arrived at exactly 11 p. m. on February 29.

There are disadvantages as well as advantages in such an arrangement as to date of birth. Of course, as a baby, she will want to celebrate every year, but as the years roll by, and she can legitimately divide her age by four, she will see the benefit of it. Then again when the hoped for "right man" comes on the scene, think of his joy in only having to "come across" once in four years instead of being like us ordinary mortals, who have to dig down every year. Congratulations to the happy parents!

And still another to report. On March 2 the wife of our good friend, O. D. Boyle, presented her happy husband with a bright little boy. This is a particularly happy circumstance, as the little fellow comes to fill a gap made by the untimely death of a dear little boy of five years, who was killed by an automobile about two years ago. Both parents are rejoicing at the new arrival and we all hope that the happiness they look for will be fully realized. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Boyle are in order from everyone that knows them.

It is a pleasure to state that from last reports the mothers, daddies and babies are all thriving splendidly.

There have been a few changes in our force recently, but only necessitating the engaging of two new members. "Pete" Messina is employed as a clerk in the office, and Reginald Vaughn comes as messenger. We welcome both and hope to have them with us for a long time.

Our sick list has once more dwindled down to the zero point. Miss Winnie Tyler, who was sick for several weeks, has returned to her accustomed place. We were all glad to welcome Winnie back, and to know that since her return she has been able to continue working, and shows every sign of complete restoration to health.

Our old standby, Assistant Cashier P. S. Smith, is with us again, having undergone a dangerous operation on account of serious stomach trouble. "Pete" braved the dangers of the knife courageously and his quick return to duty is evidence that the operation was successful. However, as he travels this earth on two artificial nether limbs, perhaps a little thing like his stomach did not phase him. We are glad to have him back with us and congratulate him on his recovery.

General Yard Master N. O. Clarke has returned from St. Petersburg, Florida, where he has been for a few weeks on account of asthmatic trouble. His ruddy countenance and smiling face are evidence enough that his trip benefitted him as he hoped it would.

We regret that the Stork was not the only visitor to our families lately; the Grim Reaper has gathered in the relatives of some of our number. On January 13 Miss Gladys Beall lost her grandmother, with whom she has lived for a number of years. On January 23 Yard Brakeman J. P. Criste lost his little daughter aged six years, as a result of that dread childish disease Meningitis. On February 9 our agent, D. M. Fisher went to Frederick to bury his sister-in-law, Mrs. Walton M. Fisher, who died in Waukegan, Ill. Mrs. Fisher's death was caused by a stroke of apoplexy. On March 4 our Assistant Agent M. T. Hill received word of the death of his Base stone for First Division, A. E. F., monument to be erected in Washington. Quarried in Vermont, and weighing 28 tons, it was unloaded without a hitch in our freight yard, Capitol City mother at Cleveland, Ohio. Mrs. Hill had been ill for a long while and died at the ripe old age of 82 years.

J. W. Logsdon and family, Cumberland, Md.

To the sorrowing friends and relatives of all of the above we extend our heartfelt sympathy in their time of sorrow and affliction.

On February 11 Carpenter Foreman installed scales on main track at East Lexington, which required putting it out of service and running all trains through cross over. After the C. and O. train had passed, Joint Agent E. Fred Baker, found a broken rail. He immediately advised Foreman Gross who had necessary repairs made without delaying any of our trains, for which Mr. Baker has been commended. It is regretted that your correspondent was unable to secure a photograph of Mr. Baker for our MAGAZINE. His hair "is going back on him" and for this reason he says he will not give us a photograph!

Hagerstown, Md.

Correspondent, GEORGE R. PACKETT

John A. Mullen

We regret to note the death of John A. Mullen, retired trainmaster, Hagerstown, at the Washington County Hospital on March 13, after an illness of only two days. Mr. Mullen lived at his home 238 Summit Avenue. He was 58 years old. For the past two years he had been serving as inspector for the Western Maryland Railway. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Herndon, Cumberland, and Miss Grace Mullen, Hagerstown; two sons, Michael E., Brunswick, Md., and John J., Baltimore. Interment was made in Piedmont, W. Va.

Fire was discovered at 2 a. m. February 26 under the flooring of Freight Agent F. S. Bowman's home. A little damage was done by smoke. The fire was extinguished by local fire companies in half an hour.

Three diamond rings were awarded under the auspices of Hagerstown Forest No. 95, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, on February 22. Claim Clerk H. R. Potter held the lucky number, which awarded him the second prize $250 ring.

William Snyder, father-in-law of Warehouse Foreman D. E. Kinsey, died on March 3. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Ticket Agent S. A. Gates is again critically ill at his home.

THE RAILROAD HOTEL HOTEL PATTERSON

Good Sleep—Good Eats—Moderate Rates

HAGERSTOWN, MARYLAND

In this issue of our MAGAZINE we find the first advertisement from Hagerstown—the Hotel Patterson. We feel assured it will not be the last.

A friendly handshake and a pleasant word cost us nothing, yet it never fails to help both ourselves and our Railroad. With good friendly service to all shippers, we are not only helping our Railroad but also ourselves. Personal traffic solicitation is not new at Hagerstown, Agent F. S. Bowman and his force have taken pleasure in this work for years.

D. M. Shawen, a loyal, retired Baltimore and Ohio employe, is a regular visitor to our office. He is now living at Gapland, Md.

H. R. Potter, clerk in this office, while in a barber shop by chance overheard a prospective passenger phoning a competitive line for rate and quickest time to Wheeling, W. Va. Mr. Potter at once talked with the prospect and as the result saved him two hours' time by having him use the Baltimore and Ohio. Good!

Cumberland Division

Correspondents, JOHN J. SELL and RALPH L. KETZNER

On February 20 and 21 we experienced a heavy snow fall on our Division, the heaviest for several years, being 14 inches deep in Cumberland on the level, and at points drifted to a depth of several feet. The energetic efforts of the M. of W. Department and all other employes kept traffic moving with a minimum of delay. After cleaning snow from the platforms and pavements adjacent to the Queen City Station it looked like a winter scene in Canada. The snowcapped mountains, as seen from the Capitol Limited and other through trains, must have presented a picture to our patrons which is seldom seen in this part of the country. Division Engineer Petri, Assistant Division Engineers M. B. Jones and John Edwards, General Supervisor Sponseller and supervisors worked diligently to keep switches open and platforms cleared of snow.

One of our oldtimers has loaned us a picture of Cumberland tool cars, taken in 1910, unloading a heavy piece of machinery at the Casparis Stone Co.'s Quarry, Patterson Creek, W. Va. Wreckmaster C. C. Beck (now deceased) was in charge of the crew doing the work; a number of the men are still in service and will be recognized by our employes. In order to place this machinery, a track was built up the side of the mountain, high above the river, which can be seen in the picture.

Our sympathy is extended to Supervisor W. R. House, Cumberland, whose infant son, William, aged ten months, died recently.

The accompanying photograph is of Agent Chas. F. Huth, Piedmont, W. Va., and Traveling Car Agent G. Hunter Castle, taken at Piedmont, W. Va. Of course, the picture would not be complete without cars for a background, both these employes being energetic workers in getting cars released and moving. Agent Huth entered the service on October 18, 1889, in the Stores Department at Piedmont, and was coal billing agent at Keyser for a number of years before being promoted to the position of agent, Piedmont, W. Va.

The late Conductor Mackin, Cumberland, about whom a story appeared on page 65 of the March Magazine

Cumberland Division is still breaking records, the latest on March 10 when 34 trains, totalling 3,274 loads, were dispatched east over the Cumberland Division, which included 13 trains, 1,222 loads from Keyser and 21 trains, 2,052 loads and 23 empties from Cumberland. The best previous record in one day was 2,795 loads.

We are sorry to report a sad accident to one of the Cumberland Yard brakemen. E. A. Knight, one of the best known, good, all around railroad men, was badly injured on the night of March 5, having both legs severed below the knee. He is doing as well as could be expected and his usual cheerfulness is still with him.

We recently had the pleasure of meeting our new division freight agent, H. A. Williams. While we don't know if that good cigar was for a little story we are glad to say Mr. Williams is a PRINCE. We have "listened in" on a few conversations of patrons and from all reports of H. A. we can count on a substantial increase in business on the Cumberland Division through his personal solicitation.

Road Foreman of Engines Cramblitt has been promising us some pictures for so long we are commencing to think he has none. Let's hope this will have the desired results and produce something a little better than promises!

Cumberland Yard Conductor S. L. Reynolds, who was injured on January 31, is able to be out and will soon be back on the job. We missed him.

"Bob" Rice tells us a good one about former Division Freight Agent Beggs, recently promoted. Mr. Beggs, with his usual success, asked for some new business and, after securing a trial carload shipment, had everyone lined up to handle it promptly. Unfortunately the train in which this car was moving met with a mishap and the car was destroyed. However, courtesy and promptness in adjusting the claim not only secured a duplicate shipment but we now have every assurance of handling all of this large shipper's future business. Another case where an ill wind blew everybody some good.

One of the most popular clerks in Cumberland Yard, who is always in demand, is City Delivery Clerk John H. Mosner. While we have always admired John Henry, we were surprised to find that he is in demand at funerals. We find he has an automobile and, as he works second trick, is always free in the morning and you can count on him offering his service to any worthy cause. We find he has served at 18 funerals since the first of the year. Just another case of a Baltimore and Ohio man being a good neighbor.

The tallest man in Cumberland Yard, Brakeman S. K. Myers, better known as "Sambo," was recently operated on for appendicitis. Glad to report "Sambo" is improving.

"Pete" French, operator, Streckers, better known as the "Patent Stove Pipe Cleaner," recently bid in a job at Orleans Road. All the men on the West End were sorry to see "Pete" leave Streckers and many have inquired if he found it necessary to clean the stove pipe in "AD" Tower?

Yardmaster E. A. Reith, Cumberland Yard, who had a bad fall in the early part of February, has suffered a relapse and is now in the Allegheny Hospital, Cumberland, undergoing treatment. Best wishes for a speedy recovery.

We hear that Chief Dispatcher "Jake" Miller is having trouble with his radio and recently hasn't been able to even raise Sandy Hook. "Jake" says his trouble is due to static.

Our old friend A. G. Boughner called to see us recently; we thought he had been snowed up in the mountains, but we assured him blue print figures would show the Cumberland Division moving to the top in performance. Every employe is on the job to see that we land in first place.

We have a draft clerk in the office. Yes, he opens and shuts the windows.

One of the accompanying photographs is of Signal Repairman J. W. Logsdon and family, Patterson Creek, W. Va. On February 26 Mr. Logsdon discovered a broken arch bar on a car in train of Extra East, engine 6130. He reported it to Train Dispatcher Harry E. Flook, who had train stopped at Green Spring and car set off. Mr. Logsdon has been commended.

Night Car Distributer B. A. Noone has organized a fast checker team, and recently defeated the strong Keyser team. He has challenged the Grafton and Connellsville teams. Some good games are looked for before the season closes.

Our sympathy is extended to Miss Nancy Miller, stenographer, Superintendent's Office, in the recent death of her mother, Mrs. George Miller, at her home in Cumberland.

With the blue birds singing, our baseball enthusiasts are getting the fever and the prospects of a division or terminal league this year are bright. We have some good talent, which can be made into a fast team and with a local league scheduled some good games can be looked for.

Our Baltimore and Ohio Y. M. C. A. has progressed nicely under the able management of Secretary A. W. McDaniels. Recently the Cumberland Central Y. M. C. A. conducted a campaign to raise four hundred thousand dollars to build a new Central Y. M. C. A. home on Baltimore Street, overlooking our line, which was successful. Cumberland will soon have another fine building in the center of the City of which it can be justly proud.

Inspired by the recent articles in Our MAGAZINE, employes are striving for more business and cooperating with the local passenger and freight representatives in the campaign for more business, which is bringing results. Keep up the good work, boys.

With the new S-1 engines hitting the ball, and roadbed and equipment in good shape, we are hankering for more business to move. We hope to climb steadily to first place in the tonnage performance on the blue print.

Recently, we published a number of advertisements of our local patrons, and there may be others who desire to reach our readers by an advertisement in the MAGAZINE. If any employes know of any business houses desiring space, please drop a note to the local correspondent.

A fire brigade was recently organized at Cumberland Station on the second and third trick, captained by Night Passenger Car Foreman John Raupach, and drills are being held regularly. They are ably assisted by Night Stationmaster L. M. Rausch.

While the apple season closed last November, we are still loading from four to six cars daily from storage warehouses at Berkeley Springs and Martinsburg. All indications point to a good crop next season.

With spring close at hand, cement and road material are starting to move. Indications are much construction work will begin as soon as weather conditions permit.

The Capitol Limited, the pride of all our employes, has been maintaining its fine performance throughout the winter, even in the face of adverse weather conditions. Everyone is on the job to see that its record is maintained.

We hope every employe read the request for suggestions in the last MAGAZINE, and will present any they may have for the betterment of the service.

One of our pictures is of some of the West-bound yard car repairmen taken in 1910. We are not going to tell the names, as its another case of looks improving with age and most of the boys are still in service!

"Jim" Young, the well known East-bound Hump conductor, Cumberland Yard, recently returned from a visit to New York, as usual on an errand of mercy. He went to visit one of our old trainmen who is in failing health.

Business is improving and the month of February was the best we have had in the last year. Let's go boys. Make this the best April on record.

"Benny" Noone, whom everybody on the division knows as "Pete," congratulates himself that eggs are coming down. That lone hair on "Benny's dome" has been craving company, and having tried all else, "Pete" was relying on the eggs to do the impossible. It is not clear whether its the shells or the contents, but while there is life there's hope and the present market won't make it so expensive.

Haven't heard much from "Big Ed" Tasker or "Dusty" Avers of Keyser lately; seems they won't give up the championship they claim at checkers. Come on, boys, we have the White hopes. Give us a date.

Assistant Division Engineer M. B. Jones claims the belt as the best pool shot on our division. "Bill" Kornhoff has issued a challenge, but M. B. told him to go get a reputation first.

Our relief messenger Howard Welsh is right on the job when it comes to handling messages, but some of the night force have trouble getting what they order from the restaurant. Howard mistakes custard pie for ham sandwiches, and sometimes the coffee can leak; but Howard is practicing and we hope will soon be able to "stop the leak."

Cumberland Backshop

Correspondent, J. G. CLENN

Our shop band went to Grafton in a special car on train No. 55 on March 16, to give a concert which was enjoyed by our Monongah Division friends.

In addition to the concert our shop orchestra played several selections. The Imperial Quartet composed of Messrs. Goodrich, Foley, Watkins and Warner, sang several selections which called for encores. The band was managed efficiently by R. Snellley and the Grafton folks showed their appreciation by their hearty applause.

Our band members wish to thank the Grafton folks for the kindness shown during their short stay in the West Virginia city, and are looking forward to the time when they may again be among them.

A surprise party was given in honor of your correspondent and his wife, on February 28 in the Office of Division Storekeeper and Superintendent of Shops.

About 30 couples had gathered in the offices unknown to the correspondent, and when he was brought in it was a surprise.

Dancing and 500 were the amusements of the evening and later coffee and sandwiches were served. The party was not only enjoyed by the honored guests, but by everyone present.

Through these columns the correspondent and his wife express their thanks for the lamp and silverware given them by the New Shop and other division offices.

Keyser, W. Va.

Correspondent, H. B. KIGHT

What's the matter, fellows? Wasn't there a traffic tip card in the last MAGAZINE you received? If you would boost the wonderful tours to Washington that our Company operates, you would flood me with cards giving the names of prospective passengers for these trips.

Assistant Car Foreman "Gene" Kight recently underwent a serious operation at the Allegheny Hospital, Cumberland. His life was despaired of, but he is improving and hopes to be back on the job soon.

Thanks, "Abe," for that traffic tip! I appreciate your cooperation.

Doesn't it make you feel proud to think that OUR railroad is the oldest one in America? Soon be one hundred years old, and getting better every day.

BOOST WASHINGTON TOURS, and watch the results. Keyser School is sending a delegation this year. This is the first party from Keyser (I'm almost ashamed to tell it) but it will not be the last. Watch 'em grow!

Have you ever seen the Capitol Limited? This, the finest train in the world, is an inspiration to Baltimore and Ohio employees.

The trees along the mountain side up Cheat River Grade, were a beautiful sight last month. They were covered with sleet, that bent them double and some of them were pulled out by the roots. They were beautiful to look upon, but weather such as this means added expense to our Company, and we could have done without their beauty.

It is with regret that we report the death of another Baltimore and Ohio wife and mother. Mrs. Kate Bailey, wife of Engine-man J. E. Bailey was suddenly stricken while in the Davis Street Methodist Church, at Keyser, March 2, as the opening hymn was being sung, and passed away in a few minutes. To the bereaved family we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

TALK WASHINGTON TOURS—THEY'RE GREAT! DON'T COST MUCH, EITHER!

Are you talking to your friends, who are soon to take a vacation, about our Baltimore and Ohio service? I believe you are for I never saw a better set of boosters than we have on OUR railroad. That's why it is the best in the world—everyone who works for it, believes in it.

"Uncle Bill" Virts, who is spending the winter in Florida, writes "Go swimming every day. Wonderful country, send me the MAGAZINE." And we did.

Operator Frank Anderson's little son was late at school the other day because "Charlie" Hodges did not get out in time to relieve Frank, so that he could take the boy's toboggan home. Been pretty cold up here and Frank needed it to warm his ears.

SEE AMERICA FIRST! Why plan a trip to Europe, until you have seen the beauties of America? Take a trip over our own Best and Only, through the mountains and valleys of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia—the Switzerland of America. Boost the scenery—the service—the spirit of good fellowship that exists along our lines.

Mr. Frank Ellis, merchant, Newburg, is awarding a trip to Washington on one of our Personally Conducted—All Expense Tours. The best all round senior and the best all round junior of Keyser High School will be made happy by a trip to Washington after school closes, the award of Dr. Koelz and Attorney MacDonald, of Keyser. This is fine. These trips will never be forgotten; they will educate and make someone happy, and they are worth more than a back load of medals. Next!

Nell—It is so quiet in the office that you can hear a pin drop.

Ginnie—Yes, I am a little hard of hearing but I often feel the jar.

Our sympathy is extended to Engineer W. E. Bailey on the loss of a devoted wife and to Pipe Fitter J. E. Bailey on the loss of a loving mother.

We are glad that Assistant Car Foreman W. D. Wright and C. Inskeep are recovering from their injuries and hope they will soon be able to resume duty. Assistant Foreman E. C. Kight is recovering and has returned to his home.

While our boiler clerk has requested us not to mention her in the MAGAZINE, we note the difference in Mary's appearance each morning since she left the farm and has again taken up her residence in Keyser.

The number 13 must be unlucky for the ladies in the Master Mechanic's Office, where there are 13 lady clerks. One quarter of leap year is gone and none have succeeded in having their name changed.

"Leaners" desk at 5 p. m. on February 28 looked like a combination drug store and lady's boudoir. The articles scattered over it included a powder puff, hair comb, box of McCoys tablets, box of headache pills, wad of chewing gum, nail file, cuticle scissors, rouge box, handkerchief and vanity case.

The joint local cooperative committee, Motive Power Department, Keyser, held their first meeting in Veterans' Hall on March 5. J. B. Martin, representative of the Carmen, was elected president; Assistant Master Mechanic W. J. Dixon, chairman. Messrs. Dixon, Stanley, Graney, Gillum, Gutrie, Spicer, W. H. Ravenscraft and A. L. Muller, representatives of the Management; Messrs. Martin, Niland, Dayton, Mott, Wilson, Porter, Moore and Steadman, representatives of the Federated Crafts, H. A. Dietz, secretary.

District Master Car Builder W. W. Calder, G. W. Murphy, general chairman of carmen, Messrs. Patten and Crockett of the Efficiency Bureau were also present.

The object of these meetings is to produce a cordial understanding and cooperation between the local officers representing the Management and the local representatives of the employes at which time questions will be discussed relative to shop operations, output, etc., the planning and carrying on of work and full consideration given any idea or suggestion advanced.

From the suggestions of the various members present and the spirit manifested by all concerned it is predicted that these meetings will produce 100 per cent. efficiency and result not only in cooperation and understanding between the representatives of the Management and the workmen but greatly improve the service and production by a better quality of work.

The accompanying picture is of a bright Baltimore and Ohio boy. His Grandpa Alex Mosier loves the boy even better than he does his engine, and that is loving him some!

