Relationship—Efficiency—Economy

An Address by President Willard before the Veterans of the Baltimore Chapter, Baltimore, May 7

ON the night of May 7 at Moose Hall in Baltimore, after routine business had been transacted by the Baltimore chapter of the Veterans' Association, the members adjourned to the rooms upstairs to join their families, already assembled, and to enjoy the entertainment feature of the program.

C. W. Allen, president of the Baltimore chapter, made a happy introduction in presenting Mr. Willard to this big section of the Baltimore and Ohio family when he called him "your friend and president." And Mr. Willard, in beginning his address, made pleasing reference to this and said that he was glad that he had been so introduced because he realized that he would be a poor president indeed if he were not also a friend of the employes of the Baltimore and Ohio.

He expressed gratification in seeing such a well attended meeting and said that in view of the fact that he had not expected to find so many ladies present, he feared that his address might not be of particular interest to them. He added with a smile, however, that it might be a good thing for them to hear what he had to say to their men folks when they were not present.

Relationship—Efficiency—Economy

The president chose to speak on Relationship, Efficiency and Economy.

"Most of the trouble that we have in our human relationships on the Railroad," he said, in substance, "are due to misunderstanding. We do not get the other fellow's viewpoint. In our own very human desire to accomplish certain things, we forget that the man with whom we are dealing is also human and just as anxious to accomplish certain things he wishes, as we are.

"But this very fact ought, it seems to me, make us tolerant, because if we admit that the other fellow is human and conscientiously trying to do what he thinks is best, we will be the more ready to give and take—to agree that as we are sure there is merit on our side, so also there probably is on his.

"We men on the Railroad, of whatever position, are not essentially different as human beings. We all have our pleasures and sorrows, our good days and our bad, and when an officer is feeling out of sorts, it may be for exactly the same reason that an engineer or any other employe is out of sorts—he may for instance, have eaten a soggy and indigestible bottom crust of a piece of pie. That was not infrequently my experience when as an engineer I lived in boarding houses away from home. Of course (and here Mr. Willard smiled broadly as he gave a sweeping glance of the women folks seated in the front of the room), such a thing could not happen with a pie cooked by a railroad man's wife.

"Despite the fact that we sometimes have trouble in our Railroad family, I believe that a majority of the people most of the time want to do what is right. And it is because of this and of the fact that I believe that a better understanding of our problems will promote our mutual welfare, that I want you to know some of the responsibilities which go with the handling of the business of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Every Day We Must Pay—

"Did you know that every day the Baltimore and Ohio must pay $65,000 in interest on its bonds and other obligations. It must pay it in the same way that you must pay interest on your house mortgage if you happen to have one. And unlike those employes who are buying homes through our Relief Department, it is not possible for us, in case of business trouble or other untoward event, to secure a postponement of these payments—we must have the ready money when it is due.

"Did you know that it costs the Baltimore and Ohio $20,000 every day for taxes? It does—and I need not remind you that Uncle Sam does not wait for his tax payments.

"Did you know that the Baltimore and Ohio rents so many tracks, buildings and other property which it needs to handle its business that it costs us $15,000 a day to pay for these rentals?

"Did you know that our bill for coal burned on the Railroad every day amounts to $60,000?

"Yes, it costs us $160,000 a day to pay for just these four items. And twice as great as these is our payroll, which now costs us—before any other bill is paid—about $320,000 each day.

Lack of Understanding is Most Costly

"This question of the financial responsibility which is constantly facing the Management of our Railroad, makes me think of the strike which we went through last summer and which I did not expect to say anything about. But I do want to remind you of one thing in connection with it, one thing that I mentioned at a meeting similar to this before the Martinsburg Veterans several months ago. The strike started on July 1 and there was no time between then and the time the strike was terminated in September at which the Baltimore and Ohio would not have been willing and glad to make the same settlement with its men which it eventually did make.

"The Company lost, I suppose, upwards of ten or twelve million dollars. The men on strike lost between six and seven million dollars in wages unearned. The property suffered from improper upkeep and other things which it would be hard to put a price on. We lost business which it had cost us a good deal of money and effort to secure.

"I am not complaining. The Baltimore and Ohio was glad to make the settlement and it made it in good faith and the Company is willing to forget.

"Of course, during a number of weeks following the settlement of the strike things were not altogether pleasant in some of our shops. But I am very glad to say that it is now apparent that the men entered into the agreement with us in good faith also, and I doubt if there has ever been a similar agreement lived up to on the Baltimore and Ohio in the same good spirit and with equally good results as has this one.

"It seems to me that this shows that the settlement was just and fair to all concerned and I hope that this fact is an indication that we have entered upon an era of peace and good feeling which will continue to make us a happy and prosperous Railroad family."

Mr. Willard said that the Management of the Baltimore and Ohio had been criticised in some quarters because of the kind of settlement that was made, but that he felt, and the other officers of the Company also felt, that the adjustment of this question that was reached last September was equitable and fair, and that the results since then had justified this belief.

He expressed his gratification that the work of our shopmen since the settlement had been efficient and indicated their real interest in the Baltimore and Ohio, and he said he felt sure that this loyal attitude would continue. And he urged that it be remembered that it is the business of the men themselves, the men who actually do the work on the Railroad, to show that under the Baltimore and Ohio plan our Railroad can be operated just as efficiently and economically—and even more so—than other railroads. He said it was their plan as much as it was the Management's and that none could relieve them of the responsibility of proving that it was the best plan for all concerned.

He stated that the Railroad pays fair wages and pays them in real money and that it was certainly not unreasonable to expect a fair day's work and not counterfeit work in return.

Efficiency

In introducing the subject of efficiency, which, he admitted, had come into bad repute on account of misinterpretation and misapplication in many ways, Mr. Willard gave a concrete example to illustrate just exactly what efficiency means.

He said that Frederick Winslow Taylor, sometimes called the "Father of Efficiency" made a study of the work of a bricklayer. He found that as the hodcarrier brought the bricks to the place the bricklayer was working, he dumped them out of his hod on the platform at his feet. Mr. Taylor's study showed that it took as long to reach down, pick up and lift the brick to its place in the wall as it did to put it into the mortar and properly lay it, and he had an adjustable, steel platform made which could be handily moved up to the rising levels of the wall and which obviated the necessity of the bricklayer stooping to pick up the brick. The result was that with the new device the bricklayer was able to lay twice as many bricks in a day's time as previously, and with actually less physical effort.

Another illustration was given from the experience of Harrington Emerson, who has made some efficiency studies on the Baltimore and Ohio.

Mr. Emerson went into a shop to see if he could bring about improvements in working methods. He approached a man operating a lathe and was promptly informed by the foreman that the man was a 100 per cent. mechanic and that his work could not be improved upon.

So Mr. Emerson watched the operation he was doing, the turning of a heavy piece of steel, and discovered that in the 32 minutes which the operation took, the man seemed, as the foreman had said, to do the job perfectly.

But the interesting discovery was yet to be made. The steel bar was too heavy to lift out by hand and it took the operator just 14 minutes to get the differential pulley which he needed for raising it. Also the piece of steel was a finely finished one and the differential grip had sharp hooks on it which might have injured the polished surface. And it took the mechanic 8 minutes more to secure soft pads to insert between hooks and steel, to prevent the piece from being marred.

It was then reasonable to point out that had the differential pulley been rigged conveniently over the machine or near it, and the pads or some other similar device been handy, about 22 minutes could have been saved. There was no reason on the mechanic's part for wanting to waste this time. It would not have been a bit harder for him to have applied the 22 minutes to the turning out of another similar piece of steel and so increase his production.

The illustration shows that it is the duty of Management to see that men are supplied with proper facilities for doing their work efficiently.

Motion Picture Studies

Mr. Willard then referred to Dr. Shattuck, and the lecture on the Canadian Rockies which he has been delivering before various of the Veterans' Chapters, and said with a smile that he had received letters inquiring why Dr. Shattuck was giving these lectures and intimating that there certainly "must be something back of it" and "What is the Company trying to put over on us?"

A Message from Vice President Galloway

The increase in the Average Miles per car per day on the Baltimore and Ohio, is not only gratifying, but reflects a situation that makes it clear that the line is free of congestion and that the interest of all concerned, toward increasing the car miles, is counting.

I want to congratulate the officers and men in the Operating Department for this accomplishment and to renew my confidence in them that they will reach the 40 miles per day goal.

The friendly rivalry between divisions in this competition is a happy situation and will win.

A. H. Galloway
VICE PRESIDENT

Mr. Willard referred briefly to Dr. Shattuck's wide experience in teaching geology in universities and to his recent extensive trip into the heart of Africa to make motion pictures of the savage pigmy tribes living there.

He called attention to the wide use of the motion picture as an educational device, in schools, factories and elsewhere, and said that while Dr. Shattuck was giving these travel lectures before our Veterans' Chapters, he was at the same time familiarizing himself with our Road and our business and trying to discover without pre-judgment how the motion picture can be adapted to improve our methods. How, for instance, it can possibly show an economical car movement in a great terminal or a wasteful process in the shops or an unscientific handling of any job on the Railroad, be it on train or track, in shop or office.

Bearing in mind again the large number of ladies in the audience, he mentioned the efficiency of the modern apartment kitchen for cooking purposes as compared with the old kitchen of large proportions, and how much the housewife can save in the former by having utensils and supplies closely assembled, in contrast to the wide separation of sink, stove, and tables in the old fashioned kitchen. And he spoke of the dining car kitchen as an appropriate example, where three cooks can serve from 75 to 100 people in an hour because of scientific methods, and of the compact and handy arrangement.

Here he told the story of a clerk in a railroad office who was reported by a supervising clerk as "loafing most of the time." When brought in "on the carpet" the boss put the complaint up to the accused and said, "how does this happen—you look intelligent?"

"That's just what's the matter with me," replied the accused. "I am too intelligent. I do more work in five hours than the other men do in eight because I have studied my work carefully and make no unnecessary movements."

An investigation of his statement proved him correct; he had everything he needed arranged in such a way that he did not have to make one unnecessary movement and naturally he was able to show quicker and better results than his associates.

"The point I am trying to bring out clearly," Mr. Willard emphasized, "is that efficiency, as illustrated in the examples given, is not a plan to make men work harder or longer. It is simply a common sense method based on fair reasoning and experience which will enable us actually to do more work with less effort, and so promote the prosperity of the Road, and all connected with it.

Car Miles

"Take, for instance, the subject of car miles, which we are now laying great emphasis on in our operations. The measure of car miles is the average distance which each freight car on the Baltimore and Ohio moves each day. In round numbers we have 100,000 freight cars and each day the total mileage of these cars is reported and divided by the 100,000, to find out what the average car mileage per day is.

"The best average car miles per day including bad order cars, made on the Baltimore and Ohio during the last few years, was 31.5* for the third period in April. For every mile increase in this average that we could make on the Baltimore and Ohio we would be increasing, in effect, our car supply by 3,000 cars. And since the value of a car is figured at five dollars per car per day, this would mean an increase in our revenue of $15,000 per day.

"I have told our officers (and here Mr. Willard smiled in a knowing way at General Manager Scherer, General Superintendent White and Superintendent Hoskins, who were seated near him) that we were going to increase our average to 40 miles per car per day, excluding bad order cars. When we do this it will certainly be cause for great satisfaction among the entire personnel of our Railroad (and I say 'entire personnel' advisedly because there is hardly a man who cannot contribute in some way to bring about this result).

*Note—Since Mr. Willard made this statement a new record has been made, 32.3 miles per car per day, including bad orders, for the week of May 1-7. A fine achievement!

"The man who handles waybills without error helps prevent mistakes and delays—and so increases car miles.

"The man who dispatches trains can take pains to see that there are no delays—and so increase car miles.

"The trackman can watch his track carefully, preventing derailments—and so increase car miles.

"The man who packs grease boxes can do this important job carefully, prevent hot boxes and resulting accidents to trains—and so increase car miles.

"It does not require harder work on the part of the men.

"It requires unceasing vigilance and care and nice teamwork among all of us."

Mr. Willard then referred to a meeting attended by a large number of executives of various railroads, held in New York several weeks ago, when they decided that in an effort to better handle the large business being offered the railroads today, they would endeavor to increase the average miles per car per day for the entire country to 30. And he said that it gave him great satisfaction when the report for the month of April showed that this figure on the Baltimore and Ohio had already reached 31.5 for the third week, a higher record, he believed, than that made on any railroad in the east, with one or two exceptions.

This encouraging statement was heartily applauded.

Economy

Taking up the subject of economy, Mr. Willard referred to his previous statement that it cost the Baltimore and Ohio $60,000 for the coal which it uses each day.

"If an engine blew off steam through the pop, constantly for 24 hours," he said, "it would consume upward of ten tons of coal, and this would cost us about $30.00.

"I suppose we must admit that right now at various places on the Railroad, at Riverside, East Side, Glenwood, Grafton, Garrett and other places, there are engines blowing off. Perhaps the amount of steam wasted in this way would be equal to 50 locomotives on the Baltimore and Ohio blowing off steam all day, or a waste of $1,500, which does not do a single one of us any good.

"It isn't an easy thing to prevent the popping of steam at all times. It requires the best kind of team work between engineer and fireman—and having been both a fireman and engineer, I know that it isn't an easy job—it requires care and good judgment.

"But I want you to know that if we could get this nice teamwork which is possible between engineer and fireman on all our locomotives: if for example we could keep up sufficient steam on our engines with an average of six scoops per mile instead of seven, if we could save just this one scoop per mile—it would save the Baltimore and Ohio 500,000 tons per year.

"Now you will all admit that the more wasteful way of putting seven scoops into the fire box per mile, instead of six, is harder work for the fireman. And the reason why some firemen do this is quite interesting:

"The fireman knows that the engineer wants to make time, that he does not wish to have his train delayed—in other words that he wants to have sufficient steam pressure at all times. And he would rather exert the extra physical effort by putting on the unnecessary scoop of coal than he would endure the mental distress of keeping his steam at just the necessary pressure, and feel that by so doing he is running the risk of having a hole pulled in his fire and not having sufficient steam for an emergency such as a grade would mean. This shows the nice teamwork which ought to exist between the engineer and fireman who, if they keep in close touch with each other's work, can get over the road on schedule time and still do so economically.

"Twenty years ago, when I was assistant general manager of the Baltimore and Ohio, ties cost from 20 to 50 cents. In fact ties were so cheap that taking one from a railroad did not seem like stealing and it was not uncommon to see them in use as door steps for houses clearly in view along the right-of-way.

"We have already purchased the 2,000,000 ties which we will have to put into our track this year, and we paid an average of $1.70 apiece for them. You can see, therefore, why I hope that none of them will be used for door steps, and other improper purposes and that we should make every effort to conserve them.

"We do not want to make a single saving that would make the operation of our trains in the slightest degree unsafe! But I sometimes think that ties are taken from the track when we could have left them there with perfect safety for another year."

Mr. Willard then referred to a recent inspection trip which he had made with some of our officers and said that he had tried very hard to discover good ties which seemed to have been discarded unnecessarily, and that when he did so he said to his fellow officers:

"Don't you see that tie there and can't you hear how it is screaming: 'I am worth $1.70'?"

He then mentioned a number of other ways in which we can make worth while savings on the Railroad. He said that it had been his experience on occasion to see a locomotive standing in a station with the sand leaking out of the sand pipe, and wondered if the engineer thought he was unreasonable if he scowled when he made this discovery. And he suggested the other side of the picture when he admitted that wastes are not always the fault of the persons who seem to be responsible for them, and that it sometimes happens that when an engine is standing still and sand is leaking from it, it is not because the engineer is at fault but because the sand pipe is out of order. And that is a story of responsibility lying elsewhere.

And he added this interesting thought: If he scowled at the engineer under the circumstances cited, and, as a matter of fact the sand pipe was out of order, the scowl was due to a misunderstanding—just such a misunderstanding which we ought to try hard to avoid. On the other hand if the engineer thought the president a disagreeable person because he scowled, it was probably because he did not know that it cost the Baltimore and Ohio $90,000 a year for engine sand.

He used this as an illustration in support of his previous statement that most misunderstandings are cleared up when the facts are known.

In concluding his address, Mr. Willard referred again to his first topic, relationship, which is, after all, the basic explanation of success or failure on the Railroad.

"I have sometime heard it said," he began, "that the men on the road don't care whether it is prosperous or not. Of course, I think that is the attitude of a very small proportion of the men of the Baltimore and Ohio, but I am using it as an illustration for this purpose.

"When I first became connected with the Baltimore and Ohio, Tom Fitzgerald, the general manager whom many of you knew so well and respected so highly, told me some of the things that happened during the receivership of the Baltimore and Ohio. He said that when a train came into a terminal at night, he would have to take the chimneys off the lamps in the incoming cars and put them on the lamps in the outgoing cars, so that the passengers could have light. He told me that they had to pull the spikes out of the ties on siding tracks and put them into main tracks to keep the rails in place. He told me, and I know and you know, that the Baltimore and Ohio suffered the same kind of embarrassments that a poverty stricken man would.

"Now, I don't think that any man wants to work for an organization which is reduced to that kind of extremity. It is human nature to want to be employed by a going, prosperous concern, to see up-to-date cars, and well constructed roadbed, engines that are working properly, clean, well painted buildings and to be working under pleasant conditions generally.

"The common expression of this feeling is often made in these words: 'I'd rather work for Jones for half the money that I could get with Brown.'

"Now a man does not have to work for less money on the Baltimore and Ohio than he does on some other line—for, as we all know, the rates of pay on the railroads are substantially the same. But we also have known many men during our railroad experience who have been offered more money to go elsewhere and who have refused. Such cases are not uncommon, by any means. There is something about railroading which holds their interest, which fascinates them—which makes them feel that there are considerations other than wages, that enter vitally into the satisfaction which they get out of their work.

"It is that something which is hard to explain, but which nevertheless is very tangible, which makes a man enjoy working on a property where he likes the conditions and his fellow employes and respects his officers and what they are trying to do.

"And this is just the way the officers of the Baltimore and Ohio feel about it. They want to work on a property where the spirit among the people connected with it is pleasant and good, where they feel that they are accomplishing things, that they are giving the service which is expected of them, and where there is constantly present the reward of peace, contentment and prosperity.

"But this end cannot be obtained

The Capitol Limited

The New "Pride of the Baltimore and Ohio" Challenges Our Admiration and Loyal Support

ON Sunday, May 13, the Capitol Limited, our new flyer between Baltimore and Chicago, made an auspicious start by completing her run, eastbound and westbound, ON TIME. The accompanying description of the train, used widely for newspaper advertising, suggests the completeness and beauty of its equipment and the improved service it will give the public. The running time between the two cities has been reduced to 20 hours, or two hours better than our previous best trains. The photographs were taken on both the east and westbound runs, and show some of the crews that were chosen for their skill in handling trains so that our passengers might have a maximum degree of comfort, courtesy and cleanliness.

After Safety, which is always the supreme factor to be strived for in the operation of our trains, the Baltimore and Ohio believes that its passengers appreciate most the comfort that comes with careful handling of the engine by the engineer, the cleanliness that comes with smokeless firing by the fireman, and the courtesy extended by the men employed in our passenger service. And there is not a single demand that is made by this train which should reduce the measure of these qualities one whit. The elimination of unnecessary stops, and quick engine changes at terminals have been the principal factors in making possible the fast schedule, and our tracks are in such good shape, our power in such good condition, and the equipment is so substantial and well built, that the comfort for which our other trains have been famous should win an enhanced reputation through the operation of the Capitol Limited.

On Time

The editor of the Magazine speaks with no authority concerning operating matters but gathered from his talk with the officers and men on the initial westbound trip of the Capitol Limited, that it is the intent of the Management to subordinate everything when necessary to the end that this train may run safely, comfortably and then—on time.

At this writing the performance already made by this train, both eastbound and westbound, indicates that despite its fast schedule it will soon have established for itself an even better reputation for on time running than our other through trains have made during the past few years.

The fact that this train has a twenty-hour schedule between Baltimore and Chicago, both ways, and that it is an all-Pullman train with every facility afforded for the comfort and satisfaction of its passengers, is not especially significant. There are trains on other roads comparable in equipment and running time between various points.

The significance which it is hoped the Capitol Limited will bring to the Baltimore and Ohio and all its employees is this: For our Railroad it sets an admittedly new standard, a standard which we believe will not only be maintained in a gratifying degree in respect to this train, but which will, immediately, have an influence upon every train on the Railroad, an influence which will make the standard of the Capitol Limited a standard by which our other trains may fairly be judged, and a standard which will be constantly in the minds of all operating employees no matter what trains they may handle.

Service

At the conclusion of the initial eastbound trip a passenger stopped to speak to C. A. Mewshaw, trainmaster, Baltimore Division.

"Fine train," he said. "We (referring to the two ladies and the two other gentlemen with him) expected to use another road; in fact had bought tickets that way when a friend in Chicago asked us to try your new train."

"We exchanged our tickets and can't imagine a finer ride. A man can certainly live on this train. He can sleep, he has every facility for his comfort, and my—how he can eat!"

Mr. Charles F. Hall, of Minnesota, whom his friends called "Judge," did not bear this testimony alone, his companions interrupting him with reminders of this, that and the other thing, that made the Baltimore and Ohio a fine host.

More Service

Eastbound on the initial trip a mother who had finished her dinner, asked the steward if his car went on through. She showed disappointment when advised that it did not and explained that her boy was on a diet and that he should have a specially prepared meal in her compartment at eight the next morning.

"That is easily arranged," said the steward, and he took the order and sent it by the conductor to the steward of the diner put on at Cumberland. And the little fellow had his breakfast as desired, the next morning.

Emergency Car Repairer, Parts and Tools

Going into the baggage car with Master Car Builder Calder, I was shown the great chest of neatly arranged tools and extra parts carried so as to be immediately available in case of emergency. Also met the car inspector, who is one of several who will ride the train for a time and who is chosen because of his familiarity with the car construction and its repair. Nothing seems to have been neglected to make the Capitol Limited the perfect train.

Neatness

As might have been expected with new equipment, the train was scrupulously neat and clean. One would not have been surprised to see a slightly worn uniform here and there on the train, however. But one didn't see one. From head end to rear end the men on the various crews looked as if they had stepped out of the proverbial bandbox. New hats, new coats and trousers, new overalls and jumpers, everything was so spick and span.

And even on the engine, where I rode from Cumberland to Connellsville, first on the helper and then on the regular engine, there were unmistakable evidences that the shoes of engineer and fireman had had recent acquaintance with B'xby's Best.

by the officers alone. It takes all of us, Management and men, to bring it about, and that is the reason I am asking for your support tonight.

"There never has been nor is there now a railroad management in this country which desires more earnestly to have a fair and friendly understanding with its men than does the Management of the Baltimore and Ohio. With this understanding and with continued cooperation we can keep on improving our Railroad and our service, we can make proper returns to those who have invested their money in our property, and we can continue to share the friendship and good will which exists today."

Smoke

The baggageman was old in the service and as much excited as when his first grandchild arrived. But he was not thinking alone about his part of the job—he knew that it takes a whole lot of people to run the Perfect Train. So when I poked my head into his domain he said:

"Just look at us (referring to the car inspector and himself) we've had the door open quite often and looked ahead towards the engine, and we haven't a trace of dirt on our faces."

We were approaching Cumberland, we were over 150 miles on the way, and so far as smoke was concerned, well, the train might have been run by compressed air, the ride had been so absolutely devoid of soot.

Some fireman, that, and I am told that the same thing can be done over the entire route.

Enthusiasm

If there was one thing about the inaugural runs of the Capitol Limited that was noticeable above everything else, it was the enthusiasm and, be it said in all fairness, the anxiety, that everybody felt.

President Willard himself showed this as, having looked over the train as it stood in Mt. Royal Station, and ridden on it to Camden, he stood alone at the extreme end of the station as the train pulled out, smiling with unaffected happiness and waving a God Speed to the people on the observation platform.

But he was only one of thousands who came to see and approve and applaud. Nearly all of our executive officers were present at the start of the initial run in Baltimore and the same may be said of our people in Chicago. And all along the line, at stations, in yards and terminals, our employes were standing at vantage points, with expectant looks, smiling faces and waving arms. There were groups of them peering over the top of board fences, standing on the tops of freight cars and congregated on the platforms. The word of the new train had gotten even to the watchmen along the tracks, the men who maintain a ceaseless vigil to guard against broken rails, slides and other dangerous conditions, and they were out with lanterns and flags to greet the limited.

Trains Record Depends on Employees

Employees by the thousands will continue to crane their necks and strain their eyes to see this latest and best passenger train on the line, as she rolls into their terminal, or flashes by the little railroad towns in which they live and work.

It is their train, the pride of their Company, and it will be a challenge not only to their admiration but also to their duty to see that its reputation shall be untarnished. The utmost care on the part of the thousands who will have to do with the operation of the train, is needed to bring about this result, and just as a reminder, we call upon the following employees to do their parts loyally and well.

Mr. Supervisor and Trackman—Inspect your track carefully, see that line and surface is in good condition, bolts tight, switches inspected and everything in such condition as to avert possibility of derailment.

Mr. Master Mechanic and Foreman—Supervise closely to see that engine is ready to leave "Ready Track" ON TIME, and in condition to make a successful trip.

Mr. Engine Inspector—Make a specially careful inspection of engines assigned to this service—see that all work required is done and done well.

Mr. Machinist and Helper—DO A GOOD JOB; one that will not cause a failure on line.

Mr. Engine Preparer—See that EVERY part requiring it is properly lubricated.

Mr. Supplyman—See that everything required is in its proper place on the engine when it is ready to move.

Mr. Car Foreman—Make a thorough inspection of all cars, and KNOW that they have been properly cleaned, that all work required has been done and that they are in first class condition, properly supplied with ice, water and other necessary supplies.

Mr. Car Inspector—Inspect all cars thoroughly; see that every part is perfect; if not, have it made so before you mark "O. K."

Mr. Coach Cleaner—Clean the cars thoroughly. Don't leave dirt in the corners. Cleanliness is important; the lack of it makes a bad impression on our patrons.

Mr. Box Packer—See that boxes on cars are carefully packed so that delays will not occur on line account of hot boxes.

Mr. Train Dispatcher—On YOU, to a large extent, depends the "On Time" performance of these trains. Have their orders ready for prompt delivery, when necessary. Give them the best of it—keep heavy drags, slow freights and locals out of their way.

Mr. Operator and Towerman—Be ON THE JOB. Don't hold your block against the train until it is almost at your station, requiring it to slow down. If you have nothing for them, give a prompt clearance when called for.

Mr. Agent—Have your baggage and mail ready. See that your men are on hand to load and unload promptly. Prompt movement at stations is essential.

Mr. Engineer—Inspect your engine carefully when you report for duty; see that it is in good condition and everything necessary on hand. COOPERATE with your fireman to make an "On Time" performance. Handle your train SAFELY. Be ready to start promptly when the signal is given at stations. Handle the air carefully so that good stops may be made with comfort to passengers. Don't jerk the train when starting and don't make "jarring" stops. Vice President Galloway has said that "The engineer who makes required time at minimum speed excels as a runner."

Mr. Fireman—Keep your train in good condition to maintain a full head of steam. Watch your pop valve, keep it down. Don't make black smoke; remember that with observation car on the rear black smoke will not add to the comfort of our passengers, and it wastes coal. While engineer and fireman each has his duties to perform, team work is required to make a successful trip. Work Together!

Mr. Conductor—See that your train has been cleaned; that it is properly heated, lighted and ventilated and is provided with ice, water, etc. See that your trainmen are on hand to assist passengers in alighting from and boarding trains, that they are courteous, provided with proper uniform, and neat and clean in appearance. Maintain quiet in sleeping cars after passengers have retired. Remember that you are responsible for the train.

Mr. Brakeman—Be on hand promptly to assist passengers boarding or leaving train. See that vestibule doors are closed promptly when leaving stations. Be courteous in your dealings with patrons. See that your flagging equipment is complete; be prompt in going back to protect your train. Watch the heat, light and ventilation of cars and the comfort of patrons.

Mr. Crossing Watchman—Keep

crossings clean. See that all old papers, etc., are promptly picked up and disposed of. Papers and dirt on crossings "fly up" and cause annoyance to passengers on observation cars of trains running at high speed.

Mr. Dining Car Steward—Remember that no factor on our trains counts more toward Real Hospitality than the service given by you and your men. "Our passengers are our guests."

Will You Help Celebrate Arbor Day in the Year 1973

From the Dearborn Independent

FROM its headquarters in Washington, D. C., the American Tree Association is planning a national campaign to stimulate public interest in tree planting. There is but one way to become a member of the association and that is by planting a tree. The association hopes to secure a million new members and have a million new trees planted in all parts of the country.

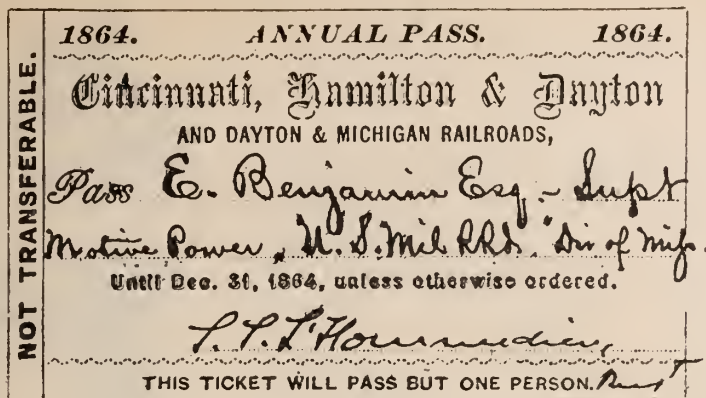

This proposal is of immense importance to the American people, because the forests of the United States are an essential to safety and comfort of life, as well as to agriculture and industry. Forests are necessary to the existence of our very important and indispensable bird and game population. The life of our people is dependent on the soil, which in turn depends on a continuous water supply which cannot be had unless a sufficient number of trees exist to hold the rains and gradually release the water in periods of drought.

The American Tree Association is calling upon the people to celebrate the centennial of Arbor Day in 1973, fifty years before it happens, by planting the trees now. Stripped of all sentiment the proposition still remains an economic investment of incalculable worth as every one knows who has bought lumber recently. Lumber is vanishing, along with the forests. Our forests are being consumed four times more rapidly than they grow. The timber shortage has become one of the most critical and vital problems of today and whether you plant a tree on the lawn or on the street, that tree will be staving off a timber famine as well as preserving the natural resources of the soil. One who plants a tree serves posterity. Tree-planting instruction is sent by the association for a two-cent stamp. It is worth two cents to say that one has contributed a tree to the beauty and utility of the earth.

Extraordinary Interest in Saving Shown by Newark Division Engine Crew

Engineer Hankinson and Fireman Hobbs Especially Commended by Superintendent

EVIDENCE accumulates that the "Stop That Leak" appeal made by President Willard has taken hold all over the system. Instances have not been lacking for some time that employes in all branches of the service have seen the fairness of the request and responded with enthusiasm.

The other night the writer happened to meet for the first time a division storekeeper from the line who was in Baltimore, and asked him if he saw any results of the movement.

"See them?" he replied, "you just ought to see the cost of our materials given out for the first two months of this year as compared with the same months of last year, and you would know yourself."

Pressed for a specific figure he said that a conservative estimate for his division would be $5,000 for each month in saving, and this in the face of a great deal more work being done in the way of repairs and replacements.

The saving, he said, is being made largely in the utilization of old instead of new material.

Foremen and general foremen are much more careful than ever about the material orders that they approve. They first see if some reclaimed material cannot be used.

A typical illustration was of a foreman who came to the storeroom with a requisition for an item that cost new about $15.00. The general foreman happened to be there, too, and when he saw what was being ordered he said, "No, Bill, we won't get a new one now—there are good parts of several of them in the shop that only need assembling, and that won't take long or cost much."

And Bill gladly complied and secured for the labor of an hour or so, something that was just as serviceable as the new tool he had gone to the storeroom to get.

So it goes in the shops. And the same personal interest is manifest by your train service employes, a most interesting illustration being the one which is outlined in the letter of Superintendent Kruse, Newark Division, which follows:

Newark, Ohio
March 16, 1923

G. A. Hankinson, Engineer
Newark, Ohio
D. W. Hobbs, Fireman
Newark, Ohio
Gentlemen:-

My attention has just been called to the efficient manner in which engine 1914 was operated by you gentlemen while engaged in handling relief train cleaning up derailment at Butler on March 14-15.

The report I have received indicates that you took water at Mt. Vernon on your westbound trip at 4:45 p.m. on the 14th, worked at the derailment at Butler until 9:00 p.m., when engine was laid up, again beginning work at 7:00 a.m. on the 15th, handling relief train until 12:00 noon before requiring water. Further, that in order to conserve coal supply, fire was maintained in engine by fireman picking up old ties and wood while the relief train was working on the afternoon of the 15th—thus averting the necessity for going to Lexington for coal before returning to Newark with your train.

The efficient service performed by you gentlemen is very commendable and materially expedited the handling of the derailment.

Yours truly,
(Signed) H. G. Kruse
Superintendent

Cannon Greeted Arrival of First Train at Dayton, Ohio

By E. L. Williams, General Claim Agent, Cincinnati, Ohio

SEVENTY-TWO years ago a little girl stood down by the old cemetery at Dayton, Ohio, watching the first steam driven locomotive arrive in town. That little girl was Mrs. Martha J. Stoner, who is now 84 years old and still lives in Dayton. Mrs. Stoner recalls the day well and says that there was a long wait as the engine did not arrive until one hour later than it was scheduled. However, when it did arrive it was greeted with cheers and the roar of cannon.

The first railway train arrived at Dayton in September, 1850. The road from Cincinnati to Dayton was known then as the Mad River and Lake Erie Railroad, being chartered in 1832. The name was later changed to Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, and the road is now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio System.

An interesting relic of the early days is the accompanying annual pass, issued in 1864 during the war, to E. Benjamin, Superintendent of Motive Power of the U. S. Military R. R.

Health Hint

By Samuel McNeil, Tax Office

THE habit of wetting one's finger with the tongue in order to turn over papers in a file is insanitary and detrimental to the health.

Sheets of paper can be turned over with ease by holding an ordinary rubber eraser between the fingers, and pushing the edge of the paper in the same manner as is done by moistening the finger. And it's more sanitary. Try it!

Why is an Inspection Trip?

Random Impressions of the Magazine Reporter

EVERY once in a while word goes out from the General Offices in Baltimore that there will be an inspection trip. To the inexperienced participant the announcement contains a pleasant thrill. To the officers in charge of the properties to be inspected it means the assembling of almost every conceivable kind of data—transportation, traffic, maintenance, mechanical, accounting—so that correct answers can be promptly given to the many questions which are bound to come up.

One of these recent trips covered our New York properties and was exceedingly pleasant, especially to those who had not had the opportunity of making it before. The two days were spent almost altogether on the beautiful waters of the Hudson and East Rivers, and New York Bay; Spring had put on her most engaging raiment and the business of the port of New York unfolded a panorama of activities of consuming interest.

The start was made at eight on the morning of April 26, at the splendid 26th Street Warehouse of the Baltimore and Ohio in New York. This warehouse, a model of its kind, is doing a large business, its floors being crowded with merchandise of every conceivable description.

Just across West Street from the warehouse was moored the staunch Company tug, George M. Shriver, the newest of the tug fleet and aboard it the party was soon climbing to be greeted by J. H. Clark, superintendent of Floating Equipment, E. A. English, marine supervisor, and the crew headed by Captain "Andy" Bohlen.

The party included President Willard, Vice President Galloway, Vice President Fries, General Manager Voorhees of the New York properties, Chief of Motive Power Emerson, Chief Engineer Lane, General Superintendent Transportation Curren, Chief Engineer Maintenance Stimson, General Freight Traffic Manager Shumate, Freight Traffic Manager Richardson, General Coal Freight Agent Walters, Foreign Freight Traffic Manager Couse, General Traffic Agent Murray, Superintendent Hamner, Terminal Agent Biggs, Division Freight Agents Phenix and Pumphrey, Superintendent Car Department Tatum, Commercial Freight Agents Riddle and Shultz, Foreign Freight Agent Roloson and Manager of Warehouses Morton.

The first stop was made at Pier 22, North River, the largest miscellaneous freight station we have in the New York territory. The new and recently made records of business handled at this pier were evidenced by the activities on the pier, which was quickly covered by the party. A survey of the pier frontage on West Street adjacent to our Pier 22 was also made and the massed trucks waiting to load and unload gave some indication of the difficulties encountered in freight transportation on Manhattan Island. Long lines of vehicles could be seen waiting for ferry boat accommodations over the river and indicating the need of the new vehicular tunnel under the river, now well along toward completion.

The inspection party then visited the Railroad offices at Pier 22, meeting a number of employees and surveying their facilities for handling the clerical work at the pier.

Next to Pier 22 was the great fruit pier of the Erie Railroad, the centre of the pier fruit business in New York City. Thousands of boxes of fruit were on display and indicated the importance of this business in the metropolitan area.

The George M. Shriver then proceeded on down the river and around the Battery, and up the East River to Pier 21, where the party debarked and saw with interest the large amount of freight on storage and in transit at that point. Traffic officers stated that additional storage could be accommodated there, if the pier were strengthened, and arrangements were made for a survey of the structure to determine the possibilities of increasing its capacity.

Proceeding on up the East River under the great bridges connecting Manhattan and Long Island, the old Brooklyn Bridge, the Manhattan Bridge and the Williamsburg Bridge, the tug crossed the river for a short visit at the Wallabout or the Brooklyn transfer station, where our Brooklyn business is handled. An investigation was conducted here also as to possible enlargement of facilities.

Further up the East River, after passing Blackwell's Island, the tug nosed her way into the Harlem River, which connects the East River and the North or Hudson Rivers and cuts off Manhattan Island from New York State proper.

The procedure through this narrow and tortuous way was slow on account of the shallowness of the stream and low tide. It was here, however, that an excellent opportunity was given to see how the Management studies the possibility of enlarging our facilities.

Traffic officers stated the need of pier accommodations in this section to handle the rapidly increasing business of upper New York City. The stations of various railroads were passed slowly and at each one statistics were produced to indicate just how business of one kind or another was being handled. In other words the surveys indicated the business getting possibilities of our Railroad provided we secure accommodations there. Difficulties of navigation were discussed with our officers in charge of this branch of the operations, the distance from Staten Island was taken into the reckoning, the expansion of this section of New York discussed and the strategy of establishing there a possible business feeder for our lines, viewed from many angles.

Listening to the conversation one could not help being impressed with the availability of exact figures bearing on the question. Hardly an inquiry was broached, even the most minute, pertinent to the discussion, which could not be immediately and exactly answered. And this statement covers not alone what possible business we might get in that section, but also the latest business transactions of other railroads having accommodations there.

The same general situation developed later after the Shriver had again entered the beautiful and expansive waters of the North River, when on the upper west side of New York City the party stopped and made an inspection of possible sites which could be developed with profit to the business of the Company in that section. A quick run across the river to the New Jersey shore gave opportunity to examine the new pier of the Erie Railroad located there.

The trip around Manhattan Island had taken the greater part of the day and at 4.00 o'clock the Shriver had landed her passengers.

On Friday a little mist enveloped the harbor and softened and beautified the outlines of the towering structures of lower Manhattan as the tug steamed down the upper New York Bay. She ran in close to the stupendous terminal development in Brooklyn generally known as the Bush Terminals. Here were vessels from many parts of the world using the modern accommodations for loading and unloading freight.

On the New Jersey Shore, over in the vicinity of our own properties on Staten Island, is the splendid new coal and ore pier of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, an interesting view of which was obtained from the tug. The great new docks owned by New York City and situated just south of St. George on the bay side of Staten Island were seen as the tug proceeded down the bay. Through the Narrows, past Fort Hamilton and Fort Wadsworth, past the summer resorts of Midland and South Beaches, the latter served by our Staten Island Lines, the tug proceeded around the lower end of the island and came up into the Kill van Kull, that narrow body of water separating Staten Island from the New Jersey Shore.

One of the interesting sights on the trip was here disclosed in a group of fifty to a hundred ships owned by the United States Government and lying idle at their moorings. It seemed a great pity these staunch freighters are now but the prey of wind and weather and suffering great deterioration, instead of handling the great commerce of the United States on the seven seas. And all because our government does not seem to be able to adopt a satisfactory policy for their operation!

The whole trip through the Kill van Kull was interesting because of the expansion of industries along both shores of New Jersey and Staten Island, and it was with a pro-

How many halves make up a whole?

"Why, two, of course!" you say;
Nay, friend, I'll teach you a new rule,
And prove it, if I may.

For instance, take this simple word;
A sound one 'tis, you see,
Contributing to health of mind
And true morality.

Divide it into FIRST and LAST:

Is each one half, say you?

If so, that one half makes a whole
I'll show you to be true.

Perhaps too, you were taught in youth
That halves are always equal;
Quite wrong again! at least I think You'll say so in the sequel.

For if you take the lion's share,
In fact the whole, for FIRST,
Still some must be eked out for LAST,
(And least, tho not the worst.)

The whole sum of the matter is,
Old rules are sometimes wrong;
Yet it might not be WHOLE for you
To practice this rule long!

Toledo Division Veterans Hold Third Annual Reunion at Lima, Ohio

THE third annual reunion of the Toledo Division Veterans was held at Lima, Ohio, April 11, when a banquet and entertainment were given in Moose Hall.

The banquet was prepared by the Ladies of the Moose, and was a tasty and well served meal. About two hundred veterans, their families and friends were present. President W. F. Van Horn presided. During the banquet music was furnished by the Misses Alice and Ruth Pratt, daughters of Blacksmith Pratt of the Lima shops.

The program was as follows:

Invocation,

Rev. C. A. Rowand, M. E. Church, Lima
Address of welcome,

Mayor Harold Cunningham
Response, Trainmaster T. J. Daly
Reading, Miss Dorothy Day
(Daughter of local conductor)

Address, Grand Vice President J. M. Garvey
Solo, Mrs. Mary Wilcox Flager (Mother of yard clerk)

Address,

Dr. F. H. Hutchison, Company Surgeon
Reading, Miss Lillian Johnson
Address,

President G. K. Bell, Willard Veterans

Of particular interest was the address of Mayor Cunningham. After welcoming the veterans and their friends, he traced the history of railroading from its earliest days down to the present and impressed upon his hearers the vital importance of transportation in both industrial and private life.

Trainmaster Daly expressed the regret of Superintendent Mann that business matters made it impossible for him to be present, and read the following wire from Vice President Galloway:

"Account business engagement New York tomorrow I am prevented from availing myself of your kind invitation to be at your third annual reunion at Lima tonight. Unfortunately these annual reunions have been held on very short notice, otherwise it would have been a great pleasure to me to be with you. Please convey my regrets to your association and give them my best wishes for an enjoyable evening and for the future of you all."

A wire from General Superintendent Mitchell was also read expressing his regret that business engagements made it impossible for him to be present.

Trainmaster Daly in an interesting address read the program of the American Railway Association for the present year, and spoke optimistically of the business outlook. He urged that hearty cooperation be given by everyone in making the Baltimore and Ohio service first class in every respect, calling particular attention to the present campaign for car miles, heavier loading of cars, etc.

After the entertainment was concluded, the floor was cleared for dancing, music being furnished by a local orchestra. Among those seen on the floor enjoying the dance, but not attempting to make a "World's Record," were Division Accountant Spencer, Chief Clerk Fortman, and Supervising Agent Thresher from Dayton, Grand Vice President of Veterans and Mrs. J. M. Garvey, Wheeling, W. Va. Baltimore was represented by Mr. McMorrow of Superintendent Car Service Malone's Office, while the agents from Ottawa, Ohio, and Wapakoneta, Ohio, upheld the honor of the Transportation Department. "Safety First Bill Allison" was among those present, swaying to the music and easily taking the honors in the dance, which continued until midnight.

Martinsburg Auxiliary

Correspondent, CLARA McDONALD TAYLOR

OUR lodge met in the Baltimore and Ohio building on April 12, with a good attendance, although we regret that several sisters were still absent account of illness.

We regret that since our meeting Brother Burkhart has been called from our ranks to a higher reward.

Our lodge meets on the second Thursday of each month and a cordial invitation is extended to visiting veterans to attend.

Your correspondent has received an invitation to attend the Brunswick celebration which will be held May 16, and hopes to be present. The Brunswick people are of the best and we always have an enjoyable time. A number of them are old time friends whom we have known since childhood. Friendship counts for so much in this life.

If we would stop and think of the little acts of kindness we can do, and not what we have done, how much better it would be. It is easier to create an ideal than to live one. Our daily life brings many unpleasant situations, but that is part of the game and we should all strive to be "Veteran Sportsmen."

Sisters Criswell, Knuckles and Copenhagen have recovered from illness and are able to be out. Congratulations!

Brother Howard Keedy is so far recovered from an operation that he is again able to visit us. "Joe" Copenhagen has also recovered and is now contemplating a visit to Wisconsin; he will be chaperoned by his wife. Maybe she is afraid he will talk too much to the lady "Vets."

When the Cumbo coal tippie was destroyed by fire recently, splendid assistance was rendered by the boys of the Fifth Ward Fire Company. The Baltimore and Ohio has expressed their appreciation of the work the boys did, and all of us feel proud of them.

Parkersburg "Vets" Reunion June 20-21

There will be a grand union and get-together here in Parkersburg, W. Va., June 20 and 21. Let everyone come and help make this a banner meeting. There will be good hotel accommodations provided for all, at reasonable rates. Let's help make the grand old Baltimore and Ohio the best railroad in the United States. Interesting questions will be taken up and President Willard and others will be invited to attend. Meetings will be held in the Parkersburg High School Auditorium, Dudley Avenue.

Baltimore Auxiliary No. 1 Organizes Kitchen Cabinet Orchestra

By Mrs. J. W. Baxter, Secretary

DURING the early winter months the Ladies Auxiliary No. 1 of the Baltimore Chapter of Veterans, organized what is known as a Kitchen Cabinet Orchestra. Mrs. Minnie Paul, a popular musician of Baltimore, directed the band and many and varied were the selections rehearsed that brought forth peals of laughter from those who attended the first performance on February 26. The initial entertainment and dance was held at Moose Hall, 410 W. Fayette Street.

The Orchestra was assisted by the following accomplished soloists: Mr. Gustav Paul, violinist; Miss. Koehler, soprano; Mr. Moxley, baritone; Mr. Wilbert Galloway, Jr., baritone. Miss Lantz and Mrs. Dodds accompanied the soloists at the piano.

Rehearsals were held at the homes of various members and appetizing collations were served after rehearsals.

The members are delighted with the reception which the entertainments were given and they thank their friends for the many kindnesses. The only regrettable fact is that so many were unable to gain admission to the entertainment. For this reason, the entertainment will be repeated so that all may have a chance to attend it.

The following are the officers of the band organization: Mrs. Collingsworth, president; Mrs. Paschal, vice president; Mrs. Mercer, treasurer; Mrs. Bowers, narrator; Mrs. Baxter, secretary.

Mrs. Elliott, chairman of the committee, and her assistant, Mrs. Williams, are planning an unusually good entertainment by the Kitchen Cabinet Orchestra during the early summer months.

The entertainment is a musical romance entitled "How to be Happy Though Married." The story is told by Mrs. George A. Bowers, and the telling is interspersed with music and singing descriptive of the story. The program rendered is as follows: Annie Laurie; Maryland, My Maryland; Robin Adair; Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party; Believe me if all those endearing young charms; How can I bear to leave thee; Jingle bells; Oh Promise me; Till the sands of the Desert grow cold; Neath the shade of the old apple tree; the old Oaken Bucket; Smiles; The end of a perfect day; In the gloaming; Darling, I am growing old; I cannot sing the old songs; Auld Lang Syne; Put on your old grey bonnet; Marching through Georgia; Listen to the mocking bird; Three o'clock in the morning; Oh where oh where is my little dog gone; Sweet Alice Ben Bolt; Peggy O'Neill; Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines; Yankee Doodle Dixie; Old black Joe; Carry me back to old Virginny; Old Tucky home; The long, long trail; Home Sweet Home; Good night ladies; Nation Emblem March.

Any organization which would like to hear our orchestra can make arrangements by getting in touch with our officers.

Baltimore Veterans—Hanson, Brown and Mercer—Awarded Fifty-year Buttons

AT a meeting of Baltimore Division Chapter held in Moose Hall, Baltimore on April 2, fifty-year buttons were presented by Chief of Welfare W. W. Wood to Baggage man W. H. Hanson, Supervisor of Material W. G. Brown and Blacksmith James Mercer.

William H. Hanson was born in Baltimore on August 30, 1847, and entered the service in 1870 as a painter. In 1872 he was transferred to passenger brakeman and in 1875 to train baggageman. In 1889 he was promoted to passenger conductor, and in 1891 returned to his former position of train baggageman, where he is still employed. Mr. Hanson is now the oldest man in active service on the Baltimore Division.

William G. Brown, Jr., was born on August 20, 1854. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in August, 1872, as an apprentice at Mount Clare. In 1876 he was advanced to machinist, in 1885 gang foreman, in 1886 foreman, in 1907 ereeting shop foreman, in 1911 locomotive inspector, in 1914 inspector of material, in 1917 general material man and in 1921 supervisor of material, which position he now holds. Mr. Brown has spent his entire time in the service at Mount Clare.

James Mercer was born on June 16, 1860. He entered the service of this Company on March 1, 1872 as a laborer; in 1875 he was appointed apprentice, and in 1879 blacksmith, which position he still holds. Mr. Mercer, during his entire term of service, has been employed at Mount Clare.

The Love Letters of D. S. Patcher

No. 2—Reminiscence

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember
THAT CARPET of green,
BESIDE THE purling brook?
ALONE WITH nature,
YOU and I,
SHELTERED by the skies
FROM prying eyes,
IN THAT secluded nook,
'NEATH THE leafy bower,
IT WAS there we passed
LOVE'S SWEETEST hour.
DO YOU remember?
YOU DO, don't you?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember
IT WAS there,
I FOLDED you close,
CLOSE IN my arms,
AND YOU pillowed
YOUR LOVELY head
AGAINST MY throbbing heart.
SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember?

IT WAS there,
YOU and I,
HEARD THE twang
AND FELT the pang
OF CUPID'S dart.
DO YOU remember
HOW tenderly,
HOW lovingly,
I PRESSED
YOU TO my breast,
WHILE WE lingered,
YOU and I,
LOTH TO leave that FAIRYLAND of bliss,
'TIL THE dew kissed
THE CRIMSON of your VELVETED cheek
AND SHOWERED caresses,
ON THE silken tresses
OF YOUR glorious hair,
SWEETHEART?

DO YOU remember
HOW shyly,
HOW modestly,
YOUR EYES met my gaze—
MIRRORED deep in THEIR limpid blue,
I SAW the light of LOVE'S PUREST rays.
AND THEN I knew,
AND YOU knew,
THAT GOD made us,
YOU and I,
EACH FOR the other.
DO YOU remember?
YOU DO, don't you?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember
THE MOON,
IN GLORY bright, SHED HER mellow
BEAMS OF light
THROUGH THE foliage
OF THE branches above,
AS HOMEWARD we floated,
HAND IN hand,
ON THE waves of love,
THROUGH THE woodland
AND OVER the meadow?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember.
THE FRAGRANCE of the air,
OF THAT perfect night,
LADEN WITH the sweetness OF CLOVER?
DO YOU remember,
THE SOFT, sweet singing
OF THE breeze,
THROUGH THE trees?
SWEETER
TO YOU and me,
THAN THE music
FROM THE harp of ISRAFIL.
DO YOU remember?
YOU DO, don't you
SWEETHEART.

How I Made My Husband's Overalls

By Mrs. Thomas E. Arnold
Hyattsville, Md.

I WAS glad of the opportunity to try out one of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE patterns, and decided I would make my husband a pair of overalls. The photograph shows the result.

The pattern is simple and easy to make. I cut the overalls and completed the work in about three hours.

After seeing how easy it was to make these clothes, I decided that in future all my husband's overalls would be made at home.

In Case of Emergency!

By Lillian Betony, Daughter of Section Foreman
P. Betony, Caddell, W. Va.

THE quick application of simple principles has saved thousands of lives.

About three years ago mother was preparing to use ammonia and having poured some out in a glass and placed it on the table and walked out in a hurry to answer a call at the door, my little sister came in for water and seeing this glass with the clear liquid, started to swallow it. A large dose of vinegar followed by a large dose of olive oil was given her at once.

Things like this happen every day in the routine of the household, and in such cases one must act quickly and make use of the remedies at hand. If mother had waited for the physician who lived nearly two miles away the result would have been entirely different. I think every mother should know what to do when such emergencies arise, although in serious cases a doctor should be gotten as quickly as possible. Here are some easily get-at-able remedies for ordinary emergencies:

Tincture of iodine. This is usually kept in the house and accidentally may be drunk by a small child. Give the child at once flour mixed with water and whites of eggs, while waiting for the doctor.

Scalds and burns. These are common in childhood. Always keep one quart of carron oil on hand; it will keep for years.

Apply freely, cover with cheese cloth or clean linen and send at once for your doctor. Carron-oil is made by shaking together a half pint each of lime water and linseed oil.

Swallowing a pin by baby. Don't get excited unless it seems to stick in the throat. If so send for nearest physician.

Swallowing button or penny. Large dose of castor oil.

Clean cuts. Immerse at once in cold water to which creolin has been added in the proportion of teaspoonful to cup. Turpentine may then be poured in the cut to kill germs.

Ragged cuts. Creolin and cold water, cloths wrung out in same and laid on the wound. Consult physician.

Wounds to eyes. Compresses of cold water. Consult physician at once.

Drinking of carbolic acid. Give freely milk, white of egg. Powdered chalk should be given if at hand. Epsom salts.

Poisoning by mushroom. Teaspoonful of mustard to a cup of hot water. Drink at once. Large dose of castor oil. Empty the stomach as quickly as possible.

Camphor if taken by a child. Make it vomit by giving mustard and water.

Nose bleeding. Raise both arms above head. Grasp the nose firmly between the thumb and forefinger. Inject a quantity of ice water to which common salt has been added. Saturate a towel with ice water and lay across forehead.

Sunstroke. Remove patient at once to a cool room. Lay him down near an open window and strip off outer clothes. Pour a stream of water over the body. Hold the pitcher about five feet above the body; let it strike the head first, then the chest then the arms and legs. If patient can swallow, a cool drink of water is helpful. Wine, whiskey or any kind of spirits must not be used. Many make this mistake.

In case of heat stroke, the face is cool and pale. Ice cannot be used. Bathe patient in warm water, hands and feet should be rubbed to restore circulation. Later hot drinks such as tea, coffee and milk may be given.

Choking is generally caused by attempting to swallow food which is not well chewed.

A quick blow on the back between the shoulders will often discharge a piece of food in the throat. In giving blows to a child, do so with the open hand with child across the knee and head hanging downwards.

Ivy poisoning. A very effective remedy is to bind on the affected parts a cloth wetted with a two ounce bottle of alcohol in which half an ounce of sugar of lead has been dissolved. Ivy poisoning may be prevented by washing thoroughly with soap and hot water, the face, neck and hands, within two hours after being exposed to the poison. Octagon soap is recommended.

Vegetable Salad

By Mrs. John M. Carroll, Argo, Ill.

- 1 small cabbage (cut fine),
- 1 medium stalk of celery (cut fine),
- 1 large sweet pepper (diced),
- 4 medium tomatoes (diced),
- 2 large pimentos (diced),

Salt and pepper to taste. Put cabbage, celery and pepper together and just before serving add tomatoes and pimentos. Serve on lettuce leaf with Mayonnaise dressing.

Recipes And Household Hints

By Mrs. Ross E. Boyer, Berlin, Pa.

For those who have the cheaper grades of matting on their floors, the following will be useful:

Take an old oil mop. Wash off all oil and dirt, then dry, and use this as a duster. By going over the matting several times and shaking the dust from the mop, you will find your room nice and clean without the dust that a broom would make.

Rhubarb Preserves

- 5 lbs. rhubarb,
- 4 lbs. sugar,
- 3 oranges, pulp and rind,
- ½ lb. English walnuts.

Cook all but nuts for an hour, slowly, then add the nuts.

Section Foreman Thomas E. Arnold is thanking his wife for the sturdy pair of overalls she made for him from a Baltimore and Ohio pattern

Let's Make Our Own Clothes!

By Peggy

WITH all of the pretty patterns that are shown on these pages, and all of the pretty and inexpensive materials that we can find on the remnant counters at this time of the year, it just makes us feel as though we must get to work and do some sewing for ourselves.

This afternoon I got a wonderful letter from the Fashion Woman. She told me all about the new clothes for the early summer and sent lots of new patterns. We won't have the space to tell you all the news, but if you will look over the patterns shown here you will find lots of hints that will help you with your summer sewing. And if you don't find what you want here, there is a nice fashion book that we'll be glad to order for you for twelve cents in stamps.

4352. Here's a dainty, sleeveless frock for the girl whose age is between 8 and 14 years. Three yards of taffeta will make a lovely little party dress for Elaine, who is ten. The skirt is mounted on an under-waist.

I went downtown this noon to do a little shopping. In one of the stores I saw some lingerie that I'd been wishing for. I asked the price of a simple little nainsook slip with no trimming whatever save the plain half-inch hem. The answer was: "One dollar and twenty-five cents." Did I buy it? I did not. I went over to another counter where there was a sale of nainsook, and with the money that I would have paid for three ready-made slips I bought material enough for five of them, with money enough left over to buy a little edging to trim them in. It certainly pays to make your own clothes, particularly the plain things.

The girdle may be omitted and the dress finished with a sash or ribbon string girdle. Price, 12 cents.

4338. This is a nice pattern to use for your new gingham dress. The girdle section is a part of the shaped front and small pockets are inserted at the tab extensions. Can you imagine anything more dainty and cool than this dress in green and white tissue gingham with bindings of green organdy? The pattern is cut in seven sizes, 32 to 46 inches, bust measure. Size 38 requires  $4\frac{7}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material. Price of pattern, 12 cents.

4332. If you want something unusual in the way of a house dress that will serve not only for morning but for the afternoon as well, why not try this one? There are no buttons to be bothered with; the dress slips right over your head and there you are, with a little under arm closing. Linen or crepe would make up well in this. The dress shown was made up in red and white figured percale with red bindings. The pattern comes in seven sizes, 34 to 46 inches, inclusive. Size 38 requires  $5\frac{1}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material, with  $\frac{7}{8}$  yard of material for bertha cuff and pocket facings. Price, 12 cents.

4344. Now little Janet is ready for a romp with Fido, for this little garment will delight the heart of any youngster between the ages of two and six. It's so comfy, and there are so many pockets.

Made in tan linen with red trimmings, why, even grown-ups would be envious. A 2-year size requires  $\frac{5}{8}$  yard for the guimpe and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards for the rompers, of 36-inch material with  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard of 32-inch contrasting material for trimming. Pattern mailed to any address for 12 cents in stamps.

4343. Little Pauline, holding her dolly, comes to meet us in this pretty gingham dress. She has one made of the same pattern in voile, too. The pattern comes in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. The 4-year size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 32-inch material, with  $\frac{3}{8}$  yard of contrasting material for the bertha.

Now, see the long strip of pretty dress patterns. No, they're not all dresses, for at the bottom there's a nice shirt for father or brother and—why, bless your hearts, some pretty sunbonnets! Let's begin at the top.

Blouse No. 4341 comes first. Made of chambray or linen, this makes an attractive blouse to accompany skirt No. 3983. The blouse comes in sizes 34 to 46 inches, inclusive. The skirt, which has pretty plaited panels, comes in sizes 25 to 35 inches waist measure. These are separate patterns, priced at 12 cents each.

4042. Here's little Doris, all dressed up with elephant pockets on her pretty gingham dress that has facings of pongee. Percale and cambric also make a nice combination for this dress. It comes in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. The 4-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 32-inch material, with  $\frac{5}{8}$  yards of contrasting material for trimming. Price, 12 cents.

4200. This is an interesting little frock, simply and easily made, with or without the bertha, as preferred. Batiste or voile would be especially pretty in this pattern. This pattern comes in 5 sizes: 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. The 4-year size requires  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material. Price of pattern, 12 cents in stamps.

4331. For this pretty dress, lace and silk were used, although a frock for general wear could be made of linen and gingham. The pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 48 inches, bust measure. Note the new panel and sleeve drapery. A 38-inch size will require 5 yards of 36-inch material. To make the panel and sleeve drapery of contrasting material will require  $1\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 36-inch material, or  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 18-inch material. Price of pattern, 12 cents in stamps.

4336. Percale was used for this model, with bias binding for trimming. One could have gingham, drill or crepe or cretonne.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, Medium, Large and Extra Large. A medium size requires  $2\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

4359. Silk gingham with facings of satin in a contrasting shade would be very attractive for this model. It is also good for jersey, twill, ratine and pongee.

The pattern is cut in sizes 16, 18, and 20 years. An 18-year size requires 4 yards of 44 inch material. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

4354. Printed crepe and crepe de chine are here combined. One could use printed and plain voile in combination or tissue gingham and linen. The trimming panels may be omitted. The dress slips over the head.

The pattern is cut in sizes 12, 14, and 16 years. A 14-year size requires  $4\frac{1}{4}$  yards of one material 32 inches wide. To trim with contrasting material as illustrated requires 1 yard. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

4335. The lines of this model are becoming to slender and stout figures. The side closing is practical. As portrayed gingham and linen are combined. One could use percale in a neat pattern, with repp or linen for the waist and sleeve portions, also for the facings on cuffs and pockets and for the belt.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $4\frac{1}{2}$  yards of one material 36 inches wide. For waist, sleeves and cuff and pocket facings of contrasting material,  $1\frac{1}{8}$  yard 32 inches wide is required. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

4349. Embroidered voile and organdy were chosen for this pleasing model. It is also nice in silk, gingham and crepe. Dotted Swiss and organdy could also be combined for this style. The bertha trimming may be omitted. The closing may be at the centre back, as illustrated or on the shoulders.

This pattern is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. A 10-year size will require 3 yards of one material 40 inches wide. If made as illustrated,  $\frac{1}{8}$  yard of contrasting material, and  $2\frac{1}{8}$  yards figured material is required. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

2872. This style of shirt looks well in madras, percale, soisette, silk, cambric, khaki, muslin, linen and flannel. The fronts are finished in coat style. The sleeve may be finished with the cuff or in elbow length.

The pattern is cut in sizes 15,  $15\frac{1}{2}$ , 16,  $16\frac{1}{2}$ , 17,  $17\frac{1}{2}$ , 18 and  $18\frac{1}{2}$ , inches neck measure. Size 16 requires  $3\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 36 inch material. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

4358. Pleasing and becoming are these pretty sunbonnets.

The pattern is cut in one size. It will require for No. 1,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  yard, and for No. 2,  $1\frac{3}{8}$  yard of 32 inch material. Price, 12 cents in stamps.

Our Little Railroaders

To Miss Ella Krieg
Said Aunt Mary one day,
"Your children can help me,
For them 'twill be play."

So East Brunswick girls
And boys, every one,
Turned to with a will—
Just see what they're done!

*East Brunswick Girls and Boys Send Greetings to All the Children of the Baltimore and Ohio Family

Brunswick, Md.
May 1, 1923

Dear Girls and Boys of the Baltimore and Ohio:

We are glad to have an opportunity to address you through the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine.

Aunt Mary requested our school to contribute to the Children's Page for the May issue.

We live in Brunswick, Maryland. The largest freight yards in the United States are located here. We see and hear engines and cars all the time. Our school is about half a block from the yards. It is hard to keep everything clean, but by constant work we are proud of our clean school house.

Our school is the oldest and largest in Brunswick.

Would you like to know about our athletics? We are now working hard, making preparations for the Frederick County Field Meet, which will be held in Frederick in May.

At this meet all schools of our county are represented. The State Athletic Association offers badges to those who qualify in two tests which are given at the school, and then we must qualify at the meet in one.

The badges are bronze, silver, gold and a bar.

In order to receive a badge, girls must be able to raise their limbs a certain number of times and throw a dodge ball a given distance. Boys must chin the bar, jump and run the assigned distance in the given time. We hope to win a number of these badges.

Our Dodge Ball teams are working hard and we take pleasure in our daily practice. Our Speed Ball teams expect to win the championship of the county. They are "The Hustlers."

We hope you will enjoy your athletics as well as we do.

Your friends,

East Brunswick Girls and Boys

*NOTE: Through the kind arrangement of Miss Ella V. Krieg, Principal of the East Brunswick School, her pupils prepared a number of articles for the Children's Department of this issue of our MAGAZINE. From these a few have been selected for printing. We appreciate their interest in the Baltimore and Ohio and hope they have enjoyed helping prepare the material for this department as much as we have enjoyed having them do it.

Our Baltimore and Ohio Freight Yards

By Raymond Hollar, East Brunswick

I AM glad that I live in a railroad center, and one which has the largest freight yards in the United States.

The yards are six or seven miles in length. The tracks would reach one hundred miles if laid in a single track. It is a Baltimore and Ohio freight yard.

The yard was begun in 1890. In that year it had only a few tracks and one hump. In 1912 the new hump was built, giving one for all trains going east and another for trains going west. There are from 25 to 75 trains leaving Brunswick every day, and from 2500 to 3500 cars are moved in a day, or about 1,000,000 per year.

My father is an extra engineer on the eastbound hump.

Our Flag

By John R. Brady, East Brunswick

Our own old flag is waving still,
O'er plain and mountain, rock and rill,
She led us in the great World's war,
We hope and pray there'll be no more.

As bullets whizzed by soldiers' ears,
Many a mother shed her tears,
That grand old flag will never fall,
She fought for one, she fought for all.

The History of the Baltimore and Ohio

By Oliver Smith, East Brunswick

HAVE you ever thought that George Washington or Thomas Jefferson never saw a railroad or rode on a train? Well, they never did.

The Baltimore and Ohio is the oldest railroad in America, and on its rails ran the first passenger cars.

On July 4, 1828, ground was broken in Baltimore City for this new enterprise. Charles Carroll of Carrollton laid its cornerstone.

While this event was taking place in Baltimore, President John Quincy Adams began the C. & O. Canal, which was a rival of the Baltimore and Ohio.

The railroad was built along the Patapsco River. From Baltimore, this stream is crooked, which accounts for some of the curves in the road. The roadbed was built to follow a stream in order to avoid tunnels, cuts and fills.

In 1830 the line reached Ellicott's Mills, a distance of fourteen miles. The first successful trial trip of a steam engine was made over this part of the road. In 1831, Frederick, 58 miles, was reached.

From Frederick the railroad was extended to Point of Rocks, about 15 miles, and traffic commenced to move on April 1, 1832. Construction was stopped at this point for several years by the C. & O. Canal Company, who claimed the right-of-way.

By 1834 the Baltimore and Ohio had reached Harpers Ferry, where it was obliged to cross into Virginia, on account of some difficulty with the State of Virginia in connection with the charter. From Harpers Ferry it wended its way westward until it reached Cumberland in 1842, the distance being 179 miles from Baltimore.

In 1851 the railroad was extended from Cumberland to Piedmont, West Virginia, it being pushed westward to Grafton in the same year.

In 1853 the Baltimore and Ohio reached Wheeling, and had connection with Cincinnati by way of the Central Ohio Railway (now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio.) By 1874 St. Louis was connected with Baltimore by rail. The same year an extension was built from Willard to Chicago, giving direct service via Wheeling and Newark.

After the close of the war, the Metropolitan Line was constructed from Point of Rocks to Washington.

The Baltimore and Washington Branch, which was completed in 1835 must not be overlooked. Over this line ran the first postal car, and the telegraph was first used on this section of the road.

We are proud that we live in Brunswick, a Baltimore and Ohio town, and that our fathers and brothers are employed by the Company. When we boys grow up the Baltimore and Ohio will be proud of us too.

The Baltimore and Ohio is the oldest railroad in America. It was the first to have telegraphic communications, and the first steam engine built in America ran on its rails. It was the first to use electricity as a motive power, and the first to use switches. The turntable was invented by one of its mechanics.

And so you will see why we are so much interested in "Our Railroad." Don't you think we have good reason to be?

My Little Friends

By Austin Cooper, East Brunswick

EVERY summer I build a bird house for the Jenny Wren. Last summer I made a house and put it up on a pole; two wrens came and made their home in it, and they laid eggs in it. What was my surprise one day to find three baby wrens had been hatched.

A cat found it out, and went after them. One morning when I got up, I heard a strange noise and looked out of the window. I saw that the cat had knocked some of the little birds out on the ground and killed them. We ran after the cat with clubs and brooms and it did not come back for a long time.

Later on, the birds layed more eggs. The eggs hatched, but Mr. Cat did not get these, for we watched them very carefully. Soon it was the time for them to go on their journey to the south, and we bade them good bye.

"Good bye, little children, good bye," they said,

As away they went over hill and dale
To that beautiful land of the south.

Miss Stevens Writes of the Farewell Days of the Good Will Girls in America

Chapter No. 1

Chapter 1 will deal with the beginning of the trip, a sketch of our journey to Washington and New York.

The First Day

Dear Baltimore and Ohio Folk Whom We Left Behind:

I am writing this in the form of a letter, for when you are writing to real human beings it is much easier to tell the little human things that crop up in any affair, than if the story is simply a story and nothing more. This to be a real letter to real people, of how 64 girls journeyed to far away France, but more especially of the impressions which three Baltimore and Ohio girls received from the trip.

For weeks we had been excited. There had been first the campaigns for funds, the trips of the girls on line, and then the election. Ever since Nina Spengler was drawn as first candidate, there were girls all over the system wishing the good fortune of the trip. And, of course, when the announcement was made, there never were girls more excited than Nina, Magdalene and I. (By the way, if any of you should ever need advice on how to get ready for Europe in one day, please see me on our return. Such a rush. Such a hurried purchasing of the things that the Good Will Committee said we must have. Oh, it was gloriously exciting.)

What do people wear on shipboard? What should we need in France? Father wants us to bring him a pipe; Sister Jane wants some hand embroidered lingerie; Cousin Susie wants some French perfume.

At last, or I should say, all too soon, came the day for us to leave Baltimore. At 7.15 a. m. we reported at Mount Royal station, where we met each other, as well as the five other Baltimore representatives. And—we were all dolled up in our finery, so much, indeed, that each of us thought that she was the "handsomest tiger in the jungle." But, unlike the tigers in the story, we didn't get mad and fight.

There were bouquets, and boxes and candy, diaries and writing cases, handkerchiefs and maps of France to go along with the good wishes of kind friends. And those who were there were real friends, for who else, indeed, would arise at so early an hour to say goodbye; before seven o'clock.

Dr. Shattuck was there with his movie machine, and Oh, how funny it seemed to be actually posing for the movies. The reporters and photographers were on the job too.

Oh yes, we might just as well have been in Hollywood.

What—the train ready? And here were Mr. Murray and Mr. Bullock, and Miss Gessner, to escort us to Washington. What an honor.

"Goodbye, goodbye!" All aboa-a-a-rd," shouted "Pop" Adams. We were off on the first lap of the trip to France.

I felt for my handkerchief but couldn't find it. Ah, here it was in my hand. Dear me, two great big splotches on the front of my new blouse. Tears? Of course! What do you suppose they are?

Mr. Scott, our general passenger agent at New York, was on the train. He it was who had brought down the rest of the delegation from New York. In a jiffy we were through the tunnel, and our friends at Camden were wishing us "Bon voyage." It was truly exciting. I would like to tell you more in detail about the ride, but I must hurry on.

Arriving at Washington, we checked our heavy portmanteaus, climbed into busses and were off on a tour of Washington. Most of you know all about Washington; if you don't you can always find a convenient Baltimore and Ohio train to take you there, so I won't describe the places we visited. The first stop was at Congress Hotel. From thence we went past the Capitol and Library grounds, out Pennsylvania Avenue and on to Potomac Park to see the handsome Lincoln Memorial.

By the way, did you know how the statuary in Washington is kept in such loveliness at all times? We found out. Uncle Sam has a regular house cleaning. As we passed along we saw a man with scrubbing rags sitting astride an equestrian figure, just back of the rider. Yes; he was scrubbing the riders back. With all due respect to the gravity of the situation, we couldn't suppress a giggle or two. Yes, it was the first time we had ever seen Generals having their backs rubbed, but really they looked as though they enjoyed the situation.

Miss Morgan Greets Us

Returning to Congress Hall we were served with a most delicious luncheon, and just as we were finishing our dessert, we heard a lot of applause and looking up discovered no less a person than Miss Anne Morgan, the head of the Good Will work, herself. She came straight to our table. How proud we felt when we told her who we were. She spent a few minutes chatting at each table.

Meeting President Harding

After lunch we sallied forth again with joyful hearts, and stomachs no longer empty, to visit the White House. You have guessed it—President Harding was holding a reception for the Good Will Delegation. A Slavic delegation was ahead of us, and as we passed through the gates, an army of photographers aimed their gatling guns at us, and we were shot for the newspapers and movies. Our own Mr. Luckey was among them and you may be sure we couldn't help feeling again a thrill of pride.

Soon a great big policeman—and Oh, there are some big ones at the White House—told us to move on into one of the wings of the White House; single file we went and shook hands with Miss Morgan and the President. Goodness—another thrill! It was great!

As we passed out of another door, Laddie Boy, the President's Airedale dog, stood wagging what he imagines is his tail, to greet us, too. Wasn't that fine of him? And, honest to goodness, right in back of

A Farewell Message

En route to New York, April 17, 1923.

Dear Friends of the Baltimore and Ohio:

My heart is full of thanks that I cannot express to you who so loyally stood by me in the Good Will election. My only regret is that I did not recover from my illness in time to thank many of you personally, or at least to write to tell you how much I appreciate your good will and sincere response, as well as for the many expressions for our good.

We—Miss Spengler, Miss Lauer and I—are now on our way to New York to take the ship to France, to the land of our hopes, to the place where we all have sent our money to help those less fortunate than we. May the spirit of good wishes which you have extended to us in this, our good fortune, go with us and inspire us to prove worthy representatives of those with whom we work on the Baltimore and Ohio, and who have sent us on this spendid mission.

It will be our earnest endeavor to "take you all with us," through the columns of the Magazine.

Gratefully yours,

(Signed) Margaret T. Stevens,
"Aunt Mary"

the White House hung—what do you think? The White House laundry. It was wash day and the clothes were white and spotless, but looking quite the same as our own line of clothes when Jane comes to spend the day, fill up her ever vacant stomach, and do the family laundry. It was just one of those little reminders that those who head the affairs of the nation are just as human as we are. Clothes washing here means something more than a perfunctory sending out the clothes to a laundry and having them come back full of little black numbers and "X" marks, and with the buttons off. Here the work is done at home.

Out on the front lawn once more, the army of camera shooters was increased. The Slavic delegation had been snapped in their native costumes. What a pretty sight it was to be sure—an array of bright colors and odd clothes. On we went to visit the East Room, Blue Room, Red Room and the Green Room of the White House, thence back to the busses and on to the Congress-sional Library. Here we had a nice rest among our old friends, the books, after which we left to take the train to New York; Baltimore and Ohio, of course!

After identifying our bags we boarded the train and soon were seated in the diners—there were three of them—enjoying one of Mr. Baugh's wonderful dinners, prepared especially for the occasion.

While we were still lingering over our coffee and ice cream, the train pulled into Camden. Here again our friends were on hand to wave a "bon voyage" greeting. How excited they were too, almost as much as we. And rightly so, for are we not representing them? Did they not give us their support in votes, and to the A. C. D. F. their money to carry on the work of rebuilding France? Oh, how we wish that we might have taken them all with us. I felt a sudden rush of selfishness creep up my spine, yet through these descriptions of our journey we sincerely hope to take every one with us to the country of which we have all been dreaming.

At Mount Royal they were out too, with the good old Stars and Stripes, waving us a goodbye. The train did not stop, so in the short moment we could not distinguish who was who, but we knew that they had come to say good bye, and we waved back; and everybody threw kisses to all of them. The colored porters were there, too, and we were glad to see them.

On the train there were loads of things to do, packages to be opened, letters and cards to be written, songs to be sung and a jolly time was had altogether.

About fifty of the delegation—there were one hundred and fifty altogether—made an inspection trip of the dining car kitchen of which Chef Brookins had charge; and Brookins was right there with the customary Baltimore and Ohio courtesy, as were also his helpers. Many and fine were the compliments paid our service, the dinners, the handling of the train, the courtesy—everything!

"It's all just delightful," declared Miss Morgan as she sat with the girls to have her picture taken.

It was quite bed time when we arrived in New York. We went to the Hotel Pennsylvania where we were assigned to our splendid rooms, and soon we were off to slumberland.

We found the next morning that our ship, the "France," would not sail until Friday, and that we were to have two glorious days in New York. The program was made up of sight seeing tours, theatre parties, luncheons, and, on Thursday a reception at Miss Morgan's lovely home. What fortunate girls we are!

And now, Friday morning, we are ready to sail. Our portmanteaus all packed, we are ready to receive our flags and to take busses for the dock. There are 64 in our party, the youngest being our little Magdalene. The newspapers have made quite a fuss over her, but Magdalene says she supposes it all goes in with an ocean voyage. I forgot to say before in the story, that over in Washington Ambassador Jusserand chose her as one of the few girls with whom he shook hands. And, as the reporter told her, she's famous now.

Just at this moment Nina is fast asleep, sensible girl that she is, taking her last few minutes of beauty sleep before sailing. As for me, I'm too excited to sleep, at least, that's what I think. However, it may be only an inborn curiosity that makes me afraid I shall miss something. Well, just so it's not the boat I'm sure it won't make much difference.

Goodbye one and all! Don't forget us just because we're away, for the big thing about it all is I am sure we shall all be quite as anxious to get back to our desks and into our regular work again, as we are to sail.

The greatest thrill of a long journey to me is the coming back home, "Where the folks are there to greet you, Where the dog runs out to meet you And the latch string hangs outside."

New York Terminals Turn Out Tugs 'n Toots 'n Everything to Bid Good Will Girls "Bon Voyage"

By John Newman

Terminal Timekeeper, Pier 22, N. R., New York

APRIL 20, 1923, will, presumably, be one of the many wonderful days—"red-letter days"—to be marked in the calendar of reminiscences now being collated by the sweet trinity of "elect" contributed by the Baltimore and Ohio to the Good Will Delegation of the American Committee to Devastated France, promoted under the auspices and personal direction of Miss Anne Morgan, chairman of the executive committee, whose many altruistic activities have made her name illustrious and her fame enduring, for—

On that day, the day of their departure from New York for France they were signally honored by the management of the Baltimore and Ohio New York Terminals.

The flagship of the Company's fleet of harbor tugs, the "Frederick D. Underwood," with commodore "Andy" Bohlen at the helm, flying her bunting and carrying a distinguished party of local executives and representative officers from all branches of the service, some ladies, kiddies and the recording scribe (that's me)—about thirty persons in all, making up, as it were, quite a goodwill delegation in itself—steamed up the Hudson to the French line dock, Pier 57, North River, where waited the steamer "France" for her time and tide, ready to sail.

Boarding the liner the visiting party encountered some difficulty in locating the unexpectant and therefore unprepared objects of the demonstration, but scouting posses scurrying over the several decks finally succeeded in bringing the two delegations "vis-a-vis" at the stern of the salon deck where cameramen were preparing to take pictures of the whole colorful assemblage of youth, beauty and vivacity (an exaltation mixed with nervous frustration that, I fear, twenty-four hours later was destined to change to a state of "laissez-faire," or worse).

Though there was little time for anything more than introductions, the visitors were much impressed by the fine presence, good looks and "esprit" of the three Baltimore and Ohio graces, and they were made the subject of much complimentary "aside" comment. They will most worthily represent the Best and Oldest American Railroad that made this fairy pilgrimage possible for them, and they will, surely, make a favorable impression on the very impressionable françoises. (Let us pray for their protection from the lures and wiles of divers counts and grand dukes wherewith France is swarming at present, for these fellows are great connoisseurs and susceptible to American charms.)

After leaving the "France" the stay-at-home delegation returned to the "Underwood," and when the big ship pulled out, accompanied her down-stream amid toots and cheers. The weather was balmy and fair, and by chance several Baltimore and Ohio tugs that happened to be in the vicinity caught the spirit, broke out their bunting, the Stars and Stripes and the blue and white "B. & O." flag, and joined in the demonstration with their best "toot-toots."

Believing that some of the lady readers of the MAGAZINE would like to have a descriptive account of hats and gowns worn by the

The New York Tribune Said—

As the big vessel backed into mid-stream blasts from the whistles of passing tugs and ferryboats added to the din, while another tribute was paid to the departing women by fifty members of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad office force in this city, who were on a flag-draped tug that escorted the France down the Bay as far as Quarantine. Three employees of the Railroad were in the party.

Good Will

Written in France By Margaret T. Stevens

I saw a vision yesterday, a dream that brought to me
An open book of life that is and things that ought to be;
'Twas not a sunset, nor a stream, nor yet a bird-song dear,
'Twas not the call of Springtime, nor a carol on my ear.
Along the banks of River Rhone where gardens bright and green,
Like Grandma's quilt lie patch by patch with stitches in between,
A peasant woman waved her hand to see our train go by—
A kindly face, a hearty smile, a little piercing eye.

A broad-brimmed hat, a garden hoe within her wrinkled hands,
But there beneath that quaint old frock a heart that understands.
The same as yours or mine? Nay, more, of those, who, like her toil
With sorrow showing through their smile, with hands that till the soil.
I see inscribed upon their hearts the imprints of a war—
And yet, they bravely "carry on" in spite of wound and scar.
All pow'r to them, these women whom our hearts with joy would fill!
'Tis such as these personify the meaning of Good Will!

female representation I want to state for their benefit or enjoyment that Miss Morgan was a "study in brown" with a golden-brown "creation" of what appeared to be the plumage plucked from the tail of a rooster on her head, and that, as far as I know, all the other ladies also wore creations of some sort, with a flounce here, a frill there and ding-bust-ems and what-you-may-call-ems in other places; to sum up: the Baltimore and Ohio delegates-ess were delicatessen; the most fetching thing they wore was their smiles and the most winning thing they did was blowing kisses from their fingertips to their enthusiastic well-wishers on board the "Underwood."

May propitious fortune attend them and crowd into their six weeks' absence from home enough of "that which is good" to linger with them for the rest of their lives. Three cheers for Nina Spengler, Anna Lauer and our "Aunt Mary."

Cincinnati Good Will Delegation Uses "Best and Only"

The party stopped over at Washington for two days, where they met a number of delegates from other western cities arriving over the Baltimore and Ohio. The stop-over at Washington was for the purpose of permitting the delegates to become familiarized with the Capital and the functioning of its governmental institutions. At New York they were joined by delegates from other large cities throughout the country.

The Special Good Will Train

ONE of the accompanying photos is of Engineer E. J. Dennis and Fireman Schaffer, who were in charge of engine 5212, handling the "Good Will" special carrying the 150 young ladies on their trip from Washington to New York, en route to France.

The train consisted of three dining cars in charge of Conductors Robinson, Boylan and Ackerman and Inspector Sherman, six parlor cars and one combine coach. The train was in charge of Conductor G. W. Charshee and Brakeman J. J. Krastel, and left Washington at 5.00 p. m. reaching Philadelphia at 7.50 p. m., where the parlor cars were attached to regular No. 6.

The train was handled carefully and promptly throughout the trip, and many favorable comments were made by the ladies regarding the pleasant ride given them by Engineer Dennis.

Among the officers of the Baltimore and Ohio who accompanied the special were J. S. Murray, assistant to president; F. H. B. Bullock, Office of President; J. B. Scott, general eastern passenger agent; Superintendent F. G. Hoskins, District Master Car Builder W. W. Calder, Trainmaster C. E. Owens and Assistant Road Foreman George D. Coleman.

Overheard on the Good Will Train

Girls: "Oh, Mr. Photographer make us all real good looking, won't you?"

Mr. Luckey: "How could I do anything else?"

While a few copies of magazines were being given out

"Isn't that fine. The Baltimore and Ohio is always thinking of something nice to do for their passengers!"

Wasn't that the finest dinner you ever ate? The fish and chicken and everything were just lovely.

"Has the Baltimore and Ohio any girls on this train?"

"Yes, three. One of them is known as Aunt Mary, she writes the ladies' and children's pages in their MAGAZINE."

"Ask that man coming through to point her out, I want to see her."

Passing Mt. Royal

"Are we through Baltimore already? Isn't this a nice smooth run? We can hardly feel we are moving. That engineer must be a dandy, or else he is particularly careful because he has a lot of girls on board."

A Quick Trip

By Conductor Sam Grace

TRAIN 12 left Union Station, Washington on the morning of March 1, at 2.59 a. m., arriving Camden 3.44 a. m. On this train there was a lady passenger who was anxious to make a connection leaving Baltimore Union Station at 3.50. Through the efforts of the trainmaster at Washington, station master at Camden, and the writer, she was successful.

A taxi was waiting and every assistance was given the lady to make a quick transfer from train to taxi at Camden. She arrived at the Union Station at 3.48 and at 3.50 was on her way on the train she desired to take.

This incident shows that even though the passenger desired to use a competing railroad, our employees did everything in their power to assist her.

When the Goddess Was Forgotten

Being the First Message of Our Good Will Girls from France

By Margaret T. Stevens

Mailed from Paris, April 27, 1923

Dear Everybody:

Never in our lives did we ever imagine what it means to take a trip to a foreign country, to have a glorious send off, to come into contact with those who do not speak your language! When we were told that the journey would be thrilling, we understood it to mean that in the only sense that we knew anything about thrills—but we knew nothing about thrills—until yesterday when we arrived at the boat, and from that time on. Perhaps it was because we had the most glorious send off of anybody on the steamer that we feel as though there is no way to describe just how we feel. But I must not get ahead of my story.

On yesterday morning we were hustled into the Committees' rooms when we were given two silk American flags, one for our very own, the other to give to someone in France or to decorate some soldier's grave, then we were hustled off in busses to the boat. In a few moments, with being pulled and hauled around by photographers and reporters we scarcely had time to see any of our New York friends, we were only able to be with them for a few minutes. Mr. Voorhees, Mr. Hamner, Mr. Scott, Mr. Kelley, Mr. Newman, Mr. Goolic, and a crowd of the girls and boys from the offices were there. We were simply deluged with flowers, fruits and candies.

One of my New York relatives was there to introduce us to everybody of importance on the boat, and our meeting with the officers on Tuesday when Mr. Luckey took our pictures on the boat, made things just right for us wherever we went, but the most glorious and most thrilling thing that we ever experienced in our whole lives was leaving New York harbor.

Truly we were not ourselves. There, in the wake of the ship was our own Baltimore and Ohio tug with all our friends on it. It came so close that we could distinguish most of them, including the girls. We waved our flags and shouted, we took off our hats. Those on the tug signalled, yelled and called our names through the megaphone, wishing us "bon voyage." We forgot all else and thought we were in Heaven itself, nothing could be a nearer approach. We forgot France, we forgot the occasion, yes, we even forgot the statue of Liberty. Wasn't that disgraceful? But I am sure Uncle Sam will forgive us. We were simply wild.

The tug followed the boat—then encircled it. Nina, Magdalene and I ran from fore to aft and back again, breathless but supremely happy. We waved our flags and threw kisses to those on the tug. The other passengers joined in the spirit and even held our arms while we waved the flags, for physical exhaustion was near. We had had no lunch, but we didn't know it. In the meantime letters and gifts were coming into our cabins. All these were wonderful, but our farewell to the Baltimore and Ohio meant more than all these. It was as though we were lifted from a plane of "commonplaceness" and carried on the wings of liberty to a place where all things else save a regard for what lies in the heart of those who love us is forgotten. Surely there was never such an honor.

Everybody on shipboard remarked about the magnificent send off that the Baltimore and Ohio girls had, and when at last the tug left us, it was only then that we realized that we had been the center of attention. Yet how could we help it?

Mesdames et Messieurs.

Our first experiences after the glorious send-off by the tugboat and the gifts from our friends were in getting acquainted with the people and in getting ourselves properly located. First of all we found that our staterooms had been changed and that our assignments did not agree with the names on the doors of the cabins. So at first I decided to remain in the cabin with Nina and Magdalene. Soon, however, the cabin steward tapped on the door: Pardon, but would Mademoiselle Lauer move to room 355? Now, Mademoiselle Lauer was already unpacked, so after looking over 355 I decided that I would take that cabin with Miss Webster, the Pennsylvania Railroad girl from Wilmington.

Then all went well once more. I unpacked, changed my dress and we went to lunch. We were a bit confused with the menu, but the waiters all French were typically polite and willing to help us. It seems surprising however that they do not know English. And oh, you should hear the dinner bell! A big brass kettle-looking affair that the garcon beats with a baton. It makes cold chills run up and down our backs.

And oh, but we are learning French. As I now write, I am putting in mind, of course, the corresponding French words. At last, the realization of my dreams—to think in French! My grammar is terrible, but my vocabulary is increasing. The purser's son told us: "Count a day lost in which a new word or phrase is not learned." Magdalene and Nina have learned to say: "Il fait beau temps. Je suis une Americaine."

Luncheon over, it is now about four o'clock. We find steamer chairs and rugs already provided. The water is calm and we scarcely feel a tremor of the boat.

We pace the deck several times. Ah, here at the bridge is Mr. Le Second Captain Friant, the man from La Rochelle who had his picture taken with us on Wednesday. It is good to meet him. He recognized us.

"Ah, Mademoiselle will come into the salon, we must learn some French. Are we enjoying ourselves? Where are we seated at the table? Below? Ah, he will see that we have places at his table—that is, if we wish. Do we wish? We do, merci beaucoup."

"Now, there is plenty of wine, the garcon will bring it for mademoiselle."

"No, merci Monsieur, but we regret we do not drink wine."

"Then cigarettes? No? Oh, perhaps a little beer?"

We hardly know how to explain. Presently Magdalene solved the problem. She pointed to Nina and me and then to herself. "Dry," she said.

"Ah! oh! yes! I know!" laughed the Captain. "But nevaire in France you will not be dry."

He scratched his head, flicked imaginary dust from his sleeves, then his face lighted up: "Surely, zen, you will have a cup of tea with me. Yes we would with pleasure. He pushed the button. The garcon came and went. When he returned it was with enough tea and cakes for a regiment.

It was five o'clock when we finished our tea and French conversation. The Captain would translate French into English, then I translated it back into French. Nina barely survived the ordeal and poor Magdalene fell asleep in the Captain's big arm chair.

Alors, we must dress for dinner. There is a great deal of dressing for dinner and we "in Rome must do as the Romans do."

A tap came on our door "Here are ze cards pour Mademoiselle les places a la table." The number was 36. After having been assigned numbers 15 and 13, we were anxious to know just what 36 looked like. We entered the dining room and the chief steward came forward. "Yes, No. 36 was the Captain's table, upstairs (en haut). Would the mademoiselle please follow him and sign their names." Our names must be signed to everything. There are many papers to be signed for the rooms, for the table, for nothing at all—and horror of horrors—we must tell our ages at every turn.

As we are placed at the table, a tall, thin gentleman arose from the opposite side, extended his hand and said something like "Jesuiblagaustnspixstix!" We had to shake hands with him for the sake of courtesy, for evidently he was being most kind to us, extending to us a hearty welcome to the table. He is perhaps 65 or 70, a bit stooped in the shoulder, but quite polished, a picture of a capable old gentleman. I told him that I did not speak French very well, but that he perhaps spoke English. No, his vocabulary extended to about ten words in English and very little French, good German, good Italian—that was all! The Captain was not there so we had to piece out the conversation. At last it developed that the old gentleman is the Commissioner of Immigration of Hungary. He is most peculiar, funny and fond of teasing. With his mixture of German and French we managed to puzzle out a conversation agreeable to all. He showed us several rings, then offered them to Magdalene, saying "How much will you give me if I marry you and take you to Budapest? Two million dollars? I am not old, I am a young man." At this moment his wedding ring came off, Magdalene looked at the inscription—1907. "Ah no, zat is not mein weib—no-no- I mean zecs ring is my fazzer's ring marriage!! "Then you are a little boy?" "Ah! h- h- yes, I am very young."

Life Aboard Ship Fascinates Our Good Will Girls

By Margaret T. Stevens

THE girls from Baltimore are a fine lot, all different, yet each fine in her own way. Mrs. Blair is a most delightful woman; Miss Quarles is very lovely to look at; Miss Slee is most thoughtful of everybody. There are little things she does without even wishing to let you know that she is doing them. Miss Freeny is a sweet girl, but we regret to say she was ill the first three days out of New York. Miss Conway of the National Enameling & Stamping Company is capable and willing. Last night we saw her for the first time in evening dress and she surprised us beyond measure; she was actually gorgeous.

Monsieur le Commandant Roch, Monsieur le Capitaine Friand, Monsieur le Purser Dantec, and Monsieur le Maitre d'Hotel are delightful persons. And there is the purser's son, an attractive little fellow of about 20 years of age who thinks his father is most magnificent. His filial devotion is beautiful to see. When asked to do anything he invariably says: "I must to ask my papa. Oh, Pa-pa, Pa-pa!" Then papa will turn around and come back with a funny little strut and a most engaging smile. Last night someone asked me if Magdalene and the young man were brother and sister. Thinking this quite a joke, I told Monsieur Dantec, "Oh, it is funny!" he said. "I must now adopt the little Made moiselle Lauer. Mademoiselle, will you have me for your papa?"

"Oh, yes, I should like that," declared Magdalene.

"Then I make room for you. I have two daughters already. You will make three. How nice. Good night, Mademoiselles."

"Good-night, my Pa-pa," sang Magdalene. And the Commandant, standing nearby, twisted his big black mustache and laughed heartily.

Miss Marguerite Stephenson, one of the members of the party and a captain in the "Good Will Army" is one of my buddies. Why? For many reasons but especially are we together because we have work in common. Perhaps I must tell you. I am now appointed lieutenant in charge of five girls. Perhaps I shall get decorated when I get to Paris. Who knows? My girls are: Nina and Magdalene, Miss Webster of the P. R. R., Wilmington; Misses Ward and Blackwell from Atlanta. My duties are to see that nobody is ill or lonesome, and to pass on the notices that come to us, and to make myself generally useful. Ah, it is a great favor to be a lieutenant!

"Mother" Buswell, one of our chaperones, is a gold star mother, with one son who died in a German prison. She will decorate his grave. And yet, despite it all, she is a human dynamo of energy and fun. She will have fun at her own funeral.

The deck steward, with sandy hair and a nice smile, says he is happy today, will be happier tomorrow, and most happy the day after tomorrow, for he will be nearly home with his little family in Havre. How proud these French people are of their families! The officers have their salons decorated with pictures of their wives and children. Captain Friand has a magnificent photograph of his wife and many snapshots of his children, of whom he speaks with sparkling eyes. Yes, when there are no words, eyes may serve quite as well.

On the evening of the first day, I was moved again, by order of the chief steward, to another room—543—a much larger and nicer room. I slept there on that night.

La Salle de Luxe—and Bilge Water

It was eight o'clock this morning. I was about to go to breakfast when Tap, Tap, Tap! "Who is there?"

"It is I, mademoiselle, the steward. I have orders for you to move to Cabin 306."

"But, Monsieur, I have moved three times already."

"I know, but come with me and see 306."

I came. It was a fine outside stateroom with three berths, a double washstand, a bureau, three mirrors, and a wardrobe.

"All for me—by myself?"

"Oh, yes, mademoiselle. By order of the steward. He see you are what you call a litor of a magazine. He know your friends. He have hope, perhaps, you will like ze paquet boat 'France'."

Can you imagine such hospitality? Such service! Why, they even go so far as to turn down our covers, take our nighties from our bags, and spread them on our beds. Our clothes are hung up nicely, our shoes always placed together with stockings inside, our flags arranged artistically. Yesterday there was a bunch of grapes in my fruit basket. To my surprise, when entering my room last night I found them tied by a ribbon and suspended over my bed, hanging from the brass rods of the rack to resemble a grape arbor. It was pretty indeed, but I have not discovered whether it was intended as a joke or whether I am supposed to lie in bed and pluck grapes from above my head.

This morning, Mr. Pichler, whom we have named "Mr. Pickler," took us on an expedition around the ship. First of all he showed us his handsome suite of rooms, the salle de luxe. He evidently is an important personage, and commands much respect on board. Then, in contradiction, so it seemed, we took a journey to the third class. How nice it was to see that among all these foreigners huddled together, many of whom were going back to visit their native countries, there was every semblance of perfect order and enjoyment. Certainly, at this time, for though they came from various nationalities, they were at this moment understanding each other. The great musicians on board, who played for the dances in the room of Louis XIV, were playing for these people. Music is the language that all speak. After hearing of the horrors of third-class passengers, we were surprised to find that, despite the nauseating odor of bilge water, the eating and sleeping quarters were practically as comfortable as our own. Not so elaborate, but in the same general layout. The dining tables were long, with benches on each side, but everything was clean, and according to les affiches, the food reasonable and well cooked.

And when the great artists have departed, there is always the "Nickelodeon" where one may have automatic music for dancing for a nickel deposited in the slot.

The second-class is almost as good as ours, save the motion of the boat is a little more pronounced and there does not appear to be as much ventilation. However, these get almost the same service as the first class passengers. M. Caperiere, the purser of the second class, with M. Dantec, the first-class purser's son, invited us to the salon of the second-class in the afternoon, where they worked hard to teach us the intricacies of the French Tango. One does not dance in the afternoon in first-class, but there is a player piano in the second class that may be used at any time. At night only American dances in the room of Louis Quatorze.

On the afternoon of April 22, we again had tea with Capitaine Friand. This time Magdalene kept awake. There was another member of the party, Lieutenant Arigot. After tea we borrowed coats and hats from the captain and had some pictures taken. Every minute is filled. We have little time to write. When one eats from five to six times a day, and it is necessary to dress at least three times, to promenade a mile or two around the deck, and to speak with acquaintances at every few steps, pray tell me where there can be found time for anything. We sleep wonderfully well and eat everything. The weather could not be better and the sea is almost calm at times. There has been no serious case of mal de mer, thank goodness. We three have never felt better in our lives.

There are two people whom I must not forget to mention: a musician and our waiter. The musician in question has big bushy grey locks. He plays the cello, and looks for all the world like the picture of Beethoven. But the music is exquisite. Our waiter pretends not to understand a word of English and makes us give our orders in French. It is very funny, for when one of us gets the pronunciation of some article of food correctly, the others invariably order "le meme chose" the same thing. The waiter is a big, tall, good-looking Frenchman, who laughs much. Indeed, we have never seen people like these French who seem to be happy at all times. Never have we seen one without a smile. There is nothing too much for them to do. The waiter, on hearing me praise the French gateaux (cakes) secured for me the recipe for a French dessert. You may be sure I am glad to have it for our women's department of the MAGAZINE.

Remembering the Railroad

I must not forget to tell of the fine compliments which we have heard about the Baltimore and Ohio service. It was a great advertisement for our Railroad, the trip from Washington to New York. And the passengers, whenever they pass, say something to remind us of our glorious send-off. The members of the crew tell us that we should be very proud. There is no use to tell us this. We are.

We are very fond of the French cooking. Each time we go to the table we say, "We shall eat very little this time" but when we arise we have had a bit of most everything on the menu. It is wonderful that we have such fine containers.

L'Eglise

Sunday, April 22. Last night there was a notice which said a mass would be said at 9.30. Only one of our group is a Catholic, but we decided that since it is the Sabbath we must have some semblance of religious services, so all three went to mass. To our surprise, the fine orchestra—the one which plays for the dances—played during the entire service. The Ave Maria is ever a beautiful thing. The violin, so like a human voice calling from the silence, the great white caps which could be seen from the windows, the dull roar of the ship's machinery, the clouds of smoke drifting by, with every now and then a porpoise and his mate leaping from the water; the low voice of old Father Conon from Port au Prince chanting the mass—it was something that could not be forgotten. We thought of home and our loved ones, of those to whom we are indebted for this wonderful experience, of Elysian Fields, of poetry, art, and music, of mother, father, God and Heaven, of prayer and solitude, anxiety and loneliness, of our own insignificance and shortcomings. What is it? Why? I cannot answer. It cannot be told in words. It is only the heart which speaks in times like these.

La Dance

Monday, April 23. Another thing very surprising to us is that Sunday evening is the most popular evening for the dance—for those who dance on Sunday, and although we did not dance in the evening, we were duty bound to dress up in our best frocks for dinner and for the exquisite concert which followed. With Nina in green georgette and black velvet, Magdalene in American Beauty and silver, and I in pink and rose, we felt quite gorgeous indeed. Old Monsieur Pickles was dolled up in evening clothes, seated near the doorway. When we entered there were only two vacant chairs in the concert hall. The girls went ahead so when I entered Monsieur Pickles arose and extended his hand, bowed profoundly, kissed my hand, and led me to the seat which we had lately occupied. With an air of a duchess I swept grandly into it, much to the amusement and delight of the American spectators. Make-believe Land it all seems, where Cinderella and Puss-in-Boots seem to step out of picture frames and some fairy godmother turns us into fairies ourselves. No, Queen Elizabeth has no charms for me, for, as the Chinaman said when a woman advertised for a ladies' maid "me she."

Parley-Vooing

It is so easy to make a mistake in French. Mrs. Conway found herself saying "Thank you, dear heart" (Merci, moncouer) instead of "Thank you very much" (Merci beaucoup).

The deck steward asked one of the girls to tell him what book she was reading. She replied "Very well, Thank you" blushing readily, for she thought he was asking about her liver (livre-book).

One of our girls from Norfolk and a young man from Porto Rico were introduced. They danced together and sat together but poor souls! They could not converse save with their eyes; she speaks no French or Spanish, and he speaks no English. But their eyes are remarkable, and we feel sorry for the poor chap left behind in Virginia.

The Morgue, Eggs and Potatoes

This morning we spent in writing letters. It passed before we realized it. Here one takes such a long time to eat that before one meal is over it is time to eat again. At 2.00 o'clock there was a lecture by Madame Clemont, who told of the customs among the girls of France. Then followed—for us three—a trip with Captain le Friand to other sections of the boat, including the hospital and—horror of horrors!—the mortuary. The Captain regretted exceedingly that he could not inform us the cost of transportation of a corpse.

From here we went to the gymnasium with its mechanical horses and camel, the racer bicycles, and the row-boats; pulleys and electric batteries. We had a wonderful time riding a bicycle and trying out the various pieces of apparatus until we were dripping wet with perspiration. Following this was our afternoon tea and Magdalene went to have her hair shampooed—oh, yes, one may have all conveniences on ship-board—while Nina and I joined the games which were being played on deck. A sack race came first. Halfway down the deck my sack slipped off, and my feet came out. So that ended that.

Then the garcon brought hard-boiled eggs, and it was well that they were boiled—and long spoons for the egg race. Of the first three who started, Nina was one. She made great headway. Passengers lined up on each side begun to cheer, and I watched the little green hat touch the line, turn, and come back, and once again over the home line in the lead of all. How proud I was when the prize was given her, a French flag. Then came my turn, and soon, to my delight, I found myself also in the lead.

"Mademoiselle, I decorate you with the flag of France," said M. Laferiere, purser of the second-class, pinning the flag on me.

Speaking of honors, we are certainly getting ours and more.

Dinner, a concert under the direction of M. Vandocuvre, and a dance kept us occupied until 11.30.

A Consistent "On Time" Performer

By C. W. Dixon, Car Distributor

THE accompanying photo shows engine 864, regularly assigned to Trains 37 and 38, running between Gassaway and Charleston, W. Va. in charge of Engineer A. Tierney (in gangway) and Fireman J. C. McTheney. The performance of these trains is about as near 100 per cent as we can hope to get it.

A few days ago engine 864 lost bottom gib liner out of cross head, but the engineer and fireman again proved themselves masters of the situation, as they have done many times before. These men found some plaster lath near by, and proceeded to take up vertical and horizontal lost motion by wiring lath securely to the guide. They brought their train to Gassaway "On Time."

"Tab" Tierney, as he is affectionately known to everyone on the Charleston Division, has many years service to his credit, and that his record is of the best goes without saying when it is known that the incident recorded is but one of many. "Mac," his fireman, is also well known and while his service is not so long as his engineer's, his record contains more than one "red" mark.

Death of W. R. D. Dent

WILLIAM R. D. DENT, counsel, Relief Department, Grafton, W. Va., died at his home, West Washington Street, Grafton, W. Va., on April 30.

Mr. Dent was in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for many years, and had been instrumental in making the Savings Feature of the Relief Department a success in Grafton, and in assisting many of his fellow employees to own their homes.

Mr. Dent was 71 years of age, and through his death Grafton has lost one of its oldest and best known citizens. He had lived in this town since 1877, practicing law, and during his residence had become prominent in business, political and fraternal circles.

Besides being president of the Merchants and Mechanics Bank, he had a long record of public office. In 1877 he was internal revenue collector. He was a nominee of the Democratic party in 1894 for state senator, and was secretary of the congressional committee in the campaign of 1896. He was a delegate to the convention which nominated William Jennings Bryan for president, and in 1898 he was elected a member of the state legislature from Taylor County. He also served as city collector of Grafton and was Democratic nominee in the race against Judge Fortney of the circuit court bench.

Mr. Dent was a prominent member of Grafton lodge No. 15, A. F. and A. M., of which he was a past master. He was secretary of Copestone Chapter No. 12 and of Crusade Commandery No. 6 for many years.

L. F. Thompson, Oldest Ex-Employee of the Baltimore and Ohio, Passes Away

L. F. THOMPSON, oldest ex-employee of the Baltimore and Ohio, died on April 22 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Swearingen, Parkersburg, W. Va.

Mr. Thompson was the oldest of eight children. He was born in Prince William County, Virginia on September 22, 1823. In his boyhood and early youth he looked after grist and saw mills and wool carding machines for his father. He attended public school, walking three miles daily to the school house. Built of logs, the school room had an earth floor smoothed over. The teacher made and mended the quill pens then in use. There was also a large log fireplace and the school boys were required to gather firewood.

After leaving school, Mr. Thompson attended an academy in Loudon County, known as the Lisbon Institute. Later he attended a classical school, studying ancient languages, literature and mathematics.

He taught school for some years, and in 1848 moved to West Virginia, then a part of the State of Virginia. His first journey was on horseback over the mountains. He returned to Virginia, where he married and took his wife back to West Virginia by stage coach.

Finding the position of teacher unremunerative, and his health failing, Mr. Thompson sought employment with the Baltimore and Ohio as brakeman in 1857. He started his long railroad career on the North West Virginia Railroad, between Grafton and Parkersburg, which had just been completed. Later this road became a part of the Baltimore and Ohio. In 1860 he was promoted to freight conductor. He became a passenger conductor shortly before the Civil War broke out, and his train transported the regiment of Union soldiers to Webster, where it engaged in the first land battle of the war at Phillippi, W. Va., May 28, 1861.

In 1862 Mr. Thompson went to Parkersburg where he took a position in the Freight Office, remaining there the balance of his active railroad career.

Mr. Thompson's first run as a brakeman was on a cold day in March. In the early days cabooses were not furnished, and the brakemen were obliged to ride on the roofs of the cars. The day was bitterly cold and he had decided that he did not care to continue railroading as a career and that he would get off at the next station, but shortly after the sun came out and he decided to remain in the service.

Mr. Thompson was placed on the retired list in 1900.

Death of Joseph Schoenberger

JOSEPH P. SCHOENBERGER, one of the oldest and best known railroad men in Cincinnati, died suddenly on December 6, 1922, at his home in that city, at the age of 75.

Mr. Schoenberger commenced his railroad career when 14 years of age, before the Civil War, as an engine wiper in Storrs Yard, Cincinnati. In 1864 he was promoted to fireman in the yards, and shortly after was given a run between Cincinnati and Louisville, on the old O. and M. road. In 1871 he was promoted to be an engineer between these two cities, running in both freight and passenger service for many years, after which he was again assigned to Storrs Yard. He retired in 1916.

Mr. Schoenberger's record was an exceptional one, few men being privileged to spend sixty years in a service fraught with so much danger. It was a clean record, not marred with even one reprimand. His was faithful service, representing the highest kind of loyalty to duty.

When Mr. Schoenberger retired, he wore the gold honor button, but better than this was his consciousness of having performed his duty in a loyal and honorable manner, and that the Baltimore and Ohio recognized and appreciated this. He was popular among his fellow employees; always interested in movements tending to promote the welfare of railroad men, and particularly active in their behalf as president and member of the advisory board of Local No. 604 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He also enjoyed the distinction of honorary membership in the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association.

Funeral services were held on December 9 at St. Martin's Church, of which Mr. Schoenberger had been a lifelong member. Many members of railroad and fraternal organizations were present at the services and followed his body to the grave. Masonic services were conducted at the cemetery by the Worshipful Master of the Lodge in which Mr. Schoenberger had been initiated more than thirty years ago.

He Got His Lost Grip!

TORONTO, ONT.,
April 4, 1923

Mr. John P. Dugan,
Baltimore and Ohio R. R.,
Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:

I received my grip today in good condition, and I want to say that I did appreciate the efforts you put forth in securing it for me. I don't know that I will ever be able to repay you for your trouble, but if you ever come to Toronto I want you to call me up on the telephone at least.

I expect to be going through Baltimore on my way to Florida next winter and will certainly try and see you.

Thanking you again for what you have done for me, I am

Yours truly,
(Signed) H. Buchanan

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBEEK

In my eightieth year I have had a new experience. I have been an inmate of St. Joseph's Hospital, a grand institution, and I have been inducted into the operating room. Under the care of Dr. Fechtig I have been a visitor to the operating table. Dr. Fechtig's part was the removal of a cataract from my right eye.

While a patient, I met a gentleman named Kirbey, whose shoulder was shattered in an automobile accident; the surgeon had wired that part of his anatomy—a wonderful and successful operation. When Mr. Kirbey came into my room he was all smiles and I was won over from the start.

Our young ladies and gentlemen in the Law Department are given to smiling and their visits, flowers and cheering words were fully appreciated.

This is not intended as a sermon. It is merely a recital of an event where everybody seemed interested in doing something for someone else.

"Mr. Kirbey," I said to my new friend, "is the owner of the machine who caused this woeful mishap paying your expense here?" Mr. Kirbey responded that "he never even stopped his car." I laid back on my pillow and sought to change the subject.

I have had flowers in profusion, one fine display coming from the boys and girls of the Savings Feature of the Baltimore and Ohio, and I want to impress upon the readers of this column that we are not thankful enough for our mercies. In the room next to me there was a patient worse off than I. In the room immediately opposite, a similar situation. I told one of the nurses that I did not feel that I was thankful enough and she gave me this beautiful reply; "I feel thankful that I am able to work for those unable to help themselves."

I had planned, in making my exit, to return thanks to the chaplain for his courtesy; to the sisters for their words of encouragement; to the superintendent for his excellent management and to those who had rendered every aid possible, but I did not get an opportunity, and so here is my offering.

Office of General Manager, Eastern Lines

Correspondent, H. E. WEIFENBACH

Once again the opportunity for exchanging notes with our fellow workers, presents itself, and the thought occurs "What shall it be this time?" What would the "folks" be interested in hearing about?" Of course the scope of a correspondent's article is limited to a certain extent to the narrating of events occurring in his territory or his department, although our editor is very free with his requests for suggestions for "Stopping the Leaks," improving the service, etc. and very generous in allowing space for our sometimes good and other times poor suggestions. However there is a tendency with nearly all of us to soon tire of the subject of economy, although we do not necessarily discontinue the practice of it.

There are many ways of viewing a subject, and one way of approaching that of economy has always interested me. It may be said that true economy is not the result of withholding but of giving. Possibly this seems to be a contradiction, but by this I mean just exactly what the Baltimore and Ohio and its employees are now doing. The Company's employees are giving, as a rule, good, conscientious, whole hearted service, and thereby making it possible for the Baltimore and Ohio to give splendid, unexcelled service to the public, and in proportion to the amount of the splendid service which we give, will be the satisfying reward of patronage which will fall to our lot.

Personally, I am enthusiastic over our service. I think it is wonderful, and I never fail to tell my friends about it whenever I can. In this way, just as many others have done, I have been able to secure for the Baltimore and Ohio, the patronage of a number of persons who previously knew little about us. So when we are asked to economize I know of no better way (while of course admitting that there are other ways) than for everyone to give more service.

Talking about service, that's what our chief clerk is getting acquainted with, and paying for, too, only you get the kind he wants at a "Service" station or a garage. No more fish stories this year, for Mr. Herman has been converted to an automobile mechanic, which, however, is not as bad as a radio "bug." We have four of the latter in the office now, and the force is gradually growing. George Seeds is senior vice president of the Radio Society, and Mr. Hamilton is the latest convert. "Jack" Johnson is also quite learned on the subject and is frequently called in for consultation when advice is needed, that is, in the event our "Sparky" can't tell you all about it.

You know, we all belong to the Lion Tamer's Club, and recently, one of our members, "Pimento," alias Albert Wieber, outgrew our club and joined the S. D., V. P. O., Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and in his place we admitted "Sparky" to the Club. In other words, our Albert has left us to go to the Safety Department of the Vice-President's Office, and in his place we have Leon Utter as our new office boy. We are sorry indeed to have lost Albert, but we are glad to see him progress and wish him success.

Spring is here, which of course we all know, but what I was about to say was that with it come memories of golf and the champion of last year, namely Mr. Herman. Since he has deserted the ranks for automobiling, however, we will have to rely upon Clarence to carry off the honors, which we feel sure he can do. He is our authority now on this subject.

What we want to know is this: what does George Zimmerman mean when he says over the telephone each morning, very sweetly, "How's your Rambler?" Also, where did Hawkshaw get his tip when he followed Hillary to the Rivoli one night not long ago?

There are only a few of us who are such "sports" that we can go to Atlantic City at Easter. "Fourth of July" is about all we can stand. Mrs. Craig seemed to enjoy her trip immensely, however, and didn't appear to mind the cold weather one bit.

Engineering Department

Correspondent, OSWALD K. EDEN

The joke is now on the other fellows. G. C. H. has "AT LAST" built his dream house, and is now preparing for a housewarming!

A vote for Daylight Saving is a vote for an hour of sunlight. If you are a sportsman or sports-woman, an extra hour in the afternoon in which to enjoy your particular hobby will be greatly appreciated. If you are not fond of sports, well—you don't know what you are missing. Vote for Daylight Saving!

"Al" Weston is now a "Relayer." His smiling face is no longer seen on the York Road cars, but is among those on the platform when the 7.40 (?) pulls in. "Twinkle, twinkle, little star."

Mr. Otto is one of our official photographers, and many of the photos of interest appearing in our MAGAZINE have been secured through his assistance. He was married on April 9, to Mrs. Catherine F. Kohlhuber, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Matieson, at the home of the bride 615 E. 35th Street, Baltimore, Md.

Press of business has made it impossible for friend Otto to take his "honeymoon"

Jean Otto, photographer, and the new Mrs. Otto

Jesse Bernard Norris, who recently died, and his brother Harry. The father, Harry L. Norris, is traveling baggage and milk agent as yet, but he says he is going to do so later. Our hearty congratulations are extended to the bride and groom.

Baseball is once more occupying the limelight. As you all know, we are represented in the Baltimore and Ohio League. At this writing, April 16, we have not had much opportunity to practice on account of the inclement weater, but we expect by the time this appears in print to have played and won (?) several games. In order to produce a better team, sectional teams have been organized, namely, engineers (clerks), Drafting Room, Bridge Draftsmen, and Buildings Department. It is proposed that these four teams play among themselves and so promote the game.

And speaking of baseball puts me in mind of the tennis season which will soon commence. Last year we organized a team and scheduled one or two matches. Why can't we do it again this year, only with better success? We believe we have some talent in our department, and extend a challenge to any or all departments for a match.

We extend our sympathy to you, Miss Lansdowne, upon the death of your mother.

Engineering Department, Pittsburgh

Correspondent, J. M. WHEALAN

Your correspondent regrets to announce that the sister of W. C. Leasure of this department, who has been seriously ill for some time, has shown no improvement and doubts are entertained for her recovery. Mr. and Mrs. Leasure and "Bill" have our deepest sympathy and it is hereby tendered. The saddest thing in this world of ours is the knowledge that we can no longer help those whom we love.

Our office floors are being varnished and consequently the place bears a much improved appearance. We understand that further improvements are in prospect and when completed it will be a case of wiping your feet on the outside.

We are glad to announce that the matter of the house has been definitely settled and "P. J." is showing the way to the rest of us who have been doing a lot of talking and nothing else. Another party has been promised upon completion of the building operations and we are all looking forward to it.

The gradual improvement in business is a matter of gratification and we hope that the improvement in the case of the railroads will prove to be permanent.

We are pleased to see the occasional advertisements telling of the advantages to be gained and the interesting things to be seen through travel on the Baltimore and Ohio. This railroad, so rich in sentiment, tradition and service, has never been sold so well to the public as now. Now that the start has been made let's keep up the good work. (In connection with these comments, we wonder if any real attempt has been made to get the MAGAZINE into the hands of a selected few of the general public. The writer sent out a few last month and intends to keep up the practice as he feels that the paper presents a most excellent opportunity to advertise the railroad and the class of service which the railroad has to offer.) It is to be hoped that the determination of the editor to have the MAGAZINE out on time will be realized, inasmuch as its usefulness will be practically ruined unless the delay is corrected.

Being interested in the improvement of the tone of the MAGAZINE, we wish to congratulate O. K. E. on his contribution to the March issue. It seems to us that the correspondents are improving in the class of stuff offered and that is what makes the MAGAZINE.

General Baggage and Milk Department

Correspondent, MABEL L. MENGES

Since the last issue of the MAGAZINE we have had an unusual combination of events occurring on our fourth floor, which is occupied entirely by the Baggage and Milk, and Police Departments, and for this reason we are including mention of our neighbors across the hall, the Police Department.

This department extends its sympathy to F. X. Molloy, chief clerk, Police Department, whose wife died, March 16. Mrs. Molloy left three small children, one only a few days old.

H. L. Denton's mother, who was taken ill and underwent treatment at the hospital, is much improved.

The dignified title of "father" has been conferred upon Joseph Murphy, special agent, the conferrer being John Leo Murphy, who arrived March 25. Congratulations.

The same title has been conferred upon Robert J. Doyle, supervisor of police, by a little son who arrived April 14. However, this is the fifth time this title has been conferred upon Mr. Doyle, but he looks just as proud as if it were the first. He also has the congratulations of his neighbors.

We are sorry to announce the death of Jesse Bernard Norris, son of Harry L. Norris, traveling baggage and milk agent. He had been ill for some weeks with heart trouble, when pneumonia developed and caused his death. He was the third of four children, one brother being employed in the Telegraph Department. Jesse was an unusually bright and interesting boy, and had a host of little friends who will miss him. Mr. Norris and his family have the sincere sympathy of this office.

John P. Dugan has just returned from a trip to Wisconsin in the interest of transportation of milk-cream from that section of the country. The prospects for a heavy movement of this product from that territory for the summer season are encouraging.

We have been getting some splendid cooperation in the handling of lost articles and as a result we have received some complimentary letters from passengers who really appreciate this consideration.

Another one of our efficient and dependable baggage agents has left us. S. U. Gregg, Frederick, Md., left the service April 1 to accept the superintendency of the Montevue Hospital, Frederick. However, our loss is someone else's gain.

"Brad" Worthington, who has been sick for two months, paid us a surprise visit the other day. We were delighted to see him as we missed his frequent calls at the office. "Brad" hopes to be back on the job soon.

A certain confirmed bachelor, as we thought, who is a near neighbor of ours, has been acting unusually of late. He seems to have assumed that far away pensive expression, and has been noticed standing for long periods gazing into the jewelry windows, especially on days when certain gems are on display. He has also been seen gazing into the stationery windows where engraved cards, invitations and announcements are being shown.

Of course we can't always believe in signs, but it looks mighty suspicious.

Won't you 'fess up and tell us all about it Capt. Mc.—O! Excuse us, we almost mentioned your name.

Several passengers have commended the Baltimore & Ohio service in general, and one made particular mention of the excellent dining car service which he always enjoys and recommends to his friends.

In the last two months we have lost two office boys, which reminds us "Train them up in the way they should go, and away they go." William Rogers was transferred to the Passenger Department, and Edward Barbour, our latest acquisition, to the Transportation Department. Our best wishes go with them.

Mail and Express Traffic Department

Correspondent, T. E. REESE

It will be interesting to every employee of this department and to all others who know him to learn that on May first, thirty years ago, a young man of nineteen years entered the service of our Company as clerk and stenographer in the Motive Power Department, Baltimore.

By diligent application combined with persistence, all noted on his service record, it can be seen that John Calvin McCahan allowed no grass to grow under his feet while progressing upward to his present position as manager, Mail and Express Traffic Department.

During the sojourn of the writer in this department, it has come to his ears on good authority, that our manager is rated as one of the best mail and express traffic men in this country. We are naturally pleased to have as our leader such a man.

Throughout Mr. McCahan's thirty years of continuous service, he has never missed coming to the office on the first day of every year. He believes that if you work on that day, you will have work on every day of the year. Evidence has proved this theory true.

It is also interesting to know that on April 12, this year, Mr. McCahan celebrated his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and I know that every one will join me in wishing our "Boss" thirty more years of his present good health and active service, and the same number of years of happy wedded life.

On the fifth of April Miss Virginia L. Kennerly, our speed stenographer from "Eastern Sho", went home sick about 2.00 p. m. Naturally, we were all interested in her early recovery, especially as her illness developed to be a case that might be termed contagious. Inquiry by 'phone from time to time produced satisfactory results until April 9, at which time we all had a setback, (not the patient). This is the 'phone report: "patient improving and doing fine, is now lying in bed singing!—sends a message that none of you need fear the disease as only Children can catch it."

It's funny how some girls, from childhood will grow to the old age of? (I know but can't tell) and have perfect control of their right hand through all of those years, and then all of a sudden start doing all their work left handed.

When the question of why was put to the Misses Mabel H. Cross and Lillian Persch in a casual way, the answer was one that to date is unsolved by medical science, i. e., on account of "sparkle-itis," contracted on the third finger from the thumb on the left hand; blood circulation became poor, and it is now necessary that we use that hand as much as possible to create proper circulation through the arteries, besides some day we will be "kneeding the dough" with that hand.

Congratulation, girls, give us the dates far enough in advance so that we can start saving our pennies.

Freight Traffic Department

Correspondent, DOROTHY RUBENSTEIN
Baltimore, Md.,
April, 10, 1923.

To My Friends and Co-Workers of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

Please let me express, if I can find the proper words, my unbounded appreciation of your kind support in the election for second Good Will candidate, just closed with the odds against us. While it was a losing battle from the start, account our Department being greatly outnumbered by the various other departments, it surely is gratifying to know that I have the friendship and good will of so many of my fellow workers, not forgetting for one moment the kindness of my superiors.

Rest assured, that had I been fortunate enough to be the second Baltimore & Ohio representative, I would have done all in my power to make you proud of your choice; however, as the Fates willed differently, allow me to say that I will do my "bestest" here at home and strive in every way to hold your valued friendship.

Again thanking you, I am

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Dorothy Rubenstein.

Correspondent, NORMA H. APPLEGARHE
The Bachelor's Club

We thought that certain bachelors of this office, members of the above club, had taken their degree and were confirmed members, but the vicissitudes of life are many, and now two more members have, or will in the near future, resign their membership from the club to become "Benedicts." There is still an opportunity for the supervisor of desk No. 67, likewise our grain claim expert, and a few other members of the club.

Our sympathy is extended to G. W. Shepard, Perishable Suspense Division, who has been in the University Hospital for the past month, seriously ill. From the reports of those who have visited him, he is still cheerful and optimistic, and we sincerely trust he will soon regain his health and be with us once more.

Miss Marie McAllister, who is now in the Mercy Hospital as a result of an automobile accident, is slowly recuperating. Our sincere sympathy and best wishes for an early recovery are extended her with the hope that she will soon be on the job again.

WARNING—When Charles and Alice come speeding along in their new car (which Alice believed would be a "Star," but turned out to be an "Auburn Beauty Six" much to her satisfaction), pedestrians had better scamper for the sidewalks, 'cause "In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to love."

James D. Gill has about decided to take a vacation this year, so you had better keep your over-coats out of hock a while longer; we are liable to have a snowstorm.

The Misses E. L. McGinnis, G. L. Lambert and M. C. Lambert are the new members of this department.

Relief Department

Correspondent, H. IRVING MARTIN

Your correspondent was greatly pleased during a recent extensive trip over a large part of the System to hear a unanimous chorus of praise of the Dining Car Department. All employees, cooks, waiters, stewards alike, seemed to be doing their best to please the traveling public, and they surely were satisfying and pleasing all with whom the writer came in contact. Mr. Baugh has evidently adopted the slogan of the times: "Every day—better and better in every way," and he's not stopping there, but putting his standards up another notch all the time. And then that finishing touch—the package of mints. They make satisfied and pleased patrons by toning up the digestion. A judicious mixture of psychology and good advertising.

T. Parkin Scott, the debonair chief clerk of the Savings Feature, was remembered by his associates on his birthday, April 13. A bunch of fifty roses of unusual beauty adorned his desk, and you couldn't pry T. Parkin loose from his section on any pretext. He says that birthdays do not worry him. Just think of the candles that burned on Methusaleh's cake. He's off for the second lap in the race of life. We are told that the postmaster at Relay put on an extra carrier to handle the congestion of birthday postal cards.

Meet and get acquainted with our latest arrivals in the Savings Feature:

Jason Warren Stockbridge, fresh from Baltimore City College, who is now occupying a seat at the Mail Desk. Jason has started his career in the business world in the proper way. He has a smile for everyone and his duties are performed in a cheerful manner. Who was that chap who wrote "When you smile, another smiles, and soon there's miles and miles of smiles, and life's worth while, because you smile?"

Leo R. Fox lately employed as bookkeeper for the National Enameling & Stamping Company. Leo gets around like an "Old Timer." He has picked up the details of his duties so quickly that we can hardly realize he is a newcomer.

And four new energetic ones in the Relief Feature:

On February 16, came Richard Frank Deane, as messenger and chief buzz watcher. Richard was formerly in the big building of the American Wholesale Corporation.

John K. Miller, claim clerk, dates from March 16. He is a Studebaker model from the United Auto Sales Company. Seems to be hitting on all cylinders.

Raymond Lee Krebs registered on March 20. He's from the Fidelity and Deposit Company and we believe is going to make a record here.

Last, but high up in ability, is Ralph Roland Tressel, new application clerk, from Ottenheimer Brothers.

All of these boys are going to make good. We'll take bets that all will be crackerjacks.

The baseball season is about to open and the management of the department team has assured us that they will do their best to place our team at the top.

It was gratifying to the management, when donations were asked for the support of the team, that the whole department gave freely and a substantial sum is now at their disposal to meet all current expenses.

Manager Brooks has all the players under his wing, and if the smiles that light up his countenance mean anything, the boys are going strong. He has been putting his team mates through their paces and no doubt will get the best out of every man.

He has gotten waivers from the big league teams on all the boys, and his team will not lose any members by the draft.

In the past his team has lacked moral support, and it needs just that to bring out all that is best in the players. Nothing like a corps of good loyal department rooters to keep the boys keyed up. We feel sure that every man in the department, not on the team, will give as many of his Saturday afternoons as possible to the pleasant work of cheering our team on to victory.

The roses tell the tale of 50, but T. Parkin Scott seems to be enjoying the reminder of it from his associates

Some days last year, when the team played exceptionally good ball, they were the only witnesses of their own deeds, and then the team is going to play better ball than it did last year because it is a year older as a working organization.

Every man on the team, with the exception of Pfeiffer, who is a trifle overweight, is in good form and physically fit. Pfeiffer has assured us that he is undergoing strenuous training and will be down to weight, without the loss of any of his usual PEP, before the season opens.

Judging from the stick that our young giant Desverreaux has for his personal use, the pitchers on the opposing teams will find lots of trouble awaiting them this season. Norris, in a practice game a few days ago, using his "Big Stick," knocked the ball for a home run. He claims he did not hit the ball square so that now we are wondering how far it really would go and how many balls will be lost when he hits them on the trade mark.

Printing Department

Correspondent, H. R. FOGLE

On March 10 a seven pound baby girl was born to Mrs. Charles Adler; "Daddy" is a compositor in our department. Congratulations!

Our old friend Harry Reay has moved out on the farm. Says he will have a house warming party as soon as the sun shines warm enough "to make the house warm." He lives out beyond Pimlico and has to get up before breakfast so as to get to the shop on time.

Another of our boys has gone into the millionaire class. A. L. Handley, proof-reader, has bought a Willys-Knight auto. We hope he does not have any of the sad experiences of Bill Haigis, he of the "hole in the bottom of the gas can" fame.

Among those leaving during the past month were H. J. Griffith, and Proofreader Shackelford. George Meyers is now holding down the proof desk.

We are pleased to see Miss Ruth Jennings stenographer, back at work, entirely recovered from her illness.

Telegraph Department

Correspondent, C. J. OWINGS

The other day we had a short but pleasant visit from C. F. Schroeder, manager, relay office, Grafton. We tried to get Mr. Schroeder to pose for a photo to be printed in the MAGAZINE, but in vain. Perhaps we will be more successful next time he comes to Baltimore.

I have a question to ask all of you who are familiar with the Baltimore and Ohio Building. Where is the "front part alley side front?" For answers see "Uncle Benny," as I heard him tell a gentleman on the phone yesterday to meet him at such a location.

We congratulate Lineman D. F. Nethers and Telephone Maintainer W. R. Ambrose. Both received special mention in the "Safety Roll of Honor" of the March MAGAZINE.

"Stop That Leak." Save our telegraph wires whenever possible. One way to do this is: if you have a message late in the afternoon, which is not URGENT, instead of sending it in the form of a telegram, use a "Mailgram" envelope, which will reach the party addressed first thing in the morning and serve its purpose. See Telegraph Department Circular No. 8-A, Paragraphs 27, 28 and 29.

Along in the late afternoon of March 31, a shiny new Jewett, driven by "Our Uncle Al," blocked traffic on North Eutaw Street, account of engine trouble, or was it the fault of the driver? Above the blare of delayed motorists' horns rose the voice of "Uncle Al" threatening the defenseless Jewett in accents cold and cruel. Finally, with the assistance of several pedestrians the car, with its occupants (Mr. Stevens and Mr. Plumly) was pushed to the curb. Time passed, during which the illfated Jewett suffered grievously from harsh remarks. At length there appeared a good Samaritan, who adjusted the carburetor, and "Uncle Al" jubilantly drove away.

We offer our prayers for better luck on the next demonstration trip, if accompanied by the "Boss," and even though "Al" contends that "Jewetts" beat "Hudsons," we feel sure it will take more than one such demonstration to convince Mr. Plumly.

We extend our sympathy to the parents of James S. Chaney, former messenger in "GO" Telegraph Office, who died March 29, after a short illness. Chaney was employed in the Telegraph Office two years, during which time he rendered faithful and efficient service.

To prove that politeness is a good asset, the late Henry Ward Beecher is reported to have said in a conversation with John Wanamaker during the latter's life-time: "Politeness is like an air cushion. It helps to smooth out the bumps and rough spots in life more than anything else probably can do." In reviewing long years of endeavor in railroad work it can be recalled that practically all men reaching higher positions were those who regarded politeness as one of the best attributes any railroad man can possess.

"IS YOUR goal in life such that the reaching of it would win you a place in the hearts, the affection, the esteem of others? Or would it please only yourself? If so, it wouldn't do even that."—Forbes Magazine.

Many co-workers are familiar with the anecdote of the speech-maker who, after the usual introduction, in an endeavor to please his audience, faced them with the query: "What shall I talk about?" Instantaneously, a listener from the gallery shouted: "About two minutes." So also as an embryo correspondent, I will try to write, in an unobtrusive manner, about two minutes. The question of time being the point of this story perhaps it would be well to consider the worth of fitting moments. Therefore, use time well and waste not any of the Company's time.

A constructive remark was lately delivered by Mr. W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, as follows:

"Government ownership is a fallacy. I don't believe in such control. There's too much regulation of the railroads now. What we need to run the railroads into a period of success for all concerned, is less law and less restriction."

Miss Margaret Mehl, this office, surprised her friends by announcing her marriage to Mr. Clarence Simms on Easter Monday. A reception was held April 12, at the bride's home, Joppa Road, Towson, Md. Our congratulations and best wishes for a happy future.

Auditor of Freight Claims

Correspondent, NELLIE F. COLLISON

Broadway, Fifth Avenue and other busy thoroughfares of Old Gotham are often the scene of many strange and curious incidents, and every phase of human character may be seen hurrying along its busy marts unmindful of the critical eye that may be cast in their direction. But recently there may have been seen among the cosmopolitan throng that usually form this heterogeneous mass of humanity, one solitary figure of a somewhat lonesome and pathetic appearance, grip in hand and with umbrella waving frantically in a fruitless attempt to attract a traffic cop. She rushes hither and thither dismayed and terrified by the roar and racket of traffic until she finally collapses on the side-walk and exclaims,

"So this is New York?"

"Yes, Nellie, this is New York."

"How are things down on the farm?"

(NOTE:—The above makes a fine story but the editor cannot let it go without comment. It happens that he reached the big city on the same train with Miss Collison and saw her as she reached the station concourse in the terminal. Behind her was a "Red Cap" carrying a smart-looking suit case and a few moments later saw her stepping lightly into a Yellow Taxi in the most approved metropolitan style. If the "farm"—or Baltimore—was worrying her at that particular moment there wasn't any sign of it.

Too bad, Messrs. Ireland and Bowden, to break in on your imaginations in this rude way, and I hope I will be pardoned for rushing to the defense of our able correspondent.—Editor.)

Little Willie Aler thinks he will spend his vacation this year on a honeymoon, for, alas! the dear boy is engaged. Congratulations Willie, but have you told "Mama" yet?

Won't be long now before our annual picnic! Remember how we have enjoyed ourselves in the past years? It's going to be just twice as fine this year. Keep open the date, August 11, and help the committee to put it over big!

April 19 was Miss "Kitty" Leacy's birthday and the girls gave her a fine party during lunch time. Many more happy birthdays "Kitty!"

The Death of A. B. Seidenstricker

A victim of the dreaded Hotchkiss Disease, Mr. Seidenstricker took the radium treatment in an endeavor to check its effect, and at the end of the prescribed time was pronounced cured by his doctors. Apparently the strain was too great for his constitution, as he did not appear to be able to regain his strength, and for the past six or eight months had been failing, until the latter part of February when he was compelled to give up entirely and was confined to bed, where he remained until the end came at 11.30 p. m., April 10.

Mr. Seidenstricker entered the service of the Company as clerk in the Agent's Office at Camden Station during May, 1883. On September 8, 1891 he became attached to the Accounting Department as clerk in Office of Auditor of Revenue, and was transferred to Office of Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts, June 1, 1902 and was in this office since that date. A service record of close to forty years, something few can boast of!

Mr. Seidenstricker was assistant chief clerk for a number of years and until the recent reorganization, and on March 1, 1920 was made accountant.

We will miss his presence in the office, because he was of a lively disposition and well liked.

Our heartfelt sympathy is extended the bereaved family in the loss of husband and father.

By taking two games, on April 13, while the Royal Blues lost two, the Head Lights clinched the 1922-1923 office bowling league championship. Only one night remains to finish the schedule, but no change can be made in the standing, which is—

	WON	LOST	PER CENT.
Head Lights.....	53	34	609
Royal Blues.....	49	38	563
Pull Men.....	45	42	517
Bumpers.....	27	60	311

It won't be long now before the boy's don their bibs and tuckers for the big feed.

With the departure of Mr. Spedden, who resigned April 7, this office loses one of its good clerks and a prince of good fellows. During the past twelve years, through which it has been our pleasure to know "Pat," we can truthfully state he has never been found wanting.

For the past several years, Mr. Spedden has been largely responsible for at least one day's pleasure for as many of the clerks of the office, and their friends, as cared to avail themselves of the opportunity of a day's outing at the Maryland Ball Grounds, where everything to eat and drink was to be had for the asking or taking.

Mr. Spedden leaves us to accept the position of business manager of the newly organized professional colored baseball league, which includes the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Atlantic City and Camden, which, in addition to the management of the Black Sox, will no doubt keep him pretty much on the jump.

As a token of the good will in which Mr. Spedden was held, a fine leather hand bag was presented him as a parting remembrance.

We are sorry to see our old friend leave us, but the prospects are such that it would be the height of folly for him to refuse so our best wishes for unbounded success follow him in his new venture.

The business section of our city received a severe set-back several days ago. Bosses, clerks and all were late that particular morning. Why? Our amiable Pfeif has just begun driving a new Nash. Now Pfeif lives in Elkrige and has been used to driving horses, so when someone yelled "Whoa" he set the brakes hard. Result—traffic blocked five minutes, for Pfeif was looking for the reins instead of starting lever. They do say its hard to teach an old dog new tricks.

Our office is one of "Nashes" and we hear that Mr. Mettle can now turn his around a ten cent piece.

C. N. McDevitt is at his desk again after an operation and long illness. Glad to see you back again, "Mac."

E. Frank Thomas, head clerk, Payroll Bureau, was waiting for a car at Baltimore and Liberty Streets the other day when suddenly he found himself sitting on the bumper of an automobile. We cannot imagine what was so interesting—the skirts are longer now. However, he is back again and, although a little stiff, his good disposition is still evident.

"Bill" Gahan (who became a benedict recently) has been making his 1916 "flivver" presentable. He gave it seven coats of paint, remodeled the engine, bought new lights, seats and windshield; in fact the repairs set him back about $100.00. After paying the bill he asked the salesman what it was worth. The salesman said because he was a friend of "Bill's" he'd be liberal and give him $75.00!

We extend our sympathy to F. A. Merrill, car repair accountant, on the death of his father.

The Misses Chalk and Chambers will attend all the county fairs again this summer. We wonder who or what they are trying to win.

After 16 weeks of practice the Bowling Team of this office (at last) won three consecutive games on March 29, from the Relief Department—this due to the earnest effort of J. H. Pinkerton, who won each game in the tenth box. Let's hope that the team picked for next season will accomplish this feat more often.

The evening papers have nothing on our MAGAZINE for we too have a "Mike and Ike." Now I can't say whether "they look alike" but they do think alike—here's proving:

Mirrors of the A. D.
Reflection No. 1

"Mike and Ike"

"Females, hear ye!!—the Sheik is on a rampage—ye "beautiful" descendants of Mother Eve, have caution—or this Valentinian disciple of "Stacomb" (and other embellishments to straighten one's crowning "wavelets") will endeavor with all the wiles of Napoleon and the mannerisms of a Chesterfield (Lord C.—not the popular cigarette), to lead some coy damsel of the P. R. or the V. E. Bureaus from the cozy hearth of her fond mater to an orchestra seat at Ford's, or the Auditorium, for such shows as "Bombo" or "The Music Box."

The "Sheik" stepped out sometime ago with a popular young "Miss," and shortly afterward, she was married with great pomp and circumstance, and if present indications run true to form, we are led to believe that there will be another fair damsel united in wedlock—and the "Sheik" will weep and gnash his teeth in anguish over his loss.

So, as we say in Egypt, "A rolling stone grows monotonous."

A few days ago it was thought that several of our efficient statisticians were going to attend a formal affair, or that they were disguising as the old-fashioned "tin-type" model at a masked ball, because of the fact that they introduced, in this office, the rejuvenated style of wearing the "Winged Collar." One of the fashion models in particular resembled a Gay Street clothes dummy so much, that an "Old Town" merchant came to our office to investigate whether or not it was the one he had had stolen from him.

The Statistical Bureau's loss is the Bill Register Bureau's gain in Miss Cora Kerr's promotion to the position formerly held by Mr. Gray. Our best wishes for her success!

The Voucher Bureau believes in sociability. On March 15, they gave Miss Ethel Porter a surprise birthday luncheon, nearly causing the poor girl to die of heart failure (or indigestion). The guests were the Misses Marie Bohlman, Ethel Fifer, Gertrude Kimball, Irene Hulse, Virgin Mitchell, Dorothy Robinson and Aubrey Silance.

We won't mention any names but warn the Welfare that they may prepare for a double wedding present in the near future. You guess and we'll whistle.

"Captain" Charlie Osborne, Transportation Bureau, will soon take up his summer residence on the Magothy River. He is in the market for a second hand "Henry" to take him to and from his daily duties. Some "Captain," that boy!

Father Time has at last conquered "Atlas" Shipley's laurels for he has decided not to play on the office baseball team this season.

"Tommy" Campbell, "Sheik of Overlea," is taking part in a play at Taneytown. The play is not the only attraction for "Tommy"—his mind runs thus: How much a man is like his shoes, For instance, both a soul may lose, Both need a mate to be complete, And both were made to go on feet.

George A. Taylor and George Shamer have returned from their trip to Florida and Havana. They report that John Barleycorn is very prominent there, but of course it made no difference to them??? There is some mystery as to whether they were captivated by the "Senoritas."

Girls, did you notice that splendid picture of the Champion Baltimore and Ohio Girls Basketball Team, Garrett, Indiana. It was on the last (t pays to read every page of the MAGAZINE, clean through to the last) page of the March issue. They are not only good looking but from the write-up of their scores they are entitled to their name of "Baltimore and Ohio Wonders." But now this is the point—why can't we have an A. D. Team. Of course, we couldn't expect to accept Garrett's challenge for a while, but it would be an incentive to work. Think it over girls, and let's get busy.

The latest neophyte initiated into the Ancient and Honorable Order of Captives of Cupid is reticent Miss Margaret Gleason. The correspondent, yours truly, had actually to seize her left hand (which, by the way, is her right hand, the hand that now holds the pencil and later will manipulate the coffee pot and rolling pin and rock the cradle), in order to verify the rumor that she had surrendered to the blandishments of her hero, whoever he may be. It was as rumor had it. The token was orthodox and brilliant. Miss Gleason is a mighty fine girl. May good fortune attend her!

Oh, for the joys of twenty-three and thereabouts! (That is a sigh of regret.) One day recently when returning from lunch my eyes "lit" on a coterie of happy girls gathered around a desk that was decked with pink and in the center of which flamed 23 pink candles stuck into a pink cake. In my official capacity of reporter for the MAGAZINE I butted in to inquire about the what and why, and was informed that it was Miss Anna Marshall's birthday; also served a piece of cake. The affair was a surprise to Miss Marshall and throws light on the popularity she enjoys in the office. I might mention that I took occasion to announce to the party the date of my birthday, and expect to see a cake with 62 candles on my desk when the day comes around. I hereby promise that I will be surprised.

In the C. T. Department the figures that are of greatest interest, because they always tell the general situation off hand, like the vane on a steeple tells the direction of the wind, are the tonnage figures; they furnish a basis for off hand estimates, and are the nucleus from which by devious computations all sorts of comparative tables are worked out. As a general proposition in freight transportation, tonnage and prosperity are synonymous.

Agent J. J. Bayer at Pier 22 "points with pride" to the accomplishment of one of his ambitions, the running up of tonnage handled at his station to 25,000 tons in a month, which was achieved for the first time in the history of this pier in March, this year. 25,852 tons handled, says the blue print. J. J. B. coolly announces that now he has set the mark at 30,000 tons. As I have said before, forward and upward is the right direction to look. Atta boy, Joe, go to it! (I'll follow you up with the payroll figures so keep your eye on the "cost per ton" column, too).

An engagement ring has made its appearance in the Division Accountant's Office once more, adorning the third finger of Miss Abon Hendrickson's left hand. The lucky fellow is Mr. Carl Anderson, formerly of the Division Accountant's Office. Congratulations.

The accompanying photograph is of Maintenance of Way Carpenter Joseph Polomene, with his cousin Catharine. You would think they were real "sweethearts!" "Joe," as he is known, entered the service on June 18, 1920.

"Tough Luck." A joke is a joke, but when a man chops wood for a few days and piles it up, then, when the last piece is chopped it flies up and hits him in the face, bounces over the pile of wood and knocks it over on you, that's no joke. How about it George S? We were wondering how you got the two cuts on your face, but the mystery is solved.

Miss Marie Peroni, stenographer to car accountant, has been transferred to the Lighterage Department, Pier 6, St. George.

Miss Helen Decker, stenographer, Superintendent's Office, has returned to her regular duties after being away account of illness for seven weeks. We are all glad to see her back on the job.

Look out, boys. Trainmaster J. D. Gibb has an additional pair of eyes and can see twice as much as he did before. He now wears a pair of glasses. His eyes were going bad on him, for reasons unknown. How come John?

From the Yeast Cake Club—D. E. Office

Not counting the crooks or the fakes,
Every day we eat yeast cakes,
"Al" eats three, "Pat" eats five,
"George" says that's what keeps him alive.

—2nd worse—

"Fred's" the pres-i-dent, you know
That's because he's full o' dough.
He eats four—"Al" eats six,
"Pat" says, "George, now we're in a fix."

—3rd even worse—

"Petty" says—"stop eating yeast,"
For every day we have a feast.
Now you see we all eat three,
"Al"—pays for one—and gets the others free.

—4th verse—worse—

When "George" eats his, he makes a face like a pup—
"Oh! "Patsy" look, I'm blowing up."
Two months ago we were very slim,
Now we're full o-Vi-to-min.

—5th verse—

We are four—of a kind,
Often very hard to find,
When "Pat" brings the yeast cakes, six or nine,
We all pop-up and step in line.
Now they tell us, it's hard to feed us,
And call us a bunch of YEAST CAKE EATERS.

Passenger Conductor Henry Constantine died at his home in Baltimore, March 18, after an interesting life spent in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Mr. Constantine was born on November 18, 1857. Records show he became a passenger brakeman April 15, 1881, and later a train baggageman. He was promoted to passenger conductor on March 3, 1889. He also served in the Paymaster's Department.

Not "Newlyweds." Cousins only. Joseph Polomene and Katharine

The late Henry Constantine

Conductor Constantine was one of the men who were in the service when Ellicott City was the terminus for local trains; and we are told the walls of the old turn table pit are still standing at that point.

When the railroad was extended to Parkersburg and Wheeling, Mr. Constantine was one of those running to these points and operating under single track rules. This was previous to the year 1892 when the last trip was made to Wheeling. His earlier railroad experience was before the days of the automatic brake, when hand brakes, and later, straight air was used. A small type six and seven hundred class engine was used; and the termini for the runs were Martinsburg, Keyser, Parkersburg or Wheeling.

This was also before Pullman cars made their appearance, Mr. Constantine having operated one of the first vestibule trains built by the Pullman Company. The cars were of wooden construction with straight vestibules instead of the present square ones.

Mr. Constantine was an ardent fisherman; and whenever opportunity presented itself, as in the days previous to 1900 when Shepherds on the Alexandria Branch was the terminus on the Potomac River, and when cars were floated across, he could be found with his rod; and those with him in the crew would be treated to a fish dinner.

During the last two years of his life, while incapacitated, he spent his time on the Magothy River, Anne Arundel County, Maryland. He is survived by his wife, five daughters and one son, Henry N. Constantine, who is also with the Railroad in the Division Accountant's Office, Camden.

Following is the standing of the Duck Pin Teams of the Division Accountant's Office as last reported:

	Won	Lost
No. 2—Orioles.....	45	24
No. 4—Woodpeckers.....	39	27
No. 1—Sparrows.....	30	36
No. 3—Buzzards.....	21	48

The standing of these teams as first announced was Sparrows, Orioles, Woodpeckers and Buzzards. The high team score for three games is held by No. 4; the high team score for one game is held by No. 1; and the individual high score for one game is held by M. C. Swein with a score of 127.

Allen North has become a member of our "Owl Radio" Club. He is being coached by Harten.

D. B. Cex, E. L. McConkey and M. H. Bowers, Division Accountant's Office, were members of a party making a recent trip to New York.

Train Dispatcher H. Hambleton has purchased a Ford. He states he became "google-eyed" in learning to drive the thing around the lake in Druid Hill Park; and we are told that if it had not been for the instructor, there would have been a couple of panels of the fence missing. Mr. Hambleton is now away from the wire account of illness. We hope to see him back soon.

Dispatcher W. S. Eccleston has purchased a bungalow at Manhattan Station near Jones Station, Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, and is going to enjoy himself on the water.

We have good news from Dispatcher Rowe, and expect him to be again on duty within a short time.

John Flanigan has been made general foreman in the Maintenance of Way Department, Baltimore Terminals. D. L. Fry has been made foreman at Washington, D. C., in charge of repair work in that territory.

Bridge Inspector, E. G. Decker, who has been off account illness, since May, 1922, has returned to duty and is looking fine.

We are indebted to our "Family Artist," H. R. Lincoln, for enlivening the space allotted to us in the MAGAZINE. His art is highly creditable; and anyone who desires to beautify his family album by a likeness should consult Mr. Lincoln before going elsewhere. Who next?

The Baltimore and Ohio Veterans Association is making great preparations for their annual meet this summer. It is hoped that this event will be greater than ever. Engineer Jesse Mann, who was grand marshal last year, is mentioned to head the parade this year. "Jesse" can ride a horse as well as an engine.

Messrs J. P. Karn and Co., contractors, are making arrangements to build a number of homes for our railroad men here.

A number of furloughed men have been returned to duty. We are glad to see them back. "The Best and Only" is doing its bit, you bet!

Johnnie Winters, foreman, Electrical Plant, has taken unto himself a machine. He calls it "Johnnie's Mixture," because it consists of so many parts of other machines. Anyway it runs. John says he does not believe in horns, so he has a bell on it. He must use it to lead the cows home or else they think he is the milkman when he comes along.

Charlie Gibbs, foreman, Paint Shop, traded his Ford for an Overland. Guess he figured he would rather be Overland than at sea in a Ford.

Marion, our curlyhead blonde, assistant telephone operator, has discontinued his trips to Highlandtown—he says it's too mild down there. He now visits Gwynn's Falls Park for recreation.

Now that the girls' contest has closed, it might be well to start one for the men. Poole says he will challenge anyone in an eating contest. We all will accept, Henry, if somebody else pays for the eats.

We fear we are going to have to take up a collection pretty soon for another wedding present. This time it is for one of our shop order clerks; that is all he thinks and talks about all day long. Watch your step, Louie!

We welcome our new clerk, Albert Spies, and hope he will feel perfectly at home among us. No doubt after he gets better acquainted he won't consider us such a bad bunch to work with. Here's luck to you, Mr. Spies.

Freight Track

Baseball seems to be the subject in this department now, and from the looks of things we ought to have "some" ball team on the freight track considering some of the big league players we have signed up.

On March 30, a little boy was born to Mrs. W. L. Lloyd, wife of W. L. Lloyd, work checker. May the best of luck and happiness follow Mr. Lloyd and his family.

This department has the honor of being called the "Safety First Shop" and "Our Boss" is the man responsible for it. Every employe in this department should put forth every effort to keep the department up to 100% in the way of Safety. Several men have been appointed to look after Safety matters, and every man is on the job to see that all men wear their goggles at all times.

Locomotive Department

Judge Duffy, "Kuhl of the Flue Plant," went down to Bowie Easter Monday, to look over the ponies. I think the Judge got rid of a few berries. He don't seem to be much of a judge, when it comes to horses.

We understand that M. H. East, layer-out in the Boiler Shop, has become a benedict. Old Pal, accept our condolences; we have been traveling the straight and narrow 18 years, and we still remember the sympathy we received at that time. We haven't received any since.

So far "Dan Fitzgibbons" has escaped the clutches of Judge Staylor. Keep your eyes open, Dan, as the constable will get you even if you do "Dodge."

April 7 was a great day in the home of L. J. Lukas, boilermaker, Steel Car Shop. A 7 $\frac{3}{4}$  pound boy arrived at 11.25 a. m. Mother and son are doing fine and Papa Lukas—Well he is tickled to death.

H. A. Wilkins No. 3 Machine Shop, has been off account of illness for over four months. He is now at the Phipps Clinic Johns Hopkins Hospital, and he would appreciate any of the boys coming to see him. Entrance is on Wolfe Street. Pay him a call, fellows, and cheer him up.

Dan McConnell, Blacksmith Shop lost his watch and offered a reward of $1.00. The watch was found and the reward put in the "Easter Egg" fund, which was enjoyed by the office force. Better keep your watch secure, or the next time it may cost you a pawn ticket to get it back.

Freight Car Department

On April 10, the Mt. Clare Freight Car Department Baseball Club held a ball at Moose Hall, Fayette Street. It was in the honor of Daniel Tatum, known to all the employes at Mt. Clare as "Uncle Dan." The affair was a great success. The jazz music which was furnished by Bob Iula, sort of made a fellow dance, even if he didn't know how—it was SOME music. An interesting speech was made by our general car foreman, Harry A. Beaumont, in honor of Mr. Tatum. He was followed by John F. Ford, who presented Mr. Tatum with a beautiful bouquet of roses. Too much credit cannot be given to the committee who were responsible for making the ball a success. The committee was composed of the following: Wm. F. Mahaney, chairman of beremonies; M. V. Pascal, chairman, J. Handle, C. J. Mosmiller, C. C. Boland, E. Williams, W. G. Broseker, J. T. Moran, H. A. Smith, R. D. Zuik, R. Cocoran, H. Hickman, B. J. Doniecki, Jasper Wolf.

Daniel Tatum, the honored guest, is a retired shop foreman of the Freight Car Department, and before being retired, was the oldest employe at Mt. Clare, and probably next to the oldest on the System. He has been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for about 56 years. He is also a veteran who fought in the Civil War at the age of 17. On April 8, he and his wife celebrated their birthdays together, at which time many of the supervisors from the Car Department were present, and a large bouquet of flowers was presented to the couple by J. F. Ford.

The accompanying photograph of William J. Bowers, who is in his sixty-fifth year and still going strong at his trade of sheet iron worker and boilermaker. He finds after rounding out fifty years of service that working conditions have improved since he entered the service in 1873. He was apprentice under Moses Corpall, who was foreman at that time. Mr. Bowers' father was working for the Baltimore and Ohio over 70 years ago, as gang leader on sheet iron work. At the time Mr. Bowers entered the service as apprentice boy, he received as his wages 70 cents per day and now he earns that much per hour.

The accompanying photograph is of the wife and seven months old son of M. S. Gosnell, secretary to assistant superintendent.

The other photograph is of Beverly Francis Ford, age 3, daughter of Elmer W. Ford, Jr., clerk in the Storehouse.

Night Crew Dispatcher "Sam" Orr, 4 to 12 p. m., has some fertile scheme in his great brain, and likewise announces his intention of leaving us in the near future. Sam will be succeeded by Charles Hickey.

A male quartet has been formed at East Side consisting of Bill MacMullen, first tenor; "Jack" Ehrig, second tenor; Charles Wynkoop, first bass and Charles H. Minnich second bass. Correspondent, JOHN J. SELL General Car Foreman G. P. Hoffman has been promoted to similar position with headquarters in Baltimore. Car Foreman E. Davis, has been promoted to General Car Foreman at Cumberland, vice Mr. Hoffman.

Chief Clerk to Division Storekeeper V. B. Coyle has been promoted to assistant storekeeper at the Reclamation Plant. Good luck, Vince! C. R. Potter, formerly of Glenwood, has succeeded him.

Stock Clerk J. A. Frederick has been transferred to a similar position at the Reclamation Plant. Although we will all miss "Joe" we wish him success in his new field.

Walter Holtzman has returned after vacationing several weeks in Florida. "Shorty" reports a wonderful time.

We understand that Assistant Storekeeper W. E. Wall, has finally succeeded in selling his little red Packard and has purchased a complete radio set in order that he can keep in touch with the office while at home.

The entire neighborhood surrounding Park Street was suddenly awakened about 1.00 a. m. several nights ago. Upon investigation a small boy was noticed running up Park Street carrying a torch and shouting "Clear the way." Not far behind him came Master Mechanic A. H. Hodges, more affectionally known as "King Tut," in his new Nash. Mr. Hodges has promised to take us out for a ride after he gets his license and we are waiting patiently until he learns to drive.

Ralph "Bubbles" Baird, clerk in Storekeeper's Office, recently made his first trip in his big Buick, and had to walk home. It was Sunday night. How about it, Queenie?

We have been making a good showing on Car Miles and every employe is right behind it to see that every car is moved without delay, thereby increasing our car mileage. Consignees are solicited to unload shipments promptly. Company material is being followed to insure prompt unloading, and every car set out on local sidings for any reason is being given close attention so that it can be moved without delay. With every employe doing his bit, we can beat our own high record of 94.1 miles per car per day, which was made early this year.

An engineer who formerly ran "Camel" Engine 175, is anxious to obtain a photograph of this engine. Such a picture was in existence, and in possession of some one in the vicinity of Oakland, Md. sometime ago. Any employe knowing where it can be located will kindly correspond with J. W. McMakin, Decatur Street, Cumberland, Md.

We look for some breezy items of interest from Cumberland Shops now that they have a local correspondent on the staff in the person of Miss Vada Drumm, stenographer, Master Mechanic's Office. Do your bit, "Vada."

A good way to help the "Stop the Leak Campaign" is "Keep the cars Moving."

The Cumberland Division Baseball team shows up well in spring practice. We are looking for some strong challenges from other teams on the system who think they can play ball.

The Kelly-Springfield Tire Company has a trade mark for their tire "Lotta Miles." We should borrow this name for every car on the system and make them live up to it every day. "More Miles per car per day," should be our slogan.

James H. Wright, retired car and locomotive carpenter, was presented with a fifty-year gold medal by the Cumberland Veterans at their meeting, April 3. The presentation speech was made by one of the Cumberland Division's oldest veterans in length of service, John Ketzner, who has seen more than 54 years of active service. Mr. Wright entered the service as laborer in the rolling mill at Cumberland in 1872 and has worked in the various departments at Cumberland until January of this year when he was placed on the retired list. His many friends wish him many more years of restful life after his long term of service with the Company.

It is with regret that we record the passing of James Elwood Hamilton, aged 73, retired employe at Cumberland.

Mr. Hamilton died at his home in Cumberland, April 16, having been in failing health for some time. He was a widower and is survived by four sons, James E. Hamilton, employed with our Company at Baltimore; Edward L. Hamilton, formerly assistant to vice president, now with the Philadelphia Company at Pittsburgh, Robert and William Hamilton, Company employes at Cumberland, and one daughter, Mrs. Rose Hastings, Cincinnati, Ohio, wife of the late J. Symc Hastings, well known newspaper man who wrote under the name of "Luke McLuke."

For more than twenty years before retiring Mr. Hamilton was station baggage-master at Cumberland, having a wide acquaintance. He was held in high esteem by patrons and fellow employes.

The accompanying photo shows Malcolm C. Crosser, secretary to the division accountant. "Malc" is a lover of Nature and spends considerable time "Out Among Them." Think it was the other half of the bargain that snapped the picture but we promised not to give her away.

The latest and best story of the day is Gus Hodges presenting Jake Miller with the "Prize" Dog supposed to have been won at a local fair. "Some Pup."

G. A. McGinn is again banging out billiards and was well on the way to challenge "Willie Hoppe" for the World's Championship, but Mac's favorite pool room lately installed a Radio set and now he receives Hoppe's averages while knocking off the local sharks. Just as soon as he can get properly tuned in, look out, Champ!

Since our hero, Pass Clerk, R. W. Melinger, has built his new home out in the Dingle, he has not had so much opportunity to patrol the tracks, but "Bob" always was a safety man and we look for some thrilling rescues any day.

E. A. Connell has been promoted to car foreman at Cumberland. G. W. Howdyshe takes Mr. Connell's place as assistant car foreman, while W. V. Farrell moves up to foreman and Paul Hollen fills Mr. Farrell's old position.

We wonder why our night baggage agent rattles these heavy trunks before loading. What's the idea, Jimmie?

Our old friend P. M. Pennington, crossing watchman, Polk Street, Cumberland, still maintains his record of having one of the cleanest crossings on the division. "P. M." is always on the alert, and has a large number of school children using his crossing. To them he gives special attention. He has the proud record of no accidents.

Now is the time for a trip through the peach and apple belt on the Romney and Petersburg Branch. All the trees are in blossom and it is equal to a trip through southern California. We don't believe the cherry blossoms of Japan have anything to equal it. (See America First via Baltimore and Ohio.)

Blueprint showing tonnage performance still shows the Cumberland Division heading the list. Save fuel and keep cars moving and they can't catch us.

R. L. Schramm, lately of the Assistant Division Engineers Corps has been transferred to the Pittsburgh Division. Luck to you, "Ralph, old Boy!"

Practically every employe on the Cumberland Division has been doing his bit during the STOP THAT LEAK campaign and there is no question that good results have been achieved. However, there are always little things cropping up that need fixing and if any employe knows of conditions which should be rectified, write it up and we'll do the rest.

The Baltimore and Ohio Shops baseball team opened its 1923 campaign on the Rolling Mill diamond, April 8, in a clash with the Lonaconing Giants, and was victorious by a score of 5 to 4.

The batteries were—Baltimore and Ohio; King, Brooks and Drumm; Coney; Miller and Wilson. King pitched five innings, during which time he struck out eight men and allowed one hit. Brooks took up the pitching burden in the sixth and sailed along nicely during the final four innings.

Score by Innings... 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9—R
Lonaconing..... 1 0 0 1 0 1 1 0 0—4
Baltimore and Ohio 0 0 1 0 1 0 1 0 2—5

Cold weather has hindered practice somewhat, but the recent change serves to bring hope for warm weather. Our team is composed of practically the same employes as the 1922 team and it is hoped they will improve on their 1922 record of 16 victories, three defeats and one tie game. Cumberland has the best assortment of ball tossers on the System. Try us and be convinced!

John M. Morris, age 39, yard brakeman, was fatally injured at Virginia Avenue Grade Crossing about 6.20 p. m., April 6, when he stepped out of the way of a yard engine in front of passenger engine 5067 which was running to the shops light. He was taken to the Allegheny Hospital, where he died. Our deepest sympathy is extended to his family.

Recently two highly esteemed clerks in the Master Mechanic's Office, J. J. Carney Jr., and J. R. Laffey, accepted positions, in the Transportation Department—Two more yard masters!

J. S. Cheshire, clerk, Storekeeper's Office, takes the place made vacant by Mr. Laffey's promotion. May his stay with us be long and happy.

Boiler Shop Foreman L. W. Steeves, has resigned to accept a position as General Boiler Shop Foreman, Chicago and Alton Railroad, Bloomington, Ill. He has been succeeded by G. W. Nutz, formerly of Mt. Clare. Mr. Steeves has been at Cumberland for about two years, coming to us from the Michigan Central at St. Thomas, Canada. His resignation is regretted by all.

Tender Foreman O. M. Rankin was transferred April 1 to the Chicago Division as general tender foreman. We know that "Rank" is glad to get back to his old home in Garrett.

Agent George Hansel, Sabraton, has left us at least temporarily, to enter business for himself at Westernport, Md. We wish him every success in his new work. L. A. Mause is taking his place. Mr. Mause is a veteran employe, having had 22 years service and being well known in railroad circles in this part of the country.

Electrician O. B. (Jas.) Ware has been in Baltimore for the past few weeks, apparently on business. No, don't jump at conclusions, he has been married for some time.

A question of some interest about the shops at the present time is why did Machinist Lewis buy a new Jewett instead of fixing up his old Maxwell as he had intended? Sammy refuses to discuss the matter.

Machinist Paul Haskins is in the Monongalia County Hospital at Morgantown; Hostler P. F. Johns is in the Western Maryland Hospital at Cumberland, both having undergone operations recently. Latest reports indicate that both are improving.

Conductor Carney Fortney and wife have just returned from a trip to southern Florida. Carney denies having been in Cuba or any of the West India Islands, as he says there was no attraction there!

Boilermaker B. B. Frost is on the sick list—diphtheria—and Agent Harry Hawkins Manown, has been off duty for some time on account of an attack of influenza.

Recently a discussion took place in the machine shop. The subject was Boilermaker W. C. Johns' hair—or to be more exact, the noticeable lack of it. Mr. Johns said there was excellent proof that hair and brains would not mix, and Machinist Lewis remarked that he had never seen any hair growing on a crown bearing either, after which the meeting adjourned.

A wedding of interest to employes of the West End of the Cumberland Division was solemnized in the historic old Chapel of St. Mary's, at Ridge, Maryland on April 3, when Miss Alice Hopkins, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hall of Cornfield Harbor, became the bride of Assistant Division Engineer Captain John Edwards.

The ceremony was preceded by a dinner at the home of the bride and was followed by an informal reception at the Chapel parlors, which were beautifully decorated with wild flowers. The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Seminary and has spent much time in Washington and at Newport. Captain Edwards is a high school and university graduate and also a veteran of the World War, having served as Captain of Engineers, U. S. A. He is post commander of the American Legion. Captain and Mrs. Edwards have returned to Keyser after a honeymoon trip to Florida. "Cap." is back on the job now and is all smiles as he receives the congratulations of his many friends.

John Ambrose Blackiston, formerly of Piedmont, died at his home in San de Fuca, Washington, March 27, after a week's illness of myocarditis.

Mr. Blackiston was born in Cumberland, August 7, 1852. He was an engineer of the Baltimore and Ohio, having been retired in 1917 after fifty years service. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

If You Want an Accurate Watch — Buy a HAMILTON

HAMILTON No. 992. 16 size,  $\frac{3}{4}$  plate, 21 jewel movement, adjusted to heat, cold, isochronism and five positions. Will pass inspection on ALL RAILROADS.

ENGINEER STEVENSON of the Lackawanna, Conductor Mandaville of the Erie, Engineer Monk of the Erie and Conductor Landy of the Chicago and Northwestern are but four of the thousands of Railroad Men who keep to schedule on Hamilton time.

Wherever you find Railroad time inspection maintained, you'll find Hamiltons predominating; which is in itself a significant fact. It proves the Hamilton to be the favorite of Railroad Men who must have watches they can depend upon to tell true time.

Insist on owning a Hamilton. It is a watch built sturdy and strong, with timekeeping qualities that better the standards set for Railroad service. The Hamilton No. 992, here shown and described, is preferred by most Railroad Men. For other than time inspection service, ask to see the Hamilton movement No. 974. This model gives you Hamilton quality at a lower price.

We regret to report the death of Mrs. K. H. Stover, wife of our agent, who passed away on the afternoon of April 24.

Mrs. Stover had been in poor health for some years and recently underwent an operation at the Hoffman Hospital, from which she was apparently recovering.

About 10.00 a. m. on the morning of April 24, Mr. Stover was called home and found his wife had suffered from a paralytic stroke, from which she never recovered.

The funeral took place from her late home on St. Cloud Street, services being conducted by Rev. W. A. Wilt, United Brethren Church. Interment was in Queens Point Cemetery, Keyser.

Many beautiful floral tributes, including one from the personal office force of Mr. Stover, testified to the esteem in which Mrs. Stover was held in our community.

Our sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Our congratulations are extended to General Car Foreman G. P. Huffman, on his appointment as General Car Foreman, Baltimore Terminals. We wish him the best of luck in his new position.

Two more of our old employees, J. H. Deffibaugh and G. W. Stewart, have been rewarded for their long and faithful services by being placed on the retired list. We trust that they will be able to reap the benefits of a prolonged rest after their many years of service.

The accompanying photo is of Elinor Louise, age four, only child of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Kesner. "Teddy" is proud of the many accomplishments of his little one.

Our efficient boiler clerk states that she is not replenishing her wardrobe for the purpose of getting married; as when she wants to get married, any old costume will do. We believe you, Mary, and know that you will make good in a short time.

Ed Sirbaugh's pet slogan is "Do it with safety" and your friends afterwards will not have to "Say it with Flowers!"

D. V. Ault, machinist apprentice at this station, while chipping a brass bearing, had his goggles struck by a brass chip, breaking them. The precautions that employees at this station are taking by using goggles, when chipping, cutting rivets, etc., have been the means of saving a number of them from injury, or loss of sight, on many occasions. Their attention to this factor of safety cannot be brought to their attention more forcibly than the frequent exhibits of broken goggles that were worn by workmen when broken, and which are displayed on the various bulletin boards from time to time.

not let them run the engines? Suggested by cover of April Magazine! Our hat is off to Miss Spengler, Baltimore and Ohio Engineeress.

Trackman Emery Twigg has moved into his new bungalow. "Jerry" Setor says he is next.

Trackman Clarence Seeders and Miss Lillian G. Stewart, daughter of Tieman G. R. Stewart, were married in Cumberland, March 1.

Albert Holland has taken position vacated by A. F. Leonard, who recently resigned to accept a more remunerative position at Detroit.

Engineer George Taylor has quit Henery Ford. He's driving a "23" Chev. now.

Will Grove was appointed retortman recently to succeed B. F. Twigg, assigned other duties.

Tieman C. E. Blizzard found a house. He has moved into one of the dwellings on Springdale Farm.

Craneman C. M. Lewis is able to be at work again after an absence of over a month, account of serious illness. Glad you are able to be back, boy.

The surviving members of the old "Cross-Tie-gers" of "21" have heavy hearts these days. Their diamond was recently plowed up. However, the spark of life has not entirely died down and the boys are hoping to secure a diamond and blaze forth again. As an old fan we wish them success.

Smack your lips again, boy, over those delicious waffles served by the Ladies of the M. E. S. at the commissary dining room, April 3. When it comes to chicken and waffles, these ladies are "there."

Fish are bitin'. A list of the gang getting the old boats fixed up and the catches all ready made, includes several well known divisionites. Believe Engineer A. B. Taylor holds the belt at present. "A. B." is some fisherman.

Extra Gang Foreman and Mrs. I. N. Saville were recently presented with a nice rocker by plant employees.

Track Foreman A. W. and Craneman, C. M. Lewis have the sympathy of all our employees here in the loss of their father William Lewis, who completed his earthly existence and crossed to the Great Unknown on March 25.

From the requests that still come in for houses, sometimes we wish we could find a philanthropist who would build a dozen nice cottages or bungalows to sell or rent.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Forney, Somerset, Pa.

The releasing and piling of 77 car loads of cross ties by Plant employees on March 16 is a record worthy of mention. It was a herculean effort. Treatment was suspended, and engineers, retortmen, loaders, laborers and others joined in an effort to release an accumulation of loads. (NOTE: A carload of cross ties is not as easily unloaded as some things we know of.)

Our requests for the MAGAZINE continues to grow. In addition to station, tower and maintenance forces in this vicinity, we are supplying several train crews, in addition to the men it has been necessary to employ to handle the increasing tie receipts without delay to cars.

Our photograph this month we entitle "Cold and Hungry." (They are local winter and summer scenes.) To look at the one makes you shiver, while one glance at the other gives you an appetite, makes you hungry, doesn't it? No names are listed in the group, but those smiling faces will be quite familiar to many Cumberland Division and Romney Branch employees. To some who read at more distant points it may bring pleasant memories, and of interest to all.

Our congratulations to the winners of the Good Will Election! Our best wishes accompany them for a safe journey and success in their mission.

Connellsville Division

Correspondent, C. E. REYNOLDS

The accompanying photo is of the ten months old son of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Forney; the father is employed as storeroom helper at Somerset, Pa.

We regret to report the death of Charles E. Randall, who was 65 years old on February 24. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jesse Fleming, Sharon, Pa., April 13. Mr. Randall was a veteran Baltimore and Ohio engineer and had resided in South Pittsburgh Street, Connellsville, until recently when he and Mrs. Randall moved to Sharon. His widow and one daughter survive. Mr. Randall had a wide circle of friends on the Connellsville Division, and our deepest sympathy is extended to his family.

The second annual banquet of the board of directors of our Railroad Y. M. C. A., Connellsville, was held at the Pleasant Valley Country Club April 12, covers for 42 being laid. Members of the board, the city council, their wives and a few invited guests were present. A turkey dinner was served. Superintendent Brown was toastmaster.

Following the dinner, a talk was given by Chief of the Bureau of Welfare W. W. Wood. He spoke on "Good Fellowship Between the City of Connellsville and the Y. M. C. A." Mayor C. C. Mitchell and Attorney J. Kirk Renner, assistant city solicitor, were other speakers.

H. L. Cordrey, former division accountant, and Mrs. Cordrey, were in Connellsville to attend the Y. M. C. A. directors meeting. While here Harry visited the boys in the offices, greeting them with his hearty hand-shake. We were glad to see you Harry, wish you well, and hope you enjoyed your short sojourn in our city.

Employees of our division and their families, numbering in all about three hundred and fifty couples, were entertained on the night of April 11 at the State Armory, Connellsville, by Superintendent Brown and his staff. The affair was perfect in its appointments, not the slightest detail being overlooked in arranging for the comfort and enjoyment of the employees and their families. Old and young entered into the entertainments of the evening and a good time was had by all. The hall was effectively decorated for the occasion, a color scheme of pink and white prevailing; crepe paper was artistically draped about the room. Standing out prominently was a large banner, on which was inscribed "The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Connellsville Division Official Family Welcomes You." Music was furnished by Kiferle's orchestra.