The stork has been mighty generous to the shop boys lately. He presented a bouncing son to Charlie Wolford and another one to J. Frank Kneisley.

Genial Operator J. M. Wyndham recently figured prominently in the social whirl of this city. His family and friends planned a birthday surprise party in his honor. It was a success and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The A. A. Robertson Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen celebrated its 16th anniversary on February 20. The fine program consisted of readings, solos, and music by Miss Emma Staley's orchestra. A banquet proved to be one of the most enjoyable events of the evening. Two hundred or more members and guests were present, including visiting members from Brunswick, Md., and Chambersburg, Pa.

The members of the George M. Shriver Auxiliary to the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans swooped down on their popular president, Mrs. Charles Auld, and gave her a delightful surprise party. Many guests were present and all enjoyed the evening to its full.

Mrs. J. H. Copenhagen, who underwent an operation in the King's Daughters Hospital, has recovered to the extent that she is able to be at home and is now steadily gaining in health.

Martinsburg music lovers were delightfully entertained by the Baltimore and Ohio Cumberland Shop Band on February 24, at the Crandall Theatre. The selections sung by Miss Vada Pearl Drumm were also appreciated. Messrs. Warner and Troxell also received their share of applause. Director De Luca has a fine organization of well trained men and we hope to hear them again soon.

Thirty-five invited guests, members of the George M. Shriver auxiliary, tendered a delightful surprise to their president, Mrs. Charles E. Auld, at her home on N. Queen Street, recently. Refreshments were served late in the evening.

We regret to report an accident to Horace, son of Veteran George Kilmer. While running across a street to sell papers containing an account of the death of the late President Wilson, he fell, breaking his hip.

Horace is a plucky boy, however and goes along "Smilin' thru."

Louise, daughter of Sister Laura Cline, who has been seriously ill at King's Daughters Hospital, is improving.

We are glad to report Mrs. Joe Copenhaver has returned to her home after a serious operation. She is improving slowly.

Martinsburg K. of P. celebrated their Diamond Jubilee recently. The founder of Pythianism in West Virginia was Father Gerhardt, a grand old man who lived to be 100 years old. He was the father of our former president, W. A. Burkhardt.

We are impressed by the unanimity of opinion in Martinsburg in connection with the project for a new and commodious hotel. We hope it materializes.

In our story of the float used in the parade here, your correspondent regrets that she made an error in the names and titles. J. S. Rhodes was chairman, Float Committee and M. Smallwood, chairman, Carman's Committee. The names of the two Johnson boys, Heck Kerns, Kerschner and Hockenburg were also omitted. We apologize.

Business is on the increase on the Sub-Division and preparations to handle it to greater advantage are going forward. It bids fair to reach the point attained in the summer of 1922 when more tonnage moved between Sabraton and M. & K. Jct. than ever before. We hope it will materialize and see no reason why it should not as all efforts are turned in that direction. We have been to various places but have yet to find an organization that moves more smoothly under pressure than our personnel.

We extend our sympathy to Engineer Thomas Morgan ("Uncle Tom") in his recent bereavement. Mr. Morgan lost his wife and father within a few weeks of each other.

We have with us a touch of spring—which brings us around to our picture for the month, our obliging operator at Sturgis, W. Va., Mrs. A. L. Van Norman. The picture (which, by the way, had to be gotten under false pretenses) was taken on the station grounds at Sturgis last summer and gives some idea of the appearance of Sturgis in summer. We have heard many favorable comments on the place and contend that it is one of the most attractive spots on the Baltimore and Ohio at that season of the year.

James W. Gray, Uniontown, a veteran engineer was off duty March 5 for the second time in 45 years. He attended court in Uniontown. This is certainly a fine record and Mr. Gray deserves much credit.

We are sorry to report the death of Charles Robert Penrod, two months and one day old infant son of Conductor and Mrs. G. W. Penrod of South Ninth St., Greenwood, on March 2. Funeral services were held on March 3 at the home, the burial taking place in Hill Grove Cemetery.

On March 3 Miss Mary Sabina Hoffman, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hoffman, and G. Carr Sheets, son of Conductor and Mrs. S. M. Sheets, were married in the parsonage of the South Minister Presbyterian Church, Cumberland, Md., by the pastor, Rev. James McArthur. Carr is the congenial clerk in the Chief Dispatcher's Office. Congratulations! We hope that Carr will continue to wear the smiling countenance that he has been displaying since the happy event.

Mrs. A. L. Van Norman, Operator, Sturgis, W. Va.

Engineer S. Desmone, who has been undergoing treatment in Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh for nearly a month, returned to his home at Connellsville on February 26 much improved in health. We wish Mr. Desmone continued health.

Miss Arabelle Morrison, Uniontown, Pa., and J. R. Totten, the latter a yard master at Smithfield, were married on February 14. We wish the newly married couple many happy days.

Our friend Elmer McClelland says no more soft bread and toast for him. He is sporting a new set of molars now.

Mrs. J. J. Smith, wife of our night chief dispatcher at Connellsville, who underwent an eye operation at the Peter Bent Brigham Memorial Hospital in Boston, Mass., recently, is getting along very well. The eye sight is returning rapidly and every condition is favorable. We sincerely trust that Mrs. Smith's improvement may be rapid and permanent.

We are grieved to report the death of the little infant son of Brakeman J. L. Richmond, at Bear Run, Pa., on February 19. The parents have our sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

On March 1 E. P. Mauk was appointed night general yard master at Johnstown, vice J. R. Driscoll, deceased. We wish Mr. Mauk success in his new position.

We are sorry to report the death of Mrs. Minerva M. Patterson, mother of Engineer M. M. Patterson, and Conductor A. H. Patterson, at her Brookvale home on February 15. To the bereaved family we extend our sincere sympathy.

G. A. Senheiser, yard master and Miss Hogan of Fort Wayne, Ind., were married in January. Congratulations!

On March 1 former Train Master M. L. McElheny, now superintendent, New York Terminals, returned to Connellsville for a short visit, during which time he moved his household goods to New York. We also understand that Mr. "Mac" lost his hat on this little tour. It may be that Division Engineer Gibson was on the job making tests to see whether he was exceeding the speed. As yet no report.

On February 25 Miss Mercedes P. Coyle, stenographer in the office of Master Mechanic Schad, and David Randolph, material supervisor in the shops, were married in Cumberland. On March 3, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph were guests of honor at a party given by Miss Alice Kramer, secretary to Master Mechanic Schad, at her home. Guests included the members of Master Mechanic's and Storekeeper's Offices Five Hundred was the popular game of the evening and it is believed that H. Y. Snyder, assistant chief clerk in the Master Mechanic's Office kept the man on the bicycle up his sleeve, for he couldn't be beat. A beautiful chest of silver was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Randolph by W. E. Finn, shop clerk, and received with blushes and speechlessness on the part of Mrs. Randolph. Dave now believes he will be able to get his breakfast at home. To the newly married couple we wish all the success in the world.

On February 15 when Engineer J. W. Younkin was a passenger on Number 79, he found a lady's purse containing a large sum of money and other valuables and turned it over to train crew. On inquiry it was learned that this purse belonged to Miss Clara Spiegel of West Newton, an instructor in the Braddock public schools. Purse was returned to Miss Spiegel next morning and she thanks the finder and compliments the Baltimore and Ohio in returning her purse with such efficiency and dispatch. Engineer Younkin deserves credit for displaying such honesty and taking the interest he did in the matter.

Pittsburgh District

Correspondent, E. N. FAIRGRIEVE

Friends of O. A. Blackstone will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed acting ticket agent at Pittsburgh, Pa., vice S. J. Hutchinson, retired.

Agent H. E. Pinkerton, Mars, Pa., answered the summons of the Grim Reaper on February 17. Mr. Pinkerton was one of the oldest agents on the Pittsburgh Division, where he had a host of friends. He was one of the Faithful Old Guard whose loss we mourn. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family in their hour of sorrow.

Veteran Road Freight Conductor Pinkerton met with a serious accident at Connelleville recently, resulting in the loss of both his limbs. He is recovering slowly and remains cheerful in spite of this great handicap, which was received in the performance of his duty.

Agent G. J. McCloskey, Petrolia, Pa., has been granted leave of absence to enter the auto service station business. Geo. K. Shindel, formerly clerk, Braddock, has been appointed acting agent to succeed Mr. McCloskey.

Emery Irwin, former clerk, Dispatcher's Office, Pittsburgh, and later agent, Bruce-ton, from which position he resigned some years ago to engage in business at Mt. Jewett, Pa., has returned to his old stamping grounds and is now employed at Braddock. Welcome back, Emery, we are glad to have you with us again.

Mrs. J. D. Beltz, wife of Superintendent J. D. Beltz, who was stricken some time ago while in the city shopping, has returned from the hospital to her home, but is still confined to her bed in care of a nurse. We extend our sympathy and wish her a speedy recovery.

Plans are progressing nicely for the Safety Rally which is to be held in the Moose Temple, Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., on April 10. A splendid program is being arranged, which includes vocal and instrumental numbers, and after this feature of the program is concluded, you will all be privileged to trip the light fantastic to the strains of a dreamy waltz or a jazzy two-step or fox trot. All are invited.

On March 5 a rail-laying gang on the P. & W. made what is considered the highest record in laying rail for a single day, anywhere on the System. This gang, under the direct supervision of Division Engineer Harsh, General Supervisor T. F. Donahue and Supervisor G. H. Stropel, laid 20,079 feet of rail between Mile Posts 29 and 32 on the eastbound track. This was a wonderful feat and all concerned are to be commended and congratulated for the excellent service performed which is the result of efficiency and cooperation.

The accompanying photograph is of James Morsica, who for a number of years was section foreman, Pittsburgh. Mr. Morsica attended a Red Cross banquet at the Hotel Schenley recently doled up in these duds. "Ain't he the berries?"

The excellent performance of the Capitol Limited continues to win new friends for the Baltimore and Ohio and favorable comments are heard on all sides about the excellent service, delightful dining car environment and meals. Tell your friends about this wonderful palace on wheels. Just one ride will convince them of the truth of your statements. Invite them to give it a trial and your efforts will be rewarded.

We are proud that the Pittsburgh Division shows an excellent increase in outbound tonnage handled for the month of February. During this period there was an increase of 92,023 tons over the month of January, 1924, and an increase of 96,422 tons over the figures for February, 1923, exclusive of coal, coke and L. C. L. merchandise. It is interesting to note that during the month of February there were 11,454 cars handled outbound representing 434,713 tons, averaging 458 cars per day for the shortest month in the year. Courtesy, efficiency and cooperation are working hand in hand and are bringing results.

Records of the Traffic Department indicate that the Pittsburgh Division takes first rank in the Pittsburgh-Youngstown-Cleveland-Wheeling territory in the number of furnaces in blast, their quota being 50 out of 57 or 88 per cent. This is encouraging and speaks well for the enterprise of the community.

The foregoing facts are good spikes to drive in your business-soliciting program. Don't overlook an opportunity to bring the activities of the Baltimore and Ohio before the public. Be a "GO-GETTER" and rejoice in the frolic.

One day about the middle of February the messenger boy of the Cunard Steamship Company was sent to bank with the day's receipts amounting to almost $10,000. The lad entered the washroom of the Chamber of Commerce Building and carelessly laid his coat containing the deposit on the window sill. The coat was stolen and later found in the washroom of the Baltimore and Ohio Passenger Station at Pittsburgh by Porter J. Mott. The coat still contained the stolen deposits which were turned over to the Cunard Co., who were grateful to Mr. Mott. He is commended for his honesty and loyalty to Baltimore and Ohio standards.

Pugh Brothers, official watch inspectors of the Baltimore and Ohio, recently had a shipment made to them from Newark, N. J. This shipment was made from Newark, N. J., February 19 and on the 22nd they received a notice from our agent at Pittsburgh that it was on hand, having arrived about 12 hours after the billing was received by mail. This is service par excellence and comes only through cooperation and efficiency which is everywhere to be found among the thousands of loyal employes of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Hello, girls, have you had your hair bobbed lately, like Teresa (Juliet) O'Hare, Mary Hughes, Gertrude Clay, Nellie Coburn and some more of the dames who lighten the gloom of our building with their presence? Who is next, please! It is fashionable to get your hair "Robertted" and gosh, how quickly you can stick it up in the morning, hey girls? Don't be bashful for there are thousands of other "Bobbies!"

The committee in charge consisted of C. Roehrig, chairman, Miss Harkins, Miss Fuss, W. E. Hampton, W. C. Austin, C. R. Perkins, G. H. McLaughlin and J. W. Swoger.

Another good couple gone astray! February 27 was the date when Miss Margaret Burns' apron strings were tied to Elmer Estel's pocket book. Mr. Estel is a rate clerk in our department. We wish them much happiness.

The accompanying photograph reveals the smiling countenance of Charley Gainey. "Gainey" has been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for 16 years, acting as porter for the Traffic Department, Pittsburgh. He is just as young as he looks, and always has a smile and a good word for everyone.

We are glad to announce that Shop Superintendent Newman has been able to leave the hospital and is now at his home in Pittsburgh.

Glenwood Locomotive Back Shop has organized a baseball team for 1924 composed of the following: Manager, Frank Rush; Captain T. J. Stapleton; Players: L. L. Hicks, R. J. Peters, J. C. Duffy, P. E. Martin, A. Bennett, E. Stroble, J. Mitchell, J. Mathos, W. White, J. Voltz, S. Linn, P.

Rodgers, L. Horne, H. Meehan, W. A. Seamy, J. C. Croft, J. A. Forner and E. C. Hodges. This club would like to arrange games with any Baltimore and Ohio league clubs and particularly with Riverside and Mt. Clare. After disposing of these two clubs, would be glad to receive challenges from Cumberland, Benwood, Connellsville and Newark for practice games. All communications should be addressed to Frank Rush, care shop superintendent, Glenwood, Pa.

W. A. Whalen, chief clerk to district master mechanic, has been appointed chairman, Entertainment Committee, for the Safety Rally which will be held on April 10 in Moose Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Glenwood Back Shop held its cooperative meeting between the local management and employes' representatives on March 5. Although this date inaugurated the cooperative meetings between the Management and employes on the Baltimore and Ohio System it may be stated that Glenwood Back Shop has been holding these meetings since June 8, 1923.

We regret to report that Sheet Metal Worker Charles Chamberlain, Glenwood Roundhouse, is ill with pneumonia.

Assistant Road Foreman of Engines A. B. McGeachie has returned to duty after a mild attack of pneumonia. "Mac's" friends tell him that unless he wears a winter overcoat he stands an excellent chance of being given a wooden one.

Business on the Pennsylvania District is steadily increasing, and if every employe puts his shoulder to the wheel we can make 1924 a banner year.

We regret that Miss Jane Passmore, secretary to master mechanic, Glenwood, and MAGAZINE correspondent, is very ill. Miss Passmore has been confined to her home for the past five weeks.

E. Paul Dawes, former Pennsylvania Railroad employe, Elmira, N. Y., and W. D. Hummel of Baltimore, Md., have been added to the roster of clerks in Glenwood Stores Department.

Our sympathy is extended to Master Mechanic Schad in the death of his son on February 10.

We extend our sympathy to Freight Agent Keefe in the recent loss of his wife.

We have much pleasure in reporting a case of loyalty, which demonstrates the splendid manner in which Baltimore and Ohio employes respond in an emergency. On February 8, after a hard day's work, Glenwood Roundhouse Pipe Foreman C. J. White, all dressed up in his best bibb and tucker, was on his way from Glenwood to Pittsburgh to pass a pleasant evening. On approaching Laughlin Junction Mr. White noticed an important passenger train held up at that point and the engineer working on the engine. Without hesitation, Mr. White alighted from the car and on reaching the scene discovered that the union in the cross over pipe on the engine, between the main reservoirs, had become disconnected. Without regard for his best clothes, he jumped on the engine, corrected the defect and in a comparatively short time the train was on its way. This voluntary action on the part of Mr. White, who was traveling on a trolley car when he noticed the train standing still, prevented what might have been a serious delay to an important passenger train and is worthy of commendation.

Miss Gladys O'Donnell has been temporarily assigned to the Master Mechanic's Office during the absence of Miss Passmore.

Master Mechanic McGann has again changed his residence, his present address being 138 Tecumseh Street, Hazelwood, Pa. Our hard working master mechanic moves frequently, although not for the purpose of avoiding payment of rental. He likes change of scenery, in that he always rents furnished houses.

We extend our sincere sympathy to Assistant Shop Clerk C. E. Rider, Glenwood Roundhouse, who recently lost his baby son.

Glenwood Roundhouse Engine Inspector M. Reynolds is the happy possessor of a broad smile these days. Mrs. Reynolds has presented him with "one of the cutest baby daughters in the world."

Northern District

Correspondent, D. H. KIRKWOOD

The accompanying photograph shows that we have had some snow in the Northern District this winter, at least between Mount Jewett and Kane. The school house shown is just opposite our tracks. The snow was as deep on our tracks as is shown in the photograph. The new snow plow, built at Glenwood, a photograph of which appeared in the February MAGAZINE, proved satisfactory in the clearing of snow from our tracks. During the first two weeks in February, the plow was on the road day and night. It was necessary to run it to Butler once, as the snow was heavy all along the line.

The bus which runs between Mount Jewett and Kane was tied up for several days, but our trains were kept moving with little delay.

The Daugherty Refining Company, Petrolia, will begin soon the construction of an addition to their refinery. With the proposed new structure, in addition to the present plant, the revenue will increase considerably. Oil is refined here in various grades; vaseline, or petroleum jelly, is also manufactured and shipped all over the United States and to foreign countries.

The Butler Steel Car Works has been turning over to us daily new Erie R. R. gondolas of 140,000 lbs. capacity. We are placing them at Bruin Mine, where they are loaded with fuel and then moved to Mount Jewett for delivery to the Erie.

We regret to report the death of Agent H. E. Pinkerton, Mars, Pa. He entered service on April 1, 1885. We extend our sympathy to his family.

Engineer Harvey Bushey, with his wife and son Bobby, and Miss Evelyn, daughter of Car Foreman F. L. Burchfield, attended the Sunday School Convention recently held in Philadelphia. We are sorry to report, however, that Mrs. Bushey lost her purse containing some money and an annual pass, which she was unable to recover.

Brakeman Harry Boyd died on February 29. He fell from a car of coal while switching at Weeners Mine, near Lucinda, and was run over. He was about 39 years of age and was well liked by all with whom he came in contact. His untimely death is regretted by the Baltimore and Ohio family, which extends sympathy to his family. He had been in the service a number of years, being employed as fireman until about six months ago, when he was transferred to position of freight brakeman. He was a member of I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 825, Central Encampment No. 206, Knights of Malta and Lodge No. 1, K. K. K. Funeral services were held at Foxburg Methodist Church on March 2. He was a resident of Foxburg and leaves to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father, his wife and a five year old daughter. Three of his brothers, Joe, Frank and Ford are in Baltimore and Ohio service and his mother and father reside in Foxburg.

Mrs. Boyd has asked us to express, through the MAGAZINE, her sincere thanks for the many kindnesses shown by fellow employes during her hour of bereavement.

Fireman L. M. Shultz is absent because of sickness.

Foremen P. O. Horton, S. B. Nellis and P. H. Irwin have bid in pool turns out of Connellsville. Northern District men are getting to be quite numerous at Connellsville.

With Spring approaching, we can picture our fellow employes in their back yards, beating carpets and rugs, also busily engaged with the shovel and hoe digging up their gardens. (Which will you be doing "DK?"—Ed.)

Engineer Harry Curry, who purchased a farm near Foxburg last fall, will be seen behind the plow when not on his engine.

The State Highway Department has let a contract for five miles of improved road between Knox and Turkey, and work will commence as soon as weather conditions permit. This should help our revenue, as probably much of the material will come our way.

Engineer J. M. Murray and Brakeman J. H. Kaness spent some time in Baltimore recently, on committee work.

With vacation time approaching you may be able to secure some passenger business for the Company by planning trips for your friends.