The grand march, led by Superintendent and Mrs. Brown, took place at 8.30 p. m., after which dancing continued until shortly before midnight. An outstanding feature of the affair was a special dance for children only, the entire floor being turned over to the small guests. The dance was in charge of Superintendent Brown and about twenty children participated.

Guests from all parts of the division, including Rockwood, Meyersdale, Smithfield, Morgantown, Fairmont, Johnstown, Somerset and Cumberland were present. Included among the guests were members of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association.

Assistant Train Master Lowney, who has been ill for the past few weeks, is now able to be out. We are glad to see you "Jerry," and hope you will soon be feeling better than 100 per cent.

We are glad to report that Miss Sara Belle Anderson, stenographer to Freight Agent Whip, was able to return to her duties on April 12, after being absent for several months on account of illness.

Passenger Conductor Charles Boyd is now spending a few weeks in Jacksonville, Fla. Those were fine oranges he sent us!

We are sorry to report that Passenger Conductor J. W. Dixon is laid up with rheumatism. His many friends hope for his speedy recovery, and that he will soon be on the job with that kind salute "tickets, please."

We regret to report the recent death of Mrs. Mary Niland Kerrigan, 76 years old, at her home, 512 East Patterson Avenue, Connellsville, following a six weeks' illness. Mrs. Kerrigan is survived by the following children: Michael J., chief train dispatcher; Thomas H., Sacramento, Cal.; Joseph, Oakland City, Ind.; Edward, telegraph operator, Sand Patch; Matthew, engineer, Connellsville Division; and Miss Anna Kerrigan, at home. To the bereaved family, we extend our deepest sympathies.

Conductor T. R. Christy is now able to be about after being laid up several weeks account of illness. His many friends are glad to see him again.

The following announcement was made on March 26, Mrs. E. E. Coleman of Morrell Avenue, Greenwood, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Jeanette Ruth Coleman, to Charles V. Payne, chief clerk to Superintendent Brown. The ceremony was quietly solemnized, August 7, 1922, in the First Baptist Church, Youngstown, Ohio. Rev. Archibald, pastor, officiated. The wedding is one of much interest, Mr. and Mrs. Payne being one of the most widely and favorably known young couples of Connellsville. The bride attended Connellsville High School, and until recently was employed in a clerical position in the local Storekeeper's Office. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Payne, Meyersdale, Pa. CONGRATULATIONS!

Just a minute! The success of any undertaking is the result of cooperation on the part of all; so it is with the Baltimore and Ohio; therefore, through these lines, we ask your cooperation and we'll make this Railroad better. Be a booster.

Everyone is pleased with the continued increase in car mileage on the Connellsville Division; let's keep it going higher. STOP THAT LEAK!

Pittsburgh Division

Correspondents, EARL FAIRGRIEVE AND MARY BREEN

A number of changes have taken place recently in the Engineering Department. Assistant Engineer W. O. Nelson has left our service to accept a position with Jones & Laughlin Steel Company. He is succeeded by J. H. Mahr, Connellsville Division. Mr. Clopton has been transferred to Philadelphia and J. V. Daniels to Weston, W. Va. We wish each of them success in his new position.

The many friends of Teresa Kenney, formerly of the Car Record Office, extend her their sympathy in the recent loss of mother.

Miss Elinor O'Donnell, telephone operator, Pittsburgh, was taken from our midst on April 10. Elinor was a charming young lady and had made many friends during her service with the Baltimore and Ohio. Though she had been ill a long time, her death was a shock to all of us and we offer sincere sympathy to the members of the O'Donnell family.

Here are two gentlemen working in the "Stop That Leak" Campaign—they are Engineer C. E. Beltz and Fireman Van Buren. Trip report of Train No. 8, March 25, Pittsburgh to Cumberland, shows an "On Time" performance, arriving at Cumberland, with a fire similar to the blue print model, neither rake nor grate shaker having been used on the trip. Cleanliness was prevalent on this engine—5081—and performance as noted was that of a model engine crew.

April 13 marked the last day of Rose Gribbin Lindquist's service with this Company. Rose had been with us seventeen years and her daily good humor was a pleasant encounter, as she was one who reached us all with her merry "Hello" or "Baltimore and Ohio." She has resigned to take up the arduous task of keeping house—oh, how the rest of us envy her—and we can only wish her every happiness that goes with the job.

Supervisor Lalley and Dispatcher Dwyer have been on the sick list but here's hoping they will soon be back on the job.

Now that Springtime, with its lingering days of balmy sunshine, is about to come into its own, after a long and dreary winter, our thoughts turn to the awakening of Nature, garbed in her new Spring creation, and to the warbling of the birds as they bill and coo in their happiness, upon this scene, there appears that impish little cutie, Dan Cupid, whose prowess with the bow is known the world over. This little cut-up, who appears in our midst every once in a while, has apparently been active around Hazelwood Exchange, and it is rumored that one of our exchange operators has been badly wounded by one of his darts. We are told that she has a nice diamond ring which she wears on a certain finger, and that she is interested in love stories, hints on housekeeping, bargain sales, duplex apartments, and various other subjects which are usually the symptoms of one of Cupid's victims. Can you guess who it is if not, maybe we will let you in on the secret in our next issue.

It has been rumored about the Car Distributor's Office that Pittsburgh has three employees who are striving diligently to become aquatic stars. We are told their first attempt recently produced quite a tired feeling, which was natural, but girls, conscientious effort and devotion to the sport will soon produce results. We are not inclined to expose these bathing beauties at this time, but you can find them most every day indexing. Keep it up girls, and maybe some day you will make Annette Kellerman jealous of your "rep."

A carpenter foreman employed on Pittsburgh Division recently received two envelopes through the mail which were empty. Upon receipt of same, being of curious turn of mind, he wrote back to the division engineer inquiring what was in them, and the division engineer, being of an obliging nature, told him—"nothing." Much ado about nothing! Shades of Shakespeare!

Two things of vital interest to the good old Baltimore and Ohio—"Increased Car Mileage and "Stop That Leak." Your cooperation is solicited and your effort along this line will be a pleasing devotion to duty.

We are glad to see our messenger, Frank Elliott, better known as "RED," back on the job. He was injured in a coasting accident in December—Watch your step next time "RED," and watch where you coast.

Terminal General Foreman S. A. Irwin feels important these days, having purchased a new Ford coupe, and I know that there will be no excuse for his not being on the job on time in future. What did you do with that old relic of yours, Sam?

Master Mechanic C. E. McGann's brother, T. E. McGann, Jenkins, Kentucky, paid him a visit recently.

We feel that a recent ruling put out "Smoking Prohibited" in and around Company property is a good rule, but we do feel sorry for our Chief Clerk Bob Stock, for we don't know who enjoys a pipe any more than "Bob." We feel for you, "Bob" but we can't help you.

What are we doing to "STOP THAT LEAK?" All our employees should feel that every little saved is a little earned and there are many small leaks that can be stopped, which in time, would develop into something big. Feel that when you stop a leak for the Company, you are stopping it for yourself, and I am confident that if you go into it with this feeling, many a leak will be stopped. "STOP THAT LEAK."

Just three simple phrases from the Book of Books, but should each one of us take them to heart and "fulfill," or to use the word in another form, "fillful" our ministry in our various capacities according to the talent or gift given us, what wonders we could perform! I am just now thinking of the above in connection with the "STOP THAT LEAK" campaign, and also in connection with the movement to increase CAR MILES; the former should evolve itself into a "NEVERLEAK" policy and CAR MILES would become as plentiful as German Marks. Are we big enough? Ask yourself!

We had some excellent talks from our general manager, general superintendent and general superintendent transportation. The key note of all the talks, and in fact of all phases of railroad work, is that of Mr. Scheer when he stated that every man on the railroad could be worth FIVE CENTS MORE PER DAY than he is now worth. Mr. Curran laid special stress on the matter of increasing CAR MILES, while Mr. Scott dealt more particularly with matters pertaining to the West Virginia District.

taken to Parkersburg, and laid to rest on April 14. Mrs. Harrington's quiet and unassuming manner endeared her to all with whom she came in contact, and her death occasions much sorrow.

Answers to last month's "Puzzlers." (See March MAGAZINE.)

Mr. Brooke: The correspondent lied.

Mr. Severns: Not half of what I could have said.

Mr. Schide: Can't get near the office with the boat. Might get there too often with the Flivver.

Mr. Pickens: Can't answer because the question failed to specify the kind.

Miss Justus: Question out of order.

Miss Peg: What more can I do?

Mr. Kelly: Either way—It satisfies.

Miss Feagans: Oh I don't know.

Miss Tivey: Not very much, but I'm learning.

Mr. McOsker: Alright—Brig Young was more a father than I am, though.

Mr. Lynch: Why not ask the girls why they paint around their "window's".

Mr. Staples: The job don't matter, but I would like to be there.

Mr. Marsh: Unprintable.

Miss Hayden: I can't without recalling unpleasant memories.

Expressions of regret are heard all over the division on account of the sad accident to Brakeman F. O. Goodwin, who was killed while switching at Buckhannon on the night of April 12. His family has the sympathy of everyone.

On April 3, a Safety rally and entertainment under the auspices of our Y. M. C. A. and Shops, was held at Gassaway in the High School auditorium. The attendance was good; about five hundred employes, members of their families and friends being present. Mr. E. H. Goelz, secretary, Y. M. C. A. Gassaway, was chairman of the meeting, and he is to be commended for the successful manner in which the affair was conducted. Superintendent Trapnell was present and gave an excellent talk. Safety Agent Allison was on the program and talked on the subject of Safety. Following the meeting, a dance was held at a local hall in Gassaway, this being also well attended.

H. E. Brown, genial ticket agent at Weston, who entered suit against the County Court sometime back to have the Polk Creek Bridge made wider, has dismissed his suit. He, himself, is unable to state just why this unusual action was taken but claims his car will clear both sides of bridge nicely this Spring.

Conductor P. J. Condry spent a well deserved vacation at Hot Springs, Ark. We are glad to note that Mrs. J. P. Reid, wife of yard conductor, is improving after her recent illness.

Engineer W. B. Amos and Fireman B. T. Boyd, who have been ill for sometime, are again at work.

We often become confused by the concentrated gaze of Orville Crawford, clerk in Car Distributor's Office. He seems to have a spot located on the wall that is in direct line with his desk and a certain point in "Old Virginia." We no longer wonder at the mysterious attractions the North Pole holds for the Magnet, nor the Flame for the Moth.

We are glad to see Miss Madeline Hayden at her desk in Superintendent's Office, after an absence of several days. She claims to have left the back door open, and in flew "Enza."

At the time of this writing, our superintendent is confined to his home account of an attack of influenza, having been absent from his office several days. We are hoping he will have a speedy recovery.

Sorry to learn of the death of Mrs. O. L. Matthew, wife of fireman. We extend our sympathy to him.

Engineer A. C. Whitecotton and family have returned after spending some time in Plant City, Florida.

Fireman J. N. McQueen and a young lady at Richwood, West Virginia, were recently married. Congratulations!

Brakeman M. A. Payne, who was injured in a derailment last June, is improving and expects to be at work within a month or two.

Brakeman E. B. McCord was recently operated on for appendicitis.

Wheeling Division

Correspondent, MARIE SLATTERICK

Cupid has again been busy in our midst. This time the victim is H. L. Blackwell, dispatcher on the Short Line, who on February 14, was wedded to Miss Daisy DeMichele of Wheeling. Congratulations, "Blackie" and Mrs. "Blackie."

Our affable rodmen on the Engineering Corps have both been transferred; J. H. Lindsay to Connellsville and John Wise to Baltimore. While we wish them both the best of luck, doggone it, we'll surely miss 'em. Such is life in a big city like Wheeling!!

Talking about a big city, here's a good one: Anthony (Red) Heimiller, clerk in the Motive Power Department at Wheeling, escorted a young lady home from a dance the other evening. All through the evening he had been gathering up enough nerve to ask her permission to do so, for you see he "fell" for her strong. She certainly was a wonderful girl. But imagine his surprise when taking her home to discover she lived right next door to his abode!! So the joke is not so much on "Red" as it is on those who call Wheeling a small "town." When we don't even know our next door neighbors especially those of the opposite sex, you might even call such a city a metropolis!!

Leo Fordyce, yard clerk, Benwood Shop, possesses wonderful powers of description. On being asked to advise the size of coke dust in a car he was consigning, he said it was "big enough to get in your eye."

Another promotion is that of Carl Knoke, better known as "Gus" who has been promoted to Mr. Gill's office, Baltimore. Best wishes!

One whose face is familiar to us and whom we have missed for a long, long time, is with us again. It is none other than Miss Helen Havercamp, who was furloughed some time ago but is back at the Freight House at Wheeling. Helen is popular with all of us and we make haste to welcome her.

J. O. McBride, formerly of the Storeroom at Benwood, has accepted a position as shop material clerk in the Division Accountant's Office at Wheeling.

We regret to report the death of the mother of A. N. Peters, division operator.

Miss Elsie Manion

Mr. Peters was called to Virginia account of her illness and while he was there on April 5, the Angel of Death paid his visit. Our sincerest sympathies are extended.

Due to the illness of our correspondent at Benwood, J. L. Cusack, we have no notes for this issue from that quarter. John says he has a bad cold, but we think he got too much "fresh country air" when he and Bill Daugherty, Benwood Shop, visited friends at Glen Easton, W. Va., some time ago.

Accompanying is photograph of the late Henry Pflug, who died on March 10 at Benwood, after an illness of one year. Mr. Pflug was an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company at Benwood Shop, for over twenty-five years and for some time past has been on a pension. He was a private in the German armies in the Franco-Prussian War in 1871 and was one of three survivors of an entire company at the Battle of Gravelette, near Paris.

The accompanying picture is a good likeness of Miss Elsie Manion, stenographer in the Division Engineer's Office at Wheeling. Elsie's sunny disposition and willing manner has gained her many friends. She was formerly employed in the Division Storekeeper's Office at Benwood, W. Va., where she likewise gained many admirers.

Ohio River Sub-Division

Correspondent, CHARLOTTE MARLOWE

At the regular meeting of Sharon Lodge, I. O. O. F., held April 6, our accommodating time and tonnage clerk, T. J. Ball, was presented with a beautiful Veteran's pin, signifying 35 years membership and loyalty. The presentation was made by Past Grand Master William T. Stephenson, who said in part, "The night was never too dark or stormy, nor the way too rough, for Mr. Ball to visit the sick, or lend a helping hand." A beautiful tribute, and one well merited. We are proud of you, Tom.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Stocking have returned from Ogdensburg, N. Y., where they were called by the critical illness of the former's brother.

The accompanying photograph is of Conductor C. H. Murray and his Train Baggage Master A. E. Anderson, the handsome gentleman on the left. Conductor Murray entered the service in 1892 as a brakeman, was promoted to conductor in 1900, having 31 years continuous service. Train Baggage Master Anderson rounded out 29 years continuous service on March 13. These two are pals, having worked together for twelve years on the accommodation between Parkersburg and Spencer, W. Va. Between trains they can be seen any day in Parkersburg strolling about the city arm in arm, as though they had'n't seen each other for years. Baggage Master Anderson proudly proclaims that he is the father of twelve children, while Conductor Murray confesses to three. Not a bad record any way you take it.

On May 1, the office employees of the Freight House, honored Miss "Margie" Lasure, whose marriage to Mr. Charles Matheney will occur on June 6. Miss Lasure was presented with a handsome gift from the employees, through Agent F. A. Carpenter, and gracefully voiced her thanks. A varied and delightful lunch was served as follows:

F. A. Carpenter—Sunkist Frog Fur.
J. K. Cromley—King Tut's Adenoids, Calthead Sauce.

Charlotte Marlowe—Pickled Canary Hoofs.

F. B. Stocking—Alligator Eyelids, toasted.
W. M. Duff—School Bonds Smothered with Belpre Sentiment.

MARGIE LASURE—DOVE'S COOS WITH QUARRELS ON THE SIDE.

Adam Loebig—Roast Leg of Owl, Hoot Gravy.

Gardner Duncan—Giraffe Neck with High Dumplings.

Jas. Durkin—Young Mouse Ears on Holy Smoke.

C. C. Phillips—Sharks' Ankles Parboiled in Near Beer.

Bud Beck—Rats' Breast en Casserole.

Mary Keenan—Young Duck's eyes in Crystal Springs Water.

T. J. Ball—Snakes Hips with Oyster Shells.

Donald Robertson—Mellon's Baby Food, Heated.

Walker Hamilton—Mules Ears Stuffed with Cowslips.

Jno. Maloney—Planked Fish Feet.

Grandpa Whittier—Young Goat's Milk on Icicles.

George McDiffitt—Snake Gizzards Scrambled with Lobster Brains.

Janice Thorn—Old Honey Comb Stuffed with Bees' Knees.

E. W. Miller—Cat's Knuckles Smothered with Insect Powder.

Virginia Tredway—Broiled young Tree Toad, Mashed Potatoes.

Bud Wiggins—Blackberry Briers with Chigger Freckles.

The stork has been gracious to Freight House employees, leaving a tiny girl at the home of Transfer Clerk and Mrs. H. L. Andrews, April 3, who has been named Rae Morrison Andrews, and a young trucker at the home of Trucker and Mrs. C. F. Snider, on April 9, name Harry Virgil.

We congratulate the parents, and hope these two youngsters grow up to be worthy children of their illustrious forebears.

Death has invaded two of the homes of Freight House employees. After several months of suffering Mrs. Catherine Tredway age 72, grandmother of Miss Virginia Tredway, waybill clerk passed away at her home on Tenth Street, April 9. On April 15, Thomas B. Bush, father of E. H. Bush, loader, died at his home at Belpre. Our sympathies are extended to the bereaved families.

* The Low Yard force looks a little different now. H. L. Hickman is calling in the High Yards, Steve Johnson is working the 8.00 a. m. yard turn, while "Dink" Burris is shifting them on the 11.00 p. m. turn. G. A. Barnett has been assigned to the scale office position and Jerry Hamilton will go to the High Yards.

J. J. Murphy who has been off duty with an injured arm, is improving.

"Everett True" Johnson, our benevolent yard master, has returned to duty after a few days absence caused by a sore foot.

It has been estimated that if all the language which "Coon-dog" and "Pete" threw at each other across the partition in the Caller's Office was printed in one book, it would make a big one.

"Vic" Springer, better known as the "Railroad Romeo" or "Sheik of the Scales," is thinking of retiring from railroad work to become a gentleman farmer. 'Sno use, girls—he's married.

"Joe" Ross, our hard working air inspector, has at last admitted that there is too much work for one man, and is thinking of requesting an assistant. (That distant howl comes from Frank Taylor.)

If a certain well built gentleman in the Low Yards does not cease his purloining of newspapers, one of our younger set has voiced his intention of jarring him loose from the rest of his hair.

Western Lines

Office of General Manager

Correspondent, THOMAS J. MURPHY

Effective April 15, J. B. Carothers returns to the Ohio Division as Superintendent, succeeding A. A. Iams, transferred.

minently successful in various operating positions, Mr. Carothers carries to the division an assurance of retaining the high standard it has established on the Western Lines.

Walter K. Nee is a radio enthusiast but has not achieved all the results so ably set forth in the advertisements. As the set was purchased from a dealer who also handles Ford accessories, Walter is suspicious that some of his trouble may be due to a substitution of parts.

If the salesmen knew their stuff the assertion is ventured that H. A. Iuler knows more about the different makes of automobiles than anyone else in the building. It is rumored that a co-worker, accused of owning a cheap machine, tipped off Henry as a prospective purchaser to every vendor of machines in the city. Finally, in desperation, Henry had to buy in order to shake them off.

Our attention has been called to the blissful look that adorns the fair features of one of our female clerks, particularly on Monday and Thursday mornings. If the correspondent were a female it might be possible to secure the rest of the story.

With an attendance taxing the capacity of the hall, the Cincinnati Veterans' Association held their quarterly meeting at the Grand Hotel, April 12. After the transaction of routine business and report by Delegate H. S. Howden, the meeting was enjoyably entertained by an address from Chief of Welfare W. W. Wood. The keen interest displayed in the workings of the organization indicates that it will only be a short time until monthly meetings will be a necessity.

The R. N. Begien Branch, Ladies' Auxiliary, continues to thrive and bids fair to outrank in numbers the male organization.

Conductor Murray and Paggageman Anderson

Office of Superintendent of Transportation

G. F. Kriedler, the latest addition to our stenographic force, comes with the highest recommendations from our Tariff Department. His entry to our ranks is made possible by the resignation of Robert P. Burns, who retires from railroad life to engage in the coal business.

A recent photograph of Marvin Wilhelm, son of Chief Car Distributor G. M. Wilhelm, is reproduced in this issue. That he is the pride and joy of his "Dad" is putting it mildly. As is the case with every proud father, George keeps the office, and particularly the chief clerk, posted on the "boy's" progress. If Marvin displays the same energy and ability as his father a successful future is predicted.

This office has some stars of a peculiar type—they shine when it rains—extra umbrellas held at office to escort young ladies to lunch or home makes them shine with the fair sex.

It is said on good authority that Margaret Von Blon, whose picture appears in this issue, has already shown signs of marked histrionic ability. "Peggy" is the daughter of Chief Statistician Oscar H. Von Blon and is just as proud of her "Dad" as he is of his talented daughter.

The correspondent feels aggrieved that the conspirators who wrote the article accompanying his picture in the April issue did not take him into their confidence; he would have been glad to have put them next to a lot of good things they might have said and didn't. If the editor ever decides to restrict the entire MAGAZINE to one article said correspondent will mention a few of the best of his good points. (Just name the time, Mr. Murphy—we would enjoy a month's vacation! Ed.)

Office of General Superintendent

The reason Gertrude Wehage was not elected as the second "Good Will" representative was because all those voting did not have the pleasure of her acquaintance.

Office of Superintendent Motive Power

Chief Clerk H. E. Duncan, in his long service, has accumulated a host of friends among his co-workers. The few changes occurring in his office force attest his fair dealing and the respondent loyalty of satisfied employees. The universal verdict is that Harry is a prince.

By showing the boys how to shoot pool, Dewey Smoot manages to pick up his lunch money and enough on the side for cigarettes and candy. As some of the pupils show no aptitude Dewey seems to gave a pretty good thing of it.

Telephone Exchange

Occasional dealings with other private branch exchanges supply any proof that may be needed to defend the boast that the Baltimore and Ohio conducts the most efficient and courteous exchange of any in the city. The untiring efforts of "Tiny" and her crew to satisfy the public as well as the employees, and the pleasant manner in which it is done, deserve the highest commendation.

Office of Engineer Maintenance of Way

Cost Accountant W. J. Spaul, submits the following biography of Frank A. Sinnott, assistant chief clerk, who, on April 1, resigned to accept an executive position with the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., Cincinnati. Mr. Sinnott was born in 1883, and spent the first twenty-two years of his life on a farm. On Nov. 6, 1905, when "farm life became too quiet and simple" he sought other fields of endeavor and entered service of the Baltimore and Ohio as a laborer in Shops yard; within a few weeks he was promoted to machinist helper, which position he retained for nearly a year.

Feeling the need of a commercial education, he resigned and entered business college; after mastering stenography he re-entered Baltimore and Ohio service as stenographer in the Stores Department and within a year was transferred to the Office of Division Engineer; in 1908 he was transferred to the office of Chief Engineer at Cincinnati and within a year was promoted to secretary to Mr. Stimson, which position he retained under H. B. Dick; in 1913 he was advanced to assistant chief clerk and when the reorganization took place in July of that year he was appointed chief clerk. In a further reorganization in 1918 he was transferred to Cleveland as chief clerk to district engineer Maintenance of Way of the Northwest District; when this office was discontinued he returned to Cincinnati as chief accountant in the Office of the Chief Engineer, and was later appointed assistant chief clerk which position he retained until his resignation.

Frank, as he was affectionately known to all of his associates, was a tireless worker; always good natured, ready at all times to lend his assistance to any one, loyal to the Baltimore and Ohio and to his friends.

As a token of esteem his fellow employees presented him with a handsome walrus brief case, the presentation speech being made by John J. Kolker, who conveyed the best wishes of his friends and associates. While we regret to lose Frank, we rejoice in his selection for such an important position as that he is just entering. Mr. Sinnott has a charming family, consisting of a wife and two daughters. Good luck to you, Frank!

Incident to the resignation of F. A. Sinnott promotions of C. O. Medert, E. C. Yokum and F. G. Dickman to the positions of assistant chief clerk, accountant and File clerk, have been announced.

Cincinnati Terminals

Correspondent, JOSEPH BEEL

Mr. Galloway's Ivorydale shops are showing some speed these days. Their record for March is one than can be shown proudly to all concerned. Seventeen engines, including five class 2 repairs, were turned out for March. A record with which no shop can compare on Western Lines. All records were smashed when Engine 2915 was placed in shop on March 7 and made mileage on March 10; this engine received class 4 repairs, all flues, tires turned, new shoes and wedges, etc. Some speed! Due credit is given A. E. McMillan, master mechanic, E. T. Haas, superintendent shops, F. E. Liebetau, general foreman and J. R. Zureick, general boiler freman and their assistants for the efficient handling of the above number of engines.

The accompanying photograph is of Joseph Casserly, recently promoted to erecting shop foreman. Mr. Casserly has been in the employe of the Baltimore and Ohio at Ivorydale shops for several years and for efficiency in handling his work, has earned this promotion. Mr. Casserly was one of the foremen who was instrumental in breaking Ivorydale's out-put record for the month of March. "More power to you, 'Joe!'"

We also present photograph of Machine Shop Foreman George Donnelly, Erecting Shop Foreman N. Green and newly promoted Erecting Foreman Joseph Casserly. When these three men get together, real team work is the result.

A third photograph is that of Machinist and Electric Welder D. Scully and R. Haggerty; in the center is their assistant J. Weisenberger, Ivorydale shops.

The wife of Electrician Foreman A. R. Buchner presented him with a baby girl and he is all smiles and was so happy he forgot all about passing the cigars.

Ivorydale shop employes extend their sympathy to J. McKenna, machinist, who recently lost his father, H. McKenna, who was employed at Ivorydale for several years. Also to the family of Thomas Doran, painter, who died suddenly.

Spring has come. But, instead of the thoughts of the young men at Ivorydale turning lightly to love, their thoughts are concentrated on Ford and Chevrolet coupes and sedans.

One of our young machinists, A. Budde, has decided to set forth on the sea of matrimony. We hope that he will escape all the rocks and rough places and that he and his wife will spend many happy years together.

We also welcome E. F. Bucher, newly appointed blacksmith foreman at Ivorydale.

We understand that a certain young lady at Northside is sporting a sparkler on her left hand. We will hear the "gimme, let me have, have you got," for some time to come, eh, Everly.

Pullmanitis

By H. H. Supt's Office

Forth we fare quite bright and gay,
To St. Louis, far away,
Board the train, we, one and all,
Then into a scrape do fall.

Lowers had we, eight, nine, ten,
But who could then foresee that when,
Down the aisle we came with vim,
Our glad spirits would soon be dim.

For in Number seven, lo,
Is a lady full of woe,
Or should we just call it wrath,
Or bad temper which she hath?

For when the young ladies gay,
Down the aisle trip our light way,
This old Miss in number seven,
Forthwith wished us all in heaven.

So into our berths we sneak,
But now and then look out and peek;
And though noise we must not make,
Glimpses of our pals we take.

Homeward, tired, now we start,
All of us with a heavy heart,
For though on this morn we're glad,
Now we feel a little sad.

Lowers have we, one, two and three,
And no old girl do we see,
But our conductor, (it is sad)
"Pulled a bone" that make us mad.

For to a man, why, he did sell,
One of these berths, which one we'll tell,
It was, indeed, our number two,
And 'foresaid man was vamped by Sue.

So to another car he did take,
Himself, and in his wake,
Did leave a maiden filled with dreams,
Of him. Or so to us, it seems.

Now home are we again, O, dear!
We're late for work, we sure do fear,
Down goes our breakfast quick as wink,
Back to the office do we slink.

Open our desks, begin our work,
Which never we've been known to shirk,
And while this story we do tell,
Our thoughts on St. Louis do dwell.

The "Railroad Game"

By J. F. Auberger

Let me give you my "slant" on the "Railroad Game."

It has proved to many the road to fame,
The training you get, if taken to mind,
Will help you accomplish the tasks that you find.

You cannot deny if you give it your best
That it certainly gives to a man a real test;
So why "pass the buck" when there's so much to gain

In making your way in the "Railroad Game?"

The game is like building a monstrous wheel,
One spoke is just you. So please try to feel,
The need of your work, so give it attention

To keep the whole wheel in good running condition.

Remember you're one of the spokes in this wheel

Do not slight your work in order to steal,
A few moments time for your pleasures and fun.

If all should do this, how could the wheel run?

Combining our efforts, our whole aggregation,

Will make of our road the BEST one in the nation,

And when your time comes to give up your tasks,

You can say "It's my WHEEL," regardless who asks.

Car Record Clerk Mabel Schatz, is confined to her home, account of illness. She is, however, improving, and we hope will soon be able to be with us again.

Miss Lorraine McNally was transferred from Local Car Record Office to Superintendent's Office temporarily, account Miss Helene Herron on leave. Glad to have you with us, Lorraine.

Akron Division

Correspondent, J. A. JACKSON

Don't forget that the "STOP THAT LEAK CAMPAIGN" is still on in full blast, and will continue every day in 1923. Have YOU done anything yet to plug up a leak in your department?

There was much rejoicing on the Akron Division, when announcement was made of the promotion of Superintendent D. F. Stevens to be General Superintendent, Northwest District on April 15. During his four years of service as superintendent of the old New Castle, and later the Consolidated Akron Division, Mr. Stevens has endeared himself to every employe under his jurisdiction, and won co-operation in all departments.

The good wishes of our seven thousand employes go with him to his new post.

R. B. Mann, formerly superintendent, Toledo Division, succeeds D. F. Stevens as superintendent, Akron Division. Mr. Mann is not a stranger to our employes, as he is personally known to many of the staff officers, and they, with the employes, wish him good luck, good health and success in his new duties.

Car Distributor George Miles and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a son who has been named Richard George. Real "El Versos" were passed out in honor of the new arrival.

George R. Coon, chief clerk to master mechanic, has taken up his new duties as work checker at Lorain, Ohio, and is succeeded by Thomas Wagoner as chief clerk. Our best wishes go with them in their new positions.

"Tommy" Williams, clerk in Division Accountant's Office, has at last realized the ambition of his young life. He saw his first "Big League" base ball game. He went to Cleveland recently and saw the TIGERS getting mauled by the INDIANS. He took his old side kick "Jimmie" Geddis along with him, and "Jimmie" tells us he did not see much of the game, as "Tommy" kept him busy asking questions, and wondering when the real Tigers and Indians would show up. There were lots of real Indians but no TIGERS.

Relief Agent, A. F. Alexander has completely recovered from a severe illness, which confined him to his bed for four weeks. His many friends are glad to see his smiling face again.

Miss Bertha Hall has accepted the position of stenographer in the Master Mechanic's Office, and is getting along well in her new position. The nice part of it is, she buys our favorite eandy.

Our Pictures

Curtis Milton, age 4, and Dorothy Lou, age 2, who make the home of Train Dispatcher G. H. (Judd) Sarff happy in Akron, O., are seen in the accompanying "snap."

The accompanying picture shows an old time wood burner locomotive at Gainesville, Florida, which is still doing duty on the J. & T. R. R. Engineer F. H. Willard, our division, is seen standing alongside. Picture was taken while he was visiting in Florida recently. The train and engine crew consisted of a white engineer and conductor, while the fireman and two brakemen were colored men. Engineer Willard enjoyed the visit to the sunny clime much, and has returned to his duties again.

Lorain, Ohio

Stores Department, Time Clerk H. B. Mackey has taken up permanent quarters in the Division Accountant's Office as motive power timekeeper. Sorry to see you leave, Harry.

The Stores Department at Lorain are not quite as efficient in their work here of late. They used to own a victrola but Storekeeper Rothgery was ordered to ship it to Mt. Clare. Now "Tony" and "Thelma" cannot keep time with the music and they run out of "pep" before the day is over.

We now have a new general round house foreman. General Foreman J. A. Subjeck has entered the grocery business in Lorain and has left the service of the Company. K. E. Floeter, Willard, Ohio, has been appointed as his successor. Welcome, Mr. Floeter.

Everything is lined up at Lorain for the Lake season. General Yard Master McDermott has his crews lined up and Dock Foreman Tayler has his men ready to make a great drive for supremacy and leadership in number of cars dumped on the Great Lakes.

Crew Dispatcher P. Virtue is going to purchase a new Willys-Knight car. Some class to Paul. Girls, he is single and good looking.

Miss Anna Bohoric, formerly of the Agent's Office is at the present stenographer, Car Department, reporting to car Foreman Hott. Glad to see you back, Anna.

The Yard Department is again on duty. Chief Clerk Wallace has returned from Philadelphia where he spent a week and Stenographer Miss B. Lechner has returned from a visit to Chicago. Both report having had a good time.

There was a large attendance as the Veterans know what kind of a time they can expect when the ladies entertain. Refreshments were served and every one had a delightful time.

All Veterans' wives who are not members of the Auxiliary should at once enroll as the present organization is composed of ladies who are putting the right spirit into the order and have made a purely social organization of it. By their entertainments they are getting better acquainted and their meetings are looked forward to with pleasure. Mail or hand your name to Mrs.

Baltimore and Ohio Defeats Pennsylvania and Wins City League Championship

The Baltimore and Ohio Basketball Team of New Castle won the championship of the City League on April 2, on the Y. M. C. A. floor, by defeating the Pennsylvania Railroad team and winning the Silver Loving Cup, in a game that was featured by the sensational field goal shooting of the "champeens," especially in the first half, when thirteen goals were dropped through the hoops.

The guarding of the "Bandos" was a stone wall to the Pennsy Quintet. Only four field goals were eaged during forty minutes of play by Coen's Basketeers.

Andrews and Suber were the stars for the Bandos, the former eaging 6 and the latter 5. It was the field goal shooting of these players that brought VICTORY to the Bandos, 38 to 25. Colalucia, Dennison and Coen were the best players for the losers.

Summary of the Game:

BANDOS	PENN R. R.
Burnett	F Colaluca
Andrew	F Stritmater
Suber	C Coen (Captain)
Buckingham (Captain)	G Pence
Weiss	G Dennison

Subs: Jerry for Coen. Coen for Pence.
Field goals: Andrews 6, Suber 5, Burnett 1, Weiss 2, Buckingham 1, Colacula 1, Stritmater 1, Pence 1, Jerry 1.

Fouls: Buckingham 8 out of 19, Coen 17 out of 25.

Referee: Ziggy Kahn, Pittsburgh.

Cecil R. Gordon, former clerk in Agent Viehdorfer's office at Girard, has accepted position of chief clerk to terminal train master, vice Henry A. Huckaba, who has joined the ranks of the American Railway Association.

Miss Julia V. Quinn has accepted position as secretary to Train Master Dorsey and Road Foreman of Engines Sample, vice Ralph Mc Williams, who is now with the Grasselli Chemical Company, Hillsville. Miss Agnes L. Barnes has returned from Chicago to take position vacated by Miss Quinn. Miss Barnes held the position she is now occupying two years ago, when she resigned to go to Chicago.

Yard Master Harry L. Evans has been promoted to day general yard master, and Ray S. Muder to night general yard master. Harry had quite a time for the first few days, not being able to see in daylight as he would send the crews in for "supper" every few minutes.

Interchange Clerk Frank Stevenson, is now running Jitney service (Ford Sedan) between New Castle and New Castle Junction, and Yardmaster Jimmie Kane is trying to see how soon he can ruin his brand new "Chevy Coupe" by fast driving.

Correspondent, W. E. BRUGH, Brakeman

The air car made its annual trip to Massillon recently, and many of our employes were given some pointers in the art of handling air. Needless to say, some of them did not need many pointers, while others found out that they did not know much about it.

Clerk to Train Master and Mrs. Jesse Lewis spent two weeks at their former home, near Winchester, Va.

Improvements are being made on the track on the C. L. & W. New rail is being laid and gravel ballast is being unloaded, making a good road bed for the heavy coal trains.

We are a little late in reporting that Conductor John W. Veitch has been a victim of "Cupid's arrow." A young lady from Canton, Ohio, was the bride. They are making their home in Massillon. Congratulations, John!

Brakeman W. E. Brugh has returned to work, after being confined to his home for two weeks, with a sprained ankle. "Watch your step, 'Bill.'"

Engineer "Little Dutch" Himmel, made his first trip as a passenger engineer recently, running the second engine on No. 48, from Massillon to Cleveland. Money couldn't buy "Herbie" that morning.

Agent W. P. Burrell, Freeport, has returned to duty after being off for several weeks.

Thomas Walters, well known conductor, passed away on April 12, after a lingering illness. Mr. Walters has been employed by the Baltimore and Ohio for thirty-two years, most of that period being spent in the service as a freight conductor. We extend to the widow, brothers and sisters, our sympathy.

The electing of a second candidate to accompany Miss Spengler to France created some excitement on our division because of the fact that we had Miss Eva Winters as our candidate in the field of 49. It was natural for the division to stand by its candidate, which they did nobly.

Miss. Winters received an overwhelming majority; no other candidate had any chance on the division.

Konrad Klaus, born April 12, 1864 passed away March 31, after an illness of several months. Mr. Klaus entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio March 29, 1887 as helper; was made passenger car inspector on January 13, 1908, and held that position until a few months before his death. He was a reliable man, well liked by all who came in contact with him daily around the passenger station at Newark, and he will be missed by his fellow workmen as well as a host of freinds. We extend to those who survive, our heartfelt sympathy.

David Laughery, passenger engineer, retired, who has been on the pension since May 15, 1917, passed away April 1. Mr. Laughery entered the service at Sonora, Ohio, as section hand on July 6, 1869, was made locomotive fireman on December 23, 1873, and promoted to locomotive engineer in November 1875. Brother Laughery was a familiar figure among locomotive engineers both at Newark and at Benwood, as he was assigned to passenger turn between these stations. We extend our sympathy to his survivors.

Tommie Faulds, Maintenance of Way Department has returned to work after a three weeks illness.

Charley Budd, the smiling secretary to division accountant, recently sent his beloved wife to Cincinnati. After Mrs. Budd had been gone for a week, Charley weakened, and packing his grip with 10 packages of "Honeymoon" tobacco, took the first train to Cincinnati. Don't know why Charley took the "Honeymoon" tobacco, unless he has forgotten just how long he has been married. Chief Clerk Rupp seems to have more endurance, as he has been batching for three weeks, and says that he still enjoys his own cooking.

"Jack Lloyd," or as he is better known, John Hiskey, has returned after being away two months account of illness. John spent most of his time in Chicago, taking in the sights, which, in all probability, were too much for him, as he is now wearing a pair of Harold Lloyd glasses.

Division Accountant, James Johnston, is becoming particular whom he associates with, as a few days ago, we noticed that he and Division Engineer Carver had a confidential conversation in low tone. Maybe it's because Jim has the long sought for private office!

Through an unavoidable oversight we forgot to mention the fact that Bernard Wells is the proud daddy of a baby girl, who now boasts the age of about 2 months. It keeps the boys busy smoking cigars on the proud daddies, but we are still hoping for more smokes.

Clarence Marple has been transferred from the Wheeling offices to the Motive Power Department at Newark. He seems to know something of bowling (?).

The employees of the entire division, as well as the citizens of Newark, are proud of the new coaches of the fifty two hundred series that have been sent here for passenger service. Quite an account of them was printed in the daily papers recently.

Although we regret that the Newark Division candidate, Miss Eva Winters, was not the winner of the proposed trip to France, we give our full support to the lucky winners, and wish them "bon voyage".

Train Master Broughton and Agent Baldwin recently spent two days at Baltimore attending a special meeting.

Conductor H. Thomas surely has a Ford "4" with a kick in it. In trying to crank "Henry" Yard Clerk Wurdaek was kicked, breaking his arm. Wurdaek says Henry surely has some wallop.

With regret we announce the death of Miss Campbell, sister of Operator Charles Strope, who died at her home near Washington C. H. on March 10. Our sympathy is extended to the family.

RASTUS: I has, Perffessor.

PROFESSOR: What is it?

RASTUS: Thirty days.

Glad to see our old friend John Murphy, assistant yard master back on the job after being absent seven weeks account of illness.

Clerk Van Tilburg, freight house, is now with us filling temporary vacancy as yard clerk.

The Baltimore and Ohio Bowling team has closed its season finishing in third, place in the City Railroad League. Out of 84 games bowled our team won 50, finishing only six games from first place. It was quite a race.

Night Round House Foreman Jenkins tried to induce Night Yard Master Smith to enter the contest recently held by the Knickerbocker Theater. The prize was a $10.00 pair of shoes for the person attending their show with the largest feet. Jenkins claims Smith would win the prize "in a walk."

We understand our employees are organizing a ball team for the season and are contemplating entering the City Railroad League, composed of railroad teams of the city. Any employee on the division who wishes to join the team can do so by getting in touch with H. C. Burton, clerk, round house, or P. V. Cook, car inspector.

Car Inspector, W. H. Bayse has a car for sale. He states that for a quick cash sale he will sell it for $50.00, or on 12 months time at the rate of $2.00 down and $5.00 monthly payments.

Why is it our telephone line between the yard office and the H. V. exchange is so busy each day? Ask Yard Master Hukill, he knows. Bill says "that's what I like about her."

Had you noticed Brakeman "Puss" Rytenton's new boy scout hat. He resembles Major Hoople greatly.

Operator Floyd has bid in third trick at Outville, Operator Moos having taken the second trick.

Harry Kale, our popular Freight House foreman, is having a time trying to get rid of the freight that seems to accumulate no matter how many cars he has loaded. Harry says he unloads and loads more freight than any one on the Newark Division.

we had them but they are still scarce and we are doing the best we can to supply every one. Maybe the time will come when we will have a reserve supply to fall back on, but at present the outlook is not very promising. Keep the cars moving, boys!

A. R. Bird is somewhat of a joker, the other day he came in and said the rain during the last few days had made the ground somewhat muddy along the tracks and if a car ever left the rails it would sink up to the light weight of the car. Now, we believe the car would sink in the mud a little way but as to sinking to the light weight, well, ask Bird.

George B. Turner, third trick conductor, says that the steel plant is growing larger. George says the amount of cars they handle out there is enough to make up a train without drawing on the yard for help. We are glad to report a nice business from the steel plant and trust that it will continue.

Charley Richards, second trick operator at North Siding tower, says if it ever quits raining he will take the car out for a spin.

George Sellers, ticket agent, Mansfield, reports that the passenger business is brisk as ever and that with the summer months coming, the excursions will soon be at hand and a material increase will be noticeable.

Stop That Leak!

A good deal has been said pro and con regarding the Stop That Leak campaign. We suggest that in every office, clerks who have anything to do with the handling of envelopes and other office supplies be careful in using them in order to avoid waste, and wherever possible save paper, envelopes, pencils, etc. Waste is often caused by using good paper for figuring extensions and totaling reports, that could be handled on scrap paper. It seems to me that if every employe would handle his work as if he were part owner of the Railroad, millions of dollars could and would be saved each year. Let's put our shoulder to the wheel and strive to Stop The Leak whenever we have a chance to do so.

"Eddie" Fisher, yard check clerk is still on the job and says that whatever is needed to check cars he has it. We remind him of the time he checked a gondola loaded with apples for the Central Fruit Co. Of course it was an error but "Eddie" says it was a put up job. How about it, "Eddie?"

H. F. Wentz, train rider, Newark Division, has been ill with the old fashioned Grippe. Harry says it leaves you "all in" for several weeks. The writer can agree with him as he had it.

The Radio bugs at Mansfield are still listening in and getting all they can from the surrounding cities. The writer often wonders if the time will come when each office will have one installed and whenever the superintendent wants an order issued to various station along his division all he will have to do is to send out the call for that particular station and give instructions personally. However we are always glad to hear a good speaker and some nice music and we appreciate the opportunity to "listen in."

A. R. Bird, who has installed a radio in his home, says he could hear California if the "doggone" thing would not get so noisy. He says it sounds like an automobile accident sometimes.

Robert Kauffman, report clerk, has resigned his position with the Baltimore and Ohio and has taken up his new duties at the Mansfield Sheet and Tin Plate Co. We were sorry to see "Bob" go but wish him success in his new position.

S. P. Kennedy fills the position made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Kauffman. Mr. Kennedy is an old railroad man and is quite at home.

H. C. Deyarmon, a new tallyman at Mansfield freight house, is a good man on the job and is watching the inbound and outbound freight closely.

A. L. Hachten, new receiving clerk, is taking care of all inbound freight and is checking the unloading closely.

Owing to increasing business we have with us once again the Shasky Bros., one being a trucker and the other delivery clerk. They make things hum in the freight house.

J. E. Jackson, operator-agent, West Marietta, demonstrated to a few spectators the other day, what effect kindness has on dumb animals. Mr. Jackson was sitting in his office listening to the rattle and bang of the instruments when he heard an awful racket coming up the street, whereupon he rushed to the door and saw a runaway team. "J. E." ran out and held up his hand like a traffic cop and called out, "Whoa Boy," "Whoa Boy," just like he used to do on the farm, and the team stopped dead in their mad rush and was soon eating sugar from his hand. We think Mr. Jackson should be presented with a leather medal.

Our Report Clerk, J. M. Reed, can't quite decide whether to spend his vacation skiing in Alaska, fishing in Canada or the Cumberland Mountains, bear or deer hunt-

Boys! it has arrived—Rate Clerk Mellor's new Dodge. Be careful, Mellor, we don't want to see your name up before the Mayor. We are all looking forward to a ride whenever you are ready.

Jiggs told us this a. m., the following, "Boys you will see some wild party at my house the next time Maggie goes away." Take our advice, Maggie, and stay at home.

Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal

Correspondent, J. L. NICHOLS

We are pleased to note the return to duty of Night Operator J. C. Manion, in the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph office, after two weeks in the hospital.

The many friends of Boiler Foreman Clayton La Flare, Lincoln Street, will be pleased to learn of his recovery from a recent dangerous operation. New clothes are in order with Clayton, as the old ones will no longer contain him comfortably.

President Henry E. Hansen, Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Base Ball Club, announces the organization of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Welfare Association, which will be introduced through the medium of a Grand Ball to be given Friday evening, April 27. The success of the Association seems already assured, if a lively interest in the ball can be taken as an indication.

The host of friends of Assistant Train-Master Harry Anderson and his estimable wife will be pleased to learn that a ten pound son was born to them April 2. Close call, Eh Harry?

Correspondent, F. N. SHULTZ

Chief Dispatcher H. S. Carroll resumed duty, April 2 after a long siege of illness. Mr. Carroll is much improved in health and his many friends on the System wish him the best of luck.

Passenger Conductor M. W. Hollinger, who was taken ill on No. 9, was taken off the train at Garrett and rushed to the hospital, where an operation was immediately performed. Mr. Hollinger is somewhat improved but is still in a serious condition.

F. M. Galloway is temporarily acting as assistant roundhouse foreman in the Garrett Shops, in place of S. W. Sickler, who is visiting Iowa.

Assistant Night Roundhouse Foreman W. H. Witherspoon is ill and O. P. Miller is acting as foreman in his place.

The sudden death of Conductor David C. Criegier, April 7, at the Mayo Hospital, Rochester, Minn., was a shock to this community. Mr. Criegier had not been well for some months, but none of his friends thought he was in a serious condition. However, he decided to go to Mayo Brothers for an examination, and an operation was decided upon. He died suddenly the second day after the operation. Mr. Criegier had been a conductor on Chicago Division for the past 19 years. The remains will be brought to Garrett and it is understood will be buried at Bascom, Ohio, his former home.

James T. Young has been assigned to the position of telephone maintainer, Chicago Division, succeeding J. R. Mills, who has been transferred to the Akron Division in same capacity. Mr. Young's home is in Baltimore and he expects to bring his wife and baby to Garrett soon as he can find suitable accommodations.

Do you remember "way back when"—coke train specials were "Highball" runs on the division, and many a speed record was smashed with a 2000 compound engine and 40 cars of coke? We are forcefully reminded of these days now as we observe solid coke trains again moving over the Chicago Division. Judging by the time scheduled between Curtis Yard and Connelville, we will be called upon to make new records, which we can easily do.

B. G. Zimmerman, agent Bascom, Ohio, by quick action saved the Company some money at 2.00 a. m., April 12. The tile factory was destroyed by fire and, when aroused from sleep by the fire alarm, it occurred to Mr. Zimmerman that two Baltimore and Ohio cars were on the factory track. One had been unloaded and the other a load of coal, was to be unloaded that morning. Mr. Zimmerman hastened to the fire, secured a pinch bar and with the aid of some of those standing near, succeeded in moving the cars out of reach of the fire.

The cars would have been destroyed, or badly damaged, but for the prompt action of Agent Zimmerman.

Day by day, week by week,
You'll make the Baltimore and Ohio Better and Better,
If you'll "STOP A LEAK."

Effective April 15, A. A. Iams, for the past year and a half Superintendent of our division, was promoted to Superintendent of the Toledo Division. It is with regret that we lose him, but we join his many friends in extending to him our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for his continued success.

25 Song Parodies 25c

Be a parlor entertainer. Make a hit with the crowd. 25 parodies including "Georgette," "Hot Lips," "The Sheik," "Three O'clock in the Morning," "Tomorrow," and all the big hits mailed on receipt of 25c in stamps—special get-acquainted price.

TRUMAN BROWN, 6263 Delmar, St. Louis, Mo.

As a token of esteem the members of Mr. Iams' staff, just before he left for his new territory, presented to him a solid walrus traveling bag and brief case, together with several cartons of his favorite smokes. Division Engineer Herth, made the presentation speech in his usual pleasing manner.

Mr. Iams was completely surprised and expressed his appreciation of the gifts, stating they could not have been more appropriate as he was just thinking of "stealing" a brief case. He also thanked all members of the staff for their cooperation while he has been Superintendent.

J. B. Carothers, assistant to General Manager R. N. Begien, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Iams, as superintendent of the Ohio Division. Mr. Carothers is well known on this division and we welcome him to our midst.

The stork has been making several visits to Chillicothe shops. Born to "Ed." Reeves, machinist, a son. To A. Gallaher, a son; Earl Drury, machinist, a daughter and "Tom" Hobensack, sheet metal worker, a daughter. Congratulations to all!

You are hereby authorized to call Miss Eva Eberle, stenographer, Superintendent's Office, "Aunt Eva," and she is proud of the title. On March 30, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Myron D. Sollars. Mrs. Sollars was formerly Ligouri Eberle, employed in the Division Accountant's Office. Best wishes, "Dode."

R. R. Kibler, former agent at Washington Court House, Ohio, has been transferred to Johnstown, Pa., as agent. E. E. Johnson, agent, Athens, has been appointed in Mr. Kibler's place. We wish both success in their new locations.

John Race, assistant signal maintainer, is "daddy." He has a seven pound daughter at his home. "John" had expected a boy so he could follow in his foot steps and be a signal man, but fate fooled him, so no doubt when the girl grows up she will be a clerk in some Baltimore and Ohio office. The cigars are due us John, so let's have them.

Norman M. Perry, clerk in Storekeeper's Office, is the proud father of a boy, who has been named Norman Jr.

H. Shea, fireman, who has been absent from duty on account of pneumonia, is back on the job again.

Arthur England, stationary engineer, is slowly recovering from injuries received while at work recently.

Passenger Conductor C. G. Cox has taken unto himself a wife. Congratulations and best wishes!

A warm friend made for the Baltimore and Ohio by crew on No. 83, engine 2525, April 4. Just east of Canaanville, they noticed a shed and garage on a farm near by on fire, the blaze having gained considerable headway and threatened other buildings. They stopped their train and all except flagman, who protected train, assisted, and through their help the fire was extinguished. Members of the crew were H. Thacker, engineer; H. Wheeland, conductor; C. C. Watkins, fireman; J. Potter and H.

Betsy Ross, daughter of Chief Clerk to Storekeeper G. H. Flagg

McGainer, brakemen. The farmer and his wife were loud in their praise of the work done by this crew and the courtesy shown by Baltimore and Ohio employees.

Our division baseball team, recently organized for the coming season, desires to thank the merchants of Chillicothe and all employees, who so generously donated money to enable them to secure first class uniforms and equipment, and making a team possible on this division. The line up is as follows:

H. Curry, catcher; J. Potter, H. Walker, C. Moon and H. Pendergrast, pitchers; George Targie, first base; R. Hunter, second base; M. Carson, short stop; D. Branscomb, third base; C. E. Rutherford, H. McGainer, R. Garrett and W. Butts, outfield. G. O. Harrison, manager. Thomas Wilson, business manager.

At this writing they are getting into shape to play and win all season.

A. L. Turnipseed has been transferred from St. Louis to position of assistant night round house foreman at Chillicothe. We wish him success in his new work.

We understand that Earl Schweitzer, clerk in Car Distributor's Office has the "love nest" just about completed, and IT is to take place in the very near future, in fact perhaps before this is published.

It is with regret that we learn of the death of William Hockenberry, coach cleaner. He has been in the service a number of years and made many friends among the employees of the Ohio Division, who extend their sympathies to his family.

Our sympathies are extended to "Fred" Darding, general clerk in Master Mechanic's Office, in the death of his father.

A recent addition to the master mechanic's force, is a new Ford sedan, which is owned and operated by Miss "Lillie" Flynn, stenographer. The only reason we mention this, is that she stated most emphatically that she did not want her name in the MAGAZINE again.

E. R. McKee, assistant engineer on corps, has been transferred to Washington, Ind. He is succeeded by E. H. McDargh. We wish both success in their new positions.

Supervising Agent, Dayton, Ohio

On April 15, Superintendent R. B. Mann was transferred to the Akron Division. Mr. Mann has been superintendent of our division for the past five and one half years and has made many friends during his leadership.

Mr. Mann before leaving, sent out General Notice reading as follows:

Dayton, Ohio,

April 13, 1923.

To All Officers and Employees:

Since it is not possible for me to see each of you personally, I want to take this opportunity to thank all of you for the efficient work and the loyal support given me during the past five and one-half years, which has made the successful operation of the Toledo Division possible.

(Signed) R. B. MANN,
Superintendent.

A. A. Iams, Ohio Division, succeeds Mr. Mann as superintendent and I know each employee will give him the same efficient and loyal support.

The accompanying photograph is the Bridge and Building Department at Rossford. They all take their hats off when the cook says "come and get your beans." If it is building a bridge or station you can't go wrong with this gang on the job. Looks like the boys just finished dinner. Notice that million dollar smile. Reading from left to right they are: First row—

Bridge and Building Department Carpenter Gang at Rossford, Ohio. Foreman Downing, standing on ground at left, is well known to all old timers

John Tyler, J. S. Downey, foreman; Kendon Barnhizer, John C. Dubaugh, John Benchler. Second row—Frank Perkey, Turley Patrick and Charley Epperson.

We hear a number of inquiries about the Baltimore and Ohio second annual picnic to be held sometime in June, and by the time this news reaches you arrangements will be under way. The committee is planning on having a big time, and understand we will have a fat men's race. From all indications Mr. Stoecklein will be in that class. What's the "Mrs." feeding you George, "Eagle Brand, or Home Brew?" Mr. Hoban, Mr. Kilgore, Mr. Spencer and Mr. Ledger have entered their names as participants in the three legged race, and the winners will receive a handsome "Kiddy Kar."

Don't forget the base ball game between the married and single men, and that it takes at least eight and half innings to decide the winning team. Mr. Fortman says he would like to give a handsome prize to the most beautiful girl, but is afraid to tackle it, 'cause they are all beautiful.

We want to make the second annual picnic a grand success and want all employees and their families to be out on the grounds early and stay until "Home Sweet Home" is played.

We expect big business this summer and now is the time to prepare to handle the traffic that is sure to come. The automobile industry reports that 1923 will be by far the greatest year that was ever known. The steel industry is behind in its orders. On April 1, the Hamilton furnace resumed operations after two and one-half years idleness. We understand the coke ovens at Coke Otto, Hamilton, will soon be illuminating the skies, making coke for the steel mills and foundries throughout the state. Indications are that The Baltimore and Ohio will handle 75 per cent. of this traffic, provided we give efficient service. It is the duty of each employee to see that service and transportation are maintained at the highest point of efficiency. Load cars to full capacity and keep them moving. Cars lying on side tracks, around stations and in yards do not earn any revenue. The quicker cars are moved over the rails of the Baltimore and Ohio the greater the revenue earned and the greater our prosperity as a Company and as individuals!

It has been the custom in the past for officers to make a trip over the division searching for a lot of rubbish and forget me nots around stations, section houses, yard offices and round houses and as a rule, there is lot of stuff found. Now is the time to clean house, and then when the inspection party arrives, everything will be in a neat and orderly condition.

Agents Office Dayton, Ohio

A. J. Kauflin, formerly cash clerk, Dayton, has been assigned to the duties of interchange clerk. Best of luck, "Gus."

William Bowen, formerly messenger, has been assigned to the duties of assistant demurrage clerk. Watch your step "BUS," the girls have their eyes on you.

Robert Neidert, O. S. & D. clerk, announces the recent arrival of an eight pound boy. Good Luck "Bob;" maybe some day he will make a good railroad man.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad publishes a MAGAZINE monthly for the benefit of all employees and their families. In this MAGAZINE is a column devoted to our division, and it is the desire of the management that employees give expression to their views and ideas or give information which may be of interest or benefit to the readers. In other words, the MAGAZINE is a clearing house for the thoughts of Baltimore and Ohio employees. Let's show that the Toledo Division does things and makes it known when we do them through these columns. Every fellow does something different in his daily work, and if he will pass his observations along to the rest of the family, we're going to have a better MAGAZINE. Remember, this is "Our Magazine."

Miss Luella Clayton, Division Accountant's Office, desires to again thank Toledo Division employees for their hearty support during the Good Will Campaign election. While Miss Clayton was not the winner, the ballots showed that there was good support from the Toledo Division for her. (On the side, Miss Clayton told me that since she couldn't send each one a present, she wanted to take this means to again thank everyone.)

There was a bad crossing accident and derailment near Columbus recently, and we regret to learn that the daughter and two grandchildren of Section Foreman J. R. Hemminger of Weston were involved. Our deepest sympathy is extended!

The Division Accountant's Office, as well as other departments, were agreeably surprised a short time ago when they noticed a bundle on the corner of the chief clerk's desk, which looked like cigars and candy. It was. Thanks to Mr. Dryden, who is the proud father of an eight pound baby boy. Wonder if young Dryden will say "Daddy," "Pop," "The Old Man," or whether he will address the Senior Dryden by the dignified and respectful name of "Father."

We recently had a furious windstorm all over the division and although it took the roofs off of cars and buildings and a few signals, there were fortunately no accidents or personal injuries of consequence. They ought to have better supervision over these breezes.

Did you ever see "Sam" Payne sneak out in the evening when he's through work and pick up a basketful (large size) of articles of household consumption in one hand and another bundle or two under the other arm? It's funny, with such feeding, that "Sam" can't support even a few hairs.

By the time the Baltimore and Ohio family receives this MAGAZINE lake coal will have commenced to move from the coal fields to lake ports for shipment by boat to the Northwest and as the Toledo Division is a large feeder of fuel from mine to furnace, we will soon be in the midst of the lake coal season.

This will mean a lot to everyone employed on our Division. In the offices, on the engines, on the cars, in the cabooses, on the tracks, at the crossings, in the towers, at the turn tables, at the switches, and in the shops, this additional business will mean that every one should put forth more effort and energy to successfully handle the large volume of coal moving.

While we are thus engaged, each at our respective task, let us never forget the words of our president, "Safety above all things." Never forget that however slight an accident or injury, we not only retard transportation that much, but also bring sorrow into our homes, when we should bring nothing but happiness and good cheer. Who wants sorrow? Who wants death to enter their home? Not you nor I. Yet we do not think of these things when we are wilfully disregarding every rule of common sense as laid down in the "Safety Rules" of our Company.

A number of us are still children when it comes to the practice of safety. As long as the boss is around, we are careful, but left to ourselves, we do the very things which we know we should not do and why? Either in a spirit of misguided bravado or a cowardly shrinking from another's sneers.

Human nature seldom places the proper valuation on the things that are really worth while and so it is with our work. Why can we not be master of ourselves and judge calmly of the things that pass through our lives and only take that which will be of good to us?

Switchman T. J. Gagin is still unable to resume duty after undergoing an operation sometime ago in Cincinnati. But he is up and around, and we hope he will soon return to help Jack Harboldt on the shop track crew put 'em over again.

John Shea, engineer employed at the power plant died suddenly April 6th. John was an employe for many years and will be missed by his associates.

We express our sympathy to J. W. Tilly, employed in Mr. Britt's office, in the loss of his little one. More precious and beautiful than jewels and how full and complete they make our lives. But He said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Our sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dibling in the loss of their daughter, Clara. She was beloved by all who came in contact with her. Death is no respecter of persons and sooner or later we must all face Him. How we do this depends on us.

Our deepest sympathy also is extended to Yard Conductor A. L. Stratton, who lost his wife recently. It is to be regretted that she could not travel with Andy to the end. But so it is. In the midst of life, we are in death. We know not what the morrow brings. Those who knew her valued her beautiful Christian character and will miss her.

Wellston, Ohio

Correspondent, L. M. MASON

The wheels of industry will start to turn for Wellston April 16 when the Wellston Iron Furnace Company turns on the blast for the first time in over three years. This furnace has an output of about three hundred tons of iron daily and furnishes work for more than two hundred men. It is located on the Baltimore and Ohio tracks and we are looking forward to the best business we have had for years as it receives all its stock and ships its output via Baltimore and Ohio.

Although we have had this business before we feel that we are getting something new as it has been so long since we have received any revenue from the big plant. If it takes only work and cooperation from the Baltimore and Ohio to keep this big plant working, we will give them one hundred per cent.

Agent J. F. Toumine, after being in the Lizzie class for the last three years, has gone one notch higher and is now sporting a new Dodge.

Joseph Utz, one of our popular clerks, was taken sick recently and we have just learned that we have all been exposed to small pox. We hope his smiling little face won't be any the worse when he recovers.

Some people can sneak into town and get out without being seen, but A. R. Lanker, one of our popular dispatchers from Dayton, was seen on the streets of Wellston recently.

We have often wondered if George Reel went to School could Grace study.

Homer Fink, freight trucker, decided that two could live as cheaply as one and has taken unto himself a wife. Miss Californie Braley of Wellston. We extend our congratulations.

If anybody has a hog pen to rent, please get in touch with A. O. Wood, Xenia; he has a hog and no pen.

Yard Conductor William Summers recently was called to Dayton account of death of his little grandson. Sympathy!

We would like to see Walter Augspurger and J. J. Fitzmartin in a chewing match, to see how Fitz would come out after having them pulled.

We regret to hear of the serious illness of Conductor F. E. Tharp, who has been running into Wellston for the past twenty-five years. "Sweedie," as he is known all over the Toledo Division, is in the hospital at Dayton, suffering from Brights Disease.

The happy thing in life is to know when you start anywhere that you are going to get there. Train Master Dick Mallen, Ohio Division, a few days ago was on No. 53 headed for Portsmouth. Arriving at Wellston, Dick got off the train and went into the register room to talk to the operator. Pulling the door closed, it locked itself and Dick spent the night in Wellston, as the train pulled out while he was trying to get the door open.

Small Stations Setting the Pace in Check Weighing

THE accompanying statement shows amounts gained through check weighing and revising classification of inbound and transfer L. C. L. freight for the month of February, the total being $4,831.34.

The general result shown is somewhat disappointing, particularly on the larger divisions as well as some of the smaller towns on others.

That legitimate revenue in larger amounts can be secured if all will give this matter the attention it deserves, is shown by the following figures. Considering the limited tonnage handled at the stations mentioned, the results shown are encouraging and the agents and their forces are to be commended:

J. A. Fisher . . . .	Weston, W. Va. . . .	$93.61
J. L. Ernest . . . .	Belington, W. Va. . .	76.15
C. E. Barry . . . .	Elyria, O. . . . .	70.51

Death of H. M. Quackenbos

"MELONE'S COLT'S," as the attaches of Assistant General Freight Agent John W. Melone, Chicago, are known, suffered the first permanent break in their ranks when on January 29, Hugh Maxwell Quackenbos, freight representative in charge of import, passed away, after an illness of three days.

Mr. Quackenbos was beloved by his associates and many friends for his hospitality and loyal friendship. He had a wonderful disposition and was, in all respects, a type of the "old school gentleman."

Mr. Quackenbos was born August 16, 1862 in Nyack, N. Y. and early in life came west. From 1885 to 1890 he was soliciting freight agent for the Old Merchants Dispatch Transportation Company at Milwaukee from which position he was promoted to be agent of the same company at Omaha, where he remained until 1894. Entering Baltimore and Ohio service at Chicago April 25, 1895, he had nearly

"Melone's Colts"

By J. W. Melone, Assistant General Freight Agent

"MELONE'S COLT'S" set April 9, and May 7 as their last two dinner dates before the summer season, and will not meet again after the latter date until October 8.

The ranks of the "Colt's" have been added to by the election of General Freight Agent E. B. Tullis, Assistant General Freight Agent J. C. Miller of the Baltimore and Ohio, and General Freight Agent H. M. Jouver and J. C. Miller of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal.

The policy of inviting outside officers of both Operating and Traffic Departments to address the club has proved valuable from both an official and educational standpoint, and will be continued.

Of especial interest was the address recently made to the "Colt's" by Superintendent of Transportation G. D. Brooke of Cincinnati.

John L. Grow

John L. Grow was born near Clarksburg, W. Va., on October 29, 1856. His first railroad experience was with the Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad Co., by whom he was employed as section laborer in 1872. He left this company to enter the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio when the grading of second track between Grafton and Cumberland was being done, working all along this section between Grafton and Oakland bridge.

In 1876 Mr. Grow commenced work on house carpentering, and continued until 1881, when he was employed as bridge carpenter on the Benwood and Bellaire bridges, under "Billy" Brown, during which time he also assisted in building the first bridge over the Three Fork Creek at Grafton.

After the completion of this work, Mr. Grow returned to house carpentering until March 1, 1887, when he was employed as a carpenter in Grafton shop, remaining there until his retirement April 1, 1922, and having a continuous record in the Grafton shop of 35 years service.

Frederick J. Dowler

Frederick J. Dowler was born in 1856. He entered the service on February 14, 1907, as a moulder in Chillicothe Shop. He held this position until 1915, when, on account of becoming lame he was unable to continue work. He was transferred to Portsmouth as crossing watchman, which position he held at the time of his retirement, November 30, 1921. Mr. Dowler resides at Huntington, W. Va.

C. B. Loughman

Retired Turntable Operator C. B. Loughman was born in 1858. He entered the Baltimore and Ohio service March 4, 1874 as section laborer; in 1883 he was transferred to position of lineman and in September 1888 again returned to the section between Toboso and Clay Lick; in 1893 he was transferred to Newark yard and on August 17, 1919, to the Motive Power Department as machinist's helper. On September 20, 1919 he again returned to his former position of section laborer in Newark Yard. In 1920 Mr. Loughman was transferred to the Motive Power Department as turntable operator, which position he held until his recent retirement.

Wilber P. Belt

Retired Machine Shop Hand Wilber P. Belt was born in 1852. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on June 9, 1872 as brakeman in Cumberland Yard. He moved to Baltimore in 1880, and entered the Hopper Shop, under Foreman John Marshall.

Mr. Belt remained in the Hopper Shop from 1880 until his recent retirement.

Why is an Inspection Trip?

found respect for the importance of our interests on Staten Island to the Baltimore and Ohio property that the Shriver finally put in at St. George and the party went to the special train.

The run from St. George to Tottenville was made special. At Tottenville the Charles W. Galloway, newest ferry boat owned by the Company, was boarded, and the short run made over to the South Amboy and back again.

This short ferry trip is a necessary link in one of the most traveled routes in the Metropolitan area, on the great Lincoln Highway, it being the shortest way to get into Manhattan Island from the west, a pleasant way because it avoids the densely populated areas of New Jersey in the Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken section. Our ferry boats handle an enormous number of motor vehicles, besides passengers, and the officers discussed from many angles the possibility of improving our facilities at this ferry. The rest of the trip on the Staten Island Lines was without particular incident, but the conversation among our officers concerning the general railway development on Staten Island, was most interesting. As is generally known, a tunnel under the East River is projected between Staten Island and Brooklyn, which will make Staten Island or Richmond Borough, as it is officially known in respect to greater New York, a great feeder of suburban population for Manhattan Island.

How shall we develop our lines to best fit in with this probable large increase in population? This and other questions connected with the tremendous plan for port development in New York were discussed from different angles.

At the conclusion of the run back to St. George the party took one of the municipal ferry boats to the Battery and there dispersed.

There were splendid opportunities for making good pictures on this trip, especially the one attempted of the special train crew consisting of Engineer D. J. Buckley, Fireman A. J. Paul, Conductor W. J. Reeves and Trainmen H. J. Harrington and Francis J. Duffy on the Staten Island Lines, with President Willard and the operating officers of the Company with them. Unfortunately the writer did not make a success of many of these pictures, apologizes for the failure and promises better work next time.

I am anxious that Baltimore and Ohio employees should at all times be cautious in their relations with the Public and with each other, and that they should make every reasonable effort to operate the trains safely and on time.

I would like also to have their constant and helpful cooperation towards improving the operation of the property in such ways as may be possible. Not however because they feel obliged to do so, but just because they want to do so.

"Not Because They Feel Obligated to Do So, but Just Because They Want to Do So"

How the Cover of This Issue of the Magazine Happened to be Written

SEVERAL MONTHS ago President Willard was outlining to the writer some of his ideas concerning the business of the Baltimore and Ohio. He spoke of the physical improvements made in our property during the last year, improvements that are still being pushed intensively and which are putting our Railroad plant in better shape than it has ever been, and he expressed the hope that with this well equipped and maintained property the officers and employes would be able to make a substantial improvement in our service and our operating records.

He called special attention to several of the standards which he was anxious that the employes of the Road would help raise, and then added the words at the top of this article:

"Not, however, because they feel obliged to do so, but just because they want to do so."

The phrase struck the writer as being especially significant—it seemed to express so exactly and cogently the friendly relationship which the Baltimore and Ohio Management would like to have with its employes.

And the importance of getting this thought before our employes in the most forceful way was so apparent that President Willard was asked if he would not write it out in long hand for reproduction on the cover of this issue of the MAGAZINE.

Several weeks later he said: "Here is the 'copy.' I have given your request careful consideration and have decided that as my statement does represent exactly the way I feel, it should, perhaps, be placed where as many of the employes as possible may see it."

THE OUTSTANDING deeds of all history have been accomplished by men who "wanted to do it." The safety of nations and whole civilizations has depended on such men—from Thermopylae in 480 B. C., where a small band of Spartans held back massed hordes of barbarians, to Cantigny in 1918, where our leathernecks and dough-boys began the demoralization of the powerful German war machine.

The great books that have been written, the epoch-making public documents penned, the master intentions perfected, the outstanding war victories won, the notable commercial enterprises brought into being—all that is memorable in art, science, politics and industry has been achieved because the men responsible have "wanted to do it."

They were not easy tasks, either, that these men set out to do. And some of the things that we have been asked to do on the Baltimore and Ohio are not easy. They require the best thought and effort of officers and men.

BUT OUR PRESIDENT has struck the key note of their accomplishment when he rightly assumes that we face these tasks together, that there is such a sympathetic and helpful spirit among us that we will handle them in an understanding way, and that we consider the Baltimore and Ohio's prosperity so much our own prosperity that we will bring that prosperity about—not because we feel obliged to do so, but just because we want to do so.

Baltimore and Ohio 'Way Ahead of Seasonal Program Laid Down by American Railway Association

At a Member Meeting of the American Railway Association and a Member Meeting of the Association of Railway Executives, both held in New York City on April 5, 1923, announcement was made of the extensive purchases of new equipment already made by the roads.

Recommendations were also adopted defining a policy for the railroads to follow to the end that the transportation facilities of the country will be able to handle the large amount of business that is expected to be offered this autumn.

These recommendations included a number of factors which enter into the operating efficiency of the roads. The most important of these are given below, and show what splendid progress the Baltimore and Ohio has made towards reaching the standards set:

"Take Pride in Doing the Hard Things and the Easy Ones Will Take Care of Themselves!"

Says the Newly Appointed General Manager of Our New York Lines

By Margaret Talbott Stevens

R. B. WHITE, the new general manager of New York Lines, has his own ideas about success, and he has a right to them. He works on the theory that no matter how large a star you fix your eyes upon, if you will keep looking at it hard enough and keep working hard enough to keep one foot before the other, you are bound to move in the right direction. And certainly Mr. White ought to know, for ever since he started to work—and his whole life, practically, has been spent on the railroad, he has been doing a considerable bit of moving. Sometimes the going was hard, but he has kept his feet on the ground and his head above water, so that he now holds a position of great responsibility. But that's getting ahead of my story.

Mr. White was born in the little town of Metcalf, Illinois, on August 8, 1883. His father was in the train service of the Clover Leaf Railroad. When Mr. White was three years old, the family moved to Indianapolis, where the father was chief clerk to the master car builder of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

As far back as the new general manager can remember, he has been fond of railroading, and he does not think it strange that his lot is still cast along the line of the iron rail. Railroad shops in those days were not as large as they are today. There were fewer men employed, so that when the little fellow would wander around the shops the workmen often made quite a fuss over him, lifting him upon their shoulders, putting him into the firebox of an engine, taking him with them for rides around the yards. There was little wonder therefore, that before long his big ambition was to be a railroad man, particularly a train dispatcher.

When he was nine years old Mr. White's family moved to Dana, Indiana, where the father engaged in business for himself, and the boy went to school.

"I had a hankering for the railroad," says Mr. White, so in my spare time I studied telegraphy with the agent. I learned the job in return for the work that I performed; in other words, I was what they call a "ham." I have always regretted that I did not finish high school; I thought that I was 'too smart' to graduate, and by the time I reached my senior year had gotten a job as extra operator on the I. D. & W. Railroad, in the Master Mechanic's Office at Indianapolis, and felt further schooling unnecessary. The I. D. & W., as you know, was absorbed by the old C. H. & D., and the C. H. & D. by the Baltimore and Ohio. I still wanted to become a train dispatcher, and did.

"If an organization will take pride in doing hard things, the easy ones will take care of themselves. This has been the case on the Maryland District. We have a wonderful organization here, and I regret that I must leave it. Our slogan has been that of the 'Go-Getter,'—'It shall be done.'"

It was a cold, rainy day when Mr. White gave me this interview, but the minute I stepped into his office I found the sun shining inside—Mr. White's big sunshiny smile that he carries around with him. There was a visitor ahead of me and he was smiling too. It's contagious. This was in the forenoon, and yet they say a man is happy only after he has had a big dinner. Right away I began with the questions—regular reporter stuff.

"Mr. White, what are your hobbies?"

"I haven't any, unless it is my home."

"Don't you even play golf?"

"No. I don't play golf, I don't swim, I don't row, I don't shoot, and I don't dance—although I have danced about considerably on the

Senior Vice President Shriver Believes Railroad Outlook Favorable

Addresses Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1 at Luncheon Given in His Honor

THE Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary gave a luncheon at the New Howard Hotel, Baltimore, on May 23, to Senior Vice President Shriver. Covers were laid for 82 (78 ladies and four of the "weaker" sex).

After the luncheon, which was delicious and served on tastefully decorated tables placed in the form of a square, the president, Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, introduced Miss Ide, daughter of Rev. E. E. Ide, minister in the Lutheran Church, who sang three selections. Miss Ide has a sweet voice and her singing was enjoyed by everyone present. Mrs. Lewis then introduced Vice President George M. Shriver as "The man who looks after the finances of the Baltimore and Ohio, who will tell us something of the railroad's financial and other problems."

After expressing his pleasure and thanks for the hearty reception given him, Mr. Shriver delivered a most interesting address. He said that he found himself in a somewhat difficult position, which reminded him of a meeting he attended some time ago, where, as now, the "chairman" was a lady, and he did not know whether he should say Mistress Chairwoman or Chairman. Dr. Welch, who was present, insisted later that Mr. Shriver had said Mistress "Charwoman."

"Your president has introduced me as the man who looks after the financial affairs of the railroad," said Mr. Shriver, "and if this be true, I should find little difficulty in addressing the ladies of the Auxiliary, as the old saying is 'money talks,' and therefore I would not have to."

Mr. Shriver laid emphasis on the wider activities of the women under the enlarged franchise, noting the number of organizations being created by the women. He referred particularly to the agitation now being carried on by certain organizations with respect to the price of sugar, and the possibility of reducing it through organization, and called attention to the desirability of the Women's Auxiliary making a careful investigation to secure all facts obtainable before taking a position on public questions of that kind. Mr. Shriver said that he was satisfied that the decision reached by the women would be on the right side after they had secured all the facts available.

He called attention to the gathering of the so-called radical leaders at Chicago, organized to aid the Interstate Commerce Commission in developing the facts with respect to railroad valuation. Mr. Shriver ventured the prediction that, if all the facts on the valuation of the railroads were secured and given due weight, the railroads had nothing to fear from the most radical.

"The greatest difficulty about the railroad question," he said, "is that when considered from a national standpoint the figures are so large that most intelligent persons find it difficult to grasp their full significance. To the average person an earning of $760,000,000 net by the railroads of the country seems a large and ample sum and it is difficult for them to relate it to a property with a value of approximately $20,000,000,000, and doing a gross business of $5,559,000,000. When so related, however, it is found that the net return on the investment in the railroad properties for the year 1922 was but 3.82% as against the 5.75% which the Interstate Commerce Commission found was, under all the circumstances, a reasonable basis of return.

"You, or at least most of you, are depositors in the Savings Feature of the Baltimore and Ohio Relief Department and for a number of years have received a return of five per cent. on your money. Would you be satisfied with 3.82%, or $3.82 on each $100 you saved? I think not! Yet that is the rate of return realized by the railroads last year.

"Now put this in a more simple way: Suppose, instead of the 260,000 miles of railroads of the country, you think of just one mile of railroad in which there is invested $100,000, and suppose that small railroad did a gross business of $28,000 a year, and after paying all operating expenses had left but $3,800 as a return on the investment! You can see that that is not sufficient to justify the building of another railroad.

"You can make the case even more simple, perhaps, by supposing that you have invested $10,000 in a grocery store or some other similar undertaking; that during the year you do a gross business of $2,800 and that after paying your operating expenses you find you have a net profit for the year of $380. This, in simple language, is the railroad situation in 1922.

"Take our own Baltimore and Ohio Railroad property, in which there is invested over $720,000,000. In 1922 it did a gross business of approximately $200,000,000 and after paying operating expenses there was left $23,000,000. That sounds like a lot of money, you say. And it is. But out of that $23,000,000, fixed charges, including interest, rents, etc. and amounting to more than $25,000,000, had to be paid. Fortunately the Company had other investments which brought in about $6,000,000, so that after paying all expenses, including taxes, interest on bonds, and preferred stock, there was just $3,000,000 left, or only two per cent. on the common stock of the Company. And this money was put back into the property in improvements instead of being paid out in dividends.

Railroad Outlook is Good

"However, it is my opinion that the outlook today in the railroad field is better than it has been for a number of years. In fact I think it is more hopeful than at any time during my years of railroad service. My confidence is based primarily on the present Transportation Act which, while it does not change the right of the railroads under the common law to receive a fair return upon their property, has given a direct expression of the people that the railroads should receive such fair return. I am optimistic also because the present law places upon the Interstate Commerce Commission jointly with the Railroad Management the responsibility of maintaining an effective transportation machine.

Employees Are Helping the Baltimore and Ohio

"So far as our own Company is concerned, however, I feel that the degree of success with which the Baltimore and Ohio is now meeting in its operations is due to the more general interest displayed by each and every man and woman in the organization. I believe firmly in the spreading out of responsibility. I feel that this spreading out helps the individual, giving each a greater sense of personal responsibility and that the results obtained by the Baltimore and Ohio have been due to an individual sense of greater responsibility. And no little measure of the success is due to the support of the women, both organized and unorganized. The women's support cannot fail to be of the greatest possible benefit. Women instinctively see clearly and their influence with their husbands, fathers, brothers, sweethearts and others, in the right direction, must be productive of the greatest good.

"There is no limit to what organized effort can accomplish. Imagine, if you can, all of the 65,000 employes of the Baltimore and Ohio PULLING TOGETHER on a rope. Something would move. What could they not accomplish? There would be no limit. Therefore, let us all PULL TOGETHER, and the additional force, the guiding force behind the lines will be—the ladies.

The Relief Department

"Before concluding, I would like to mention our Relief Department, which does not seem to be fully appreciated by all our employes, although out of about 65,000 employes 48,000 are members. It is conducted with the cooperation of the employes, for the employes. It is headed by an Executive Board on which are employes elected by you

Along the Cape to Cairo Railroad, stretching 2600 miles from the Cape of Good Hope to the heart of Africa, this curious lookout and signal station is to be found. all. It is true that the Baltimore and Ohio furnishes office room, clerical force, etc., but in cases of dispute the decisions as to claims rest with your Board.

"Probably it will interest you to know that the Savings Feature now has on deposit more than $12,000,000, of which $7,403,000 is loaned out to employes who are purchasing or improving their homes. Of the balance, about $4,000,000 is invested in first-class securities. The remainder, on which the Baltimore and Ohio guarantees four per cent., is in the Treasury. Since the inauguration of this feature, the employes have acquired more than $35,000,000 worth of property through loans.

"The Pension Feature is supported entirely by the Railroad Company, and through it more than $400,000 was paid out last year to employes who have been voluntarily retired from the Company's service. I realize that the average yearly pension of $331.23 is not large, and perhaps not sufficient to support one after retirement, but I know in many cases that it is of very substantial assistance, and it is some evidence of the desire of our Railroad Company to recognize those employes who have given long and faithful service."

The Oscar G. Murray Fund

In concluding Mr. Shriver called attention to the fund left by a former president of the Company, Mr. Oscar G. Murray, "for the relief and assistance of needy widows and orphans of employes of The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company who have died in the service of the Company." "Through this fund," said Mr. Shriver, "a number of widows and children are now being aided, and the Trustees will be glad to have your cooperation in bringing to their attention any cases where under the terms of the will the fund can be made of service."

Mr. Shriver stated that railroad employes are proud people, and that it is sometimes difficult to have cases of need disclosed. He asked, however, that anyone knowing of such cases communicate either with Geo. H. Campbell, assistant to the president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, and vice president of The Oscar G. Murray Railroad Employees Benefit Fund, or with C. W. Woolford, secretary of the Company, and also secretary of the Oscar G. Murray Fund. Both these gentlemen are located in the Baltimore and Ohio General Office Building at Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Lewis expressed to Mr. Shriver the appreciation of the auxiliary for his interesting talk, and urged that the members follow his advice, making a thorough inquiry in connection with all public questions and then taking a stand on the right side. She further urged the importance of members doing everything possible to influence business to the Baltimore and Ohio, calling attention to the fact that, next to the Municipality of Baltimore, our railroad is the largest employer of labor in the city. "Bringing here," she said, "as it does, so much money, and counting so much in the progress of the city, it is our duty to make it clear to Baltimoreans that they should support us."

Mrs. Gaither, president of the Housewives League, had promised to speak, but on account of an accident was unable to be present.

The Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary will hold a picnic on July 6, at Tolchester Beach, steamer leaving Pier 16, Baltimore, at 8.45 a. m. Full details and tickets may be secured from officers of the Auxiliary.

A "Little" Man Doing a Big Thing

WHILE No. 9 was waiting for change of engines at our Philadelphia Station on the night of June 9 the writer had the opportunity of watching Brakeman J. J. Forrester handling his job.

Mr. Forrester is one of those energetic "little" fellows on the Road who knows how to get the best out of his work—for it, for himself, and for the Company. He took heavy bags from the passengers as they approached the car steps and placed them up on the platform for easy carriage into the coach.

It is such employes as Mr. Forrester who are closely following the Management's wish that the greatest courtesy be extended to our passengers and who are therefore helping increase our business substantially.

"Galloway and Scheer" Now Batting for "Gallagher and Shean"

And Knocking Home "Runs" Every Day with "The Capitol Limited"

SHORTLY after the first trip of "The Capitol Limited," one of our officers received from an anonymous writer the following verse, a parody on "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean," written, it is thought, by an officer or employe of a road competing for Washington—Chicago business with the Baltimore and Ohio:

O, Mr. Galloway,
O, Mr. Galloway,
Did you see the Capitol Limited leave here?
Were the Pullmans spick and span,
Which showed up to beat the band—
Tell me i—f they were empty, or if jammed.
O, Mr. Scheer,
O, Mr. Scheer,
I was right there at Mt. Royal,
never fear,
And it made me feel so proud
When I saw there was some crowd.
In the Pullmans, Mr. Galloway?
No, the station, Mr. Scheer.

A rather clever parody, you'll admit, but unfortunately for the writer it does not line up with the facts. For, on the initial trips of "The Capitol Limited," which the writer of the verse had in mind, westbound there were 116 passengers out of Washington, and eastbound there were 125 passengers out of Chicago.

Since the initial trips of "The Capitol Limited" there have been extra cars in both directions almost every day, and on several occasions, extra sections.

Which seems to put the joke on "the other fellow," as suggested in the following reply, written by Miss Stevens, associate editor, and sung by the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club at the dinner given on June 11 in honor of R. B. White, general manager, New York Properties:

O, Mr. Galloway,
O, Mr. Galloway,
I've a letter here that I want you to see,
From a man who's been misled
'Bout our CAPITOL LIM-I-TED
'Tis as funny, just as funny as can be.
O, Mr. Scheer,
O, Mr. Scheer,
Now I pray you do not think this mortal queer—
'Tis his eyesight, I am sure,
And I think I know the cure.
Do you think so, Mr. Galloway?
Positively, Mr. Scheer!

O, Mr. Galloway,
O, Mr. Galloway,
Has he seen those extra sections ever since?
And the patrons pouring in?
She's a bird that's bound to win,
Our poor friend is blind and thus hard to convince.

O, Mr. Scheer,
O, Mr. Scheer,
Let him ride her to Chicago; never fear,
For we'll heap upon his head
Coals of fire for what he said.
For his knocking, Mr. Galloway?
Advertisement, Mr. Scheer!

railroad since I have been connected with it. I worked at practically every station on the I. D. & W. and I have stepped about in a lively manner ever since. All my promotions have come in the early summer months. Whenever we get through the months of May, June and July, Mrs. White says, 'Well, I suppose we're good for another year here.' No, I haven't any hobbies."