District Passenger Agent C. J. Proudfoot of Wheeling, W. Va., gave two lectures at Lost Creek, W. Va., on March 6, in the theatre, on the subject of "Sights in and about the National Capitol." The lecture was illustrated by stereoptean views. Approximately 350 people attended the afternoon lecture and 250 were present in the evening. J. G. Jackson, Jr., Lost Creek, presided and also made a short address, explaining the proposal to hold a West Virginia day in Washington, D. C., on June 7. Details have not yet been completed, but plans are being worked out and will be announced shortly. Much interest is being manifested in the proposed trip and it is expected that a large number of West Virginians will take advantage of the opportunity to see the National Capitol and at the same time meet their friends from neighboring towns in the State.

It's not exactly the time of year to be talking about Christmas presents but when they're as nice as this one—Well! it warrants talking about. Just seven years ago on Christmas morn Santa left a brand-new baby girl, Wilma Rose, at the home of Section Foreman A. T. Baker, Wheeling.

Foreman Baker says she is one of the many reasons why he "works in the service of the Good Old Baltimore and Ohio." Wilma Rose's picture is shown here.

We heard of a baby the other day that came awfully near to having a birthday only once every four years. On February 28 a new chief clerk to trainmaster, Benwood, arrived at the home of Chief Clerk and Mrs. Carl Hoose. Congratulations!

Arch W. Patton

Dec. 9, 1874—Feb. 25, 1924

The passing of Arch W. Patton at Fairmont, W. Va., on February 25 recalls to many around Wheeling the time when the late Mr. Patton was a member of the Baltimore and Ohio family in this city. He first entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company as clerk to the general yardmaster, Grafton, W. Va., 30 years ago. He was promoted to clerk to Trainmaster U. B. Williams. In 1901 he came to Wheeling as private secretary to Mr. Williams, then superintendent, and was afterwards made division accountant, Wheeling, and ear distributor. At the time Mr. Williams was general superintendent, Mr. Patton was transferred to Newark as car distributor. From Newark he was taken over to Cincinnati as ear distributor for the general superintendent. He remained in that capacity until a few years ago when he left to accept the treasurership of the Patton Coal Company of Fairmont, of which his brother, Mr. F. J. Patton, is president. This position he held at the time of his death.

Mr. Patton died a comparatively young man; he was born at Grafton, W. Va., on December 9, 1874. While he lived at Wheeling he was a faithful and devoted member of the Fourth Street M. E. Church. He was also a member of Ohio Lodge of Masons No. 1 at Wheeling. He was well liked and led a truly Christian life. His pleasing personality won him the admiration of many. About two weeks before his death he paid the Wheeling office a visit. His widow was Miss Clemans, of Wheeling, a sister of the local poet, W. M. Clemans. Train 55 from Fairmont on Wednesday, February 28 had a special car for the Fairmont Lodge of Masons who accompanied the body to Wheeling, where they were met by the Masonic Fraternity of Wheeling. The funeral took place at Wheeling, interment at Greenwood Cemetery.

The late Arch W. Patton

Mrs. J. M. Garvey, grand vice-president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Baltimore and Ohio Veteran Employes' Association, has been elected as delegate to represent the Mrs. M. B. Stover Division Ladies' Auxiliary, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at the Convention in Cleveland, Ohio, May 27 to June 7.

Friends of Alma Sherfese Platts will regret to learn of her illness. She is a patient in the North Wheeling Hospital for an appendicitis operation. She is an employe at the Freight House Office.

Mrs. J. H. Wintermoyer, wife of track supervisor, Wheeling Terminal, and who was at the Ohio Valley General Hospital for an operation, is home again and is recovering nicely.

Much interest is being displayed in the Welfare Association recently organized at Wheeling. The chief subject of interest is that of entering a Baltimore and Ohio baseball team in the Wheeling District Baseball League this summer. There are a number of baseball stars in the Baltimore and Ohio service who expect to be in the League this summer. The officers elected for the Association are as follows: Presi-

Proudfoot, division passenger agent; secretary, Marie Slatterick, MAGAZINE correspondent. The following committee chairmen have also been appointed: Dr. W. U. Charlton, director of athletics; M. C. Smith, claim agent, chairman, membership committee; E. J. Kemple, livestock agent, chairman, entertainment committee.

Intruding?" Pauline Bradford, one of Mr. Porterfield's capable clerks played the leading role. We congratulate her on her excellent acting and are proud of such talent in our midst.

Blanche Deegan has recently accepted a position in the Superintendent's Office. Miss Blanche is a sister of Marie. Railroad running in the family, Marie, Bess, Tommie, Joe, Bill and Jimmie are all successful railroaders.

If any one wishes to get married, he should first consult Car Distributor's Clerk Harry Foley, our first-class match maker.

We have been told by Trainmaster W. B. Foley that the Monongah Division has a new salt well on the Bear Mountain Branch. Not fair to tease the car tracer, Bruce.

Who has been acting as secretary to Trainmaster Foley?

One of our photographs is of Train Auditor Thomas F. Eichelberger, who has been in the service for 22 years, 5 years in the Engineering Department and 17 years train auditor. He is a resident of Martinsburg, W. Va., but we claim him as a "Clarksburgite" since he has made his headquarters here for the past two years.

Kenneth M. "Sapp" Sappington, Clarksburg Shop, for five years was chief of police of this city. During this time he frequently assisted our Police Department. Mr. Sappington is a candidate for sheriff on the Democratic ticket, Harrison County. We would be sorry to lose him, but hope he will be our next sheriff.

Another star who expects to shine brightly this spring is Ticket Agent A. M. Six. "Bert" is running for sheriff of Ohio County in the Republican primaries, May 27. "Bert" says "your support and influence appreciated," and calls attention to the fact that he has been a voter in Ohio County for 21 years. He has also been in Baltimore and Ohio service for the past 22 years.

We have some interesting news this month for those who know Miss Irene Ware, or, rather Mrs. W. F. Necker—that's her name now. For a long time, Irene was our efficient second trick telephone operator. Last October she was graduated from that position to one in the Tonnage Bureau, where she again proved her competency. Last week she handed her resignation to Chief Clerk Ford, much to the regret of all her fellow workers. We congratulate her, but we will miss her more than we can tell in the short space allotted to us here.

On March 4, St. Augustine's School Alumni presented a play entitled "Am I

Little "Stubbie" Fuller is going to Fairmont to work in C. C. Hinkle's Office. We are sorry to lose him, but wish him success.

Cumberland folk, please tell us what takes Anna Niland to your fair city every Friday morning.

Leap Year has made a fine record to date. Night Baggage Clerk R. D. Ramsey and Miss Louise Lee Garrett were married on January 31, at Oakland, Md. The happy event was not made public until recently. Congratulations!

Another wedding which surprised us was that of Operator D. L. Coyne, Salem, W. Va., and Operator Miss Naoma Eugstrom, Monongah, W. Va. The wedding was solemnized at the Catholic Rectory, Salem, on February 10, by Rev. Father Mullaly, of Clarksburg, W. Va. The happy couple spent their honeymoon at Newark, N. J., and New York City. Mr. Coyne has been employed at Salem for many years. Congratulations!

Demurrage Clerk A. B. Whiteman has also joined the benedicts. On February 15, he was married to Miss Mabel G. Rebroom of Point Comfort. "White" gave us all a surprise, but we are glad to record he is again at work and his new position in life does not seem to have effected his efficiency. Congratulations!

We extend sincere sympathy to Conductor and Mrs. Carl Ratcliffe in the loss of Mrs. Ratcliffe's mother, who passed away recently. We also extend sympathy to Delivery Clerk James Dolan, on the death of his brother-in-law on February 10.

Yard Conductor S. F. Milstead is again absent because of illness. We hope for his speedy recovery.

C. Donee Cook, in the Clarksburg Exponent, has something to say about one of our Monongah and Charleston Division favorites. It is of particular interest as the employe referred to has recently completed twenty-three years service. The story says:

"How many miles do you travel to and from your work daily? How many miles a year? Have you ever walked or run around the world? Do you know anyone who has? Well, we do. W. M. Smith, of Clarksburg, better known as 'Bill,' the faultless, courteous brakeman on Baltimore and Ohio Trains 61 and 62, Richwood Branch. He has circled the globe no less than eight times on a Baltimore and Ohio train and has walked or run once around the world, flagging, walking through coaches, calling stations, etc., on this 'Mountain Limited.'

"For the past twenty-three years 'Bill' has been brakeman on the Richwood Branch, having entered the service in 1900, when the steel was being laid to Richwood from Gauley. He has held his post, happy, congenial and courteous ever since. The Baltimore and Ohio is not slow as 'Bill' comes to Richwood and goes out again every day making an average mileage of 242. And considering the many stops, the flagging which requires walking on ties, stones, etc., he isn't as hard on shoes as you might imagine.

"Complaints against this old faithful are as common as conversations between America and Mars! Only a few times has he missed his regular meals which speaks well for his company. He has never been seriously injured. He was born in Roanoke, W. Va., and walked five miles daily for his schooling. By his friends in West Virginia who travel, he is considered the best brakeman in the service."

The accompanying photograph is of Brakeman Smith, whom the writer has known for several years. He is glad to add his tribute to that of Mr. Cook, that he has always found "Bill" efficient, strictly attentive to business and that to know him is to be his friend.

Any suggestions to better the service? Any business tips? Any ideas on how to Stop That Leak! Spring is here. Let's get busy!

Charleston Division

Correspondent, CHARLES W. DIXON
Assistant Correspondent, VIOLA B. HICKMAN

Again we are up against it for Charleston Division news. Several of our friends have promised to help us. We made the acquaintance the other day of what we at first took to be a jolly, fat drummer. You've seen them at some time or other, either in the waiting room, on the platform or on the train. No matter where they are or what they are up against, you will find them always the same—telling a funny story and radiating good nature and sunshine everywhere they go. If I were a good-natured fat man I certainly would be a drummer; they can't help but pull in business—but I am getting away from my story. This gentleman I met was none other than Mr. H. S. Bickel, Y. M. C. A. secretary, Gassaway. And he promised me to be more than that to "us fellers," for he promised to send us some notes for our MAGAZINE. That was only a few days ago; we feel sure that our next number will contain some interesting Gassaway notes. Had it not been for the assistance of our youthful cartoonist, Otis L. Fansler, we would have been up against it on other occasions for something of special interest to the Elk Line employes.

Otis Fansler is feeling the urge of Spring!

Much interest is being shown in the Charleston Division Safety Rally. Indications are that there will be a big night at Weston on May 9, followed by another large night at Gassaway on May 10. The programs for both of these nights will be worth while. Tentative plans at Weston call for a special feature in the way of a sparring exhibition between General Foreman Kelly and Secretary to Superintendent Dean. (That might sound funny, but I'll leave it up to anyone if it wouldn't look a darn sight funnier.) If the committee at Gassaway can beat that, we would like to see it.

If you will look back about three issues you will find that we mentioned that a couple of our "stenogs" at Weston were wearing diamond rings. One of them has already proven fatal. Miss Margaret ("Peg") McCormick, Superintendent's Office, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Cummins, Weston. Mr. Cummins is engaged in the automobile business here. The happy couple will reside in our fair city. Congratulations!

At about 10.30 p. m. on February 19 Agent "Jack" Bridge, Holly Junction, while listening in on his radio, heard the following: "Have Superintendent Baltimore and Ohio at Connellsville come in on No. 224 wire account traffic conditions." This was the night of the very heavy sleet over the eastern divisions and practically all the wires were down. No. 224 wire was still O. K. but Pittsburgh was unable to raise Connellsville, and someone had taken this means of attempting to restore communication. Agent Bridge opened up his office and got in communication with Weston, where every effort possible was made to get in touch with Connellsville but without success. Through this we get a faint idea of what can be looked for in later years as the radio asserts itself. Incidentally, it shows the interest of our agent in the Baltimore and Ohio. Possibly some other members of the Baltimore and Ohio family heard as Mr. Bridge did and displayed like interest. Thank you, "Jack!"

It looks as if the force in the Division Accountant's Office is going to be a headliner. Herbert Berry is in great demand all the time whenever any play is staged by local talent. Paul Jeffries is now known as the Sheik of the office. And we hear that Paul Sherrard recently went to Baltimore to take in the "Follies." Then we have Mary Piekford, in the same office, and Sylvia Miller in the Car Distributor's Office, who threaten to go to Hollywood about five or six times a year. The other girls are about all married off.

We again have a fine drawing by our thirteen-year-old cartoonist, Otis L. Fansler. Evidently, Otis enjoys going to school in the springtime of the year, not!

The world is not interested in the storms we encounter at sea, but the question it asks of us is: "Did you bring your ship into port?"

The world isn't half so much interested in the reason for our failure as it is in the formula of our success.

When dealing with the public on the telephone, it is best to lubricate the conversation with courtesy; otherwise, it will squeak.

At the meeting of the Employees' Cooperative Conference on Monday, February 18, an interesting session developed. Twenty-four persons were present and exceptional enthusiasm was manifested. Fuel Consumption was the chief topic with Fuel Conservation as the objective. Considerable time was devoted to the matter of proper care and maintenance of air pumps on locomotives operating on the West Virginia and Pittsburgh District. Some interesting facts developed in connection with the train handling on that particular district, and while various opinions were expressed, these showed that everyone is putting his personality and ability into the work. We look for even greater enthusiasm in future meetings. Members taking more prominent parts in the discussion were Engineers J. H. Shea, J. W. Bailey, W. D. Rohrbough, R. J. Vassar and Page Hacker, Fireman M. Radcliff and Engine Inspector "Joe" Malone.

Mr. J. J. McCright was a passenger on a train of the Coal and Coke district, Charleston Division, recently, and when leaving train forgot a package containing clothing, etc. General Car Foreman F. M. Garber, Gassaway, W. Va., found package in the car and mailed it to Mr. McCright, who wrote him as follows:—

"Received package I left on the train and thank you very much for your attention. To show my appreciation, I am sending you a small remembrance."

Commenting on this letter, Superintendent Trappell says: "This shows that Frank Garber's heart is in the right place and that he lives up to the Baltimore and Ohio ideal of courteous service to patrons. It is interesting also, to note the appreciation expressed by our guest."

Haven't heard what the folks on this division have done to get business—Got both ears wide open—Tell me!—Ed.

Cincinnati Terminals

Correspondent, JOSEPH BEEL

When Engine 6150 in charge of Conductor J. W. Ball and Engineer Hartzog, with 47 cars coal, left Elmwood at 9.00 a. m., March 3, on its initial trip, it marked the advent of the new "S" type locomotives on the Toledo Division. The "S" type engines are rated at 5,800 tons.

The first trip on March 3 was a trial and, in addition to the crew, was in charge of General Superintendent F. B. Mitchell, Superintendent A. A. Iams, Trainmaster T. J. Daly and Road Foreman of Engines W. B. Kilgour.

Conductor O. P. Cox, Oakley crews, is receiving congratulations. Engineer Frank Roller, Oakley crews, thinks "O. P." ought to show his appreciation of good fortune by passing around boxes of cigars.

"Bill" Fisher not only set a good example as a Safety Committeeman, but has gone in for Claim Prevention with such enthusiasm that he will put Wood Street on the map as 100 per cent. He is working on a plan which he thinks will perfect a system whereby there will be no cause for claims.

Yard Engineer "Tom" Alberts is also a live wire Claim Prevention committeeman. "Tom" called attention to the rough handling of cars in one of the yards, the conductor remonstrated, but "Tom" proudly informed him that he was a member of the Claim Prevention Committee, whereupon the conductor said that in future he would watch his step when "cutting 'em off."

The friends of Conductor Patty Donnolly, Storrs, are glad to hear that he is convalescing after an attack of pneumonia.

Yard Master "Tom" Maloney has returned after being absent because of illness.

The Signal Department, Cincinnati Terminals, was quiet for several weeks because Supervisor J. W. Kunker was missing. His wife had an operation performed. We wish her a speedy recovery.

There is more speed in our Motor Car Man Harry Cook than there is in a six-cylinder car. His motor was not large enough so he purchased a six-cylinder Buick to ride around the terminal in and, believe us, he gets there in a hurry. Gates are being repaired so fast that we will have to run into the crossing gates on purpose to keep him in good spirits. The more work, the better he likes it.

Just a few lines regarding our speedy, yet faithful terminal engineer, G. B. Farlow. He has been serving in this capacity for a year and a half, filling the vacancy left by Mr. Abbott. The new work he has accomplished since undertaking this position is gratifying and worthy of being mentioned—the laying of new rail is his art, and at present his supervisors are astonished at the condition of Cincinnati Terminal. With about two more years of his wonderful leadership we will have a terminal worth mentioning. Then we'll invite all visitors to cast their orbs upon it. We are wishing him good health so that he may fulfill his plans for the future. We are all with you, George.

The General Freight Office is still bringing home the bacon. On March 4, they defeated the Tariff Bureau by 308 pins. The excellent work of Henry Bauer, and John Maxwell put the games in cold storage for the General Freight Office. The tournament now stands: General Freight office, 4 games, Tariff Bureau, 3 games. The General Freight Office is looking for more worlds to conquer. The next game is scheduled to be played with Transportation Department. As a bowler, our friend Mincow makes a good toe dancer. He still holds the center of the stage with his artistic toe dancing. All he needs is music and his act will be complete. Somebody kindly whistle while "Min" does his stuff.

The other day, an insurance agent sold Ben Harris some fire insurance. Afterwards he said: "Now Mr. Harris, what you need is some cyclone insurance." "Cyclone insurance," said Ben, "Why man, I can't start a cyclone."

If you hear of anyone who intends to travel or ship, the Baltimore and Ohio is always ready to serve them. Keep in mind that our commodity is "TRANSPORTATION." Sell it, don't let it rest on a dusty shelf where no one can see or hear about it. It pays to advertise!

Akron Division

On February 9, Track Supervisor Purcell, Lodi, again demonstrated that the spirit of a "Good Neighbor" permeates the Baltimore and Ohio family. A child ran into the Lodi station to call a doctor by telephone, saying that a younger child was choking to death. The doctor was called but meantime Purcell hurried to the home and was able to remove the small tin whistle which had lodged in the baby's throat. The doctor did not arrive until some time later and the credit for saving the child's life therefore belongs to "Sam" Purcell.

Pumper C. A. Meeks was found dead in the Berea Pumping Station recently. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Our annual ball brought a distinguished company to Akron on March 3. Aunt Mary will tell the story. I think this was her first trip to one of our annual banquets and she seemed to enjoy herself thoroughly. If she danced with the same gentleman twice we did not notice it.

Getting and holding business are two things in which we specialize. Do your part in this work all the time.

Death has claimed the father of Chief Clerk W. W. McGaughey. Sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

It is all right to tell your friends that we have a good railroad, but try to tell them in such a way that they will desire to test your statements.

Agent Smith, Newton Falls, is absent because of sickness. A. F. Alexander is wrestling milk cans and other things at that station.

A Few Spring Dreams.

"I've been using a Hamilton for fifteen years and have always been able to rely on it."

CONDUCTOR JAMES C. WIER of the New York Central Lines is in charge of a train that makes very important connections with trains on other railroads.

Conductor Wier, through his thirty-one years of service, has worked most of the time as a passenger conductor. Fifteen years ago he selected a Hamilton as the watch that would give him real time service.

You, too, will find in the Hamilton the answer to your perplexing time problems. With a Hamilton, you are prepared to time any train on any railroad, always sure that your watch is "right."

Most railroad men prefer the Hamilton No. 992. This model betters the most rigid time inspection requirements, and with proper care will serve you for many years.

Ask your jeweler to show you Hamilton railroad grades the next time you pass his shop. He will tell you, just what your co-workers will tell you, that the Hamilton is the most dependable, the most accurate, and the most economical watch you can buy.

For other than time inspection service, we recommend the Hamilton No. 974, which gives you Hamilton quality in a watch of lower price than regular railroad grades.

Track Foreman L. J. Wilkinson, Chardon, has been pensioned. He will reside with his brother in Texas. He has given our company many years faithful service and will be difficult to replace.

The family of Carpenter Marshall Preto, who died recently at Newton Falls, express their appreciation for the many expressions of sympathy and floral offerings from Baltimore and Ohio employees.

Every railroad patron wants service and satisfaction. We carry a large stock and can furnish both commodities in abundance.

Pensioned Engineer J. S. Chambers died at his home in Akron on February 26. He had been employed in Akron for many years prior to his retirement and was well and favorably known.

We can talk "Freight Claim Prevention," but it is the man on the job who makes the success of this campaign possible.

Pearl and Frank danced divinely at the annual ball, but did not give us the promised photographs. For this reason we cannot publish the nice story they wrote saying they were the best dancers on the floor. Perhaps they will send their photographs in time for next month.

"Stop that Leak" is not merely a collection of words. The meaning is clear and there is enjoyment in figuring out new ways to stop waste and loss.

Charles Honodle, general ticket agent, Akron, died at his home on February 9. The Akron Beacon Journal says:

"He was born in Middlebury, now Case av., 58 years ago and was one of the best known men in Akron, having spent his entire life here. He began his railroad career at the age of 18 when he became a telegraph operator for the Baltimore and Ohio and was promoted to the position of ticket agent.

"Following the consolidation of the passenger depots here into a union station he was appointed agent. It was through his efforts that the union ticket office, then located in a frame building on E. Market st., was established years ago.

"In addition to his membership in the First Congregational church he was a member of the Knight Templars, City club, Fairlawn Golf club and Rotary club. He recently completed a new home on Storer Avenue.

"Funeral services were held on February 11 in the First Congregational church. The Knight Templars had charge."

Commenting editorially on the death of Mr. Honodle, the Beacon Journal says:

"It is no easy task for this community to reconcile itself to the death of Charley Honodle. How deeply it will miss him! Thirty years of continuous association with the ticket offices of the local railways enabled him to make friendships that were of one voice in praising him for a life devoted to thoughtful service to others. Long before courtesy and accommodation became watchwords in business life, Charley Honodle was practicing these ideals across the counter and through the ticket window in Akron. If a kind word of explanation would help, or a smile serve better than a frown, they were always forthcoming from the reservoir of his abundant good nature. His patience was proof against all the ordeals chance and circumstances set against it. Charley Honodle was a good representative of the type of citizenship that gives strength and substance to any city. He had no ambition to be its richest man or its greatest man, but at his death he leaves a heritage that 'no wealth can win, no power create'—the record of a life of modest dignity and calm content, survived by a chain of golden friendship that to the end of its days will never fail to cherish his memory."

The sincere sympathy of Akron Division employees is extended to the bereaved family.

Division Accountant's Office

Assistant Correspondent, LENORA WINTER

Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Hert, who were married on February 16, have returned from their honeymoon in the east. Mr. Hert has been in the Division Accountant's Office at Cleveland since its organization, and at Akron since the consolidation of Cleveland and New Castle Divisions. Mr. Hert is an old Baltimore and Ohio employee; he started his railroad experience in the Master Mechanic's Office at Lorain, Ohio, in 1915. Mrs. Hert was formerly Miss Martha Adams of the Division Engineer's Office, Akron, Ohio.

It is interesting to reproduce an old photograph which was found by Division Accountant F. L. Sheakley in a room at Cumberland that was being renovated, and forwarded to Division Accountant S. H. Jewett, Akron. Mr. Jewett remembers all of these former employees and knows the present location of many. They are; Upper row, left to right: Wm. Rober, assistant motive power timekeeper; C. J. Sevier, formerly clerk, Wheeling, Office General Superintendent Motive Power, was transferred to Lorain as M. C. B. bill clerk; Frank Foote, formerly storekeeper, Lorain; Frank Rush, stores material clerk. Lower row: A. D. Walther, formerly shop clerk, Parkersburg and Lorain, Ohio, later filled a responsible position in Office of Superintendent Motive Power J. E. Mulfeld, Baltimore, Md.; Dan Hall, motive power timekeeper; S. H. Jewett, motive power distribution clerk, E. J. Cooper, assistant motive power distribution clerk; C. M. Smith, motive power accountant; Wm. Westfeld, chief clerk to trainmaster; Frank Hart, assistant storekeeper; Arthur Spademan, car clerk; Easton Broadbridge, car clerk; Ralph Beers, stores material clerk.

This picture was taken about 1905 at Lorain, Ohio, in front of the Master Mechanic's Office, the master mechanic at that time being Geo. F. Hess, who will be remembered by the older employees. Division Accountant Jewett, Akron, is the only one of the group who is still in Baltimore and Ohio service.

New Castle Junction, Pa.

Correspondent, AGNES L. BARNES

About 150 employes with families and friends journeyed to Akron in a special train from New Castle to attend the annual ball given in the Armory at Akron, Monday, March 3. The dance was a huge success, and even though we did not arrive home until the wee small hours Tuesday everyone reported a grand time. "Aunt Mary," of the MAGAZINE, was among those present.

John Minick, clerk in the Stores Department, is confined to his home with scarlet fever. However, John expects to be back shortly.

It is with regret that we report the death of John Adam McGaughey, 68 years, father of William W. McGaughey, chief clerk to Superintendent Mann, Akron, Ohio. Mr. McGaughey became ill while attending church on Sunday evening, February 24, and passed away during the early hours of Sunday, March 2. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Helen and Mae, a son, William, and two grandchildren. Our sympathy is extended to the family in their sorrow.

Former Engineer C. A. Reamer, whose name appeared in our February issue as having secured five passengers for points in Georgia and Florida, has four more passengers to his credit for January.

Lieutenant Karl E. Wright is another live wire, always on the lookout for business for the Best and Only.

Each and every employe of the Baltimore and Ohio should at least make an effort to obtain some passenger or freight traffic, using the "Prospective Business" cards which may be found in each issue of the MAGAZINE.

The correspondent will be glad to have news and photographs of employes and their families which will be of interest for publication in the MAGAZINE.

Thomas Moorehead, a well-known local business man, recently returned from Florida, and immediately upon his return went to our ticket office and said: "The dining car service on the Baltimore and Ohio is the best I ever had." He further stated he would boost the Baltimore and Ohio at every opportunity.

The Shenango Pottery, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world, is located in this city and manufactures most of the china used in the Baltimore and Ohio dining cars. This concern now has on display in a local store window a few samples of material and processes used in firing china. It is especially interesting in view of the fact that the china displayed is standard equipment for our dining cars.

The Freight Office Force at New Castle are so terribly busy that nothing ever happens worth putting in the MAGAZINE. Wonder what inducement we can offer that will make them come across with a little news once in a while? Same applies to the Stores Department.

New Castle Junction always was noted for its athletes, but the latest star to be

million miles on the road—
and still a good bag!"

Nine years of constant, daily punishment! A million miles of service! Such is the remarkable record of one Naugahyde Bag recently returned to us. Records like that help to explain why so many railroad men carry these bags.

Naugahyde Bags are made to stand the hardest kind of wear—day in and day out. Built over a strong steel frame, vulcanized into a single piece with no seams to rip, no rivets to come loose—waterproof and heat-proof—no wonder Naugahyde outlasts all ordinary bags!

Naugahyde Bags are made with a handsome black grain finish, English check lining and solid brass fittings of the finest quality. Unexcelled in appearance, they hold their good looks in spite of the hardest treatment.

If your dealer cannot supply you immediately, write direct to us. Unusually moderate prices. Made in three sizes—16 inch, 18 inch, and 20 inch.

developed is none other than Terminal Train Master W. H. Yeager. The Rotary club and other civic organizations of New Castle have formed a basketball league and from the reports we receive they all refer to "Bill" Yeager as the shining light. Mr. Yeager says he will be better when he gets in condition, but getting in condition is much more painful than pleasant. He should have started last year—he would surely have made the Baltimore and Ohio team which won the City Championship.

Ever meet Conductor C. E. McDougall? If not, you have missed something worth while. The photograph of his grandchildren appeared in the February MAGAZINE, and from all he tells us, Eugene must be "some" boy. He is an accomplished musician, is playing in churches, orchestras, etc., and Grandpop is proud of him—with reason. Conductor McDougall runs The Capitol Limited and No. 16 between Willard and Laughlin Junction, and he is a loyal Baltimore and Ohio booster. Riding in a sleeper on No. 16 the other day we were particularly impressed with his courtesy. He shows particular attention to ladies traveling alone and to children, giving them every assistance in his power. And there's another story, a little bird told us, about a business man who came out of Washington on the Capitol Limited recently, who was so engrossed in his work that he forgot to leave the club car and go into the Pittsburgh chair car. His hat, grip, etc., were in the chair car. Did this bother Conductor McDougall? Not a bit. He found a cap for our guest, made arrangements to get him back to Pittsburgh, and when the pleased passenger arrived finally, he found his grip, coat, etc., waiting for him at the gate. "Service?" said Conductor McDougall, "why that's what we are here for. The Capitol Limited is a train to be proud of and you may be sure I'll do everything I can to make it even more popular than it is now." That's the kind of men we have on our passenger trains, and it is men such as this who are giving our passenger service a reputation second to none.

Engineer George H. Hoffman is the proud owner of a brand new "Cheve" Sedan. George picked out the widest street in town to practice driving on, but the public will give him lots of room until he has completed the other 47 lessons under the ever watchful eye of his better half, who has undertaken the task of teaching him.

R. E. Erwin and F. R. Doyle recently have been transferred to Akron Junction as enginehouse foremen. Both these young men are hustlers and the best wishes of their many friends go with them.

Sympathy is extended to Fire Marshal E. P. Scanlon in the death of his mother at her home on February 26 after a lingering illness.

Car Foreman E. W. Hott has been transferred to Garrett, Ind. He is succeeded by C. T. Robison, formerly car foreman, Garrett. "Robby" is no stranger at the Junction, he was located here before the War. His smiling countenance is welcome among his many old friends.

L. P. Tschuor, machinist apprentice, has returned from an extended trip through the west. "Larry" visited all the principal cities on the coast and returned by the way of Yuma, Ariz., stopping at many places of interest enroute. It took him three months to make the trip, which was made for the benefit of his health. He certainly got the desired results if appearances count.

We are glad to see him back again, especially dee-lighted is his friend from Ashland Avenue.

Many of our older employes will remember J. A. Meegan, formerly rate clerk with us but who later cast his fortunes with our old friend the B. R. & P. It is welcome news to know that he has recently been promoted to travelling freight agent for B. R. & P. with offices in New Castle. We knew John as a faithful and efficient employe, and his many friends wish him an abundance of success.

E. B. Farrell, machinist, has been promoted to assistant enginehouse foreman here. "Ed" is one of the younger men of the supervisory force and is making good with a big capital "G."

Over one hundred shop employes from New Castle helped to swell the large crowd that attended the staff officers' ball held in the Armory at Akron, Ohio, on March 3. General Foreman N. R. Butler was in charge. He had engine 4293 in fine shape and all shined up for the trip, and it made an excellent run from New Castle to Akron. "A splendid time" was the way everybody expressed himself and many complimentary remarks were heard about the efficient manner in which the special was handled.

Business at this station showed a good increase in February. Earnings were the greatest of any February in the history of the station.

We are also glad to note that on February 28 the Baltimore and Ohio celebrated its ninety-seventh birthday, the charter being granted in 1827.

B—is for bigger, better and best,
O—is for onward, ahead of the rest, of things worth while, we are always in quest,
B. & O.! B. & O. will stand every test!

Carrying out suggestions made at the meeting held in Cincinnati, February 21, a local freight claim prevention meeting was held here February 27. Business transacted at the Cincinnati meeting was explained by local chairman. Routine business was also handled.

The annual dance given by the staff for employes of the Akron Division was held in the Akron Armory on March 3. A number of employes from the Youngstown District attended.

Tallyman Howard Kyle, who has been in Pasadena, Cal., for the past month, is much improved.

"Dusty" says: "Spring fever has struck this town early this year. Coming to work today I saw a dog chasing a cat and they were both walking."

Our congratulations are extended to Machinist James T. Dorsey and Miss Inez Ferree, who were married on March 4. "Jim" says this was not a Leap Year marriage. He would have been married sometime ago if "Bill" Kady would have given him leave of absence for a few days.

C. E. Avers (Long Distance) is at loss to understand how to keep the new ten-inch water mains from leaking after laying them. There are no threads on the ends to make connections.

Roundhouse Foreman "Mike" Graney is either back in his correspondence or expects her to stay a long time. He has purchased four boxes of writing paper during the past two weeks.

"Do Do" was not pleased with the comic valentine she received, she accuses one of her best friends of sending it. She says it could only be one who is familiar with her who could pick out such an appropriate one.

Ethel does not take much time to eat her lunch owing to making a change of costume each noon. Frequently a "Tabbie" blocks the crossing and she only has time to change her beads.

Mr. and Mrs. "Nick" Guleff announced the recent arrival of a boy. Congratulations! You know we need good car inspectors, "Nick."

And last, but not least—well, all of us must take the back seat now! Fireman and Mrs. Urban H. Wallace came forth with the announcement of two new and welcome arrivals, twin boys. We suggest that they be called "Ruff and Reddy." Let's have their pictures.

Should the industrial boom in our thriving city stop, we think the Akron Division would be bankrupt. The receipts at our station for the month of February amounted to $290,000, next to the highest mark ever made at this point.

Brakemen R. J. Everett, Dover, Ohio, D. H. Williams, E. P. Fenstermaker, and F. C. Wiesenber, Massillon, were promoted to conductors. Good luck to you, boys!

Conductor F. C. Wiesenber recently made his first trip as conductor. It is reported that the trip was a success, but "Chick" got sick, and had to lay off when he got in. We know you were sick, "Chick," but it really did look bad.

Miss Nell Pope is in California, visiting her sister and friends. Miss Bessie Keough, secretary to master mechanic, will join Miss Pope, when she goes on vacation. They will visit Mrs. Carrie Latshaw McCarthy while in the west. Mrs. McCarthy will accompany the young ladies on their return trip as far as Ogden, where they will remain for a few days. Mrs. Katherine Rank is filling Miss Pope's place in the office of Master Mechanic Moses.

The accompanying picture is of Superintendent F. S. DeVeney. Mr. DeVeney commenced work on a farm at the age of twelve years, attending public school in winter until he was sixteen. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service at Garrett, Ind., in November, 1895 as a helper, Car Shops, his rate of pay being eleven cents per hour. Because of business being dull he was permitted to work eight hours per day, for which he received eighty-eight cents, or about thirty-eight cents per day more than he received for sixteen hours labor on a farm. After working about four months as a helper, Rip Track Foreman Richard Bradley asked the boy if he was a carpenter, to which he replied, "My father was a carpenter." Mr. Bradley then said, "So are you. Bring your tools with you and start repairing cars in the morning." Mr. DeVeney did as he was told, and after handling this work for two or three months, he was promoted to car inspector and "tapped wheels" in both freight and passenger service at Garrett. Later he shoveled coal to keep them moving and finally his hand guided the engine that kept the wheels rolling. In 1897 he took a leave of absence and returned to the farm for a short time, returning to Baltimore and Ohio service as yard freeman in December, 1897; he has remained with this Company ever since.

During June, 1899 while firing west-bound Train 7, Mr. DeVeney's train was flagged near Willsons, at that time the end of double track between Garrett and South Chicago. The usual stop was made and much to the surprise of Mr. DeVeney and Engineer "Jim" Collins, they looked out of the cab into the muzzles of 48 calibre revolvers. They had been held up by the notorious car barn bandits, who had supposed there was a large sum of money on No. 7. These men, however, dynamited the wrong car and secured nothing for their trouble. The car barn bandits later met their fate at the end of a hangman's rope in Chicago. From Mr. DeVeney's description of the guns, the muzzles must have looked as large as rain water barrels.

Mr. DeVeney was promoted to engineer in 1903, running extra for about a year and a half; he was then assigned to a regular engine for two years, after which engines were pooled. He continued in this service until October 25, 1910 when he was transferred to the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Railroad as assistant road foreman of engines, Chicago. In 1912 he was appointed road foreman of engines, which position he held until October 16, 1919 when the title and duties of trainmaster were added. On May 1, 1921 he was appointed superintendent, which position he has held with credit to himself and our Company ever since.

Mr. DeVeney has worked hard to secure his various well deserved promotions and he has been largely responsible for many improvements made here, such as the addition of larger power, the telephone system of train dispatching, greater efficiency in man power and heavier tonnage handled at greater speed. It is well known that 1923 was the banner year for our road. He has also made every possible effort to bring about a better feeling between Management and employees and was sponsor for our progressive organization known as the "Chicago Terminal Employees Association," which is a thriving body and is rapidly becoming an important factor in our lives.

Many nice things have been published in the MAGAZINE from time to time about various officers and employees but practically nothing has been said about "Our Superintendent." Whether it is because

J. R. HEAD, of Kansas, who lives in a small town of 631 people. He has made as high as $69.50 in one day selling Comer All Weather Coats

A. B. SPENCER, an insurance man who represents us in spare time. We paid him $625 for one month's spare time

W. S. COOPER, of Ohio, who finds it easy to earn over $500 a month selling Comer All Weather Coats

Will You Give Me a Chance to Pay You $100 a Week?

I WANT to make an offer whereby you can earn from $100 to $1,000 a month cash. You can be your own boss. You can work just as many hours a day as you please. You can start when you want to and quit when you want to. You don't need experience and you get your money in cash every day when you earn it.

These Are Facts

Does that sound too good to be true? If it does, then let me tell you what J. R. Head did in a small town in Kansas. Head lives in a town of 631 people. He was sick, broke, out of a job. He accepted my offer. I gave him the same chance I am now offering you. At this new work he has made as high as $69.50 for one day's work. If that isn't enough, then let me tell you about E. A. Sweet of Michigan. He was an electrical engineer and didn't know anything about selling. In his first month's spare time he earned $243. Inside of six months he was making between $600 and $2,200 a month. W. J. McCrary is another man I want to tell you about. His regular job paid him $2.00 a day, but this wonderful new work enabled him to make $9,000 a year. Yes, and right this very minute, you are being offered the same proposition that has made these men so successful. Do you want it? Do you want to earn $40.00 a day?

A Clean, High-grade, Dignified Business

Have you ever heard of Comer All-Weather Coats? They are advertised in the leading magazines. Think of a single coat that can be worn all year round. A good-looking, stylish coat that's good for summer or winter—that keeps out wind, rain or snow, a coat that everybody should have, made of fine materials for men, women and children, and sells for less than the price of an ordinary coat.

Now, Comer coats are not sold in stores. All our orders come through our own representatives. Within the next few months we will pay representatives more than three hundred thousand dollars for sending us orders. And now I am offering you the chance to become our representative in your territory and get your share of that money. All you do is to take orders. We do the rest. We deliver. We collect and you get your money the same day you take the order. You can see how simple it is. We furnish you with a complete outfit and tell you how to get the business in your territory. We help you to get started. If you send us only four average orders a day, which you can get in an hour or so in the evening, you will make $100 a week.

Maybe You Are Worth $1,000 a Month

Well, here is your chance to find out, for this is the same proposition that enabled George Garon to make a clear profit of $40.00 in his first day's work—the same proposition that gave R. W. Krieger $20.00 net profit in a half hour. It is the same opportunity that gave A. B. Spencer $625 cash for one month's spare time. I need 500 men and women, and I need them right away. If you mail the coupon at the bottom of this ad I will show you the easiest, quickest, simplest plan for making money that you ever heard of. If you are interested in increasing your income from $100 to $1,000 a month and can devote all your time or only an hour or so a day to my proposition, write your name down below, cut out the coupon and mail it to me at once. You take no risk, and this may be the one outstanding opportunity of your life to earn more money than you ever thought possible.

Find Out NOW!

We regret to announce the death of Franklin A. Kryder, carpenter, who lost his life in an accident at Tiffin, Ohio, on February 28. Mr. Kryder was assisting in repairing Baltimore and Ohio bridge over the Sandusky River at Tiffin, when a light engine approached. Being confused by the noise, smoke and steam of another engine nearby, he did not hear the shouts of his fellow workman and was struck and thrown through the bridge alighting on a platform just below. He is survived by a mother, brother and sister to whom we extend our sympathy.

The four "sheiks" in the accompanying photograph taken at Garrett in the year 1890 are; The Cogley Twins, James (Jid) (sitting right) and John, Emmett (Kid) Manion, and Leo D. Mager. At the time this photograph was taken these men were firemen; at present they are running passenger engines; "Jid" Cogley is on Trains 31 and 32; John Cogley, Trains 37 and 38; "Kid" Manion Trains 7 and 8, Eastern Division, and "Leo" Mager, Trains 9 and 16, Eastern Division.

For the past year, Frank W. Paden, agent North Baltimore, Ohio, has been president of the Commerical Club at that point. He has done a great deal for the interests of North Baltimore, in addition to boosting his own company in every way possible. At the recent election of officers for 1924, Mr. Paden retired from office and the following resolution was adopted by a rising vote:

"Resolved by the Commerical Club of the Village of North Baltimore, Ohio:

"That the thanks of this organization are due and are hereby tendered in fullest measure to F. W. Paden, president and Arthur J. French, secretary now retiring from their respective offices, for the able manner in which for the past three years they have filled the said offices and conducted the business of this club. And as an evidence of our appreciation of their services, be it further.