And right then and there I discovered one. He began by telling me about how a certain millionaire merchant in Indianapolis got his start in a little shop on the Circle; he told of how this man's keen eye for business, plus ambition and initiative, had won for him a big place in the world's work; he emphasized the necessity for liking your job if you would make a success of it. It did not take long to find out that Mr. White's hobby is hard work and plenty of it, with an interest in what you are aiming at.

"But, Mr. White, a man like you must have had some good offers in work outside that of the railroad. Do you mind telling me why you have stuck to the Baltimore and Ohio?"

"Because I love the work," he answered promptly, "and I have grown fond of the people with whom I work. These are the reasons I stay. I didn't like Baltimore when I first came here, but I learned to love it and I like its people. Railroading demands hard work, but there's nothing like it. As to my new position in New York, I am anxious to get at it. I am looking forward to it with great interest."

Mr. White's railroad record is as follows: April 17, 1900, extra agent-operator, Indianapolis, Indiana; April 14, 1902, operator, Indianapolis; September 19, 1902, dispatcher, Indianapolis; January 15, 1908, chief dispatcher, Indianapolis; October 20, 1909, chief clerk to general superintendent, Cincinnati; March 14, 1910, superintendent, Indianapolis; May 1, 1915, superintendent, Flora, Ill.; July 10, 1916, superintendent, Seymour, Indiana; June 20, 1917, superintendent, Philadelphia, Pa.; May 1, 1919, superintendent, Baltimore; April 15, 1921, general superintendent, Baltimore; June 1, 1923; general manager, New York Lines.

Making Tools Out of Old Rails

IN his testimony at the hearing on the proposed consolidation of railroads in the office of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, on May 17, President Willard made some interesting references to the early history of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Among other things he said that the first all steel rail used on the Baltimore and Ohio, so far as he could find out, was purchased in England and called "John Brown Rail." The section weighed less than 50 pounds per yard. Pieces of this rail are found occasionally in scrap piles and in uncovering old road beds on the Baltimore and Ohio today, and the steel in this old rail is so good that it is reworked and made into tools of splendid quality.

Another interesting point developed was the fact that under the original charter of the Baltimore and Ohio it was contemplated that people wishing to travel or ship goods over our Road could supply their own conveyances, paying for the privilege of using the tracks and right-of-way. Mr. Willard said, however, that so far as he knew, even in the very earliest days when horses were used to pull the cars, the Road had actually never been used in this way, because railroad travel required a special kind of conveyance which it was impracticable for the ordinary passenger or shipper to supply.

New Job Every Day

It Was In This Spirit Great Critic Did His Work

It was under the above caption that F.P.A., one of the best known newspaper men in the country, paid his tribute in the New York Tribune to the late Henry E. Krehbiel, the dean of American music critics. F.P.A., said:

"A great newspaper man was Henry E. Krehbiel. To the last his was the great curiosity; he came to a new job every day. For the eight years we were on the same staff with him he never, so far as we know, had a desk of his own. So he used to come in and write on ours or the adjacent one. He used to come in from a recital or a concert and write his story as though his job and reputation depended entirely on the honesty and excellence of that assignment. He had a fervid anxiety about his work, rare in a beginner and rarer in a veteran. He would come in with (I just heard the worst singer that ever tried to get a New York notice), or (I never heard anybody play so magically as he did.) He was the most unbores newspaper man we ever knew.

"Yesterday morning a woman reporter said. (Think of Krehbiel doing the same job for 43 years! I get tired of mine in 43 hours.) Krehbiel didn't do the same job 43 years. He had a new job every day. And that way lie high success and greatness."

Unquestionably there are many jobs on the Railroad where it is extremely difficult to bring any variety or freshness into the daily routine. And yet, to the man handling such a job and who enjoys the thrill of accomplishment; even this routine can be made to afford great satisfaction.

"Is there some slight rearrangement of my work, which will enable me to do it more quickly and hence accomplish more?"

Such self asked questions as this, applied conscientiously to the most routine job, will often bring pleasure and profit.

I remember working with about thirty other men in an accounting department in a large insurance company.

Each of us did the same kind of work—exactly. The new-comer was given a light assignment and as his skill increased (if it did) he was given more and more work. One man came in and in three months was running the heaviest assignment in the department. He showed in that short space of time greater proficiency than men who had been doing the work for ten and more years. Naturally, he did not continue to do that work much longer, a supervising position soon being his reward. And he has kept right on going.

Pity the man who gets no joy out of his work! Instead of grumbling about the routine, we could often banish the sameness and the dreariness of it if we would look at the job each morning as a challenge to better endeavor—to greater accomplishment.

Helping Men

It has been the privilege of the Magazine to point out to its readers as often as space would permit the advantages to be derived from a good education; also that there are innumerable educational agencies which can be availed of by men of good health, energy and aspiration, who are putting in a full day's work on the Railroad. The I.C.S. the schools fathered by the Y.M.C.A., university extension courses and technical instruction afforded by public night schools—just the mention of these suggests the wide choice which the willing man may make use of to suit his own need.

While doing our bit in this way to get the young men on the Road interested in securing a better education, we have often had in mind a friend who works for the Company in Baltimore. His is not a showy job, but it is an important one and he has his hands full with his Railroad assignment.

But for years he has devoted an hour or more a day to the study of profitable subjects, outside his Railroad work, and although he has not risen high in the Railroad world, he nevertheless has absorbed learning in his few chosen subjects to the extent that he is now an unusually cultured man—and shows it.

Best of all he is not selfish with his learning, for it has been his special pleasure to introduce to the delights of education many of the young men who have come into his department. His reward? Well, just read this excerpt from a letter which he got several days ago from a former clerk in his office and which he passed on to the writer:

"I have been successful in passing the C.P.A. exams. I am indebted to you for your part in paving the way."

Stopping the Leak

Evidence that employes of all classes are giving careful thought to the matter of "Stopping That Leak" comes to us daily.

On the St. Louis Division, Brakemen H. P. Clark and E. Gordon picked up two burst air hose out of a scrap bin; they cut out the damaged parts and made the hose into what are known as "short connections" which are useful while on line when, for various reasons, the air hoses on two cars are a little short. A short connection prevents air leaks, which in turn prevent brakes sticking and waste of fuel. In addition to this a short connection is worth about $1.50; therefore the thoughtfulness of these men saved this amount, in material alone.

Relativity

Since Einstein of the fourth dimension began to confound the world with his theories, the word "relativity" has become familiar by its frequency in print. It is not a new word nor a difficult word to understand in its ordinary sense, but I was once listening to a disquisition on Einsteinian relativity that was as clear to me as Mark Twain's definition of specific gravity, which he says, "is the weight of a body compared with the weight of an equal volume that makes a body go just as far in the first second as the body will go plus the force of gravity that equals twice what the body will go."

Everything is relative to something else. If someone speaks of a "big man" the mind immediately conceives a man bigger than the average. If in speaking of distance we are told of some place "far away," the mind responds to a suggestion of a locality beyond our ordinary horizon, which varies with the individual; it may be as far as we have travelled or as far as we can imagine. When I was a boy at home in the north country of Sweden, I was once telling a peasant woman about a journey to Stockholm, the capital city, and explaining to her in terms of miles and hours how "far" it was. She, with an horizon extending as far as the nearest village and the church, exclaimed with awe: "Didn't God make this a big world."

This reminiscence was recalled by my reading an account in a current paper of the star Beta Ceti "burning up." Those who make it their business to weigh and measure the very small and the very big (relatively) say that this star is 460,577,088 million miles away and that light that speeds at the rate of eleven million miles in one minute would take about 80 years to span the distance between the star and the earth. That is a long way off (relatively), and yet in its relation to what lies "beyond," the Beta Ceti is nearer to us than is Stockholm to the hamlet in the northcountry.

After reading the story and while in a state of reverie and meditation, I was brought back to the commonplace by the practical person who shares my joys and sorrows. She reminded me that to keep the home-fires burning it was needful that I bring up some coal from the cellar.

And after all, to each of us personally our daily duties—our chores—be they clipping coupons or washing dishes, are of more importance than the burning of Beta Ceti, to which business a greater intelligence than ours is attending.

A New "Loaded" Cigar

Since the prohibition sleuths began playfully to pat people on the hip in their hunt for contraband, many camouflage devices, doing credit to the ingenuity, if not to the moral sense of their inventors, have appeared on the "wet" market, all designed with the purpose of deceiving "the enemy." Loaded candy, a pound of which will furnish a comfortable load for milady to carry in the secrecy of the boudoir; hollow canes for the monocled la-de-dahs who have the habit of sucking their cane knobs on roof gardens and in hotel lobbies; flask-lined books and double-crowned derbies, etc., for all sorts and conditions of anti-prohibitionists, are procurable by those who want them.

The very latest is the dollar cigar, sold over cafe-counters and at cabaret tables. It is a full size "perfecto," made of shade grown Connecticut cabbage leaf for wrapper, and for filler one cylindrical glass tube containing "fine old Scotch," probably distilled among the crags and braes on the Grampian hills of Bonnie Staten Island or in the catacombs of New York City. The "smoker" does not smoke, it is non-combustible, but it has a (sniff) fullbodied (sniff-sniff) bouquet.

The Wisdom of Age

Assuming that if we observe, listen and profit by experiences, we learn, and that the longer we live the more we learn, then we should follow that the older we grow the more we should know. But we don't. We only know better, not more. We discard about as much as we receive, reject about as much as we accept; old impressions give way to new ones.

At the mature age of twenty-one we "know it all." We have learned the multiplication table and that the world is round; we have placed our Q. E. D. after proving the solidity of the pons asinorum; we have had our first love affair; so what else is there to learn! Quantum sufficit—enough is plenty. We are chuck full of wisdom and don't care who knows it. Cock-sure, that's us.

But then, as we proceed, speeding along, with motor humming and eyes ahead, creation widens to our view, and in the wake of years is left, farther and farther behind, our cockiness and surciness, knocked into a cocked hat and out of the perspective, and we learn that the older we grow the more distinctly we realize how little we know. Using as comparates the present and the future instead of the present and the past we feel that individually we know nothing and collectively just as much.

Someone trying to improve on Dr. Voronoff claims that he can cure baldness with glands from dogs, using poodles for kinky hair and terriers for straight. It has the advantage over a wig that it won't blow off or stick in the hat.—Exchange.

In a campfire discourse on charity hobo number one commented on the hard hearts of the rich and, referring to himself, observed:—"I would give my shirt to any one who needed it."—"And who do you think would want to wear it?" questioned hobo number two.

—Exchange.

The Christening of the "Martha Washington" and "Mount Vernon"

New Dining Cars Are Beautiful Expression of Colonial Style

A UNIQUE ceremony attended the placing into service of the two new dining cars, the Martha Washington and the Mount Vernon, at Mount Royal Station on the afternoon of May 24. Following the age old custom at the launching of ships, the Baltimore and Ohio held a most attractive christening ceremony, the idea being that of Miss Mabel T. Gessner, passenger representative.

The north end of Mount Royal Station was attractively decorated for the reception incident to the ceremony. Comfortable chairs were arranged in informal groups, and several large tables covered with immaculate dining car linen and decorated with flowers, held punch bowls, glasses and cake trays, provided with light refreshments for the visitors. A small orchestra, consisting of violins and harp, and half hidden by rows of palms, played throughout the reception.

For a week or two preceding the christening, Miss Gessner, to whom was entrusted the entire planning of the event, and her assistant, Miss Farley, had been busy sending invitations to many of the representative women of Baltimore, most of them prominent in social, political, business and club activities. Over six hundred written acceptances were received, in addition to a large number of acceptances telephoned to our Passenger Department, and it was estimated by a representative of the Baltimore Police Department, who was on hand, that at least 1,800 persons in all visited the new dining cars on their "baptismal" day.

The ceremony itself was simple. The accompanying picture shows the setting, with Miss Elizabeth Shriver, daughter of Senior Vice President George M. Shriver, on the right, holding the christening bottle for the Martha Washington. Mrs. William A. Dickey, Jr., daughter of Operating Vice President C. W. Galloway, is on Promptly at 3.20, while photographers and motion picture operators were getting pictures of the group, Miss Shriver, with a lusty blow, smashed the bottle on the steel side of the Martha Washington, at the same time saying: "I Christen Thee 'Martha Washington'."

Mrs. Dickey then named the Mount Vernon in similar fashion.

The Inspection

The two new dining cars were coupled together as seen in the picture. On the end of each was a chair car, and the guests entered by the south platform of the chair car at the south end of the station. They proceeded through this car into the next car, the Mount Vernon, which was arranged in exactly the same way that it is for serving a meal in actual service. The tables were set and representatives of the Dining Car Department, including Steward J. M. Templeman, were present to show the guests the especially interesting features. Among these were the kitchen and pantry, both finished in spotless white enamel. The colonial atmosphere suggested by the names of the cars is carried out in most attractive detail, even to the utensils in the kitchen, which are made of copper, such pots, pans and kettles as may be seen today at historic Mount Vernon, in the kitchen where the food for the first President of the United States and his wife was prepared.

The panelling in the new cars is done in a dull, lustrous, Mahogany finish, the lighting fixtures being simple in design. In place of the large sideboard ordinarily used by the steward at one end of the car is a small table in colonial design, above which is hung a mirror, also of the colonial period. The silverware is of charming colonial pattern, and the chairs are of Heppelwhite design.

In the next car, the Martha Washington, presided over by Steward J. S. Holshouser, the guests found the chairs and most of the tables removed, and refreshing fruit punch, tea and cakes being served by the waiters. Proceeding through this car the guests then went on into the chair car in the north end of the station whence they alighted on the platform.

The Fruition of an Idea

The new dining cars illustrate the value of an idea, an idea which has been under consideration by our Management for the last few years. Remembering the advantage which the Baltimore and Ohio has in traversing a territory rich in historical interest and, with its associations, extending back well into colonial times, and the fact that the capital of the United States, with its own patriotic shrines, is by far the most interesting spot on our lines, they felt that it would be especially advantageous to bring this atmosphere to the fore in our passenger service in every practicable way.

The new dining cars are the fruition of this idea. They were constructed by the Pullman Company, but a great deal of thought was given to their building by our own officers and also by recognized authorities in colonial architecture, furniture and decorations, called in by the Management.

They Cost No More

It is interesting to note that despite the exquisite beauty embodied in the cars—that charming simplicity which has resulted in compliments in large numbers from discriminating passengers, the new dining cars did not cost more than would dining cars of purely conventional type.

It Was the Ladies' Day!

Miss Gessner was the first woman passenger representative appointed by any railroad in the United States, and the christening, also establishing a precedent, is doubly significant because of its young lady managers. Miss Olive Dennis, inspector of passenger service; Miss Gladys Farley, assistant to Miss Gessner; Miss Elizabeth Hofstetter, stenographer, Passenger Department; and Miss Emma McClayton, secretary to assistant to operating vice president, were the principal assistants to Miss Gessner at the ceremony. How appropriate it was that these women employes and the sponsors, worthy descendants of the original first lady of the land, should have dedicated to the public service these cars, embodying as they do so attractively, much of the colonial tradition!

It has been the special work of our women passenger representatives to see that travel for women on the Baltimore and Ohio is made as comfortable and satisfactory as possible. Since they have been so employed they have given the Management many helpful suggestions which have been put into practice, this being especially true of Miss Dennis, who has done a great deal of traveling on our trains and looked into the service particularly from the viewpoint of the woman passenger.

It was appropriate also to have Mrs. Shriver, Mrs. Galloway and Mrs. Fries, wives of our vice presidents, as the hostesses at the christening ceremony, and to have also as one of the guests, Mrs. Willard, wife of our president.

The two new cars have now been running for upwards of a month in our passenger service, evoking the finest kind of appreciation from passengers using them. Stewards Templeman and Holshouser and their crews are giving a superlatively fine service, even for the Baltimore and Ohio, and there is no question but that the service of Baltimore and Ohio trains between Washington and New York, where the new cars run, will be splendidly advertised by the Martha Washington and the Mount Vernon.

Passenger Suggests New Slogan

The following interesting letter was written by a prominent Baltimore business man

Baltimore, Md.

March 15, 1923

Mr. Daniel Willard
President, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad
Baltimore, Md.

My dear Mr. Willard:

Please allow me to write you just a few lines about the wonderful service that you are giving your patrons at the present time. Mr. Willard, your slogan has always been, and I hope always will be, "Our passengers are our guests." It seems to me, though, that you could easily adopt another slogan—"We try to make our riders feel at home."

It is not only my own opinion but that of others, that the minute you put your foot aboard a Baltimore and Ohio train, there is a refined, homelike atmosphere immediately felt. It is made this way by your wonderful set of conductors, brakemen, porters, dining car stewards and their waiters. This homelike atmosphere is certainly lacking on a great many other lines.

It is very hard to specialize on a particular train, but Numbers 5, 6, 11 and 16 seem to be exceptionally courteous and accommodating. Indeed, Mr. Willard, your men go their limit and leave nothing unturned to make your riders feel just at home.

It will always give me great pleasure to boost the Baltimore and Ohio service whenever it is possible to do so. I am,

Very sincerely yours, etc.

Don't Let Your Friends Get Killed or Maimed at Crossings!

Railroad Men Can Save Lives and Accidents by Timely Warnings

CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY is the slogan echoing and re-echoing throughout the territory in which the Baltimore and Ohio operates.

Once again the Careful Crossing Campaign is under way, it having started officially June 1, to continue to September 30 next.

As last year, the Baltimore and Ohio is at the forefront in doing its part, through its officers and employees, to effectively reduce the number of careless and thoughtless drivers and pedestrians who have occasion to pass over our tracks at highways.

The American Railway Association is fostering this drive for the preservation of human life and limb. As our railroad is a member of this association, it is our aim to stand at the forefront in the percentage of reduction of crossing accidents by the time the drive ends. Last year we were among the few railroads of the nation which cut down the number of personal injuries, in comparison with the previous year, and we are aiming to reach an even higher average of reduction this year, compared to last.

In his appeal for support for the campaign by all employees, Mr. Galloway points out that if every employe will say something about it, in a short time thousands of automobile drivers will have been put on their guard against risking their lives at highway crossings by carelessly going over the tracks.

And there is an opportunity for everyone to do something; perhaps in a large way; perhaps in a small way. A vast number of posters, letterhead stickers, post cards, etc., have been issued. Practically every minister of the gospel along the System has received a letter asking his cooperation and that he address his congregation on the aims and objects of the campaign.

The Safety Department has enlisted the support of clubs, automobile associations and automobile owners in many cities; of schools, municipal and state departments and other agencies. All are welded into a cohesive force that is striving to instruct the drivers of vehicles of all kinds and pedestrians that "Stop, Look and Listen" is not merely a catch-phrase, but is the panacea for all highway crossing mishaps.

Reports submitted by all the railroads last year indicated that the greater number of accidents at crossings happened in the early part of the campaign. There were more casualties for June than for any of the other three months. This proved that once the campaign got under way, there was a marked decrease in the number of casualties. Profiting by this experience, the railroads are urging their employees this year to jump into the movement from the very start so that telling blows can be delivered and prevent the repetition of last June's high accident list.

That there is need for a campaign to educate automobile drivers especially concerning the necessity of care at highway grade crossings is evident from a recent analysis of accidents on our System.

Forty-eight per cent. of all crossing accidents in a year involving automobiles on the System were caused by the fact that the automobilist could not wait a moment of two to allow the train to proceed. This failure caused the deaths of 35 persons in these machines and injury to 95 others.

There is no record, of course, of the number of drivers who succeeded in getting across the tracks just before the train reached the highway, but of the 384 accidents in the year, 183 were caused by this kind of carelessness. In many of these cases the attempt to "beat" the train was caused by the failure of the driver to realize that a fast train and a swiftly moving automobile approach each other with unusual speed. In some cases, of course, the desire to boast of ability to "beat" an express impelled the drivers to take a chance.

The second leading cause for accident was "stalling of motor on tracks." The majority of these cases resulted from the fact that the driver either came up on the tracks slowly and then attempted to change gears or pressed down on the brake instead of the accelerator. There were eight persons killed and 20 injured in stalled motor cars on railroad crossings. Eighteen per cent. of all accidents happened because of stalled motors. This is a sharp decline from the leading cause of trying to "beat" the train.

Crossing gates are usually regarded as the best protection possible over highways that are traveled with frequency. Yet there were just 50 instances where automobile drivers failed to note the presence of gates and drove into them. Only one person was injured in these half hundred accidents, but many had narrow escapes from fatalities. There has been scarcely a week in recent months when a gate is not reported destroyed or broken by some careless motorist. The gates are all painted alternate white and black stripes, regarded as the best colors for long visibility, and at night there are red lights hung upon them. Thirteen per cent. of the year's accidents resulted from this cause, which stands third on the list.

The fourth leading cause which caused ten per cent. of the total accidents, was "running into side of trains." There were 40 such accidents, with a casualty list of four persons killed and five injured in the year. Some of these accidents happened while the train was at a standstill, proving that some drivers seem absolutely oblivious to what is ahead of them. It seems unbelievable that a motorist would drive into the engine or cars, but records show that there were 40 such cases on the Baltimore and Ohio in a year.

Three per cent. of the total accidents happened because of defective brakes on the automobile involved in the accident, and another three per cent. because automobiles came to a stop too close to the track and were struck by parts of the locomotive or cars. Eight persons were injured in the cars with defective brakes and five persons were killed and five injured in cars which stood too close to the rails.

Thousands of these posters, lithographed in full colors, are posted at strategic points as a warning to careless motor car drivers

Baltimore and Ohio Potato Clubs Prove That Certified Seeds Mean Guaranteed Yields

By O. K. Quivey, General Agricultural Agent, Commercial Development Department

"POTATO growing in Indiana has a black eye because of the poor yields that are so commonly obtained," states Dr. Gregory, a leading authority on potato culture.

The average Indiana farmer will carefully explain to you that the Indiana summers are too hot and dry, that the plants become blighted and stunted and that most of them die before many tubers are formed or set.

The weather is hot and dry—there is no argument about that. However, Indiana can compete with any other state in potato production both as to quality and quantity per acre. There is equally no argument about that.

Start with Certified Seed!

To get this quality and quantity yield, certified potato seed must be used in place of common variety. Now, what are certified seed? They are potatoes that are entirely free from the diseases common to potatoes, such as leaf roll and blight, and which cause the young plants to die before tubers are formed. But plants grown from seed certified as disease free are strong and vigorous, and they withstand the hot dry summer weather and form many uniform smooth tubers.

What proof have we to offer? Why, one of the young farmers in Northern Indiana proved it himself last season, and by so doing won one of the Baltimore and Ohio scholarships of $100.00. He was also selected by Purdue University as the Champion Potato Club Boy in Indiana. This boy is John Shutt and he lives on a farm near Garrett, Indiana.

John's father had been getting on an average of only seventy-five bushels of potatoes per acre, in which he claimed there was little or no profit, counting cost of 15 bushels of seed per acre, and time and cost required to plant, cultivate, harvest and ship to market. Hence, Mr. Shutt, Senior, decided to plant only enough to supply the family needs. John decided to plant an acre of his own where he might experiment with certified seed as compared with the common seed such as his father used. But let us have John tell the story of how he became the Potato Club Champion of Indiana:

"Picture number eight shows the plot that won for me the trip to Washington, D. C. I could not have won it with the plot shown in picture nine.

"In the plot grown by me—certified seed was used, green sprouted, and planted on a clover sod, with 17 loads of manure applied and 475 pounds of fertilizer (4-8-6). They were planted on the 15th day of June. Cultivated, sprayed and kept clean. This yield was 227.6 bushels per acre, and cost $80.40 to produce.

"The other plot was grown by my father—common seed was used, planted on a clover sod, with 17 loads of manure applied and no fertilizer. They were planted on the 15th day of June, cultivated, sprayed and kept clean. This yield was 75 bushels per acre, and cost $84.43 to produce."

Besides the results obtained by this boy, we have the records of W. W. Stauffer, Fulton County, who produced on muck soil 325 bushels per acre; H. F. Wickard, Hancock County, 298 bushels per acre; O. F. Pattie, Perry County, 340 bushels on one and three-quarters acres, and numerous others who produced from 125 to 150 bushels per acre.

These men are from widely scattered parts of the state, but their weather conditions are the same everywhere. Then how did they get such good yields? They used only certified seed!

Company Supplying Best Seed to Boys

Encouraged by the results of John Shutt, the Baltimore and Ohio desired to help other Indiana boys, and, hence, this spring we purchased in Minnesota two carloads of the finest certified seed potatoes, transported them to Indiana and divided them equally among 230 farm boys, who comprise the Baltimore and Ohio Potato Clubs, each of whom has, as one boy stated: "a potato patch all my own planted to certified—watch my dust!"

Next fall the Agricultural Bureau will hold a Baltimore and Ohio Potato Show in each of the 23 Indiana Counties, at which each club member will have an opportunity of showing a peck of potatoes grown from his allotment of Baltimore and Ohio certified seed. The winners in each County will then enter the Fourth Annual Purdue Potato Show, which will be held at the University in January. To the Club member showing the championship peck of potatoes at the Purdue Potato Show, will be awarded a Baltimore and Ohio scholarship. The winner may elect to use this award for scholastic purposes at Purdue University or in defraying the expense of an educational trip to Washington, D. C.

The Baltimore and Ohio Certified Potato Seed project is being carried on in close co-operation with the Agricultural Extension Service of Purdue University, our representatives being accompanied by Mr. F. C. Gaylord, Purdue horticulturist, a national authority on potato production, and Mr. E. L. Austin, assistant state club leader, who had active charge of organizing the Baltimore and Ohio Potato Clubs.

Increased yields, improved quality, decreased cost of production, more marketable potatoes—mean more satisfied farmers and more freight for the railroad. The matter of bringing production from 75 to 227 bushels of potatoes per acre, can be accomplished by any farmer in Indiana just as it was by John Shutt, a seventeen year old boy.

ATTENTION MR. JOHN P. DUGAN

Gentlemen:

I have a letter of March 29 advising that my Health Pad sample was turned in to you on March 24, the day that I carelessly left same there. I also note that you have forwarded same by parcel post, and wish to express my appreciation for the prompt service that you have rendered in this case. You make no mention, however, of the expense that you have been put to, and I would be particularly pleased if you would advise me, so that a remittance covering same can be made to you.

No doubt you will be interested to know that the writer has always been, in the last fifteen years, a booster for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, between New York and Washington, and although there is no way of recording the number of instances, still I have had the pleasure of directing many people over your line in preference to competitors, and in all my trips between New York, Baltimore and Washington I use the Baltimore and Ohio because of the comfort in avoiding overcrowding, the cleanliness of your coaches, and your unexcelled dining car service, and as above stated, am unable to tell you the number of instances that I have advised travelers to participate in the same enjoyable railway travel.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) A. R. MACY.

Pensioners' Roll of Honor

*Oh, blest retirement! friend of life's decline—
Retreat from care that ever must be thine:
How blest is he who crowns, in shades like these,
A youth of labor with an age of ease.*

OLIVER GOLDSMITH—"The Deserted Village"

Henry M. Dolan

Henry M. Dolan was born near Winchester, Va., on a farm, April 3, 1857. In 1877 he went to the Blue Ridge Mountains to take charge of a team in lumber camp. In January, 1893 he entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio, being promoted to conductor in July, 1905. He held this position until December 1, 1920 when on account of illness he was placed on relief. He was pensioned on April 1, 1923.

Oscar W. Waltz

Oscar W. Waltz was born on April 22, 1853 in Frederick County, Maryland. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in 1870 as laborer and in 1901 was appointed pumper at Frederick Junction, which position he held at the time of his retirement. Mr. Waltz had twelve children, eleven of whom are still living. Of the six boys, five are employed on the Baltimore and Ohio, two engineers, one fireman, one conductor and one brakeman.

One of his pleasant recollections is that while struggling with a draw head one day, Charles W. Galloway, then holding an official position, saw him and came to his assistance.

Julius Roeding

Julius Roeding was born in 1851. He entered the Baltimore and Ohio service as car repairer at Mount Clare on November 14, 1890, in which position he remained until his recent retirement.

Thomas H. McAllister

Thomas H. McAllister, who retired on pension, May 8, 1923, was born at Lykens, Pa., in 1857. He commenced work on the Summit Branch Railroad, now a part of the Pennsylvania, on January 1, 1870, at the rate of twelve cents per hour. He was employed for six years as blacksmith, machinist's helper and brakeman and was then transferred to the Pennsylvania Shops at Kenova where he worked as car inspector and gang foreman for three years. He was then transferred to Williamsport, Pa. as car inspector and later to the planing mill at Harrisburg, Pa.

Mr. McAllister commenced work on the Baltimore and Ohio on May 4, 1888 as car inspector and joint inspector. He remained at Philadelphia until his recent retirement, holding positions as car and tender paint foreman, special employment agent, car foreman, labor foreman, air brake inspector and car repairman.

Mr. McAllister is known all over as the "Irish Dutchman." He speaks several languages and on several occasions has been used as interpreter. He was the first to introduce German labor in Philadelphia, securing eighty men and distributing them throughout the system. He will make his home in Baltimore.

B. F. Stouffer

B. F. Stouffer was born in 1856. He entered the service in 1872 as a laborer and was employed under James Collins in the construction of the Metropolitan Branch. In 1873 he was employed as trackman under his father, Supervisor P. B. Stouffer, on the same branch. In 1874 he was appointed pumper at Washington Junction where he remained until his recent retirement.

Charles F. Wilhelm

Charles F. Wilhelm was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, on March 26, 1858. He attended school until he was 16 years of age. (Continued on page 88)

A Scoop a Mile Saved Would Have Saved 17 Trainloads of Coal in April!

During April the locomotives on the Baltimore and Ohio System made 5,804,498 miles.

If, as is believed to be reasonable, we had been able to save a scoop of coal for every one of these miles, we would have saved, at 15 pounds a scoop, 87,067,470 pounds of coal, or 43,533 tons of coal, or (with 51 cars in a train) 17 trains of coal.

And if this coal had been loaded into cars of fifty ton capacity, it would have made a string of cars eight and a quarter miles long; long enough to reach continuously from Camden Station in Baltimore to within one-half mile of our station at Relay.

Throwing on the fire that extra "scoop a mile" not only means a needless waste of coal for the Railroad, but it also means that the fireman has to work harder.

Save a scoop a mile and save unnecessary work!

A scoop a mile saved during April would have meant the saving of 17 trainloads, 43,533 tons of coal.

Following the Good Will Girls Through France

Part III—When the French Flag Was Torn

I DON'T know just where I left off on the last chapter, but it was, I am sure, somewhere on the Atlantic. Our first sight of land came as a glad surprise when we saw the shores of England at five o'clock on the evening of April 26. Then the sea gulls began to follow the boat in great flocks. We were told that at eleven o'clock we would anchor off the shores of Plymouth, England for a half hour or more.

This afternoon there was much to do. We had to make ready for the entertainment and concert tonight. There was a lottery held for the benefit of sailors' orphans. Passengers contributed the "gifts" and then bought tickets at two and a half francs each. When the time came, Magdalen held up each gift, Dr. Willard called out the numbers as she drew them, and Jean Le Dantec repeated each number in French. The lucky persons then stepped forward and received whatever gift Magdalene held. It was so exciting to me, particularly because I held two of the lucky ones. I drew a powder box and a bottle of perfume; the latter I gave to Mlle. Clement who admired it so much. Mlle. Clement is the French woman who came over on the boat with us and who has given us a delightful lecture each day about the people and customs of France. She is a teacher in a girls' school in France. She has invited us to her home in Versailles and you may be sure we accepted.

I Became "Sambo"

Yesterday afternoon we were rehearsing for the concert which was given tonight. Mlle. wanted someone to do a dance of the American negro. Just to be sociable I did a jig or two to please her, and then to my surprise, she announced that I was to do that dance at the concert tonight. So today Jean le Dantec and his friend Quefelean got me some burnt cork, a jumper sent from the engineer's room, and—for a red handkerchief—a piece of red which they declared was a section of a French flag. At least it was of the same material for it nearly scratched the skin off my neck.

Nine o'clock came and "Sambo" was in his glory. However, with the mask of burnt cork and overalls, nobody knew me save the few who knew I had dressed so I thought if I made a mistake it would not make so much difference. Thank goodness, it went along much better than I had anticipated.

At eleven o'clock we made our stop off the coast of Plymouth, England. The sea was calm and the moonlight wonderful. It was twelve midnight (Imagine it) when we began to pack our baggage. Somewhere between one and two a. m. we turned in. At 6.30 we were up and breakfasting. Everything was a-hurry. The "pour-boire" (tips) took up much time; there were lots of last minute things to be done and the camera men and reporters came aboard and gave us lots to do. And the boat which brought them also brought a delegation from Paris and Havre to greet us. The excitement became more intense. We were entering Havre. The gang plank was being put out. We could see the crowd gathered at the station with armfuls of roses and smiling faces. I never saw such smiling faces as these French have. Always ready to joke or sing or dance. Soon we gathered in the salon at the center of the upper deck where we were met by Madame Lausanne, Captain Berdanan, and a number of other people who came to meet us and to travel with us.

In Which the Mayor Forgets His Speech

Then came the thrill of that slow crossing of the gang plank. How slowly they moved before us! Ah, at last we were

And to our brave Commander
And now three cheers for Good Ship France,
We trust that they will land her.

And come back quite elated,
To say "Monsieur, merci beaucoup!"

across! And Commander Roch stood there to say good-bye to us. Up at the fore part of the ship (what do you call it?) stood Lieut. Angot with sad eyes. Now came Captain Le Friand across the gang-plank to say good-bye to the three of us. Wasn't that fine? And he was so anxious to get back home to his little family. He showed us the pictures of his wife and children. His wife is beautiful and his children, like all the French children I have seen, are just adorable.

Ah, we were to come inside the waiting room and have tea. Tea, did I say? Well you may call it that, but I know if I should mention the other things set before us, there'd be more than one envious person in the United States. Oh well, this is France, and a reception is a reception, and as Angot says, "that's that."

WITH THE FRENCH PEOPLE

1. This woman guides the tourist through the cave dwellings of the city of Les Baux. 2. A French washerwoman gives the photographer "a piece of her mind" in respect to photographing people who object to being photographed; Miss Spengler and Miss Lauer are amused at her threats. 3. Miss Stevens exchanged costumes with a little French "Mary Pickford" for a picture at Trimont. 4. Miss Lauer and Miss Spengler standing by the wall of the Mediterranean at Menton. 5. Miss Stevens brings her laundry to the river in the accustomed manner. 6. Miss Lauer—the "baby of the delegation" and one of her little French friends at Nimes

Listen! The Mayor and the Prefect are here and the interpreter tells us they wish to speak to us. They spoke in French. The Prefect is all dolled up in the blue of the French poilu, with rows and rows of silver braid on his cap and cuffs. The Mayor is in black but is very distinguished. The former made his little speech which was heartily applauded. Then came M. le Mayor. Bravely he began with a delightful voice to welcome the Good Will delegates to France. Then, after a few sentences, the blushes spread over his face; he hesitated, then stuttered, as you or I would do, and reached in his pocket for his papers. He read the rest. Ah, we smiled but we did so in sympathy. We have worn his shoes.

Miss Jay, one of our leaders on the ocean trip, was presented with a lovely bouquet of roses and she replied delightfully in French which the newspapers said was "charming, pure French." Mrs. Chambers of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Buswell of Boston, our Gold Star Mothers, also were presented with bouquets which, after our arrival in Paris, were placed on the grave of the Unknown Soldier of France under the Arc de Triumphant.

Normandy

I can tell you how we left the station of Havre and climbed aboard the funny trains into the first class compartments; I can tell you of how we made mistakes at the table, but I cannot tell you about Normandy. The magnificent, yet simple country we passed through on our way to Paris on April 27; I have no words to describe it adequately; it is the most delightful place I have ever seen and if anybody would ask me at this moment the greatest wish of my heart, I should say to live in Normandy in the Springtime. Thousands upon thousands of glorious apple trees—all in blossom; thatched roofed and tile roofed houses, goats and cows, peasants and ox-carts; and more baskets than you could ever imagine. Everybody seems to carry some kind of a quaint basket. Goats nibbling at little patches of grass along the way; old men and women in the gardens; little children in black aprons—helping to gather cress and wild mustard. Further on there were the great patches of cultivated mustard of which there are two kinds—the light, which is extremely hot, and the dark, which we import a great deal.

All of Normandy is a delightful picture with everything in its own setting. No spot in the landscape is inartistic; nothing is out of harmony. If a pear tree grows close to the house and shades it more than it should, its branches are cut and the pear tree trained to grow against the house so it resembles an enormous climbing rose.

The Seine

Every spot is cultivated. There are no bare places. The trees and grass are all of the eight green hues of springtime. Further on we come to the Seine, where many house boats are to be seen, each with its flowers in all the windows. It seems that nothing is French without flowers. Here are the goats being milked at the kitchen doors; simple, primitive after a manner, but certainly charming are these French peasants. Oh, for a little home in Normandy, with a little garden, some flowers, and a nanny-goat!

What are these huge nests we see in every tree? Crow's nests? No, they can not be for the sun seems to shine straight through them. Ah, well, it is—what do you suppose? Mistletoe! Yes, it grows on almost any kind of a tree here.

Today is wash-day! In the National Geographic I have often seen the pictures of women washing their clothes in the stream, but when you see such pictures you are apt to imagine these are in some inaccessible place. But here they are. There are no washboards save the stones. And the poor women rub and rub, many without soap. Someone told me that the French save up their clothes for weeks, waiting for a good day on which to wash them. I do not know if this is true, but at least they seemed to be making a merry game of washing. Seldom did a woman have her eyes on her work; she must talk to her neighbor who is using the next flat rock. They sit or kneel on the ground.

I almost forgot to mention the lilac trees. There are hundreds of them on the way to Paris; indeed everything in the way of flowers seems to grow more profusely in France than in our own country. Is it that the climate is more conducive or is it because the French women work so hard to keep such lovely gardens. I say "women," for I believe it is the women who make France. Everywhere you see them toiling. The men work, yes, but the women toil. A French woman seems never to be idle. If she sits down for a rest, there are laces to be made and embroideries to be done. One old woman stood by the roadside with a hoe in her hand, somewhat in the attitude of the woman of that magnificent painting, "The Angelus." As our train went by she clasped her hands in the same manner that I think she must have done when our own boys came to aid France in the war. She had read the signs, "Good Will Delegates" on the sides of the railway cars and she understood. Her wrinkled face lighted up with joy. "Ah, les Americaines!" and we shouted back "Viva la France!"

A Glimpse of Paris

About 2.30 p. m. on April 27 we arrived in Paris. Here at the station all was hurry and bustle, the same as in New York. Outside there were more pictures to be taken; in fact, pictures of the Delegation were made everywhere, for we have a photographer with us at all times.

The funny little toot-toots of the horns on the autos—and even on the horse carts there are horns—you can hear them far into the night, not the whistle of the American locomotive, but the too-ee-le-oot of a child's tin horn at Christmas time. The omnibus driver asked for my flag and placed it at the front of the bus. Whether this entitled him to a traffic pass or not, we certainly were carried with speed to the Hotel Moderne.

The first thing that seemed so peculiar to us was to see the people sitting out in chairs on the pavements before the hotels and restaurants. On the little tables were wines, beers, tea and coffee, making a perfect rendezvous for the citizens. It is said that if one sits before the cafe at Rue de la Paix he is sure to see someone he knows—if he sits long enough. Our only trouble lies in the fact that we never have any time to sit anywhere. Every minute there is something different and we can't afford to miss anything.

The Hotel Moderne stands at 9 Rue de la Madeleine, where one may see the imposing statue of the Republic. But have a care when you stop to look up at it, for with no traffic laws in force, you are risking your life unless safely planted on the sidewalk. At the Hotel we were met by Mrs. Dike, in charge of the American Committee for Devastated France on this side of the ocean. We also had our pictures taken with the daughter of M. Clemenceau, war premier and called "the Tiger of France." We were glad to have a bit of rest after being assigned to our rooms. Oh, these French beds! They are wonderful. Soft and high, like rolling into a pile of whipped cream, with a downy covering over us!

Magdalen and Nina had a fine room together and Miss Webster of the P. R. R. and I had communicating rooms. The telephones were very curious, the transmitter and receiver being in one piece. Of course I was delighted to find that the operator spoke English; however, after ten minutes of giving me wrong numbers I gave up in despair. Magdalen went further than that and started to take the sections apart to find out where the sound ought to enter as it was impossible to get an answer. After an experience with a French telephone I shall not get out of patience with any of our Americans.

Centimes and Sous

That afternoon we had a couple of hours, so with Mrs. Conway we three started out to get some postcards, kodak films, and ink. Poor me, the only one in the crowd who knew a word of French, and nothing whatever about French money! We got some money changed at the hotel. They gave us 13 francs 75 centimes for every dollar, which is about one franc 25 below the market rate, but we had to have it and the banks were closed. After counting it over—what for I don't know, as we had centimes, sous, and francs and had not learned their exact value, therefore didn't know whether we were cheated or not.

Then we sallied forth. We walked for about 10 or 12 blocks, then started back down the other side of the street. Into a Kodak shop we went. There, without any trouble whatever, we made our purchases, although nobody spoke English in the shop. What I couldn't say we just pointed at, and the old man was very patient when we were counting our moneys.

The next stop was a stationery store where the woman did her best to cheat us, but luck was with us and we came up smiling. She evidently was not a French woman herself for she was not at all polite as all the others we have met have been, and her French was not distinct.

The next stop was for post cards at a little shop where the man and his wife and baby sat out front, while in the doorway stood the son practicing on the violin. We each bought ten cards for a franc. I asked the man if he spoke English. He said, "Non, Mademoiselle, mais beef stek et plum pudding."

After walking past the hotel several times we finally found it and went in to a simple supper of soup, fish, meat, cake, and coffee. Always there is fish for dinner. We decided we would go to bed early. We were on our way to the desk for postage stamps where we met Mrs. Blair. "Come, girls, let's go for a ride around Paris." Alas for our hopes of going to bed early!

A taxi took us around for more than an hour, visiting the Arc de Triumphe where France's Unknown Soldier is buried. We crossed the Seine where the lights made everything beautiful, and came back from a delightful ride which cost us, including everything 32 cents each!

Part IV—Avignon

ON the morning of April 28 we arose at five o'clock to get the train for Avignon. We saw many strange sights on the streets; particularly strange, it seemed, to have comfort stations in the streets and on prominent squares, although we must admit it is a sensible idea. We saw old men in frocks that resembled smocks, carrying canes and baskets.

Railroad Customs

At the railroad station we were photographed again. This time they put me up on a truck with a French truck driver. How funny it seemed! And most interesting was the fact that invariably we found that horses are used to do the switching of cars. Big, heavy Flanders horses they are, with large feet and fetlocks. The engineer's name is lettered on the outside of the car window, along with the number of the engine.

The compartments of the first-class coaches are amusing although they are extremely comfortable, even more so than the chairs in our Pullmans. For the most part we travelled on the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean Railway. Each compartment has two long seats with luxurious cushions, on each of which one may lie very comfortably, or three persons may sit, six in all, in each compartment. We traveled most comfortably since it was necessary for us to have but four in each. Sometimes all four of us would lie down for a nap at once. Magdalen always slept, Nina often, Miss Webster often, and I occasionally. The scenery was too lovely to miss and I want to see all there is to be seen.

The Temple Tours are certainly delightful although these "late to bed and early to rise" days would not appeal to me for any length of time. When a day is done we are expected to keep a diary for ourselves, an account for the Delegation's record, besides various other assignments. It is next to impossible to find time to write letters, even post cards. And when we go to our rooms we are ready to drop our clothes in a heap and tumble into bed.

From Paris to Avignon is a whole day's ride. We found that the ride was so rough we could scarcely write at all. I went in to talk to Dr. Willard and some Indianapolis girls. The doctor gave us a splendid talk which we enjoyed very much. Then we had lunch in the funny diners, where they serve ice cream and cheese so nearly alike that you almost have to smell them to tell them apart. The waiter comes along with a big mound of ice cream which he slices with a knife, and of which you may generally have two helpings. Tea, coffee, wines, etc., are charged extra. Tea is served in the diners in mid-afternoon. The cheeses are certainly delicious; we have a choice of two or three for each meal, except for breakfast, of course, which only consists of rolls and coffee. Yes, it's hard to eat rolls and coffee, and think of ham and eggs at home, but the dinners pay up for the loss of breakfast.

The Alps

It was late in the afternoon when we caught our first glimpse of the foothills of the Alps. With their snow-covered tops, they presented a lovely picture. At one place where the train stopped we saw close by the track a row of little peasant children with bouquets of wild flowers; just behind them in the lane, a girl of about 15 years, barefoot and brown, driving a cow. On the hill above her a peasant cottage before which a woman milked a goat. On the hillside beyond the orchard of olive trees were the vineyards, and in the distance the snow-covered mountains.

It was about 8.00 p. m. when we arrived in Avignon. We went at once to the hotels. One could not accommodate all of us so we split up and our group went to the Grand Hotel d'Avignon. After dinner we went out into the town. A fair was in progress and the "natives" were in gold attire. In the shops there were many fine embroideries, dresses for first communion which they wear every day for a week or two afterwards. There were many articles of stamped leather from Italy. On the top of a high hill was the Palace of the Popes, all of stone, with a magnificent crucifix set before it. Around the town is a big wall, and when we left on Sunday morning we passed through the city gates.

The women of the town dress much like Americans but more carelessly. They do not appear to take much care of their hair nor of their feet. The men wear trousers that come up high, almost to the chest, and many of them wear the broad red and yellow belts which we sometimes see in the Italian and Spanish costumes, in our theatres. In every street are the little donkey carts, loaded with everything. After a most beautiful drive out of Avignon, around old stone castles, fields of poppies and daisies, we came to a bridge known as the Pont du Gard, built in 19 B. C. by Agrippa as an aqueduct to carry water from the mountains to the baths at Nimes.

Passing through Tarasconne we noticed the peculiar head dress of the women—a black band of ribbon out of which stuck a point of lace. Many school children came out calling "Vive l'Amerique!" and we, of course, replied "Vive la France!"

Tarasconne to Nice

Leaving Tarasconne we pass up the rocky hillsides on a winding road, through fields of heather and rosemary, to one of the most exquisite spots we have yet seen—a real town of cliff-dwellers' houses, and churches cut right out of the natural rocks. The life of these people at Les Baux is rather primitive. The streets are very narrow. We got to the little Catholic Church in time for the end of the service. Inside it was the same—all of hewn stone, with a couple of windows. The chancel was very pretty and the peasants in their quaint costumes kneeling there and chanting, made an exquisite picture. After service we came back through another little crooked street, with high walls on either side. We found a dainty little garden with some chairs and a table. At the little flower bower at the entrance there was a little sign that read "Tea."

We entered. Madame came out smiling. What would the little Mademoiselles like? Wine? Beer? No? Then there was lovely whiskey, oh, very excellent. No? Then—oh, yes, certainly, tea, ver' good tea. Yes, mademoiselles should have all the tea they wanted. So we had tea, and the outrageous price was 60 centimes or about four and one fifth cents each.

This picturesque section was the scene of the struggle between the Romans and the Gauls when France was called Gaul.

Leaving Les Baux we came down to a lower level of grass and olive trees, shepherds with their flocks, and always there is the brown dog with the shepherd. At a little town called Arles we had lunch. After walking through the narrow streets, where they have the wooden shoes and red ashes for sale, we took the train for Nice.

Part V—Nice, on the First Day

France

*A fairy book from which I learn new tales each day;
The people of her charming land are fairies gay.
And though our words they may not speak—we clasp their hands—
The language of a grateful heart each understands.*

ARRIVING at Nice, tired and hungry, dirty and sleepy, we were delighted to be met by a delegation of girls, dressed in the old Niceoise costumes which are revived for festal occasions. They presented us with handsome bouquets of roses and little painted gourds tied with red, white, and blue ribbons. Then there were addresses of welcome by the Mayor and the Prefect, and we were taken to the lovely Hotel des Palmiers. By the time we had finished dinner and unpacked our

PLEASURE AND EDUCATION

1. Taking lessons in balancing a clothes basket, Miss Stevens finally learns the art from a Carcassonne washerwoman. 2. At Bleirancourt the school children entertained the delegates by singing the Star Spangled Banner, in French. 3. Who's Who in France? It was hard to tell when our girls dressed themselves in the old Niceois costumes which are revived only for festal occasions. 4. The "Good Willers" learned something of how the American Committee takes care of the French babies. 5. Pausing in reverence at Belleau Wood Cemetery before the graves of some of our own boys who were lost in the battles around Chateau Thierry. 6. Railroad girls riding in a French "side-door Pullman" which still carries the sign: "40 HOMMES, 8 CHEVAUX." Standing in the doorway is Miss Lauer; the others, left to right are: Miss Stevens, Miss Laferriere (of the Southern Pacific Railway), and Miss Spengler. 7. Delegates viewing the ruins of the Cathedral at Soissons. 8. Enjoying a Sunday afternoon promenade through the historic old streets of St. Emilion.

bags it was midnight so we could do nothing more than crawl into our high, feather beds. These French beds are most delightful and most restful. My own little bed at home is mighty comfortable, but if I had one like this in which I am now lying as I write this, I know I should have my breakfast in bed as the French people do.

Every day has been bright and beautiful with the skies bluer than I ever saw them, not even a white cloud, only the snow caps of the high peaks that seemed to extend upward into the heavens. It was on such a glorious morning, this first day in Nice, that we piled into the buses and started forth, our road leading along the shores of the beautiful Mediterranean Sea. We had to pinch ourselves to make sure we were there in the flesh as well as in the spirit, for truly it was a dream. Up the hills we went, stopping every few minutes to look back and make snap-shots of Nice. We could see also the dome of the Nice Observatory looking like a great silver globe reflecting the light of the morning sun. For many kilometers we drive with the Alpines at our left, the Mediterranean on our right, passed ruined castles and on to the little town of La Turbie. Here we got our first glimpse of Italy. Oh, what a longing came over me to go on and on; into Italy, Switzerland, across the Mediterranean into Egypt! So near all of them—and yet so far! But we should be so grateful to have seen so much! It seems like a wondrous dream—this trip to France.

Leaving La Turbie we were held up for a few minutes by Captain Berdanau who had—what do you think? Mail from home! Oh, what joy, what shouting as each heard her name called. I expected nothing, so you may be sure that when I received an official looking envelope I nearly jumped out of my skin! A cablegram from President Willard wishing us a fine time and sending all good wishes to France! How delightful—just adding another bit to our already filled cup of joy.

Down, down, down we went to Menton, quite delightful and save for the appearances of the people, quite like a town in Florida. On the road which was built by the Romans and is still in a wonderful state of preservation, we passed a number of the Alpine Soldiers, the famous "Blue Devils" of the War, wearing their queer little tam-o'-shanters with red knobs on the top. Old castles loomed up in almost every direction. Huge cactus plants and millions of rose bushes were everywhere. All the roses in Southern France must have come down to the Mediterranean to celebrate on that day. Nowhere have I ever seen such beauty in flowers. The cars stopped at the entrance of a lovely garden. Out came dozens of comely women with gifts of roses, carnations, branches from the lemon tree filled with ripe lemons, and little booklets of stamps showing pictures of Menton. We descended and went over to the city wall, the breakwater of the sea. There were bathers on the beach; there were tons of flowers everywhere; there were lovely gowns and charming girls who greeted us, and hundreds of adorable French children. After an hour's rest, we entered the buses, once more waved farewell to the Menton folk and set out for a picnic in a grove of eucalyptus and olive trees. Lunch had been provided and we spent a most delightful hour or two in eating.

Monte Carlo

The next interesting spot was the Principality of Monaco where we were to be met by the Prince of Monaco. Miles after miles of roses, and we were at the lane leading to the palace at 2.00 p. m. To our disappointment however, the Prince was unable to keep his appointment and sent one of his ambassadors instead. He was very nice, wanting to show us everything in Monaco but time allowed us only to see the museum and the aquarium, a collection of things from the deep sea, gathered by the present prince's father. Monte Carlo came next. Here was the Casino itself, and yet, I was not particularly impressed. Perhaps it was because I was tired and a bit depressed because of the heat of the early afternoon; perhaps it was because everything seemed so quiet within and altogether different from the magnificence I had expected; perhaps it was because I put no money into the games; but I can say this; after I had looked upon the faces of those who sat around the tables, winning and losing, I thought "Oh, if all this money were only sent up to the devastated sections of this beautiful country, how much nobler it would be than to gamble it away in this manner!" And to save my conscience, I couldn't bring myself to chance a single five franc note, the price for the lowest check! Perhaps you are disappointed. If so, I am sorry, but my five franc note will go to someone in need, some old grandmother, or some little child as a little help in some good cause, when we get to the devastated regions.

Do you think we had enough excitement for one day? We had—but there was more to come. We returned to town by the Lower Corniche Road, a shorter way but quite charming for it, too, lies along the sea.

By the way, there was a sign at every other corner that might sound strange to those in U. S. A. It was an advertisement, the picture of a jolly fellow in red and yellow and the signboard bore this inscription: JOHNNY WALKER WHISKEY. Now, are you thirsty? If you are, I'll let you see the cork of a champagne bottle that I picked up in the garden of Diana at Nîmes. But that is another story.

The Opera

On this evening we returned to the hotel, dressed in our formal evening dresses, and after dinner went to the opera house to hear "Tales of Hoffman" all in French.

It is quite a strain to understand French when one is not quite accustomed to hearing it, and particularly in music. So, whether it was the long day, the fatigue of driving, or the length of the production, eleven o'clock found Nina, Magdalene, Miss Webster and me nodding—and longing for our beds. It was midnight when the production was finished, and a walk by the seashore in the moonlight on our way to the hotel completed our delightful day. Do you wonder we had no time to write letters or send cards?

Nice, Another Lovely Day

Early on Tuesday morning we started out again. On one bus I found waiting for us the group of girls who had welcomed us to Nice, all dressed in their fancy costumes, and when I went to get a picture of them I found them so delightful I asked permission of Captain Berdanau to ride in the car with them. This was one of the best things I could have done. I learned more French that morning than I had gotten in a week anywhere else. There came a long ride up in the mountains above Nice where we came to Tremont where the school children came out to sing for us. The French girls insisted on dressing me in one of their own costumes for a photograph and the disguise was so complete that our advisor, Mr. Peck, began speaking French to me, thinking I was one of the pleasant girls. Then one of the schoolboys came up with a lovely bouquet of sweet peas and gilly flowers for me. I can't imagine what son of grand personage they supposed me to be. Flowers grew in wildest profusion and there in contrast with the snow on the tops of the distant mountains, made a picture I shall always remember.

After lunch there were many photographs and we set out once more for the Gorges de Loup and Grasse. When I visited Yellowstone Park last year I thought surely I had seen all the glory that is on earth, but I had not seen the Gorges de Loup. Glorious and magnificent beyond description; catacaets and bridges, tunnels cut through overhanging rocks, veritable canyons, wonderful depths—oh, I just can't describe it. I can only say as I heard a minister say of something else, that if all of the rainbows that have been since the beginning were mingled together, the result would make no more impression on me than this. A thousand feet down the cliff below, it seemed, and a thousand more to the peak's overhead. Everything in France has its beauty, its own particular beauty, for nothing seems just like what has gone before; every minute brings something new and beautiful. It is hard to tell which is best, for anyone of the things I have seen would make me weep. I am simply overcome, and my only salvation is that there are always some who speak of things earthly in the presence of this glorious handiwork of God Himself—words that thwart the tears and remind us that we are still on earth. Leaving the Gorges de Loup we were driven around the zig-zag roads, up, up, and up, passing a village of old stone houses called the Turret de Loup, several shepherds with their flocks, and we could not but be reminded of the words of the 23rd Psalm:

"Thou anointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over." For truly my cup of happiness had long been filled before we reached the little town of Grasse, the home of the perfume factories of the world. Here we had a charming reception by the Mayor of Grasse, with whom we had tea. He told us the city had been named for Count de Grasse, who had been a great worker for independence. He hurried for the Good Will Delegation and for the U. S. A. We called our "Vive la France" and Miss Jones graciously replied to the Mayor's speech. After other addresses and tea we left for the perfumeries.

The Perfumeries

Here we were told that the flowers were plucked and placed in glass frames in lard, which is the foundation of all perfumery. The flowers are changed every second day. After two weeks the lard is mixed by machinery with alcohol, until the perfumes have been absorbed by the alcohol. In one pile on the floor there must have been 25 bushels of rose leaves. The flowers used as the bases of perfumes are roses, tube-roses, orange blossoms, hyacinth, jasmine, violets, mignonettes and jonquils. Most interesting was the room where the perfumes could be purchased. How eagerly the girls crowded into the salesroom. It was a pretty sight, this bevy of girls dicker-ing for bottles of perfume, scented soaps and cream—and delightfully feminine. Some of my little French friends were quite excited for this also was their first visit to Grasse. Oh, well, there are places of interest near our own towns which we have never seen, so we need not wonder, for I think Nice is but 35 miles from Grasse. We had a jolly time returning to Nice, being showered with roses from the children by the wayside. I must not forget to say that I was kissed on both cheeks by each of the little French girls.

Moonlight on the Chateau D'If

We were not at all anxious to leave Nice; for it was so like our own towns in Florida. However, if one would travel with the Temple Tours, he must be "ready to go when the wagon comes."

We were taken to the station where we boarded the train for a long ride along the sea to Marseilles, where the band came out to meet us—a fife and drum corps—the mayor who wore a red, white, and blue sash across his chest. He gave us a real reception with gifts of armbands bearing the crest of the city, flowers, post cards, and later in the afternoon another gift of which I shall speak later. I fear we shall have to have special portmanteaux in which to carry home our souvenirs.

Our first job was to eat, as you may know. The next to see the sights of the town. The first place of interest in Marseilles is the Palais Longchamps with its bears and lions of stone at its entrance and its lovely fountains. I was interested in seeing the amount of regalia which the horses of Marseilles must wear; great collars with high-pointed peaks on top or a broad expanse of leather placed horizontally across; the top of the collar studded with brass rivets and other metals to make a big showing. The donkeys are used to do much of the work in all of the French towns which we have visited. Sometimes we see Papa, Mama and the three children riding behind one of these funny little animals.

The streets are extremely narrow; in one place a merchant had to remove his little stock of tinware from the street (on which there was no sidewalk) in order that our bus might pass by. And how excited these people get when there is something to be done immediately! They get to yelling at each other, pushing, and spluttering. It is too funny for words.

Our way ran along the seashore. Everything was different from what we had seen before. At the ship's dock we ran across a funeral. The black and white hearse drawn by black horses, all covered to their eyes and down to their knees with a regular black dress, piped in white and cut to fit each horse. The white rings around the horses' eyes certainly gave them peculiar expressions. On the four corners of the hearse were immense plumes. This evidently was an expensive funeral for there were hundreds of mourners who walked behind.

An Interesting Church

Leaving the harbor we ascended a hill known as the Hill of Notre Dame de la Garde, on the crest of which stands the chapel by that name. The building was made by the Greeks who came to Marseilles in 904 B. C. After traveling in our buses for some distance up the hill, we came to an "ascenseur" (elevator) which carried us, I think, about 350 feet farther. Then there must have been a thousand steps to climb before we reached the chapel which is known as the guardian of the mariners, for it overlooks the harbors. Inside the chapel and suspended from the ceiling are various gifts donated by marines who felt their lives had been saved by the guardianship of Notre Dame. There are pictures, relics of the war, and even a miniature aeroplane which had been presented by an aviator who had barely escaped death. This and the little ships lacked no detail.

Leaving the chapel with a feeling of reverence, although with empty stomachs (if one can be reverent with an empty stomach) we learned we were to have a reception at the home of Madame Opperman. Since a reception often means "eats" this was welcome news; our throats were dry with much riding in the dust, so you may be sure when our way led, first through a lovely park filled with flowers and then through a long avenue of trees, a winding forest-like road, we were delighted.

At Madame Opperman's chateau we had a fine reception. There was the Assistant to the American Consul, a Marquis or two, and many fine French women who welcomed us cordially. Madame Opperman is President of the Bienvenu Society of France and she had left no stone unturned to show us the meaning of the hospitality of her country. Then, too, there were the eats, no wines, but honest-to-goodness American ice water, orangeade, iced coffee, and delicious French pastries. Don't tell anybody, but I ate some of each and then went on a second round. Nobody but those who were with me knows how good it all tasted.

After refreshments the representative of the Government of Marseilles handed each of us a little white box, inside of which was a little silver pin, a locust, the emblem of the town. We have been wearing them ever since. Dinner at the hotel seemed to hang heavily on our hands after the food at Mme. Opperman's, but we managed it. While going through with our soup, Mr. Hinds, a newspaper publicity man from Paris and an American, invited us to go with him and the movie man to see the narrow streets of Marseilles, the streets that were too narrow for a cart to drive through. Our chaperon said it was a nice opportunity so we set out. Magdalene and I with the publicity man in the lead, a half dozen other girls, and Mrs. Blair with the movie man—who spoke only French, bringing up the rear. It was quite funny and we enjoyed it a lot.

The women and children sat in the doorways and in the streets; the men were drinking in the bars; everywhere there were sailors from almost every country in the world. Among them a number of Chinese and of course, Algerians. Mr. Hinds had an interesting conversation with an English sailor who carried a parrot under his coat. He wished to sell the parrot for money to buy drink and was willing to take anything for it. It developed that he had stolen the parrot from a Lascar sailor who, being drunk, had fallen asleep. Some of the streets were so narrow that by stretching out both arms I could touch the walls of the houses on both sides at once.

Down near the harbor we saw a sign which said "Chateau D'If." We wondered if we could get a motorboat to go to the isle, but the offices seemed to be closed. The movie man set out to see if he could find a boat. In the meantime we heard a shout, "Hey, you Americans!" and looking up we spied Miss Quarles, Miss Freney and Mr. Hise, the photographer, in an auto. "Come," they called, "we have a boat for the Chateau D'If." So we set out for Chateau D'If in a lovely motor boat. This Chateau, made famous by Dumas in "The Count of Monte Cristo" was used during the French Revolution as a prison; also as a German prison during the late war. The moonlight on the Mediterranean! I leave the rest to your imagination. Out of the inner harbor into the outer, past the chapel of Notre Dame de la Garde; I think the moon tonight was far more lovely than I have ever seen it. Around the shadows of the Isle it was perfect, the loveliest picture I ever have seen. Not a word was spoken by one of the twenty, nothing whatever to mar the beauty of it all. Magnificent! Returning to Marseilles we felt this had been the most beautiful evening of all.

Shall we go from the sublime to the ridiculous? Then I shall tell you. The trip cost each of us one franc—seven cents. What a price for ecstasy!

In the Old Roman Garden at Nimes

On the morning of May 3 we left the railroad station at Marseilles for Nimes, each wearing a lovely red rose, the gift of the marquis we had met in the gardens of Mme. Opperman. At Nimes we boarded trolley cars, were presented with roses again, and left for the Jardins de la Fontaine, in the center of which is an old Temple of Diana. Here a fine band played the Star Spangled Banner and we were given champagne. What a contrast! The water in the gardens is piped from the River Rhone, carried through aqueducts of Pont du Gard, and brought here originally for the old Roman baths. An address from the Mayor concluded with a "Hip, Hip, Hooray for America!" made us welcome. Today for the first time we used our umbrellas—to protect us from the sun. The famous Arena, built by the Romans centuries ago, is still used for bullfights. This arena and the coliseum which are in Nimes are reproductions of those in Rome. It did not seem in keeping with history for us to be climbing up the crumbling stone steps. And yet, when Magdalene sat on a high point to powder her nose, the photographer seemed to consider it good fun to snap her picture. Here was a building that I had never dreamed of seeing in all my life.

Indeed this trip with the Good Will Delegation has been the greatest bit of education that has ever come to me. After a visit to the museum in which was an interesting collection of reproductions of temples and arenas at Rome and Athens, we had a treat of real chocolate ice cream, followed by a shopping expedition.

Part VI—Carcassonne

The Citadel and Wash Day

AT Carcassonne we were met also by a delegation which presented us with flowers and postcards. We were very warm and our throats were parched; most of us were sleepy. But what kind angel watched over me and told me to wash my face, powder my nose, put on the Marquis' rose and brush my jacket before we left the train? I do not know, but certain it is that at other times I have missed one or two of these details. But on this occasion of being met and greeted by the Mayor and the Prefect who wore the inevitable red, white and blue sashes, Mme. De Lauzanne called upon me to reply to the Mayor.

With knees quaking under me and my heart sounding to my ears like the boy beating the tin pan on board the France when dinner was ready, I began. As yet I do not know what I said, but I suppose it passed muster as the girls said it was O. K. It is a great moment when one's words are being translated into French for the benefit of a Mayor, even if it is the Mayor of mediaeval Carcassonne.

You have never seen the citadel of Carcassonne with its Palais de Justice, prisons and courts—remnants of the old days of the Visigoths in the Fifth century. And you have much to live to see!

All the floors are of stone, the turrets and ramparts are cleverly built for the purposes of warfare. Down in the pit of the tower of the inquisition there are fire places where the irons for torture were heated.

There are long, dark, winding stairways within the towers and steps without balustrades on the outside. There is also the Bishop's Tower, where the bishops walked during the time of war when they were not allowed to go from the fortifications. The towers all stand as they were originally constructed.

From every point, one may get from the ramparts a glorious view of the surrounding country, even of the Pyrenees and a bit of Spain.

The buildings are all joined by stone walks from 25 to about 50 or 60 feet above the ground, and the citadel takes the form of a circle. It took us about two hours to make the walk around the circle—waiting at certain places, of course, for the guide to make his explanations. There is the Tower of the Mill, where flour was ground only for the Monastery; the Leper Chapel where only lepers were allowed to worship, and Observation Tower where a magnificent panorama of the country may be seen. Looking up the road toward Marseilles we saw a man and woman with a donkey, the woman riding, the man leading at the bridle. In this beautiful land of olive trees, was it any wonder that the scene reminded us of Mary and Joseph in their humble entry to Jerusalem?

These are the scenes that make us weep, that bring out the best thoughts within us, that make us feel like getting down on our knees in a prayer of gratefulness for the opportunity of being brought face to face with things like this! Carcassonne? I love it!

Down in the court stands an old well, also of stone, with a rounded stone archway, looking for all the world like the handle of a bucket. What tales this old well could tell—for it is the oldest well in Carcassonne! And Carcassonne is said to be one of the oldest and proudest cities of France!

And as we descended the narrow street leading down from the Citadel, we were met by groups of laughing school children who shouted after us in good English, "Hurrah for the Americans! Hurrah for America!" Imagine that in the fifth century! And yet, I think that Carcassonne is more beautiful today. Always is peace more lovely than is war, and the children's voices echoing in the high towers of which they have no fear—save on July 14—makes a music of peace and harmony, a picture of love and quietude that Visigoths never knew. As for me I would rather be a child in Carcassonne any day than to be the prince of Monaco. But hurrah! I am only a citizen of the United States! Home-sick? No, just proud of my own country and its people, the people who do so much for those like me who do not deserve it; people like those of our own Baltimore and Ohio Railroad who are broad-minded enough to know what an education this means to us who must earn our living. God bless them!

I Become a Washwoman

On our entry into Carcassonne we noticed a number of washer women kneeling before the canal with the big piles of clothes. for they make their living in this manner.

On the second day, therefore, the photographer Mr. Hise, scenting some good pictures, got a group of us interested in laundering. No, we could not exactly get ourselves to kneel in the straw-filled boxes that the women used to sit in. Why? Oh, I don't know. I suppose it is because of doughboy yarns, you know. However, we did rub out some pieces of clothing—not ours—on the boards and stones provided for the purpose, brought our laundry in wheelbarrows and on our heads, and got a pretty good idea of the expression, "A French wash."

At 10 o'clock we walked down to the Hotel de Ville, Mairie, or City Hall, where his honor the Mayor greeted us in a speech and in wine. Moreover, he presented each of us with a little souvenir—a tiny bottle of "Something—I—don't—know—what" but each of us is determined to carry hers back to the States as a joke on those who asked us to sneak in some champagne.

While the reception was going on, Nina and I, who had been suffering dreadfully of trouble with our feet, sneaked away and in a Carcassonne shoe store, found just the things—sandals of light weight calf. We put them on and wore them out on the street. Now we felt as though we were in Heaven.

These numbers must be such that when any three on a straight line are added together they will total 14; a second combination of numbers will total 16; another set 17, and still another set 19. The star is shown correctly as follows:

No. 9: A letter change is a puzzle in which one letter of the FIRST or PRIMAL word is changed to make the SECOND or FINAL word, as for instance, Space, Spice. Sometimes it is possible to make more than one change in the PRIMAL word thereby producing a third and even a fourth word; but in the case of No. 9 there are only two words involved, each of seven letters.

A Maryland Writer, Miss Martha Finley

By Estelle B. Barnes, Daughter of William T. Barnes, St. Denis, Md.

WOMEN, girls and children throughout the length and breadth of the land should be interested in Miss Martha Finley, the famous authoress of the "Elsie Books." While there are books and books, there are few that have—as do hers—the interesting situations, the pleasing romance, the wise religious suggestion, the pure lovmaking, and better than all, the pure womanly tone. Very few of the people of eastern Maryland, while they know of and have read her books, know that most of them are written in the quiet village of Elkton, Md., where her home has been for many years.

Miss Finley comes of illustrious Irish ancestry. Her grandfather, General Samuel Finley, was born in Westmoreland County, Pa., in 1752. He graduated from Princeton College, under his uncle, Dr. Samuel Finley, and upon the commencement of the Revolutionary war, espoused the cause of the Colonists, rising to the rank of Major. He was captured by the British at Fort Washington and held prisoner for three years. During the war of 1812 he again entered the army, and by distinguished service rose to the rank of General.

He was a warm personal friend of General Washington, and served under him as Receiver of Public Money at Chillicothe, Ohio.

His uncle, James Finley, was the first Presbyterian Minister at Elkton, Md.

Miss Finley's father was Dr. James Brown Finley. He was born in Pennsylvania on June 7, 1794. At the age of eighteen years, he enlisted in the war of 1812, with his father, and served until the surrender of Detroit, when he was paroled and returned home. Later he graduated from Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., after which he studied medicine. He married his first cousin, Maria Theresa Brown, who was visiting Chillicothe at that time. Here Miss Finley was born on April 26, 1828. In 1836 her parents moved to South Bend, Ind., where her father practiced medicine until his death in 1852.

The girlhood of Miss Finley was spent in South Bend, where she received an excellent education in a private school. She then taught in a private school for small children, and here she frequently entertained her pupils with stories which were doubtless the nucleus of tales published in later years.

Her first effort in a literary way was as a writer of short stories for religious papers, which were under the direction of the Presbyterian Publishing Co. The manuscript of her first story was taken to the Baptist Board, accepted and published, and upon its appearance was well received.

After the death of her father, Miss Finley came east and her early articles were written in New York and Philadelphia. In 1876 she made a visit to Elkton, Md., and finally decided to make this place her home. She has a beautiful residence in the best part of the village, surrounded by extensive grounds and a neat hedge fence. In this place much

Maxine Wallburg, 14 years old, daughter of Otto Wallburg, Lima, Ohio, and writer of the fine story on thrift. Maxine is captain of the basketball team at South Lima High School. Her essay won second prize in a Y. W. C. A. Contest of her best work has been done. She has written more than one hundred books, all for children with the exception of the Finley series. To any one who has read her books her love for young girls and her strong religious feelings are very evident.

No writer of the nineteenth century is better loved. Her great aim has been to interest the little ones. In this she has succeeded beyond her expectations. While all her works have attracted wide attention, her "Elsie Books" are without doubt the most popular, the principal ones being "Elsie Dinsmore," "Elsie's Holidays at Roselands's," "Elsie's Girlhood," etc.

It can be truly said that Miss Finley's "Elsie Books" made her famous, although all her work has been well received. At one time some of the newspapers of the country made an effort to stop the publication of any more Elsie books saying "We have had enough of Elsie," and one editor remarked in the columns of a large daily paper, "For God's sake give us something beside Elsie." Notwithstanding this, Miss Finley pursued the even tenor of her way and continued to write "Elsie Books." She was not writing to please the editors or publishers, but her little friends, and as long as they were pleased and satisfied, she was content to give them Elsie in every phrase.

Miss Finley is easily accessible and though her health is poor, her work goes on. She freely discusses her early struggle for fame, and is an easy, fluent and agreeable talker. She has a matronly, graceful figure; a gentle face, lighted up with bright, intelligent eyes, and her finely shaped head is crowned with a wealth of gray hair.

Her personality is very pleasing and she has a sweetly modulated voice, expressive and animated. Her surroundings are pretty exquisitely neat and convenient. Her study is well supplied with standard works and books of reference; however, but few of her own works are found on the shelves. She is a member of the Author's Club of New York.

Thrift

By Maxine Wallburg, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Wallburg, Lima, Ohio

THRIFT is the most necessary thing for a happy and successful life, a well balanced and contented family, a prosperous and thriving community, and a great nation. Not to be thrifty is to neglect one of the most essential things contributing to all of the foregoing.

There is a distinction between thrift and miserliness. By thrift we accomplish those things most necessary to our existence and conducive to our health and happiness. Without thrift, which is inspired by foresight, we fail to obtain for ourselves the things which bring into our lives the maximum of peace and contentment. It is to be regretted that the virtue of thrift was not brought more forcibly to the thought of the young by preceding generations. While there has been some progress made in that direction in recent years, we have so far but scratched the surface. Too many of us live for today only, with no thought of tomorrow until past maturity, when we first commence to realize, with keen regret, our neglect of this virtue.

Whenever a task is to be performed, it's accomplishment is hastened by undertaking the most difficult part of it first. So it is with our lives. When we are young and our earning capacity is good, we find that time, the most difficult in which to save our money, and use it to the best advantage for our future life. We disregard suggestions with reference to life insurance, home ownership, savings deposits, and budget systems which suggestions, if taken up and followed out, would mean so much to the development of our lives. It is unnecessary to go into detail and give specific instances showing the results of thrift and extravagance.

If we could get the idea of thrift firmly fixed in our minds and determine that we would pursue it to completion, the results would be of such a wonderful and gratifying nature as to make it easier for us to continue our course.

Thousands of people who have invested a small sum weekly in life insurance have realized that value of this action when some dear one is taken from them and the insurance is used for necessary expenses.

Other thousands, instead spent their money foolishly and gave no thought—in fact, ridiculed the idea of insurance. These, necessarily met with a serious situation when death entered their homes. Haven't you heard of such instances? Yes, you have; and you have also heard of men and women taking advantage of opportunities by the use of "ready cash" which was at their command in the savings banks. And how many times have you heard of lost opportunities due mostly to the fact that those people failed to save their money?

A budget system is an outgrowth of thrift and is becoming more and more in evidence in our families, in our private and public institutions. The wisest move and one which will mean much in the administration of our national affairs was the inauguration of the budget system by our President.

Thrift should be brought to the thought and attention of everyone, old and young; and its introduction into our public school system was a large step forward toward making this a better, more prosperous, contented and happy nation. Will you not commence today?

She Envied People Who Could Sew—Then Found It Was Easy

THE accompanying picture shows Marie Slatterick, secretary to division engineer, Wheeling, W. Va. wearing a bathing suit which she made for herself from MAGAZINE pattern No. 4277.

Marie says in her letter to us:

"It's surprising how easily one can make things like this. I never gave myself credit for anything of the sort and always envied people who could sew, but I've discovered that all it requires is a little common sense and a pattern as easy to work from as those furnished by the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE.

"This beach frock is made from Pattern No. 4277; it's made of red and white checked gingham and it took five and a half yards of 32 inch material, as I couldn't get the particular gingham I wanted any wider. The material cost forty cents a yard amounting to $2.20 (Two dollars and twenty cents)—a reasonable price for a suit, don't you think? The trimming I made of some scraps I had. The cap is red and white also and came from Stifel's Department Store. The shoes are Keds in black and white. I am very much pleased with the outfit and it certainly is inexpensive to make"

By Mrs. M. W. Jones

Wife of Assistant Editor of MAGAZINE

Whites of 11 eggs, beaten stiff; 1 ½ cups granulated sugar; 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 1 level cup flour and one teaspoon cream of tartar sifted four times. Mixed in order given. The flour should be folded in lightly and cake beaten not more than is necessary after flour has been added. Bake for 45 minutes. Have oven hot when cake is put in, but reduce heat immediately.

(NOTE: The assistant editor often brings this angel food cake for lunch, but he never gets to eat it if the associate editor scents it in his lunch box.)

To Make Rose Beads

Clipped from an old copy of Peterson's Magazine for May, 1853, by Miss M. Elizabeth Bell, file clerk, General Superintendent's Office, Camden Station

Beat the petals of red roses in an iron mortar for some hours until they form a black paste. Then roll into beads and dry. They become hard, take a fine polish and are very fragrant.

Midsummer Clothes Are Lovely This Year

By Peggy

THERE'S something about these midsummer clothes—I don't know just what it is—but this year it seems that even our frocks are beginning to follow Mr. Coue's way of thinking and are growing prettier and prettier. Perhaps it is just a matter of their simplicity, and this feature, of course, naturally means that they may be made more easily than ever.

Did you ever see a dress in a shop window that you wanted oh, ever so badly—but felt as though you couldn't afford to put as much money into a dress as the price marked on that one? Isn't that a horrid way to feel? And yet, a little girl of my acquaintance, Agnes by name, found a way out of it.

Agnes is a stenographer. Each day when her lunch is finished she takes a walk on Charles Street and looks in the windows. One day last week I met her.

"Oh, Peggy," she cried, "do come with me and look at this lovely dress! And I'm going to have one like it for Eleanor's party."

"Agnes!" I exclaimed, "How on earth are you going to have that dress and go on a vacation to Niagara and send your mother to the country, too? You'd better 'go easy' on your money."

"Nonsense," laughed Agnes, "don't you know I'm learning to sew now? Honestly, it's just as easy as anything."

"But what has that to do with that handsome yellow dress?"

"Everything, Silly! Don't you remember that pattern? It's the self-same one that I saw in the last issue of the MAGAZINE. I ordered it on Friday and yesterday it came. See this package? Do you know what it is? Why, it's nothing but four and a half yards of the loveliest lemon yellow organdy that I could find. I'm going straight home this evening and cut it out. Tomorrow evening and Thursday I can finish it. Just watch me."

"Oh, Agnes, that's great. Don't forget to add a little black velvet for trimming, just to make it look Frenchy."

"Already have it," she declared.

"There's just one other thing that you must have."

"What?"

"Black velvet buttons, just oodles of little tiny ones. They'll run along the slit in the sleeves and they'll form a little design where the dress closes at the neck—just like French knots, you know."

"Oh, yes, I'll get them tomorrow," she declared. "By the way, when are you going to tell me some more about those fashions that you saw in Paris?"

"Haven't time now, but if you'll look out for next month's MAGAZINE, I'll probably have lots of other things to tell you."

So Agnes went back to her office, and I am quite sure that next Saturday afternoon she'll be the best dressed girl at Eleanor's party.

What Agnes did you can do. With the variety of patterns shown in this issue of the MAGAZINE, there is a choice for everybody. If, however, you would like to see others, send 12 cents in stamps for our

Why Sarah Lost Her Love for Currants

By Sarah Herself

Note: Sarah, the author of this amusing little story, is the wife of Passenger Conductor Charles Shipley. The story of the minister's wife's hat is only one from the rich storehouse of tales that Mrs. Shipley has at her tongue's (or pen's) end. If this story reminds you of something that happened in your childhood, or at any other time in your life, we shall be delighted to have you tell us about it. It does us good to hear a tale of the pantalette days.

DO you remember 'way back in the Sixties when the coming of a new minister and his wife was a great event among the members of a Methodist congregation? Well, the writer happened to be a little girl at that time, and you may be sure that she has good cause to remember such an event.

My mother had dressed me up all in my starched petticoats and pantalettes. My dress stuck out all around like a balloon. Then she had said to me, "Sarah, if you do anything naughty this afternoon, I shall surely punish you so that you will remember it."

Of course, Sarah promised to be particularly good—and really, she meant to be, but since she happened to be one of those kids who never knew, what she was going to do next, how did she know what was going to happen? And whose fault was it if the new minister and his wife came a-calling unexpectedly?

That dear lady caused all the trouble, for she wore on her saintly head the latest style hat. And oh, my! What a most beautiful wreath of artificial currants there was on it! Lovely red currants with white stems! What a temptation to a little girl whose mouth watered to find out whether they were real currants or only make-believe; for surely they did look natural. Mother took the good lady to the spare bedroom, where slept only guests of high degree. The minister's wife took off her hat and mother laid it on the spare room bed. Then the two went downstairs. They talked, and talked, and talked.

Soon little Sarah, growing tired of conversation which was so uninteresting to her as compared with her thoughts of the lovely currants, slipped off and made her way to the room in which lay that wondrous hat. She looked and looked at it for a long time before she dared to touch it. Then she felt of a currant; then she squeezed it. Pop! It snapped! What a funny sound! She popped another, and another, and another. Well, who would have thought that those currants would pop like that? And they weren't real, either. She snapped and snapped, until there were no currants left to snap. It was not until then that she realized what she had done. Then she sneaked quickly on tiptoe from the room and spent a mighty uncomfortable afternoon.

Oh, if you could have heard the shriek of that minister's wife when she beheld her hat, decorated with only the long, white stems of the currants left on it! And oh, if you could have seen the expression on my mother's face! She knew just about whom to blame, and you would have known that there was something coming to Sarah.

Of course the dear sister said, "O", it doesn't amount to anything," and, "Don't punish her," but I could feel that there was trouble in the air.

"Come here, Sarah," said Mother. I went. She looked at my fingers. They were scarlet from the snapping of those currants. I had not counted on the dye staining my fingers, but I suppose Mother knew. Mothers seem to know everything, anyway; you don't have to tell them; sometimes I think that they have eyes in the back of their heads.

Oh, Girls, you can't imagine how sweetly Mother's slipper spoke to me a few minutes later! The preacher's wife had gone, but the sting was left behind. Do you wonder now why you never see me wearing currants or cherries on my hats? More than that, there might be one reason why I married Mr. Shipley—to change my name. It was "Kerns" then, and although spelled with a "K," it was horribly suggestive of ministers' wives' hats.

Little Raymond's Message from France

Dear Girls and Boys:

As most of you know, your old Aunt Mary has had a lovely trip to France. I only wish that I had the time and space to tell you everything about it, but if you will turn to another section of this MAGAZINE you will find a part of the story of how we began our journey through the beautiful cities of Southern France. Later you may read about how we visited the battlefields and the graves of our own American boys.

Not far from a delightful little town called Blierancourt our party, the Good Will Delegation of which I shall tell you more some day, stopped at a little school. This school is being carried on by American, French and English teachers. There is also a little hospital for sick people, and places where mothers may take their sick babies for treatment.

There are also libraries where the poor people may come and read, for you must know that the War destroyed nearly every single house in this section, and with them all the lovely furniture, books, pictures and everything that was dear to the hearts of the people. Now they are glad to get anything whatever in the way of books to read and lovely things to look at. They are too poor to have schools, so they must depend on whatever education they are able to get through the help of the people of other countries as well as those in other sections of their country.

Now, there are many, many lovely flowers in France, so that when these little children heard that the American women were coming to visit them, they planned to present a big bouquet of the loveliest roses and peonies that they could find to the Gold Star Mother of our party. Perhaps most of you know that a Gold Star Mother is the name given to a mother who has lost her son in the war. So Mrs. Chambers, a delightful woman from Cincinnati, received the handsome bouquet from a little boy whose name is Raymond Descarsin.

Raymond is about 12 years old. He told us that with the help of his schoolmaster, he had composed a little essay which he would read to us. It was a splendid essay. I have not the space to let you read all of it, but here is a part of his letter, in French, just as he wrote it. When translated it means:

"As interpreter of my schoolmates and my teachers, I beg of you that you will let me express a wish, which I am quite sure will be realized.

"On your return to your noble and generous country, I would like you to say to the little children of our ages, as well as to their parents and to all of the people of the United States, that we have learned to admire their fathers, that we cherish their mothers, and that, recognizing all the noble sentiments which are dear to our compatriots, we love them fraternally.

"Long live the United States! Long live France!"

Isn't this a pretty little thought to bring back to America? I wonder if some of our little girls and boys have not a message that they would like to send to Raymond and his little playmates in France. Let me know what you think of the idea.

Yours lovingly,

Aunt Mary

The School Bus

By Irvin Crowl, East Brunswick, Md.

This is the bus that takes us around,
Up the hills and round the towns.
This is the driver, a great big man,
With coal black hair and face of tan.

Messames,

Interprète de mes camarades et de mes maîtres, permettez-moi, je vous prie, d'exprimer un désir qui, j'en suis assuré, sera réalisé.

« À votre retour dans votre noble et généreux pays, dites, s'il vous plaît, aux jeunes enfants de notre âge, comme aussi à leurs parents et à toute la population des États-Unis, que nous avons appris à admirer leurs pères, que nous chérissons leur mères, et que, connaissant tous les nobles sentiments qui animent vos compatriotes, nous les aimons fraternellement.

Vivent les États-Unis! Vive la France!

South African Railway Girls and Boys Have Exciting Time

OUR girls and boys will remember that some months ago we published a letter from Mother Goose, of the South African Railways and Harbours Magazine. Mother Goose writes for the children in South Africa and they write letters to her as you write to Aunt Mary. Following is a letter from one of these little people in which the writer tells of an exciting capture of four little—well, read the letter and you will see.

Dear Mother Goose,

Here we are, having holidays again, and half the year is gone; our school closed the 22nd June and commences again the 18th July. Quite a long time, is it not?

Last Sunday we went for a long walk into the bush; we were about twelve altogether. We were sitting in the shadow of some trees when we heard the boys calling: at first we thought they were joking, and so would not go and see what was wrong, but at last we went, and there, at the very top of a thorn tree, sat four little Bush apes. They are really lovely. After a long struggle we succeeded in catching all four, and what excitement it was! We have one of them, which we intend to send to my Aunt in Capetown.

With lots of love,

Yours truly,

(Signed) JESSIE VAN DER MERWE.

How would you like to live in South Africa and catch little apes for pets?

COME on, girls and boys. We want to hear from more of you. We have a puzzle which "The Major" has written just for us. It is called a charade. A charade is a puzzle in which you first guess the parts of the word, separately, then put these together to make the complete, or whole word. Here is a little one with its answer, just to show you what a charade is:

My ONE is a line that's used to guide
A horse when he's pulling a load;
You may find my TWO in the park or the zoo,

Though the woods is his natural abode.
With antlers fine and nimble feet,
At Christmas time comes my COMPLETE.