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution, signed by the President and Secretary now elected as their successors in office, be presented to each one of them."

H. M. SOMMERS, Pres.
L. W. BIEHLER, Secy.

In addition, the resolution contained the appropriate verses "Do it Now."

Mr. Paden was presented with a handsome electric lamp for his services; he retains the office of chairman, Finance Committee.

Of a naturally modest disposition, Frank was not anxious that this story should be "broadcasted" but we finally convinced him it was an item of general interest to Chicago Division employes, and he reluctantly consented to allow us to use it.

The accompanying photograph of engine 187 was taken at the Stave Factory, Cameron, W. Va., in 1889 or 1890. Standing, right to left: Martin Cogley, Harry Burkley, "Pete" Flemming, Park Shaddick, Samuel Wilhelm, "Ed" Murphy (next two unknown), "Hutch" Neuss, "Dan" Cogley, "Roll" Stimble, John McDermott, "Will" Fry, Crede Malone, Arwood Fitzgerald, "Will" Boerner. Perhaps some of the Cameron people will recognize this picture.

Carl Weaver, the "little" motive power accountant, Division Accountant's Office, is holding his head a little higher because of the arrival of John Marvin, who is "broadcasting" from station 206 S. Cowen St. Aunt Vesta says those wishing to tune in will hear him anytime after midnight.

Division Freight Agent Sullivan is able to be out again after being confined to his home in Chicago with a severe case of "Flu."

Before Publication Every Chapter in This Book Was Read and Approved by a Government Authority.

Uncle Sam is not merely a tax collector and policeman.

He is the partner of every citizen engaged in legitimate productive activities.

He does myriad things to increase and to better the product of field, of mine, and of mill.

His experts are constantly engaged in solving the vexatious problems of industry, of agriculture, and of commerce.

He fosters new enterprises, introduces new crops, and opens up new markets.

He improves facilities of communication and transportation.

He safeguards the lives and health of his people.

He encourages inventive genius and provides wonderful educational opportunities in a hundred lines.

In short, he does everything that human intelligence can conceive to make this a better country in which to live, to improve living standards and conditions, and to add to the sum total of happiness and prosperity.

This book contains Uncle Sam's report to you.

Every American should not only own a copy of the new and enlarged edition of "The American Government," by Frederic J. Haskin, but should see that others have it.

Not the wisest seer nor the most optimistic dreamer among the founders of this Government would have dared to predict the things that this book sets forth.

It is a story of varied deeds more marvelous than the wonder tales of the ancients.

It is a story whose astounding facts stand out so boldly in the record of the world's progress that the knowledge of them cannot but increase the love and honor we all have for our country.

"The American Government," new and enlarged edition, has 484 pages, including a 32-page section of beautiful halftone illustrations. There are 42 chapters; over 150,000 words. It is 8x5 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches in size and durably bound in forest green cloth stamped with gold. Before publication every chapter of this book was read and approved by a Government authority. It is in a class with books that often sell for \$3 or \$4. It is being distributed by the BALTIMORE AND OHIO MAGAZINE primarily to promote better citizenship by giving a better and more intimate understanding of how the Government functions. Price ONE DOLLAR (\$1.00) postage prepaid to any address in the United States. Money back if not satisfied.

FREE. With each book, a new 5-color map of the United States, 28x22 inches in size. This map gives population of leading cities, time zones, distances between principal cities, nicknames of States, State mottoes, State flowers, and photographs of 48 leading Federal officials; also free, booklet containing complete text of Constitution of United States.

Night Terminal Trainmaster C. J. Richards is still confined to his home with tonsillitis. Yardmaster E. F. Gira is acting in his place.

Donald Crooks, our cartoonist, has joined the ranks of the benedicts, having been married in January to Miss Vera Paden, daughter of Baggage-master F. B. Paden. Congratulations!

It can safely be stated at the present time that Willard is one of the busiest terminals on the Baltimore and Ohio, handling between 4000 and 5000 cars daily, working 25 yard engines, dispatching 40 to 50 freight trains and 36 passenger trains per 24-hour period. We give employment to 351 men at shop, 205 at car yard, 70 at transfer sheds and over 400 men in Transportation Department.

E. L. Clock, assistant foreman, Transfer House, has resumed duty after a month's absence because of scarlet fever.

J. D. McSweeney and Willard Ashley are leaving the Baltimore and Ohio fold April 1, and will open an up-to-date shoe store. Their many friends wish them success.

Swift's Ice House has been the scene of much activity the past few weeks, 390 cars of ice having been unloaded and stored for use the coming summer.

Miss Maurine Long, secretary to terminal trainmaster, is taking a needed rest at the home of her parents in Deshler, Ohio. Miss Margaret Cavany is handling the position during Miss Long's absence.

Willard Terminal extends sympathy to the family of Akron Division Conductor W. A. Cavany who passed to the Great Beyond on January 28.

While we regret to lose C. T. Robison, who has been transferred to New Castle Division, our congratulations are extended to O. L. Hott on his appointment as general car foreman.

We welcome two new faces in the Master Mechanic's Office. Ralph Weaver is acting as stenographer to shop clerk, while Darel Hartle is our new messenger. The vacancies were occasioned by transfer of former messenger to C. T. Department and absence of Miss M. Galloway account illness. We hope she has a speedy recovery.

Miss Teresa Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson, South Hamsher Street, and Paul Faust, son of Mrs. Theresa Faust, South Peter Street, were united in marriage by the Rev. F. A. King at St. Peter and Paul's Catholic Church at 7.30 p. m., February 27. Mr. Faust is a boiler-maker, having learned his trade in the local shops. Congratulations!

B. O. LaRue, skilled material man, General Foreman's Office, is absent because of an operation. His place is being filled by John Dwyer.

We were sorry to see E. L. Fleming, instructor of fuel economy, leave the Chicago Division. We wish him success in his new position on the Newark Division. He is succeeded by R. Rice to whom we extend a hearty welcome.

In talking with Terminal Train Master Huggins, the writer was informed that this winter has been the greatest, for some time, for stock business. We are pleased to hear such reports. Now if all the employees get busy and make use of the "Prospective Business" cards, which will be found in each issue of the MAGAZINE, business will be good in all lines. If you cannot solicit freight, get after your friends and get them to use our Passenger Service—which is unexcelled.

Reports from Catalina Islands, the training camp of the "Cubs," indicate that "Phil" Collins is doing good work. We hope to see him on the mound a good many times this season. "Phil" is considered a star curve-ball pitcher.

There was considerable excitement in the General Foreman's Office recently. Cigars and candy were much in evidence. Why? F. M. Galloway, night round house foreman, was just announcing the arrival of an 8½ pound baby girl.

We were sorry to hear that our good friend "Spark" Suerth had been injured, having been struck by an engine, and trust that he will be none the worse for his experience.

The Mechanical Department and Round House Forces were well represented at the wedding of "Alex" Bejgrowicz, February 26; Mr. Quigley, Mr. Severence, Mr. Manley (our local cartoonist) and many others, too numerous to mention. Congratulations, "Alex," but why slight the Stores Department?

We regret to lose our car foreman R. A. Kleist, who has left South Chicago to take up his duties at Lorain, as general car foreman. Good luck to you, "Roy."

At the same time we greet F. E. Chesire who comes from Sandusky, succeeding Mr. Kleist. Be assured of our hearty co-operation.

"Louis" Napierkowski, the writer understands, has been appointed assistant car foreman. Congratulations!

Oh yes, we believe in luck. Every man who holds a big job gets there through luck. All he has to do is to cultivate a pleasing personality; make himself well liked by others; sow seeds of kindness and good cheer wherever he goes; perform his work better than the "unlucky" man does; render the most and best service possible, regardless of the salary he is getting. ##### Topics of the Day Loss and damage is the subject today, and also the claims which we have to pay. To cut them down is easy to say, but to do so, many plans we must lay. The receiving clerk must check every load that shippers deliver to his road and see that old marks are removed from each crate; this is the effort we want him to make.

The trucker must handle with thought and care, the part of the shipment that comes in his share; and treat it as though it belonged to himself, as if it were a part of his wealth. The bill clerk must bill every piece on the list, and check back to see if any he missed; see that the bills are kept with the car, and correctly the shipment will move very far.

For years our motto has been the same, "Stop the Bad Order Habit and Prevent a Claim." And if everyone will do his part each day, "Old Man Claims" in six feet of earth will lay.—W. G. O'Donnell in Rock Island Magazine

We are glad to announce that there has been an improvement in the condition of J. Albert Johns, who has been ill for several months.

On his return from Johns Hopkins Hospital a few days ago "Al" was all smiles, which would lead one to believe that he is on the way to health again.

Correspondent Robert George, Accounting Department, was forced to leave his desk on March 6 because of trouble with his eyes. We hope for his early recovery.

We have with us a new radio fan, one of our local officials, who has entered the field unannounced. We called at his office and found an up-to-date set hidden there. As the new fan is a bachelor, we take it that the majority of his evening hours will be passed in making a close check of stock markets, scrap markets and other programs which are interesting to a bachelor.

Earl Woodward, foreman, Stores Department, was injured recently while checking lumber, one of the planks fell on his foot, necessitating his removal from the shops to his home on Hudson Avenue.

Shop Foreman William R. Browning is still on sick list. Searl Watts is acting foreman during his absence.

Safety Agent Head spent a day with shop Safety committeemen recently and checked up all cases of injury during the past month. Each case was gone over with the man, accompanied by his foreman. This practice is commendable; it will have a tendency to keep employees as well as foremen alert to all conditions which, if not corrected on discovery, may result in injury later.

William A. Savey, veteran passenger conductor, died on March 6 after an illness of one week. Mr. Savey was born at Logan, Ohio, on September 5, 1857. He came to Newark in 1883, entering the service as brakeman. Later he was promoted to freight conductor and then passenger conductor. The latter position he held until the time of his death. His faithful and painstaking service to the Company are the outstanding features in his railroad career. He was known to thousands of patrons of the Baltimore and Ohio passenger service; was ever courteous and agreeable, and was highly esteemed by his officials and fellow employees.

Surviving him are his wife, one son, Louis J., Accounting Department, Newark, Ohio; two grandchildren, his aged mother, who was at his bedside when death occurred; five brothers and two sisters, Nicholas, of Newark, also a passenger conductor; "Alex" and Edward of Alliance, Ohio; Joseph of Logan, Ohio; James, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Bert Loudenslager, of Columbus, and Mrs. Samuel Swick, of Newark. Funeral services were held from St. Francis de Sales Church on March 10.

You remember the old time saying, "April showers bring May flowers." Well, to make a long story short, COME ON WITH THE FLOWERS.

Away with dangerous practices
Put the careless man wise
Remember those at home
Immediately depending on you
Loss of time is serious

That wonderful word THRIFT, how are you getting along with it by this time? January, February, March—three months have passed. Have you held your expenses within the limits of the budget you made up at the beginning of the year? And have you placed to your credit in the bank the stated amount which was to be set aside for savings? Now listen! If you have not carried out your plan, no one is to blame but yourself. Do not give up so easily, grit your teeth and dig in again. You might cut out some of the things that are doing you no good, just passing fancy, but they certainly do hurt that saving plan which you fully intended to follow when you started out to do things on January 1. If you cannot save yourself, let the Baltimore and Ohio save for you. They will be glad to deduct any amount from your pay, you will never see the money until you need it and then it will be ready for your use with a few days notice. Think this over seriously if you have not made a success of saving in a systematic way.

We were grieved to hear of the sudden death of Mahala Litten Moriarty, wife of Daniel H. Moriarty, president, Newark Division Veterans, on February 15, at 359 Clinton Street, Newark, Ohio, after a few weeks illness. Mrs. Moriarty was sixty years old. She was a life-long resident of Newark, where she was born. She also held the responsible post of vice-president, Ladies' Auxiliary.

Those left to mourn their loss include her husband, one sister Mrs. Rebecca Ryan of Newark, one brother, Wynn Litten, Martinsburg, and many friends.

Funeral services were held on February 18 from the First Baptist Church, Newark, of which Mrs. Moriarty was a devout member. Rev. Forest Fraser, pastor, officiated and burial was at Cedar Hill Cemetery, Newark.

Newark Division Veterans, officials, and employees join in extending to the bereaved family their heartfelt sympathy.

A Little Kindness

Copied from Kreolite News, December, 1923, issue

A little kindness every day
While we're at work or at our play!
A little smile, a little song,
A word of cheer when things go wrong,
To help a brother on his way!
It's a little thing to do;
Yet means so much to me and you!
Let's not forget that little smile
That little kindness all the while,

Our Newark Division Correspondent sends the Baltimore and Ohio Bridge at Bellaire, taken in 1878, and a group of Shop men, taken in 1909

Which gives us joy and courage, too!
A little kindness; 'twas the plan
To help us all since time began!
The only heaven that we know
Along life's pathway, as we go,
Is love bestowed by man to man?

So much has been said about Radio that you are probably tired of reading about it, but we ask your indulgence in a little story which has for its hero our tool room foreman, whose auto carries the letters "RJB" on the side doors. He became interested, then fell for it, like the rest of us. The set arrived, looked fine, must have it put up at once, can't wait for the boys to help me put up my aerial, I'll do it myself, why not? He secured ladders and other necessary tools to make the ascent went over the top all right, placed the aerial in position, BUT, when he started to come down, he lost his nerve and the neighbors had to go to his assistance lest he fall. Now "Bob" is wearing lead in the bottom of his shoes so he will not be able to get above sea level; he says it is dangerous for him to go above a certain level, so he is now keeping his feet on the ground. It was quite a come down but "Bob" is glad he did it.

Much has been said and written about cooperation, a mighty factor in the successful operation of any enterprise. Cooperation spells success and in turn brings satisfactory service. The hearty cooperation of employees makes rough places smooth and appreciation is not out of place. A page from our daily calendar at Mt. Vernon, Ohio demonstrates what can be accomplished through cooperation. On February 18, the Northwestern Elevator and Milling Co. needed five good box cars for flour and feed shipments. The supply of cars was short and Yard Clerk Wright did everything possible to find them. He asked Conductor E. C. Copper, No. 67, if he had any empty cars in his train which might be used. Conductor Copper said he had no empty cars, but that he had a light "Way Car" which he could leave at Mt. Vernon, by transferring the contents into another car while he was waiting for his train. Transfer was made and empty car placed by switching crew, in charge of Conductor Welch. It was loaded and billed out same day.

This gave the Mill Company relief and secured prompt handling and loading of equipment, added another car to car supply and added another link in the chain of service.

On the same date, Freight House Foreman Parker, knowing our need for equipment, made a special effort to release a car loaded with merchandise, to be used for loading at the Mill Company but was unable to do so before the "Turn-around" left. When Conductor Hobbs pulled the house track in the afternoon, he found empty marked for the Mill Company and arranged to take it to yards and place it on their track thus securing another car for their use. This kind of cooperation adds to the Baltimore and Ohio Service. SERVICE ADDS REVENUE AND REVENUE COMES IN MIGHTY HANDY IN MAKING UP OUR PAY CHECKS.

A Wreck of Names at Newark Yard Office

By A. S. WAHL, Yard Clerk

The G. Y. M. was at his accustomed place
Upon a "Wicker" chair,
"Grimm" look was seen upon his face
And madly he tore his hair.

A freight pulled in and jumped the track
And tied things up just right,
He called for a clerk and called for his hack
He would not see East "Lynn" that night.

A load of "Hay" and a load of "Woole"
Were piled up side by side,
While a car of "Rice" against the rules
Three tracks was trying to ride.

A switchman stood on the burning deck
Of a car of "Fresher" hams,
While out of the door they rolled by the "Peck"

And he howled "God save the 'Lambs'."

"What's your name?" the Y. M. cried, Through the din and roar came "Do no hue,"

"Divil of brakeman don't know his name,"
he sighed,
"Go to the office and get what's your due."

A sack of "Peanuts" lay on the ground,
And a "Drumm" and a "Harley" lay still,
While the G. Y. M. ran round and round
And the wreck master looked very ill.

We'll put 'em on when the "Hazelets" up
But while waiting we'll not be "Idle"
But get the bills and "Markham" up
And get steam on the hook and "Lydle."

We'll be "Owen" for this when we get done
'Twas plain carelessness, I say,
And some of you will have to "Poundstone"
For many and many a day.

The wreck is cleared and all is well,
The bills are put away,
The dawning sun shows over the knoll,
And business again holds sway.

The chief is once more in his place,
At his desk against the "Wall,"
He is feeling "Scrappy" and sets a pace
For the shacks and clerks and all.

And thus we find it everywhere
The Best and Only's growing,
We rant and fuss and tear our hair
To keep the freight trains going.

On February 28, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company marked its ninety-seventh birthday anniversary. On this date, in 1827, the charter was granted to the Company, the First Railroad in America, by the Maryland Legislature. Since then, the Baltimore and Ohio has far surpassed the fondest hopes of its founders, numbered among whom was the venerable and historic figure of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who laid its first stone. Being the first railroad in America, the history of the Baltimore and Ohio is closely interwoven with the annals of the nation down to the present time.

William A. Savey, one of our well known passenger conductors, passed to eternal rest on March 6 at his home in Fleck Avenue after only a week's illness of pneumonia. Mr. Savey was born in Logan, Ohio, on September 5, 1857. He came to Newark in 1883 and entered the service of the Company as a brakeman. He was known to thousands of the traveling public, as a courteous and agreeable employee, and was highly esteemed by the public as well as his by fellow employees and officers of the Company. He will be sadly missed, not only in the home circle, but by a legion of friends and acquaintances. Among the relatives who mourn his loss is one son, Louis J. Savey, Accounting Department.

The Baltimore and Ohio was well represented at the Chamber of Commerce banquet on the evening of February 22. Those present were: General Superintendent Stevens, Division Superintendent Kruse, Division Freight Agent Kendall, General Passenger Agent Squiggins, District Passenger Agent White and Freight Agent Henderson. After dinner Mr. Stevens gave an interesting talk, which was much appreciated.

Trucker W. M. Biehl injured his ankle while transferring a heavy safe cabinet. He is reported to be improving.

While in the Freight House the other day the writer heard one of our customers say that "A man who is not accommodating might just as well be in h——." This may seem strong but it appealed to me. When we stop to think why we are on this grand old earth, why there are other human beings the same as ourselves, we are reminded that mankind were made dependent upon each other as we thereby enjoy better opportunities fulfilling the duties of brotherly love and friendship. Take the baby, for instance, who is for days, months, and years incapable of securing its own food, clothing and many other necessities of life; and yet, because of their love, its parents are willing to sacrifice even life itself that the child may live. In other words, this is another form of accommodation. A lot of us have caught the spirit of accommodation, courtesy and good neighborliness; but there are some who have not. Remember the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." If we should all do this in our everyday life we would make this the greatest and grandest Railroad in the World.

Fisher is slow in the morning, but by ten he is usually better When the mailman drops in and delivers his dear, sweet P—'s love letter. Miss Wright is a loyal assistant to "Curt;" she is surely no slouch, But things have to move very smoothly, if she doesn't develop a grouch. "Whitey," our interchange wonder, though he's quiet and seems very meek, Will never get far away from the office until he grows into a Sheik. "Mike" keeps the traffic men moving, on car service he has no cronies; And he's happy and very contented when he wins a good bet on the ponies. Miss Weiler, the chief clerk, and Kennedy, the rest of our office force Will be kept for a later edition—Our space won't permit now of, course. Now the whole gang has worked faithfully, as the past month's receipts plainly show; We're all on our toes set and ready to clean up on March. Let us go!

On March 1 the local car foremen and their assistants, gave a farewell dinner at the Interurban Restaurant in honor of Frank E. Cheshire, foreman, Sandusky Car Shops, who, on March 3, took up his new duties as car foreman, South Chicago.

Mr. Cheshire's promotion was well deserved. During his two years at Sandusky he has handled the shops in a manner satisfactory to the Management, which has been accomplished through splendid cooperation on the part of all employees under his supervision. The Car Shop at Sandusky was one of the first shops to repair cars under the unit system, and the success attained under Mr. Cheshire's leadership caused other shops to copy the methods employed by Sandusky in handling this work. We are sorry to part with Foreman Cheshire, but we wish him success in his new field.

Dear Co-Worker:

We find you are not a member of the Saving Feature of the Relief Department.

We have the blanks ready for you. Be sure to ask for one when you receive your next check and each pay day make a deposit, no matter how small. You will find it grows and grows and the interest is always four per cent. or more. If you don't want to make the deposits yourself, it can be deducted from your pay.

It is a debt you owe yourself. If you are prepared for a rainy day it never comes and it is much more convenient than having to go to the bank.

Any employee of the company, his wife, child, father or mother or the beneficiary of any deceased member of the Relief Feature, may deposit with any depository designated by the Company. It also enables employees to borrow money at a moderate rate of interest and on easy terms of payment for the purpose of acquiring or improving a homestead or freeing it from debt.

Recently Night Yard Master Fred Noble had an exciting experience. An eastbound freight train set off a car load of hogs, on which the time for resting them was nearly due. After car was placed for unloading Mr. Noble was unable to locate anyone to do the work, so decided he would do it. He asked the engineer at consignee's plant to assist him and the performance started. The car was a double decker. They were successful in unloading the porkers from the lower deck, landing them in the stock pens. When they started to unload those on the upper deck, 5 or 6 of the pigs became unruly and refused to be driven to their doom. Mr. Noble and his assistant decided to use a little force and diplomacy. They drove the unruly ones to one end of the car and put some boards across which the engineer held up. But the porkers made a grand assault on the breastworks at the middle of the car, knocked them down and they fell on the engineer. He, therefore, decided he had enough so withdrew to his place of business in the engine room. The hogs then started straight towards Noble at the other end of the car. He gave them a backup signal with his lantern but the hogs refused to obey. Poor Noble was knocked down and the hogs walked all over him and trampled his lantern. He soon decided this was the end of his unloading hogs. Getting up he declared in emphatic language, "MY TIME IS MORE valuable in other places, so I will just leave the D— hogs in the car until some professional hog unloader comes around. Let him finish what I can't."

We would like to suggest that hereafter when Nobel gets his two days relief, it might be a good thing for him to go to the hog unloading station and take a few instructions on that end of the game; he may want to follow the stock business at some future time.

A Square Deal All Around

The happy home is where the husband gives the wife a square deal, figuring that the wife is entitled to the same privileges that he enjoys. Children should be given a square deal: they should be given the opportunity and benefits of a good education, so they can look the world in the face and feel they are inferior to none.

In social life the other fellow should be given a square deal, and be defended when he is absent. He should never be judged until his side of the question is heard.

In business life the same rule applies; bringing it down to railroad business, our business, the railroad company should be given a square deal. When criticisms are made by people who are not acquainted with railroad business, it is our duty to set the criticizers right, and explain the best we can, the railroad's side of the questions. The railroad employee should also be given a square deal, and, I might add, it is not often that he does not get it when the Baltimore and Ohio is concerned.

Mt. Vernon, Ohio

Freight business at this station for February shows a nice increase with good prospects for March.

The installation of electric flashlight signals at six most important street crossings is nearly completed and is expected to be ready for operation by the middle of March. This is a SAFETY measure.

Division Freight Agent E. N. Kendall, Traveling Freight Agent C. Masure and Freight Agent F. G. Hadley attended the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce at Mt. Vernon on March 4. After dinner, reports of the year's activities and other business matters were disposed of, and an address was given by Mr. A. P. Sandles. His interesting and instructive talk could not fail to make better citizens of any city or nation. He urged loyalty to our flag and observance of our laws. There were two hundred in attendance.

The "Good Neighbor" spirit among Baltimore and Ohio employees was recently given publicity in an article appearing in a local paper, wherein a story was told of a man, his wife and three children who were stranded here. Through a desire to avoid publicity and a proud spirit they did not ask charity. Disheartened, they set out on foot to Athens, Ohio, sixty miles distant, where the man had been promised a position. A train crew working in the yards noticed the quintet walking slowly along the ties and upon investigation found the man had formerly been employed on a railroad in Kentucky; they took up a collection which amounted to enough to pay the family's fare to Athens and purchased a badly needed pair of shoes for one of the kiddies. Needless to say the family, which had started out from this place downcast and disheartened, left convinced that every cloud has its silver lining and with a warm spot in their hearts for the Baltimore and Ohio and its employees. The article mentioned no names, but concluded with the following paragraph: "This is not the first example of railroaders charity. Time and again the 'boys' have gone down in their pockets to aid crippled and sick buddies. There is not one, but several disabled men in the East End whose needs have been taken care of by the Baltimore and Ohio shop and train men."

Carey Strausbaugh, assistant car foreman and Miss Mary Huffman, Lancaster, were united in marriage on February 12. Congratulations!

Electrician O. M. Smallwood, is receiving congratulations from his friends on the arrival of a daughter. This is his seventh child.

Arthur Morgan has been appointed foreman painter, Chillicothe, vice Wm. F. Ottman, pensioned. We wish him success.

L. Rahrle, stenographer to general car foreman, has been transferred to stenographer to storekeeper, vice J. Dwyer, who was transferred to Garrett, Ind., in a similar position.

The regular monthly meeting of Veterans and Ladies' Auxiliary was held February 12, in Eastern Star Hall. Members were again urged to make every effort to secure new members. Superintendent Carothers gave an interesting account of the early history of railroads. Sandwiches and coffee were served, followed by several tables of progressive euchre.

Stanley Heskett, blacksmith helper, is the proud father of a baby daughter, born on February 11.

Other stork deliveries are as follows: a son to Engineer S. B. "Jack" Frost; a daughter to Fireman Charles Young; a son to William Wood, boiler maker; ten pound daughter to Conductor Harry Murdock; Pearl Umpleby, tool room attendant, a son. Best wishes for the health and happiness of the young arrivals!

Eugene Sickles is the new messenger boy in the Superintendent's Office. Eugene is a cartoonist as will be noted by the two accompanying drawings.

One of these bears comment. Miss Ruth Buchmiller, stenographer to division engineer, has had difficulty in keeping her "one man dog," an airedale named "Bozo," at home. The last "home leaving" was just after she had her hair bobbed. "Bozo" took one look and left for parts unknown. After telephoning, advertising and automobile trips trying to locate him, he returned minus his expensive collar. Ruth hopes that after he becomes accustomed to the bob, he will be glad to stay at home.

Miss Dorothy Allison, daughter of Safety Agent "Bill" Allison, has been awarded a gold medal for proficiency in typewriting, having written sixty words per minute for ten consecutive minutes, with only four mistakes. Miss Allison is a student in the local high school. This test was prepared by the Remington Typewriter Company and prizes were given by them.

Get business for the Baltimore and Ohio! Always be on the outlook for business. Never mind the business outlook.

Chief Dispatcher C. D. Pairan who has had aittum trouble caused by an infected tooth, is in a Cineinnati hospital, recovering from an operation. He expects to be back soon.

After fifty-five years' continuous service, William F. Ottman, foreman painter, Chillicothe shops, was retired on a pension on February 25, 1924. He was born at Schooleys Station, Ohio, October 7, 1856. On February 25, 1869 he entered the service of the old Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad Company as messenger boy at Zaleski, Ohio. A year later he was made apprentice upholsterer and served at this trade about two and one half years. Ill health then compelled him to accept an open air position and he was transferred to freight ear painter. Three months later he regained his health and as he was still a boy, he accepted another apprenticeship in the Paint Department. After serving as a painter on passenger ear work at Zaleski, and with the consolidation of the Car and Locomotive Departments and their transfer to Chillicothe, he worked as a car and locomotive painter until 1899, when he was made foreman painter, which position he held until his retirement.

During his fifty-five years service he has been off duty only seven days because of sickness, was late for work twice and his name never off the pay roll. Such an untarnished record is one to be proud of and can be equalled by few. Mr. Ottman helped construct the first officers' car on this division, Car No. 1, built for W. W. Peabody, then general superintendent. He also put the words "Dining Car" on the first car of that kind owned by this division. The changes he has seen are numerous: a few are; split rail to standard size; "goose neck link and pin" to automatic; hand to air brake, candle to electric light, wood to coal burner.

On the evening after Mr. Ottman's retirement, all supervisors and foremen of the Mechanical Department met at the Master Mechanics' Office and went to his home in a body as a surprise, he having previously been "lured" away from home. On his arrival, after the first part of the surprise was over, Master Mechanic Gelhausen presented him with a gold watch, engraved with his initials and inside "To W. F. Ottman, from Mechanical Department Foremen, February 24, 1924." This was accompanied by a card bearing the following verse:

"Good Service!" What does it mean?

Doing the best we can,

Fifty-five years is the record of one B. & O. man.

Faithfulness and efficiency at both Zaleski and here,

Made us loth to see him leave, February 24th this year.

The kindest of thoughts and best wishes spoken,

By supervisors and foremen, accompany this token.

Mr. Gelhausen then called Mrs. Ottman, and after saying that she was largely responsible for Mr. Ottman's long and faithful service, he presented her with a silver fruit dish and a card reading:

Since you played your part well,
In establishing a record so fine,
Accept this little gift with a line
Of our appreciation and good will.

On back of both cards were the following names: F. R. Gelhausen, J. J. Hurley, E. B. Isenogle, W. B. Nolan, H. H. Howard, T. H. Schtele, B. F. Morgan, Ed. Brahler, J. B. Welsh, F. J. Rahrle, J. J. Ryan, J. A. Hickey, H. O. Edmondson, C. E. Shriver, B. Waller, J. D. Watters, H. E. Baum, A. J. Larriek, W. S. Warren, B. Ingham, S. E. Bordner, T. O. Swaney, C. A. Dullmeyer, A. Diehl, S. R. Waldon, C. E. Strausbaugh, C. W. Minch, E. Collins, Arthur Morgan, H. Cunningham, R. E. Huffman, F. J. Darding, G. H. Flagg and C. E. Botkins.

A social hour followed, during which several musical numbers were rendered by Mr. Ottman's grandchildren, Frederick and Anna Ottman and Norene Hohenstein, also by his daughter Mrs. T. J. Schachtele, wife of assistant round house foreman. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ottman and family. The party broke up at a late hour, all wishing Mr. Ottman many more years of health and happiness.

We regret to report the death of Henry W. Smith, aged 78 years, a lifelong resident of Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Smith began his railroad career at the age of 15 on the C. H. & D. Railway, when wood was used instead of coal for running locomotives. He fired an engine for a few years and was promoted to engineer, serving in that capacity until ten years ago, when he was retired. He was then the oldest engineer on this division. During his many years as engineer Mr. Smith never had a wreck or an accident, and no train of which he had charge was responsible for a single fatality. Mr. Smith is survived by his wife, a son, L. E. Smith, of Indianapolis; three daughters: Mrs. O. H. Starner, Carlisle, Pa., Mrs. W. L. Valiquette and Mrs. W. D. Coghill, both of Dayton, and five sisters. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

The photograph on the next page is of Master E. M. Velter, Jr., son of motive power time clerk, Division Accountant's Office, Dayton. He is a buster and wears a smile just like his dad.

Well boys, the big engines are here, and they are some monsters. Now all we have to do is to get plenty of business to keep them going. We will have twenty-five of them when they are all delivered, and we should be proud to think they're all assigned to this division. Keep them runnin'; an engine in white lead does not earn any revenue, and we're after a good showing on our division.

The photograph on the next page is of Richard William Wolke, 18 months old, grandson of Passenger Brakeman Fred H. Wolke, Toledo Division. The parents reside at Cleveland, Ohio, the father being a N. Y. C. ticket clerk. This youngster has won prizes, one in Cleveland and one in Toledo, for being the prettiest child among a number of contestants. His grandad says there's no other like him. And we'll admit he is some boy.

LATZ OWNERSHIP—MANAGEMENT

It is approaching the time of the year when we will hear that old familiar yell "Play Ball." We have tried to get a team started on the Toledo Division but we do not seem to get to first base. We have enough talent right here in Dayton to have a winning team and, from their appearance, some of our fleshy boys need some exercise to take off surplus fat accumulated during the winter months. What do you say, boys, can you get something started and finished? Let's go!

Brakeman Charles Fouch took a much needed rest, visiting his daughter in New York City for a few weeks.

The sleety weather of February caused a few accidents among our trainmen. Both Conductor C. Moorman and Conductor Rich had their arms broken.

Passenger Brakeman Robert Collins, son of Conductor J. Collins, was married in March and is now residing in his new home in North Side. Congratulations, Robert!

It is with regret we learn of the death of Passenger Brakeman "Ben" Heinne on February 26, after an illness of 12 weeks. "Ben" entered the service as a freight brakeman about 12 years ago, later being transferred to passenger brakeman. He was assigned to Trains 27 and 28 at the time of his death. "Ben" was a favorite among his fellow employees. He was of a friendly and easy-going disposition, always looking at the bright side of life, at all times ready to do any favor within his power. His wonderful personality made a host of friends for himself and for our Company. He was a home-loving boy and especially devoted to his wife and little daughter. We express our deepest sympathy to them.

On May 3 the Toledo Division will conduct a Safety Rally at Dayton at the Memorial Hall. There will be a two-hour entertainment, including local talent, and a good moving picture show; then Safety Magician Gans will perform a few good tricks for us. After this comes a big time which will interest everybody—a dance. All are invited. This meeting should be especially interesting to employees of the Operating and Mechanical Departments. Let's get together, boys, and put this thing over big!

The number of injuries and fatalities for the first two months of the new year is unusually large. A vigorous effort is being made to reduce the number of persons injured and killed. This can be accomplished by paying strict attention to where we are going and what we are doing. Railroad as a general proposition is not a hazardous occupation, but it can be made so by carelessness and thoughtlessness. Let us STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN! This applies to our work and to our life after we leave our work.

Mrs. Louis Roehm, wife of Assistant to Chief Clerk Hankhamer, of the D. & U. R. R., was operated on at the Miami Valley Hospital for goitre. We hope she recovers rapidly.

With regret we learned of the death of Miss Maud Veidt. Miss Veidt was formerly secretary to Division Freight Agent Warburton, and gained many friends by her charming personality. Our sympathies are extended to the various members of her family and especially to her fiancée, Mr. George Ehring.

We call especial attention to J. J. Kleinhoefer's moustache. Keep it up, "Joe," you may have one by 1927.

March finds the Toledo Division enjoying business that is taxing us to our capacity. Everybody is busy and a satisfied look is on the faces of our executives. This speaks volumes for our division and there is a reason—"Service, Satisfaction and Safety."

East Dayton will soon be equipped with an up-to-date Water Softening Plant. Work is progressing rapidly in the installation of boilers, etc., and this step will be a big improvement at our terminal.

On May 3 the Safety Department will give added zest to their work. Memorial Hall has been engaged for this purpose, and short addresses will be made by our city officials, followed by Superintendent A. A. Iams, motion pictures, vocal and musical selections and dancing. This will be a treat to our employees and the lessons taught will be valued. Admission will be by tickets and all employees will receive them.

The approach of Spring finds housecleaning in full sway and our General Foreman W. A. Gilmore is turning the place inside out.

Master Mechanic T. C. O'Brien says: "There is no harm in starting at the bottom, but don't stay there. I am watching every employe under my jurisdiction and I will recommend promotion for the man with the goods. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has many opportunities for a live wire and all that is necessary is to show your products."

The writer had occasion during the past month to assist several employes of the Division Accountant's Office in the execution of their Income Tax returns. I found the same good-natured and hustling bunch of employes that so strongly characterizes this office. The same is true of the Superintendent's and Agent's Offices.

Remember the strong appeals that are made to you each month in Safety Flashes. Digest them fully as they may be a guide to you later. Somewhere in the Good Book there is a passage that reads: "He who loveth danger, shall perish therein." This applies to your physical as well as your moral life. Heed it in time.

George Stoecklein, assistant chief clerk to superintendent, is a little more dignified than usual. There is a reason. Mrs. Stoecklein, formerly Miss Helen Hammond, who was identified with the Baltimore and Ohio for several years, presented him with a bouncing baby boy, weight 8½ pounds, on February 10. They have named the newcomer Robert Wilson Stoecklein. Congratulations!

Miss Olive Dennis, Baltimore, visited us recently. We are always glad to welcome our Baltimore neighbors and hope she will come again.

J. E. Fortman, chief clerk to division accountant, is the proud father of a baby girl, Adell, weight 8 pounds. No wonder McCooks Field celebrated with bombs. We have heard Mr. Fortman complain that it is a hard matter to get clerks and stenographers, and suggest that Joe and George give these newcomers proper railroad training in their youth.

The Man Behind the Smile

We don't know how he is on creeds,
We never heard him say;
But he's got a smile that fits his face,
And he wears it every day.

PRIDES OF THE TOLEDO DIVISION

If things go wrong he won't complain,
 Just tries to see the joke;
 He's always finding little ways,
 Of helping other folk.

He sees the good in every one,
 Their faults he never mentions;
 He has a lot of confidence,
 In people's good intentions.

You soon forget what ails you,
 When you happen 'round this man;
 He can cure a case of hypo—
 Quicker than the doctor can.

No matter if the sky is gray,
 You get his point of view;
 And the clouds begin to scatter,
 And the sun comes breaking thru.

You'll know him if you meet him,
 And you'll find it worth your while
 To cultivate the friendship of
 The man behind the smile.

Evidence is accumulating that the seed planted with the object of increasing business through the medium of personal solicitation of employees, is bearing fruit. Not only do employees realize that increasing prosperity for the Company means decreasing the number of furloughs and therefore larger paychecks and incidentally greater contentment and comfort in their homes, but day by day as they see the policy of the Management developed in various ways they know that they work for a good Company.

What does the effort on both sides amount to in the final analysis? Service! And that is what we are here for.

Reports are coming in all the time of employees who have, by personal efforts, secured business for our Company or who have given information that has been helpful in securing it.

KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT!

On February 9 Switchman Samuel Claypool, North Lima Yards, discovered a broken rail in south bound main near Robb Ave. He notified General Yardmaster Murphy who arranged for trains to use the north bound main, and for necessary repairs to be made.

Keen Eyes, Good Work!

About the same time a freight train was crossing the Erie R. R. at South Lima. Inspector Harvey Niles, formerly employed by the Baltimore and Ohio, but now with the Erie, observed a loose wheel and notified our people who had the car cut out and returned to Lima for repairs. Harvey was a good Safety man when with us and it looks as if it sticks with them even after they leave us.

Albert W. Norton, waybill clerk, Lima, submitted a suggestion for slogan and poster to be used by the committee on the prevention of highway crossing accidents.

The suggestion made was fine and should be helpful. The effort made was of itself commendable.

Master Carpenter R. C. Henderson was in town last week supervising the replacement of heavy timbers in the Ottawa River bridge to withstand the weight of the new 6100 engines to be delivered here by the Lima Locomotive Works. Foreman Harry Evans was in charge of the work. Our old friend, F. P. Lambert, was one of the crew that worked on this job. They are all active members of the Veterans' Association, living at Dayton and Wellston.

Our good friend S. L. Morrow, traveling car agent, who has the Toledo Division for his territory, is again back on the job after a long siege of illness. He checked up Lima Terminal last week. We are glad to see him again.

Agent L. B. Colbert, General Yardmaster J. F. Murphy and Freight House Foreman Ira Alspach attended the Western Lines Freight Claim Prevention meeting held at Cincinnati on February 21. They anticipate renewed activity along the lines laid down in the program of the meeting.

Another Fireman! The stork reports visiting the home of Fireman Bartlett, South Jackson Street, and leaving a fine baby boy. While in that neighborhood he also left a fine girl at the home of Fireman Monroe, living on the same street. Congratulations!

Mrs. Conley, widow of Patrick Conley, formerly carpenter foreman, who is an active worker in the Ladies' Auxiliary is again a grand mother, a baby girl arriving on February 25 at her son's home. Congratulations!

"Bill" Dillon, tallyman, missed his name in the MAGAZINE last month, missed Clyde Warren at Cincinnati, missed Train 58 there. His wife missed him also but aside from these items there is little that "Bill" does miss.

These Men Wouldn't Stay Down

Read how these 29 railroad presidents rose from positions as laborers, office boys, rodmen, etc.

Leaflet No. 4, recently issued by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, tells how the following presidents got their start. The rise of these men should be an inspiration to every railroad man who wants to get ahead. There is still room at the top if you really want to get there.