Answer: Rein-deer.

Now try the new one. Don't forget the set of post cards for every correct answer.

Send your answers to:

CHARADE (7 letters)

Old Mother Hubbard went to the COMPLETE

To get a scuttle of ONE,
But when she got there, the COMPLETE was bare,
And the poor old lady got none.

Her famous old dog was hungry and cold,

And his mistress found a big bone,
So he gnawed and he whined, he pawed and he cried

For his mistress to order the ONE.

Her cupboard was empty, no coffee,
no tea,

The sugar TWO scraped clean and bare,

But a friend who had known her in years long gone by,

Filled the COMPLETE, and ended her care.

For he filled up the cupboard with plenty of food.

The house he made cozy and warm,
So the dear old lady and her poor old dog

Were safe from cold and from harm.

The Major.

My Home Town

By Esther V. Righter, Randallstown, Md.

THE name of the town in which I live is Randallstown. It is located in the country district, about six miles from Baltimore. There are two stores, one church, and one school. The school is larger than some village schools. There is a complete Grammar and High School.

Randallstown is about a hundred and fifty years old. Before it had ever been settled, the king of England gave the land to a family by the name of Randall, and said if they would cultivate the land they could have it. That is how Randallstown got its name. Later on more people came here to settle, and it became a village.

There is a bus line from Baltimore to Westminster, and trackless trolley line which will run as far as Randallstown. Randallstown is out on the State Road, where there is a good deal of traffic.

The occupation of the men is farming and trucking. Everybody has his own garden and chickens. There are mostly frame cottages here.

Martha's Class Has a Safety Club

Morgantown, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Mary:

I am very sorry that I have been so long in writing to you to thank you for the pencil. I appreciated it very much. I really think I did not deserve it.

I want to tell you that our room in school has a Safety Club. John Bullock is the president. We have ten rules. These are the rules;

1. Do not play in the street.
2. Do not push anyone in the street.
3. Cross the street at right angles.
4. Do not jump on moving vehicles.
5. Stop, Look and Listen at dangerous places.
6. Do not ride small vehicles on sidewalks or streets.
7. Cross the streets as soon as possible.

8. Do not hold an umbrella in front of your face.

9. Do not jump from moving vehicles.

10. Do not ride on the running board of a car.

I have been going to school and have been very busy. I also thank you for the kind words you had in the Magazine about my work to help Safety

Butterflies

By George Care, East Brunswick, son of Brakeman William R. Care

Did you ever see a caterpillar in the garden? The caterpillar makes a house of silk around her body.

She stays there for a while.

When she comes out of it she is a beautiful butterfly.

Little son of Mr. J. R. Easton, Dennison, Ohio, and his doggie

The butterfly flies back to the garden and lays some eggs on a cabbage leaf.

Baby caterpillars are hatched, and the baby caterpillars turn into butterflies.

Don't you think it would be fun if boys and girls could be two or three things?

A Robin's Nest

By Bernerd Hecker, East Brunswick

WE were living in an apartment in Baltimore. There was a large tree outside my bedroom window. A robin had built its nest there and laid three tiny blue eggs in it. I watched every morning to see if the eggs were hatched.

The lady on the second floor had a large white cat which came to the window and frightened the mother bird away. I watched all summer to see if the mother bird would come back to her nest, but she never came and I was greatly disappointed.

Two Little Heroes

A FEW weeks ago the editor of the MAGAZINE received a letter from Superintendent Trapnell of the Charleston Division telling all about how two little boys, each only ten years old, kept Baltimore and Ohio trains from being delayed. Would you like to know how they did it?

Well, these little boys always keep their eyes open, so it happened that on April 21 they discovered our Baltimore and Ohio bridge, No. 42-A, on fire. Did they stand still and watch it burn? You bet they did not. They ran for quite a long distance, and told Edward Swick and Orlando Lee from Buchannon. By the time that the trackmen arrived on the spot with their outfit, they found the little boys putting the fire out. They had brought buckets from home and with the assistance of Mr. Swick and Mr. Lee they had put out the worst of the fire.

The Baltimore and Ohio appreciates the help of wide awake people, and the quick thinking of these little boys shows that you don't have to be grown up men and women to do great things. Who were these boys? Why little Lewis Teets and William Turnbull. Here are their pictures. Thank you, William and Lewis!

R. B. White, General Manager, New York Lines, Given Farewell Dinner by Maryland District Officers

ON June 11 about two hundred officers of the Baltimore and Ohio, most of them from the Maryland District, attended a subscription dinner given in honor of R. B. White to celebrate his promotion to the position of general manager of the New York Properties.

The Hotel Emerson in Baltimore was the hospitable host, the dinner being held in their largest banquet room, which, as the accompanying picture shows, was still decorated as it had been the preceding week in honor of Shriners visiting Baltimore en route to their great convention in Washington.

The invocation was pronounced by the Reverend Frank G. Porter, pastor of the Rognel Heights M. E. Church, of which Mr. White is a member. Bohl's Orchestra furnished delightful music during the dinner hour, playing, it seemed, just the kind of songs which the diners liked, for they often joined in the strains of such favorites as the "Swanee River," "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Dixie."

One of the most delightful features of the occasion was the arrival of Mrs. White and the two White children, Jane, age 13, and Roy, Jr., age 6, who came in just before the conclusion of the dinner. This was an entire surprise to Mr. White and must have been an extremely pleasant one as he saw the first lady of the occasion and the two children ushered to seats at one end of the speakers' table. Another honored guest was Mr. White's father, who can be seen in the picture seated on the left of President Willard.

Outside of the speakers' table and a few tables reserved for the several committees which had charge of the dinner, there were no reserved seats, the guests coming in arm and arm and seating themselves as acquaintance and friendship suggested, at the same or nearby tables.

The toastmaster was A. K. Galloway, district master mechanic, who was also the general chairman of the dinner committee, and who introduced the first speaker, President Willard, in a few appropriate words.

Mr. Willard acknowledged the pleasant introduction and, addressing himself in turn to the honored guest of the occasion "to General Manager, Mrs. White and the little Whites" and the other diners, he voiced his appreciation of the work done by Mr. White for the Railroad. His principal thought was centered upon the new general manager as an illustration of a man who has succeeded largely because he has never forgotten the viewpoint of the men reporting to him. This topic is of such general interest and importance in an organization such as ours, especially when discussed by our chief executive, that it will be used elsewhere in the MAGAZINE as a separate article.

Mr. Willard referred to the way the opportunity came for Mr. White's promotion, mentioning the election of Mr. Begien as operating vice-president of the Chesapeake and Ohio and paying a most gracious and appropriate tribute to that well-known and greatly esteemed former officer of our Road. He also mentioned in a humorous way the criticism which had come to the Baltimore and Ohio because of our acquisition of the C. H. & D. and said that he was sure that Mr. White, who was with the C. H. & D. when it was taken over by our Road, could hardly be classed as a liability.

In concluding he expressed his gratification over the friendly, family spirit expressed in the gathering, and bespoke for Mr. Van Horn, Mr. White's successor in Baltimore, the same cordial support which had been given to Mr. White.

Elizabeth Duncan McComas, noted soprano of the Baltimore Opera Company, then sang three numbers: "Carissima," "My Laddie," and "Love," which were well received and heartily applauded.

Senior Vice-President George M. Shriver was next introduced by the toastmaster. His introductory story was a good one, especially because it was at the expense of one of the chairmen of the dinner committee. He said that a passenger on one of our dining cars was recently observed in the act of eating a piece of pie which he had evidently been persuaded to order somewhat at least because of the fact that it was run on the menu as "baked on the car." He said to the waiter:

"Waiter, are you sure that this pie was baked on the car?"

And while the waiter was replying in the affirmative, Mr. Baugh, who was nearby, overheard the question and interposed with:

"Yes, that pie was baked on the car. Have you any suggestions concerning our service?"

"Yes," said the diner. "Suppose hereafter you let some one else bake them."

Mr. Shriver referred in an appreciative way to a number of officers of the Road, who came to the Baltimore and Ohio with the C. H. & D., among them Mr. White. He then gave a brief history of the present line of the Baltimore and Ohio from Baltimore to New York, telling of the days when cars coming into Camden Station were pulled by horse power to the President Street Station of the P. B. & W., and from there run to Philadelphia over that line.

It was during the presidency of Mr. Charles F. Mayer, of the Baltimore and Ohio that the Pennsylvania Railroad secured control of the P. B. & W., making it necessary for the Baltimore and Ohio to build its own line from Baltimore to Philadelphia, at great expense. He also mentioned the pleasant arrangement we have had in past years with the Philadelphia and Reading and Central of New Jersey for approaching the New York territory, and of the acquisition of the railroad lines and terminals on Staten Island, giving us our freight entrance into the great port of New York.

And he said that although he hoped and was sure that Mr. White would meet with great success in his new field, there would always be a warm welcome for him when he had occasion to come to Baltimore.

Mr. Shriver's address was followed by the singing of three interesting numbers by some of the members of the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club who were present: "The Vagabond Song," "De Sandman" and "Swing Along," a pleasant variety for such an occasion.

Mr. Scheer, general manager, Eastern Lines, who of all the men present has been associated longest with Mr. White, was the next speaker. He spoke principally of Mr. White as an illustration of the big opportunity open to energetic and aspiring men on the Railroad. In this connection he said:

"This gathering here tonight is further proof, if such is necessary, that we live in a land where all men are born equal; where all men, regardless of their walk in life, have in a large measure the same opportunities.

"It is true that in other lands many men of prominence have risen to that estate from obscurity through their own efforts, but in no country are the opportunities as great as in the one in which we live. We in America are, indeed, fortunate, for here opportunity knocks, not once, but frequently, for those who prepare for its coming. It is unfortunate that many do not realize this truth.

"As the history of our nation shows many prominent statesmen, soldiers and industrial giants who have risen from humble and obscure positions, so the history of the Baltimore and Ohio is further proof of the opportunities open to all its employes, a survey of its roster of officers, in all departments, revealing the fact that they have risen step by step, either with this or another railroad, to their present positions.

"Harmony is the strength and support of all institutions and the spirit of harmony and co-operation which exists on the Baltimore and Ohio today, prompted this gathering of officers and employes for the purpose of bidding God-speed to an officer who, by reason of his integrity, ability, and perseverance, has now been promoted to the position of general manager of the New York Properties.

"It has been my privilege to have been associated with Mr. White for a number of years and his departure from the Eastern Lines represents a personal loss to me. In all these years I have found him to be faithful, loyal, energetic and efficient, and thiis the record he brought with him from the C. H. & D. to the Baltimore and Ohio.

"On behalf of the officers and employees of the Eastern Lines, I wish to say to you, Mr. White, that while we regret to have you leave the Maryland District and the Eastern Lines, we rejoice that your loyalty and ability have again been recognized, and our good wishes go with you."

Mr. Scheer's address was followed by a splendid piano solo, Verdi-Liszt's Rigoletto Paraphrase, by Mr. Sylvan Levin, the accompanist of the Glee Club.

In introducing C. W. Van Horn, Mr. White's successor, as general superintendent of the Maryland District, Mr. Galloway assured him that he would find the same sturdy, loyal support so noticeable during the incumbency of Mr. White. And as he rose to speak Mr. Van Horn was given the kind of a reception which emphasized the assurances just expressed and said that with that kind of support the Maryland District would continue to go ahead. He said that in his opinion there had never been on the Railroad, certainly in his long career with it, a better spirit among officers and men than there exists today, and he stressed the opportunity and responsibility of the officers in this connection. He illustrated this by saying that when an officer has an appointment with an employe, for no matter what purpose, he should make it his duty to keep the appointment and in that way extend the same thoughtfulness and courtesy to the employe which he expects in return.

One of the high spots in the evening's program then followed with the introduction of C. E. Owen, trainmaster, Baltimore Division, who in a most appropriate little address conveyed the formal greetings of the dinner guests to Mr. White, and with them as a memento of Maryland District friendship for him, the gift of a handsome watch, chain and charm. And in order for all present to understand the invariable necessity of good teamwork, starting in the home and spreading itself over the entire personnel of the Railroad, E. V. Baugh, superintendent Dining Car Department, presented to "Mrs. General Manager" White a wonderful basket of flowers; this, of course, amidst laughter, applause and cheering.

After such an evening the new general manager did remarkably well in his little address. He admitted a multitude of rapidly changing impressions ranging back to his early days on the Maryland District, and continuing up to the time of his talk; impressions of war, troops, munitions, coal, conventions, inaugurations, European dignitaries, and all the other things that come into a railroad man's life during such times and in such a section of the country. He said that he expected the dinner would be a small one tendered by a few friends and that the number of men who had come out to wish him well was a great and pleasant surprise: that such a turnout was just like Baltimore and Ohio men, that it illustrated the way they had responded whenever he had called upon them during his work as general superintendent and that he would never forget the sincerity of the final evidence they were giving him, in the token of the dinner and of the gift, of their friendship and good wishes.

The toastmaster then read letters of regret from several of our officers, including Vice Presidents Galloway and Fries, whose business engagements had made it impossible for them to be present and whose letters showed that they were in entire harmony with the spirit of the evening.

Some new verses had been written for the Baltimore and Ohio Officers' Song in honor of the occasion and were sung by the members of the Glee Club as follows:

Our hats are off to those who know
Just how to make a railroad go,
And so we thank the gods who sent Us Daniel Willard for President.

(Chorus)

Away, away, oh, here they come,
Open your eyes and watch them hum,
All past records they'll put on the bum,
The men of the Baltimore—Heigh-O!

Though our accounts be small or great,
There's one man sees them up to date,
George Shriver's lights will ne'er grow dim,
We'll name our babies after him.

(Chorus)

And Charlie Galloway's a peach—
Just watch him strive a goal to reach;
Than lose a point he'd rather "bust"—
With him you'll win or bite the dust.

(Chorus)

In the traffic world he does his bit,
This Archie Fries and makes a hit;
In work or play he's all the same—
But you should see him write his name!

(Chorus)

And here's the chap with the awful punch,
Who takes his coat off with the "bunch;"
The air is blue 'round Eddie Scheer—
'Tis black smoke causes it, we hear.

(Chorus)

Here's to the boy who's in the light—
None other than our R. B. White;
With smile as broad as his heart is big,
He'll make all New York dance a jig.

(Chorus)

Here's to every man of you!
Your hearts are right, your aim is true,
ALL TOGETHER—ON THE JOB—
We'll make our mighty railroad throb.

(Chorus)

A big hit was then made with the singing of a parody on "Gallagher and Shean" as fully set forth on another page in this issue.

The occasion was brought to an appropriate close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne by the entire assemblage.

Following were the committees in charge:

so that she would not have to travel far into the night with her little ones.

By a fortunate accident Trainmaster Dick Mallon and Chief Dispatcher A. L. Johnson were in the station. They heard the story and it immediately appealed to them.

The operator was directed to hold No. 54 at Hamden, about three miles away, and Mr. Johnson started immediately on a hunt for a taxi in which to take the woman and children to overhaul their train. He met Mr. A. D. Goddard, a local undertaker, explained the circumstances fully, with the result that Mr. Goddard immediately jumped into his car, ran to the station, picked up the woman and her flock, and in a few minutes they were happily on their way on No. 54 without cost or delay to the train.

The "Wellston Daily Sentinel" tells us that the thanks of the woman were heart touching, and further adds "This adds another to the many good records made by the Baltimore and Ohio employees during the ninety-six years it has been operating under its charter."

These Employees Know How to be Good Neighbors

By L. M. Mason, Correspondent, Wellston, Ohio

THE Wellston, Ohio, "Daily Sentinel" of March 6, 1923 calls attention to another of those acts which so splendidly exemplify the Good Neighbor Policy of our Company.

It appears that on the previous evening a woman with four small children approached the ticket window at Wellston and inquired "if the train for Athens was due." The train, No. 54, had just left. The woman gave a sigh of regret that she was late and had missed it; she was tired and worn out and had hoped to be in time to make the train and reach her destination

Crossing Watchman Urmson Risks Life to Save Boys

ON February 20, P. & L. E. engine 9127 was pushing four cars ahead of engine over the Furnace Street Crossing of our Company at New Castle, Pa. Three small boys were crossing the tracks at this time, and, stepping from behind a freight car, did not notice the approaching train and were about to step on the track in its path.

Crossing Watchman Jack Urmson, at the risk of losing his own life, ran across the tracks in front of the oncoming engine and stopped the children from walking into almost certain death.

Jack Urmson is one of the faithful employees of the Akron Division, and has been highly commended by his superintendent for his action in this case. Of a retiring and modest disposition, "Jack" said nothing about the matter until it was reported to the Railroad officers from an outside source, when inquiry developed the facts outlined above, which is the explanation of our failure to previously report the incident in our MAGAZINE.

Yumpin Yiminy

Ole Oleson had been working as an engine wiper and his boss, a thrifty man, had been coaching him for promotion to fireman with such advice as: "Now, Ole, don't waste a drop of oil—that costs money. And don't waste the waste, either—that's getting expensive, too."

With these facts of economy pounded thoroughly into his head, Ole went up to be questioned on his eligibility as fireman. The last question was: "Suppose you're on your engine, on a single track. You go around a curve and see rushing toward you an express. What would you do?"

Said Ole: "I grab de dam' oil can; I grab de dam' waste—an' I yump, by yiminy!"

Brunswick Veterans Hold Annual Picnic

By R. L. Much, Magazine Correspondent

THE morning of May 16 dawned cloudy and gloomy, with every indication that we were in for a "spell of weather." However, at eight a. m. Camden station was crowded with Veterans, their families and friends, ready to make the trip to Brunswick "rain or shine," and at 8.10, when the special left, about 200 persons were on board. General Superintendent White, Superintendent Hoskins, District Master Car Builder Calder, Trainmaster Mewshaw and other officers were on hand to see the start. Unfortunately President Allen was unable to accompany his chapter.

One car of the special train was occupied by the Baltimore Chapter, invited guests of the Brunswick Veterans.

On the train we saw Chief of Welfare Department W. W. Wood, Grand President of the Veterans and Mrs. Sturmer, Mrs. Charles Shipley, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. George Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. J. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Collingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, Mr. Wilbur Galloway and family, Mrs. Baxter, and many others.

Among interesting visitors at the picnic we saw Thomas Shenkel, who entered the service in 1870 and is now pensioned, and Baggage man Hanson, 53 years service, and still going strong. Mr. Hanson told us that he remembered Brunswick in 1875 when there were only four houses and no railroad yards. What a difference today! The thriving town built up through the industry of the workers of the Baltimore and Ohio is well worth a visit.

The special arrived at Brunswick at 10.20 a. m. and was met by the Brunswick committee, who assigned automobiles for those who cared to use them to the Park; the others formed a parade and marched through town under the leadership of Mr. Wood. The weather indications continued disappointing, but after our arrival at the park, the sun broke through the dull grey clouds and a fine day seemed assured.

Arriving at the fine park of the City of Brunswick, the visitors quickly made themselves at home, some sitting on benches under the trees, others on the grass and still others making an "immediate break" for the "eats," which were plentiful. A fine chicken and ham luncheon was served by the ladies, which every one enjoyed.

After lunch, we made our way down town to see the parade, and well worth seeing it was, too. The parade was headed by the Grand Marshall, Engineer Jesse Mann and Assistant Marshall Green on horseback, followed by the Rohrsville Band. Then came Veterans and visitors in automobiles and the "Jazz" float.

Next in line was the West Brunswick School, carrying banners relative to forest production, forest preservation, etc.

The East Brunswick school children, all in white, made a brave showing. They carried banners with "Safety Slogans" such as "Daddy, Be Careful," "Baltimore and Ohio Safety First," etc. The St. Francis School children and the parade of local merchant's advertisements made a pretty appearance, while the Brunswick Band furnished good music for the march.

Next in line came the Volunteer Fire Brigade with their motor driven engine, all the members being dressed in their new uniforms, and making a fine appearance. Their chief, W. G. Cummings, Chief W. C. Nunce and Truck Engineer C. O. Cooper are to be commended on the military appearance of their company.

The Fire Company was followed by the Cow Boys in their holiday regalia, who were heartily cheered by the crowds assembled to greet them.

Last in line we find the old Veterans, not so many in number as in former years, but still marching as members of the loyal Baltimore and Ohio family to the last.

After the parade reached the City Park, it was reviewed by Vice President Galloway, General Manager Scheer, Superintendent

Hoskins and other officers who had arrived at 2.00 p. m. Their special was met at the station by the Veterans' committee, headed by our medical examiner, Dr. H. S. Hedges, who escorted them to the grandstand.

Speeches were made by Vice President Galloway, General Manager Scheer, Superintendent Hoskins, Grand President of Veterans Sturmer, Judges Urner and Worthington, Hon. Jacob Rohrbach, Superintendent of Schools G. Lloyd Palmer and Acting Mayor Jacob H. Moler.

A demonstration by the fire laddies was next in order. This was enthusiastically cheered by the veterans and their visitors.

Just before the program closed the new Baltimore and Ohio "Capitol Limited" passed ON TIME; everyone including our officers lifted their hats and cheered this new proof of the progressive march of our Company.

During the late hours of the evening a chicken supper was served by the ladies, after which dancing—in which officers, employes and visitors joined—to music furnished by a local orchestra, continued until a late hour.

Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1, Baltimore, Md.

By Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, President

THE high average attendance at our meetings is gratifying and encouraging; it shows an interest in the welfare of our organization which is seldom manifested in organizations or lodges of this description.

At our April meeting, former Mayor (then Mayor) William F. Broening was the speaker. He gave us an interesting description of the welfare work done by the city in connection with the care of the poor and sick. Mrs. Steiner won the monthly prize; a center piece.

Our regular meeting announced for May 16 was postponed until May 23 to enable our officers and members to attend the annual outing of the Brunswick Veterans. A large delegation attended the picnic, wearing our colors. They were received at Brunswick station by the entertainment committee and conveyed to the picnic grounds. Automobiles were also furnished for our officers' use in the parade.

The Brunswick Veterans are to be highly congratulated on their excellent parade and the perfect arrangements made for the entertainment of their guests. The trip home in our special was an enjoyable one. Many songs and hymns were sung. Sister Espey entertained us with several songs and Grand President Sturmer with a short address. And, we must not forget Past President Wall who—as a long distance singer—has no equal. Did he have a good time? Ask him!

Our luncheon in honor of Senior Vice President Shriver was held on May 23 at the New Howard Hotel. A description of it will be found in another part of the MAGAZINE.

Our auxiliary is growing fast and is becoming an active organization, taking its place with the best in Baltimore. It is the desire of the officers to make our meetings attractive and to devote their

Any Veteran's wife or widow is eligible for membership in our organization. A cordial welcome awaits all new members.

A measuring party will be held at the home of our president June 27, and an excursion to Tolchester July 6.

Martinsburg Auxiliary Named for Senior Vice President George M. Shriver

MAY 24 was a big day in the annals of the Martinsburg Ladies' Auxiliary to the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans, for it was then that this body was officially christened "The George M. Shriver Auxiliary," in honor of our senior vice president.

The ceremony of christening took the form of a banquet—one of those for which the women of Martinsburg are famous. Mr. Shriver had been invited to enjoy the festivities, but being unable to be present, he sent as his representative his assistant, F. X. Milholland. Among the other visitors from out of town were Grand Vice President and Mrs. Garvey, of Wheeling, and Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, president of the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary of Baltimore.

An interesting program assured a most enjoyable evening. Music was furnished by an orchestra of young women and there were addresses by the visitors and by Father McKeefry, who was one of the guests of honor. Rev. F. M. Woods opened the meeting with prayer. President and Mrs. Fauver also gave delightful talks. All present voted this to be one of Martinsburg's happiest evenings.

A Veterans' Number

In Which Many Readers of This Department Can Have a Part

IT has often been suggested that the MAGAZINE devote an entire issue to Baltimore and Ohio history, and particularly that part of it dating back to the early Railroad days of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans who are now active or pensioned.

The press of current material each month in the MAGAZINE makes it impossible to dedicate an entire issue to our Veterans, but we can increase the size of the MAGAZINE by twenty or thirty pages for a single issue to handle a large number of stories which would be of especial interest to our old timers.

We are especially anxious to secure the pictures of well known Railroaders of the period 1870-1900, men of the type of John K. Cowen, receiver and later president, and "Tom" Fitzgerald, general manager, both of whom were widely known and beloved by the employees of the Road.

Pictures of employees now living, but shown in a Railroad setting of thirty or forty years ago, on station platforms, on engines and cars, etc., will also be appreciated.

Sometimes old photographs are so faded as to make satisfactory reproduction difficult, but send in anything you may have and we will try to work it up as best we can, returning safely to you whether we use it or not.

Any reminiscences involving men who were well known up and down the Road in their day can be used nicely and also any stories covering notable epochs in the history of the Road such as the opening of the road from Baltimore to Philadelphia, the running of the first train through the Belt Line Tunnel, the running of the first Baltimore and Ohio train over our own tracks into Chicago, etc., etc.

Protect all pictures carefully with cardboard and mark plainly on all pictures and manuscripts the name of the person sending and to whom they should be returned.

We would appreciate greatly cooperation of our Veterans in making this the most interesting number of our MAGAZINE ever published.

Helpful Death Benefit Plan Adopted by Brunswick Veterans*

UNDER the leadership of Ray Smith, late dispatcher and president of the Veterans' chapter at Brunswick, a safe and sane plan for the payment of death benefits to the survivors of deceased Veterans, was put into successful operation.

Soon after Mr. Smith was elected president of the chapter, he put it up to the members that if each man would contribute $1.00, it would provide a fund which could be turned over to the widow or other responsible survivor of the first member of the lodge who died, immediately after his death and when ready money is so often needed badly. The plan was put into operation and with the growth of the membership, a payment of $205.00 is now available to the family of each Veteran in the event of his death.

In order to provide against the contingency of two members passing away in quick succession, the reserve fund is now represented by $2.05 from each member, providing an immediate death benefit of $1.00 per member for each of two Veterans if and when deceased. The five cents premium is added to cover the secretarial and postal expenses incident to the handling of the fund.

Now, in Brunswick, when a Veteran dies, his widow need have no apprehension about lack of ready money. As soon as word of the death reaches the chapter, a sum of money amounting to $1.00 from each member of the chapter is immediately placed at her disposal. This seems to be an excellent plan and that it has met with the cordial support of the Brunswick Veterans is shown by the fact that no canvass needs to be made for the $1.00 assessment. All the members gladly contribute this amount as soon as a Veteran dies, so as to keep the benefit fund up to the reserve strength necessary to insure it against the passing away of two members.

In Memoriam—William Burkhart

By Clara McDonald Taylor

AGAIN the Angel of Death has visited us and taken from our ranks our beloved brother, William Burkhart. His illness, although long, was borne with patience and fortitude.

His life was replete with noble qualities, and was a wonderful example. His personality was full of a sunny charm which cannot die, but must live on, and we who are left behind will reap the benefits of his noble life.

We shall miss him at our gatherings. He was highly esteemed by all and was a lovable friend. His amiable character won for him a host of friends in our lodge and in our city.

Brother Burkhart's wife, who is left to mourn his loss, was a former president of our Auxiliary. Our sincere sympathy is with her and the children, in their great loss.

Experience teaches us that the weight of such a sorrow is hard to bear, but we remember that we are but human and that the Angel of Death will call us one by one.

"I am not changed by what has happened, I am nearer than you think, I can come for still I love you, And unbroken is the link.

"So when you feel sad and lonely, And each day but miss me more, Think of me as one who's entered Rest through death's mysterious door.

"Not a door locked, barred or bolted, But a portal leading straight Into life, where I, with others, Watch your coming, for you wait.

"Wait until the shadows lengthen, As sinks down life's setting sun, Wait till dawns that better morning, When the parted shall be one."

fest wherever there is a gathering of the ladies of this organization anywhere on the System. It has a quality that is lacking in auxiliaries of other bodies, due no doubt, more to the reason for its inception than to any other one thing.

To be the wife or life partner of a veteran employe of this great System of ours, of which our membership is composed, means to have shared the trials, responsibilities, joys, sorrows, happiness and sometimes grief for a considerable period of time with our partner, and having gone through that experience, the result usually gives to its possessor a larger and broader view of life. So when kindred spirits of this nature meet together there can be no other result

The Declaration of Independence

Compliments of Remington Typewriter Co.

What a mind picture is created by the associations clinging to the signatures affixed to the Declaration of Independence!

Behind each name stands a personality, vital and human, linking their wonderful lives and time to the achievements of the present and the hope of the future.

All that America has become was contained in prophecy in the character of the men who signed the immortal Declaration. Like the Republic, for which they were responsible, they represented many types of mind and varieties of career.

The South contributed picturesque Southern planters, brilliant soldiers, and at least one political philosopher. Intellectual New England sent its stout-hearted and iron-willed statesmen. The Middle Colonies added to these, men of finance, social philosophers and the professional type. A brilliant, steadfast, farseeing group to whom not only the United States but civilization itself owes a stupendous debt.

Think of John Hancock of Boston, who signed first. Surely his was the boldest signature ever affixed to a State document, and it represented a character of equal boldness and force.

Picture to yourself Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia, in his homespun costume, with his homely speech that nevertheless contained depths of philosophical and practical wisdom. Recall him as he stood at the French Court and by his sheer personality captured the imaginations and opened the purse strings of the French Exchequer.

Remember the daring of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who wrote his address after his name, because, as he said, "he wished the Government when it wanted to hang him to know where to look for him." This signer was the richest man in the Colonies at that time and the only Catholic, as well as the only one who gave his home address.

Picture to yourself John Adams of Boston, of the marvelously courageous soul whose specialty for several years had been the hurling of defiance in the face of the British Government.

The name of Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia, the famous physician whose medical service had been so great, and that other great Philadelphian, Robert Morris, the banker who became the financial genius of the Revolution, make clear to us the great part Pennsylvania played in the founding of this Government.

And Thomas Jefferson, the great Virginian, who gave form and body in the Declaration, to the magnificent decision to be free that was burning in the hearts of the people of the Colonies.

In imagination one understands the grief that must have been in the heart of Richard Henry Lee, who was absent from Congress because of sickness in his family, and thus lost the opportunity of preparing this mighty message to mankind.

Richard Stockton, founder of the family famous in naval history, signed for New Jersey.

The name of Livingston adds luster to the history of New York. It is one which has persisted in that state and is borne today by worthy descendants of Philip Livingston, the signer.

Every meeting place, whether it be a hotel or residence, and each school in the United States should have a fac-simile of the Declaration of Independence, and the children should be familiar with the name and life work of these sturdy patriots. Each colony contributed of its best. Typical men were these, who pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor in the cause of Freedom, Justice and Equality.

Each home in the land, also, should have the message of this mighty document speaking from its walls, that true patriotism may be inspired by the mental procession of great characters brought into being by these great names.

When the Declaration was accepted on July the Fourth, the Liberty Bell hanging in the belfry of the old Pennsylvania State House, now known as Independence Hall, first proclaimed to the people the glad tidings that Liberty was born in the New World. What that bell did for the colonists of that day the sight and reading of the Declaration should do for the citizens of the present. It should proclaim the meaning of America and make us pledge ourselves anew to the service of the Spirit of America.

Now We Need Business!

It is probable that from now on and until the annual grain movement gets under way, there will be a gradual decrease in the amount of business offered.

There is no reason, however, why this should result in idle cars or idle men on the Baltimore and Ohio.

No reason—if we all get busy and use every reasonable expedient to bring business to our rails.

Have you a friend who controls the movement of any freight? If so, will you not get in touch with him immediately and ask him to do what he can to send it over the Baltimore and Ohio?

One of the best ways of securing additional business is through acquaintances working for other railroads who can put in a good word for the Baltimore and Ohio and the service it gives. Such men are often able to control the entire routing of shipments moving long distances.

A busy railroad means a happy railroad, with well employed facilities and men. Let's get busy and see to it that the Baltimore and Ohio continues to be a busy railroad in so far as we can possibly make it.

Eggs and Eggs

"George, you may bring me two fried eggs, some ham, a pot of coffee, and some rolls," said the man to the waiter.

"Yes, sir."

His companion said: "You may bring the same. No; just eliminate the eggs."

"Yes, sir."

In a moment the waiter returned.

"Excuse me, sir, but what did you say about them eggs?"

"I merely told you to eliminate them."

"Yes, sir." And he hurried away to the kitchen.

In two minutes he came back once more, leaned confidentially and penitently over the table and said:

"We had a bad accident this morning, sir, and the liminator got busted off, right at the handle. Will you take them fried same as this gentleman?"

Among Ourselves

Baltimore and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio Annex Building

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBECK

In 1861

There is another item I want to touch upon, though it might be denominated ancient history, but it brings out a point as to loyalty to our colors—our flag.

The war of the rebellion, otherwise known as the Civil War, began with the firing on Fort Sumpter in Charleston Harbor. Now please be patient with me for I will not offend in my utterances as to the why and wherefore of the conflict. The City of New York, particularly at the outbreak of hostilities, was the rendezvous or resort of Southerners; the Union element feared an outbreak, and so a body of determined men called upon the newspapers to know on which side they had cast anchor.

The New York Tribune, Horace Greeley's paper, was quick to respond, by displaying our national colors. Then the New York Herald received a call. James Gordon Bennett the elder, was obdurate and unyielding. Finally he realized that the crowd in the street was filled with determination and he gave up, giving special prominence to the colors and the affair was happily terminated.

In 1881, and this too might be regarded as venerable in character, John K. Cowen, then general counsel, took me to the office of L. M. Cole, the then head of our Passenger Department occupying a small office at Camden Station. After an introduction, Mr. Cole was requested to furnish me with a pass good for ten days, between Baltimore and Washington, as I had not given up my Washington home. The ten day plan was to give me a chance to demonstrate whether I could read my shorthand notes with ease and accurately transcribe them. After two or three days, Mr. Cowen decided that I filled the bill. My happiness was augmented by the receipt of a quarterly pass, and I was proud to feel that I was enrolled as an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

John W. Garrett

John W. Garrett was president at that time. He had a way of writing in pencil on documents placed before him, and his chirography was so atrocious, that, like Horace Greeley, after his emendations became cold, he had great difficulty in deciphering them himself.

Josiah A. Kinsey

When Mr. Cole gave me the passes I refer to Josiah A. Kinsey was his shorthand secretary. Mr. Kinsey gave me the first real smile I received in the service and I have always remembered it. He is now secretary to the Commissioner of Police located in the Court House, Baltimore City. Whenever I have occasion to call upon the Police Department for information, my friend Mr. Kinsey is at my service.

New York Trains

Our trains to New York at this time were hauled by a string of horses from Camden Station to President Street, there to be connected with P. W. & B. trains to the east. When I was married in Washington City, in 1867, ten hours were required for the journey to New York. Now we run magnificent trains with every possible accommodation through in less than five hours.

In Bethlehem

On Saturdays, the latter part of the day in Bethlehem is usually devoted by Bethlehem Steel Company's clerks and stenographers, to working in the garden, and thrift and order prevails. There is something in the atmosphere of Pennsylvania that brings this about. Every girl is taught to do housework and none is afraid to darn stockings. Mark that!

Miss Keller

We have added to our Law Department clerical force another good stenographer in the person of Miss Margaret I. Keller of Romney, West Virginia. Please do not get the impression that because Miss Keller does not come from Boston, she is not fully qualified for her work. Her touch system on the Remington is of the best brand, and her shorthand work is entitled to the same commendation. Miss Keller began her Law Department work on May 7, 1923.

Careful Crossing Campaign

I regard the campaign to "Stop That Leak," as most important, but the Careful Crossing Campaign, in my judgment, far exceeds it. I suggest that each MAGAZINE correspondent and indeed every employe give it hearty support.

Baggage and Milk Department

Correspondent, MABEL L. MENGES

Mr. Dugan attended the American Association of General Baggage Agents' convention held at Signal Mountain, Chattanooga, Tenn., May 9, 10 and 11.

Mr. George A. Morton, general baggage agent, New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, New Haven, Conn., recently visited this office. Mr. Morton is one of the few general baggage agents still in active service who originated the American Association of General Baggage Agents, and has participated in all the improvements which have been made in the service from the time of its infancy up to its present modern methods.

The Lion Tamer's Club held its annual convention in Akron, Ohio, on May 24, but as it was necessary to send in the notes before that time, we do not know whether its two most prominent members, "Mutt" and "Jeff," attended or not, although we understand that C. D. Honodle, the popular ticket agent of the Union Depot Company made extensive preparations to see that these distinguished members of the Club were properly entertained, which he can do so well.

We hope that Mr. Honodle will let the MAGAZINE readers know what "Mut" and "Jeff" think of this beautiful city.

Mr. Norris is now numbered among the suburbanites, having purchased a home in Arbutus. He is already confronted with the commuters' usual problems as he is wondering how he is going to take home the garden rake and other implements of torture, and if such things can be carried on the Toonerville Trolley. We also understand that Mr. Norris has erected a new chicken house, and to make sure that he doesn't lose any of his choice birds, has secured it with the latest model in Yale locks. The hinges, no doubt an original idea, are made of leather.

The Police Department came very near being minus its local captain. J. J. McCarron, accompanied by Jerry Murphy, recently went on a fishing trip down the river. During the day Captain McCarron started out in the boat alone leaving his friend on shore. Sometime later Murphy was aroused by shouts from down the river, "Save me! Save me! I'm floating out to sea!" Murphy promptly responded to the call for help, when it was found McCarron had lost his oars and had just realized his imminent danger. Mr. Murphy has been recommended for the Carnegie medal.

Engineering Department

Correspondent, O. K. EDEN

On the occasion of his fiftieth birthday, May 3, the employes of this office presented Chief Clerk E. R. Sparks, with a beautiful basket of roses. We celebrated his birthday by partaking of a fine birthday cake made in his honor.

Joe Kemp's latest name is "Bungalow Joe." Ask him why.

While pursuing a copy of one of New York's leading financial papers the other day I came across an article with the caption "Give the Courtesy You Expect." On reading this article over I learned that it concerned the telephone and the way to use it. Some people think that a telephone operator is a machine and should not make errors. But it has been proved in the majority of cases that the trouble lies not with the operator, but with the person making the call. I did not intend to talk about telephones and persons using them. What appealed to me was that the title of that article "Give the Courtesy You Expect" can, and does refer to whatever intercourse you may have with your fellow worker or with patrons. Nothing helps more to pave the way to success, no matter what the undertaking is, than to have the reputation of being courteous, and to live up to that reputation. "Give the Courtesy You Expect!"

"Bill" Towson was all excited on May 17, when friend stork visited his home and left a baby girl. Congratulations!

This department was represented at the Ninth Annual National Convention of the American Association of Engineers, which met in Norfolk, Va., on May 7, 8 and 9.

Our baseball team has lost three games out of a possible four. (We might mention, as a coincidence, that the only game won was when Valentino Seitz moved). A pretty poor average, one must admit, but according to Captain Joe Gallagher, hopes are high. Though losing the games by narrow margins, the infield composed of bridge draftsmen, (what does a bridge draftsman know about baseball any way?) is not to blame. William L. Raabe, an employe of the Company held the lucky number that awarded him the ten dollar gold piece which was raffled off for the benefit of the baseball team.

Our old friend, "Bill" Kolker, made his usual monthly pilgrimage to the office from the west laden with sweet perfumes, the like of which we believe even "Cleo" herself never dreamed of.

The bowling team representing this department closed a successful year a short time ago, having won 72 games out of 90 with a percentage of 800. They knocked down 44,665 pins with an average for the 90 games bowled of 496.27. Fine work, fellows! Keep it up next season.

Dan Cupid was not to be denied last month, so as his victim he selected Raymond B. Wilson, one of our many (?) handsome levelmen. The second party to the agreement was a demure Miss from Wheeling, W. Va., Margaret Klieves. The couple were married in Wheeling, the home of the bride, on May 2, and came east for a short honeymoon. Incidentally (and luckily for us) "Buck" stopped in the office and honored us by presenting his charming bride.

On the announcement "Buck" gave as his "at home" address Denver, Colorado, which goes to show he is following Horace Greeley's advice "go west young man." He has severed his connection with the Company and is now employed by the Denver Construction Company, Denver. Our best wishes go with you, "Buck!"

One of those blamed "English sparrows" tells us that we will have another wedding in the fall. How about it, Harry?

A certain young man in our office has received a new name. Houdini, man of mystery. Who is he?

J. W. Kathman is the proud possessor of a "Chevrolet." Joe says they're some "car." We hope to secure a ride when he has matriculated to the S. F. D. Union.

C. W. Brown, levelman, left the service April 30 to engage in business with his father at Baltimore. We wish him every success.

A welcome is extended to J. T. Rowan, successor to Mr. Brown. We believe he will like "Cincy" better than the "Smoky City." We will try to make him forget Pittsburgh.

It is noticed that P. A. Callahan owns a program of the "May Festival." From the size of it we are inclined to think it would require months of laborious study to find out what it means (apologies to Rube Goldberg.)

A good beginning for Mr. Aro, Office of General Freight Claim Agent

H. L. Scribner can give us a few pointers on the technique of house painting, as he is a close observer of this class of work. Selah. Don't worry, Herbert, you'll get your reward some day, perhaps, if you keep watching.

S. A. Graham does not care to walk down West Fifth Street when he goes to the old C. H. & D. depot to catch a train. How about it, Sam?

Office of District Engineer, Pittsburgh, Pa.

We regret to announce the death of Miss Hazel M. Leasure, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Leasure and sister of "Bill" of this department. Miss Leasure's death occurred at the home of her parents in Hazelwood on April 15, after an illness of many months. Her death was not unexpected, but nevertheless it came as a shock to her parents, brother and a host of friends. This column extends to Mr. and Mrs. Leasure and "Bill" its sincerest sympathy.

Our new train, the "Capitol Limited," made an excellent impression on its first trip, being ahead of time at nearly every stop. We wish that more of our excellent trains were lifted out of the mass and given the recognition they deserve as supplying something distinct and exceptional in the way of service to the traveling public. More of them deserve the distinction of being identified by name, and we hope to see our progressive and far-seeing officers adopt this suggestion.

General Freight Claim Agent

Correspondent, E. H. BREWER

Owing to the sudden illness of our efficient Correspondent, Miss Norma Applegarthe, which necessitated a furlough for 30 days, I have been asked to act as substitute during her absence.

I will endeavor to do the best I can and trust you will overlook my short comings.

Half A Century Of Service

Our genial and optimistic foreman in charge of Refused and Unclaimed Freight at Camden Station, Samuel D. Lewis, has passed the fiftieth mile stone of service, having first entered the service as truckman, May 2, 1872, and being from time to time promoted until placed in charge of the refused and unclaimed freight, which was all formerly sent to Baltimore for disposition. This method having been changed, Mr. Lewis was transferred to the Freight Claim Department on January 1, 1919, and at that time made foreman, Refused and Unclaimed Freight sent to Camden Station.

Mr. Lewis' record of service, loyalty and devotion to the Company's interest, should be an inspiration to the more youthful members of our family.

Our timekeeper, Mr. Aro, is well known for his expression, "All here." In the accompanying photograph we do not know whether "they are all here," or not, but it looks like a pretty good beginning for one so young.

Have you noticed a shortage of postage stamps recently? We are told that J. C. Roberts' best and only girl has been visiting in Merchantsville, N. J., and that he spends his evenings using reams of paper telling her how much he misses her. Moral. Let the wedding bells ring and save postage stamps!

"You must wake and call me early, Mother dear, For I'm to be Queen of the May."

These were not the words used by Margarette Schutte on the evening of April 23, but the thought was somewhat similar.

Not to be "Queen of the May," but on April 24 to be made "Queen of the Heart" of William R. MacCallum.

Rev. Arthur C. Day at Madison Square M. E. Church said the fateful words which we feel will gladden the world always for our friend MacCallum, whose service with the Baltimore and Ohio is as clerk in the Freight Claim Department.

All our society reporters were present, and they record that the bride was gowned in white canton crepe with hat of same material, and that this costume was most becoming to the tall willowy figure of the bride.

"Divinely tall, and most divinely fair." A story of a bouquet of perfect white rosebuds completes the description.

The bride lived up to all traditions by arriving late at the church, but made up for this by crossing the gangplank of the Steamer Nantucket well ahead of leaving time, not quickly enough, however, to dodge an avalanche of rice dropped on the pair from the upper deck.

The couple, when last heard from, were on their way to Florida and Cuba.

Your correspondent inadequately expresses the regard of the office force for Miss Schutte when he says that she left us bearing with her our best wishes.

A happy future and may every wish of their hearts come true.

Recently we were favored with a visit of Division Operators Tuttle, Day, Plumly, Riling, McCarthy and Drawbaugh. Although these gentlemen spent most of their time in conference uptown, we are pleased that they found a few minutes to spend with us.

As a rule the feminine sex is given credit for absent mindedness, but it did not happen to be a young lady who lost "ITS" wearing apparel in the Pennsylvania Hotel, while in New York. What say, Mr. Miller?

The girls of the Telegraph Department wish to again extend their thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Plumly for the delightful ride in their new Hudson. It is a dandy car and they took us through a most beautiful part of the country. The ride was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Miss Catherine was asked if she was out with a red headed gentleman. She replied "No, cotton head." What kind of hair is cotton color? Ask Miss Catherine. We do not know.

Our chief clerk was seen dining at Hydes. Who was the young lady? Ask "Bob." He was also seen going to Washington with one of the fair sex.

Miss Catherine and Thornton are getting friendly. May be it will be a match. Ask Catherine what "Billy" will say.

That our department can show "speed" when occasion requires is indicated by the fact that recently our chief clerk arose from his bed at 6.00 a. m., in order to be measured for a suit, which was completed in time for his use at a banquet held at 7.30 p. m. the same day.

We are happy to note Miss Ritter's improvement and hope for her complete recovery before long.

Nothing like being a political candidate and being invited out to dinner! J. A. Renahan (our Ex-Councilman Candidate), although not elected, made a good showing and we expect to see him elected next election.

Rumor has it that Clifford wears a regular man's hat now, with a band on it an' everything.

Now the heat of the Baltimore Mayoralty Campaign is over and the election decided, all having voted for his or her favorite, it may be a source of consolation to those whose candidate was unsuccessful to read the following motto of Mr. Harold O. Nordness, Cashier of the State Bank of Junius, South Dakota:

Never mind the losing-think of how you ran;
Smile and shut your teeth, lad, take it like a man;
Not the winning counts, lad, but the winning fair;
Not the losing shames, lad, but the weak despair;
So when failure stuns you, don't forget your plan;
Smile and shut your teeth, lad, take it like a man.

Auditor of Disbursements

Correspondent, LILIAN E. SCHUELER

We are pleased to congratulate one of the veterans in the office of Assistant Auditor Disbursements, and as fellow workers, extend our hearty congratulations to E. L. Bangs. He entered the service of the Company April 12, 1893, and has had an interesting and varied career.

His first employment was as car builder at Baileys. From there he was transferred to similar work at Locust Point Elevators where he served several years. Afterwards, he became assistant foreman of car repairs and speedometer work at Mt. Clare Shops, continuing there until 1905.

He was then directed to report to the late Major J. G. Pangborn as assistant in arranging exhibits of an historical character which have been made from time to time by the Baltimore and Ohio.

He was one of the demonstrators at each of the historical exhibits, meeting many persons of note in the course of several years in this part of the service.

He was also connected as an instructor with Mr. Pangborn in the apprentice school, the "Help Him Who Helps Himself," for young men in the service, giving instructions gratis in several branches.

Mr. Bangs, with his natural disposition and qualifications for this special work, has gathered a large amount of historical data, not only regarding motive power and other mechanical appliances of the Company, but also concerning other Railroad Companies.

He is an authority on historical railroad matters. He has an extensive collection of rare coins and stamps, and one of the best collections of Lincoln Mementoes.

From May 1, 1917, he has been clerk in our Transportation Bureau, but is also called upon for stories at various times on historical matters. He still has charge of the St. Louis World Fair Exhibits which are stored at Martinsburg, reporting for this work to J. S. Murray, assistant to president.

It might be noted that one of these exhibits is the famous Baltimore and Ohio locomotive "Atlantic," the "Grasshopper" engine built in 1832, which is now the oldest American built locomotive in existence. At various times this engine, under the guidance of Mr. Bangs and others, has been operated by Presidents Jackson, Lincoln, McKinley and Roosevelt.

Mr. Bangs received the degree of mechanical engineer from the Sheffield School of Electricity and also from the International Correspondence School at Scranton, Pa. He is a member of the National Puzzler's League. Many of the readers of the MAGAZINE are familiar with this instructive amusement through the articles by Auditor of Disbursements Pryor, each month.

It is an interesting fact that Mr. Bangs was one of five survivors of Uncle Sam's seamen at the time of the hurricane at Pago Pago Harbor in the Samoan Islands, in September of 1874, when several German and American vessels were lost and only one vessel, a British cruiser, "Calliope" was saved.

One of his pleasures and accomplishments is that of having been an organist for more than 30 years, in several churches, together with incidental training of the choir.

We all heartily wish Mr. Bangs and his esteemed wife many years of happiness.

Miss Ethel Fisher has been wearing a beautiful diamond on "THE" finger of her left hand since Christmas. When will wedding bells peal forth the joyful tidings? Forsooth, we know not. Surmises? Oh yes, we have, and our guess is—soon some lucky fellow will be made happy (or otherwise). Good luck and best wishes, Ethel dear.

We are glad to see Miss Virgin Mitchell back with us recovered from her operation.

The romantic circle of the A. R. A. give out that one of the young ladies of that Bureau is to repeat "I do" by the side of an extremely nice member of the bar (no, you're all wrong this time, it's not 1/2 of 1%, he's 100%).

It was good to see Miles Cavey back in our midst after two weeks of illness.

Our office was represented at the annual convention of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon held at Atlantic City, April 24, 25, and 26 by Messrs. Wilmer, Wilt and Waltzinger who report an enjoyable trip. Harold Wilt, captain of the rangers of the Baltimore Forest, was presented with a silver loving cup by the Atlantic City Forest.

The Baltimore and Ohio General Office Duckpin League closed the 1922-1923 season with an outing at Willow Grove Park, on May 5. Members of the team who attended have made those who didn't go regret the fact for more reasons than one.

The "A. D." girls are going in for tennis, as a visit to Clifton Park any Monday evening from six to eight p. m. will prove. They are enthusiastic and extend an invitation to all girls who wish to benefit their health and spend an enjoyable evening "raising a racket" to join them at Clifton any Monday.

G. H. Pryor, auditor disbursements, will pilot the Baltimore and Ohio Baseball Team in the Inter Club League, ably assisted by H. C. Shipley, business manager and R. H. Shakespeare, field captain. Players have been picked from all departments including shops. Games will be played at Walbrook Oval, Mt. Washington, Maryland Casualty and Maryland Swimming Club. All league games will be called at 3.00 p. m.

Well folks, the Gold Dust Twins are at it again and this time we select as the object of our friendly thrusts a wee (with apologies to 2240 pounds) mademoiselle, who weighs nearly as much as the rest of the A. R. A. Bureau. This sweet Miss just recovered from a long illness and, much to our surprise, instead of reducing she induced more avoirdupois to collect upon her already well supplied being. But the point of this is to express our pleasure in seeing her back, with the same bright smile.

The Baltimore and Ohio family represents such a large body that one is always making new acquaintances among its members and experiencing thrills in becoming closely acquainted with the "Good Samaritan" characteristics of these people.

One of our force was joyfully anticipating an exciting visit to New York, but failed to properly scrutinize the time table and, as a result, arrived at Mt. Royal Station in time for the next train to the great metropolis, only to have her ardor diminished by the gateman when he explained that the pass in hand was not acceptable on the train in question. This was no ordinary disappointment, as the next train on which the pass could be used reached New York too late to realize previously made plans. Pondering over the situation, a happy thought was hers, and remembering the nearby location of a friendly office, she approached it for assistance.

A welcoming hand was extended, and, the facts in the case being stated, swift action was pursued, surpassed only by the rapidly revolving wheels of our "Capitol Limited" when the brakes are off, in an endeavor to be of assistance. The vice-president's office was communicated with and a request to have the pass indorsed to make it permissible for the holder to be transported to New York on train No. 524, was conceded in the emergency. This courtesy was deeply appreciated, not alone because of the pleasure that was to be gained, but because of the consideration extended by two busy personages of this "Big Family."

Much interest was centered on the match between our Bowling Teams of opposite sexes, which took place at the Recreation Alleys, May 10. Despite the fact that our girls acquitted themselves creditably, they lost three games to the superior (?) sex. Rumors were noised about that one J. T. I. "sold out" for reasons best known to ourselves. W. M. C. worked hard, winning the first two games from his opponent by a very narrow margin, but youth eventually conquers age, and in the third game "Eastern Sho" subjected him to the humiliation of a walloping defeat. "Lefty" Miller, the ladies' captain, rolled her usual excellent game, and "EM" surpassed herself. "Otts" must have had thoughts of Pittsburgh and very encouraging ones too, we think, while J. D. was there with bells on.

Never mind, Captain J. G. B., we don't hold it "agin" you, because we really think you are deserving of a victory—you worked hard and rallied your men from time to time, encouraging them to do their best. Such effort deserves its reward.

On April 14, Miss Otten Babendreier, of this Department, was surprised by her mother and father, a dance being given in honor of her twenty-first birthday at "Ye Old Town Hall." Otten says she had a wonderful time and instead of one, she had two surprises. The following account of the evening's frivolities is given in Otten's own language. "I really was surprised and so glad to see everyone. It seemed that everyone was talking to me at once, but I heard Mama's voice above them all, telling me to look around. I did this, and there was 'My Albert!' I did not stop long enough to be embarrassed or for Albert to reach any such state—I just threw my arms around him and hugged and kissed him before everyone there."

We believe Otten's understanding of a "wonderful" time coincides perfectly with the poet's musings:

"A jug of wine, a loaf of bread and thou (my Albert) beside me in the wilderness, O Wilderness, were Paradise enow!"

With all his precious possessions backed on Mr. Jackson's election, Captain Ward was a spectacle of happiness on the morning of May 8.

J. G. B. was at the bat when several spectators inquired if members of the "Aged Men's Home" had taken a new lease on life.

"Andy Gump," our shining light, can keep a straight face on any occasion, and demonstrated his accomplishment when he sent a co-worker all over the building in search of the "key" to the flag pole.

Evidently M. E. W. has had some experiences which would indicate there is a "quitter" in our midst. She writes in this strain:

The maxim, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," is a beautiful rule to be guided by, but the temptation to follow David Harum's advice and "Do unto the other fellow as he would like to do unto you, but do it fust," is far too strong for some people. If each one of us engaged in making a living would have a thought or two for the welfare of our co-workers, the good that emanates from co-operation—greater progress would follow as night follows day. Without cooperation business is a failure. Do not let the other fellow do all the work and bear the brunt of your carelessness, but lend a helping hand and forge onward and upward."

We congratulate our young friend for her point of view and believe if these remarks were seriously considered by each one of us, there would be fewer "leaks" to be stopped.

Among the typists there is one who finds Atlantic City attractive for week end visits and during the luncheon period the name "Harold" is becoming familiar to most of us.

Arthur E. Beck, Auditor Merchandise Receipts Department, recently followed to her last resting place the most beloved of all earthly possessions—his wife. Our Base Ball Team and others of this Department extend to him their deepest sympathy.

Mr. Beck, better known as "Joe" served as our veteran first baseman.

Every now and then we hear of some one sounding a key note indicative of the times. Being a Baltimorean to me means much. Baltimore enjoys a strategic position in the rate field because of its differential. This fact alone should be of interest in influencing shippers, the savings in routing import, export and coastwise traffic via this port and the superior service of the Baltimore and Ohio offers at this, one of its great ports, where track facilities are alongside the ship's berth, results in no delay loading or unloading. Baltimore excels in a number of ways. Look Baltimore and its advantages over.

Our preacher friend who has been favoring us with Tuesday noon hour discussions on character forming has been called to extra duty at Fort McHenry where, no doubt, his presence will be felt as much as it was here. The picture herewith presents Master Bernard "Barney" Nelson, age four, third rung in the ladder being built for the future by Terminal Cashier Siegfried "Fred" Nelson. The picture was taken in front of Mr. Nelson's fine home at Stewart Manor, L. I. "Barney" is a boy about whom a whole book could be written now, and volumes, I believe, after he has reached maturity and attained stature.

(In parenthesis allow me to call attention to his primal pantaloons, suspended from the waist by pearl buttons, reminiscent of my own first pair and those happy days. I believe that if it were not for the pants Barney could never have been made to keep still long enough to have his picture snapped with a one-sixteenth second exposure.) Last time I saw Barney, a year ago, he was dressed in a one-piece kneec-to-knees suit and a criss-cross of sticking plaster on his dome; (Plaster is part of his regular "get-up.") He was dirty and happy, happy because dirty (one cannot be happy and clean at that period of life) and Mrs. Nelson deserves compliments for understanding child-psychology. He was then, and, Pere Fred tells me, is still, the most restlessly active specimen of vitality extant; a super-vitalized atom of humanity.

This is not to be a book—his biography will be written later on and will be interesting—so I cannot talk too much about him as I would like to, but in order to explain my enthusiasm in speaking of him, I must relate an incident or two in his brief career that will also serve properly to introduce him; a mere "this Barney, a boy" will not answer.

Whatever Barney does he always intends to be helpful, and if he makes a mistake, as we all do sometimes, he gets "shingled," which is too bad and wrong (this is for Papa Fred to make a note of). Just because he climbed to the top of the Christmas-tree to get his year old baby-sister a half-yard long candy cane, last Xmas, and "the tree fell" on top of him and the baby, he got caned or slipped or something; and when his mother made known her need of some empty flower-pots for the garden and Barney got them for her from the parlor, after dumping the contents, plants and dirt, on the piano keys, because he couldn't reach the top to dump it inside, he "got it" again; when father brought home a quantity of seeds for his truck garden, this spring, Barney, knowing all about what they were for, got busy with his little spade, dug a few deep holes in the lawn, dumped the seeds into the dugouts, covered them and watered them, all according to formula. Only another of his mistakes that resulted in a castigation. Poor, misunderstood Barney!

To conclude let me say:—Keep your eyes on the news-columns of twenty years hence, for the name of Bernard Nelson; by that time he will be ripe for a revolution or an earthquake.

In the April issue of the MAGAZINE there appeared, among other gossip, a paragraph referring to "A. H. B." and his three stenographers. In it the statement was made that he "knew how to pick 'em." The accompanying picture of One of them, Miss Shirley Levine, is submitted in support of the statement. Does he know how to pick 'em? I am asking you, does he? The same little bird that does such pilfering for the editor brought me this picture; am negotiating with the creature for more villainous dirty work of this kind. All is fair in love and war and yellow journalism.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to the family of George D. Sharpe, storehelper, Clifton, who died on March 30.

Congratulations are extended to W. R. Taylor, chief clerk to superintendent, on the arrival of a baby boy, April 30.

How would you like to have this happen to you? Conductor Ford found a set of false teeth and put them in his pocket. Later on he went through the cars and collected tickets from passengers. One of them (a young lady) gave him a dollar bill. The conductor, putting his hand in his pocket, pulled out a hand full of change and among it was the set of false teeth. The young lady looked at the conductor and smiled. The conductor said "They are not mine. I found them." When the train arrived at Tottenville he asked one of his trainmen for some tobacco. Trainman Wood handed him a bag of tobacco. Ford filled his pipe and slipped the teeth into the tobacco bag. When Wood started to pick tobacco for his pipe he felt something hard and peculiar. He kept on feeling and gave a yell, and dropped the bag in fright. Ford said "What's the matter 'Woody'? Don't get frightened. That's the false teeth in your bag."

On May 12 the Staten Island Railroad Club baseball team, which represents the Staten Island Lines, expected to open the season against the West Brighton K. of C's, but were disappointed as the opposing team failed to appear. On May 19, our boys lined up against the strong team representing the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and defeated them to the tune of six to five. The Staten Island team lined up as follows:

T. Hurley, 2nd base; J. Larkin (manager), short stop; A. Schoefer, 3rd base; H. Coolie, 1st base; F. Martin (captain), catcher; B. Dawson, center field; W. McKiever, left field; Ray Fetzner, right field; R. Wilson, pitcher.

On May 3 the State Island Railroad Club held a package party and dance for the benefit of the baseball team. There was a large attendance and a good time was had by all. The famous Royal Blues Novelty Orchestra furnished music for dancing. Dan Carney, the well-known comedian and singer of the Maintenance of Way Department, furnished a program of singers and other entertainers. The Staten Island Railroad Club will hold a euchre, social and dance on May 24, and hope to have a good time at this affair.

On April 27, George W. Sturmer, grand president of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans, and Dr. G. B. Shattuck, made a big hit in Tottenville when the former spoke on the good work which the veterans were doing for the Baltimore and Ohio in the way of soliciting freight and passenger business, also on their loyalty to the Company. He also spoke of the social activities of the veterans in holding picnics, etc.; in other words getting together for the purpose of getting better acquainted. Dr. Shattuck's lecture on "The Lure of the Canadian Rockies" was instructive and full of interest. The Doctor is a forceful speaker and his lecture was highly appreciated by all present. Dr. Shattuck will again come to Tottenville to lecture about his experiences in Africa and other foreign countries.

One reason why every one at Pier 22 is happy — Miss Shirley Levine Addresses were also made by Mr. Lowe, principal of the Tottenville School, E. J. Hamner, superintendent of the Railroad, D. J. Buckley, W. J. Reeves, D. B. Hayes and B. F. Kelly.

The entertainment was closed by all joining in singing "America."

We are glad to know that our old friend "Bill" Wolf has recovered from a long siege of illness and is able to be back on his job. Mr. Wolf has the best wishes of all his friends, especially those at Locust Point.

John Mannion, Pier 6, enjoys the enviable reputation of being an exceptionally humorous gentleman. Prior to the recent election, Mr. Mannion was asked the reason an Irishman landing in this country and taking up his home in Philadelphia generally becomes a Republican, while those coming to Baltimore invariably become Democrats. Some one suggested, that an Irishman always wants to be on the winning side; but Mr. Mannion insisted the cause is that both political parties must have leaders and that they are generally selected from the son's of Erin.

The Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, especially those on the Baltimore and Ohio System must be enthusiastic about their Boosters' Club, when they send a man from Baltimore to Dayton, Ohio, to boost the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad sentiment among the employees. M. H. Jepper, Locust Point Freight Station, was the man selected by the Brotherhood to visit Dayton, where he delivered an address to a progressive body of railroad employees, urging them to develop a real heart to heart boosting spirit in the interest of the Baltimore and Ohio to the extent of doing their utmost to get business for their Company. He called attention to the large amount of money paid out by the Company annually in the settlement of Loss and Damage Claims. This feature merits careful consideration by every employee of the Company and every possible effort should be made to eliminate the cause. This can be best accomplished by handling freight with care so as to insure its reaching final destination in perfect condition. Everyone is urged to become a member of the Boosters' Club, which stands for the principles of respecting the rights of others, and helping the Company.

Bill writes Charlie a letter concerning game he saw Mt. Clare boys play

Mt. Clare, May 15, 1923.

Dere Charlie:

The boys from the office were always talking 'bout the wonderful team that they had here at Mt. Clare, which they call the well fare team. They sed they had beaten River Sides by the score of 11 to 4, and they had the engineers running round wit their mouths open when it sterted ter rain and 'course the engineers nut used to water quit and as they did not play but fore innings they did nut call it a game.

Our chef clerk says to me, our team is going to play the treasury team at Westpert on Saturday May 5th, why don't you go oudt an see a reel game of ball. He talked to our boss, Mr. Steward 'bout the game and the boss sed he wood take a chance, so i thot i wood all so.

I drived out to this plase which they call West Pert, and looked all 'round, finally someone sed, look at the prety duks, and sur nuf there was some guys in white uniforms, so i says this mus bee the plase. It tok them an owful time to get sterted, cause the treasury men sort of got sick or something but they picher didnut show up, so a big guy by the name of Bill German sterted to pich and he started off good. a feller by the name of Mcmillen who works at the Mt. Clare shops sterted ter pich and he had broughten his girl along and she was setting in the outomobil and looking right at mae, and he looked right back at her, till finally he had given them there guys from the treasury two bases on balls. Then a guy comes up and hits one into left field—jimmy bolan our left felder, an a good one, only he getting in Jess Willard's class for weight, saw something come out and he goes after it, he got near nuf to it, but seems he did nut clos his hands tight nuf anyways the ball fell oudt, so the man which was on third base kam home, which made one run for the treasury team. This feller german kinda made our men think that it was the forth of July, cause they all seemed to hit up in the air, anyways we finally made him mad and he gave us a couple of good balls, and we made a run and tide up the score. Then looked like both teams was getting tired, cause they did nut make any more runs for a couple of innings. Just then, Bill Gaffney, who was umpiring, an X grass eater from Carroll Park, kam in and sed, we will stop the game at seven innings. So when the seventh inning came the treasury did nut get any runs, cause our picher was going good. I think the raisin was i went over an talked to his girl and it took her mind off him. Then our team came ter bat in the seventh inning, and two men batted, being in a hurry to get home they got out, then up comes another one, by this time Bill German forgot it wuz the seventh inning and sterted to walk this man, then comes punk smith, now the raisin they calls him punk, is cause he's some pumpkin, and he hits one right in right field witch makes two men on the bases, and two hands oudt—Now here komes our friend Jim bolan to the bat, he was thinking 'bout that ketch he did nut make in left field, so he looks at a couple, finally Bill german thinks i will fool jimmy, so he tries to slide one by him, jimmy takes one look and one swing, bing, the ball goes over the left field fence, and three runs score. Bill Gaffney, the umpire who is so anshus to get home, comes in and commences to hug jim for breaking up the ball game. Now them treasury fellers is still wondering what happened to the ball game. Yes Charlie, last saterday we went out and beated the transpertasion department team 15 to 2, them boys was sum mad, in fac they looked like come-odians 'stead of ball players. We certainly hev sum team, and now that we are winning all the games looks like we is gonna win the pennant—cause we hev got sum pichers. Yes Charlie, we hev shure got sum players, in fac sum of the teams did nut see all our pichers as we dident nede them, as this feller mcmillan did never hev to extend hisself. A feller by the name of bergman, also is one of our pichers and hes good too—and then there's Robinson and Anderson, what does the ketching, them boys is good.

An you ought to see that guy Williams, that plays first base, he's soem first baseman, but hes no relashion to thet guy Williams on the Stlouis team. Mcclary and punk Smith, scoot up everything round second and short, and you know that guy Moxley thet played longside Frank Baker when he was playing on the Easton team, well, he is playing third for us. Boy, u ought to see that guy Eisennacker, and he must liv up to his name, cause he sertenly can nock them—last week i understan he had the outfielders lame from running after the balls he hit. Then there's young Eyerly, and few others witch i am not yet quainted with, but any ways, the next time you are in towne an want to see a real ball game let me no and i will take you oudt to see the Mt. Clare well fare team play, and you can bet your lif you will see sum game. Dont forget to rite soon, and say, listen Charlie, if you hev annie good teams round your sektion, let me no, an i will bring our team up there.

Yours,
Bill

By looking over our "Safety Honor Roll," it will be noted that those connected with the operation of trains are alert in reporting unsafe conditions and take prompt action to prevent accidents and derailments. We mention Operator J. M. Cunningham, Hollofield Tower, whose record indicates he has reported major cases, which, if they had not been detected, would have resulted seriously. We also mention Operator W. F. Hill, Boyd, Md.; Operator C. W. Proctor and Agent M. L. Wann, Bradshaw, Md. Brakeman S. L. Lambert also possesses an enviable record along this line. There are a number of others, and if we try to name them all, the columns of the MAGAZINE would be filled.

A Baltimore Division fireman has a friend, who is a Baltimore business man and who was about to make a trip to Chicago. When asked by the fireman why he was not going via Baltimore and Ohio, he replied that he had not thought of it. Then came in the "selling talk" of our fireman. He said, "Bill, if you want a fine trip, use the Baltimore and Ohio. The scenery between Baltimore and Pittsburgh is fine, the track is good, they make good time; and I can guarantee you will have a nice trip. There is another thing I want to call your attention to. Do you, as a Baltimore business man, realize what the Baltimore and Ohio is doing for Baltimore? Do you realize the amount of money it pays out to the men at Mount Clare, probably over 3,000, and to the men at Riverside, to the employees in the General Office Building, and the many train and enginemen running in here. What other railroad in Baltimore pays out as much actual money? None at all, my friend. Then, as a Baltimore business man, is it not your duty to support in every way you can the railroad which is doing all it can to bring prosperity to your city?"

✓The argument was unanswerable and the result was another passenger for the Baltimore and Ohio and another friend made. There is not one of us who cannot go and do likewise. Let us do it.

From your correspondent's experience, there are territories where the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is not known and not far distant from our lines. Yet, in these territories, they only know our competitors. Our friend forgot to mention the moneys distributed in the payment of men in the Maintenance of Way Department along the line; in fact, if we remove the railroads from among ourselves, large distribution of moneys would cease and the prosperity of many would be gone. Let us not forget!

While we have not met the Assistant Editor, M. W. Jones, we learn he is from West Virginia. If originally a West Virginian, he is in the class of your correspondent. Our passenger train master dubs him a "Snake Eater." Your correspondent has run across some large ones in his time but stories of the largest ones always came from the southern part of the state. How about it, Assistant Editor?

We are going to put some crepe at the head of this column. Our family cartoonist has left us. He has become correspondent for the Baltimore Terminal Division. If anyone knows of a family artist who wants a job, apply to your correspondent.

The Duck Pin season has closed. The Orioles came out ahead with the Woodpeckers second, Sparrows third and the Buzzards last.

The horoscope for the month is: "Slim" Mallery has returned from New Orleans (never went). Clerk E. M. Hughes is now the proud father of a baby girl. Congratulations! Leslie Higgs has quit counting his eggs each morning, the hens are sitting. He might find some stale ones in the files. Clerk Harry Fox has left us to accept a position outside. We wish him success. However, the girls miss your clothes, Harry. The Four Flushers, "Clint" Roche, "Wobly" Childs, "Al" Smith, and Barney Moriarity, have gone to the Magothy for the season. We close with congratulations and success for the "Capitol Limited." Yours for the Baltimore and Ohio.

ribbons and the indirect chandeliers cast a subdued light, the whole forming a pretty picture and brought admiring comments from all who were fortunate enough to be present.

The performance of little Miss Kitty McDewitt, who wore a stylish dress of orange tafetta silk, was much admired. She whirled around in the final hop as lightly as a leaf borne on the wings of the wind. Of course, too, it was too much for our old friend Miller from 58th Street. He suddenly became possessed of the "Fountain of Youth" and was seen hopping round the best of them.

"Joe the Fusser" (Joe McGovern) was among those present, with his long legs, displaying his marvellous dancing skill. And, would you believe it? Little Delbert Stacki was actually dancing with another man's wife. Of course he's 21 and so thinks he may do as he pleases.

In the midst of the fun, in came "Benny" Tittleman with "the widow." Helen Sentman and her sister were there, all dressed up in grey silk and prettier than ever. You can bet they didn't play "wallflowers." "Toby" Miggins and his best and only were right in the whirl, and the warm evening didn't bother them a bit.

The program was not half long enough to hold all the dances wanted by the admirers of Flossie, our Eastside best dancer. With that bobbed auburn hair, she was a picture.

The Piers were well represented. The Gillen sisters were with us in all their glory. "Jake" Hamburg came and brought with him M. L. Jacobson, wholesale fixture merchant, one of our customers who seemed to enter heartily into the spirit of the occasion. Mr. Alten, Pier 22, dropped in to look 'em over, and "Andy" Gallagher and Harry Nielson did their share to help wear the floor out. "Toby" McKeown and C. H. Minnich (non-dancers) were on hand. (Why were their wives not with them?)

Marie MacAleer and M. Garland, representing the Car Yard, had the time of their lives and the "Red Stocking Twins," Misses Mae Mealy and Frances Brennan, shed their radiance afar. You couldn't miss them with a telescope.

Miss Margaret Cameron and her little sister Anna Mary were actively engaged the entire evening. Miss Cameron wore a pale Nile Green dress, and Anna Mary was so busy that your correspondent was unable to secure any dancing lessons.

Music was furnished by Fred Terry's Broadway Entertainers Orchestra.

The committee arranging the dance was composed of Misses Alice, Abel, Isabel Gillin, Anna McGinley, Elizabeth Steele and Margaret Cameron. Messrs. Jacob Hamburg, William Imperato, John Fearon, Joseph Levy and Andrew L. Smith. Every one had an enjoyable time and heartily congratulated the committee on the excellent arrangements made for the dance.

Washington, D. C. Freight Station

Correspondent, W. L. WHITING

Notwithstanding the heavy work that is going on for the Shriners, we are keeping up our record of increase that we started at the beginning of the year; our tonnage report for April showing an increase of 32,463 tons handled over the same month last year. Of course revenue increase is in proportion, but the figures are not at the present moment available.

There is one happy event in the life of one of our employees to report. Tallyman Miller went home one day, and found that the good old fashioned stork had flown over his home, and incidentally had paused long enough to drop a bright little girl down the chimney! Mother and daughter are doing well, and congratulations are extended to Edgar, with wishes for many happy returns of the day.

Our sick list is down to Zero at this time, and it is a matter of pleasure to us.

"Stop That Leak"

There are various kinds of leaks that could be stopped, if we could only find them. One of them is allowing our friends and acquaintances to travel by other roads, when the Baltimore and Ohio gives the best service in time, accommodation, and every other way that can possibly be given.

Because some of us are employed at Freight Stations, is no reason that we cannot occasionally boost our passenger service. The writer has in mind a government official, with whom he is well acquainted, and who has been going to New York City on Uncle Sam's business, and has always had an idea that it was the proper caper to patronize competitors of the Baltimore and Ohio. Realizing that your correspondent is in the employ of a good road, and in response to certain hints that had been given regarding the excellent accommodations, meals, etc., furnished, he decided to "give us a trial." The natural result followed.

It is Baltimore and Ohio all the time now—and very enthusiastic booster gained.

"TOOT YOUR HORN FOR YOUR OWN ROAD," and thus stop the leak of revenue that should come to it.

Brunswick

Correspondent, R. L. MUCH

One of the most interesting men in Brunswick is Engineer "Jess" Mann; he only weighs 300 pounds, but—he can ride a horse as well as a major general, and at riding a locomotive he is equal to the best. "Jess" shoves cars over the east bound hump.

Information Clerk "Bob" Burnett, Camden, was a welcome visitor at our picnic. Your correspondent regrets he did not have an opportunity to talk to him. "Bob" is not alone an experienced railroad man but he is a courteous and cheerful gentleman as well. He represents the Baltimore and Ohio standard.

Conductor A. G. Lugenbeel, who fell through a bridge near Bennings, is about to be out. We are glad to see him with us again!

Chief Dispatcher "Jake" Miller has been promoted to the position of assistant trainmaster. Congratulations, "Jake." We are glad to see your foot go one step more up the ladder.

The Volunteer Firemen looked smart in their new uniforms at our picnic. These uniforms were paid for by the firemen, and our property owners and other citizens should be proud of them. These men are at present preparing for the annual firemen's convention which will be held in Frederick in June; they hope to win first prize for field manoeuvres.

Trainmaster "Happy John" McCabe is occupied at present watching two 2600 class engines on the Hagerstown Branch, better known as the "weed line."

Rule Examiner "Colonel" Lavelle has been drilling our men hard. He is close behind those who are in the habit of blowing the "whip-o-will" call, and those who do not comply with the standard code. Such men as the Colonel are a credit to our company and community.

STOP THAT LEAK! Send in your suggestions.

Car Foreman Frank Bissett is kept busy at present on account of the heavy traffic and large number of "back-offs" which require his attention.

Our officers recently made an inspection of the Baltimore and Ohio emergency hospital. They were impressed by the manner in which Dr. H. S. Hedges manages it. We hope to have a description of the hospital and photo, in the next issue.

Mrs. J. E. Cummings, wife of yardmaster, who has been in the Frederick City Hospital, is recovering. We hope she will soon be with us again.

Postmaster Walter Musgrove has resigned his position, having been appointed city clerk. Many of our officers will remember him as an old Baltimore and Ohio employee.

Cumberland Division

Correspondent, JOHN J. SELL

On April 29, the Holy Name Society held a rally in Cumberland, there being approximately ten thousand visitors, most of whom used our line. There were six trains from Baltimore, three from Washington and one from Piedmont, also two special trains via the C. & P. R. R., and regular trains six, eleven and fifteen; a total of fourteen trains being handled at the "Queen City" station within a period of two hours. All trains were handled without delay or accident, and our local employes are to be commended for the splendid manner in which this heavy movement was handled. Many favorable comments were made by the visitors.

ON STEPS OF TOWER AT ALEXANDRIA JUNCTION

It is with regret that we report the death of Mrs. G. P. Porter, wife of ticket clerk at Cumberland. Mrs. Porter, before her marriage about a year ago, was Miss Ruth Furgeson, one of our "P. B. X." telephone operators at Cumberland.

The accompanying photograph is of the little son of R. W. Price, chief clerk to agent, Cumberland, "R. W. P. junior."

We recently heard a good one on our genial assistant car distributor. It appears that "Benny" was taking in a circus which recently showed in Cumberland, and was approached by a pretty young lady who asked that he direct her to the reserved seats. "Benny" was gallant and gladly acted as usher. Too bad "Benny," she was an impersonator! What was her (his) name?

The accompanying picture shows our genial yard gang foreman, N. "Nick" Weber, and C. "Mossy" Campbell. "Nick" aims to roll ballast and ties as well as "Mossy" rolls duckpins, but it can't be done "Nick;" "Mossy" is some bowler!

We are glad to show you some of our efficient force on the East Hump at Cumberland, taken during lunch period recently. In the picture are J. R. Young, yard conductor; Mae Beck, bill clerk; C. Campbell, yard brakeman; Gertrude Harper, abstract clerk; and W. P. Copeland, weighmaster, Coal Billing Office, Cumberland.

J. A. Miller, night chief dispatcher, has been promoted to assistant train master, and is at present giving special attention to the expediting of cars. From the fine showing made recently in the average miles per car per day, it is evident that "Jake" is doing good work. Keep after them "J. A." We are glad to see you going up the ladder.

We are all interested in our new crack train between Baltimore and Chicago, the "Capitol Limited." The performance so far has been great, and with every employe doing his bit we can make it second to none in the country.

Another of our old veterans recently passed to the great beyond, J. E. W. Benjamin, former water station foreman on the Cumberland Division. Mr. Benjamin formerly lived at Harpers Ferry, W. Va., and moved to Cumberland some years ago, where he resided with his family. He was in his 73rd year, having retired a few years ago. He was of a kindly disposition and was well and favorably known to a host of friends and fellow employes.

Local orchardists are of the opinion that the severe weather prevailing in this territory during May has not injured the peach and apple crop to any extent, and a good crop is expected.

The Cumberland Division improved on its best previous record of average car mileage per day, the average per day for the week May 8 to 14 being as follows:

BEST PREVIOUS AVERAGE

Cumberland Division—

East End.....	103.3	98.0	4-21-23
West End.....	82.6	85.1	11-14-21
(M. & K. Sub. Div.)..	17.6	18.7	11-7-22
Total.....	91.4	84.8	11-7-16

This record is something every employe on the Cumberland Division should be proud of. It took the undivided interest of all to bring it about. However we are not going to stop with this achievement, but with every one doing his bit, we hope to make it 100 miles per day for the division. While this goal is a little hard to reach, by the prompt releasing and moving of cars both loaded and empty, it can be done. As an example, on May 13, the East End of the division averaged 119.7 miles. Let's shoot for the 100 mark, boys!

Master Mechanic's Office

Correspondent, VADA PEARL DRUMM

An illustrated lecture on adventures and experiences encountered on a trip through Africa was given in the City Hall Auditorium on May 17 by Dr. George Burbank Shattuck, under the auspices of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association. The lecture was open to the public and was both instructive and entertaining. In addition to the still and motion pictures obtained on the trip, Dr. Shattuck exhibited many interesting curios which he brought back with him.

The Baltimore and Ohio Shops Band was in attendance and rendered several selections.

Recently the Baltimore and Ohio Baseball team re-organized with H. S. Lamm, president and D. M. Scott, manager. The team is now composed of the following players: James Willard and Walter J. Drumm, catchers; Earl Brooks, Frank

The above is practically the same line-up that represented the Shops at Cumberland last year and was considered the strongest team on the system. With King, Brooks, Cunningham and Zaradiska, the team boasts of a powerful pitching staff, and with Drumm and Willard, their batteries will be hard to beat.

The Rolling Mill diamond has recently undergone many changes and is now ready to take care of the large crowd of loyal rooters which is always on hand to witness our baseball nine bring home the bacon.

This team is desirous of booking games with other teams on the System. Any team wishing to meet them can arrange a game by writing D. M. Scott, manager, care of Superintendent of Shops Office.

The Baltimore and Ohio Shop Band, direction Prof. Frank DeLuca, has been gaining favor recently not only in Cumberland but surrounding cities. The band gave a sacred concert in April at Grafton, at which time it scored a decided hit. The following local vocalists accompanied the band to Grafton and appeared on the program: Mrs. Marguerite Mewshaw, soprano; Mrs. Mae Beck, mezzo soprano; Miss Vada Pearl Drumm, soprano, and E. F. Warner, bass, all of whom performed so well that they were called on to respond with several encores. Miss Helen Dawson accompanied the vocalists. A cornet solo by Joseph Fradiska entitled "Columbia Polka" and baritone horn solos by Warner Freeland won several encores. Prof. Antonia LaManca rendered several pleasing violin solos.

Thomas F. Perkinson was elected president of the Rensselaer Union of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y. at the annual election May 11. He is the son of Mrs. Thomas F. Perkinson and the late T. F. Perkinson, division master mechanic of the Cumberland Division and is a member of the class of 1924, graduating in that year with the degree of M. E. E.

We extend to George P. Ferguson, section stockman, our deepest sympathy in the death of his daughter, Mrs. Prentiss G. Porter.

We also extend our heartfelt sympathy to B. F. Smith, section stockman, in the death of his son, April 21.

Miss Anna Burns, Stores Department, was recently granted leave of absence account of serious illness of her mother. Mrs. Burns is reported improving and we hope to see Anna back at her desk in the near future.

Many changes have taken place recently in our family circle at South End. They are as follows:

G. P. Hoffman, general car foreman, has been transferred to Baltimore as general car foreman, Baltimore Terminal. E. F. Davis, car foreman, succeeds Mr. Hoffman, and E. A. Connell, assistant car foreman, succeeds Mr. Davis. Misses Margaret Carney, Mable McClintock and Margaret Crogan, clerks in Office of Master Mechanic have accepted positions in Division Accountant's Office. Howard G. Thomas, stenographer, Master Mechanic's Office, recently accepted a position in Cleveland, Ohio. He has been succeeded by Mrs. Anna Sebold. Russell C. Young, fuel clerk, Master Mechanic's Office, has been transferred to Division Accountant's Office. C. B. Potter, chief clerk to storekeeper, has accepted position as material supervisor at Connellsville. J. C. Glenn, Garrett, Ind., takes the position made vacant by Mr. Potter's promotion. Although those who have gone will be greatly missed, we wish all success in their new fields and welcome their successors into our family circle with best wishes for a long and happy stay in our midst.

"In the Spring, a young man's thoughts lightly turn" proved true recently when our popular young section stockman, Henry E. Free, became a benedict. We had noticed during the past few weeks that his trips to Winchester, Va. were becoming more and more frequent and were prepared for the worst.

The ideal of his dreams was Miss Anna Golliday of Winchester, Va. They were married on April 28 at Winchester, Va., and left immediately on their honeymoon to Chicago, Ill. and other western cities. Upon their return, they will reside with Mr. Free's parents until their bungalow, which is in the course of construction, is completed.

We all extend hearty congratulations and best wishes to the newly married couple! Alas! sigh the fair sex, Henry Free is no longer "Free."

This is the first visit Dan Cupid has paid us for a long time; but judging from "Pat" Hopkins' numerous visits to Frostburg, Dominic McDonald's many trips to Piedmont, and Miss Screen's week ends to Washington, we feel sure he is booked up for at least three return engagements.

W. V. Fairall has been wearing one of those smiles you hear so much about. At first we thought it was because of his recent promotion ("Vick," you know, has been made gang foreman) but we later find it is a new baby girl, April 16.

A certain "big" Buick car has not been parked on Harrison Street so often recently. What's the matter "Bubbles"—run out of gas?

Our Assistant Shop Clerk J. H. Browne has worked untiringly for sometime on the re-organization of our filing system; we feel confident that "Jake" has stopped the "Leak" in it.

The accompanying photograph is a striking likeness of D. M. Scott, employed as clerk in Office of Superintendent of Shops at Cumberland. "Scottie" has been elected manager of the Baltimore and Ohio baseball team.

Green Spring, W. Va.

Correspondent, E. E. ALEXANDER

We are in work up to our chin,
But still the MAGAZINE wants to be in
So here's a few jots, our space to use
We trust you'll enjoy—as them you peruse.

Nearly 200 men employed handling ties, carloads of which have been arriving so fast it behooved us to keep up with them, without delaying release and also do our part to maintain car mileage, and to help further increase it. It is hustling us to find room for them and unload quickly.

The Cross Tie-gers have come up smiling. At a recent meeting a reorganization was effected and several interesting games have been played. Their most recent combat was with the Cumberland Athletic Club from which they emerged victorious 7-2.

Speaking of fast freight. A carload of furniture loaded at Baltimore, April 21 arrived Green Spring the following morning. How's that for Car Miles!

Kenneth Propst, 18 year old son of a well known Baltimore and Ohio conductor of Clarksburg, was instantly killed April 13, when struck by Engine 5054 a few miles west of Green Spring. The young man stepped out of the way of a west bound train directly in the path of the light engine. The remains were taken to his home for interment. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

Paul, little son of Tieman and Mrs. Loy Sibert, recently underwent an operation at Martinsburg hospital and is able to be home again. Other little railroad people who have been ill include: Dorothy Brown, Amy Jewel Alexander and Edgar Allen.

Track Foreman A. W. Lewis has moved into his new bungalow. That means one more in our growing community.

Operator and Mrs. V. D. Twigg and charming little daughter Virginia, have moved into the Taylor property vacated by Mr. Lewis. We are glad indeed to have these good folks move back with us and say Welcome.