These men didn't get ahead by luck or pull. They rose step by step because they studied their work—they made each job a stepping-stone to something better—they trained themselves in spare time so that when opportunity came they were able to take advantage of it.

Why don't you study in your spare time and get the special training you must have if you want to get ahead? If you will put your shoulder to the wheel and really try, the International Correspondence Schools will help you to reach the goal of your dreams far quicker than if you attempt to make the journey alone.

At least find out how by marking and mailing the coupon that has meant so much to so many other railroad men just like yourself.

WELLSTON HOTEL

Edward D. Shields, Mgr.

WELLSTON - - OHIO

We welcome to Lima H. E. Litchfield, Baltimore, Md., appointed to succeed Storekeeper T. E. Britt who has been promoted to storekeeper, Washington, Ind. With best wishes for the success of Brother Britt in his new field we pledge our support and co-operation to Mr. Litchfield.

We are sorry to learn that Conductor F. C. Frisbie is again off duty because of illness and hope that he will recover speedily.

Charles Finn, yard clerk, has been promoted to round house clerk, which position was made vacant by the promotion of Leo Pinn to crew dispatcher.

All candidates for the Baltimore and Ohio baseball team at Lima will report to Dr. F. H. Hutchinson and Otto Kock, assistant foreman, Lima Shop, ready to go into active training for the campaign this summer in the Industrial League.

Preparations are being made for a big Safety Rally to be held in Memorial Hall on April 29. It is planned to organize a large chorus, composed of employees at Lima, to furnish part of the entertainment. There will also be special numbers on the program contributed by employees or members of their families. There will be a Safety talk by Superintendent Safety Department J. T. Broderick and one by an employee, after which the Safety film will be shown, and later there will be dancing. All employees are invited, together with families and friends. There will be no admission charge.

District Safety Agent W. L. Allison visited Lima on February 27 and 28. While here he addressed a mass meeting of about 300 shop employees on "Safety First."

The Baltimore and Ohio Bowling Team, composed of Lee, Rockhill, Gahret, Gillespie, Shaffer and extra man Strong, took 3 games from the Crane Co. lads recently, which helped them in their standing in the City League. They are now in 4th place, but hope to be first at the end of the season.

Radio from California: "Arrived safe and sound," signed, Bee Gooble, Ruth McIlvaine.

Boost the Baltimore and Ohio everywhere with everybody.

Have we secured any new business? Yes, we have; our force has the business-getting habit. It is a pleasure, as well as good exercise, to get out and run down business prospects. It gives us pleasure when we can go out and get a passenger or a freight shipment that would go another way if we had not gone after it. Recently your correspondent secured a nice shipment. While he was standing in one of our up-to-date grocery stores a traveling salesman was taking an order and it was noted that he had the goods routed via a competitor. We asked the drummer if he knew how to write "Baltimore and Ohio;" he said "yes," but thought the other route was best. We replied that there might be a small difference but that we sometimes went out of our way to buy groceries, whereupon the manager called out, "Send 'em Baltimore and Ohio."

Harold Rowe brought in a customer for Brownsville, Texas who would have gone via another road had not Mr. Rowe shown him that we had a better route. $17.00 gained for our road through the good work of our clerk.

Not to be outdone, "Johnnie" Walker, telegrapher on 'trick No. 1, secured a car of automobiles from Toledo that would have been moved by a competitor. "Johnnie" didn't want his name in print, but he just couldn't help telling the story and we heard it.

If you show the people in your community that you are after business, it won't be long until they tell you of business you can secure. Hotel clerks and managers are good business getters for you. Get acquainted with them and tell them to talk Baltimore and Ohio to the traveling men; keep them well supplied with time tables and printed matter and if they get a prospect they will notify you. Recently we have secured several passengers through the courtesy of our hotels. Your correspondent secured one for Evansville, Ind., while waiting in a local hotel lobby. The gentleman had been told the quickest way to Evansville was via a competing line. We figured a trip via Vincennes that would put him in Evansville three hours earlier. Although it was after office hours, we escorted him to the ticket office and sold him the ticket, a gain of $11.39.

W. B. Kilgore, for the past six years trainmaster and road foreman of engines, Wellston Sub-Division, has been transferred to the Toledo Division as road foreman of engines. Mr. Kilgore was known as the hardest worker on the Wellston Sub-Division and could be seen at all times out on the road doing something for our Railroad. We regret to lose Mr. Kilgore and wish him success in his new position. M. P. Hoban, who succeeds Mr. Kilgore, is well known on our division, having been an engineer here for several years. Mr. Hoban is a hard worker and we are glad to have him in our division.

If You Don't Believe This Come to Wellston

You talk about your little towns that have the vim and snap, and while you're talking, don't forget, that Wellston's on the map. Her factories cut a figure and her mines do, when they go, but nothing keeps the town up like the good old B. & O.

In winter or in summer, in springtime or in fall, you'll find the boys all on the job or waiting for a call, to go to Chillicothe, or perhaps to Dayton too, and maybe Cincinnati before their run in through.

Our Roundhouse is a dandy, with Zinkan on the job, with his pocket's full of candy, to feed the hungry mob. But of all the things you ever saw to make a fellow laugh, it's old Walker and Mason, when they work the telegraph.

Upstairs the boys are busy from eight o'clock till five, Fred Toumine overseeing things, Ray Harkins looking wise. But when you want a hustler to make the old mare go, just stop and let your peepers rest on our own Harold Rowe.

No gang of men would be complete without a man that's fat, to spread good cheer and sunshine—to him we'll raise our hat. His name I hate to tell you as I'd rather let you think, but for fear you'll guess the wrong one I'll just whisper Homer Pink.

The foreman on our platform is some guy—you bet your boots—if you've any doubts about it just ask for Mr. Utz; he seals more cars and checks more freight than two men used to do, and so I think this verse should praise our good friend "Joc," don't you?

We used to have a bill clerk before he got a bee, of writing stuff to make it rhyme, he calls it Poetry. He imagines he's a Riley or a Bobbie Burns or Poe, we'd appreciate it highly if he'd let the rhyming go.

The foreman of our Roundhouse had more work than he could do; the Company, to help things out, put on Paul Dennis too. They made a good selection, for Paul does things just right, but like our yaller tom cat, he won't stay home at night.

In the evening when our work is done and we from care are free, we all get ready to go home, a happy bunch are we—but hark—what melody is that? Such music ne'er was heard; sweeter strains have never come from any singing bird. We hold our breath, we raise our hats, fond memories round us cling, and every wheel stops turning, when friend Walker starts to sing.

If Dispatcher L. E. Weed owned Cincinnati, Walter Augsperger would be sitting pretty. Weed gives him this town every day.

Agent R. A. Tull, Xenia, is now a full-fledged Radio bug. (We knew his wife would find a way to keep him home at night.)

We would be glad to hear from any employee in any department of news that is worth while or business secured through individual effort. This makes a nice story for the MAGAZINE, as well as helping the Railroad along.

St. Louis Division

Correspondent, A. J. SMITH

Division Freight Agent E. A. Ferguson has been transferred from the St. Louis Division to the Akron Division. His many friends, while sorry to see him leave, wish him success in his new position. W. F. Bollman has been appointed division freight agent on the St. Louis Division.

Special trains to Springfield from Pana because of the "Gypsy" Smith revival, and from Flora to Olney for the basketball tourneys resulted in additional revenue to our company.

All arrangements for the Safety rallies on this Division have been made, and interesting programs arranged. All employees should attend one of the rallies at least.

J. Feldman, clerk to general yardmaster East St. Louis, has resigned his position; his place is being filled by Barney Miller.

The Washington, Ind., newspapers contain a rumor that "Sam" Newby, Division Accountant's Office is contemplating a change of residence to Zion City, where blue laws require all inhabitants to be in bed at an early hour. The night life at Washington and the constant procession of "night hawks" outside "Sam's" window have put him far behind in his sleep.

Round House, Flora

The safety valves on the Power Plant boiler do not seem to be set high enough for Engineer John Martin since John Jr. arrived.

The first joint local Cooperative Committee meeting was held March 5 in General Foreman's Office, General Foreman Gray presiding. There were representatives of all crafts and of the Company present. Many items were discussed and settled satisfactorily, and many suggestions were made by the men which should prove beneficial.

Machinist W. L. Buzan is a patient in the Mullanphy Hospital at St. Louis, it being necessary for him to undergo three operations. The boys all hope for a speedy recovery and to see his smiling face back on the job.

Assistant Correspondent, LOTTIE T. DOSCH

In October, 1923 our Maintenance of Equipment Department put into service a Ford car that was cut down in size, for handling various materials in the Car Department. This truck was found to be of such value that another truck was cut down in the same manner for use in the Locomotive Department.

The pictures show the first car put into service and the trailers used for handling various material.

The Joint Local Cooperative Committee held its first meeting at Washington Shops on March 5 at 1.00 p. m. Some fine ideas and suggestions were made and the meeting was interesting.

A meeting was also held at Flora and Cone on the same day. The St. Louis Division expects to be second to none in cooperation between the Management and employees, and to work out together their ideas for the welfare of both the men and the Company.

The accompanying picture is of Joseph Howard Minter, 5-year-old son of Shop Schedule Supervisor J. R. Minter, Washington Shops.

Engineer and Mrs. Leo Grannon are the proud parents of a fifteen-pound son whom they have named Joseph Frederick. This young man is certainly a "buster" and should make a good engineer for the West End of the St. Louis Division.

It is not often that agents receive new stations but such was the case with Agent Abernathy when the old station was destroyed by fire. The bungalow type shown in the picture was erected and ready for use three days after the fire at Lebanon. This speaks volumes for the resourcefulness of the St. Louis Division. Mr. Abernathy has been in the service of the company for 26 years, 20 of which had been spent at Lebanon station and it was not without regret that he viewed its destruction.

Agents! The Traffic Department needs your cooperation in securing business to keep the wheels of our engines moving. Don't fail to use the Traffic Tip cards.

The splendid cooperation between the Management and employees and the securing of additional business through employees' help has received considerable comment by editorial and financial writers. It is desirable publicity and is another step toward making ours the best railroad in the country.

FORD runs 57 MILES on GALLON of GASOLINE

A new automatic and self-regulating device has been invented by John A. Stransky, 2307 Fourth St., Pukwana, South Dakota, with which automobiles have made from 40 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. It removes all carbon and prevents spark plug trouble and overheating. It can be installed by anyone in five minutes. Mr. Stransky wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his own risk. Trainman H. H. Lewis, on No. 44 between Beardstown and Pana, while passing through the smoker observed a passenger who was crippled and suffering from rheumatism. Lewis made it his special duty to see that this man was seated comfortably and brought him a drink of water.

This passenger was en route to New York and had intended to go via a competing line, using our rails for only a distance of forty miles. Lewis explained our schedule and that it was not necessary to change trains or depots at Pana if he continued Baltimore and Ohio. As a result, we received a passenger to New York. Trainman Lewis received a complimentary letter from Assistant General Passenger Agent Ainslee.

A customer at Taylorville, Ill. called on Operator Allen for a ticket to Pittsburgh via a competing line. Mr. Allen endeavored to route him entirely Baltimore and Ohio via Cincinnati. The passenger could not do this, but did consent to go to Chicago over a non-competitive line and thence Baltimore and Ohio to Pittsburgh.

One of our popular bachelor conductors, Walter Platz, Washington Shops, and Brakeman A. P. Hamond, spent some time in the Sunny South and in Cuba. Here they enjoyed the delightful climate, saw the pretty Senoritas and heard the strains of the Spanish guitars. They also learned to say "Chiquita senorita, mucha bonita." We know Havana is a fine place now; we were there 25 years ago during Uncle Sam's set-to with the Spanish.

On the St. Louis Division we have had fine business this winter, especially in Q. D. movement. Shippers realize that the Best and Only way is via Baltimore and Ohio.

We are about 300 miles from Chicago, and recently an advertisement was run in our paper for all people living in Chicago from Flora and Clay Counties, asking them to write to Mr. ———, address ———, Chicago, Ill., for the purpose of having a get-together meeting. I had a letter from a man who attended the meeting who said there were 400 home folk present. #### Who Pays Taxes?

LET us face the matter fairly and squarely.

Everybody pays taxes!

We may not own one square foot of land or the first two bricks of a house. We may not have seven dollars in the bank, or one single ten-dollar bond or savings certificate. We may not own the tools we work with, the stove we cook with, or the bed we sleep on. We may not yet have paid in full for the hat on our head, the clothes on our back, or the boots on our feet.

But we pay taxes, just as surely as if we owned houses and lots, stocks and bonds, bank accounts, farms, mills, factories or railroads.

We all have to eat. If the grocer's landlord has to pay higher taxes, the grocer has to pay higher rent and we have to pay the grocer higher prices for our food.

We all have to sleep. If the man who owns the house we rent has to pay higher taxes, then we have to pay higher rent.

We all have to wear clothes. If the clothing manufacturer and merchant have to pay higher taxes, then You and I and The Other Fellow have to pay higher prices for our clothing.

If the railroads have to pay higher taxes they have to charge higher rates for carrying coal, and we have to pay higher prices for our fuel.

Higher taxes on the gas company, the power company, or the street railway mean higher prices we must all pay for gas or electricity or street car fares.

We all have to pay taxes.

We can all see how this principle works in these direct ways. But the indirect ways in which high taxes are the cause of high cost of living are so roundabout that it is not always clear that in the long run we who are consumers must all pay taxes.

Unduly heavy taxes on financial institutions mean high interest for loans, expensive mortgages, and just so much higher cost for the houses we buy or rent.

Every time we pay one dollar to a railroad, we pay five cents for taxes.

No matter who pays taxes directly to the tax collector, we all pay our share indirectly, whether we own taxable property or earn a taxable income, or not.

Out of every eight dollars of our national income, one dollar goes for taxes, federal, state and local.

The boy whose living expenses are $8 a week pays one dollar in taxes in the form of prices made higher by taxation.

The man who pays out $24 a week is paying $3 of taxes, the man expending $48 pays $6, and so on. And he pays this, even if he does not own one dollar's worth of taxable property.

He pays it in cost of living and he cannot pass the cost along to somebody else.

Let us all remember—

That we now pay one dollar out of every eight dollars for taxes!

Do You Know Me?

By J. A. TSCHUOR, Master Mechanic,
New Castle, Pa.

I am more powerful than all railroad engines and the great guns of the Army.

I ride engines, railroad trains, street cars, automobiles, and I am in all factories and offices.

The one-armed man and one-legged man on the street know me. Widows and orphans know me, I rejoice over a fatherless home. I am quiet, but my hand is bloody. Misery is my side partner. I rejoice over railroad wrecks. The larger they are, the more I laugh.

A shop man told me one time the best safety device was a safe man like himself—that he always wore his goggles. He was right, but I got him; he forgot and now he has but one eye. He is a friend of mine.

I have no conscience—I delight in wrecking and mutilating human beings. They weep—I laugh.

An automobile and railroad are my particular field to work in.

I dip my hands in blood that I have sucked from many good men who forgot and now know me.

Don't pay any attention to railroad crossings or to the one-armed man or one-legged watchman—I got him and I'll get you.

When driving a car over a railroad crossing try to beat the train over. If you don't make it, I'll get you and rejoice over your failure.

When on a congested street don't pay any attention to the traffic cop. He is merely an ornament. If he doesn't get you—I will.

I never give—I always take—I crush. My working mates are misery and death. They help me to make fatherless children and widows. I am the rich criminal. I glory over catastrophes and reap my crops from railroads and automobiles because men forgot and their forgetfulness pleases me.

Careful men avoid me. I can't down them for they know me and avoid me. Why don't you?

My name is—"CARELESSNESS."

Mr. W. J. Dudley
Superintendent Relief Department
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad
Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find acknowledgment of receipt of satisfied mortgage, which is the final paper to be forwarded me account repayment of loan on my home. In acknowledging receipt of this mortgage I also wish to thank the officers and employees of your department for the courtesy shown and the promptness with which all details are attended to.

I believe there are a great number of employees who desire to own their own homes and who no doubt would negotiate a loan if the opportunity afforded by the Savings Feature of the Relief Department were more forcibly brought to their attention. It is with the thought in mind that if the experiences of those who have availed themselves of this opportunity and received homes, were placed before such employees it would probably induce many who are now hesitating to make the start, that I write this letter.

Trusting that this communication may be instrumental in persuading some employee to begin owning his own home, I am,

Yours truly,

Tournament Winners, General Office Duckpin League

By D. V. MOSBERG

THE Baltimore and Ohio General Office Duckpin League, which has just completed a most successful season, decided at its last executive committee meeting to hold a tournament open to any of the employees, including those that participated in the league.

It would obviously be uneven if all the bowlers were placed on the same footing, and they were therefore separated into three classes—A, B, C, according to their averages in the league. Class A consisted of bowlers whose average was 102.00 or higher; Class B from 96.00 to 101.99 inclusive; Class C all below 96.00.

The tournament took place at the Kingpin Alleys, on March 3, and each individual was required to roll five games. In each class there were three prizes for those having the highest total number of pins. In addition the management of the alleys donated two boxes of cigars—one to go to the bowler having the highest score for one game and the other to go to the bowler having the highest score for five games. The winners in each class, together with the scores, are as follows:

CLASS A
Name	Team	Score
G. P. Sauerwein	Fuel Agent	565
J. S. Miller	Riverside	540
G. E. Pritchard	Eng. and Acct.	535
CLASS B
J. R. Dyche	M. of W.	585

A. G. Donald	Eng. and Acct.	570
CLASS C
G. R. Valentine	Motive Power	*508
E. P. Robinson	Cost Engineer	*508
J. T. Cuddy	Riverside	507

*Messrs. Valentine and Robinson rolled off the tie for first place in Class C, Mr. Valentine winning, and Mr. Robinson being adjudicated winner of the second prize.

J. R. Dyche, captain of the Maintenance of Way Team, won two boxes of cigars for having high score of 141 for one game and high score of 585 for five games.

Say It Briefly!

Jerome P. Fleishman in "Uncle Jerry Says"

The other day I had to read through a three-page closely-typewritten letter in order to get a few facts that could have been stated in three brief paragraphs.

The letter was from a man supposed to be a very busy man, and a very efficient man.

And it reminded me of the story about the colored resident of Kentucky who had been sentenced to be hanged. At first he was not greatly interested, but as execution day drew near he became somewhat disturbed. He even went so far as to mention the matter to his jailer. The jailer suggested that he write to the Governor, and offered to do the actual writing. Mose took five minutes to consider, and then the letter he asked be written was as follows:

"Dear Marse Guv'nah: They is fixing to hang me Friday, and here it am Tuesday.
—Mose Johnson"

How Brakeman Stone Began His Dahlia Farm

By MYRTA CAWOOD

BRAKEMAN W. H. ("Dahlia") STONE lives in the quiet little town of Gaithersburg, Md., almost in sight of the granite dome of the nation's capitol. He has developed such a profitable business from his hobby of raising, collecting and experimenting with dahlias that he is known all up and down the Baltimore and Ohio as "Dahlia" Stone. His dahlias, planted in the springtime, mean that millions of huge blossoms will be ready for his many customers, not only in his own vicinity but in large cities, including St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Richmond.

In the early spring, twelve years ago, while Mr. Stone was away from home on duty, a neighbor gave Mrs. Stone a half dozen dahlia tubers, which she proudly planted in the front yard. But Walter had other ideas about that front yard, so he dug up the plants and planted them in an obscure corner in the back yard. The patient little wife dug them up again and put them back in the front yard. Then what could a mere man do, I ask you? But that was before "Dahlia Stone" knew anything about dahlias. In the fall the flowers bloomed. It was then that Mr. Stone began to see possibilities of larger, finer blossoms. That winter he read seed catalogues instead of the evening paper, and in the spring he ordered a few expensive tubers. He studied books and magazines on the dahlia, and he became more and more interested.

Each year he added a few rare flowers to his collection, giving away the surplus tubers and blooms to his neighbors and friends. Then he began to send flowers to acquaintances and friends for the mere cost of packing and postage. Gradually the business grew, while all the time he was making his daily run on the Baltimore and Ohio.

For years he spent his vacations visiting dahlia shows and experimental stations all the way from New York to California. He joined the leading dahlia horticultural societies and became well known in "dahlia circles."

Mr. Stone's dahlia farm contains eight acres of land. There are eight thousand plants; ten or twelve hundred of these are tested varieties—pedigreed stock. He will harbor no plant that will not produce abundant and exceptionally good flowers on long, straight stems.