The dance and festival held by the Cross-Tie-gers, April 28 was a success and the boys added several "iron men" to their team treasury.

Superintendent and Mrs. E. E. Alexander entertained the members of the Willing Workers Sunday School Class at their home recently. As the young folks arrived they were presented with carnival hats and the fun started immediately. Music and games with prizes were provided. Thomas Holland and Roy Robinson were winners of the boy's prizes, a baseball and a bat, while Mary Twigg and May Gurtler were awarded the girl's prizes, "Fairy Tales," at progressive crokinole in which three game boards with twelve playing were used. Mrs. Alexander served the class with real home-made ice cream and cake and each guest found an additional favor at their plate

For 24 Years I've Timed My Trains with a Hamilton

BACK of the spotless record held by Engineer A. C. Baldwin, of the Erie Railroad, stands the integrity of the man and the accuracy of his watch—a Hamilton.

Since 1899 a Hamilton has been with Engineer Baldwin at the throttle, accurately timing hundreds—yes, thousands—of trains.

It is by reason of such service that railroad men choose the Hamilton. Its reputation is built upon the solid foundation of accuracy plus faithful performance. Insist on owning a Hamilton and be rid of doubts about your time.

Ask to see the Hamilton No. 992

This 21-jewel movement will pass inspection on any railroad and is the favorite of most railroad men. For other than time inspection service, ask for the Hamilton No. 974, which gives you Hamilton quality at a lower price.

Correspondent, H. B. Kight

Safety Inspector Sirbaugh has thrown his hat into the ring for election as a member of Council of the City of Keyser in June. Good luck, "Ed."

Trainmaster Welshonce listened to a fine concert in London, England a few nights ago via his up-to-date wireless.

Engineman Harry Hook said when he found a switch open at Piedmont the other day that he supposed he would get his name in the MAGAZINE. Well, Harry, here it is. Careful and watchful employees are always mentioned in our MAGAZINE, when we hear of their performances.

We are sorry that pensioned Engineman Adam Keller is not well. Also regret that Engineman Buckner, Rowlesburg, has been away for sometime account of illness.

STOP THAT LEAK! Get the empty cars moving. See that they are billed so as to prevent unnecessary switching. Enforce demurrage and storage tariffs; notify the consignee promptly when a car load of freight is on hand. Properly protect less carload freight from damage. Watch the "pop" and save coal. If every employee would realize, as the agent does, that the success of the Company means better conditions for employees the cases of inefficiency would be reduced to a minimum. Let us consider our Company as our own property with the knowledge that whatever success it attains is dependent on our efforts.

Painted signs asking employees to guard carefully materials used by them have been posted around the car shops. These signs tell in a brief way that by carefulness in handling material, none will be wasted, and that this will help to stop the drain on the pocket book of our Company. Heed the signs, boys.

We had a pleasant visit from Assistant Road Foreman Browning, Salraton, the other day. Frank has promised to get us some items for the MAGAZINE. Watch for them.

The many friends of West End Engineman J. S. W. Rittenhouse will be pleased to hear of his marriage to Mrs. Sarah Collins on May 13. Congratulations!

We extend to Terminal Trainmaster Burkhart heartfelt sympathy in the recent death of his father.

We have talked, and talked and talked about a Chapter of the Veterans Association at Keyser until it has at last become a reality. On May 3 the first meeting was held in Odd Fellows Hall. A delightful program was rendered and delicious refreshments were served. Regular meetings will be held the first Wednesday of each month.

We are glad to note in a local paper that our good friend Mr. Haulenbeek, Law Department, is recovering from an operation on his eye. Hope to see you at the hotel this summer, Mr. Haulenbeek!

During the first week in May the car miles per day on the West End, Cumberland Division averaged 64.3. Mountains mean nothing to the "snakies" and we expect even better records.

Raymond Davis, Freight House is arranging a trip to the far northwest in the near future.

Chief Clerk to Master Mechanic Hugh Dietz is gaining fame as an artist. The Peoples Pharmacy recently had a window display of Mr. Dietz' drawings which caused favorable comment of the public who viewed it. Hugh has consented to make us some drawings for the MAGAZINE soon.

The Car Shop recently received a new coat of paint and it adds much to its appearance.

Another shop "mule" has been added to the Storeroom equipment. Sometime ago a Ford roadster was made into a track truck, to be used in hauling material about the yards. Storekeeper Guthrie has had another Ford equipped with a bed and solid rubber tires to haul material from the station to roundhouse via the City streets. These "mules" are great time savers, making a trip in ten or fifteen minutes which ordinarily takes an hour or more.

The CAREFUL CROSSING CAMPAIGN which was inaugurated June 1, is now in full swing. Elaborate posters have been placed in conspicuous places, and pamphlets, etc., have been distributed in an effort to have automobile drivers exercise caution at grade crossings.

Arrangements are being made to open Deer Park Hotel on June 23. This famous old resort is looking forward to the most successful year in its history.

Foreman T. W. Kaylor has finished laying new steel in the high speed track through this town. This shows that the Baltimore and Ohio is in favor of progress, which means good track. "Uncle Bill" knows how to keep them good.

Foremen John Shipley and G. W. Fredman, have been replacing rails on the freight line and making it good for the heavy traffic now passing over it. They know how to do it, and they are making things hum.

The new "Capitol Limited" passes Paw Paw on time regularly. This train is always an interesting topic of conversation here.

The new packing houses being constructed by the Consolidated Orchard Company is progressing rapidly; the frame work will be completed in a few days. This means better facilities for the prospective large apple crop.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows celebrated their one hundred and fourth anniversary on May 12. Your correspondent recently spent a day "rusticating" in Martinsburg where he met many old friends and acquaintances, including "Charley" Auld and "Bill" Airhart. ### Connellsville Division

About 2.30 a. m. April 26, Patrolman Moore attempted to arrest a negro, James Sullivan, at Connellsville passenger station, on the charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Sullivan resisted arrest, attempting to pull a revolver from a shoulder holster which he was wearing. Patrolman Moore and Sullivan had been wrestling and fighting for several minutes when Ray C. Crossland, a Connellsville Division fireman, who was passing on yard engine 2730, observed the trouble, and immediately jumped off his engine and assisted Moore in overpowering and placing hand cuffs on the negro. When searched a revolver, extra cartridges, a ladies pocket book, $45 in money and other articles, were found on Sullivan. He was sent to jail in default of bail.

Patrolman Moore says that it would have been necessary for him to shoot the negro if Crossland had not come to his assistance, as it required the combined efforts of Moore and Crossland to overcome him.

Fireman Crossland has been commended by Superintendent Brown for his prompt assistance and for his action in cooperating with the Police Department in the protection of Baltimore and Ohio property.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was represented among the students who completed their year's work recently in the Night Courses at Carnegie Institute of Technology. According to an announcement from the Institute, a feature development during the session of 1922-1923 was the high average of attendance maintained until the closing night; and this, in connection with the fact that the 1742 students enrolled represented an increase of about 49 per cent. over last year's registration, marks the session as one of unusual success.

On April 19 the Baltimore and Ohio Glenwood Social Club held its initial dance with an attendance of about 175, and I know that I can speak for all who attended in saying that everyone had a jolly good time. On May 11 Glenwood Social Club held its second dance and it was even more enjoyable than the initial one. Our club has just been organized and will be composed of supervising and clerical forces and we are going to have some good times this summer.

Francis was presented with a purse of $100.00 and a real honest to goodness box of cigars by Master Mechanic McGann and Terminal General Foreman S. A. Irwin. To say that "Charlie" was surprised would be putting it mildly. That is the first time, "Charlie," we ever saw you when you did not have an answer ready. After a few minutes he recovered his voice and responded in an able manner.

Mr. Francis was born on March 17, 1865, entered service in 1884 as brakeman. In August 1898 he suffered the loss of one of his limbs and since that time has worked in various positions such as switch tender, hostler, locker room attendant, engine dispatcher, assistant yardmaster and at the time of his retirement on March 18 was employed as time clerk in the office of Master Mechanic C. E. McGann, Glenwood, Pa. Mr. Francis is now living on a farm at Coulter, Pa., and we know that we will get some of that good corn this summer. You know, "Charlie," we are glad you can live an easy life, after so many years of faithful service, but we are sorry not to have you with us.

Roundhouse Clerk Joseph Shedlock deserves a word of praise. A few nights ago while coming to work he found a purse in a coach and promptly turned it over to a conductor, who in turn had it delivered to the lady to whom it belonged. Good for you "Joe." Honesty always pays!

H. J. Ternent has been assigned to the position of time clerk, vice C. T. Francis, pensioned. Glad to have you with us "Red."

Monongah Division

Correspondent, ANNA MARY UNKS

C. R. Brown has been called to California on account of serious illness of his wife, who has been in the West for about four months. Mr. Brown is employed as yard clerk, Clarksburg.

N. B. C. Ewing, yard brakeman, has accepted a position as a yardmaster, Low Yard, Parkersburg.

"The Silent Four" of Clarksburg held their regular weekly meeting last week. Everything was sky high as usual.

It has been reported that C. O. Winters, has been married. Mr. Winters has been wearing a smile for the last week and everyone thought it was because of Cupid, but at last we find that it was not Cupid at all but a new coat of paint on his Ford which caused the glad smile.

We are glad to see Miss Theresa Naughton back as clerk to car foreman at Clarksburg.

The accompanying picture is of our efficient general yardmaster, H. R. Harper, and Chief Yard Clerk F. W. Cole, Clarksburg, W. Va. Two good reasons why Clarksburg still remains on the map.

Fireman A. W. Mitchell can do some "strutting" around town now. He can hang up his shingle as having the best performance on the division for the year 1923. On Engine 5105, train No. 3, May 11, with Engineer C. M. Leith, train consisting of ten cars, he romped up and down the hills on the Parkersburg Branch using only 483 scoops of coal, which is 6.5 pounds of coal per passenger car mile. However, the year 1923 is not over and someone may have Mitchell's record pulled down. LET'S SEE WHO IT WILL BE!

A. S. Headley has now moved his family to Grafton and has ceased to "pine." He is, therefore, getting quite fat.

Edna Mahaffey is a new stenog in the Master Mechanic's Office. Nick name "Stevie." "Pinkey" Francis has another subject for his wiles.

E. L. Rubright won the Ford Coupe raffled by the Clerk's Union. He is a brakeman and we congratulate him on his good luck.

Mary Jane Tierney has been moved back to the Superintendent's Office and poor Richard Manning—we feel so sorry for him!

No one would ever believe it, but this is a fact. The dispatchers on the Monongah Division consist of Elks, Wolves and Campbells.

We ought to congratulate W. R. Skinner on the interested force he has in his office. Every time a train passes someone jumps up or down to find out whether they are empties or box cars.

The accompanying picture is our youngest engineer, E. L. Wilkinson of Salem, who is only 21 years of age, having secured rapid promotion from brakeman to engineer in four years.

We extend our sympathy to the relatives of Walter Donohue who died during the past month. Mr. Donohue had been with us for a number of years, his entire career as a telegraph operator and dispatcher's clerk being spent on the Monongah Division. He was a pleasant and congenial young man and we miss him.

The accompanying picture is of Miss Marie Deegan, Car Distributor's Office, and Miss Nellie McGrady, Master Mechanic's Office. The young man in the rear? Better ask Miss Deegan for his name, as she is more closely associated with him than I.

interesting, enthusiastic and best attended employees' meetings that has been held for a long time. ### Three Men and a Boat

To those who read the April Number, I would call attention to the article about Schide, Severns, McOsker and the boat. Your former correspondent said developments would be awaited with interest, but little did he dream of what was to follow. Developments have come so thick and fast that we have decided to run "a line a month" about the "Three Men and a Boat." The first installment follows.

It was a little before dark on the evening of April 23. Shortly after six o'clock a strange rumbling was heard; some said it thundered, while others declared it to be the voice of a strange god. A few minutes later an unusual movement was noticed in the waters of the West Fork River; the water had risen several inches. Then came the sound of mighty rushing of waters, and it was as if a tidal wave was sweeping down the river. After that, all was still for a few moments, and then a mighty roar such as has never been heard before or since; then the air took on a bluish tinge and all was still.

It was the next day before we were enlightened, and it seems it all happened in this manner. The first rumblings were the grunts and puffs of Walter E. Severns, our division accountant, while he and chief Clerk C. E. McOsker were assisting Chief Clerk W. H. Schide to launch his boat near the upper end of the town; the first disturbance in the water was when the large boat was launched, and the greater disturbance which has been likened to a tidal wave was brought about by "Little Walter" falling into the river. (It must have been awful to those who witnessed it). It is hardly necessary to say what caused the final roar, not to make mention of what caused the odd appearance of the atmosphere. "Little Walter" had regained his voice.

We are glad to see so many of the progressive young ladies of the Baltimore and Ohio family becoming interested in the Business and Professional Women's Club of Weston. It is worthy of the support of all who can look ahead and we hope yet to see all our "Pretty Progressives" with their shoulders to the wheel.

Have you ever noticed the odd combination that we have in the Dispatcher's Office at Weston? We have a Baker, a Mason and a Carpenter; they all work with a Plumb. Some combination, I'll say!

The Baker, the Mason, the Carpenter and the Plumb are all working on CAR MILES now and expect to turn out quite a few daily.

It is with regret that we announce the death of the wife of Roy Hewitt, lineman, Weston. He has the sympathy of all.

We are glad to have with us J. V. Daniel, levelman, Division Engineer's Staff, he having come to us from Pittsburgh to take place of Captain E. H. Nichols who has been absent for sometime account of illness.

Appearing in this column is picture of Passenger Brakeman W. G. Cayton. Mr. Cayton holds a regular turn on Trains 64 and 65 with Conductor C. F. Davis. He has been in the service for the past twelve years, working as grease wiper, hostler, fireman and brakeman.

On April 26, we handled Pullman Private Car Pioneer, occupied by President J. W. Oakford and Directors of the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Company, Richwood, West Virginia. This party spent one day at Richwood and one day at Gauley Mills looking over their operations on Williams River, returning to Philadelphia on Train 765, April 29. Mr. Oakford expressed himself as being much pleased with the handling of his car and party.

A few of the recent purchasers of new cars this spring are: Dr. E. A. Fleetwood, Fireman J. T. Hersman, Brakeman O. C. Watson, Conductor B. F. Haney, Conductor R. Roush, Engineer S. L. Rodebaugh, Conductor W. E. Nordeck and Brakeman P. O. Snyder.

Mrs. E. C. Harter, wife of fireman, is improving after a recent illness.

Engineer R. J. Vassar is ill at his home in Weston. We hope for his speedy recovery.

Mrs. Charlie Gay, wife of section foreman has improved sufficiently to be brought home from Weston General Hospital.

We are showing in these columns one of the best group pictures that any could wish to see. They are the daughter of E. M. Garner, master carpenter, Charleston Division. Reading from left to right—sitting—Goldie and Beatrice; standing—Joyce and Clara.

Mr. Garner, the proud father of this group of girls, has been in the service of the Company since 1901. He was employed as carpenter helper, carpenter and carpenter foreman on the Monongah Division. In November, 1922, he was promoted to his present position as master carpenter, Charleston Division. Now the sad part of it is boys, all the girls are married except Clara.

Wheeling Division Ohio River Sub-Division

Correspondent, CHARLOTTE MARLOWE

It is not often in these days of big crimes and bootleggers that one of the fair sex gets herself prominently into the lime-light in the noble enforcement of the law. Such, however, is what our efficient bill clerk, Miss Virginia Tredway, succeeded in doing with the slight assistance of three other young ladies who were in the party. While gathering wild flowers about five miles below the city the fair Virginia accidentally stumbled over a tub of mash in a ravine far from the road. For a few minutes our heroine was speechless with amazement if not fright. Can you imagine Virginia speechless? Upon recovering from the shock she immediately yelled for her companions to show them her find and after a hurried council it was decided to drive to town, notify the prohibition officer and return with him to the spot.

Paul Revere's ride had nothing on that trip back to town and all speed records were shattered as well as speed laws. Arriving at the prohibition officer's office, they were fortunate in finding that famous sleuth in his lair and but a few minutes elapsed before the race back to the scene of the crime was on. It was indeed a dramatic and thrilling ride with Virginia at the wheel, Prohibition Officer at her side, revolver in hand.

Imagine, if you can, the feeling of our heroine as the game little Ford tore off mile after mile in its wild flight in behalf of the law. Visions of the movie cameras that would be aimed at her by the representatives of the Vitagraph, Hearst International and other World's feature companies, and of the thrills that would result when her face would be flashed on the screen, made her heart do a marathon.

Arriving at the scene of the crime the party rushed to the ravine, almost trampling on a batch of young pigs who were also on their way to the ravine. The Prohibition Officer rushed towards the tub of mash and was about to empty it into the creek when a loud roar interrupted him. "Hey, bring back that bran mash, you big cheese and get off my farm the whole caboodle of you." Alas! for fleeting fame. The supposed moonshine mash proved to be nothing more than bran for the young pigs. To say that our heroine was dumbfounded would be putting it mildly. The visions of her face on the feature page of the "News" faded and the editorials and other laudations that would have been hers, vanished like a mist before the morning sun. The party returned crestfallen to town, having wasted three gallons of good gasoline not counting the wear and tear on the Ford. The excitement was so intense while it lasted that our heroine was not able to work the next day, the reaction being too much for her nerves.

Any party along the Baltimore and Ohio lines wishing to have their town cleared of bootleggers can do so by writing this young lady. Her price is $1000.00 for small towns and $5000.00 for larger towns of 20,000 population. The price may seem rather high, but she guarantees results or all money will be immediately refunded and no questions asked.

We don't suppose Bronson Deem, Beau Brummel of Ann Street Station, told you of his disheartening experience at Robinson's? We will. Here are the harrowing details. Some person in whom he had implicit confidence handed him a flock of "comps" and told him to go out and enjoy himself. Deem's larded his hair and had his moustache pulled out in anticipation of an evening's FREE entertainment. He then hid himself to the show grounds, and with reckless abandon scattered his spending money right and left, bringing joy to the hearts of the hot-dog man and peanut dispensers, for did he not have three perfectly good "comps" in his vest pocket, and what would he want with money?

After having wearied of the diversions offered out in the open, our hero made his way to the big tent where the circus band was already playing: "Paddy got drunk on fish and potatoes, and never got sober 'till morning." Blissfully unconscious of anything being what it shouldn't, Bronson almost collapsed when the big pugilist to whom he gave his pass, yelled: "Whaddye tryin' to pull off, bo? This ain't no good at this gate. Approach me with six bits if you want in here." That was when he discovered that all of his "comps" were for reserved seats AFTER he had gotten inside. As we passed him, we saw him bearing liquid refreshments to the elephant in order that he might get through the lines and occupy the three reserved seats and his

Sunset and evening star

And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

Leonidas F. Thompson, oldest ex-employee of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, answered the call of his Pilot, April 22. Born in 1823, Mr. Thompson would have been a centenarian had he lived until September 22. An account of his life was given in our May issue.

He was a lover of the best in literature, memorizing many of the best old poems, Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" being one of his favorites. Truly religious, his influence for good was tremendous. Gentle, charitable and kindly, he ever walked in the steps of the lowly Nazarene.

Mr. Thompson was a Veteran, and the members of this organization paid their last respects to their departed member, attending his funeral in a body. His remains were taken to the First Presbyterian Church of which he had been an elder for 60 years, and he was then laid to rest in the Riverview Cemetery.

For several years prior to his death he resided at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Swearingen, Parkersburg, and to her our deepest sympathy is extended. He will be greatly missed.

Twilight and evening bell
And after that the dark!

And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

We wish to express our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. F. V. (Jack) Helmick on account of the death of their little son, "Teddy," age 21 months, which occurred May 2, when he was scalded to death. A nurse who was in the home at the time on account of the illness of Mrs. Helmick, left a can of hot water on the kitchen floor. In her absence from the room "Teddy" pried the lid off the can with a small stick and fell into the hot water.

"Jack" has been night foreman at the High Side Shops, Parkersburg for some time, and his fellow workers extend their sincere sympathy to him and Mrs. Helmick in their bereavement.

Ferry H. Nuckles, yard conductor, Huntington, was electrocuted about 2.30 a. m., March 24, while on duty. His body was found lying at the foot of a city electric line post at the corner of the Baltimore and Ohio right of way and 20th Street, Huntington.

Mr. Nuckles entered the service as brakeman, in June, 1913. He worked in this capacity until 1916, when he was promoted to yard conductor. Just 33 years of age, in the midst of a happy family life, with a rosy future before him, he was taken. His father and mother are still living; his father, William Nuckles, is one of the oldest employees on the Ohio River Division, at present employed as yard fireman at Huntington. His wife and two children survive him.

Endowed with the gift of making friends, Ferry was one of the most popular men in the service. The entire division extends sympathy to his loved ones.

J. W. Stocking, general clerk, Master Mechanic's Office at Benwood, who was granted a leave of absence on account of his health, and who has been sojourning in Texas for the past six weeks, heard a band play "Home, Sweet Home" and beat it back shortly after. He decided to remain in Parkersburg upon his return, and is now working the assistant coal billing position, Low Yard. Welcome home, "Socks."

Our popular he-vamp, J. Gardner Duncan, is up to his old tricks again, breaking the hearts of innocent flappers with his honeyed words, and "Sheik-like" beauty. This time it is the Marietta "flaps" who will be the victims. After playing his insidious wiles on numberless Parkersburg "frails," he has now moved to a more prolific field, and one of great opportunity.

The pencil sharpener which caused such a furore in the Low Yard office has a close second in the one which confronted the force at the agent's office one morning. Janey Thorn has to be carried out on a stretcher, K. Brady, smoked three Piedmonts, "Phil" swallowed his Red Horse, "Socks" asked for half holiday, while Walker was heard muttering darkly to himself on his high stool in the corner.

Notice the happy smile on "Don" M. Worley's face! "Don" is looking forward to a fine camping trip with the Boy Scouts of which he is a member. Papa Worley promised him the trip if he passed at school. He not only passed but had a big margin to go on, and next term will be a freshman. "Don" is quite clever at drawing, and you will find on the children's page one of his sketches of Uncle Sam.

N. C. B. Ewing has been appointed assistant general yardmaster, Parkersburg, to fill vacancy made by the resignation of E. T. Johnson. Mr. Ewing has been with the Company for a number of years, commencing as yard clerk, Clarksburg Yards, later as brakeman, then promoted to conductor, and in 1914 was promoted to relief yardmaster, Clarksburg, which position he

H. A. Iuler, chief clerk to general manager was appointed assistant train master, reporting to Superintendent Meyers, Cincinnati, effective May 1.

Miss Nock maintains that the Transportation Department used excellent judgment in selecting her protegee as file clerk; there is no question that the training received under her tutelage will be valuable to "Gus" in his new position.

If we ever see B. F. Timme during office hours when he is not in a hurry it will be time to call a doctor.

We have a partial promise from the best looking girl in the Bureau of Rates of Pay to furnish her photograph for a future issue of the MAGAZINE. The "iceman" will call for it.

John Sheeran and his inseparable (not insufferable) pipe are still boon companions after a friendship of many years; regardless of this, when it comes to getting pay roll information all paths lead to John's door.

The experiences of Asa Radspinner in automobiling, if it will ever be permissible to print as described by him, will form an interesting story rivalling even the fairy tales of old. His mad rush down one of our principal avenues on two cylinders is still a topic of conversation, while his shattered confidence in automobile salesmen is pitiful.

Ruth L. Beitzer has been transferred from the Statistical Department to the Passenger Desk and gives promise of becoming as valuable in her new position as she has been in others previously occupied.

Ralph Hornback, heir apparent of our embargo chief, whose picture accompanies our notes, already gives promise of a bright future. We leave it to you to judge from the picture why "Ferdie" thinks so much of him.

As predicted in a previous issue, a few angels could not accomplish much in a place like Madisonville, so our inspector of station service, R. L. Angel and wife have hied themselves to a regular place to live—OAKLEY.

In the next issue the correspondent expects to have in his possession photographs taken at different stages in the life of the arch conspirator who was responsible for publishing the correspondent's picture in a recent issue. It will be suggested to the editor on account of the nature of the photographs that it might be advisable to order an extra supply of the MAGAZINE as no doubt many friends outside of our service will be interested.

It is hoped we will be able to furnish the pictures of the three best looking girls in this office for the next issue.

"Joe" Riley, our efficient and good natured office boy, severed his connection with us on April 30 to take service with the Bethlehem Steel Co., Bethlehem, Pa. While we are sorry to see him go we rejoice that he has improved his position and expect him to become one of the leading lights in the steel business at some future date.

Cost Accountant Spaul relates the following story: He had occasion to take a midnight train on the C. & E. I. from Vincennes to Chicago a short time ago and was fortunate in securing Pullman car accommodations. A lady accompanied by a small boy also boarded the train and while the porter was arranging the berth, the small boy wandered up and down the aisle; it was noticed he stopped each time he passed in front of a lower berth from which sounds, far from musical, emanated. Finally he rushed up to his mother with the query: "Ma, what is that in there?" "Sh! Sh!" said his mother, "you must not make a noise—people are asleep in there." "But," said the s. b., "there's some sort of a wild beast in there for every time I go by he growls at me." Many of the occupants awakened, either by the youngster's outburst or the growls of the wild beast, laughed aloud, and a rather heavy "drummer" who was the "wild beast" became the butt of the jokes of his confreres.

We extend a welcome to Joseph Hoffman, our new office boy. He promises to make good.

A baseball game is being arranged between staff officers and clerks at New Castle Junction. The time and place of the game will be announced later. We all remember the last time these two teams met, and I have too much consideration for the feelings of boys in the clerks team to recall any of the sad events happening at that time. Of course we all like to reflect on the time Trainmaster C. P. Angell knocked out that two bagger, with the bases loaded; that finished the pitching aspirations of "DUKE" Morrissey, who was on the mound for the clerks. We are told that Morrissey intends to make a comeback in the next game, but we hate to think of the slaughter that's in store for him. Watch for the day and date. We wouldn't miss it for a million.

The following changes have been made on the Akron Division: M. H. Beard, assistant division engineer, promoted to assistant trainmaster, Newark, Ohio; D. R.

C. L. Terhune (Optimist, glimpsing vase of carnations placed on counter): My, but those are beautiful, and they have a wonderful odor.

Lady Clerk: (Joy-killer) They sure are pretty, but I don't know how anyone could smell them when they are artificial!

The late Charles H. Gomm, assistant general freight agent, Cincinnati, Ohio

Lloyd Sullivan has joined the General Freight Office clerical force as stenographer, and J. W. Patterson has accepted a similar position in the Tariff Bureau.

Charles H. Gomm was born in Chicago, Ill., January 17, 1879.

His first railroad experience was as stenographer with Chicago & Northwestern Railway, Chicago, Ill., in 1897. In 1899 he accepted a similar position with Q. & C. Route, and was subsequently promoted to soliciting freight agent of that line at Chicago, and commercial agent at Dallas, Texas.

In 1910 he entered service of Chicago, Hamilton & Dayton at Chicago as commercial agent, which position he held until October 1, 1916, when he was made division freight agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Springfield. He was promoted to assistant general freight agent, Cincinnati, March 1, 1920. He was unable to continue his duties in this position when illness overtook him on January 29, 1921. He died at his home in Madisonville, Cincinnati, on April 18 and was buried in Chicago, April 21. He is survived by his wife and four children, two boys and two girls.

Mr. Gomm was of a kindly disposition, well liked everywhere, making friends wherever he went, and was considered one of the Baltimore and Ohio's best freight solicitors. We extend our sincere sympathy to his widow and children.

On May 1, J. P. Leingang, chief clerk to assistant general freight agent, Cleveland, celebrated his fortieth anniversary of service with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, or it would probably be better to say that the employees of the Freight and Passenger Traffic Departments celebrated it for him.

With the assistance of Mrs. Leingang a surprise party was quietly arranged and at 8.30 p. m. we proceeded in a body to the house.

After everybody had said "Hello" and congratulated "J. P." the musically inclined gathered around the piano for a few selections. Card tables were set up for the rest of the crowd and "Penny Ante" and "Michigan" were in evidence the balance of the evening.

At 12.30 a delicious lunch, consisting of sandwiches, pickles, ice cream, cake and coffee, was served, after which Mr. Kimes, on behalf of the employees, presented Mr. Leingang with a fine traveling bag.

About 1.30 a. m. a tired and happy crowd left with "Jake" their best wishes for many more years of pleasant association with the Baltimore and Ohio family, and proceeded homeward.

Ford Runs 57 Miles on Gallon of Gasoline

A new automatic vaporizer and decarbonizer, which in actual test has increased the power and mileage of Fords from 25 to 50 per cent. and at the same time removes every particle of carbon from the cylinders, is the proud achievement of John A. Stransky, 3836 South Main Street, Pukwana, South Dakota. A remarkable feature of this simple and inexpensive device is that its action is governed entirely by the motor. It is slipped between the carburetor and intake manifold and can be installed by anyone in five minutes without drilling or tapping. With it attached, Ford cars have made from 40 to 57 miles on one gallon of gasoline. Mr. Stransky wants to place a few of these devices on cars in this territory and has a very liberal offer to make to anyone who is able to handle the business which is sure to be created wherever this marvelous little device is demonstrated. If you want to try one entirely at his risk send him your name and address today.—Adv.

By the transfer of Lester W. Lucas, the Motive Power Department has lost a valuable man. Fuller Taylor, chief clerk to road foreman engines, Newark, Ohio, recently decided to buy a new Jewett. This arranged for, the old Studebaker had to be disposed of. After broadcasting the news that he had the old car for sale at a bargain, one of the local road men decided that he would buy the car at the low figure of $150.00. This was a good buy, and the road man pulled out his check book and handed Fuller his personal check. On Fuller's next visit to the bank, he presented the check and was handed one dollar and fifty cents. Fuller looked at the check and then at the teller at the bank window, but the teller would not fall for any one hundred stuff when the check was made out for one dollar and fifty cents.

Matters have been straightened out now and both parties to the bargain have enjoyed the fun occasioned by the road man making his check read one fifty in place of one hundred and fifty.

TO CAR FOREMEN AND CARMEN—PROMPTNESS IN RELEASING CARS MARKED BAD ORDER WILL GREATLY FACILITATE THE TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT IN MOVING THE CARS AND THUS AID IN INCREASING THE CAR MILES.

The season is now approaching when it is an easy matter to get good snap shots. We want to have Newark Division help the MAGAZINE with good photos of employees or members of their families. This class of pictures is especially desired. When you get a good photo send it in, we will be glad to use it.

At this time of the year when sports, such as base ball, etc., are in order, this information makes excellent reading for those who get the MAGAZINE.

We would like to have photos of children of employees, who are completing their schooling this year and graduating.

Newark Division can rightfully boast of having a large number of men who have rendered good service and have remained on the job continuously year after year. A canvass of the yard forces under General Yard Master C. C. Grimm, has resulted in our finding that out of the present force of seventy-nine men, fifty-one men have been in the service a total of one thousand, one hundred and eighty-six years, or an average of over 23 years per man. This is a challenge to our yards to show a better record. This is a record that Newark Division is proud of. They never quit. They are satisfied and dependable men, and years ago they discontinued killing and crippling. SAFETY FIRST is part of their daily duty. The roll of honor is made up of the following men:

They're off! Under the able management of Leon P. Stanford, the Newark Shop ball team has rounded out in fine shape. The prospects for a winning team were never better. The team is entered in the Industrial Twilight League, Newark, and we feel sure that the team will lose none of its past prestige this year. As is the practice annually, the glass case used to house the several cups won by the team in past seasons, is being dusted out and a new section of velvet has been mounted and is now in place for the reception of the 1923 cup, which, no doubt will find its resting place at the Baltimore and Ohio Shops at the season's close. We are all behind the team and will be on hand to boost when it is scheduled to play.

S. T. Bride, local baggageman, reports that people are beginning to carry excess baggage, and that during the last month baggage handled has increased nearly double that of previous months.

J. W. Sharp, supervisor, reports that all tracks are in good condition and that work on this division is being pushed as rapidly as possible. Before long the North siding contract will be completed.

L. L. Kerr, yardmaster, is rushed to death! "Lou" says that when the day is over he feels he has been in a fight. People are calling for cars to be placed and spotted for loading and unloading, besides all inbound and outbound trains to be recorded and correspondence kept up. We don't wonder that "Lou" is all in when the day is over.

Sammy Kuhn, yard brakeman, is going to get a new DURANT Car. We trust "Sammy" won't forget that it does not drive like a Ford, and strip a few gears in practice.

A. R. Bird, yard conductor, is still in the radio business and reports that he is getting everything in the air. It won't be long until they will place cars by radio and then Amsey will all all set.

G. B. Turner, yard conductor, Steel Plant, reports that the Steel Mill is doing a wonderful business and that it looks like a railroad terminal when he goes there to switch cars in and out and to spot them.

With the warm weather now approaching our thoughts naturally turn to outdoor sports. Baseball seems to occupy the main space at present time but it won't be long until the railroad boys begin to shine up the old fishing paraphernalia in preparation for a jaunt to the various lakes and streams which our great State of Ohio is blessed with.

Harry Kale, freight house foreman, reports that the tonnage handled exceeds any previous time in his career and if it keeps on he will have to work cars at night to keep on top. All of which goes to show that the Baltimore and Ohio is enjoying good business.

Agent W. O. Stockwell is getting ready to go with the writer for a jaunt along the streams, in order to display our wares to the various kinds of fish that invade them.

"Eddy" Fisher assistant car record clerk, Mansfield, recently won the prize in golf. Pardon me I should have said "barn yard golf." "Eddy" is "some" horse shoe finger and we predict a fine career for him.

It is true that more car miles make more smiles as it not only helps the Railroads but helps business, industry, labor and the world at large. The more we ship, the more that is manufactured; the more money that is put into circulation by the various departments. Let us strive to put it to the test and we will find out that it won't fail.

Chicago Terminal

Correspondent, J. L. NICHOLS

The Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal Base Ball Club has every reason to be proud of the Dance and Bunco Entertainment given by it, in the ballroom of the Stevens Building on April 27.

The officers and employees, with their families or shebas, attended in large numbers. Never before has there been a get-together party of the officers and employees whereat so great a degree of good fellowship was evidenced as on this occasion, all of which affords the president and members of the Club much well deserved satisfaction.

One of the principal numbers of the entertainment was the fancy dancing of Miss Yvonne DeVeney, daughter of our superintendent, who is entitled to much praise for the prominent part she took in the festivities.

Those who were so unfortunate as not to have been able to be present on this long-to-be-remembered occasion, missed a lot of real fun. The accompanying drawing by Walter A. Buckmaster, night time clerk, Lincoln Street Shops is indicative of the spirit of pleasure that "everybody didn't have nothing else but."

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clough are pleased to congratulate them upon the birth of a son. Mr. Clough, as you know, is our tinner foreman at Lincoln Street and, as you also know, his wife was Miss Birdie Rosenberg, long a clerk in the office of Master Mechanic F. K. Moses, where she was one of several favorites, some of whom have preceded her to the realms of domestic bliss.

What! Listen! We hear a son has also been born to Mrs. "Fred" Rosenberg wife of our genial roundhouse foreman at East Chicago. The Cloughs thought they had put one over on the Rosenbergs, but they came back with the goods.

One of Master Mechanic Moses' Prides, Engine 5237 Assigned to the Capitol Limited

You will be surprised to know that Miss Catherine Cummings, who, for a long time, has been our roundhouse foreman's clerk at Lincoln Street, was married on May 12 to Charles Rank, of Little Rock, Arkansas, where they will make their home. Every good wish, Catherine, for your happiness and success. We shall surely miss you as our "first aid."

We are informed, upon good authority, that Car Foreman "Davy" Julian, has as one of his office force, one Frank Stonick, who owns a Ford coupe, in which "our Mary" Fox delights to be taken home after a hard day's work of eating cake and ice-cream. That's right Mary, don't let anything get by you, but remember, there is a speed limit.

The beautiful new Baltimore and Ohio "Capitol Limited" left the Grand Central passenger station on May 13 on time. This splendid equipment has been adopted by our Operating and Mechanical Departments as their favorite "baby," and will be given preferred professional attention as such. The accompanying picture of one of the new locomotives assigned to this train was taken by Master Mechanic F. K. Moses, at Lincoln Street while she stood on the turntable. He is justly proud of her.

For the first time since he was promoted to General Superintendent, D. F. Stevens came to Garrett May 16, accompanied by Mrs. Stevens. A reception was held for Mr. Stevens in the evening by members of the Chamber of Commerce and others, including local Baltimore and Ohio officials. W. W. Sharpless, president of the chamber, presided. Brief talks were made by the Company's attorney, Superintendent S. U. Hooper and Mr. Stevens. The speakers referred to the pleasant relations existing between the people of Garrett and the Baltimore and Ohio and the prediction was made that this friendship will increase and be of mutual benefit to the community and the Company.

Mr. Hooper said that employees of the Chicago Division are responding in a fine way to the pressure brought about by heavy traffic and he is proud of them. He recalled President Willard's remarks last summer that the Baltimore and Ohio wants to be a good citizen of every community it serves and Mr. Hooper added that he would like to see inscribed on the Company's buildings the words "Citizen and Neighbor."

Mr. Stevens was formerly trainmaster on the Chicago Division, leaving here in 1914. He has a host of friends in this community, all of whom congratulate him on his advancement.

M. Altherr, formerly agent, South Chicago, has been appointed assistant trainmaster, headquarters Garrett.

C. L. Starr, St. Louis Division, has been appointed assistant road foreman of engines, headquarters Willard.

H. C. Batchelder has been appointed assistant superintendent, and E. Walton terminal trainmaster, headquarters Willard, Ohio.

H. L. Cordrey, chief clerk to division accountant, has been transferred to position of Car Foreman, Garrett shops.

INCREASE CAR MILES. KEEP 'EM MOVING! By the small matter of increasing approximately each car movement four miles per day, of all the cars owned by class one railroads in the country, during the months of September, October and November 1922, it would HAVE IN EFFECT RESULTED IN ADDING 334,681 CARS TO THE OWNERSHIP, which would have resulted in a large reduction in the car shortage. Average miles per car per day CAN BE INCREASED, as shown by report for the first week in May, 1923, when the highest peak in the history of the Baltimore and Ohio was reached, 32.38, average miles per car per day, including bad order cars. This is encouraging and shows what can be done by concerted effort on the part of all. INCREASED CAR MILES RESULTS IN QUICK REDUCTION IN POUNDS OF COAL PER GROSS TON MILE, which is another reason for KEEPING 'EM MOVING and HELPS STOP-A-LEAK!

In the May issue of the MAGAZINE, mention was made of Earl Schweitzer, clerk, car distributor's office, having the "love nest" just about completed. Just as expected, before that note could get into print "Schweitz" kicked over the traces and led to the altar Miss Verna Colvin, who was an employee of the Frad Candy Company, and gave her his name right in front of the preacher, then quickly flew away for a two weeks wedding trip to New York and other eastern points. Good wishes for a happy married life, and may their lives be one continual round of pleasure.

S. S. Winters, former agent at Grosvenor, has been appointed agent at Athens. B. C. Roads has been appointed ticket agent at that station.

Sympathy is extended to Conductor B. T. Shimmel, in the death of his mother.

L. T. Griffin, brakeman is receiving congratulations, being the proud "Papa" of a nine and one-half-pound girl.

Have YOU told YOUR friends about the "CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY" Campaign, which is to be conducted during the months of June, July, August and September, 1923?

C. F. Young, fireman, joined the ranks of the benedicts recently. Best wishes for a happy married life.

R. Conner and James Waldron, machinist apprentices, were "treated" to a calf wagon ride recently by their fellow employees, in honor of their marriages.

Here is one automobile owner who "CROSSESCROSSINGSCAUTIOUSLY."

During the latter part of April, Crossing Watchman C. Driggs, Greenfield, observed an automobile approach the crossing just west of that station, stop and one of the party get out, look up and down the track and then signal the driver to cross. This "game," while not very popular, has every advantage over the old familiar "game" of "trying to beat the train over the crossing," which in one year was responsible for 183 accidents on the Baltimore and Ohio. It is regretted that license number of the above mentioned machine was not noted, in order that the name of this careful crossing driver could have been obtained.

The following brakemen took examination for promotion to conductors: H. L. Wills, C. H. Laughlin, Ed. Tierney, J. P. Boylan, B. H. Smith, H. J. Thacker, C. M. Skinner, J. R. Price, John Murphy, Cecil Cox, E. E. Elswick, E. W. Strear, C. E. Hildebrand, S. H. Trovillo, C. W. Hale and A. Johnson.

Firemen J. G. Baker, J. A. Carter, E. Robinett, P. P. Evans, C. Varian and Geo. Glenn, have been promoted to engineers.

Conductor J. Ford, tells the following experience. A lady passenger and small boy recently boarded one of the accommodation trains on the Ohio Division and when he asked for transportation, she gave him a half fare ticket. He asked her where her ticket was and she stated "That's it." He informed her that "that" was only a half fare ticket, and she immediately replied "well, that is the way I am going, just one way," she being under the impression that it only required one half-fare ticket for a single trip. Conductor Ford courteously explained to her what kind of ticket was required.

The freight house at Chillicothe is "all dressed up" with a new sign.

Otis Andrew has been appointed as ticket clerk at Washington Court House. He was formerly clerk in yard office.

Employees of the Ohio Division were saddened by the news of the death of C. M. Dean, engineer, who was killed in Newark Yards, on May 6, just as he was finishing his trip on Cincinnati-Newark turn. Engineer Dean started firing on the Ohio Division in December, 1906 and was promoted to engineer in 1912. A few years ago he bid in one of the Cincinnati-Newark runs. Engineer Dean was well liked and his many friends extend their sympathy to his bereaved family.

If any one knows "what's wrong" with the fish in Salt Creek, near Chillicothe, inform O. E. Sorgius, chief clerk to division accountant. Also, as a matter of information, he wishes to inform all fishermen who are contemplating getting fish in this creek to be sure and take 25 cents along to help pay taxes of the man that owns the land along this stream. He, as well as three other members of the office force, can guarantee a good return for the money, in the way of "fish stories" from this man.

The only trouble was that the other "three members" had "holes in their pockets," and "O. E. S." had to pay expenses.

After several months of "no news" from the freight office at Chillicothe there comes this item of interest. The marriage of Miss Bernice Gickler, stenographer, to Joseph H. Grote, an employee of the paper mill. We wish them good luck and happiness.

Do not grow careless with continued performance of a task. Some day you will slip when you least expect it. SAFETY FIRST ALWAYS, and "nothin' els' but—"

Don't forget that the correspondent will appreciate any items of interest that you may be able to send him for the MAGAZINE. Also pictures, especially at this time, of employees' children who are graduating from the various grades of schools.

Our sympathy is extended to C. D. McDonald, conductor, in the death of his mother.

Charles Dunlap, stenographer in Division Freight Agent's Office, has resigned and is taking an extended automobile trip, with a party of friends to California.

We are glad to report that F. R. Gelhausen, master mechanic, who has been seriously ill with tonsillitis, is again on the job.

You then promise that you will be more careful in the future, and you are. Why not be just as careful with our Company's supply? A proportion of our water supply is on meters, just the same as the water in our homes. CLOSE THE FAUCET—DON'T WASTE TWENTY-FIVE GALLONS in order to drink a pint.

Toledo Division

Correspondent, C. E. THRASHER

The accompanying photograph is that of Engineer Rydman and Fireman C. R. Pierce, who are endeavoring to "Stop that Leak" on the Toledo Division. On April 24 these men in charge of Engine 5003, Train No. 53, Toledo to Cincinnati, 8 cars to Deshler, 35 miles and 7 cars through to Cincinnati, 167 miles, total, 202 miles, used 1059 scoops of coal, 14 pounds per scoop, averaging 10.2 pounds per passenger car mile. With such performances, this crew will help to cut down the coal bill. Engineer Rydman entered service on September 1, 1888 and Fireman C. R. Pierce on May 10, 1916. Both men were commended for this excellent showing.

We are reproducing a waybill issued June 24, 1870, covering a shipment from Troy, Ohio to Delphos. It is interesting to compare the rates in effect 53 years ago and the present day. Waybill No. 93 covered three sacks of malt, weight 293 pounds, rate 14 cents, total 41 cents. Present rate on this commodity is 5th class, 17 cents, or 50 cents, an increase of 9 cents.

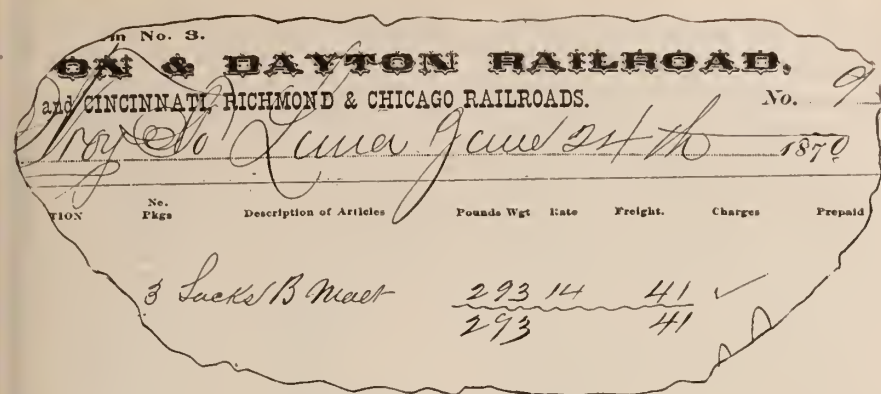

Another old waybill No. 228, June 27, 1870, covers shipment of plows and household goods from Piqua to Lima, original point of shipment, Greenville, Ohio. The total cost of shipment 53 years ago was $7.62. Total charges on the same shipment today would be $7.81 or an increase of 19 cents.

Comparison of these rates with other industries shows a small increase and no doubt if the public were acquainted with some of the rates which were in effect half century ago, comparing them with the present day, it would be a simple matter to explain why many railroads are not paying dividends on their stock.

Business is good on the Toledo Division. Our passenger trains are filled and showing a good ON TIME performance. There is no better way to secure passenger business than to operate trains on time. It does not cost a penny more to carry 200 passengers than it does to haul 100. It is the duty of everyone to see that passenger trains are not delayed.

We heard a good story about our relief agent. A few days ago he went into Toledo from Perrysburg on traction car and thought he would stop at a barber shop to get all "slicked up" and take in a movie. While being shaved he discovered he had left his traveling bag on the car and told the barber to hurry up and shave him as he wanted to see if he could find it. He hurried to the traction office and advised the train caller of his misfortune; the latter called first station on line to locate the missing grip. It was found and it was necessary for "Jess" to catch the next car in a search for his valuable possessions. He finally located it and returned to Toledo. While walking down the street, window shopping, he discovered there was something wrong and could not locate the trouble. Presently he discovered he had left his glasses in the barber shop, so back he went to locate them. "Jess" says he thought while he was all together he had better go to the hotel and go to bed before someone kidnapped him, as he might not be able to tell his name.

Things We Would Like to Know

- Where Agent Schoenberger, Toledo, gets all his pretty girls? Didja ever notice they all have a pleasant smile?
- Why Earl Baumgardner, chief clerk, Toledo is never angry?
- Why J. Reister Hamilton never smiles?
- Why Arthur West Hamilton does not join the church? He says he did. But "Didie?"
- Why Bert MacDougal Hamilton does not become a jockey?
- Why L. F. Hockett never buys any chewing tobacco?
- Why does "Bill" Crist part his hair in the middle?
- Why T. J. Daly never has a match?
- Why Tim O'Neil never got married?
- And a lot of other things we would like to know but are afraid to ask.
- I. E. Clayton is back on the job after a three months leave of absence. We are glad to see him.

G. J. Williams has returned to the dispatcher's office and is working a trick. Sorry to see you leave us, George.

It is with regret that we report the death of F. L. Charles' mother, which occurred at Waterville, Ohio on May 17. Mrs. Charles has been in poor health for some time, and although her death was expected it came to the family as a shock. Services were held at her late residence, Waterville, Ohio, and burial was made at Perrysburg, Ohio. She is survived by her husband and four sons.

We extend our sympathy to Mr. Charles and other members of the bereaved family.

I desire to express my sincere appreciation to the members of the Baltimore and Ohio family at Lima, Ohio, who are so ably and willingly assisting me in upholding the standard of our MAGAZINE.

The manner in which the boys on the road, in the shops and in the offices are sending me material for the monthly article affords me a great deal of pleasure, and demonstrates what a wonderful hold this MAGAZINE of ours has upon our employes, and its power for good.

In a Magazine of National circulation, I read a letter written by a Baltimore and Ohio employe to a friend which said in part: "I am working for the best railroad on earth. They have always treated me fine in every way. My greatest desire is by my efforts to prove my appreciation. I have been with them thirty-two years, without a demerit mark against my record and I hope to continue this record so long as I may live."

The recipient of the above letter was inclined to believe that the spirit breathing from the lines quoted was very rare in these days, but I do not agree with him, especially with reference to employes on our Railroad. I have met many employes who are imbued with the same spirit and I am sure that there are many thousands of them on our railroad who are contributing to it by their daily service to this Company, and by so doing, making it what it is recognized to be—one of the best managed in the country, if not the best.

When you consider that in a period of ninety years the greatest transportation system in the world has been developed in our country and that our company is one of the largest in the country, does it not make you feel proud that you are a part of that railroad, and do you not feel, like the writer of the above letter, that you are indeed working for the best railroad?

Working as we do, from day to day, let us not consider how speedily we can put in our eight hours, but how thoroughly we can do our part in the service assigned to us, so that we may feel, at its completion that we have performed our duties in a creditable manner and played well our part in Life's game.

One of our photographs is a group of our boys at North Lima who are helping in a large measure to insure successful operation of our trains.

The "fire boys" in our photo are capable of doing good work and helping by their individual efforts to keep down our coal bill. Joe Ziegenbush may be trying to locate the party who called him on the telephone and requested him to call the pipe stretcher to the phone. After a vain search for the pipe stretcher, "Joe" is now looking for the person who made the request.

Fireman C. L. Croueh was married on April 30. His wife was formerly Miss Audrey Shaffer. Now that you have left the terminal, Croueh, old man, play it safe. We are glad to see you "double heading." Play the game and do your best to bring the train in safely and on time when your run is over. Congratulations and best wishes!

Third Trick Crew Dispatcher F. J. Helmig passed cigars to his friends on April 18, the occasion being his marriage to Miss Josephine De Grief. The cigars were fine, "Fay." May your happiness endure always.

"Uncle Jo" Ortel is dead. He was a grand old man who was loved by all who knew him, because he loved us, and always had a smile and cheerful greeting. He died April 13 at 5.30 p. m. in the dining room of his home on West Third Street.

"Uncle Jo" had performed his day's work as flagman at the Second Street crossing, to which duties he had been devoted for the past nine years.

Arriving home, "Uncle Jo" entered the dining room, as was his custom, and his daughter, Miss Annie, ran for his slippers so that he would be comfortable and be ready to dine. As she approached him he gave a gasp, fell back and died.

Joseph Ortel was born in Baden, Germany, sixty four years ago. He came to this country when twenty one years of age. Soon after his arrival he accepted employment with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, now part of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, in the Carpenter Department. Shortly afterwards he became foreman of a bridge gang with headquarters in this city. About nine years ago his infirmities made it necessary for him to give up manual labor and he was assigned to a position as crossing man at Second Street crossing.

So steady was Mr. Ortel on the job that his absence for a day caused city wide comment; everyone asking where "Uncle Jo" had gone. Every child in the city knew him and spoke to him every time as they passed his crossing.

The companion of his life died in the same manner as he, about fifteen months ago, the summons coming without notice, as a flash from a clear sky. "Uncle Jo" remarked to the writer some months ago, that life did not seem the same to him now, as it did before she went away. Today these excellent people, faithful companions and exemplary citizens, are re-united in the glorious beyond.

The bereaved ones may find consolation in the fact that their parents were of a true blue type which makes a substantial civilization.

Just a week before his death "Uncle Jo" had been summoned to Chillicothe where he underwent a medical examination. It was observed that he was in poor health, but he returned and was so cheerful that it was not expected that he would go so soon. There are four children surviving, Ella, Rose and Annie, this city, and Charles Joseph "Dutch" Ortel, Dayton. Two brothers and a sister also survive.

The deceased was a member of the Catholic Church and the funeral was held at the S. S. Peter and Paul Church, with burial at Mt. Calvary Cemetery. All schools of the city turned out to the funeral and many beautiful flowers were left on his grave by school children. Our sympathy is extended to his survivors.

"Another Instance of Genuine, Wholehearted SERVICE, Plus the Ability to Perform," says W. P. Tanner-Gross and Company

A COPY of The Flour Barrel, issued May 9, by W. P. Tanner-Gross and Company, which is mailed weekly to flour users, has been handed to us, and the following story it tells will prove of interest to everyone:

About every so often the Shipping Department gets up on its individual and collective hind legs and yells for recognition. Of course, executives and salesmen have no right to monopolize the spot light, so I've heeded the shippers' cry and here is what they have to say. And it's a mighty good story, at that.

R. M. Frey, our guardian of traffic, says on oath, that at 4.57 p. m. Monday, April 30th, a baker phoned and wanted a car of flour placed on Pier 21, East River, not a minute later than Wednesday, May 2. Forthwith all hands got busy and speeded up the shipping machinery. It was too late to load a car Monday night but the men at the plant filled a car the next day, Tuesday.

Now here is where the Baltimore and Ohio enters the scene. At 6.00 a. m., Wednesday, the shifting crew pulled the car from our siding, hustled it up to St. George and at 8.30 a. m. rolled it on to Baltimore and Ohio float, No. 151, bound for Pier

Joseph Utz, clerk, freight office, is back at work after being absent for three weeks account of small-pox.

Herbert Potts, warehouse man, has resigned to take a position in Columbus, Ohio. We hate to loose you, "Herb," but wish you luck.

21, East River. The car arrived there at 10.00 a. m. and because of the cooperation of C. E. Floom, the agent, was made ready for delivery at once.

Just about this time and before we could get him on the phone, Mr. Bakerman called and said he was out of flour and would have to send a truck down to our plant for a load. Said he realized he had given us mighty short notice but hoped a miracle or something would happen.

Imagine his relief and appreciation when we told him his flour was on the pier and that the railroad men, knowing his dire need, had performed a near miracle for his benefit in getting the car from our siding to St. George, then across the bay to the pier and made ready for delivery, all in only four hours by the clock.

This is another instance of genuine, whole hearted service—the will to serve plus the ability to perform.

Prize Winning Supervisors and Track Foremen Tell How They Did It

THE supervisors and foremen on the Indiana and Illinois Districts and on the Monongah Division, who won prizes in 1922 for the best sections, tell us how they did it. The key note of their explanation is "Cooperation" and full credit is given by each one to his men.

Gives His Men Credit

As much as myself, my men were responsible for being able to present the most improved main line section on the Monongah Division for the year 1922.

Previous to the beginning in earnest of the renewal season, and with my allotted men, I was continually following up the distribution of ties and when forces were increased and the word "go" issued, tie renewals and ditching were carried on daily by a gang of men who worked six days per week, resulting in my section presenting the appearance it did when the inspectors rewarded me.

C. W. Keith,
Foreman, Cornwallis, W. Va.

Completes Each Job

During the progress of renewals last year I was under the impression that more was being accomplished on my section than in past years.

The improvement on my section was the result of daily labor, constantly following to completion each job that was started.

Tie renewals were finished early in the fall, giving me an opportunity to assign all forces to the preparation of ditches which is the first essential feature of track maintenance.

M. P. McVicker,
Foreman, Stone House, W. Va.

Gives All Credit to His Men

For many years the G. and B. subdivision of the Monongah Division has been more or less a sore spot in the eyes of the Management.

Previous to the beginning of the renewal season, last year, I had firmly made up my mind that I would, with the assistance of my faithful foremen and men, present a much improved railroad, both from appearance and physical standpoints.

At a monthly staff meeting early in the year I was promised by each foreman his best cooperation.

Material was forthcoming at all times during the year, work train service ample, and the improvement that was noticeable from day to day during the entire year convinced me that not only were the men fulfilling their promise but were going one better.

Other than my desire at all times to give my superiors my best, I attribute the improved conditions on the G. and B. to my men only.

D. F. Ramsey,
Supervisor, G. & B. Subdivision,
Grafton, W. Va.

Early Tie Renewals Did It

As I received prize for having the best branch section, I wish to thank our officers of the Baltimore and Ohio for it:

I received the prize because I was the first foreman on the branch to have all my ties renewed last year. As we had all ties on hand for year's renewal, I had them in by June 1, and had the balance of year to work on line and surface, and clean weeds. I think it a good idea to have all ties in track by July 1, then you will have solid roadbed.

John Robb,
Foreman, Springfield, Ill.

Believes in His Men

I won the prize for the most improved main line section on the Monongah Division simply by believing that my men were capable of doing just what they were instructed to do. I did everything possible to carry out the instructions of my supervisor. I made it a point at all times to follow up the tightening of bolts, renewing ties, surfacing of low joints and the preparation of suitable ditches. In preparing the ditches I followed closely the method outlined in the Maintenance of Way book of instructions.

Ties were distributed over practically my entire section previous to starting to apply them; this permitted me to finish tie renewals early in the fall.

Thos. Varner,
Foreman, Cairo, W. Va.

Hard Work Does It

The way I succeeded in carrying off the prize for 1922 was by hard work by my men and me, eight hours per day.

Ed. Widdows,
Foreman, Iuka, Ill.

Worked Hard to Win

I made it my duty to do my very best. My men and I worked hard to get the section in good condition. I was untiring in my effort to make the track safe and I think it looks well.

William Canfield,
Foreman,
North Vernon, Ind.

Being "On the Job" Did It

I started my service with the Baltimore and Ohio in 1897 as track laborer on Claremont Section No. 41, and worked in that capacity until 1911. Served as extra gang foreman during 1911 and on January 1, 1912 took charge of Bridgeport section No. 39, and served as foreman on that section until April 1, 1917 when I was transferred to section 41 at Claremont, and have served as foreman here since, winning second prize in 1920 and 1921 and first prize in 1922.

I am confident the true secret lies in being on the job and seeing that work is well done. I find when it is well done at the time you are doing it, it stays done. I still believe in the old proverb "Work that is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

I wish to thank each officer participating in the inspection, especially our supervisor, J. H. Quill, for interest taken in the work I have labored so incessantly to accomplish.

J. E. Clevy,
Foreman, Claremont, Ill.

Advertising Pays

January 24, 1923.

Last spring when we received notice that there was to be a prize given for the best district and best section this year, I got right after my foremen and talked to them about it and told them that we must win this year as we had never won first prize yet. I kept the matter right before them every time I met them. I talked nothing but doing good work and winning the prize this fall. The foremen assured me that

R. S. Hollis Was a Brake- man in 1869

R. S. HOLLIS was born in Springfield, Hampshire County, Virginia (now West Virginia) on September 4, 1850. His father moved to Cheat Bridge, near Rowlesburg, in December of the same year, having been appointed toll gate keeper and postmaster. Cheat Bridge was at that time one of the stations where horses were changed on the passenger stage running between the Ohio River, Baltimore and Washington. Mr. Hollis' mother died in 1856, after which his father gave up house-keeping, leaving the children to support themselves. For six years, then, the boy's lot was a rough one.

In 1862, when he was 12 years of age—and when the war was in progress—he went to Delaware County, Indiana, serving as a bell boy in a Muncie Hotel. Not being satisfied with his position, he returned to Darke County, Ohio, and secured a position with Brandon and English, contractors, who were furnishing wood, cross ties and rails for the Bellefontaine and Indiana Railway. All the locomotives at that time on this road were using wood for fuel.

In 1865 when the last call for volunteers in the Civil War was made, he tendered his services to his country, but was rejected on account of his age, and returned to his position with Brandon and English, remaining with them until 1867. He then returned to Rowlesburg, where he secured a position with the Rowlesburg Lumber and Iron Co., rafting and running logs on the Cheat River.

In July, 1869, Mr. Hollis accepted a position as brakeman on the third division of the Baltimore and Ohio, between Piedmont and Grafton, and after serving 22 months he was promoted to freight conductor, having had the somewhat unusual distinction of running as a conductor several months before reaching the age of twenty-one. In 1872 he was assigned to Engine 123, one of the old "Camels" which was used hauling freight trains over the mountain. His engineer was John J. Hunter, now deceased.

In 1879 it was decided to move part of the helper engines to Rowlesburg, and this was done on December 29. Mr. Hollis' engine, 460, headed the list, all camel engines having been backed off, and all helper stations being supplied with the moguls, built by the Baltimore and Ohio.

Death of Thomas R. Lester

By W. E. Ross

THOMAS R. LESTER was born on a farm in Washington County, October 31, 1851. He went to work for the Ohio and Mississippi R. R. as an extra section man in June, 1870, later assisting to change the six foot gauge track to the standard of today. He was then transferred to the engine house force at Seymour where he went up the line—wiper, machinist helper machinist, gang foreman.

In 1886-87 the Seymour shop was abandoned and forces sent to Vincennes, where he remained until that shop was abandoned and force sent to Washington. He was in the engine house for some time and was there made gang foreman. This place he held until 1891 when he was transferred to Storrs as engine house foreman, where he remained until 1895 when he was sent to Hamden, Ohio as engine house foreman.

He was in Hamden until 1911 when, account of an accident, his leg was broken, necessitating his retirement from active duty, and he was placed on the Relief until Nov. 1, 1917 when he was pensioned. On being retired he moved to Seymour where he made his home until 1921 when, on account of physical infirmities, he and his wife made their home with his brother, Daniel Lester, North Vernon, Ind., a veteran engineer of the Louisville Division.

Mr. Lester died April 9, after a short illness. He had a stroke of paralysis on Easter Sunday which later developed into pneumonia. He was buried April 4, at 2.30 P. M. from the Presbyterian Church, Seymour, services being in charge of the Odd Fellows Lodge and Rev. J. W. Martin, Pastor of the Church.

The deceased is survived by Mrs. Mohr of Indianapolis, Mrs. StClair and James H. Lester of Seymour, and Daniel Lester of North Vernon, Ind. He was a member of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen, Baltimore and Ohio Veterans, Eastern Star and Rebekah Lodges at Seymour.

The late Thomas H. Lester

Engineer R. S. Hollis, retired

In 1880 Mr. Hollis was promoted to engineer, which position he held until 1906, when, on account of a severe attack of muscular rheumatism he was unable to perform his duties and resigned from the service.

In 1901 Mr. Hollis purchased the stock of dry goods and groceries owned by Thomas W. Nine, and assisted by his two sons he is still handling this business. While he has passed the age of three score years and ten, he is still in good health, and says that so far as he can ascertain there is not a man in active service on the Baltimore and Ohio today, in his section, who was there in 1869, many of them having been called to the Great Beyond, and others living in retirement.

Mr. Hollis was a charter member of the first division of the Order of Railway Conductors organized in Piedmont in 1872. He joined Division 284 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Grafton, in February 1891. He also has the honor of wearing a fifty year veterans' jewel of gold given to him by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F.

Mr. Hollis lives in Rowlesburg and extends a cordial invitation to Veterans and other employees of the Baltimore and Ohio to visit him there.

The Saxophone

LOVERS of the Saxophone—and, in fact, everyone interested in music—will be interested in a new booklet entitled "The Story of the Saxophone," published by the Buescher Band Instrument Company, Elkhart, Indiana.

The Saxophone is the most remarkable music instrument of the day. The ease with which it can be mastered, and the range and beauty of its tones, have made possible the tremendous success of such nationally famous orchestras as Paul Whiteman's Palais Royal Orchestra and Tom Brown's Clown Band.

The Saxophone has practically displaced string instruments in all the great popular recording orchestras of today.

This new booklet contains the origin and history of the Saxophone, tells you when to use the Saxophone—singly, in quartets, in sextets or in regular band; how to play from cello parts in orchestra and many other things of interest.

It will be sent free of charge to anyone on request to the Buescher Band Instrument Company, 8488 Buescher Block, Elkhart, Indiana.

Careful Handling by These Engineers of Trains 1 and 4 Gave Comfort to Young Lady Seriously Ill

AN interesting instance of appreciation of good service has recently come to our attention. The invalid daughter of Mr. L. L. Loar, Clarksburg, W. Va. was brought to Baltimore on Train No. 4, November 15, 1922, and returned to her home on Train No. 1, February 21, 1923.

Train No. 4 was handled by Engineers W. I. Rowland, T. W. White, R. C. Pearell and W. Markey; Train No. 1 by Engineers C. T. Goodwin, J. A. Nixon, A. W. Stanhagen and J. R. Cabell. Mr. Loar wrote the following letter to each engineer.

"My daughter and I wish to express our sincere thanks for the service rendered in your effort to give us a smooth ride on our trip from Baltimore on the night of February 21, at which time we brought our invalid daughter from that city. You can not imagine how much this service was appreciated unless you have had at some time a similar experience.

"My daughter has been ill for a long time; she being in such a condition that a severe 'jar' meant pain, not only on the trip, but for many days after the journey was over.

"And with these thoughts in mind I desire to express our sincere appreciation. With kindest regards and best wishes, etc."

Death of Nathaniel Dare Chesley

By H. D. Baker

Nathaniel Dare Chesley, who retired from active service on November 26, 1917, after having served the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for forty-six years, died at his late home, 1705 W. Lafayette Ave., Baltimore, Md. on May 17.

Mr. Chesley was born in Baltimore, Md. on March 18, 1850. In the separation of the Merchandise, Coal and Coke, and Passenger divisions, Mr. Chesley was retained in the Auditor of Revenue's office in charge of agents' cash remittances, which position he held until the time of his retirement.

Mr. Chesley was well respected and admired by his fellow men. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Death of F. P. Tunney

George H. Winslow Leaves Railroad "Y" Field

SUNDAY, April 15, was an epochal day in the history of the Terminal Railroad Young Men's Christian Association: a day which will stand out prominently in the minds of the membership of the association, for it marks the passing from the work of George H. Winslow, who has been secretary since the opening of the work in Union Station, November 17, 1907.

A special service was held in the rooms of the Terminal R. R. Y. M. C. A., in the nature of a farewell meeting, and many of the older members were present. Mr. J. L. Ferguson, of the Committee of Management of the Association, acted as chairman. A quartette from the Mt. Vernon Place M. E. Church rendered several selections. The meeting then took on the character of a testimonial to the retiring secretary, participated in by several, including Messrs. J. L. Ferguson, A. L. Pierce, T. J. Bridges, E. Kettle, of Danville, Va., and R. I. McCown, while on behalf of the staff of the association, presentation of a mahogany desk set was made by Assistant Secretary W. W. Tenney.

Mr. Winslow, having reached retirement age, is leaving Railroad Y. M. C. A. work, and will engage in business as secretary-treasurer of a newly organized firm.

Mr. Winslow's record is one of which any man might be proud. Born in the hills of the Old Bay State, his early life was spent in the vicinity of Springfield, Barre, Ware, and Gilbertville. On reaching manhood, he engaged in the woolen business, but after a time took up the work of the Young Men's Christian Association and entered the training school at Springfield, Mass., graduating in 1891.

Mr. Winslow is succeeded by Edward H. Goetz, a former member of the staff of the Terminal R. R. Y. M. C. A., who has been secretary at Gassaway, W. Va., on the Baltimore and Ohio during the past year.

Our Ladies' Auxiliary

than that out of such a meeting there will arise much that will mean a great deal, not only to its participants but to every one coming into contact with them.

I have experienced this in my travels over the Baltimore and Ohio System and in every local that I have visited I have never felt that my visit was in vain. From the oldest to the youngest divisions on the System, wherever they are organized, that same spirit makes itself felt. And so it was on my visit to The Mary D. Garvey Auxiliary at McMechen, W. Va.

Accompanying our grand president, Mrs. F. M. Howard, from Newark, Ohio on April 30 for the purpose of assisting in the installation ceremonies on that date we were received at the meeting by as fine a bunch of ladies as it has been my pleasure to meet and there is certainly a fine spirit of cooperation and loyalty manifest at their meetings.

Such, however, has been my experience everywhere on the System. The wives of our veterans are such fine spirits that it is indeed a pleasure to meet them, and you meet them everywhere; Cincinnati; Staten Island, N. Y.; Newark, Ohio; Garrett, Ind. In all the states that this big Railroad of ours runs through our ladies are the same, always on the job to help the men and they do a good job of it.

We met in the K. of P. Hall with Mrs. Howard in the chair and with the assistance of our smiling and sociable Grand Vice President Mrs. J. M. Garvey and myself, the following officers were installed; Mrs. Ray Chamberlain, president; Mrs. E. Hick, vice president; Mrs. John Coxon, secretary; Mrs. Henry Schultz, treasurer; Mrs. J. W. Kettlewell, chaplain; Mrs. John Kerrigan, marshal; Mrs. Edward Emrick, outer guard. I was given the honorable position of marshal of the day.

The installation ceremonies were impressive and I have no doubt meant a great deal to those participating therein as well as those witnessing them. I recommend that each division that has not already installed their officers according to the plan outlined in the Constitution and By-laws avail itself of this privilege.

After the ceremonies many questions were brought up by those present which were ably handled and disposed of by our grand president to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Sisters Gandy, Bell and Emrick were the committee in charge of refreshments and they were indeed fine and splendidly served.

age, and then went to work in a furniture factory. He was first employed by the Baltimore and Ohio in October, 1900 as laborer, being promoted to painter in 1906. Since that date Mr. Wilhelm occupied positions as painter, laborer and locomotive cleaner until his recent retirement.

Charles S. Colgate

Charles S. Colgate was born in Baltimore on January 30, 1857. He entered the service at Bayview on July 20, 1887 as laborer. In 1888 he was promoted to machinist's helper, and in 1895 to hostler. In 1896 he was appointed engine inspector, and later turntable man. Because of ill health he was placed in tool room in 1913, and held this position at the time of his recent retirement.

John Heimal

John Heimal was born in 1855. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on July 21, 1891 as a laborer at Camden Station. In 1912 he was appointed porter and in 1914 transferred to Mount Royal as laborer, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

James B. Liggett

Engineer James B. Liggett entered the service as a laborer in May 1883. He was born at Hopedale, Ohio, on October 10, 1857; his father was killed in an accident in March, 1869. In his youth, Mr. Liggett worked on a farm in summer and went to school during the winter months. In the fall of 1882 he was employed by the Pennsylvania in Dennison Car Shops, leaving their service on March 1, 1883 to accept employment with the C. L. and W. in a bridge gang. In July, 1889 he was promoted to fireman and on May 9, 1891 to engineer. He remained in the service when that company was taken over by the Baltimore and Ohio, and was in continuous service until his recent retirement.

Mr. Liggett was local chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for 20 years, representing Lodge No. 551, and says: "No railroad could treat its employees fairer than does the Baltimore and Ohio."

Fifty-year Service Button to Thomas Forrest

MACHINIST THOMAS U. FORREST will shortly complete his fifty-fifth year of service with the Baltimore and Ohio. He first entered the employ on June 18, 1868, as an apprentice in the Iron Foundry, under William Cochran. Here he remained until 1876, when he was furloughed. In August, 1876, he was recalled to work in the Lumber Yard, where he remained until 1879. On January 1, 1880 he was transferred to the Iron Foundry.

He entered the Bridge Shop (now No. 3 Machine Shop, Mt. Clare) in October, 1882, where he has been continuously employed.

On February 24, 1923, Wilbur R. Galloway, Motive Power Department, presented to Mr. Forrest a veteran service button, for fifty years faithful service.

In talking over old times, Mr. Forrest recalls that when the first engine frame for the first rolling mill at Cumberland, was cast in the Iron Foundry at Mt. Clare, he threw a pail of water on Mr. Cochran, whose clothes had caught fire from the intense heat from the large quantity of metal required to pour the casting.

Mr. Forrest is a member of the Veterans' Association. He was formerly a staunch member of the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club.

Superintendent Hooper Tells Business Men and Railroaders about Rail Building Program

A NOTABLE address was that delivered by Superintendent S. U. Hooper at the Garrett City Hall on April 25.

Practically all local agents and division officers of the Chicago Division were in the audience as well as a large group of business men and other citizens.

Mr. Hooper, in a clear and convincing manner, explained to his audience some of the problems the railroads are facing at this time and he made an impression that will be far reaching in its influence. His address was of importance to every employe and citizen interested in the railroad situation. He told of the meeting held by President Willard in Baltimore on April 9, at which about 250 operating officers and agents were present. He also explained in detail the resolutions passed by the Association of Railway Executives in New York, a full copy of which appeared in the April MAGAZINE.

In concluding his address Mr. Hooper said: "When I mapped out the program for bringing our agents together at this meeting, I realized that I was going to talk very frankly to you as my own men. I realized that there would be nothing said which could not be laid before the shipper, business man or consignee in our little community. Consequently I took occasion, through the Chamber of Commerce, to invite our business men. They are our friends. We want their assistance and their cooperation in spreading the gospel as to what the Baltimore and Ohio is doing to meet conditions.

"I feel that as an operating officer, in charge of this territory, it devolves upon me to manifest as ably as I can the good citizenship and the good feeling for which our president stands."

On May 17, Superintendent Hooper spoke to the members of the Commercial Club, in their club rooms, at North Baltimore, Ohio, taking as his text "The Program of the Railroads to Provide Adequate Transportation in 1923."

Mr. Hooper explained the program of the railroads as he did at the Garrett meeting, and also said that the Chicago Division handled in March of this year the largest business in its history. He explained fully conditions on the Baltimore and Ohio and what would be done to meet the business requirements.

Many other phases of railroad questions were discussed and local shippers questioned Mr. Hooper about matters which concerned them locally.

THEY ATTENDED THE GARRETT MEETING

Determined Search Recovers Passenger's Stolen Money

Steamship Passenger Agent Horton Proves Himself a "Go-Getter"

ON November 26, 1921, Steamship Passenger Agent J. G. Horton met the S. S. "President Wilson" at Brooklyn, N. Y. Among the passengers were Vincent Pescosta and his sister, Angela (Swiss), en route to Milwaukee, to whom Mr. Horton sold an order for tickets via Baltimore and Ohio.

At the time, a public porter was standing nearby and asked if he could take the passengers to the station. He was told that he could not. However, while Mr. Horton was engaged with other passengers the porter took Pescosta and his sister away. Late that night, Mr. Horton found these two people wandering round the Hudson Terminal, New York, and asked what had happened to them.

Mr. Pescosta said that he had been taken off the pier by a porter, placed in a taxicab and charged all the money he possessed, $147, for the privilege of entering the United States. He questioned the man as to his authority, and was shown a shield which convinced him his escort was an immigration officer. The taxi took them to an office in New York where he was told that the charge for admittance to the United States was $57 per person and twenty dollars was refunded to him.

After hearing the story, Mr. Horton decided it was a case for the police, and placed it in their hands. However, no results being obtained, after a few days Mr. Pescosta and his sister left for Milwaukee.

Mr. Horton did not forget the case, and in March, 1923, he came across the trail of the porter, and after several interviews, secured the money of which the Baltimore and Ohio passengers had been robbed,

Isaac R. Lane, retired, and his grandson, who is a "Junior" taking it to Milwaukee personally, and delivering it to Mr. Pescosta, who expressed high appreciation of the interest taken by the Baltimore and Ohio representative in securing the return of money he had long since concluded was lost.

J. G. Horton was born in Greenwich Village, New York, on October 10, 1887 and received his education in the public schools, graduating at the age of thirteen, when he entered the service of the White Star line as clerk, remaining in this position until 1913. He then entered the service of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad as steamship passenger agent, and remained with them until the world war. In 1917 he volunteered for service in the Transportation Corps Engineers and was sent to France, being made sergeant in charge of 500 stevedores loading and unloading ammunition, etc., at St. Nazaire.

The work of which Mr. Horton had charge progressed with regularity and precision, and he was recommended for a commission as 1st Lieutenant, Engineers Corps, 1st Grand Division. He passed the necessary examinations and was about to proceed to General Pershing's headquarters when the Armistice was signed. Mr. Horton, after the Armistice, was retained in France looking after salvage work until April 21, 1919, when he was returned to the United States and discharged.

On his return to the United States, Mr. Horton secured a position with the Wilson Line, Hoboken, N. J. as chief delivery clerk, remaining with them two years, when he entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio as steamship passenger agent, his duties including meeting passenger steamers from all parts of the world in connection with the solicitation of passenger traffic, handling baggage, safeguarding foreign passengers, etc.

Mr. Horton has been warmly commended for his action in the case of the robbery of Mr. Pescosta and his sister, and for the interest he took in seeing that the money recovered was promptly delivered to its owner. Doubtless many friends have been made for the Baltimore and Ohio by his untiring search for the thief.

Son of Isaac R. Lane Now a General

LIVING in retirement in Barnesville, Ohio, is Isaac R. Lane, 71 years of age. Mr. Lane first entered the service as a clerk at Barnesville, and for a number of years thereafter was agent at the same station. In 1910 he retired on a pension. Mr. Lane was well known and very popular with employes and patrons alike. Our photo shows Mr. Lane with his grandson, Isaac R. Lane, Jr., age 2.

During his term of service at Barnesville, Mr. Lane was assisted around the station for some time by his son Rufus H. Lane. In 1887 Rufus was appointed a midshipman at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., since which time he has served the Government continuously, being attached to the U. S. Marine Corps. He has visited practically all parts of the world, and was present at the opening of the Kiel Canal, meeting the former Kaiser Wilhelm at that place. He was in the Philippines, and later on the staff of the Military Governor of San Domingo. He has recently been named Adjutant and Inspector of the Marine Corps with the rank of Brigadier General. A photo of General Lane is also shown on this page.

Our Accounting Association Enjoys Holiday Visit to New York Properties

MEMORIAL DAY, 1923 has passed into the Great Beyond, but it will be remembered as a "red letter" day in the history of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Accounting Association.

Some time ago, F. F. Lollman, president of the association, conceived the idea that a trip to New York would be of great educational benefit to the members of the association, and finally on May 30, with the assistance of Vice Presidents Shriver and Galloway, Comptroller Ekin, Assistant to Vice President Sauerhammer, Manager Dining Car Department Baugh and other officers, this outing was under way.

At 7.30 a. m. a special train of four coaches and two dining cars left Camden station, carrying about 200 members of the Accounting Association. Among the officials on the train were J. F. Schutte, auditor freight claims; L. M. Grice, assistant auditor passenger receipts.

Comptroller Ekin accompanied his staff to Philadelphia, where he left the train to return to fill Baltimore engagements, accompanied by the hearty cheers of the association members and the strains of "Maryland, My Maryland." A telegram was received on line by President Lollman, from Vice President Shriver, regretting that previous engagements made it impossible for him to leave Baltimore, and wishing the members an enjoyable outing.

The trip by train was made via Philadelphia, Bound Brook and Jersey City. About 11.00 a. m. a buffet lunch was served under the direction of Inspector Sherman, Dining Car Department. During the trip, Mr. Lollman and his committee, J. W. Myers and J. M. Finn, were continually alert looking after the comfort of their members and guests. The trip was perfect in every way.

Arriving at Jersey City, the party marched to the dock, while Dr. George R. Shattuck took moving picture views of the parade, the steamer, etc. We were greeted here by Superintendent E. J. Hamner, Staten Island Lines, who accompanied the party on the river trip, pointing out places of interest and describing in detail the Baltimore and Ohio operations. The interest taken by Superintendent Hamner, Marine Superintendent English and Superintendent Floating Equipment Clark was highly appreciated and was largely responsible for the enjoyable hours spent on the water.

Leaving Jersey City, the steamer headed for Staten Island, passing Governor's Island, and on our right the Statue of Liberty, hand upraised in welcome, stood out in the bright sunlight.

After seeing the Baltimore and Ohio piers, Municipal Ferry piers, Tottenville and other interesting points, at close range our steamer turned, retraced its course to the Battery and headed up the East River, passing under the famous Brooklyn, Williamsburg and Manhattan Bridges, and near the Baltimore and Ohio and other piers. On our right we saw the Brooklyn Navy Yard; fortunately two of Uncle Sam's fighting monsters were anchored there, affording us an excellent view of them in their new paint.

At Blackwell's Island we turned and retraced our way to the Battery, then up the North River, securing an excellent view at close range of the water front activities, Grant's Tomb, the New Jersey Palisades, the Speedway and many other points of interest. Returning from opposite 130th Street, we reached Jersey City on Baltimore and Ohio standard, "On Time," at exactly 5.30 p. m. Ten minutes later everyone was aboard the special train and it had started for Baltimore, where we arrived at 10.00 p. m.

On the return trip a special dinner, prepared in Mr. Baugh's excellent style, was served to members of the party, and—after the hours spent on the water—was much appreciated.

The trip throughout was instructive and educational and gave many of our members an opportunity to realize more fully the magnitude of the Port of New York's facilities, and the part the Baltimore and Ohio has in them.

The officers of the Accounting Association are F. F. Lollman, president, J. A. Zimmerman, vice president, W. H. Orem, treasurer and J. M. Finn, secretary, and they are to be congratulated on the progressive ideas which prompted the trip, and the excellent arrangements made to take care of their members and guests.

Engineer Bennington and Fireman James, Monongah Division, Are Coal Savers

By Anna Mary Unks

ON March 12, Engine 2272 in charge of Engineer T. D. Bennington and Fireman H. A. James was dispatched from Parkersburg in ballast train service to work in the vicinity of Eaton, and worked the entire week on a single tank of coal. This was done by having trackmen load old, discarded ties on tank and by burning them for fuel. Had they not been burned in the firebox they would have been destroyed or burned to get them out of the way. They also did this the following week, March 19 to the 25, inclusive.

Engineer Bennington entered the service of this Company on December 18, 1886 as brakeman, was transferred to fireman on December 18, 1887, promoted to freight engineer May 1, 1893 and to regular passenger engineer on May 1, 1903.

"Uncle Tom," as he is known to everyone on the Monongah Division, is just as good natured as his picture (see Grafton notes) shows him to be and his record as a passenger engineer, especially on Nos. 12 and 1 is enviable. Everybody on the branch knows and likes "Uncle Tom."

Fireman James entered the service on November 18, 1915 as a brakeman on the Ohio River Division, was transferred to Parkersburg Yard as brakeman and promoted to conductor on June 16, 1920, transferred to the Monongah Division on October 1, 1920, which position he has held ever since. James, while not having as much experience as some fireman on the Branch, is considered one of the best firemen we have, especially when it is remembered that he was furloughed for about 20 months in 1921 and 1922.

President Willard Addresses Parkers- burg Chamber of Commerce

By Charlotte Marlowe

PARKERSBURG was particularly fortunate in having our president, Daniel Willard, visit the city on May 3, when he came at the request of the Parkersburg Board of Commerce, as speaker at their monthly forum dinner.

Mr. Willard's special arrived at the Sixth Street passenger station at four p. m. He was accompanied by C. W. Galloway, vice-president; Earl Stimson, chief engineer Maintenance; E. G. Lane, engineer, Maintenance of Way; Golder Shumate, general freight traffic manager; J. M. Scott, general superintendent; and H. H. Marsh, general freight agent.

Mr. Willard's special was met at the station by Superintendent Gorsuch and his staff, and a delegation of prominent Parkersburg citizens. The party was taken for an automobile ride around the city, viewing our recently established industries, South Side, the Country Club, new High School and other points of interest. Mr. Willard expressed himself as well pleased with the industrial development here, and also with the beauty of Parkersburg as a residential town. After the auto ride the party repaired to Trinity Chapel where the forum dinner was served to a large audience of Parkersburg business men and their wives. The place was crowded, and the audience would have been at least double had there been room to seat them. As "Bill" Kennedy, chairman of the Board of Commerce, remarked, every man, woman and child in Parkersburg wanted to hear Daniel Willard talk. The subject of Mr. Willard's talk was a general discussion of the transportation conditions and the problems and difficulties of the carriers.

The meeting was to have been closed promptly at 7.50 but at that time Mr. Willard was asked to continue his talk, which he did for an hour and a half, and he was given the closest attention.

After his speech, Major Peterkin, on behalf of the City of Parkersburg, thanked Mr. Willard for the valuable information which he had given on the railroad situation. We have since heard a great many of our citizens remark on how much they enjoyed Mr. Willard's talk, and that it has resulted in a clearer understanding of the difficulties under which the railroads are laboring, and so far as the public of Parkersburg is concerned, there is a warmer feeling not only for the Baltimore and Ohio, but the railroads in general, and a clearer understanding of the railroad industry and what is necessary, not only on the part of the railroads, but the public, in order properly to handle the immense and growing traffic of this country.

Mr. Willard made a "ten-strike hit" with the Parkersburg people, when, during the course of his remarks, he intimated that if Congress could be prevailed upon to let the Transportation Act alone, and permit the railroads to adjust themselves to the present laws, he felt, so far as the Baltimore and Ohio was concerned, that he could promise to bring about many of the improvements which our patrons desired, and which the Management feels are badly needed, including a new passenger station for Parkersburg. As the word "Parkersburg" dropped from Mr. Willard's lips the audience burst forth into long and continued applause, and for a short time Mr. Willard could have had anything within reason that he wanted at Parkersburg.

The special remained at Parkersburg over night. The next morning Mr. Willard made an inspection of the passenger stations and freight house, and left for Huntington at nine a. m., taking with him the best wishes and highest regard of the citizens of our city.

A Fine Compliment for Conductor G. W. Taylor

THE accompanying photo is of Conductor G. W. Taylor, Train 41, Philadelphia and Singery. Mr. Taylor is one of our "old timers" and a firm believer in our slogan that "Courtesy Pays." That it does is proven by the following letter, recently received in our office from Business Administrator A. G. Wilkinson, University of Delaware, Newark, Del.:

"I have been much interested in having the opportunity to read your MAGAZINE, which has been handed to me through the courtesy of your Agent Miller, Wilmington.

"Your slogan 'Stop That Leak' is very commendable and conveys to the outside man the idea that your Company realizes that the success of the road depends largely upon its employees.

"I would like to take this opportunity to say a word in commendation of Conductor 'Captain' Taylor on your Train No. 41 running from Philadelphia to Singery. This train might well be termed the 'University Special,' because it carries a number of officials and students daily from Wilmington to Newark, bound for the University of Delaware.

"Much is said of the discomforts of commuting, but I assure you Captain Taylor does all in his power to make it a pleasure. As the train draws into the station, everyone is greeted with his genial smile and morning greeting, and after traveling a little on this train one feels that he has become a member of the family.

"It is very interesting to watch Captain Taylor as he passes from one to another, showing his personal interest in everyone, and also to note his anxiety and endeavor to get there 'ON TIME.'