In blossom time Walter Stone hurries home to play host to hundreds of visitors to his aristocratic plants. Then there are rows and rows of plants profusely blossomed, covering the field with a rich tapestry of coloring. Few dahlias are of any pure prismatic color. Their many hues and tints are indescribable. Some are white, red, pink, yellow, purple, gold, rose, coral, and even green, almost always one color is shaded and variegated with another color. But the blossoms are never blue.

There is much to be told of how the flowers change color as the blossoms age, and the shapes and sizes—well, you would just have to see them for yourself. Drop off at Gaithersburg some bright day in August or September and you will never doubt that the hand of man is capable of coaxing from the resources of the Almighty things of marvelous beauty. There you will see eight acres of flowers, growing on leafy plants four to seven feet tall, profusely covered with buds and blossoms six to fourteen inches wide.

"Dahlia" Stone says he can easily cut a half dozen blossoms from each of his eight thousand plants every day from August until frost. Flowers enough for all, millions each season! And his packing house is a busy place in blooming season. One morning last summer Mr. Stone started two truckloads of packed blooms on their run to Washington before he started on his daily run.

Mr. Stone claims no credit for his marvelous success with his hobby.

"If you just love them and work with them you can't keep from succeeding. Anyone can grow dahlias; there is no secret except constant cultivation," he says.

This season the dahlia gardens have some newcomers; they are some rare plants from Holland that will find ready favor with all dahlia admirers.

In the April, 1922, issue of the MAGAZINE we had a comprehensive article from Mr. Stone on "How to Grow Dahlias."

Mr. Stone does an extensive business in the sale of dahlia bulbs as well as blossoms. He plants his bulbs between May 15 and June 30. He does not advise earlier planting because of the danger of frost.

Mr. W. J. Dudley

Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:

I hereby thank the officers of the Relief Department for the loan that I got through the Baltimore and Ohio Relief Department, which was paid in full in February.

I would advise all employees of the Baltimore and Ohio to take the advantages the Relief Department offers to them in securing a home and save the high rents that are being paid. It would help to overcome the house shortage which is now existing.

Yours truly

Many Baltimore and Ohio Men Are Members of Traffic Club of Baltimore

(Prepared at the request of J. Ross Gould, MAGAZINE Correspondent at Locust Point,
by Mr. J. E. Harrison, Traveling Freight Agent of the Chesapeake Steamship Company.)

THOUGH less than one-quarter of the Twentieth Century has rolled by it has already given to us many new products. We might count the automobile, the wireless telegraph and the radiophone as the most outstanding of these, but the Traffic Club is also on the list. It is true that there were associations of railroad and steamship agents and clubs of a similar nature, but the idea of transportation and industrial representatives getting together for social and business hobnobbing was almost unthought of 20 years ago. Those were the days of rebates and cut-throat methods which had the tendency of breaking up friendships rather than fostering them. Now there is a new order of things. There is a spirit of fine cooperation between the representatives of shippers and carriers and that works beneficially for both.

The Traffic Club of Baltimore, though organized in 1913, can trace its origin back to 1901 when a few transportation men got together and formed the Baltimore Railroad and Steamship Agents' Association, electing N. J. Elliott as president. This organization grew and prospered, taking on aspects other than social and admitting members other than transportation men, until it had reached its twelfth year when it discovered that, like Topsy, "it had just grown up," and resembled, in all its features, the Traffic Club as we see it today. All that was necessary was to give it a new Constitution and set of By-Laws, to incorporate it and to place it with the other institutions building up greater Baltimore.

The Traffic Club of Baltimore has a record that will stand the acid test of the day, and, I think, of the future. It has had able and conscientious men at the head of it. It has tackled the big problems that have come up in a constructive manner. It has gotten men of national, yea international, fame to address its meetings. It has put on banquets that cannot be beaten. It has been all that a Traffic Club can be, and now that it has become a member of the Associated Traffic Clubs of America we expect it to continue the splendid work at home and at the same time accomplish big things afield.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has contributed amply to the growth of the Traffic Club. President Willard and Vice-Presidents Shriver, Galloway and Fries have been speakers at different times. George S. Harlan, now general freight agent in Philadelphia, was president of the club two years ago and at that time 80 employees of the Railroad in Baltimore were members. It would be well for all the readers of this MAGAZINE who are eligible to consider seriously joining the Traffic Club.

Death of Samuel Asbury Gates

SAMUEL ASBURY GATES, aged 51 years, and for the past six years ticket agent at Hagerstown, died at his home, 600 Summit Avenue, at 3 o'clock on March 20.

Mr. Gates was born in Hagerstown and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Gates. His father was for many years supervisor between Hagerstown and Weverton.

At an early age Mr. Gates entered the service of the Company. He was agent at Gapland Station for some years and was later transferred to Keedysville. About six years ago he removed to Hagerstown. He had been confined to his home for the past seven weeks.

He was a member of the Keedysville A. F. & A. M., member of the Knights Templar and of the Shrine Club of Baltimore and a 32nd degree Mason.

Besides his wife, Mr. Gates is survived by two sons, Lee and Theodore, both of Hagerstown, and a daughter, Mrs. George S. Line, of Keedysville, one brother, Edward, of Louisiana, and a half-sister, Mrs. Sarah Hunter, Keedysville.

The funeral was in charge of St. Bernard's Commandery, Knights Templar.

We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Thomas Henry Burke

Born July 20, 1860. Died February 29, 1924

HIS many friends will regret to learn of the death of Thomas Henry Burke, passenger engineer, Baltimore Division, at his home in Baltimore on February 29 after an illness of over nine years.

Mr. Burke entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on the Baltimore Division with Samuel Mason at Ellicott City as a laborer, March 1, 1881; became fireman December 23, 1882, and engineer, October 7, 1886. On October 1, 1887, he was transferred to the Philadelphia Division as passenger engineer, returning to the Baltimore Division in the same capacity October 1, 1913. He held this position until his death, being on the Relief for the long period of illness.

Funeral services were held at his late residence, 1519 Hanover Street, and Patterson Memorial M. E. Church, where he was an official member. The church service, conducted by Rev. Louis St. Clair Allen, pastor, and Rev. Thomas S. Long, a former pastor, was attended by many of his friends of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Baltimore Division Veterans and Auxiliary and members of his local church. Interment was at Mount Carmel Cemetery.

Mr. Burke is survived by his widow, a member of the Veterans' Auxiliary, Baltimore, daughter, Mrs. Edna Morris, and three sons, Earl C. and John T., both firemen on the Baltimore Division, and William S., whose wife, Mrs. Hilda Hopkins Burke, sang at the last Grand Lodge convention of the Veterans' Auxiliary.

Smoker's Teeth Bleached White New Safe Way

No need for dull, yellow, tobacco-stained teeth now. For a new safe treatment—Bleachodent Combination—bleaches away stains, and makes teeth flashing white—often in just three minutes! Treatment consists of a marvelous liquid, which cures and softens the stains—and a new kind of paste which gently removes the softened stains and prevents the formation of new stains. Safe and Harmless, as its mild ingredients are especially combined to act only on surface stains—not on the enamel itself. Only a safe mild preparation like Bleachodent Combination should be used on children's teeth which are naturally so sensitive, and which are especially subject to stains and decay. Fine for the gums. Get Bleachodent Combination today for few cents. Distributed by Bleachodent Dental Laboratories and sold by drug and department stores everywhere.

A Song of Springtime

By ELIZA BRADY DUNKERLY, Wife of
W. R. Dunkerly, Retired Employee

O, now the spring is waking,
The snow and ice are gone;
We hear the bluebirds whistling,
The robin sings his song.

Violet and crocus
Defy the winter's snow,
Perk their little noses up
And make a gallant show.

The hyacinth and jonquil
And yellow buttercup,
Are laughing now so gleefully,
"Ha, ha! we, too, are up!"

And through the mossy woodlands
The sweet arbutus vine,
Laden with its fragrance,
Its neighbors doth outshine.

The trees have laid aside
Their garb of wintry gray,
And donned a robe of shining green
To greet the first spring day.

Ah, soon the fairy woodland
Will be a lovely sight,
With poplar's yellow tulip
And dogwood's blossoms white!

The sweet wild honeysuckle
And huckleberry bloom,
The lovely apple blossom
All bringing sweet perfume.

The wild bird's warbling sonnet,
The cherry blossom white,
And the brooklet in the orchard
Will fill us with delight.

The late Thomas Henry Burke

A. E. DAY

Chief of Weighing Bureau, Transportation Department

The Oldtimer

The oldtimer mused by the right of way,
Watched the freight roll down the main;
And his mind turned back to bygone days
That would never come again.
He heard the hiss of the Westinghouse brake
As the long train came to a stand.
And he thought of the time forever passed
When they did that work by hand.
It was before the "Janney," the oldtimer mused,

Or other patent hitch.
When we used to cut our train on the run,
And make the flying switch.
The years were crowding on him,
His locks were gray and thin;
But his heart grew young as his mind went back

To the days of the link and pin.
"It was lively work," the oldtimer said,
"In those days now long passed by,
When we'd cut them off and kick them in
And catch them on the fly."
And as he dwelt 'mid those scenes of the past,

To his mind came recollections,
Of how they'd go rolling into a town
With the train cut in two or three sections,
And of the wild stormy nights in winter.

When blinded by the wind-driven flakes,
He'd hear above the roar of train and storm
The short sharp blast for "brakes!"
He recalled how he'd leap from car to car,
Reckless of life and limb,
As he held them down by the "Armstrong"
brakes,
In the days of the link and pin.

"Those were hard, tough days," the old-timer said,

"And their memory with me still remains.
Now the engineer does the braking,
As he does on the 'Varnish' trains,
The boys don't ride on the 'Hurricane Deck'
Since the days of the hand brake are o'er;
Don't climb down the ladders, Cut the train on the run,
As we did in the days of yore."

"They were a live wire bunch," the old-timer mused.
Hard working and full of fun;
The few who are left are scattered,
Many have made their final run,
And I know, when I reach the Grand Station above,
And the Good Saint checks me in,
I'll be greeted by many old friends I knew
In the days of the link and pin."

GEORGE M. HILL, in
The Railroad Employee

Here It Was the "Only Road"

THE Johnstown, Pa., Democrat, of February 25, carries a story of the recent storm in that section, starting with the words "The Baltimore and Ohio Has Come Back." The article continues to explain that with the public roads blocked with snow for nearly a week, the Baltimore and Ohio was the only outlet Johnstown had to the south. As a result, all trains over the Somerset and Cambria Branch enjoyed unusual passenger patronage, something like the old days before the days of the automobile and the bus. The story concludes:

"Employees of the railroad are beaming smiles of gratification over the increased traffic. Passengers say this attitude is sensed from the time a ticket is bought from Agent Al Crissman until the end of the trip.
It is shown as Engineers Wadsworth and Otto widen on the throttle. It is apparent as Conductors Hal Bentford, Joseph Baine and Elmer Evans sweetly whisper, 'tickets, please.' It radiates from Brakemen
'Scotty' and Billy Garlitz as they call one station after another in clarion tones. With the coaches jammed with passengers, the poise of a night crew is not ruffled when a blown out air hose has to be replaced, which in addition to repairing the connection by lantern light requires the brakeman to hurry back along an icy track on one of the most desolate stretches of the road."

Mason City Illinoian Has Fun With Baltimore and Ohio Box Car

LEAVING out the letter "I" in the word "Ohio" when stencilling it on the side of a Baltimore and Ohio box car, may have completely escaped the employee responsible. Not so, however, with a casual observer in the person of James Stewart Walker of Mason City,
Illinois, for the misspelling "Oho" touched his imaginative sense and sent it fancifully afield as follows:

Cisne, Illinois, Dec. 10, 1923

President
Baltimore and Ohio R. R.
Baltimore, Maryland
Dear Sir:

It is with diffidence that I address you upon a subject, which, though trivial, yet may result in far reaching consequences.

I refer to the spelling of Ohio, upon your remarkably well built box car Baltimore and Ohio 181263, at present lying in the Cisne, Illinois, yard.

I judge this to be an orthographic or rather a "stencilographic" error since on the opposite side the word is spelled Ohio.

It is possible that the gentleman who placed the stencil was possessed with a sense of imaginative humor for Baltimore and "Oho" is truly descriptive of the nomadic life of a box car, especially one belonging to so vast a system as the Baltimore and Ohio.

One can visualize the fully matured
Baltimore and Ohio 181263 emerging from the shops resplendent in red paint, glistening wheels, white letters brilliant in the sunlight, as a butterfly breaks from its chrysalis to wander over flower bedecked fields, purling brooks and mossy dells,
Baltimore and Oho! for the great city—
Oho! for the Golden West—Oho! for the Sunny South—Oho! for the smiling fields of waving grain—Oho! for the wondrous snow clad peaks and marvelous canyons—
Oho! for the thunder of the rolling surf—
Oho! for the river plain and painted desert.
A Bedouin, in this sordid age, is the box car.

So here I come and there I go
From Baltimore to Oh! ho! ho!
Sun and rain don't worry me,
I'm one eight one and two six three,
But where, you ask, is O. H. O?

That, indeed, no man may know,
Ask of the wind that strewed the sea,
With one eight one and two six three.

Trusting that you will not take exception to my calling your attention to a rather prominent error, I beg to remain

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) JAMES STUART WALKER
Mason City, Illinois

Death of Benjamin Frank Sedwick

BENJAMIN FRANK SEDWICK, assistant engineer, died at Chicago on March 23, of pneumonia, while on a business trip to that city.

Mr. Sedwick was born at Bentonville,
Ark., March 22, 1890 and was graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1911.
He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in 1912, and for the past five years has been assistant engineer in Office of Chief Engineer Adjustment Division at Baltimore.

He was married in 1921 to Miss Louise
Lambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B.
Lambert of Baltimore. During the World War he served overseas with the 23rd Engineers, U. S. A. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and the Order of the Elks.

Who Would Want It?

The reverend wag, Sidney Smith, was looking through the hothouses of a lady who was very proud of her collection of plants, but who frequently used inaccurate botanical terms. As he could not forego a little joke, he inquired:

"Madam, have you 'Septennis Psoriasis'?"

"No," she replied, "I had it last winter, and I gave it to the Bishop, and it came out beautifully in the spring."

Septennis Psoriasis is the medical term for the seven-year itch!

Our Policy

As we serve—so shall we succeed

This business is founded upon the solid rock of Service to our Customers.

As we are of service individually to you, so shall we win and keep your patronage.

As part of our service to you we select for you and sell only goods that will give you satisfaction—only goods that will stand your inspection and use.

As part of our service to you we always offer you a saving. Fifty million dollars' worth of goods have been manufactured and bought for cash to make possible the low prices this book offers.

Twenty-four hours service in filling your orders is part of our work for you. Most of our orders are actually shipped within twenty-four hours, nearly all within forty-eight hours.

Our platform is one of Service. To be of real service to you is the basis upon which we solicit your patronage.

That for fifty-one years we have been of service, that today we are offering Service and a Saving, and Satisfaction to over five million customers is the basis of our success.

As we serve—so shall we succeed.

What Can We Do For You?

A Personal Message from the President of MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.

As you turn the pages of this new Spring and Summer Catalogue there is just one thought uppermost in your mind:

"What is there of interest in this book for me?"

How much saving is there for me?"

What can Montgomery Ward & Co. do for me?"

In imagination I look into the homes of over five million customers into which this book goes, and in each I seem to hear these same questions asked.

And as I sit here in my office and look around at over one hundred acres of floor space, filled with new merchandise, I see the answer so plainly, the many advantages, the great saving, that I wish there might be some way of bringing you more closely together—you and Montgomery Ward & Co.—so that you might learn for yourself the answers to your questions.

If I could draw up a chair with you there at your own living room table and turn with you the pages of this Catalogue, I would tell you the most interesting business story you have ever heard.

It would be a story of how thousands of our bargains are secured, how our low prices are made. It would be a romance of ready cash and the tremendous buying power your patronage gives us.

And of travel—travel through every part of this land and in Europe, searching for good merchandise at the lowest possible prices.

Do you know how our goods are bought—how our bargains are found? Let me give you an example: Here is a manufacturer who has a reputation for making the best goods, who lacks capital, who lacks business, so that his plant operates on half-time part of the year.

But he knows how to make good goods. We furnish the needed extra capital, we give him orders that make the wheels turn all day and keep his employees busy all the year. His own earnings are increased and his cost of manufacture cut far below anything he has ever known. And this saving goes to those who buy goods at Ward's—to our customers. What can we do for you?

You want to buy goods at a saving. You want to buy goods that will give you complete satisfaction. You want prompt service. You want your orders filled promptly, and your letters answered promptly—and you want your patronage appreciated.

At Montgomery Ward & Co. you get all these things. These are the advantages that are waiting here for you.

A saving—yes, we try always to offer you a saving, but always a saving on goods of Ward Quality. I cannot lay too much stress on "Quality." We do not sell "cheap" goods. It is our policy to offer you only goods that will stand up, that will give service, that will do exactly what you want them to do.

It is easy to sell at seemingly low prices. All you need do is to buy low-priced goods. Cut something out of the quality, out of the service, and you can always make a low price. At Ward's we never sacrifice quality to make a low price.

And, for fifty-one years this has been the policy of Montgomery Ward & Co. For fifty-one years in every dealing with every customer we have tried to follow a "deal as you would be dealt by" policy.

Millions of people will buy from this Catalogue—at a saving. The same saving, the same guarantee of satisfaction exists for you. We solicit your patronage. We will deal with you as you would be dealt by. And your orders and letters will always be appreciated at Montgomery Ward & Co.

Theodore F. Hercules
President

24-Hour Service

We have perfected our service for you. After much study and testing new systems and employing experts we have perfected a system that makes certain your orders will be shipped promptly.

Selling the Transportation and Service of Our Railroad

---

The Baltimore and Ohio has always been one of the best known and most widely advertised railroads. Now we are proud to say that it is one of the most favorably known railroads.

There is quite a distinction between these two statements.

Whenever "B. & O." is mentioned, everybody knows what the speaker is talking about.

That fact was seized upon by the theatrical people of earlier days and accounted for the mention of the Baltimore and Ohio when they wanted to put over a railroad joke.

They knew that everybody, from school children to their grandparents, had heard of the "B. & O." and would immediately catch the point.

Like the jokes on a certain universally known vehicle of transportation, this advertising, however unfavorable at the time, is now reacting as an advertising asset.

The name "B. & O." regardless of the use to which it may have been put, has been thoroughly sold to the public.

The reaction in the association of the name was brought about by the improvements in the property and the consistent and dependable class of Transportation and Service which we have to offer the public.

Today we have for sale the best Transportation and Service to be had anywhere, not only The Capitol Limited and other splendid passenger trains and wonderful dining car meals, but Freight Transportation and Service that is not excelled by any other railroad.

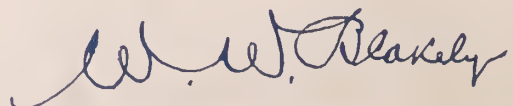

Are we now selling this transportation as successfully as we should, considering what we have to offer and with a plant not working to its capacity?

Does everyone know our Fast Freight Trains No. 94 and No. 97, east and west-bound, and other trains just as regular and dependable; about our Steel Specials, Livestock Specials and Fruit and Produce Service in season; about our New England Freight Service east and westbound via Central States Despatch Route?

If you don't, ask any of our freight representatives for a copy of our pocket edition of freight schedules.

Is it generally known that the Baltimore and Ohio has a system of daily reports showing the numbers and initials of cars passing all important junctions and division terminals, which are on file at all our important Freight Offices? At our Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and other principal offices, if given a car number and initial for a loaded car or empty tank car moving, say, from Meridian, Miss., to Johnstown, Pa., as an illustration, routed via Baltimore and Ohio, our representatives can inform a patron between what points the car has moved over our rails. That is service as distinguished from the actual transportation of the property, and is quite an important factor in influencing the routing of freight traffic.

Everyone connected with the Company, in whatever capacity, has his or her circle of friends. These friends at some time or other will either travel, ship or receive freight or associate with someone who does. Let them know that you are a part of the Baltimore and Ohio and want that business, and when you get it, or learn of any prospective business of any character, pass the information along to the officer to whom you report; he will see that it is promptly handled. In this way you can assist in selling Baltimore and Ohio service, and will be given full credit for your part in the transaction.