"It gives me pleasure, therefore, to say this word in commendation of a man 'who is on the job,' whose slogan is 'The Public be Pleased' and which must surely result in 'Stopping a Leak.'"

Relief Department Watches Employees' Interests

IN a recent letter to the superintendent, Relief Department, Fireman Wesley R. Thompson, Parkersburg, W. Va. says:—

"I wish to thank you for calling my attention to the fact that in case my dwelling was destroyed I would suffer a heavy loss. It is encouraging to know that you have the interest of your members at heart as well as the interest of your Department, and I appreciate very much your interest in my welfare."

Labor Banks

ONE of the constructive movements undertaken by labor is the establishment of a number of what are called "labor banks"—banks in which the capital is furnished nearly altogether by labor associations. The movement started in 1920, when the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Co-operative National Bank was established in Cleveland. This was organized by the Locomotive Brotherhood, as indicated in the name, has $1,000,000 capital stock, and, according to the Department of Labor, which has compiled statistics of these banks, has a reserve of $15,547,402. This bank is reported to have been quite successful. It paid one per cent. extra interest on deposits last year.

The International Association of Machinists, in the same year, 1920, established the Mount Vernon Savings Bank, Washington, D. C., with a capital of $160,000. This bank has a reserve of $2,689,182. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has been the most active in this movement to organize labor banks. In 1921 they established the People's Co-operative State Bank, with $50,000 capital and $250,000 reserve. The Brotherhood has bought an interest, said to be a controlling one, in the Empire Trust Co. of this city, which has a capital and surplus of $4,584,000, and deposits of $47,049,000.

In 1922 seven labor banks were organized in the following places: Chicago, Philadelphia, San Bernardino, Cal., Tucson, Ariz., Birmingham, Ala., Three Forks, Mont., and Spokane, Wash. Twelve labor banks have been projected this year and some of them are already in operation. The aggregate of capital, so far as stated, amounts to over $4,000,000. The Index, published monthly by the New York Trust Company, says of this movement:

"The professed motive back of the formation of these banks is 'to give labor control of its own funds.' Among bankers, the disposition is to approve these experiments on the ground that the greater responsibilities labor assumes and the more experience it gains, the greater will be its understanding of business and banking problems. As to the success of labor banks, this obviously will be determined by the kind of management applied to them; they will succeed or fail for the same reasons that produce success or failure among all financial institutions."

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is the most constructive and advanced of all the labor unions, and it is encouraging to see their thrifty example being followed so widely. When labor or labor leaders understand the economics of business, they will become a part of the business machine in favor of sound, sane laws and procedures, and against the high-handed and destructive formulas of the various blocs and reactionary elements in politics.

Successful Radio Experiments on Moving Trains, on St. Louis Division

By T. J. Murphy,

Chief Clerk, Office of Superintendent Transportation, Cincinnati

TO W. A. RADSPINNER, special engineer, General Manager's Office, Cincinnati, our readers are indebted for the following story of the successful radio experiment on a moving train. A photograph taken on this trip of Mr. Radspinner and City Passenger Agent Dickison is also shown.

The application of radio as a means of communication between a moving train and a fixed station or dispatching point, has been proved to be possible a number of times. The first public experimental trip on our St. Louis Division, between Louisville and Cincinnati, was made on April 25, on trains Nos. 57 and 58.

Crosley Model X receiver, taken from stock and without any extra equipment, was used. It consists of one-stage of tuned radio frequency amplification, detector and two stages of audio frequency amplification. A Western Electric 7A amplifier and horn supplied the necessary volume to the incoming broadcast music. The antenna, as shown on sketch, was strung along the roof of the regulation day-coach which is part of the equipment of Baltimore and Ohio trains. The set and loud speaker were placed on a seat in the forward end of the car. Passengers were permitted to witness the special test.

Representatives of newspaper services, photographers and mechanical, electrical and radio engineers, as well as officials of the Crosley Company and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, were present for the interesting experiment.

Special musical programs were furnished from radio stations WLW, Cincinnati, and WHAZ, Louisville, from 8.00 a. m. until the train arrived at Louisville.

The reception of broadcast concerts, market reports and items of current interest, is particularly interesting to the traveling public who are obliged to be away from their offices and homes on lengthy trips. The tremendous potentialities presented by this channel of communication are difficult to appreciate fully.

Sketch showing Antenna on car No. 5202 used in test on Baltimore and Ohio Trains 57 and 58 between Cincinnati and Louisville, April 25, 1923

Many difficulties had to be met in the reception and amplifying of broadcast concerts. First, there was the motor generator which supplies electric power for the electric lights and gives forth a sound similar to a "hum" and then, the test was made in an all-steel car, which, on account of relative impenetrability, has a tendency to shield out the radio waves.

Golf and Golf Clubs

THE golf season is on. Business men are putting on their short pants once again. Wives are kissing their husbands good-bye for the summer, the country club lockers once more resound with arguments over fair prices for Scotch, and from hill and dale come the sounds of peerless prevaricators lying about their scores.

Golf is the only game in the world at which a man can get worse the longer he plays.

It is played with a ball, some woolen stockings, a half dozen sticks, a set of excuses, an irrepressible thirst, and an utter disregard for truth and veracity.

In the words of George Jean Nathan, golf is "a little onion pursued by a big one." A number of little pills chased by a lot of big pills. One egg after another.

A golf ball is several ounces of gutta-percha rolled into the only form in which it will bring from seventy-five cents to a dollar and a half from a man in his right senses.

This idea is to smack the ball full amidships with a club and see how far it will go without further assistance. One of these balls can be sent from Los Angeles to New York by parcel post for less than a dime, but it costs the average golfer from 25 to 30 dollars to send one around an eighteen-hole golf course.

These balls do not care much for the game and have an incurable tendency to hide. They love the brush, but hate the great wide open spaces. Every time one of 'em hides successfully it sets the owner back a dollar.

A golf ball that could sell for ten cents was put on the market last year, but it proved very unpopular, due to the fact it made it possible for a man to play golf and still buy food and lodging for his wife and children.

Golf to be good must be prohibitive. The minute you make it cheap you throw it open to a class of people who may come in and play really well in long pants, a flannel shirt and derby hat.

The hardest thing about golf is the dues. The dues at the average club run higher than most of the scores, which is higher than you have any idea.

The next hardest thing about golf is the membership committee. Nobody is taken into a golf club who can easily be kept out. When you put in an application for election to a golf club the membership committee gets the idea you are running for president. It delves into your life and family history way back to the time your wife's aunt's great grandmother's sister Sarah ran away with the beer wagon driver.

This elopement will keep you out. If Sarah had run off with a Scotch whiskey drummer it would have been all right.

It takes about seven years to get by the golf club membership committee although six is considered par.

Warts will keep you out of the ultra smart country clubs. So will salt rheum, rickets, mastoids, boils, chilblains or a cast in either eye. Buck teeth, prominent ears, bunions and loss of thirst will also render you non plus pluribus unum and pate de foie gras.

You can't pass the membership committee of a golf club if you stutter. Once you get in, however, they expect you to stutter.

Engineer L. B. Hart, Chicago Division, Enjoys His Home Bought through the Relief Department

The photo was taken on May 9, and is a novel one, in that it shows Engineer Hart's garden with fruit trees in blossom and snow on the ground. We are glad to know that the fruit did not suffer serious damage in the snow storm.

Engineer Hart has been in the service many years, and in a recent letter says; "I think every employe of the Baltimore and Ohio should have a good home, especially as it is so easy to buy one with the assistance of the Loan Feature, Relief Department. The enclosed photo shows how I can smile when I think of how I built and paid for this home through the Loan Feature."

How You Can Make From $50 to $200 a Week

The amazing story of E. A. Sweet, who suddenly found that he was worth $1,000 a month

This is the story of E. A. Sweet, of Michigan—as he told it to us—the story of a man whose income suddenly jumped to more than a thousand dollars a month. It is worth reading, for it tells exactly how anyone can do the same as Mr. Sweet did and equal his success.

FOR a good many years I worked for a salary. I was an electrical engineer, making from $150 to $300 a month. Like almost every other man who works for a salary, I was dissatisfied, for I felt every day that if I were only working for myself instead of someone else I would make more money. It wasn't only that, either. I just didn't like the idea of having someone to boss me—someone else to tell me how much I was worth—to hire me or fire me just as he pleased.

"How did anybody know what I was worth? How did I know? I didn't and that is what worried me. I wanted to know. Maybe I was worth five, ten or even twenty times as much as I had been getting. In other words, after a good many years of hard work with a certain measure of success I came to the conclusion that I was getting nowhere and that it was high time for me to do something on my own hook if I ever wanted to be more than just somebody's employee.

"That was only a few months ago. To-day I am making more money than I ever dreamed of making. I am my own boss, and last month my net profit was more than $1,200.

"This is how it happened. One day I read an advertisement in a magazine. The advertisement said that any man could make from $100 to $300 a month during his spare time, or that he could make $200 a week if he only had the necessary ambition.

"It was only natural that I should hesitate a bit before answering this advertisement. It seemed almost too good to be true. Frankly, I doubted whether it was possible. But I thought to myself that certainly there could be no harm in writing, so I clipped out the coupon and mailed it.

"I realize to-day that mailing that coupon was the most important thing I ever did. All that I have to-day—all the success that I have earned—is due to that one little act of mine.

"My work has been pleasant and easy. I am the representative in this territory for a manufacturer of raincoats. This manufacturer sent me a little eight-page booklet that tells any man or woman just what it told me. It offers to any one the same opportunity that was offered to me. It will give to any one the same success that it has brought to me.

"This raincoat manufacturer is the Comer Manufacturing Company, of Dayton, Ohio, one of the largest manufacturers of high-grade raincoats in America. These coats are nationally advertised, but they are not sold through stores. All that I do is to take orders. I do not have to buy a stock of coats. And the beauty of the proposition is that I get my profit the same day that the order is taken.

"The little eight-page booklet which the Company will send to you will tell you exactly how you can do as I have done. It will tell you how to get started right in your own territory, and will tell you where to go, what to say, and give you all the information you will ever need.

"In my first month as a Comer representative I made $243. That was a start, but it was only a start. My second month netted me $600, and last month I hit the bull's-eye with a net profit of more than $1,200 for my thirty days' work.

"One year ago my life was limited to a $200 a month income. I worked eight hours a day. To-day my income is from $600 to $1,200 a month and I work four hours a day. A year ago I was not sure of my position. To-day I am the sole owner of my own business. I still consider myself a greenhorn and I expect my profits to grow just as much in the future as they have grown so far."

If you are interested in increasing your income and can devote all your time or only an hour or so a day to this same proposition in your territory, write at once to The Comer Manufacturing Company, Dayton, O. This is their special offer. They will send you, without any preliminary correspondence or red tape, a complete selling outfit with full instructions, samples, style book, order book and everything you need to get started. Sign and mail the coupon now, and in less than a week you can be making more money than you ever believed possible.

A black and white photograph of the Ohio Statehouse dome, which is the central focus of the upper half of the image. The dome is large and ornate, with a series of windows around its base. Above the dome is a smaller, tiered structure topped with a statue. In the foreground, a steam locomotive is pulling a train across a stone bridge. The bridge has multiple arches and is made of rough-hewn stone. The locomotive is emitting a large plume of white steam that partially obscures the lower part of the dome and the bridge. The background is a dark, solid color, making the white steam and the light-colored dome stand out.

How do you, as a scientific man, get by some of the stuff you have to preach, as for instance, putting the camel through the needle's eye?"

"Well," replied Mr. Rader, "it would occur to me that if Tom Edison can make a whole brass band dance on the point of a needle, the Lord ought to be able to get a camel through the eye, but if you ask me, as a scientific man, what I would do, I would dissolve the camel in nitric acid and squirt him through!"—*C. & O. ## The Service Supplied the Railroad by the Banker

By DANIEL WILLARD, President

WHEN I received the invitation from your President to address your Association at its Annual Meeting in Woodstock this year, I felt an immediate desire to accept, partly so, I think, because it meant a trip back to Woodstock, which is not only one of the most beautiful villages in Vermont, but is also a place where I spent many happy days in my boyhood. In addition to the reason just mentioned, I also realized that the invitation afforded me an opportunity to meet many old friends and acquaintances, and I was glad to come.

Your President intimated in his invitation that you would like to have me discuss the railroad situation, and naturally that subject also appeals to me.

The Baltimore and Ohio Company, of which I am President, like all other railroads, is a large borrower of money, and when in need of additional funds we turn at once to our bankers, and I am glad to testify in definite and unrestrained terms to the valuable service which the banker performs.

It might be well at the beginning of my remarks to consider some of the points of contact—some features of the relationship which exists between the railroads, as a whole, and the banking and other large financial institutions. According to the most recent report of the Interstate Commerce Commission the aggregate railway capital, as shown by the books of the companies as of December 31, 1921, was roundly $20,938,000,000. Of this large amount $17,635,000,000 was in the hands of the general public. Of the securities held by the public, roundly

The service performed by Bankers for the Railroads is not generally understood, and not infrequently there have appeared in various publications misleading statements and loose talk concerning the so-called "domination of the Railroads by Wall Street." It is, therefore, a privilege to be able to present to the readers of our MAGAZINE a portion of an address delivered by President Willard before the Northern Bankers' Association at Woodstock, Vermont, May 18, 1923, in which he describes the real service which the banker supplies to the Railroad.

The portion of the address which we are not reprinting dealt largely with certain features of the Transportation Act of 1920, which have already been covered in the MAGAZINE from time to time.

$10,800,000,000 consisted of bonds or obligations supported by some sort of lien on the property, and $6,800,000,000 or 38 per cent. of the total, consisted of capital stock. I am told that about 16 per cent. of the funded indebtedness of the railroads, or roundly $1,715,000,000, is held by banks and trust companies, nearly $900,000,000 or more than one-half of such securities being held by savings banks. It also appears that about $1,770,000,000, par value, or over 16 per cent. of railway bonds and similar securities are held by life insurance companies. When we recall that there are about 70,000,000 life insurance policies outstanding in the United States and 20,000,000 depositors in savings banks, it is clear that a large number of people have a very definite, although indirect, interest in the security and integrity of railroad investments such as I am discussing. While the savings banks and life insurance companies together hold about one-third of the total outstanding railroad bonds, the remaining two-thirds are held by a large number of individuals and institutions whose interest in the stability of such securities is direct as well as personal. It is, therefore, of vital interest to a very large number of individuals that the railroads should be able to maintain regular interest payments, and there should be no feeling of doubt concerning the ability of the carriers ultimately to meet the principal of their obligations at maturity.

Later in my discussion I shall refer in some detail to the Transportation Act, which contains a rule for rate making designed for the purpose of sustaining railroad credit, but before taking up that phase of the problem I wish to say a few words more concerning the intimate relationship between the railroads and the banks.

The Baltimore and Ohio Company, during the last thirteen years, has raised about $240,000,000 of new capital by the sale of its corporate securities. I am confident that it would have been difficult, if not impossible, for the Company to have obtained that large amount of money, as and when needed, except through our regular banking agents in the city of New York. We would have been glad to sell our securities direct to the people living along our line of road, who might be supposed to be interested in the property and who perhaps might also be expected to have confidence in its management, but first of all the railroad company had no organization for carrying on a transaction of that kind, and the investment field that I have just referred to would have been altogether too limited. Our bankers, however, with their large list of correspondents and with their well established reputation as safe financial advisors, were always able to tell us the kind of a security which in their opinion would be most acceptable to the buyer at a particular time, as well as the basis upon which it could probably be sold, and we felt that their well considered judgment concerning such matters was much better than our own. For such services as the banker rendered of the kind I have mentioned, among others, he was justly entitled to a fair compensation, and I have the very definite feeling that the commissions and payments which were made for such services were well earned and more than justified. Undoubtedly other banking institutions of similar reputation and credit might have done equally as well. I doubt, however, if anyone could or would have done better. My point is that without the aid of some such agency it would have cost the Baltimore and Ohio Company a great deal more than it did cost to obtain the new capital required for additional facilities, assuming, which I doubt very much, that we would have been able to obtain it at all, or at the time when needed.

Now, the kind of service which I have just been referring to is to be found in its fullest development at the present time in only one place in our country, and I refer, of course, to that particular district known as "Wall Street." As a matter of fact the offices of the Baltimore and Ohio Company's bankers are not located on Wall Street at all, and only a few of the great banking institutions are actually on that famous thoroughfare. I suppose when people refer to "Wall Street" they usually have in mind that general region in New York where the great banks and trust companies are principally located.

We hear and read much at times concerning the domination of industry, and particularly of the railroads, by Wall Street. I am happy to be able to say that never once since I have been President of the Baltimore and Ohio Company have our bankers tried to influence or direct the policy of the Baltimore and Ohio management. Many times, however, have I found it most comforting to be able to seek and obtain their advice concerning immediate conditions and future outlook, and I have always found them considerate, and their advice conservative and helpful. If there is any such thing as a malign Wall Street influence or control, I can say with the utmost candor that I have had no personal experience with it during my thirteen years as chief executive of the Baltimore and Ohio Company.

earnings of that period. The Board, however, after giving careful consideration to all of the facts and conditions, decided unanimously that the real interests of the common shareholders would be best served at the present time by using the available surplus resulting from the first six months' operations to anticipate the final payment of $1,750,000 and to thus complete the full appropriation required under the $35,000,000 loan, and to provide also out of the half year's income for the cash payment of approximately $5,000,000 required in connection with new equipment ordered. It will be remembered that the loan of July 1, 1919, above referred to, provided for the appropriation of $3,500,000 annually out of income for capital expenditures before the declaration of dividends until the sum of $17,500,000 had been so appropriated.

This course will enable the Company to complete the appropriation of $17,500,000 for capital expenditures as required under the terms of the $35,000,000 loan and also to complete the financing of more than $22,000,000 of new equipment. The Company will therefore enter the last half of the year with no charges against the net income ahead of the common stock except the fixed charges for that particular period.

The regular semi-annual dividend of two per cent. upon the Preferred Stock for the first six months ended June 30th, 1923, was declared payable September 1, 1923 to stockholders of record at close of business July 14, 1923.

Encouraging Statement Issued by Board of Directors at June Meeting

AFTER the regular monthly meeting of the Baltimore and Ohio Board of Directors, held June 27 at No. 2 Wall Street, New York, the statement appearing below was given out:

The result of the first six months' operation, as shown above, when taken in connection with the present outlook, would no doubt have justified the resumption of dividend to the common stockholders out of the

"Almost as Good as the Baltimore and Ohio"

MISS VERONICA SULLIVAN, daughter of D. E. Sullivan, division freight agent, Garrett, Indiana, recently sent a post card to her father. She was in the far west and traveling on a railroad whose passenger service is first class. And this is what she said on her post card: "On our way rejoicing. This road is almost as good as the Baltimore and Ohio."

Add another good phrase to the stock of them which is being accumulated through the merited superlative praise which people are daily giving the passenger service on the Baltimore and Ohio!

"Almost as good as the Baltimore and Ohio."

Yes, that is a good rejoinder to remember when other folks tell you about the good service of another railroad.

A Lifetime Railroader is C. W. Van Horn, General Superintendent, Maryland District

By MARGARET TALBOTT STEVENS

IT was a warm July morning when I boarded train No. 56 from "Down the Valley" and made my way back to the business car. There, in his shirt sleeves, with a pile of papers before him sat our newly appointed general superintendent of the Maryland District, C. W. Van Horn, "up to his neck in work," as railroaders express it.

An interruption like this and on such a day to most business men would have meant a cold reception to the interviewer. But not so with Mr. Van Horn. His cordial though not too profuse greeting is of the kind that makes one feel as if he were about to enjoy a pleasant chat on his back porch. And this is typical of the man himself. A little bulky of stature, but possessed of a pleasant face and honest eyes, he reminds us of Daddy, seated at the head of the table and about to say, "Children, pass your plates for another helping of chicken."

His voice is even and pleasant, and although reluctant to speak of himself, he is ever ready to talk about the Railroad, railroading, and railroaders, for these three words spell the name of his hobby, the Baltimore and Ohio.

Mr. Van Horn was born at Clarksburg, W. Va., on January 17, 1879. He was reared at Lost Creek and went to the public schools. He was graduated from Salem College.

Like all other boys living near a railroad, Mr. Van Horn's ambition was to become a railroader. Immediately following his college career, Mr. Van Horn's first job was that of a railway postal clerk. For four years he worked on the mail train between Baltimore and Grafton. But he held on to his old ambition to become a real railroader. Uncle Sam was a good boss, but life on a mail car was not real railroading; it did not satisfy Mr. Van Horn's longing. He saw therein something of railroad operation and felt that he must get into the game. There was a Monongah Division superintendent who encouraged him to enter, too, so on June 10, 1901, Mr. Van Horn became a clerk in the Freight Office at Fairmont, W. Va. He soon worked himself into the position of agent, and on August 4 of the following year he was transferred as agent to Byron, W. Va.

During the following year Mr. Van Horn was sent to Clarksburg as agent, and in 1910 he was made general yardmaster there. In April, 1911, he was made chief clerk to the general superintendent at Baltimore, and five months later he was sent to the Monongah Division as trainmaster, in charge of Parkersburg Branch, M. & R., and Short Line Sub Division.

In September, 1913, Mr. Van Horn was transferred to the Chicago Division as trainmaster; three years later he came to Pittsburgh as assistant superintendent, and January 10, 1917, marks the date of his appointment to the position of superintendent, New Castle Division.

In September, 1918 he was transferred to Grafton as superintendent of the Monongah Division, and on September 1, 1920, to Cumberland as superintendent of the Cumberland Division. This position he held until he was promoted to that of general superintendent, Maryland District.

Another Baltimore and Ohio man grown up in the service!

Mr. Van Horn's career, like a game of checkers, has been one jump after another, always moving forward with ambition leading him onward until he has landed in the "king row." And the manner in which he works, too, is not unlike that of the man who wins. Quiet, modest as to his own accomplishments, and thoroughgoing—these are the qualities which have brought C. W. Van Horn from an humble clerkship to the responsible position which he now fills.

"How do you like Baltimore?" we asked him.

"Very well," he replied, "although of course, I had grown very fond of Cumberland. The Cumberland Division, because of its heavy tonnage, is a place of unusual opportunities."

"My spare time? Ha, ha! Well, I don't have very much of it, but

(and here he gave us a bit of a surprise)

"——I spend my vacation where I can take my family with me. . . . usually at the 'world's series,' for, you see, I am quite fond of baseball, basketball, football and all kinds of athletics."

Mr. Van Horn has three children, two boys and a girl, all of whom attend school away from home.

"But we want to send at least one of them to a school nearer home this year," he said, "for it is lonesome at home for their mother, particularly since it is necessary for me to be away so often."

"And Mrs. Van Horn——" we began.

"Is the one who bears the big responsibilities of the family," he concluded reverently. And then he gazed out of the car window over toward the lovely hills of Virginia as though in search of some beautiful adjective with which to describe the woman who must have been no little inspiration to the upward climb in the life of him who is a "born railroader."

Engineer Meek's Timely Warning

IN the Letters to the Editor column of the Grafton, W. Va., Sentinel, Engineer Meek put it up to a careless motor car driver in the following pointed way:

Grafton, 3-25-23.

Editor Sentinel:

Please state in your columns for the benefit of the "motorist" who crossed Hanley's crossing thirty feet in advance of No. 30 running at maximum speed after the whistle had been sounded with all intensity for the crossing, that if the motorist will call up Assistant Superintendent McClung's office he will be presented with some Baltimore & Ohio safety literature which may be the means of saving his family a lot of grief, and also save Bartlett & Bolen the trouble of fitting up his final wooden B. V. D's. However, in case he shouldn't heed these instructions, better have him make his final financial arrangements because he is due to leave.

H. J. MEEK,
Engineer No. 30.

CONDUCTOR O. A. Best observed a car of salt cake, consigned to Marietta billed in error at tare weight of 40,000 pounds, whereas the marked light weight of the car was 35,400 pounds. Notation was made on way bill with result that agent made correction on billing which increased our revenue on the car $6.67. Thank you, Conductor Best!

Vice-President Galloway Makes Personal Appeal for "More Car Miles" and Offers Appropriate Recognition to Successful Divisions

TO ALL OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES:

Last March we decided to set 40 miles as the average of car miles per day, excluding bad order cars, to be reached on the Baltimore and Ohio. The best previous weekly System average up to that time was 34 miles per car per day, made for the week of March 31, 1912. Since February we have not only equalled the 1912 record, but have surpassed it, making 34.7 miles per car per day for the week ending April 21, a splendid accomplishment. May was a good month, 33.3 miles being averaged for the System. Since then, however, we have been slipping back. Operating conditions such as the Shrine movement, large quantities of coal and ore held for delivery at the lake ports, and the temporary surplus of rough box cars, are in part responsible for the poorer showing. More responsible, I think, is the fact that we have not fully accomplished coordination of effort as we should and can. Of course, having set the 40 miles as our objective we are not going to stop until we reach it and there could be no better time to do it than right now.

Operating conditions are extremely favorable for such a record performance. Our motive power is in excellent condition, bad order locomotives being 13.7 per cent. and bad order cars 3 per cent. Track conditions are good. Our passenger trains are running practically on time. We are handling a business heavy enough to employ our equipment efficiently and without danger of congestion, and business promises to continue good. Best of all we have gratifying evidences of a desire on the part of employes to help the Management cut out waste, better performances and generally promote efficiency.

There is also a most encouraging sign in that past records prove that with proper coordination we can reach the 40 miles per car per day. The figures on the next page show this—show that although we have not yet been able to average 40 miles per car per day for one week on the entire System, we could have done this—and better—had all the divisions reached their best weekly individual record during the same week. The System average shown at the bottom of next to the last column is 41.7 miles per car per day. This figure certainly indicates what can be done.

But the most important column is the third from last. It shows, on a basis of figuring which is uniformly fair for all the divisions, what we may reasonably expect from each division in order that it may do its share to bring about a System average of 40 miles. For certain weeks some divisions have already equalled and exceeded their quotas. Other divisions have not yet done this but can, I believe, do so during AUGUST, which is the month set for us to reach the 40 mile mark.

In addition to sending this appeal for a co-ordinated effort during August, I have written letters to many of those who are most responsible for making car miles, urging a special drive at this time. General and divisional officers are also urged to act with those directly responsible for results.

As a fitting token of appreciation we are going to give a large American Flag, pole and accessories to each division which reaches its quota in this drive—the flag to be flown on all holidays and special occasions, and, so long as the division maintains its quota, at all other times during the day.

The Company will renew the flags when necessary and maintain them in a condition worthy of what they stand for and mean to all Americans.

Please read the next few pages carefully. They show substantial supporting and informative data concerning our car mile record.

With your continued and united support I look forward with confidence to reaching the 40 miles per car per day mark that has been set as our goal.

I know Baltimore and Ohio officers and employes can put this over!

Please Do Not Miss the "Prospective Business" Card in This Issue

DURING 1916 we inserted in each copy of the MAGAZINE for a number of months a "Prospective Business" card similar to the one which will be found in this and subsequent issues. This was followed by the great business getting campaign inaugurated in 1921 by President Willard and carried on with great enthusiasm by our Veterans' organizations and other employes. It resulted in bringing thousands of dollars worth of business to the Baltimore and Ohio and was gratifying not alone on this account but because it showed unmistakably what a coordinated effort of this kind could do.

Our readers know that during the early part of this year the Baltimore and Ohio, in common with other railroads, was pushed to handle all the business offered it. Now, however, the situation has changed and during the month of June our equipment was in such splendid condition that we could have handled more business than we actually did. The same situation still obtains and will probably continue for the next two months at least. The answer is obvious—we whose work is not primarily to solicit business for the Railroad can turn to and give our salesmen of the Traffic Department a lift.

It will be noted that the post card enclosed in this issue is addressed to the nearest division freight or passenger agent. This is the quickest way to get our salesmen to the prospects and should result in quick and effective action.

Employees are especially requested to get business for the Company in highly competitive localities. In certain sections the Baltimore and Ohio is the only railroad which can be used and there, of course, sending in the cards is unnecessary work.

The Traffic Department has arranged that all employes sending in cards which result in business, will have their names reported so that credit may be given them in the MAGAZINE. And our solicitors will be liberal in their decisions as to who should get credit for the business—they welcome the assistance of all employes.

The number of men selling transportation on the Baltimore and Ohio is relatively small as compared to our entire personnel. Their eyes and ears can be multiplied a hundred fold if all of us do our best to help them secure business. It is the confident hope of the MAGAZINE that Baltimore and Ohio people will respond to this appeal with the same enthusiasm and interest that have characterized previous similar efforts and that before long we will have interesting results to report in these pages.

Engineer E. B. Hagan, Pittsburgh Division, a "Business Getter"

DURING the month of January, 1923, Engineer E. B. Hagan, employed in the Butler, Pa. yard, secured 6 carloads and 2 L. C. L. shipments for movement via Baltimore and Ohio from an automobile company located at Butler, Pa., through his relationship with one of the officers of the firm.

Mr. Hagan called the attention of the automobile company to the fact that the Baltimore and Ohio could give good service, and as a result of his representations, we were promised a trial. The company stated later that they were well pleased with our service, and that they were glad to be able to favor the Baltimore and Ohio and with such good results for their own patrons. Engineer Hagan informed our force at Butler that we would receive this business, and as a result the freight and yard forces were on the alert, furnishing empty cars promptly, and seeing that the usual good service was given.

E. B. Hagan was employed by the Baltimore and Ohio as a fireman on April 11, 1883, and was promoted to engineer May 1, 1889, having been continuously in the service since the date first mentioned. He has been commended by Superintendent J. D. Beltz for his interest in securing this new business.

Ho—You Operating Men—Here's What the Traffic Folks Think of You!

Baltimore, June 15, 1923

Mr. C. W. Galloway, Vice President:

On behalf of the Traffic Department, and especially the Passenger Department, we wish to express our great appreciation for the wonderful work done by the Operating Department in the handling of the Shrine movement. It was a tremendous stress on our transportation machine but the movement was conducted throughout with precision and the greatest possible accommodation to our patrons, and while the weather was hot and created some discomfort on that account, we have had nothing but complimentary statements as to our service and I want you and all of your people to feel that the Traffic Department appreciates the wonderful service given in the handling of this Shrine movement, which is bound to accrue to the advantage of the Company and its business.

Vice President, Traffic and Commercial Department.

"Doubt it?"

"What?"

"That the Baltimore and Ohio can make 40 Miles per Car per Day!"

"Well—"

"No 'well' about it! Just read pages 8 and 9 of this issue."

Oliver Cooper, Station Porter, Played a Man's Part

WHENEVER there is a wedding party, one of the familiar figures to be seen around the station immediately thereafter is the station porter, with his broom and dustpan to sweep up the rice. At all times he must keep an eye on the station floor and look after its condition. Then there are the water coolers to be looked after, the window shades to be kept at the proper height, and the thousand and one little odd jobs to be done. And when the train pulls in, the station porter must be ready for any emergency. Sometimes it is to help the baggageman, sometimes it is to assist passengers in various ways. Such are the duties of the station porter, but never does anybody think of him as being a hero. Oliver Cooper, however, has proven that he can be a hero and a station porter, too.

Cooper, as he is generally known, is a station porter at Mt. Royal. He has been here for three years, having served at Camden Station three years also. Always on the job, faithful and honest, as his face in the accompanying picture indicates, Cooper played a man's game at Mt. Royal a short time ago.

It was time for the train to Philadelphia. The bell rang, the crowd moved toward the gate, and the stationmaster was calling out the stations. Cooper was pulling out the baggage truck. Just as the gate was opened, Number One came down the far track, heading for the tunnel. At the gate a woman was handing the gateman her ticket, a little child holding to her hand. In an instant the child broke away from its mother and before anyone realized what had happened, had dashed across the east-bound track to the far side of the train shed, directly in front of the oncoming train. The mother sprang after it, Cooper following her. Reaching them in the nick of time, he pushed both mother and child to safety, and stretched out both arms to keep them from returning until Number One had come to a standstill. Those who witnessed the deed say that it would have been impossible for the train to have stopped before it had passed over the spot where the three had crossed.

Employees who can think, and act while they are thinking, as did Station Porter Cooper, truly belong in that swiftly growing class, "Prides of the Baltimore and Ohio."

Brakeman M. S. Ruggles, Toledo Division, is a Good Neighbor

By C. E. THRASHER

ON May 8, the agent at Lima, Ohio, assisted a blind man to board train No. 58. He advised Brakeman Ruggles of the unfortunate man's condition, further saying that he wished to go to Brownville, leaving Cincinnati on Indiana Division No. 1.

Mr. Ruggles watched his charge carefully, taking particular pains to see that he did not want for anything on the trip. On arrival at Cincinnati Mr. Ruggles took the blind man to the restaurant, purchased breakfast for him and remained with him until time for his train to depart so that he might not take the wrong train.

Mr. Ruggles devoted two hours of his own time to the care of the man in his charge, after arrival at Cincinnati, and he cannot be too highly commended. Loss of sight is a handicap which cannot be realized by those of us who are fortunate enough to be blessed with all our senses and the MAGAZINE takes special pleasure in recording the Christian kindness shown by Brakeman Ruggles to one less fortunate than he.

The Law

"We are a race of beings created in a universe where law reigns. That will forever need all the repetition and emphasis which can be put on it. Law reigns. It can neither be cheated, evaded, nor turned aside. We can discover it, live in accordance with it, observe it, and develop and succeed; or, we can disregard it, violate it, defy it, and fail. Law reigns. It is the source of order, of freedom, of righteous authority, of organized society and also of industrial success and prosperity. To disregard it is to perish, to observe it is to live, physically, mentally, morally, spiritually. It is the principle that requires respect and reverence for authority. It is not sought for the benefit of those who may temporarily represent government or any other example of authority, but for the benefit of the individual himself."

—Vice President Calvin Coolidge

Believes in the Golden Rule

Being the reason given by Supervisor John H. Quill, Vincennes, Indiana, for winning first prize for his district in 1922.

I have been asked how we have been winning the prize almost every year.

In the first place every man I have is a Baltimore and Ohio man, that is, he understands that what is good for the Company is also good for him. He therefore takes an interest in protecting the Company, and thereby himself and family.

We understand it isn't only keeping one section in first class condition, but that they must all be in the same condition. If a man gets a little behind on one piece of track, his brother on the next section is able to give him assistance and he gives the same loyal support on his own or adjoining track.

It has at times seemed as if we were having an up hill pull because we were short of men and sometimes material, but if unable to secure what we need we are not discouraged but do the best possible with what we have.

I try to keep the good will of my men, standing by them when right, and showing them mistakes when they occur, which is seldom. In other words, we are always at the top because we believe in team work, and try to give our Company the same undivided attention we would expect of a man working for us.

Apologize First—Explain Afterwards

It is a maxim of the Baltimore and Ohio that "the passenger is always right." Of course, literally speaking, this is not true. Employees who have occasion to handle passengers know that at times they are unreasonable.

But so far as their responses to passengers are concerned it would be an excellent thing if, without exception, all employees who handle the traveling public would get into the spirit suggested by "the passenger is always right."

A better characterization of this spirit was mentioned in my presence several days ago. A clerk who does an amount of thinking in behalf of the Railroad far beyond that called for by his job, said this:

"If we could only get every employe who receives a complaint from a passenger to apologize to the passenger for the reported condition and then to explain afterward, it would help us get more passenger business."

We don't have to admit the fault unreservedly. We can say, "if that is the condition we will investigate and remedy it immediately."

This is not hard to do, it being far easier to make an apology when there is no real occasion for it, than when there is one. Apologizing first to the persons making the complaint disarms them and puts them in a better mood for listening to the explanation which, on so many occasions, proves that the Company and its service are not at fault.

But if we explain first we antagonize, and then further explanation is so much harder.

The same principle obtains in relations with all our customers, whether they be passengers, shippers, or people having business relations with us in other ways.

The Reason the Tortoise Won

Remember the Fable of the Hare and the Tortoise. The initial grand burst of speed did not bring victory to the Hare, because during the race he laid down for a bit of a nap. It was the methodical plodding, ground gaining pace of the Tortoise that finally won out. Don't interpret the tale erroneously—the tortoise didn't win merely because he was slow and steady and the hare didn't lose because he was swift. Speed—capability of fast progress—is a valuable asset and of course should not be discouraged. It is only necessary to see that the speedy one is headed in the right direction, that his ability is utilized to the best advantage. The Tortoise won because he fortunately possessed a definite aim for his endeavors, while the Hare was just showing off. The big thing is to direct your footsteps toward the objective chosen and no matter whether you travel swiftly or slowly, you will eventually attain the goal. Naturally the speed of progress depends solely upon your individual ability. The main thing is to keep going steadfastly in the right direction. The thing can be done if you will only believe it can be done. Whatever happens, don't become discouraged. One can always find solace in the fact that it required 600 years before Noah learned how to build an Ark.

—J. S. Calvert

Three Honorable Mentions in a Month

Individuals are seldom mentioned on this page—and the occasion must be an unusual one. For example:

Operator C. M. Watson, FY Tower, Pittsburgh Division, last November 23 discovered a fire on a bridge near his headquarters and saw that it was put out with little damage; on December 6 discovered a fire on another bridge near his post, with the same result; and on December 7 noticed the door torn off a loaded car in passing train and contents about to be spilled out, which condition he also had promptly corrected.

A money value can hardly be placed upon the watchfulness of Operator Watson and his interest in Safety and the welfare of the Company in these three cases. Doubtless the saving made through his vigilance was large. Doubtless the Company can never adequately repay him for the real heart interest he puts into his work.

He is typical of hundreds of other employes on the Baltimore and Ohio, and there never was so propitious a time for making their examples count for more converts to their sensible and commendable way of viewing their relationship between them and the Company, than right now.

Hearty thanks to Operator Watson and may his tribe increase!

No Man Management

Trotsky, now practically sole ruler of Russia with Lenin ill, is inclined to turn from Communism. That is natural; his ancestors outgrew that centuries ago. "Modified capitalism" is his idea, with "one man management of factories."

It doesn't take much intelligence to realize that everybody must have a brain, which the feet and hands obey; every nation must have a head and courts that are respected, every factory, newspaper and candy store "one-man" management.

Where there is not "one-man management" there is NO MAN MANAGEMENT.

What is Your Best Definition?

There probably is no subject in literature, ancient or modern, that has served the writers more often or better, nor interested their readers more often or better, than "Love." Many are the definitions rendered to describe this nominative—subject, in sentences simple, complex and compound; books have been written about it; poetry would be crippled prose without it; and the world could not get along without it. Of all the attempts to picture what it is, I like the following by Victor Hugo the best: "I have seen a very poor young man in love. His hat was old, his coat worn; the water passed through his shoes, and the stars through his soul."

Genu Varus

The New York "American," among other instructive and interesting departments, runs a column conducted by former Health Commissioner Copeland, in which he replies to questions pertaining to public health and sanitation, when he can. The questions are submitted in good faith by persons who are ill, or think they are, and the doctor's replies, of course, also are bona fide. The column is instructive because one learns there that humans are subject to many ills of which pathology knows nothing, and it is interesting when one comes across something like the following:

"Question: I do a lot of gym work and notice that whenever I jump I get a severe pain in my side. I was examined and on the report saw genu varus. Will you please tell me what this means?"

We can imagine the questioner at every jump clap his or her hand over the severe pain and worry about "genu varus," until eased by the doctor's reply which was:

"You need not worry about this condition. Genu Varus means bowlegs."

The World is Getting Better

Nothing so furthers the unkindliness, unfriendliness and aloofness among people who live in "flats" and apartments in big cities as the "on guard" sense begotten and propagated by the publication of a thousand and one stories of misbehavior, misdemeanor and crime in the daily press and read by the millions that never read anything else. Yet we may confidentially assume, and statistics will prove, that there are, all in all, when taken on a percentage basis, as many decent and honorable men and women in the great cities as in the small country towns, all of which have their "black sheep" and "bad men."

Why should we look for the rotten and stir up the mud in the gutter, when goodness is real and abundant and, as Zeno the stoic teaches, "Nothing but goodness is good?"

The thousand and one examples of what Kipling calls "roadside courtesies," deeds of kindness and helpfulness, go unnoticed and unheralded because they are common and natural. Wickedness and viciousness are broadcasted because they are un-natural and therefore "news," and meat for those "holier than thou" persons, a large class, that dolefully chant miserere, shake their heads and wonder what this world is coming to. (The world is good and getting better, and all is well along the Hudson.)

But, for all that, the continuous spotlighting of the nasty spots must perforce help to foster and aggravate a feeling of danger, caution and suspicion that should not exist, because there really is no need for it.

Each one of us knows or is acquainted with several hundred persons. How many of them are wicked, vicious or criminal? Not many; probably not any. Which proves the case that the fear of evil is exaggerated and uncalled for, and that we may safely trust ourselves to exchange a "good morning" and "howdye do" with our neighbors without the guarantee vouchsafed by a formal introduction. It may not be "etiquette," but it is human. The foregoing argument is addressed to sensible people; it will not appeal to neurotics and hypochondriacs.

"For—there is nothing so kingly as kindness," sings Alice Cary. So let us cultivate the spirit of kindness in ourselves and the faculty of observing kindness in others, which, if we look for it, is manifest on every side (except in a subway jam).

For real human kindness, continuous and persevering, under temper-testing and soul-trying conditions, let me commend to you the much abused New York policeman, and the soldiers of the Salvation Army.

As a P. S. I wish to point out that though kindness always implies courtesy plus, courtesy does not always imply kindness. Bluebeard, no doubt, was a courteous cuss; also the Snake; and so are the polished gentlemen who wave "hands across the sea" giving us the high-sign that means "gimme."

Transcendental Communism

There are two female felines in our General Foreman's Office at Pier 22. Superficially, there is nothing remarkable about them; regular hardboiled nightprowlers they seem. But listen:

The cat-stork brought to each of them at the same time—twins in one bundle, triplets in the other. Our Miss Wilson, who has a desk in the G. F. Office and whose household training has taught her that two for X is better quality than three for X, decided in favor of the twin-kittens, and gently disposed of the three-of-a-kind by dropping them into the Ganges that flows past our bulkhead. Now, here is the point—the two mother-cats take turns in nursing the babies.

Neither of them wants to "hog" the whole pleasure; it is "me first, you next" or "after you, madame." The wronged mother does not want the kittens bisected in order to get her half, as did the Hebraic lady of history, who forced King Solomon to render a verdict upon which solely rests the reputation for great wisdom that the old reprobate does not deserve. This cat-story furnishes an example of what might be called transcendental communism.

Conservation of Locomotive Fuel

The First Paper Submitted in $100.00 Prize Contest

By E. G. McKEEN, Locomotive Engineer, Monongah Division

EVERYONE who is interested in fuel conservation and has studied the problem, understands that this is not a one man proposition, but that success depends on the honest effort of the employes of every department. Good power is the foundation of Fuel Economy, so I will start with the responsibilities of the shop forces.

The Shop Forces

To do their part toward conservation of fuel, the shops should keep our locomotives in good operative condition, make all repairs necessary, stop all steam leaks about the cabs and keep valve packing and cylinder packing in good condition. Defective packing and steam leaks cause a constant waste of fuel. The shops should keep the grates in working order, ash pans in good condition and should keep arches and flues cleaned, as bad arches and stopped up flues cause engines to steam badly, causing a serious waste of fuel.

If engines come to terminal reported failing for steam, the shop force should examine steam pipes and dry pipes to see if the trouble is caused by their leaking and should not bridge or bush the nozzles to make engines steam properly as that will cause the engines to burn more fuel and hide the actual defects. If an engine comes to a division and steams properly with a six and one half or six and three quarter inch nozzle, the cause of later steam failures is not too large a nozzle.

The shops should also repair all leaky tanks, as it takes fuel to furnish water. Hostlers should be careful not to run tanks over when filling them. Engine watchers should bank fires and not use the blower while watching engines. When engines are backed off for repairs, the fires should be drawn at once. Engines should not be kept around on the back track two or three days with fire in them. Hostlers when coaling engines should be careful not to load the coal space so full that coal will fall off the tank.

If the shop forces will perform their duties as they should and try each day to do better than the day before, they can save many tons of fuel each week at every engine terminal.

The Engineer

The locomotive engineer should pay particular attention to the engine he is running while on line of road and make out intelligent work reports on the engine when he arrives at terminal. He has a better opportunity to locate defects, particularly defects that cause waste of fuel, than the shop forces have. He should pay particular attention to how the engine is burning its fire. If the engine burns too much coal, he should report it and report all steam leaks around the boiler attachments. He should pay attention to the valve and cylinder packing, see that they are in good condition and see that the valves are set properly, as valves being out of proper adjustment is a defect which causes a great waste of fuel.

He should work the engine where he can get the best results out of it with as little steam as possible, work the injector so it will supply water to the boiler as it is being consumed and should be careful not to take so much coal at any coaling station on the line of road that any will fall from the tank. He should be sure to keep the valves and cylinders properly lubricated, always informing the fireman, if he is not acquainted with the road, where to stop firing and where to begin. If the engineer will instruct and encourage his fireman to do his best, he will save fuel.

The Fireman

The locomotive fireman should study the fundamental principles of good firing. These will make him efficient and give him skill and knowledge to make the fuel which is applied to the furnace burn so evenly that it will evaporate into steam as much water as is possible in locomotive service.

The main object at all times is to maintain a maximum pressure to meet the demands made upon the locomotive in the various classes of service.

A man may become a skillful fireman without a scientific knowledge of combustion, but there is one mental qualification which he must possess in order to become a successful fireman, that is, good judgement. This is an aid to progress in every calling, and especially to advancement in railroad work. In making a trip over a division a locomotive pulling a heavy train must meet so many varying conditions in the demand for steam that a fireman must exercise the best of judgement and care in order to have his fire in the right condition at all times to meet the demands made upon the locomotive.

A fireman should always arrive about thirty minutes before leaving time and prepare his fire. He should never work the blower very heavily while preparing the fire as it will only be a waste of fuel and be of no benefit to the fire. He should always keep the grates clean so the fire will get an even draft on line of road, and keep a light level fire. When approaching the top of a summit, or point where the engineer is about to shut off for a station stop, he should stop firing far enough back to let the steam pressure fall back about ten or fifteen pounds so he can crack the blower valve to prevent smoke and not pop the engine. Every time an engine pops there is a waste of about fifteen pounds of coal per minute. The fireman should always keep the coal wet and keep the gangway clean.

When pulling into sidings, he should let the steam pressure fall back so that the engine will not pop and if a very long delay is expected, should bank the fire. He should never put over six shovels of coal in a firebox at one fire and should apply the coal to the front of the fire first so that he can see where the coal is needed. He should close the door between each shovel of coal and wait until the smoke clears up before putting in the next shovelful. The fireman should lengthen the distance between fires. In firing a stoker fired engine, never use stoker while in side tracks, but always use shovel to keep fire in condition. When going down grades always shut off stoker and use shovel. Stoker should be used as little as possible or at slowest possible rate of continuous firing while on the road.

In order to obtain the best results the grates should be kept loose and free from clinkers. The fire should be kept as light as possible by applying fuel often and in small quantities, carrying a light level fire to allow the necessary amount of air to pass through the grates in order to obtain perfect combustion, which is not obtainable with a heavy fire. It takes about two hundred and sixty cubic feet or about thirty pounds of air to consume one pound of coal.

Every fireman should try to make a better record than the other fellow and if he can save one fifteen pound scoop of coal per mile, each man can save fifteen hundred pounds per hundred miles, which I believe almost every fireman can do if he takes advantage of all opportunities. This would mean the saving of many tons of coal each month for the Company which we are employed by.

The Train Crew

One of the train crews' most important duties is to give the train the proper inspection and stop all the air leaks they can find, as the excessive running of the air pumps results in the waste of much fuel.

If every man in train and engine service will devote his time on duty to serving the best interest of the Company he is employed by, which we all know we should do, as we are all paid well for the service we are performing, I am sure we can save many thousands tons of coal annually and be more prosperous with our own work, on account of helping our Company to prosper. So let every man who is interested in his own prosperity and that of his Company show it by trying each month to give better service than the month before.

As the saying is "Practice Makes Perfect," let's practice conservation of fuel and Save Coal.

Good Will Girls Present Official Thanks of France to Baltimore and Its People

THE Good Will girls of the Baltimore and Ohio brought back a beautiful illuminated testimonial, printed in colors, signed by Charles Reibel, the minister of the liberated regions in France, and reading as follows:

"A testimonial of appreciation from France to the City of Baltimore, Maryland, and to the Baltimore News, which cooperated generously in furthering the organization of the Good Will Delegation of the American Committee for Devastated France and which sent an offering of $50,000 and eight delegates to France.

"This offering has contributed materially toward bettering the condition of the people living in the war devastated regions and the American Delegation has given new proof of the friendship which unites the two republics."

THE CONCLUDING OFFICIAL CHAPTER WRITTEN BY OUR GOOD WILL GIRLS

Miss Spengler (right), assisted by Miss Lauer (left), presents Mayor Jackson, of Baltimore (extreme right), with the testimonial from France expressing the appreciation of the French people for the liberal support given the American Committee's work in the devastated regions, by the people who voted for the delegates. F. H. B. Bullock, President's Office, introduced the girls to His Honor. Miss Stevens was "on line" and unable to be present.

It will be recalled that the Baltimore News handled the voting campaign for the Good Will Committee in electing delegates to make the trip to France.

The presentation of the testimonial took place in the office of Mayor Jackson, Baltimore, on July 7. Miss Spengler, who presented the certificate, was accompanied by Miss Magdalene Lauer, another of our Baltimore and Ohio Good Will delegates, and by F. H. B. Bullock, Office of the President.

Mr. Bullock introduced Miss Spengler as follows:

"Last February there was held in Baltimore what is known as the 'National Good Will Elections,' under the auspices of the Baltimore News, for the purpose of raising funds to complete the work of the American Committee in the devastated regions of France; to select delegates by votes of the people who subscribed to this fund for a trip to France to see for themselves the work already done and that remaining to be done by the American Committee in bettering the condition of the people living in the devastated regions; and also to convey to the French people an expression of Good Will from the American communities which participated in the Good Will Elections.

"There was $50,000 raised in Baltimore towards this fund, of which about $21,000 was contributed through the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad campaign, under the direction of General Chairman James S. Murray, assistant to president, and myself as general treasurer. There were eight delegates elected from Baltimore who made the trip to France with delegates from 17 other cities. Baltimore had the honor of casting the largest number of votes for any one delegate, Miss Nina Spengler; also for having the youngest delegate, Miss Magdalene Lauer. These young ladies, together with Miss Margaret T. Stevens, are employed by and represented the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

"Miss Spengler, being the honor delegate from Baltimore, has been commissioned by the French Government to present to the City of Baltimore and to the Baltimore News a testimonial of appreciation from the French people.

"I take pleasure in introducing Miss Spengler and Miss Lauer."

Miss Spengler then presented the testimonial, which was received by Mayor Jackson and by Mr. Warren W. Brown, representing the Baltimore News.

A Pointed Question

It was at a college dance. The young man had just been introduced to her and after a brief and awkward silence he ventured: "You are from the West, I understand?"

"Yes, from Indiana," she replied. "Hoosier girl."

He started and flushed deeply. "Why er-really," he stammered, "I—I don't know—that is, haven't quite decided yet."

President Willard and General Manager Scheer Address Relief Department Surgeons at Convention

THE thirty second annual meeting of the Baltimore and Ohio Association of Railway Surgeons was held at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., on June 14, 15 and 16.

The first session was called to order at 9.30 a. m., June 14 by President Dr. Victor D. Lespinasse, Chicago. An address of welcome was made by Dr. J. Russell Verbryche, Jr., vice president, Medical Society, District of Columbia, on behalf of the medical profession of Washington. General Manager E. W. Scheer welcomed the doctors on behalf of the Railroad Company. In opening his address, Mr. Scheer said:

"It seemed best to me, when I was requested to address you, to admit in the beginning that I am incompetent to discuss before you matters relating to the human ills—I might discuss with you some of the ills of the railroads, but knowing that our honored President will address you tomorrow, I have no doubt but that he will place before you his diagnosis of the railroad situation and his suggestion as to the remedy. After you have heard him you will, with me, admit that he is a first class diagnostician, as well as a practical physician.

"Knowing that you have been busy keeping pace with the progress of your profession, it occurred to me that you might not have had time to inquire very closely into the progress made by the great transportation companies, and that some reference to the early history and progress of the company with which you are associated would be of interest to you."

Mr. Scheer then traced the history of the Baltimore and Ohio from its earliest days to the present, giving data as to the date of charter, laying of first rails, etc. He also explained to his audience the earliest operations of steam locomotives.

Mr. Scheer explained the origin of the Relief Department, giving facts and figures as to its early history, concluding with the statement that on April 30, 1881, it had a membership of 14,439, while today it numbers 65,467. In 1881 there were 387 surgeons and 9 hospitals, while today we have 638 surgeons and 132 hospitals under contract.

In conclusion, Mr. Scheer said: "Truly the Baltimore and Ohio has progressed until it has reached a state of manhood, powerful and glorious, under the guidance of our chief executive and his efficient corps of vice presidents in charge of finance, operation and traffic. And this credit is also due you and your predecessors, because as far back as 1844, when the Relief Fund was started, President Louis McLane realized that without the guidance and help of men of your profession, final success could not be achieved.

"It was then, as now, your duty to see that none but those who were physically and mentally fit should be permitted to enter the service, to heal the sick and relieve the suffering of those who meet with accident. It is a matter of history that men of your profession do more real work for the good of humanity, both individually and collectively, than all the others combined, and many, many times without hope of fee or reward, except the feeling of satisfaction because of work well done. * * * *

"I extend to you a most cordial welcome, * * * and I trust you will carry with you for years to come, many pleasant memories of this visit to Washington."

Responses were made by Dr. Lespinasse and Superintendent W. J. Dudley, Relief Department. The balance of the morning session was occupied with the presentation of technical papers by Dr. B. O. Robinson, Parkersburg, W. Va.; Dr. E. L. Crum, Lodi, Ohio; Dr. Robert J. Jones, Greenfield, Ohio; Dr. Don Deal, Springfield, Ill.; Dr. H. S. Hedges, Brunswick, Md.; Dr. W. B. Gambrill, Ellicott City, Md.; Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, Ohio; Dr. E. V. Millholland, Baltimore, Md., and Dr. Page Edmunds, Baltimore, Md. One hundred and fifty-eight members registered at the convention, a large number of whom were accompanied by their families.

In the afternoon 275 members of the association and their families were entertained by a trip to Mount Vernon and in the evening by a trip to Great Falls.

The morning session on June 15 was taken up with the discussion of medical subjects and matters of interest to the railway surgeons. Papers were presented and discussed by Drs. Thomas F. Heatley, Toledo, Ohio; Arthur A. Rang, Washington, Ind.; Edmund C. Brush, Zanesville, Ohio; Walter R. Griess, Cincinnati, Ohio; James B. Poling, Lima, Ohio; Paul R. Sieber, Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. E. Offner, Fairmont, W. Va.; Robert J. Reed, Wheeling, W. Va.;

E. J. Gunning, Washington, D. C., and Harvey S. McKay, St. Louis, Mo.

The afternoon session was opened by Superintendent W. J. Dudley, who introduced President Daniel Willard as the principal speaker.

After expressing his appreciation of the opportunity to address the association, Mr. Willard said that he would not attempt to make a speech but that he would talk very informally on a subject which he was satisfied was of deep interest to the members, namely the railroad situation as it is today, and particularly with reference to the Baltimore and Ohio.

"I want to extend to you greetings on behalf of the Railroad Company," said Mr. Willard. "I am very glad to see you all here. I thoroughly approve of such meetings. I suppose that after you leave here you exchange views on various subjects, just as you do in your meetings here, and for this reason I want to give you the facts of the railroad situation so that you may form your opinions accordingly. I also want to say that I have always had a high opinion of the medical profession. I think it is the most important in the country, and I do not even except clergymen. Perhaps after I am finished you may be able to visualize the railroad problem as I see it. After I have finished, also, I shall be very glad to answer any questions any of you may wish to ask, in case my remarks are not entirely clear to you."

Mr. Willard called the attention of his audience to the fact that in the United States we have roundly 265,000 miles of track, and that we cannot, as in the case of the Telegraph and Telephone Company or the Canadian National Railways, handle them as a single unit. The railroads are owned by about 1500 companies, and approximately 200 of them have gross earnings of over one million dollars per year. These are considered as Class 1 roads, and do about 95 per cent. of the entire business of transportation. They own 2,400,000 freight cars, 58,000 passenger cars and 68,000 locomotives. He said that the problem is to use all these facilities with the greatest efficiency in the interest of the public. "I believe under the Transportation Act," said Mr. Willard, "the railroads can, and have, and will serve the public better and cheaper than if they were all owned by one company."

Mr. Willard explained that the railroads did not break down under private ownership when the war commenced, as has been repeatedly charged. What happened, he said, was that there was a great concentration in the east because of the necessity of moving steel, coal, etc., to war plants and ships on the Atlantic Coast. This disarranged the entire distribution system because the Eastern roads, particularly the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania, were badly congested, while money was being lost in the West on account of no freight being handled from steel and coal centers. He said that naturally the President could not ask the Western roads to run at a loss and in order to equalize matters the Government took over the railroads.

Mr. Willard said that up to last December the Transportation Act had failed to bring a fair return to the carriers, it had failed to furnish a sufficient car supply and it had failed to prevent strikes. "The situation has changed since then," he said. "The probabilities are that we will earn a fair return this year. There is no shortage of cars today, and railroads are adding new equipment to take care of increased business. As to strikes, managers and employees are clearing up this situation by getting together in conference and coming to agreements. So the Act now seems to be functioning in its three essentials.

"I do not believe that the railroads can be run more efficiently and with more benefit to the public under Government ownership. I think the present arrangement is the better."

Mr. Willard then referred to the resolutions passed by the Railway Executives at New York in April, explaining what they had agreed to do. He was heartily applauded when he explained the accomplishments of the Baltimore and Ohio and told his hearers that we are today ahead of the program in so far as it concerns car mileage, bad order cars and repairs to locomotives. The accomplishments of this Company in these matters were given in detail in the June MAGAZINE.

"I am sorry," said Mr. Willard, "that we have apparently overlooked an important agency or avenue in connection with the spreading of the Baltimore and Ohio spirit, namely the surgeons. You are a part of our family, you have wide relationships and associations. Many of you—if not all—are prominent in your home towns and you can, with the facts in your possession, explain the true railroad situation fully to your friends and associates.

"What is the spirit or ideal of the Baltimore and Ohio? First, I want to say to you emphatically that there is no so called 'Wall Street Control' of the Baltimore and Ohio. There are some 36,000 stockholders, with an average holding of 50 to 60 shares. 16,000 of them are women; 20,000 of them own less than 20 shares each. There is no large single owner. The Board of Directors manages the property. They are elected by the stockholders every year. It is the function of the president and his advisers to set up a standard or spirit on the Baltimore and Ohio. My standard is 'Good Neighborliness' in all communities. Who can interpret in a better manner than the family physician the spirit of a 'Good Neighbor' or who is a better neighbor? I am sorry that I have not been able to give you this message before. That was our mistake. They say a doctor's mistake is usually buried, but when we make a mistake we must live with it.

"Another of our standards is on time trains. We want to run them with comfort to our patrons, and we want our people invariably to be courteous.

"That, gentlemen, is our policy. Perhaps we may fail at times, but who does not? If any cases come to your attention where our policy is not being lived up to, do not hesitate to communicate with the head of your department. I want you to feel your responsibility as members of the Baltimore and Ohio family, and I hope you will do so."

On the evening of June 15 the visitors were entertained by the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club. After the entertainment dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

The morning session on June 16 concluded with a business meeting at which officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Dr. Walter R. Griess, Cincinnati, Ohio; First Vice President, Dr. Paul R. Sieber, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Second Vice President, Dr. J. L. Cochran, Connellsville, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Johnson, Baltimore, Md.

New Offices for Traffic Department in Cleveland

By A. R. STROME, Assistant Chief Clerk

ON July 1, the Freight and Passenger Traffic Department moved their offices from the Park Building, to new quarters on the 9th floor, New Union Trust Building, which is located at the intersection of Euclid Avenue and East 9th Street—"Cleveland's busiest corner"—the heart of the financial and retail section.

The Union Trust Building is the second largest office and bank building in the world, the Equitable Building, New York, being the largest.

Large iron ore, coal, steel, chemical and steamship companies will occupy space in the new building, and our offices will be easily accessible to all patrons.

Work on tearing down the old buildings on the site of the new building commenced on July 1, 1922, and exactly one year later, the first tenants—the Baltimore and Ohio Traffic Department—moved into the new building.

All Aboard for Our Country Club!

HO, all ye Baltimore and Ohio folk who love things athletic! Who wants to play tennis and baseball? Who wants to play basketball and volleyball? Who wants to swing a golf stick out over the green fields of Halethorpe? Who wants to swim or learn to swim? Who wants to glide away in an entrancing waltz with the rest of the boys and girls of our offices? You? Well, so do I, and here's our chance!

The Baltimore and Ohio has a splendid piece of property at Halethorpe, Maryland, on the shores of the Patapsco, which is particularly well adapted for a recreational center. It is just about five and a half miles from the city of Baltimore, on the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio, with good train service and a trolley line. A group of our engineers made a survey of the property and reported that it has great possibilities. All that we need now is 3000 employees who are willing to join in the fun and who are willing to contribute a dollar each per month. This will make for us a playground such as we have never had.

For the benefit of those who have not been able to attend the meetings of the committees, we would say that the following features have been suggested:

Club House: This is to be a two story structure consisting of a general lounging room, assembly room with a seating capacity of from 300 to 400, and which would also be used for dancing and any other form of entertainment. There would also be two wings, one of which would be used as a ladies' rest room, etc., men's room, etc. The second wing would contain dining room, kitchen, etc.

On the basement floor, entrance from ground level, there would be under one wing, lockers, showers, etc., for both ladies and gentlemen. Under assembly room there would be space for bowling alleys and under the other wing there would be space for pool tables. The building would be equipped with wide porches; with the doors from the assembly room opening out on one of them, so that that particular porch could be used in conjunction with assembly room for dances, etc.

It is also hoped to have 4 baseball diamonds, 8 to 12 tennis courts, a nine-hole golf course and a swimming pool.

The success of this movement will depend entirely upon the attitude of the Company towards it. Before the matter can be presented to the Management it will be necessary to ascertain approximately the number of employes that would be willing to join such a club and pay monthly dues of $1.00, with the understanding that if the movement does not materialize the dues paid in will be returned.

The funeral was held from the residence of his brother-in-law, R. C. Crawford, 210 Hutchinson Avenue, Edgewood, near Pittsburgh, the body being sent there on July 11. Mr. Matthews was unmarried.

Death of H. M. Matthews, Coal Traffic Manager

HERBERT M. MATTHEWS, coal traffic manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for the past eight years, died at midnight, July 10, of pneumonia at his country residence on the Bush River, near Aberdeen. On July 6 he was at his office in the Baltimore and Ohio Building as usual, but the following day contracted a severe cold which quickly developed into pneumonia.

Mr. Matthews was born October 11, 1860, at South Bend, Ind. After being educated in the public and high schools of that city, he entered railway service November 21, 1881, as clerk in the general freight office of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, at Chicago, being promoted to general agent of that company at Pittsburgh, October 15, 1886, where in April, 1897, he first became identified with the Baltimore and Ohio as commercial freight agent. Six months later, Mr. Matthews was advanced to division freight agent and on February 1, 1904, in addition to being division freight agent, was made coal and coke agent at Pittsburgh.

Mr. Matthews first came to Baltimore in July, 1905, when the Baltimore and Ohio made him general coal and coke agent, with headquarters in this city, and in July, 1915, he became coal traffic manager of the System. During Federal control of the railroads, he was a member of the committee in charge of coal and coke traffic in Trunk Line and New England territory, and when the committees were reorganized after the return of the roads to private ownership and

Trainmaster B. F. Kelly is One Good Reason for the Splendid Safety Record of the Staten Island Lines

By W. F. BRADEN, Safety Representative

RECENTLY a woman ticket agent on the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railway, the New York property of the Baltimore and Ohio, was seen to climb on the wrong side of a train that had stopped at her station. Instead of boarding the train from the platform, she stepped up from the rail running in the direction opposite to that in which the train was going.

The conductor saw her, realized that she was not only doing a dangerous thing, but also that she was setting a bad example to regular patrons. He reported the occurrence to B. F. Kelly, trainmaster of the S. I. R. T. R'y, and regarded as one of the best safety exponents on the System.

The next day the lady was summoned before Mr. Kelly. Looking his sternest, he recited the facts to her, pointed out what a dangerous practice she had indulged in, got her to sign a statement admitting her carelessness, handed her a book of Safety Rules and, finally, told her to "go and sin no more."

As she left his office she was a wiser and a happier employe, for after his admonition, Mr. Kelly made one of his humorous remarks and caused the lady to smile broadly. On her way back to her station, she read over the Safety Rules, and it is safe to say that she will not violate one of them again.

That's Mr. Kelly's way of doing things. If he can help it, no employe on the S. I. R. T. is going to disregard safety. Like many other employes he works for safety in operation 365 days of the year, and every hour of every one of these days.

It is interesting to watch Mr. Kelly at work. In the first place, he starts out with the idea that he has the "best little railroad in the world." If you want to "start" something, just argue against this premise. In that emphatic, direct, convincing way of his, he will not be long in convincing you that you are entirely wrong.

He is not one to impose his ideas and ideals upon another without due regard for the other person's feelings. He is a direct and forceful talker and when he is expounding safety he is most enthusiastic. He loves an argument, for it gives him new ideas, brings new thoughts and keeps his mind supplied with food.

It was back in 1891 that Mr. Kelly first was employed by the Staten Island lines. He started out as an operator, next was leverman and then in succession went from agent to yardmaster, to brakeman, to dispatcher, chief dispatcher, division operator, assistant trainmaster, supervisor of transportation, and, finally, to trainmaster.

Constant application to duty, a sincere belief in his employer and a rigid following of all rules and regulations promulgated by his employer, are the reasons for his success. During the illness of his next higher superior officer he has shouldered the burdens of keeping the property going and he has succeeded well.

Trainmaster B. F. Kelly

Mr. Kelly firmly believes that safety is just as necessary a part of operation as is coal or water for the engine, or grease and oil for the passenger cars.

"I became interested in safety," he said the other day, "I might say, from the first day I entered the railroad field. As I progressed through the different positions, the more interested I became in my work for safety. I have observed that there are employes who do not familiarize themselves with the duties assigned them, and they do not succeed. I have seen many report for duty and then pick up the daily newspaper and become absorbed in it, soon becoming indifferent and careless to the dangers around them. Whenever I see conditions like these, I try my best to correct them, for I believe I am thus saving some poor fellow from running into danger and, perhaps, being killed, or injured."

Failure of the employe engaged in train operation to know thoroughly the Book of Rules, Mr. Kelly believes, is one of the principal reasons for their lack of interest in their work.

"We try to overcome this," continued Mr. Kelly, "by examinations in writing on the rules. Not more than 25 questions are given, but to answer them intelligently, the employe must have a fair knowledge of the rules. Knowledge gained by the men in preparation for these examinations has proved beneficial.

"Up here we try to handle the employes in the matter of safety so that they will realize that it is a necessary part of their employment. When I find some fellow who is indifferent in observing the safety rules, I summon him to my office and point out the weakness in his plan for advancement and try to convince him before he departs that the proper line to follow if he intends to remain in railroad service is to work along safe lines. Usually I get the assurance from the man that he was just careless because he didn't know any better.

Safety Should Be Taught in Schools

"My belief is that we should begin to instill safety into the young mind. Around the larger railroad terminals, I believe the schools should be furnished with safety instruction matter by the railroads. In this way the youth would learn specifically the dangers of steam transportation lines.

"When an employe who observes safety rules, leaves the railroad property, his duty to think and act safely does not cease. When at home with his family he should, at every opportunity, have a heart to heart talk with the folks about safety. When reading the newspapers, if I find something that will improve the family along safety lines, I discuss it. If railroad employes practised safety when at work as well as it is practised by their wives at home, every railroad would be a paradise to work upon. I dare say there is not a housewife, who, from the time she gets up in the morning until she retires at night, is not practising safety.

"Those who believe in safety should practise it to the fullest extent. Those who do not certainly should seek other fields of employment. Work can be done only one way; that is, conscientiously and carefully."

Mr. Kelly is convinced that the safe employe is the most valuable one. He has found, he says, that carefulness of human life and limb means that such a man will be careful of the property of his employer. The man, he has discovered, who goes about his work without regard for his own or his neighbor's safety is just as recklessly careless of the material put at his disposal for the operation of the railroad.

By MARGARET TALBOTT STEVENS

Bordeaux—and a Touch of America—VII

ON the evening of May 6 we arrived at Bordeaux, after a pleasant ride.

There had been a delightful thunder shower with lightning and an unusual electrical disturbance in the sky. The effect was that of a great display of lights behind a screen of clouds.

We rode from the station of Bordeaux to our hotel behind a pair of horses. There are many horses in Bordeaux. Everywhere we see them. There are automobiles too, but not so plentiful as horse-drawn vehicles.

Before the cafes here also sat many people. Often a pink and white cockatoo would be perched on the back of a customer's chair. The chairs are usually painted in gorgeous colorings.

We were assigned to various rooms, some good, a few otherwise. Several times during our trip we have had someone else come along to claim our rooms—just as we were ready to turn in.

It's lots of fun to watch the French when they get into such a dilemma. They "Hey!" and "He!" and "Ho!" to each other, run forward, then back again, pick up a bag, drop it, open a door, then close it and hold the key. Presently they run back and open the door again. Always calling to each other. Oh, it's great sport!

On Sunday morning while waiting for the bus, Nina and I walked to the lovely statue of the Girondins in the public park at Bordeaux. There are many wide streets in this town, quite in contrast to Nimes, Marseilles and Carcassonne.

We left at about 10 o'clock to visit the city and to take a long drive to St. Emilion for lunch.

At the Grand Theatre we were joined by two women of Bordeaux, a mother and daughter; the latter spoke good English, the former only French, but from both we learned much about Bordeaux and its people.

Although it was Sunday the markets and stores were open, and men, women and children were running hither and thither.

We saw the churches of St. Sevrin, St. Michel, Holy Cross, and the Cathedral, the Hotel de Ville, and we entered the royal box of the Grand Theatre. The clock tower of St. Michel is the highest tower in South Western France. Then across the Pont de Pierre over the Garonne River out on the country roads through miles of vineyards and roses, buttercups and daisies we went, our stomachs getting emptier at every minute. With only rolls and coffee for breakfast it is hard for an American to wait until noon, much less until one o'clock and after. Horrors! something went wrong with one of the cars; the condition was remedied and we proceeded again. Horrors again! The chauffeurs were uncertain of their way to St. Emilion. They went off on the wrong road so we had to turn back and take another way.

With our tongues hanging out and our stomachs sticking to our backs we arrived at St. Emilion, a town with old turrets and towers, churches and old houses, inclined streets of cobblestones and terraces. In a large hall we were met by some of the town officials—and then we ate!

In the afternoon we went into an exquisite old cloister, ivy covered and with trees now growing in the center. Ferns grow out of the walls and there is an atmosphere of something strange and alluring. Can it be that it is the old wine cellars, the grotto that runs underneath the gardens? Let us go down. Ah, the air is damp and cool. What are these large stacks of bottles? We are told that these are filled with the famous Bordeaux wines made only by the monks of this cloister. At intervals these bottles are turned. Then after a long time the bottles are brought down to an open space in the center of the grotto, where the dregs are separated from the wine and the bottles filled with a mixture of brandy, sugar, etc. Nowhere else is this wine made.

Coming out of the grotto we were greeted by a burst of corks from some bottles. We were about to be served with wine from the grotto!

A long drive back to Bordeaux and a reception at the American Nurses Home was next on the programme.

The drive through the country just before twilight in the coolness of the evening was delightful. The peasants came out to greet us. In each yard were piles and piles of fagots. Geese walked boldly down the lanes and sycamore trees, with their tops cut off, formed many a pretty arbor.

The driveway to the Nurses Home is a roadway with a high stone wall on either side. We got out of the buses and walked through the gateway. There stood all of the nurses in glad array, waiting for our arrival. Inside the reception hall we went, the nurses parading in single file after us. How good it seemed to see the American flag above the doorways! This we invariably found wherever the Delegation went.

Then the Nurses sang for us the Star Spangled Banner in French, followed by the Marseillaise, after which we went out into the garden for tea. Again came the delicious French pastries, hot chocolate, lemonade and tea. Then to our delight, who should come along but the American Vice-Consul at Bordeaux, who is from Washington, D. C., and who wanted to meet the Baltimore girls. He said that it was quite a treat to meet lots of honest-to-goodness American girls—and you may be sure that we could return the compliment to fit the occasion. After he had had tea with us and walked over to the clinic and back, he was perfectly convinced that our Baltimore and Ohio is the Best and Only railroad in America. More than that, he promised to write to his home folks and ask them to ride on our line at every opportunity. How is that for advertising?

Before leaving the hospital the nurses sang hymns for us, all in French and quite beautiful. This was the nearest thing to church service we got to on Sunday.

The Good Will Delegates Reach the Devastated Regions—VIII

THE last lap of the journey through Southern France began on the morning of Monday, May 8, when we left Bordeaux for a five-hour ride to Tours. We lunched on the train and I vowed that morning that never would I grumble about having to walk through six or eight coaches to get to the diner. Today we walked through the narrow aisles of eleven coaches, most of which were of the third class. We stepped over baskets of vegetables, boxes of most everything—rabbits, chickens, dirty children and guinea pigs; there were mothers with half-dressed babies and many people sitting with their feet out in the aisles. It was certainly a conglomeration. Then, by the time we reached the dining car our appetites were nearly gone; one look into the kitchen of a French diner will accomplish this for you. However, I shall speak more of this feature later when I tell you the story of a visit to the French railway station. Suffice it to say that we closed our eyes until we sat down to the tables, for, after all, the food is appetizingly arranged and is well served. Besides, there are wines to be had, which, for some peculiar reason, our own Mr. Baugh never serves as an additional attraction on his menus.

Arriving in Tours we were met by a reception committee, among the members of which were several honest-to-goodness Americans. Two of these, one a representative of the International Harvester Company, the other a former Southern Pacific Railway man, were particularly nice to the Baltimore and Ohio group. The delegates

Here are seen some of the buildings of the American Committee. 3. Left to right: Mrs. Conway, of Baltimore, Miss Nina Spengler, and two French officers, looking out of the windows of the Kronprinz's observatory, near Montfaucon. 4. Miss Lauer and Miss Spengler pose for a photograph with the Carcassonne washerwomen. 5. Children who came to greet the delegates in the gardens of Lafontaine, Nimes. 6. Baltimore girls have lunch on the street before a French cafe; left to right are Misses Stevens, Spengler, Quarles and Lauer, and Mr. R. D. Hinds, of the Associated Press, who did much to make the journey pleasant for the Baltimore and Ohio girls. 7. Ruins of an old cathedral at Montfaucon. 8. had a good part of the afternoon and all of the evening to spend as they desired, so each celebrated according to her ideas of a good time. Mr. International Harvester and Mr. Southern Pacific invited us for a visit to some of the old chateaux for which the country around Tours is famous.

In the afternoon we went to a reception by the mayor at the hotel de ville. The mayor is an interesting man, who assured us that when we visited other cities we were visiting France, but that when we visited Tours we were visiting at home, for this was the home of many of our soldiers and officers during the World War. He wanted us to remember this and he hoped that we'd all be homesick for Tours after we had left the city.

After the reception Mr. International Harvester came for one group of us and Mr. Southern Pacific came for another. Nina and Magdalene went with some of the other girls with Mr. S. P., and Mrs. Blair, of Baltimore; Miss Thompson, of Indianapolis; Miss Stephenson, one of our chaperones from New York, and I were the guests of Mr. International Harvester.

We drove over the bridge that crosses the Loire River, and on to the Country Club, beyond the soldiers' headquarters. As we passed along the beautiful highway we noticed a lovely cloud that had formed on the western horizon—a huge pile of snowy layers, tipped with scallops of gold. Dark and gray at first, it grew lighter and lighter, then almost white against the background of the sunset which tipped its edges in gold. Suddenly there came a flash of lightning from its center, giving the cloud the appearance of a magnificent cave, electrically lighted. As we went on the formation grew even more beautiful, and when we turned the car in the opposite direction we looked back again and again to see the lightning flash. It was the loveliest cloud I have ever seen.

On we went, through the city's main street, passing into the green open country, where on our right we gazed upon a handsome chateau; and it is necessary to see a chateau like this to realize how beautiful it is.

Soon we came into a little village of narrow streets and stone houses of one story each. A little church was the largest building in the whole village and that was not large. We turned to the left and found at the end of the block the little River Cher. Here on its green banks walked two young peasant folk, their arms about each other, making their way to a little rowboat at the water's edge. It was a lovely picture in the twilight, and as if to complete its beauty, there hung above the river the same lovely cloud—our cloud—the one we had wondered at a half hour before.

We left the twain in silence and drove back into the city for a wonderful dinner which began with lobster and ended with strawberries and cream. At eleven o'clock we got back to our Grand Hotel du Faisan, only to find the gates locked and the watchman gone to bed. We finally aroused him with our banging on the doors and bribed him to let us in.

In our rooms we found lovely bouquets of pink and white roses. This was one of the most delightful little hotels that we visited in southern France. The service was most satisfactory and the servants particularly courteous. Miss Webster and I had some dresses pressed, our shoes shined and a dress cleaned. When the chambermaid brought them back we asked for the amount of the bill.

"Oh, mademoiselle," she said sweetly, "it is nothing whatever; it is only a kindness for you." And she backed out quickly and closed the door. I ran after her, but she was not to be found. Later I rang for her and she came. I insisted on her taking a few francs and she finally accepted them.

On the morning of May 8 we arose in time to do a bit of shopping before eight o'clock. Tours has some lovely stores, specializing in linens, lingerie and gloves. With the delegation we visited various cathedrals, through which we were conducted by the abbe of St. Martin's Cathedral. St. Martin is the patron saint of the city of Tours, so you may know that the cathedral of that name is quite magnificent. At one o'clock we took the train to Paris.

Anne Morgan and John McCormack

Arriving in Paris we were greeted by Mrs. Dike, the president of the American Committee, and a number of the other officers of the Committee. We were particularly delighted when evening came to find at our own dinner table—whom do you think? None other than our own Anne Morgan, who had come across the Atlantic to be with us. She, as usual, was quite delightful, just as full of fun as if she had been sleeping for a week—and I don't believe that Anne Morgan ever sleeps. When she spied us she exclaimed at once:

"Oh, here are the girls who had that splendid send-off in New York! I think that was the most wonderful thing of its kind that I have ever seen. It was simply marvelous. You girls certainly ought to be proud to know that your company thinks so much of you." (And you may be sure that we are.)

In the evening we went to the Champs Elysees Theater to hear our old friend, John McCormack. Can you imagine—hearing him in Paris—in the midst of an audience that was half American, half French? Encore after encore he received. Shouts of "Bravo!" could be heard all over the theater, and oh, how gracefully John returned and sang, "Old Pal o' Mine," and the "Last Rose of Summer!" It was a treat indeed.

I don't know whether I mentioned anything about the taxis in France or not, but they are cheaper than travelling in our own trolley cars at home. Seven of us came home from the theater that evening in a taxi—about 20 minutes ride, and the bill amounted to the enormous sum of four francs 75 centimes, or about 33 cents for the seven of us. Of course, we didn't mind tipping the driver a franc.

By the time that we had written a few cards it was long after midnight. We must get to bed. Tomorrow was our own day; we would be free to spend it as we wished. It was our first whole day free.

The story of our shopping expedition in Paris will be told later. We spent a most delightful day and when at last we gathered together in the big dining room, there were many funny experiences to be heard.

After dinner there were the bags and portmanteaux to be packed and marked, letters to be written, hair to be washed, baths to be taken, diaries to be written, etc., for tomorrow we must begin our first trip into the lands that were laid waste by the enemy. Today ended our journey through the lovely lands of southern France; tomorrow would be different. Tomorrow would come the battlegrounds and the cemeteries; tomorrow we would see some of the work being done by the American Committee. Oh, what a thrill it is to feel that we have taken some small part in the upbuilding of the devastated area!

Three Pictures of France—IX

WHEN we leave Paris for the towns farther north, it is like leaving a home of luxury and taking up our abode in a hut. And this, indeed, is what the war did for northern France, the section now known as the Devastated Region. On our trip from Paris to Arras I learned many things, but the chief of these was to see France in three distinct pictures—one is France in all her picturesque loveliness before the ravages of war; a second, the sad France that was left after the passing of Death and Destruction; but the third and most magnificent, the picture that should be her pride—the France that has overcome her own sorrows and has risen above the ruins with a glorious fortitude that puts the average mortal to shame.

"I hold it true with him who sings

To one clear harp in divers tones

That men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things."

This, France has done. Where bad lands marked the places where burst thousands of bomb-shells, France now has her waving fields of grain. The darker spots of greenest wheat tell where the shells upturned the virgin, and consequently more fertile soil. Fields have been levelled off once more, even at the expense of lives, for still are France's men dying for the sake of their country; unexploded bombs slumber until they are overturned by plowshare and spade.

LESSONS IN FRENCH CUSTOMS

1. Dinner at the Lion Rouge, Soissons, in the new dining hall, opened for the first time by the Good Will Delegation. 2. Not a saint with a halo, but "Aunt Mary" in French headdress. 3. Washing clothes at the river shore. 4. A certain Marquis at Marseilles, about to kiss Miss Spengler's hand in farewell. Miss Lauer and Miss Stevens look on in amusement—their turn next. 5. With French peasant girls at the perfume factories at Grasse. 6. Descending the hill from the Notre Dame de la Garde, which overlooks the harbor at Marseilles

On the edges of mine craters we see the tufts of green grass which the cattle now munch peacefully. Deep in the deserted shell hole blossom the daisy and the buttercup (or button of gold—bouton d'or). Out yonder, where clouds of smoke and gas hovered over the fields, bend the peasant women, planting their gardens, and all along the roadside are the bunches of beautiful yellow gorse. Poppies grow here and there, their lovely chalices reminding us of the blood that once flowed where they stand on the borders of the old trenches. Caissons that once formed the entrances to dugouts are now transformed into roofs for the houses which the survivors of the war have builded for themselves. And always at the windows are the daintily embroidered curtains. Here also are flowers growing around these humble makeshift houses and blossoming in the dainty windows. Even churches are made of these relics of the war-caissons and bits of sheet iron—and we find them bravely standing beside the ruins of the magnificent cathedrals, whose place in the lives of the French people these humble little buildings must now occupy. It is sad, but wonderful.

Modern structures of brick are beginning to take the places of the old chateaus and though the architecture is far from lovely as compared with the buildings that once stood here, is it not marvelous that these people have rebuilt their houses, stores, and churches in towns where hardly a home was left untouched? The most remarkable part of this third picture is that of a little girl making mud pies on the British front lines. Human beings all have their burdens to bear, and each one, perhaps, thinks his own burden the heaviest of all. But when we look upon the work of the brave people of France, how insignificant we are, and how little are our own troubles! If France can build a flour mill before the war, to be destroyed; rebuild it to be burned to the ground, then rebuild it once more, can we not forget our own little worries?

To-day's experience brought to me these pictures, real pictures of things that have actually happened. Twenty miles from Paris at Senlis, we caught a glimpse of the first ravages of the war. Here was the point nearest Paris touched by the Germans; had the enemy been able to hold out for a few days longer, Paris would have been taken. From there on to Arras the ruins of war grew more and more noticeable. All along the roadsides were the great piles of rusty barbed wire. New plows are turning up the soil for agriculture. Here and there the little British and French cemeteries dot the landscape. The French people love their trees. On each side of the highways for miles and miles we find the double rows of trees. How terrible it was to them to have these destroyed, not only by the gas fumes that also killed everything else in their path, but in a most cruel way—many of the trees that they could not otherwise destroy were peeled of their bark or had great pieces hacked from their sides. It is interesting to see that a few of the trees that were gassed and supposedly dead are putting out fresh leaves, just as the people are taking a new hold on life despite their losses.

At Peronne where we stopped for luncheon, there is what once was an old chateau, now in ruins. Its lower part is being used as a boulangerie (bakery). Yes, to people who love their chateaus and beautiful houses, what a sacrifice this must be! But they are making the best of everything, and since the survivors of the war must live, there must be bread with which to feed them.

Even a greater blow to the French than ruined chateaus must have been the destruction of that marvelous Cathedral at Albert, now known as the Cathedral of-the Leaning Virgin. The walls that we saw still standing, the lovely mosaic floors, the broken altars, and the statues once so sacred to those who worshipped there, now lying here and there, face downward. Oh, what pictures of horror they recall! At the top of the Cathedral once stood a magnificent statue of the Virgin Mary. The Germans shot it again and again before they were able to make it topple over. Then, for a long time it leaned over at an angle of more than 45 degrees, and finally was shot down altogether. When this happened a superstition said the war would be nearly over. And it so happened. These superstitions are strange things about the French that wars cannot destroy. More than this, in living among the people, we almost begin to believe them ourselves.

As we began to leave the area of poisoned barbed wire and horses' bones, we caught sight of a pile of German helmets, a great heap of them by the side of the road. Soon came houses, some old, some in ruins, many rebuilt. A goose waddled out in front of our bus and "quonk-quonked!" This was Arras, one of the most ravaged towns that has practically come up from the ashes again and again, since its beginning in 54 B. C. Once the richest city in Northern France, but after fifteen sieges by Attila's Huns, Vandals, Normans, and the French Revolution, the "City of a Hundred Spires" was thrown into a heap of destruction. But the spirit of French towns lives above its ruins, and Arras came again into its own in the 18th century only to be cut off from communication with the outside world and to become the center of terrible battles for four dreary years, leaving it a city of desolation.

We were given a touching little story of the rise and fall of this city—a beautiful, sad description of what it meant to its people, but nothing to me is greater than this sentence which I find therein:

"It is our firm will to rise again."

This is the spirit of Arras—and the spirit of France.

At the Hotels—X

AT the hotels they always set before us the best that is to be had.

Last night we had the following menu: Soup, brain croquettes, roast beef with carrots, lettuce salad, apple sauce.

They do not serve vegetables with many meals, but there is always enough meat. The pastries are most delicious. The bread has very hard crusts, and usually there is no butter served with dinner. In the devastated section we do not have the delicious croissants which we learned to love in Southern France; our breakfast consists of hot coffee and these hard rolls with butter.

Sometimes we are able to get some kind of confiture or jam. I suppose they think that we are pigs to want anything else, and the funny thing about it is that our over-filled American stomachs are getting quite accustomed to the French breakfast.

The hotel rooms are very pretty. The walls are usually covered with a striped paper with dainty flower borders. Many times the long muslin curtains exactly match the paper, both in color and design. I suppose these must be sold together. There is always a clock on the mantle, no matter whether it runs or not, and on several occasions we have found vases of lovely roses on our tables.

In this section we find no baths connected with the rooms, although it is always possible to locate a tub somewhere in the house. We often have a jolly hunt for the bath tub, then someone will sing out: "Oh, girls, come see the funny animal!" And we all run to take a look at the tub and make arrangements for our baths.

The First Graves Decorated

Our reception at Arras was most lovely and impressive. The old Hotel de Ville, or town hall, which also had been destroyed after the many, many years which had been spent in its construction, was the scene of our meeting.

The mayor, in his red, white and blue sash, received us with an address of welcome, a long one in which he gave pages of historical data. Then came a thrill of pride for us Baltimoreans when our Mrs. Blair responded so delightfully to the mayor's address. It was a beautiful little speech that she made, and the only one made in French by any of our party.

Then came bouquets of roses and pansies (pensees—thoughts), the latter being the adopted flower of the town; refreshments that quite compensated for the lack of a substantial American breakfast. The question came up as to what we should do with our bouquets. Finally we asked Captain William Hart, who had fought with a Canadian regiment, and who was one of our guides, if he knew of a nearby cemetery where we could leave them. He said that he would take us to one.

Leaving Arras we passed by the milk station that the American Committee has established for the babies of the town and then the ruins of another lovely cathedral, once the pride of Arras.

The sun hid itself behind the clouds and the rain began to fall. Already the ground was covered with several inches of mud from previous rains. We saw Captain Hart's hat go off as he stepped out of the bus and pointed to a cemetery beside the road not far from Vimy Ridge.

"There lie my buddies," was all he said, and we knew that this was the cemetery where we were to leave our flowers. We placed them on as many graves as we could, then left a few before the monument which had been erected to all of those who had fallen. Solemnly we tramped through the mud back to the carriages.

Fragments of the War

At Vimy Ridge there was only one house left with a top on it when the war was over. Here were the gun emplacements and trenches. The captain told us of a woman and four children who still live in a tiny

BACK IN THE GOOD OLD U. S. A.—JUNE 2

The folks at our New York Terminals welcomed the Good Will girls on their arrival home. Marine Supervisor E. A. English and party, on the Tug George M. Shriver, met their steamship, the Paris, at Quarantine, talking with them there from boat to boat. Former General Manager R. N. Begien, returning from a brief European holiday, was with the girls on the promenade deck. The Shriver then pointed up the bay, arriving at the French Line pier in time to get Picture No. 2, showing the girls coming down the gang plank. Our steamship representative, J. G. Horton, had arranged for a preliminary declaration of their baggage on the Paris, enabling them to leave the pier quickly and enter Mr. English's car, Picture No. 1, in which they were driven to Asbury Park, New Jersey's famous seashore resort, for dinner, whence they returned to New York later in the evening. No. 3. The Tug George M. Shriver. No. 4. E. A. English, marine supervisor. No. 5. Captain John H. Burtis, of the Shriver, and crew. No. 6. The Paris at Quarantine, with Health Board and Mail Boats alongside dugout about half the size of the car in which we were riding; he told us many beautiful and impressive stories which we shall always remember. Also he drew for me the little cartoon which you see here.

Everywhere there were shell holes, barbed wire entanglements and mine craters, sleeping bombs and all kinds of debris from the war. Miles of uncultivated land, awaiting the strength of the tractor to bring it back into its usefulness. Here were more caisson houses—with lace curtains at their windows. Then there are fields that already have been reclaimed and now are covered with waving grain.

The town of Lens, which we passed on the way to Lille, is built of two things—the debris that remained after the war and the spirit of the French people. Bricks are being manufactured, it is true, but everybody cannot afford bricks. Sometimes there are houses that are half-finished; they remain in this condition until their owners can afford to buy enough material to complete them. Some may be finished in a few weeks, others are being built so slowly that it is hard to tell whether it will be a matter of months or of years before they are finished.

Where there are houses of wood, their owners, not being able to paint them all over, do not follow the custom of some Americans by painting the front and leaving the rest; rather than that they paint the roof, bringing strips of paint down over the window frames or door frames, and over the chimney. These French must be artistic. This decoration, together with the hand embroidered curtains at the windows and the little flower beds in the tiny front yards, proclaims to all passers-by that they are natural landscape architects. Everything has its place, and stays in it.

The American Committee at Work—XI

Today was our first day to visit a center of the work of the American Committee. This was at Anizy. We had quite an exciting time getting to the place. I sat on the front seat of the bus between the chauffeur and the movie man. The latter carried a map of the country as a guide, which he carefully explained to the former as we went along. But somewhere in the network of crossroads a controversy arose between these two heads who were guiding us. The chauffeur spat out words which I, in my imagination, supposed to be "cuss words;" the movie man shook the map under the chauffeur's nose and said a great deal more, both talking at the same time. It was quite funny for the onlooker, but particularly for poor me who sat between them. The captain and the chauffeur of the second car ran ahead to read the sign-board, one of which said that it was impracticable to enter a certain road. The driver, however, decided to the contrary. We entered the road only to discover a bridge under construction and the impossibility of crossing the stream. After quite a discussion between our chauffeur and the bridge workman, the latter condescended to remove his horse and cart so as to enable the bus to turn around. After this there were several minor arguments, but we finally managed to get to the little town of Anizy.

Here we were met by Miss Morgan herself and the second vice president of the C. A. R. D., Miss Hahn. It was a lovely afternoon that we spent with them. After tea we went to look over some of the work of the nurses, chauffeurs, gardeners and librarians. It is a great and wonderful work, but the most surprising thing is the fact that they do so much with so little working material.

After the war there was no community left whatever for the people in the devastated regions; there was no home life, no interests. The people eked out a scanty existence; their children were—and many still are—undernourished; they had lost their homes, their furniture and their relatives, but worst of all, their spirit had been crushed. They sometimes had food to eat, oftentimes nothing; if they got bread they considered themselves fortunate. Then came the Comité Américain pour les Régions Dévastées with its help from America; then came Anne Morgan, under whose magnificent spirit no human being could be depressed. Let it not be forgotten that here is the guiding hand of the Delegation. Always so full of pep and fun, eager for anything that teams of work in behalf of the unfortunate, Anne Morgan stands as the impersonation of our journey. Our meeting with her in New York and in such short acquaintance to have her remember so many of our names and peculiarities was one of the first things that made her remarkable in our sight. Since meeting her in Paris we like her the more. Besides, she must be possessed of fine executive abilities, as well as of other qualities, for she has passed the acid test—those who work for her and with her seem fairly to worship her.

The work accomplished by the Committee is simply remarkable. There are schools where the children are taught; there are manual training classes, cooking schools, gardens, hospitals, milk stations and libraries. Almost everything that a community demands is provided, and the community looks to the Committee as its benefactor. It has brought back the family life to those who live in barracks; it provides for the only education which the children have; it teaches the mothers how to care for their babies and the girls to take care of their homes and their younger brothers and sisters. There is entertainment for all; the foyer is the community center, where father may read, mother may sew, little brother may go to school, where all the family may receive medical attention, and where big sister may entertain her beau. It has opened up a new life for these grateful people; it means everything to them—it is this interest that has revived their broken spirits.

Nor do they stand by and let the Committee do all of the work—they all do their share to help; they contribute whenever they can possibly afford it, they cooperate in every way, and do everything that they can to show their appreciation, for they are the most grateful people imaginable. At Soissons we found the same conditions of the community center, save that the work is being carried on on a larger scale than at Anizy. In fact there are about 20 towns and villages in this section that are now being looked after by the C. A. R. D. Doctors, nurses, chauffeurs, gardeners, schoolteachers and librarians—these are the missionaries of the Committee. These girls who have given their time—and in many cases, their lives—to work in the devastated sections are doing a noble work; one that will live long after the American Committee has withdrawn.

At Lille we lunched in a little hotel with its courtyard in the center, the building surrounding it. At the door, according to custom, we were met by the host. The waiters were in evening clothes. Appearances must be kept up. We were interested to see a shell hole in the wall and passing through the mirror of one of the reception rooms. The sun came out and we sat in the windows of the hotel in order to get warm, for even after dinner we were still chilled from the cold, damp morning ride.

Captain Baptiste, another guide of the party and nicknamed "John the Baptist," offered to take us shopping. "Oh yes, Mademoiselles, but I know where to buy laces; I buy all of my wife's petticoats." And so, after following him about town for an hour, we finally got warm from exertion, for we had to fly to keep up with him despite the fact that he used a cane.

We have had only cold, dreary, rainy days since we left Paris and while we were a bit uncomfortable because of the lack of heat, we managed to get along fairly well.

In Arras we had a wood fire in the dining room. Around this we all gathered after dinner. The captain told stories of the war; some of us read, some wrote in our diaries, but most of us wrote letters home. And I fancy that most of those letters contained a hint or two concerning the New France that will serve to open the eyes of some of those old folks who said such things as: "I reckon the U. S. has done enough for France." I say frankly that these people who make such remarks should be driven through the devastated section of France. Thus only will they learn to realize the spirit of this new country. At least I shall have a few things to tell them when I return.

Getting back to the subject of hotels, we can't say too much for what these people did to make our visit pleasant, and what if we did have no heated rooms on the cold damp nights? Think of our boys and what they suffered in this country without a thought of shelter such as we have. And let us remember also that we are fortunate in getting any kind of hotel service in a country that has been laid in waste. This is the best that they can offer us.

Yesterday morning while waiting for some of the members of the party to purchase flowers for the cemetery, two of our girls got out of their bus and walked down the street under an umbrella. An old French woman came to the door of her poverty stricken hut and begged the American mademoiselles to come in out of the rain and to share such hospitality as she had to offer. They must sit by her fire and warm themselves. She had only coffee to offer them, but they should have it. Nothing was too good for them. The girls could not resist the plea of this grateful old creature and so they entered.

Inside, all was neat and clean. Nobody was left of her family but one idiot son. Her men's names were on the list: "Mort pour France." Her only daughter, a lovely girl of sixteen, whose photograph she showed us, had been struck by a falling ladder and killed. Only this idiot son was left—a horrible looking specimen with wild eyes and a drooping jaw, but—as she explained, she was his mother and must care for him; he was her all, and although he did not understand, she must cling to him.

How do you suppose that this woman could smile? But she could. It is such bravery that is rebuilding France.

"And are there no homes further south where you may live in more comfort?" asked the girls.

"Ah, mademoiselles, you forget. This is my own country; this is where my home has always been. In a house where this one now stands, my children were born. No, mademoiselles, I cannot leave my country that is so dear to me."

The girls made up a little sum of money between them and offered it to her in the best possible grace they could command. No, she would not accept it, even in the name of our boys who had fought with those of France. The Americans had saved her country, she could accept no more from them.

A Reception and a Dugout

After lunch at Lille we were invited to the town hall, where we were given a lovely little reception by the editor in chief of the largest newspaper of the town, M. Emile Frere, who made a delightful address of welcome. Miss Ketchum, a school-teacher from Indianapolis, gave a fine reply. After this our photograph was taken for the newspaper and we had a pleasant time conversing with some of those who had come to welcome us. Bouquets of lilacs and roses were presented to each of us; champagne bottles were opened and we were invited to participate. Several of us asked for the champagne bottle corks for souvenirs.

"Oh, yes, please take as many as you like. But this is a funny souvenir, Mademoiselles."

"For our friends in the dry United States. We shall let them smell the corks and they will be jealous," we explained.

"Ah, yes," they laughed "dry—sec—sec." And they laughed again. It was a big joke for them.

Then M. Emile Frere presented us with a fine little book of stories which he had written while he was a war prisoner. There was a rush for his autograph in these books, and then it was time to go.

Several of the girls had been speaking with some of the French students, young men who presented a rather pretty picture in their tam-o-shanter hats. They invited us to see their home, a student's club, quite a new thing in this section of the country. So we stole a few minutes from our trip and all went to visit the student's club, which we found to be much like our fraternity houses at our own colleges. There was the mess hall, the foyer, the assembly room, etc., with artistic statues here and there. In the hallway was another list, a long one, "Mort pour France."

On our way home from Lille, that is, on our way back to Arras, for any place where we spend the night is called home—we drew up before a sort of trench which led from the roadside to a hole in the ground. Yes, this was a dugout, capable of holding two thousand men. Could it be possible? The captain went to find out if we could enter. He came back with any number of candles. We each took one, and, led by a little girl and her brother, entered the cave. Soon we became a silent procession, going down the slippery clay steps, one behind the other, much in the same manner I imagine, as did our soldiers in their own dugouts. Dark, damp and gruesome it seemed, full of horrible imaginary things. At last we reached the inside where we tramped around the circular cave. Oh, what horrid places for people to sleep, eat and live!

Old springs of chicken wire showed us where the sleeping quarters were, and the charred stick and bits of iron marked the kitchen.

This dugout was once a big stone quarry, enlarged by the Boches. It was good to get out into the lovely sunshine again.

There were many interesting sights to be seen on that trip, but we must pass on, for these we shall see in other places. However, there is one thing worthy of special mention—a camouflaged tree, which takes the place of a real tree. The original was re-placed by the Germans, who used the camouflage as a look-out post.

Back to our little Hotel d'Universe at Arras, dinner, a little time to write and then to fall asleep until tomorrow.

More Work of The Committee

Rain and cold weather to greet us and to accompany us on our journey to Soissons, which was to be our headquarters from May 12 to May 15. In a cold, driving rain we drove through lands unreclaimed and ruined villages to St. Quentin for lunch.

Such weather but gave us a faint idea of what our soldiers endured. Nobody grumbled, although teeth were chattering and feet were growing numb, they all made the best of it. Captain Hart walked along on the steps of the car, telling many interesting stories, the water dropping down the back of his neck; the girls put up their umbrellas on the rainy side of the car and one of the chauffeurs had two fingers nearly frozen. It was a good test of character and disposition. It proved beyond a doubt that each girl understood, as we drove through piles of barbed wire with shell holes on each side, just what the other was thinking. We turned off our way to go to Bony, the first American Cemetery that we saw. The keeper of the cemetery was an American, from Richmond. He showed us his list of names of those lying there. Eagerly we scanned it to see if by chance some person of our acquaintance might be buried there. We found none, but as we stood there looking across those muddy graves, each one seemed a brother to us—a very dear brother who had sacrificed his all, that persons like those who now were standing beside them might enjoy the blessings of hard earned freedom.

A whole row of those little wooden crosses had the following inscription on them; "Unknown American Soldier."

Quietly we said farewell to the cemetery; silently each took his or her place in the bus. The sun came out for a few minutes, then disappeared. Again came the rain, cold and penetrating. Yes, this was a touch of the weather of the war. But we had a shelter over our heads, and were going to hotels instead of damp, dingy dugouts. There is quite a difference.

At St. Quentin, as at all of these towns, there is much building and many attempts at building. Houses crumbling under the wreckage are being cleared away, and such of the debris as can be used forms a part of the new structure. But this does not mean much, for there are few who are able to buy other building material.

The towns are now beginning to take over their own schools and libraries and hospitals. French girls are taking the places of Americans, and the organization is exactly as it should be. "No Man's Land" is being transformed into fields of grain; scientific gardening is being introduced; municipal buildings are being restored and towns are springing up where they were torn down by the Huns. France has borrowed many thousands of francs for her construction work and the C. A. R. D. is helping her people get back on their feet, so that they may work and pay back

"There are adjuncts to safety that every trainmaster, road foreman, dispatcher, stationmaster and supervisor would do well to observe," stated Mr. Kelly. "As these officials go along the road they should ever think of this debt, or at least pay the interest on it for the next few years. We saw rows and rows of mothers with their babies at the dispensaries, waiting for treatment for the babies. The children from infancy are being taught by the Committee to take care of their teeth and their bodies. Shower baths and tooth brushes are provided at most of the centers. We saw whole families gathered at the libraries on Sunday afternoons. The librarians are patient and capable girls, who never seem to tire of lending their assistance.

Sunday, May 13, was the celebration of Jeanne d'Arc. There were special services in the churches which we were all invited to attend. High Mass was said at the Cathedral at Soissons, and it was here that most of us went. The service was quite impressive. The cathedral, although battle marked, and cold and damp within, is decidedly grand. An elaborate ceremony marked the occasion. A statue of the Maid of Orleans stood before the altar and was surrounded by flowers and palms. Boys of all ages had their places along the sides of the cathedral. Most of them were dressed in white suits with red stockings, belts, ties and hats. About twelve of these were regular choir boys, in the red and white robes. Flowers were abundant and the whole mass was sung by these well trained voices. A military escort was provided for the priests, and the strange rat-a-tat-a-rat-a-tat of fifes and drums brought back thoughts of the days when battles were being fought.

It was necessary for our party to split when we went to the hotels; some went to the Lion Rouge (Red Lion), others to the Croix d'Or (Golden Cross). There are always to be found these delightful names. Even the tiniest shops have alluring titles over their doorways. A shoemaker's shop carried the sign: "The House of the Golden Slipper."

The Lion Rouge had just been rebuilt after the war, but the Croix d'Or was just as the ravages of war had left it.

We visited the city hospital, a marvel of surgical art to these people, but sadly needing many of the things which we would deem necessary. The French ideas of sanitation need the work of missionaries, and teaching these people ideas of sanitation has become a part of the job of the Committee.

Beds crowded closely together, small spaces in which to work, blood spattered clothing of physicians and attendants, and carelessness in caring for food of the patients are a few of the necessary things, it seems, in a French hospital.

Great loaves of bread and foods left uncovered were seen on the floor of the hospital. The careless way in which bread is handled is enough to horrify the average American. The bread at the bakeries often hangs out of doors. The peasants buy the loaves and carry them home in their hands or under their arms, without a sign of a wrapping. At home the loaves may be piled in a corner on the floor until needed. Yes, France needs its missionaries.

The toilets are abominable, and baths are few. Even in the larger cities the sanitation is none too good. A settlement of factory houses near Soissons has a common court yard, and in this a place where garbage and toilet refuse are thrown. It must be Providence alone that saves this nation from disease.

The Committee has a great work to do. In some respects the country people are not far removed from the primitiveness of the savage. And yet, it would surprise you, perhaps, to know how quickly these people are adopting the American ideas. Many of the women, taught by the Committee, no longer take their laundry to public wash houses or to the streams, but do it in tubs in their own homes. Quickly they learn to care for their babies properly, to nourish them and to give them proper clothing.

At Blerancourt the girls of the neighborhood had prepared a delicious luncheon for us, under the supervision of the domestic science instructor at the Center. These same girls are learning to sew and care for their houses, and although many of them still live with their parents in one-room barracks or caisson houses, they all have hopes of having a real house some day. Each girl, before she leaves the school, makes her own trousseau.

At Vic sur Aisne, we got a good idea of the gratefulness of the French women to the Americans who have worked among them. Miss Stephenson, who is one of our leaders, and who was stationed here during the war, was met at the committee center by probably a dozen French women whom she used to know. They showered her with magnificent bouquets—and kisses. Some of them had walked as far as eight miles, carrying their babies in their arms, just to see "Mademoiselle who had been most kind to them." Their affection was touching. Once these people love you, you are loved forever.

At Blerancourt the children came out and sang the Star Spangled Banner, the Marseillaise and the Battle Hymn of the Republic for us—all in French. The mayor was our host at luncheon and we had a delightful time. On the way to Coucy le Chateau we stopped at a center where we visited the school room. Here a little boy read a beautiful composition which he had written with the aid of his teacher, and presented to Mrs. Chambers, the gold star mother of our party, a handsome bouquet of peonies.

Mrs. Chambers, in replying, said the noblest, most lovely thing that I have heard in France.

"I thank you for these beautiful flowers," she said, "and when I look upon the work that the American Committee is doing to help here, I feel that nothing we ourselves can do will be too much for France. With this appreciation of your wonderful people, I realize now that I have not given you my son in vain."

At Coucy le Chateau we visited the gun emplacement of one of the "Big Berthas." Here we gathered armfuls of the lovely broom that fills this section with beauty. At the C. A. R. D. center here we had tea, a good rest and a tour of the citadel, which greatly resembles Carcassonne. Then came a ride home in the twilight, dinner and rest—after one of our most glorious days.

Oh, I am so glad that we came to France. We see things that we never saw before, we think thoughts that never before entered our minds; we dream dreams that will be with us to the end of time. May the Good Father who watches over these people in France as over our own people at home—who gives these people the same sun, moon and stars that He gives us—guard and keep this wonderful spirit in the hearts of the people of France to the end that these two nations may ever live as brother and brother.

keep a watchful eye on the deportment of station and train employees. They should note the condition of the equipment, and whether passenger trains are hauling too many or too few cars. There should be notice taken whether or not trains are dispatched from terminals promptly and whether running time is observed; whether there are unnecessary delays; whether the cars for passengers are properly ventilated. They should watch carefully the handling of mail and express packages at stations, for persons may be injured unless safety is followed here also.

"Finally, our highway grade crossings should receive some attention. There are hundreds of thoughtless persons killed and maimed at these crossings yearly because drivers of cars pay little or no attention to warnings.

"If we are rowing a boat, we can drop our oars and rest at intervals and feel assured that our lives are safe. The same cannot be said of safety for the man working around a railroad. Dangers are ever present, and the individual must be constantly on his guard; constantly pulling on the oar. A moment's thoughtlessness may mean a life time of regret."

Cincinnati Terminal Employees Hold Third Annual Picnic

By JOSEPH BEEL

THE third annual picnic of the Cincinnati Terminal employees was held on May 26, when 4583 employees, their friends and families gathered at Cincinnati's famous recreation center, Chester Park. The committee in charge consisted of J. Beel, chairman, J. J. O'Donnell, W. J. Maloney and W. C. Fisher. The success of the outing was largely due to the untiring efforts of these gentlemen in arranging the details of the program.

There was a popularity contest and an athletic program, which were followed by a successful euchre, given under the auspices of the Veterans Association and the Ladies Auxiliary.

A primary election was held, prior to the outing, and the employees selected by ballot four male and four female employees as candidates to compete in the popularity contest. This election resulted in favor of Misses Mary Morton, Lucille Baumgartner, Lorain McNally and Charlotte Lauther; Messrs. Joe Auberger, C. H. Everly, H. E. Swepston and F. A. Pendergast, who competed for the prizes—a diamond ring and a gold watch.

Through the kindness of the management of Chester Park, arrangements were made to have tickets presented for each individual candidate, these tickets to serve as admission to the outing; the male and female candidates receiving the largest number of votes, by ticket, to be awarded the prizes.

Considerable enthusiasm was manifested in the election, which resulted in the election of Miss Mary Morton, clerk, Car Foreman's Office, Ivorydale, and Joseph Auberger, clerk, Assistant Division Engineer's Office. The final results of the ballot were as follows: Miss Mary Morton, 1001, Miss Lorain McNally 699, Miss Lucille Baumgartner 544, Miss Charlotte Lauther 282, Joseph Auberger 746, H. E. Swepston 397, C. H. Everly 265, F. A. Pendergast 649.

The second important feature of the day was the athletic program, which developed the fact that there are many athletes in Cincinnati Terminal. Various amateur records were broken in competition for prizes.

Among the humorous features which followed were the following: Ladies' egg

THEY HAD A GOOD TIME AT CHESTER PARK !

1. The aeroplane. 2. "The most popular man," Joseph Auberger. 3. The Committee; Messrs. Joseph Beel, W. Fisher and J. J. O'Donnell.
4. Winners of the baby contest. 5. The most popular young lady, Miss Mary Morton. 6. Left: youngest Veteran, J. J. O'Donnell. Right: oldest Veteran, James Hughes. 7. Oldest couple on the grounds, Mr. and Mrs. W. Silver. 8. W. J. Maloney buys a ticket for the "Caterpillar" rolling contest, won by Mrs. McKenzie; ladies' running race, Miss Hughes; girls' running race, Dorothy Bergman; Misses running race, Miss Wehage; peanut rolling contest, Miss Wehage; boys' running race, Paul King and Russell McShane; boys' sack race, Paul King; boys' three-legged race, Paul King and E. Weber; fat men's running race, Hon. W. C. Fisher; men's running race, Joseph Costa; hop, step and jump, running and standing start, Costa and McKenzie; tug of war, McKenzie and Collins; fat men's hop race, R. B. Fitzpatrick; ladies' marksmanship, Mrs. H. Volk; gentlemen's marksmanship, W. J. Maloney; prize waltz, Miss Clara Schulte and W. J. Maloney; baby beauty contest, Ethel Volk; two and one-half year old daughter of Crew Dispatcher H. Volk.

"Bill" Fisher had the biggest family. Jim Hughes was the oldest man, longest in service and longest in continuous service. Mr. and Mrs. W. Silver were the oldest couple. Mrs. Silver the oldest lady. J. J. O'Donnell was the youngest veteran, J. H. Meyers the tallest and heaviest man, J. J. O'Donnell the baldest man. The "wee tots" enjoyed a penny scramble.

Among the officers and employees of connecting divisions who attended were: General Claim Agent and Mrs. E. L. Williams. District Freight Agent and Mrs. C. D. Douglas, Road Foreman and Mrs. W. T. Darling, Trainmaster and Mrs. R. B. Fitzpatrick, and Superintendent of Terminals and Mrs. J. H. Meyers. They brought their families and friends, and came early and stayed late.

Observations from the Sea Plane and Other Points of View

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Meyers, with their daughters Helen and Margaret, and son Jack, enjoyed the day. Sorry little Jack was not entered in the baby beauty contest.

Frank Nock, major domo, with a brand new uniform and head piece, pleased the ladies.

Ed. Schmalz counted the tickets for Miss Lauther. You know the rest.

Bob Jennings counted tickets for Joe Auberger. No wonder he won.

Modesty—Miss McNally withdrew when half the count was made, so that Mary Morton could win. "Mac", that's real sweet of you. Be a candidate again next year. We're all for you.

Frank Ruwe, waited until late at night at the pony track. He wanted to place his bet. Finally he wagered that "Bybee" was the name of a race horse. Shame on you, Frank.

Misses Weber, Goetz, Schulte, Herron, McNally, and Mrs. Schatz were exhausted, trying to catch one of the ponies on the "Merry-go-round."

Bessie Hitch and her mother brought their own sandwiches. Can't fool Bessie; she knows.

W. W. Bybee, E. Sands and E. J. McGinnis made arrangements with Colonel Martin, Chester Park, that after close of the summer season they will retire to old King Tut's Tomb.

J. J. O'Donnell had everything, including a headache, from parking on the Merry-go-round.

G. B. Farlow insisted on buying a doll, and had to be escorted from the Park by major domo.

T. J. Bowns, always a good sport, as usual with a new hat, parked in front of the Club House and gave the girls a treat. How do you do it, Tom?

Jim Flanagan came in by the back gate again, with the same old smile and a big stogie. Jim, the next time you come in that way, better buy some gold fish. If Eddie Schmalz had not used his influence, you would have been parked in the "calaboose."

Something wrong. Careful search of the park failed to locate C. E. Fish, terminal agent. Have since discovered that he was down and out, with the doctor. How about Cordie, Brice and a multitude of others from Smith Street Office?

C. H. Everly made a good start, but "Oh the finish." Better have Miss Orr or Morton give you lessons, or hire one of them for you campaign manager.

Lucille, it's not all your fault. Through Tommy's jealousy in not letting the boys vote for you, you lost out. Tommy will have to buy the ring now.

Miss Weber parked in front of the booth where "Kewpies" were being raffled, wanted to know if some one would blow a baloon for her. Some Doll!

Miss Lauther, all by herself, made a good showing. Sorry that show bets were not paid.

Miss Ellmore always enjoys the outing. Her presence is conspicuous by her absence.

W. J. Maloney has enrolled W. W. Bybee as one of his scholars at his new rifle range. That's what you need, Bill, pep and practice.

Joe, alias Alaric Auberger, and the Auberger family parked in the free Vaudeville building all day. Joe was rehearsing for his new drama.

News, Costa and McKenzie are our entries in the Olympic games, both ran either first or second in every contest they entered. Costa and his wife also captured second prize in the waltz contest.

Information. Ask Bill McGinley about the Caterpillar; Miss Weiss about the Thriller; Miss Weber about Hilarity Hall; Miss Goetz about King Tut; Miss Schulte about the Whip; Miss Herron about the Sea Plane; Miss Hitch about the Derby Racer; Miss McNally about the Gyroplane; Joe O'Donnell about the free eats and—? Bill Fisher about the Lake; Joe Becl about the ponies; Joe Auberger about the Vaudeville; Eddie Schmalz about the movies; Bob Jennings about the Jazzers; Major Domo about the miniature Railroad and C. W. Bliss about the free tickets.

Promises. Captain Baker, J. M. Burke, J. M. Shay, C. J. Cleary, and two others?

Those who wanted to come without the "Mrs.": A. F. Weissenberg and W. D. Nicholson. Better try some other time.

"Judge" Wm. T. Holmes, Sr., Dies Suddenly at His Home

EMPLOYEES in our Baltimore and Ohio Building are all familiar with the kind faced old gentleman who, until a few weeks ago, was in charge of the newspaper and magazine stand on the main floor of the building. This was William T. Holmes, a well known veteran of the Road, and well liked by his associates. On July 1 "the Judge," as his friends knew him died at his home, 714 N. Fulton Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Mr. Holmes was born on July 28, 1849. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on September 13, 1870, as a tinner, Mt. Clare Shops. He worked continuously from that time until February 19, 1920, when he was pensioned. But Mr. Holmes did not care for a life of idleness, so, when the opportunity presented itself, he secured a position as salesman for newspapers and magazines at the stand in the Building.

There he made many new acquaintances and renewed the old ones, so that when one day he was missed from his accustomed post and a new face took the place of his, everybody wanted to know what had become of "Judge" Holmes. It was then, in the latter part of June that he was taken ill, and on July 1 he died of cancer of the stomach.

Always in a good humor and ready for a joke, a valuable member of any Veteran's Committee to which he was appointed, and popular with his fellows, Mr. Holmes will be sadly missed.

He leaves a widow and two sons to mourn his death; to these we extend our sympathy.

The late William T. Holmes, Sr.

Veterans Hold Big Meeting at Parkersburg and Discuss Important Questions

ON June 20 and 21 representatives from the various chapters of the Veterans' Association met with the Veterans of Parkersburg in the splendid new high school of that city to discuss some important questions and to enjoy themselves in a general get-together meeting.

The address of welcome was made by City Solicitor James McCluer. He spoke of the city of Parkersburg and its advantages; of its location in the heart of one of West Virginia's most fertile valleys, and of the growth of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in this territory. He commended the "get-together" spirit of helpfulness among the Veterans and spoke heartily of the benefits that could and should be derived from such associations.

A committee on resolutions was appointed, with Grand President George W. Sturmer as chairman of the general meeting, and H. B. Fletcher, of Fairmont, W. Va., as the chairman of the committee. The other members of the committee were:

W. L. Allison, secretary; E. F. Augustine, Parkersburg; H. S. Howden, Cincinnati; D. H. Moriarity, Newark, Ohio; George Reed, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Frank Evans, Washington, Ind.; Charles Richards, Seymour, Ind.; W. C. Compton, Brunswick; C. W. Allen, Baltimore, Md.; N. H. Bennett, Parkersburg; A. Y. Wilson, Cumberland; P. J. Harrigan, Connellsville, Pa.; H. W. Fauver, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Mr. Emmic, Willard, Ohio; B. F. Kelley, S. I., N. Y.; F. M. Keane, Grafton, W. Va.; E. E. Smith, Garrett, Ind.; Dr. Hedges, Brunswick, Maryland.

The afternoon session of June 20 featured the appointment of a special committee, including representatives from each lodge, to canvass members and all other employees concerning their opinions on the pension feature as outlined at the meeting—an independent movement by which each employe becomes a member of the pension feature, contributing regularly to the plan of pensioning employees who have arrived at specified ages, or who have given a certain number of years in service, or who have become disabled.

The Newark Division, anticipating such a movement, had its report ready. This was read by D. Moriarity and recommended a monthly contribution from each employe of the Railroad, to be deducted from his pay check or otherwise paid; also that a committee be appointed or that a ballot be sent out to determine the wishes of the employees in this matter.

It was also recommended that the superintendent of the Relief Department be asked to furnish data to determine the amount necessary to be contributed by each employe for the support of such a movement.

It was further recommended that this information be based on the number of men now on the pension roll and the number of employees now on the pay roll.

Several recommendations were added concerning the conditions under which pensions would be awarded; however, these measures were not definitely decided on.

Gwendolyn Matheny, who gave several interesting readings at the Veterans' meeting at Parkersburg

Report of the Committee on Resolutions

Several recommendations were made by the Committee on Resolutions, which were passed by the body. Among these was a resolution that the grand president draw up a suitable circular letter that can be submitted to the various employees of the Railroad, through the local Veterans' Associations, to ascertain if they are willing to contribute an amount not to exceed one dollar per month for the purpose of increasing the Pension Fund; also, that a copy of the letter be sent to the secretary of each association.

This resolution was passed unanimously, with the following amendments:

That the grand secretary be vested with the power of the grand president to write this letter also;

That reply be obtained within 90 days, if possible, and that the circular in question be written within two weeks from this date.

D. Moriarity then told of how the canvassing already had been accomplished on the Newark Division, by having a representative from each craft handle it among his fellows.

C. Allen, of Baltimore, moved that a copy of the letter be published in the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine. This was seconded and carried.

Grand President Sturmer read a telegram of regret from General Superintendent of Transportation W. G. Curren, in which the latter expressed his regrets at not being present. Mr. Sturmer then expressed his pleasure in the proceedings of the day. He further said that the cooperation of the officers of the Baltimore and Ohio proves that they are the friends of the Veterans.

The evening session of the first day opened with prayer by Brother Fauver, of Martinsburg, and the singing of "America" by the audience.

Mr. Sturmer spoke of the unusual talent possessed by members of the Baltimore and Ohio Family, and as a shining example of this, introduced J. W. Hamilton, of the General Manager's Office, Baltimore, who with his two boys, Carl and Nova, gave a little concert of their own. The numbers were most pleasing, Mr. Hamilton playing the flute, his son, Nova, the piano, and Carl, the violin. Carl also gave several vocal solos which brought forth many encores.

"Nobody in railroad circles is happier," said Mr. Sturmer, "than when he is dressed in a new pair of overalls." So saying he introduced four of our boys from the Parkersburg Low Yard Shops; W. H. Penn and C. M. Dotson, electric welders; W. C. Wright and F. Bailey, machinist helpers. These called themselves the "Rusty Hinge Quartette," although their entertainment was quite a bit more enjoyable than the name would suggest. Dressed in brand new overalls, white shirts, white caps, and red kerchiefs, they called forth several encores with their song, "Life's Railway to Heaven."

Miss Mildred Lyons gave a pleasing piano solo, and Mrs. Otto Kingsley, wife of machinist, Grafton, gave a delightful exhibition of yodeling and singing of Swiss and German songs. Mrs. Elizabeth Menafée, Cumberland, gave two excellent readings in a style for which she is noted in Veteran circles.

P. J. Harrigan gave a talk as only "Daddy" Harrigan can. He spoke of the old days on the Railroad and gave some good advice.

J. M. Scott, general superintendent, Wheeling District was then introduced and said in part:

"Fellow Employees: I come bringing to you the best wishes and personal interest of President Willard, whom I left at Wheeling, and who will not be able to be with you. I also bring you the greetings of General Manager Scheer, who hopes to be with you tomorrow.

"I don't believe that there is one thing that gives me more pleasure than to be taken in as a member of this organization—yes, there is one thing that I take as much pride in—the ladies of the Fairmont Auxiliary have named their Auxiliary the J. M. Scott Auxiliary, and of this I am very proud."

Mr. Scott said further that the Veterans' Association gave its members the opportunity to know each other better, and he asked that each one go from the meeting with a cheerful disposition to render the best service possible.

He spoke of the better facilities which the Baltimore and Ohio now has, of the trackage and equipment; of the success of the new Capitol Limited and of President Harding's passage through Parkersburg on that evening on his westward trip.

Mr. Sturmer announced that there would be a picnic at Cincinnati on August 23, the day being selected for the reason that it is on this date that Vice President Galloway celebrates his forty years of service with the Baltimore and Ohio. On September 1 Mr. Fries also celebrates his 40th anniversary of Baltimore and Ohio service. On July 25 the Veterans of the Eastern Lines will hold a picnic at Versailles.

H. W. Fauver, of Martinsburg, closed the meeting with prayer, and a rising vote of thanks was given to those who had contributed to the evening's entertainment.

Friday Meeting

Friday morning found the Veterans in their cars in line before the court house at Parkersburg, waiting for the signal to start for a drive around the outskirts of the town. It was an interesting procession, 40 automobiles being in line, holding about 150 Veterans. Many of the wives and a few of the children also enjoyed the delightful ride. The Parkersburg Band led the

A few of the "old timers," waiting for the parade to start: James Wardley, Connellsville; A. J. Creswell and J. W. Hipsley, Martinsburg; W. C. Compton, Brunswick, and Engineer H. W. procession, which continued until nearly one o'clock. Flags and banners floated everywhere, and as one good brother put it, "the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans carried the town."

Luncheon was served in the cafeteria of the high school, after which Grand President Sturmer called the meeting to order.

Rev. Patrick Browne, of the local Catholic Church, in giving the invocation, spoke of his friendship among the Parkersburg Veterans. He said that we should make the letters, "B. & O." stand for "Business and Order," and "Be an Optimist." He took Christopher Columbus as an example of great optimism. His parting injunction was: "Be loyal and faithful; be businesslike and orderly; be an optimist."

The addresses of the afternoon were made by Hon. B. M. Ambler, counsel for the Baltimore and Ohio, Parkersburg; Hon. J. W. Vanderwort, also Baltimore and Ohio Counsel, and W. W. Wood, chief of Welfare, Baltimore.

Mr. Ambler spoke of the importance of a railroad like the Baltimore and Ohio. "In Asia," he said, "we find starvation for the reason that there is no Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Asia."

"Just now," he continued, "there is great agitation in this country among those people known as politicians. The railroads are being overtaxed by people who try to make themselves popular so that they can get into public office, and who seek to place the handling of the railroads in the hands of those who know nothing about them rather than in the hands of those who have spent their entire lives in the business."

"The Railroad has borrowed money to be put into new and better equipment and into other improvements. The Baltimore and Ohio is a ship that the railroad man owns, and it cannot be made absolutely safe and dependable unless the Railroad can put its trust in the men who handle it—upon you men and your families. It must rely on the efficiency and harmony of its employes."

Mr. Sturmer read a telegram that had just been received by Brother Reed, telling of the death of Mr. Reed's mother in Pittsburgh. Mr. Sturmer also spoke of the death and funeral of Mrs. Moore, one of the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Parkersburg. The audience was then asked to stand with bowed heads for a moment in memory of those two who had died. Secretary Scullin offered a prayer for the families of the bereaved.

W. W. Wood, chief of Welfare, spoke of travelling through West Virginia several years ago with the agricultural trains and the talks that then were given about alfalfa and better stock. He told of the welfare movement and of the progress of civilization through transportation.

"Hunger," said Mr. Wood, "is gratified by transportation. Our ancestors had their towns along the waterways of the world, for besides these their only other method of transportation was by means of horses, camels and donkeys. And so it happened in early America that all of the important cities were built on the waterways. Since we have tunnelled the mountains, however, we find cities without rivers everywhere; cities like that of Denver, 5,000 feet above the sea level, with scarcely enough water to float a duck.

"I was born in the west, and the first railroad poster that I remember seeing was one that ran something like this:

"Westward ho,

Eastward go—

Get your ticket on the B. and O."

Mr. Wood then told of the progress of transportation and of the splendid class of men now handling the railroad's work.

Mr. Vanderwort introduced his talk with a number of clever puns. He then cited some points in the history of Parkersburg.

"In 1857," said Mr. Vanderwort, "the Baltimore and Ohio reached Parkersburg. Today it touches eight out of ten of the largest cities in the United States; it reaches 257 cities each of which has a population of over 2500, and comes into contact with 17 per cent. of the people of the United States. There is every reason why you should be proud of the Baltimore and Ohio."

"In the everyday affairs of life it is possible for a man to win victories of peace. Our job is to increase the sum of our loyalty and devotion, and to better our attitude towards our work. In civil life it takes courage just as heroic as in the days of battle. The conductor who keeps his train in order must also remember his politeness to passengers; the engineer must keep his eyes ahead; the brakeman must protect his trains; the fireman must keep his fuel regulated; the repairman must not only know how to repair, but he must remember not to overlook the little points. As veteran engineers, conductors, firemen, brakemen and repairmen, you know that the men who can and will run the affairs of the railroad properly are those who give their loyalty to the Company."

"If each one of us would carve out our own existence according to the powers that God has given us, we would do well."

Mr. Hamilton and his sons followed with another entertainment, and Mrs. Kingsley also entertained. E. F. Augustine then was called to the platform and presented with a handsome travelling bag (inside of which he found a pair of socks), in acknowledgment of the generous amount of work which he had accomplished for the good of the convention. In reply, Mr. Augustine said, in part:

"I am a Baltimore and Ohio man with a Baltimore and Ohio family. I have 40 years of service and I look for 40 more. I started in service driving a mule team and now I am driving one of the finest engines on the Baltimore and Ohio and I'm proud of it."

"Thanking you for your attention and thanking you for the handsome bag, I remain, a faithful and loyal member of the Baltimore and Ohio family."

A motion was passed that the grand president write a letter to the mayor of the city of Parkersburg, and to the Board of Education of Parkersburg in appreciation of the splendid facilities offered by them and making possible the success of the meeting.

The evening session was more in the nature of a social affair. Treadway's Orchestra furnished the music, the audience sang America, and Miss Gwendolyn Matheny, daughter of Engineer J. W. Matheny, gave several recitations, one of which was a thrilling tale of an engine run made by a woman whose husband was ill.

The Hamiltons again entertained with delightful selections, and little Carl sang even better than on the two previous occasions. Miss Ann Baughmann gave a pretty solo, accompanied by Miss Mildred Carpenter at the piano. Mr. Sturmer spoke of the hospitality of Parkersburg, of the pleasure of the morning's automobile trip. He complimented the Hamiltons on their musical ability and spoke of the Business Getting Campaign and its results. He then introduced H. O. Hartzell, manager, Commercial Development.

Mr. Hartzell told of his interest in the Veterans' Association saying that he had found out through contact with its members that there is a great deal more to this brotherly organization than the average person would suppose. He spoke of increasing the membership of the association and urged a membership campaign, so that more railroaders who have 20 years of service to their credit may know what it means to belong to such an organization.

Engineer Richardson, Fairmont, told some of his experiences as a railroader, of his love of Parkersburg, and paid a tribute to motherhood, making an appeal to the association for recognition of the widows of the pensioners.

The "Rusty Hinge Quartette" again sang "Life's Railway to Heaven" and added two other songs which were quite amusing. Mrs. Menafee, Cumberland, gave several other interesting readings, and "Aunt Mary" of the MAGAZINE told of some of her impressions of France. A rising vote of thanks was extended to the city of Parkersburg, to the various ministers who had been present to open the meetings, and to all who had helped to make the reunion a success.

The closing prayer was offered by Rev. G. I. Wilson, of the First Presbyterian Church.

Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1 Holds First Annual Outing at Tolchester Beach

THE Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary held their first annual outing and picnic at Tolchester Beach on July 6. Leaving Light Street Pier on the first steamer at 8.45 a. m. we noticed that President Mrs. Lewis, President of Baltimore Veterans C. W. Allen, and many others, had either forgotten to set their alarm clocks, or had thrown pillows at the said "sleep destroyers" when they announced the hour of arising to catch the steamer. However, they did—with many others—manage to be on hand when the next steamer left at 2.00 p. m. Others, principally those young and romantically inclined, came down on the last steamer at 6.40 p. m. so that they might have the moonlight trip back—and, fortunately, the moon didn't shine!

About 150 Veterans, with their families and friends, arose early and left the Baltimore Pier on the first steamer, and it was a well worth while trip. Gliding smoothly over the waters of the Patapsco River and the Chesapeake Bay, many interesting sights are seen, such as Locust Point, Curtis Bay and many other facilities of the Baltimore and Ohio. "Why," said Mrs. Espey, "there's the place John stood and waved to me last time I came down here."

Arriving at Tolchester there was a grand rush for tables. Not by any means the last on the scene was Grand President George W. Sturmer, and when we had toiled up the stairs under the broiling sun, we found him comfortably seated on a nicely covered platform, ready for the important business of the day, namely "Lunch."

"Safety Jack" Perin and his wife were on hand, as also were Baggage-man W. H. Hanson and his wife. You'd never guess Mr. Hanson had been in the service 53 years and confesses to 75 years of age! Mr. Hanson informed Brother Sturmer and "Ye Scribe" that he had two or three baskets full of good "spring chicken," and that all comers were welcome to help

A Letter To Be Treasured

Mr. Marshall M. Sayre,
Conductor (Retired),
Keyser, W. Va.
Dear Mr. Sayre:

Baltimore, Md.
June 9, 1923

Sixty years of faithful service—a life's work of which you may well be proud. That such a record of service may not pass unnoticed, and as an acknowledgement of your sixty years of faithful service, it is my pleasure to present to you on behalf of the Management of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad this watch, chain and charm.

To mark the invisible hours that fly by on noiseless wing is an achievement in which the race has always taken pride, and a good watch is a masterpiece; but as an achievement a watch does not compare with three score years of faithful service which symbolize the steady, unhesitating, persistent efforts by which you have reached this proud pinnacle of your years.

May the hours this watch marks for you be always brightened by recollections of duty well done, and while you are no longer actively identified with the Railroad, I trust you will feel that you are still a member of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad family. Again with all good wishes,

Cordially yours,

C. Halloway
VICE PRESIDENT

Much credit is due to the Ladies' Auxiliary for the excellent arrangements made for the care of their members and friends. The arrangements were made under the direction of "Chair Lady," Mrs. G. William Jentner.

Chicago Terminal Employees Hold Annual Outing

By MRS. W. T. ARMSTRONG

ON July 1, the first annual outing and picnic of the Chicago Terminal Employees' Association was held at Fox River Park, Aurora, Illinois. It was a day of days, and will live long in our memories. The folks were congenial, the day ideal, and everyone enjoyed every minute.

There were games, dancing and fun for all. Many handsome prizes were given for the winners of various events, and everyone, from the oldest to the youngest, entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. It was a real "Get-together" picnic.

Great credit is due to the officers who arranged the program, and the women folk did their bit to add to the happiness of the day. It was in every way a grand success.

The picnic will go down into history as a memorable one, and it is but the start—we hope—of many more happy occasions of a similar nature.

dispose of it. "By the way," he said, "I don't mean 'live' chickens, I mean cooked ones."

Seated enjoying our lunches, we took a census and found Mrs. Wall, Mrs. Cromwell, Mrs. James Thomas (Hubby came on the moonlight trip!) Mrs. G. William Jentner (another of the romantic "hubby" ladies), Mrs. Isaac, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Albrecht and Mildred, Mrs. Hicks, C. R. Purdy and many others. All told we are advised that about 500 adults and 19 children made the trip on the three steamers.

After lunch, the taking of photographs was in order. "Look pretty," commanded the photographer, and by the results you can see that they did. Then a walk around Tolchester was in order. First, we—about 15 of us—started to the bathing beach. Leaving there, the writer found his party had dwindled to—One Lone Man—himself. Why the others preferred to remain on the beach we leave to your imagination!

The sights of Tolchester having been thoroughly investigated, a small party gathered under the shade of some—guess they were chestnut trees, and a small Bible class (?) was held. Sister Sturmer tried out our knowledge of the Bible by asking several conundrums of biblical origin. Needless to say, everyone, including Mr. Sturmer, Mr. Hanson, Mrs. Jentner, Mrs. Hanson—and in fact everyone present—"Gave them up." Messrs. Sturmer, Hanson and Perin entertained us with stories of early days on the Baltimore and Ohio, and in the midst of the fun we heard a loud whistle. There was the steamer—we had to go. And so ended our day at Tolchester Beach.

Watch, chain and charm, presented to Conductor Marshall M. Sayre on his retirement after completion of sixty years' service

Sixty Years Service of Marshall M. Sayre Rewarded with Beautiful Testimonial

THE Scriptures tell us that "The days of our age are three score years and ten." To few of us, however, is given the privilege that has been Marshall M. Sayre's; that of completing sixty years loyal and faithful service in the employ of one company.

Mr. Sayre was born on February 11, 1847. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on March 1, 1862, as laborer. On January 1, 1866 he was promoted to the position of freight brakeman, and on November 4, 1873 to freight conductor. He was retired on pension December 13, 1922 after being continuously in the service for almost sixty one years.

That such a record might not pass unnoticed, Vice President Galloway, on behalf of the Baltimore and Ohio, presented to Mr. Sayre a gold watch, chain and charm, in acknowledgement of the faithful service he has given.

Mr. Galloway's letter is reproduced on the opposite page, and here also are photographs of Mr. Sayre and the watch with which he was presented.

Retired Conductor Marshall M. Sayre

He entered the Baltimore and Ohio service on May 15, 1912 as axeman, Surveys Division, Engineering Department, remaining continuously in the service until his recent appointment.

During his service with the Baltimore and Ohio, Mr. Ball served in all the minor engineering grades, as well as acting as track foreman during business depressions, thus demonstrating his versatility. While serving as assistant division engineer on March 16, 1920, he was promoted to investigating engineer, Cost Engineer's Office.

Mr. Ball served in the Engineering Corps of the U. S. Army during the war.

Mr. Ball was popular with his superiors and fellow employes, whose sincere congratulations are extended to him on his promotion.

Daddy Harrigan Hits the High Spots for Veterans at Parkersburg

Are you doing for yourself the things that you pray for in others?

None of my family was ever injured in service. Why? Because we always looked before we leaped.

Since the beginning the Baltimore and Ohio has made but one request of its employes—a fair day's work for a fair day's pay—and a sympathetic interest in its business.

If you will watch closely you will find that the officers of this railroad will respect you for the character which you put into your work.

In 1831 and 1835 the Baltimore and Ohio offered as an encouragement to employ inventors $4500 to him who would make an engine that would haul 15 tons at the rate of 15 miles per hour. The maturing of the locomotive seems to have been complete, but it has not as yet and it will not be as long as mortal brains and physical beings are working for improvements.

The Veterans' Association is founded on basic principles; two of these are Friendship and Cooperation. Are we carrying out these principles fully? If not, how can we change our habits or our actions so that they will produce the desired results?

Let us take care of the things that we possess without jeopardizing the rights of others.

Don't close your eyes to everything; look out and look up.

Let us sustain our grand officers in their good work.

This railroad depends on you and me to Stop That Leak!

Don't forget that the editor of the Magazine has asked for old time pictures of railroad scenes and railroad people, for a special Veterans' supplement. Send them in!

Wendell P. Ball, Graduated and Promoted

WENDELL P. BALL has been appointed engineer of maintenance of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia and West Side Belt Railways, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. Ball was born on September 28, 1888, and was graduated in civil engineering from Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa. He then spent two years in signal construction work on the Northern Pacific and Cumberland Valley Railroads.

Veterans Outing, August 23, Chester Park, Will Celebrate Long Service Records of Vice Presidents Galloway and Fries

ON August 23, the Veterans of the Western Lines will assemble at Chester Park, Cincinnati, for their annual outing, which this year will be of special interest because it will celebrate the completion of long service records by two of our vice presidents. The date will mark the fortieth anniversary of the entrance into Baltimore and Ohio service of Vice President Galloway. Nine days later, September 1, Vice President Fries will have completed forty-two years service with the Company.

Mr. Galloway started as a messenger boy in Baltimore in 1883 at a salary of $12 a month. Mr. Fries started as an entry clerk at the Storrs Transfer Station, Cincinnati, on September 1, 1881.

It is most interesting to observe that these two men, with no influence whatsoever, should have started at such widely separated points on what is now the Baltimore and Ohio System, within two years of each other, and should have step by step been advanced because of efficient service to their present responsible positions. It is also most appropriate that the twelve chapters of the Veterans who will get together on August 23 to celebrate their yearly outing, should honor these two fellow Veterans of Baltimore and Ohio service by making such recognition of their splendid records with the Baltimore and Ohio on that day.

Radio in the Home

By MRS. ADA R. C. ABERNATHY, Wife of Agent
F. R. Abernathy, Lebanon, Illinois

RADIO is the tad of the hour. However, to many of us it is more than a fad; it is one of the most important inventions of today from which we derive much pleasure.

Just how much radio means to the home it is difficult to state. Its usefulness is practically unlimited, for it is the source of educational, musical and religious entertainment.

In our own home we have a Clapp-Eastham 2-step amplifier. It would be almost impossible to enumerate all the fine entertainments which we enjoy from it every day and evening. In an educational sense, we hear lectures and addresses from all sections of the United States. Among the speakers are members of the President's Cabinet, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, members of faculties of leading colleges and universities, governors of the various states, army and naval officers, heads of nation wide organizations, leading bankers—in fact, the whole field of human endeavor is represented.

Just think what a privilege it is for growing boys and girls to listen to such entertainments in their own homes!

No matter what your taste for music may be, the radio has the program for you.

We live 33 miles east of St. Louis, but last month we had the privilege of enjoying the grand operas presented by the San Carlos Opera Company. This was accomplished through the courtesy of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. This paper also broadcasted the glee club program given at Odeon, St. Louis; the Yale Glee Club concerts, and those of the Washington University Glee Club. Every Saturday we have the programs of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. We also have the concerts given by the Army and Navy Band at Arlington, D. C., the WGY programs at Schenectady, N. Y., and many, many other fine things from first class broadcasting stations. The best and finest of music is brought to our home. There is lovely vocal music, minstrels, and old-fashioned programs. Jazz, Jazz—and more jazz!

We can hear the senoritas at Habana singing their Spanish ballads and the Scotchman's tenor at Winnipeg singing Harry Lauder's love songs.

Every phase of religious activity is also heard from. Beautiful sacred music, both vocal and instrumental, accompany splendid sermons and addresses, and Catholic masses may be heard in every home on the Sabbath day.

A radio for every Baltimore and Ohio home! Probably there are few who do not have one. Those without radios, however, do not realize, or are not acquainted with, the profitable pleasure derived from such entertainment, I am sure!

By MRS. E. MORRIS, Wife of Engineer,
Smithfield, Pa.

BY pouring water over Mother's Oats in double boiler on the night before using—then cooking them in the morning, much better flavor is obtained and the oats are cooked more quickly.

Putting a fish into hot water for about two minutes helps to remove the scales quickly.

Broken gas mantles are excellent for cleaning jewelry and silverware.

If you have a piece of tough meat to cook, put a tablespoonful of vinegar into the water it is to be boiled in. This makes the meat more tender and does not injure the flavor.

Ink spots on the fingers may be easily and quickly removed by using ammonia. Rinse the hands in clear water after washing.

This Dress Was Made in Garrett, Indiana

SEVERAL months ago, when campaigning for the American Committee for Devastated France, it was the pleasure of one of the campaigning groups to meet some of the girls from Garrett. On the evening that the group stayed over in Garrett, a number of girls from the offices came to the home of Boilermaker and Mrs. Hopper, by whom the Good Will girls were entertained. They all spent a delightful evening, talking over many things, among which was the subject of contributions to the Women's Department of the MAGAZINE. The girls of Garrett expressed a desire to help make the page interesting, therefore, when we wanted someone on the Western Lines to make a dress for this department, we wrote immediately to Miss Gertrude Manion, secretary to the superintendent, for assistance.

Miss Manion wrote us that the dress would be made by Miss Alma Elam, motive power timekeeper, Division Accountant's Office, Garrett. The pattern was forwarded and the result is shown in the accompanying picture.

The dress is made of tan linen, and, as may be supposed, is simple in construction. The pattern is No. 4004, and may be had in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 16 requires  $4\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. Price, 12 cents. Use the regular coupon when ordering.

The Fashion Woman Presents Some Cool and Practical Styles for Midsummer

By PEGGY

A Smart Little Gown with a Kerchief Collar

4365. Here is a charming model, with costume blouse and two piece flare skirt. The neck is finished with the popular "kerchief" collar. The sleeve may be finished with a wrist length "peasant" portion, or in the newest "short" length. As here shown orange color canton crepe was used, with band of black crepe embroidered in orange floss. This is a good model for linen and pongee.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size will require  $6\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 36-inch material for the dress with long sleeve and the blouse in full length. In shorter sleeve and blouse length the dress will require  $5\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is  $2\frac{1}{4}$  yards. Price, 12 cents.

Anna's "Best Dress" is Quite Dainty

4387. This will be charming in organdy, crepe, or voile. It is also nice for linen, with the guimpe of contrasting material. The sleeve may be in wrist length with a band cuff, or in short length as illustrated. The pattern is cut in four sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. Price, 12 cents.

When Daisy Goes a-Dusting

4360. Gingham or ratine, or Figured voile with facings of white organdy will be most attractive in this pattern.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure.

A 38-inch size requires  $5\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material. For collar, cuffs and facings of contrasting material one yard will be required. The width at the foot is  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards. Price, 12 cents.

Little Jack Will Like To Wear This Sailor Costume

4380. Linen, drill, Indian head, flannel and serge, also pongee and jersey cloth would be attractive for this style, which appeals so much to the "little seaman." The blouse may be finished in smock style or with the lower edge drawn in bloused effect.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. A 6-year size requires  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards of 40-inch material. Blue linen with white facings would be pleasing, or white drill with trimming of orange or green. Price, 12 cents.

In Blue and Tan Figured Silk

4369. This is a most attractive frock, suitable for many occasions. The facings on collar and revers and the lacings are blue. The skirt is of tan Camel's hair woolen. Crepe, linen or gingham and linen, could be used for this style.

The pattern is cut in three sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18-year size requires  $1\frac{7}{8}$  yard for the blouse and  $3\frac{3}{8}$  yards for the skirt of 40-inch material. The width at the foot of the skirt is  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards, with plaits extended. To trim blouse as illustrated,  $\frac{1}{4}$  yard 40 inches wide is required. Price, 12 cents.

For the Porch or Garden

4364. Percale in a pretty pattern is here combined with white linene to make a pleasing version of a popular style. This is a good model also for gingham, damask, or crepe.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires  $4\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material. For facings and belt of contrasting material  $\frac{5}{8}$  yard 36 inches wide is required. The width at the foot is  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards. Price, 12 cents.

A Demure Little Dress in Voile, Taffeta or Crepe

4363. The pattern is cut in seven sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $7\frac{5}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. To make underbody of lining requires one yard. For kerchief and puffs of contrasting material  $1\frac{5}{8}$  yard is required. The width of the skirt at the foot is  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards. Price, 12 cents.

Comfort For the Little Tot

3921. In this neat and simple play suit the Fashion Woman has contrived to develop a practical garment. The smock and knickers are cut in one, so the garment stays "together," and is easy to adjust.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 1, 2, 3 and 4 years. A 2-year size will require  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material. Pongee, crash, linen, gingham, chintz and cretonne are nice for this style. Price, 12 cents.

Simple, Cool and Lovely

4382. Dotted Swiss and organdy are here combined. The model is practical and suitable for all wash fabrics, as well as for silk and cloth. The collar and panels may be omitted. In red and white dotted percale with trimming of white linene, this style will be very pleasing.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $3\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. To make sash, collar, cuffs, pocket and sleeve facings of contrasting material requires one yard 32 inches wide. Price, 12 cents.

A Charming Apron of Cretonne or Chintz

4361. This pattern is also good for gingham, linen, or rubberized materials.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, Medium, Large, and Extra Large. A medium size requires 3 yards of 27-inch material. Price, 12 cents.

Of Voile, Organdy, Gingham or Cotton

For the Little Girl

4376. A short waist, shaped in attractive outline, is joined to a full skirt, which boasts of dainty "bag" pockets. The short puff sleeve makes this an ideal frock for warm days. It may be made up in percale, chintz, crepe, tissue gingham or linen.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. A 6-year size requires 3 yards of 27-inch material. Price, 12 cents.

Neat and Serviceable for the House

Pattern 3656 is here illustrated. It is cut in seven Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size will require 5 yards of 36-inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is 2 yards.

Gingham, chambray, figured percale, poplin, repp, linen and calico may be used for this model. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or elbow length. Price, 12 cents.

A Stylish Blouse in Figured Silk and Canton Crepe

This model is very becoming to slender figures. The back extends over the front in yoke effect. Becoming plait fulness gives graceful fulness to the fronts.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $3\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 32-inch material. To trim with contrasting material as illustrated will require one yard 40 inches wide. Price, 12 cents. No. 4371.

Style and Service is Combined Here

4362. This is very smart in the new figured silks, or in printed crepe or voile. The blouse and skirt are finished separately, but may be joined together under the belt of the blouse. The sleeve is new and distinctive and the lines of the model are altogether slenderizing and pleasing.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires  $6\frac{1}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is  $2\frac{1}{2}$  yards. Price, 12 cents.

Traffic Class "Does" Baltimore Harbor

By H. D. STANGE, Acting Chairman

THE Baltimore and Ohio Traffic Class, Baltimore, which has for its aim the educating of its members in a comprehensive way in the matter of rates, terminal facilities and general conditions on the Baltimore & Ohio, as a part of the curriculum, was given a trip around Baltimore Harbor on the tugboat "Baltimore" during the latter part of June.

Members of the class boarded the tug at the foot of Calvert Street and followed the north shore of the harbor to President Street, Chase's Station, Fell Street, Henderson's Wharf, Canton District to Sparrows Point, thence across the Patapsco River, skirting Fort Carroll, passing Hawkins Point and Leading Point, and into Curtis Bay District to the revenue cutter station, returning by way of Port Covington and Locust Point to the starting point.

Each member of the party was furnished with a pamphlet fully setting forth the itinerary and explaining in detail points of interest covered by the trip, together with a map of the harbor.

The trip proved interesting and instructive, all expressing keen appreciation of the opportunity afforded and declaring themselves greatly benefitted thereby.

Credit Where Credit is Due

ON page 46 of the March issue of our MAGAZINE a poem called "Johnny's Stummick and Something to Fill It" was printed with credit for authorship to Mrs. Lindsay Van Horn of Martinsburg, W. Va.

This was an error on the part of the Magazine since Mrs. Van Horn did not claim authorship of the poem in any way whatsoever.

We received a letter dated June 23 from Reilly and Lee Company, the publishers of the works of Edgar A. Guest, the well known poet, advising that this poem is an almost verbatim copy of Mr. Guest's poem entitled "A Boy and His Stummick," and requesting us to so state in our first available issue.

Large and Interesting Plant of The Indian Refining Company

This, of course, we are glad to do, it being our invariable intention to give proper authorship whenever we reprint anything in our MAGAZINE. Therefore, we apologize to Mrs. Van Horn, Mr. Guest and to the Reilly and Lee Company for this occurrence.

The work of an author is just as much his property as is the product of a mechanic, carpenter or any other artisan and it should not, or course, be appropriated by any other person, unless authority for its use has been granted.

Monster Plant of Indian Refining Company at Lawrenceville, Illinois

By L. R. HOOKS, Agent

THE picture printed above shows the Indian Refining Company's plant at Lawrenceville, Illinois, on the St. Louis Division of the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Indian Refining Company established their plant No. 1 at Lawrenceville, July 1, 1908, and their plant No. 2 July 1, 1910. In their refinery they employ 796 men, in the crude oil department 450 and in the sales and station departments 975; in addition they have a New York office employing 330 persons. Their daily capacity is 125 cars.

Eighty-nine oil wells are owned in Indiana and 787 owned and operated in Illinois. In addition to this they operate various pipe lines in the two states mentioned and in Kentucky. All crude oil produced in Kentucky is handled in tank cars to Owensboro where it is transhipped by pipe line to the refineries at Lawrenceville. The company owns and operates 1845 tank cars of various capacities. They maintain at Lawrenceville repair shops in which have been installed modern appliances for making all repairs to tank cars, and it is also possible for them to build their own tank car equipment if desired. A light running repair shop is maintained at Owensboro.

The Indian Refining Company operates 160 distributing stations east of the Mississippi and both north and south of the Ohio River. The petroleum products refined are gasoline, kerosene, asphaltum, greases and various other oils.

The refinery is located on Baltimore and Ohio tracks, and gives our company a large revenue not only in through road haul, but also in switching service. Mr. C. A. Porter is superintendent of transportation of these valued friends and patrons of our Company.

Introducing the Capital City to Our Citizens of Scandinavian Birth

THE photograph on this page is of a group of Baltimore and Ohio passengers taken in front of the Capitol in Washington, D. C., on May 6, last. This particular party was en route from Chicago and the Middle West to New York to take the Steamship "Stavangerfjord," of the Norwegian America Line, for a visit to the Scandinavian Homeland.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has become the popular route for these steamship parties to New York, as it affords an opportunity to stop over in Washington and gain a personal knowledge of our national capital.

The Scandinavians make a most desirable type of citizens. An agricultural people, they naturally settle in the western states to work and manage the huge farms of that section, which contribute so greatly to our national prosperity. They are a sturdy and honest race that love their adopted country as dearly as they do their old homeland. In the late fall, when the snow and cold weather stop the farm work, many of the families take a winter vacation trip to the old country, and often in the spring parties make a vacation trip across the Atlantic before the harvest season sets in.

The route of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from Chicago to New York via Washington is almost invariably selected by these steamship parties, for they always want to visit the seat of our government and see the beauties of America's most interesting city before returning to their homeland.

Baltimore "Sun" Features Article about Baltimore and Ohio Boosters in Clerks' Brotherhood

THE Baltimore Sun carried a leading article in its edition of July 10 covering the efforts being made by the members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks among Baltimore and Ohio employees, to secure competitive business for the Railroad through their booster clubs.

J. David Cordle, the general secretary-treasurer of the organization on the Baltimore and Ohio, was quoted as saying that not only are the members of the Brotherhood on the Baltimore and Ohio soliciting business from their shipper friends for their Company, but also that through friendship with the members of the Brotherhood on other lines who occupy positions such as routing clerks, etc., quite a good deal of business is being routed over our Road.

It is interesting to note in this connection that on June 5 President Willard addressed the general committee of this Brotherhood in the general office building of the Baltimore and Ohio in Baltimore, outlining the general attitude of the Baltimore and Ohio toward its employes and speaking of his earnest desire that a pleasant feeling of cooperation should exist between Management and men.

Following this meeting resolutions were adopted by the general committee stating their belief in the fair and equitable attitude of President Willard toward the Railroad's employes, thanking him for his address to them, and urging that each officer and member of the System Board of Adjustment make known to all employes, with whom they come in contact, their understanding of the cordial relationship obtaining between officers and employes on the Baltimore and Ohio and their hope that it would result in greater efficiency and loyalty and an even greater feeling of friendliness.

The resolution was signed by L. B. Snedden, general chairman, and J. David Cordle, general secretary-treasurer, and a copy was sent to the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE.

Please—

Be sure to read carefully the letter on Car Miles written by Vice-President Galloway, appearing on page 8, and also pages 9, 10 and 11. They mean more to the Railroad and its employes than any other page in this issue.

Did You Ever Have a Toothache?

Dear Girls and Boys:

The other day I was talking to a doctor who knows all about the things that people should do to take care of their health.

OUR LITTLE FRIENDS

Elizabeth and Janet Zschiesche, Rogne! Heights, Baltimore, Md.

"Do you see that little fellow?" he asked as a mother went down the street with a little boy of about three years old clinging to her hand. "He has the most beautiful teeth of any child of his age that I have ever seen. I certainly hope that his mother is taking good care of them."

"But, Doctor, they are only his first teeth. These are not the teeth that will last. When he is six or seven years old these will come out and he will get others. Why is it so important to take care of these first teeth?"

"I am glad that you asked me that question," replied the doctor, "for that is just what people can't seem to believe. The good care of the first teeth is of much help to the second lot. Don't you see that if you let the first teeth decay, you are just showing the second ones the way to become decayed before they get through?"

"Just as one bad apple in a bag will make the others bad if it is not taken out right away, so a bad tooth, if it is not cared for right away, will spoil all those around it. A bad first tooth may decay the second tooth that comes in right behind it. All teeth should be brushed after each meal, but at least twice a day. Be sure to brush them early in the morning, so as to have a nice clean mouth to begin the day with. And never go to bed at night without brushing your teeth. This is most important.

"Did you ever see a big rock that had been split by a little root? Somehow it happens that little seeds get into the cracks of great big rocks. The rain sends a drop of water down to it, the wind blows the dust there, the sun shines down on it, the seed begins to sprout. The little plant begins to grow and to send its roots further and further into the crack until the rock finally splits. And so, the food gets into

Joe Feeney, Granite, Md., will take the girls and boys riding in this auto which he has drawn the teeth, little bits of food that you could scarcely see with your naked eye. There this food stays. It does not grow as the plant in the rock, but it decays and causes the tooth itself to decay and crumble away. If teeth are perfectly clean they cannot decay.

"If you have ever had a toothache I know that you do not want it again and you do not want your little railroad girls and boys to get it either, so tell them just what I said, that teeth should be cared for, or when these boys and girls grow old they will have to go through the pain of having their teeth taken out, or else they will have 'snaggled' teeth, which will always give them lots of trouble."

I thanked the doctor for this message, and I am giving it to you just as he told it to me. Do you take good care of your teeth? Please do.

I am sending you just bushels of love.

Where Does Anna Hickman Live?

Anna forgot to give her address. If she will write to Aunt Mary and give her address, we will send her the reward for solving the puzzles.

Anna Hickman, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Little Puzzlers:

The other day I got a telegram from your old Aunt Mary telling me to come at once for she needed my help. You may be sure that I packed my bags full of puzzles and came flying down just as fast as Mr. South Wind could carry me on his back. He's a good old horse to ride, but he always goes so slowly when you're in a hurry.

When I arrived in Baltimore I went into Aunt Mary's office and what do you suppose I found? Nothing but a big pile of papers, just lots and lots of children's letters—answers to the Children's Page puzzles. I turned around and started out. Just then I heard a funny noise, just like somebody sighing. The noise came from under the pile of papers. Quickly I dropped my puzzle bags and began to dig in the pile of papers. And what do you think I found 'way down at the bottom of the pile? Why, bless your hearts, it was your old aunt herself. She had a frown on her face and tears in her eyes.

"Oh, Mr. Puzzle Man," she cried, "won't you please help me out I have so many puzzle answers that I can't handle them. Some of my children even had to go without the flower seeds that I promised them, simply because there were so many replies that I couldn't get the seeds to them in time to plant them."

So that is the reason that I'm going to be with you from now on. I brought my bags full of brand new puzzles, so that there will be lots and lots of them. Here are two nice ones to begin with. Send your answers to Aunt Mary, as usual. Address:

Baltimore and Ohio Magazine

Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Md.

What shall we have for prizes this month? Well, let's see. Oh, I know. Aunt Mary brought back some lovely post cards from France, so I'm going to ask her to let me send one of them to each girl and boy who sends in correct answers to this month's puzzles. By the way, if you can make up some puzzles of your own, be sure to send them in; but they must be original. Now get your pencil busy and see what you can do with these two:

Word Building Puzzle

I.

I am a word of five letters. As a whole I am the name given to a car on which meals are served.

Cut off my last letter and you will have a word that means to eat that meal.

Cut off the last letter of this word and you will have a noise.

From this word cut off the first letter and you will have a little word of two letters that you use many times during the day.

Cut off the second letter of this word, and you will have one letter, which is the name that I call myself.

What is my whole name?

"All good Railroad men should read our Magazine," says Otis L. Fransler, 15 year old son of Conductor O. C. Fransler, Gassaway, W. Va.

2 (Six letters)

My first is in SING, but not in DANCE;
My second is found in PLAY and PRANCE;
My third is in CUFF, but not in TIE;
My fourth is found in TEA and PIE;
My fifth is in STAY, but not in GO
My sixth in YES, but not in NO.
Where'er you cross the street, I'll bet,
My whole name you will ne'er forget.

Baltimore and Ohio Officers Visit My Town

By MILDRED TOMS, Daughter of Conductor Toms, Charleston Division

MY home town, Weston, W. Va., is small, but it has two large buildings that many of our people are proud of. One is the Insane Asylum. There are only two of these in the state and this is the larger one. It is the largest building in the world of hand cut stone structure. The patients are well cared for and receive good treatment at this asylum. Many prefer it to the other one at Spencer. The other building I mentioned is the Masonic Temple. This is a new building, just completed in 1917. It cost about $100,000.

The first man to view the site of Weston did so in 1769; the first house was erected in 1781, and the first mayor was Jonathan M. Bennett.

The town was first called Preston, for Preston County. Later it was changed to Flesherville, in honor of the first white settler, Mr. Henry Flesher, of German origin, who erected the first house. This name, however, did not please the pioneers, and in 1819, it was changed to Weston.

In 1834 Weston had 30 houses, one school, four stores, four factories, one flour mill, one tanning yard, and two saddlers. The population was 167, five of whom were attorneys, and two doctors. The population of Weston now is 5700. Weston boasts a Chamber of Commerce and a Rotary Club.

Weston is situated on the West Fork River. Because of an abundance of oil, gas, and coal in the neighborhood, our town is becoming an important manufacturing center. Glass factories, carbon factories, lumber mills and flouring mills form the principal industries of this town. We have seven churches in our town and six schools, including those in the suburbs.

I like my home town because it has a good situation and very nice people. I think the most beautiful thing about it is the insane asylum, which I have already mentioned, with its surrounding lawn. The grass is always kept pretty and many flowers are planted there. There is a bed of flowers forming the name, "State Hospital," which I like very much. It is always arranged in the summer for the patients to come out on the lawn when the weather is suitable.

Stonewall Jackson's boyhood home is just a short distance from Weston, at a place called "Jackson's Mill." There was once a grist mill there, but it burned down. The place is now made into athletic grounds for boys and girls. There were several picnics held there during the summer.

The Charleston Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad normally carries 1600 men on its pay roll, and the offices at Weston disburse about $66,000 every month. The headquarters of the Charleston Division were moved from Gassaway to Weston in 1919. This one change meant the payment of $7,200 per month additional in Weston, as well as the bringing of business meetings here every month and the visits of railroad officials and business men who come here for conferences with division officers.

Letters from Some of Our Girls

Water Street,
Smithfield, PA.

Dear Aunt Mary:

I heard about you in the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE, so thought I would write to you. I like to read the MAGAZINE very much.

My sister Anna wrote to you, so I thought I would write to tell you about myself.

I love to go to school and be among the children, and my favorite amusement is reading or sewing. I like to write poems and spend a great deal of my time doing so. My letter is not very interesting but maybe I can do better next time. I am,

Your little unknown friend,
Mary Covadi

Baltimore, Md.

Dear Aunt Mary:

I am writing to you for my first time. I am also sending you a picture called, "A Room Full of Fragrance." In it is my favorite flower, the Tulip.

Would you please write to me, as I would like to be one of your friends. My grandfather works on the Baltimore and Ohio.

I would like you to have a contest on "Myself," a biography. I am twelve years old, and am in the sixth class. I go to Number 84 school.

I hope you will like this picture.

Your little friend,
Margaret Greenholtz

Helping Mother

MY name is Ruth Carey. Everyone has told me I am terribly lazy, so I made up my mind I would get to work and do everything in my power in the way of work to prove that I am not lazy.

It was nearly housecleaning time and my mother was making curtains and stand covers. At the time I knew nothing about sewing. I asked mother to let me hem one of the curtains, or do any little job that might help me to overcome my laziness. She was afraid I would not do my work well, so she cut out a curtain big enough for my play house. I hemmed it so nicely that I surprised mother. It really surprised me too.

Ever since that I have been doing little jobs helping mother and am succeeding in overcoming my laziness.

Beautiful Flowers Are Found at Richmond, Staten Island

By MARGUERITE McDONALD
Daughter of Signal Maintainer

RICHMOND is about the only town on Staten Island which has its tall hills covered with pine trees, springs, valleys and brooks. In the spring and summer its fields are covered with flowers of many different kinds.

One of the oldest buildings of Richmond is a church known as St. Andrews, which was completed in the year 1711. It is just the same today as it was then. Major Symes presented to it a deed conveying the church and 133 acres of land "for the use of the Church of England."

The only park we have is the one in which I live. It is known as Richmond Park. Hampton Court, however, is a kind of park, which is continuously covered with various flowers, such as roses, snowballs and violets.

We have a lighthouse which stands right up on the hill.

Glenwood Baltimore and Ohio Social Club

By EDRIC C. GREAVES, Secretary and Treasurer

THE Glenwood Baltimore and Ohio Social Club is now an assured success, judging from the two entertainments given under its auspices.

The Club's initial dance and entertainment was given on April 19. Shop Superintendent and Mrs. C. M. Newman were second to none in tripping across the waxed floor. Of course genial "Doc" Marshall joined in the merry throng with his pretty, blushing bride to be, Miss Eugenia Gormley, Pittsburgh. District Master Car Builder E. B. Miller surprised his host of friends by displaying his adeptness in the dancing art and particularly in his perfect selection of fair and charming partners. Cumberland was represented by its popular shop superintendent, "Jack" Howe, who is still a bachelor. Superintendent J. D. Beltz, Pittsburgh, was also seen tripping along with some of the fair damsels and thoroughly enjoying himself.

Superintendent, Motive Power C. A. Gill and Chief of Welfare W. W. Wood were the distinguished guests from Baltimore. Mr. Wood made a short address, in which he encouraged social clubs among Baltimore and Ohio employes and congratulated Glenwood on having organized one. During dancing intermissions, a musical program was rendered and Miss Kathryn E. Farrell won all hearts with her beautiful voice. She was presented with a large bouquet of roses.

The hall was attractively and tastefully decorated and the music excellent.

The Club's second dance was given on May 11, and closed its in-door activities until Fall.

The officers are as follows: President, Superintendent C. M. Newman; Vice-Presidents, Master Mechanic C. E. McGinn, Storekeeper C. A. Marshall, District Chief Clerk C. P. Kalbaugh and Assistant Superintendent E. J. Case; Secretary and Treasurer Edric C. Greaves; Assistant Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Kathryn E. Farrell.

Entertainment Committee: C. A. Marshall, chairman, Misses Elizabeth E. Flynn, Edna Moxley, Claire Farrell, Frances Leeper and Olga Morris; Messrs. H. F. Schwab, M. R. Powell, W. W. McPharron, B. H. Rush, Roy W. Eves, W. H. Battenhouse and P. T. Poole.

Railroad Electrification and the Electric Locomotive

By Arthur J. Manson, Manager Transportation Division, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. 332 pages, 6 in. by 9 in. 149 illustrations, 19 tables. Bound in cloth. Published by Simmons-Boardman Publishing Company, 30 Church Street, New York.

THE increasing cost of fuel and other expenses which make up the railway budget, as well as certain limiting mechanical and operating characteristics of the steam locomotive, have contributed, especially in recent years, to increasing the desirability of adopting electric motive power as the solution for many operating difficulties. While this book is written for the benefit of those who are, or would be most directly concerned with the operation and maintenance of electric locomotives, it contains specific information so arranged as to be of value to any one in any way concerned with the problems incidental to railroad electrification.

In a brief way, the author touches upon some of the outstanding and most important advantages which may be expected to result from the electrification of existing steam railway facilities, either of an entire system or of certain sections.

Four chapters are devoted to explaining the underlying theory of common electrical phenomena, particularly those which relate to the application of electricity to railway operation. Five chapters are then given over to the explanation of the generally accepted types of motors used to supply power for electric locomotives.

The principles of train operation are discussed and a comparison of the inherent advantages of electric and of steam locomotives is made.

The book contains an explanation of the various means used for accelerating and decelerating electrically operated trains. There are also included descriptions of the air brake equipment and of the methods used for regenerative control. The principal features of electric locomotive design and the design of the transformer equipment are discussed at considerable length.

The last three chapters are devoted to the solution of an actual electrification problem dealing with the factors influencing the choice of an electric locomotive for an installation of a given character.

The book also includes an appendix which reviews briefly the history and salient features of various American electrification projects. Included in this section are 11 tables which show at a glance important characteristics and details of construction as applied to electrical operation of railways in every country where steam railways have been electrified, or where the initial installation was electrically operated.

Among Ourselves

Baltimore and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio Annex Building

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBEEK

It is the custom for trainmen to assist passengers in alighting from trains, but when I appear upon the steps to alight, the one who is extending a helping hand is not much in evidence. I need aid just as well as a young person who is tripping down the steps and indeed far more so. If a passenger along in years should fall, it might result seriously.

Another thing. Where a passenger has baggage on a seat or in the aisle, it would be the proper thing for the train attendant to ask to have it placed in the rack. This can be done without giving offense, and space for incoming passengers is made available.

The May Magazine

There was a feast of good things in the May MAGAZINE. I read every word of Mr. Willard's address and have put away in my memory several items worth while. I was surprised to find that the Company pays $90,000 a year for engine sand.

Before the May MAGAZINE was issued, I received a lovely little letter from Aunt Mary, written in Gay Paree. I felt quite proud when it was received, especially as the writer denominated me as "the youngest man in America."

The letters of Miss Stevens from the other side I reserved for my Saturday trip to Bethlehem, and I enjoyed every line, as well as her communications appearing in the June and subsequent issues. They were all fine.

How to Get a Husband

I am now going to tell the girls how to land a husband. I saw a young lady on Train 524 the other Saturday, who was armed with thimble, needle and thread. I mentally exclaimed there is a young lady with a stocking bag full of stockings, and she intends to utilize the time on her Saturday trip in mending the weekly budget, but I was mistaken. It was embroidery work she was doing, and the men do not care much for that.

Now, let the girls trot out the bag full of stockings; stockings that are suffering for attention, and see how the men will crane their necks and plan for an introduction.

Susan Anne Trageser, seven years of age, my sweetheart, told her mother on the day she was seven that there were two things she wanted to see. One was a wedding ceremony, and the other an operation. Recently, a fashionable wedding was celebrated in one of the Bethlehem churches and Susan's first wish was fully gratified. Her parents' invitation did not embrace one to the child, but she was given one especially. Susan is a native of Baltimore and is proud of it.

I have my eye on some young gentlemen who are beginning railroad life in our service. One from the Annex who has been coming to my desk in the Law Department for papers destined for Mr. Glessner, has been promoted to a position in the office of Senior Vice President Shriver. I told Mr. Glessner some time ago that he would make good, and Mr. Glessner agreed. Modesty is well developed in this young man's vocabulary, and so I will not designate him by name. He might not like it.

William L. Marbury, noted lawyer of Baltimore City, came into the office the other day and advancing to the railing that separates the clerks from visitors, he said to me—"It looks good to see you here; takes me back to the days of John K. Cowen." I felt a thrill when Mr. Marbury even associated me for a moment with the late General Counsel. Everybody loved Mr. Cowen. He never thought of himself. He graduated at the head of his class at Princeton, and when President John W. Garrett asked his son Robert, also a Princeton student, if he could name a really capable man to serve the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad as general counsel, he immediately replied—John K. Cowen.

Ronald J. Horsey, of this office, graduated from the Law School, University of Maryland, the exercises being held at the Lyric, Baltimore on June 9. I have great admiration for this young gentleman. He is wonderfully reticent; is busy thinking while the other fellow is indulging in a flood of garrulity. He came to the Law Department in 1920 and I hope he will stick, and be a part of this fine organization long after I have worn out several harps on the other shore.

The Faculty of the Maryland University offered a prize of one hundred dollars to the student submitting the most meritorious thesis. Ninety one gentlemen complied. Mr. Horsey's paper was deemed to possess the requisite qualifications and he was awarded the prize. Hon. John J. Cornwell, general counsel, delivered the oration. Afterwards he warmly congratulated Mr. Horsey.

Engineering Department

Correspondent, OSWALD EDEN

As an aftermath to the wonderful (?) weather we have been having, two of our engineers decided to take unto themselves a "chief engineer." An account of the wedding will be published as soon as full details are received.

It is with great regret I report that "Major" Charles Goldsborough, assistant engineer, died on June 25.

"Major" Goldsborough was born April 19, 1845 at Easton, Md. He was educated at Maryland Agricultural College and graduated from there in 1864. He first entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in 1866, as a rodman, rising to the post of assistant engineer, which position he held at the time of his death. While in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio he was in charge of right of way surveys, construction, track laying, etc. Major Goldsborough was a most careful draftsman, and a great many of the drawings made by him in the Baltimore and Ohio's files are almost works of art. He was buried at Easton, Maryland on June 26.

Office of District Engineer Pittsburgh, Pa.

Correspondent, J. M. WHEALAN
Accountant

F. C. E. is again footloose as Friend Wife has taken herself and the kids to the country. Those fellows whose in-laws own a patch of country somewhere are certainly in luck. In fact, some fellows seem to have all the luck.

Wilbert, otherwise known as "Bill," is much impressed with himself because he has been promoted, and on that account will not have to sit with the girls anymore. He is leaving shortly to assist Messrs. Barrett, Borland, et al, in the reconstruction of the "Pike" bridges. Sorry to see you go, "Bill," but watch your step!

Brother Craig has just discovered the fact that there are some good people living on the south side of the Monongahela River, and the result is, quite naturally, another "Beechview" booster. Mr. and Mrs. Craig and family are a welcome addition to the ranks of the South Hill's residents.

We understand that David Harum sort of met his match in a lumber deal recently, and, in the course of the negotiations, discovered that $10.00 per thousand is not necessarily a standard price for lumber when the other fellow has it and you want it.

The late "Major" Goldsborough, Engineering Department

The Baggage Department Mermaid—Miss Ethel Maxwell Stephens

What has become of the social crowd which in times past was wont to gather at stated intervals to woo the Muse? Here it is the open season and no one has had a word to say about getting together. Of course, J. P. R. is gone, and his laugh has gone with him, but there are certainly enough left for a foursome at least. How 'bout it, boys?

We are pleased to announce the addition to our forces of Messrs. Butts and Zouck, and there is no doubt but that they will fit in splendidly with the organization.

The picture business has lagged somewhat and there are doubts about our having any for publication. However, before the summer is over we hope to be able to submit pictures of our girls in the office. But in making this statement, we have in mind that fact that unless the date of issue of the MAGAZINE is speeded up, there is grave danger of the girls marrying and leaving us before their pictures can be printed. (With apologies to R. M. V.)

Office of Chief Engineer Maintenance

By J. R. DYCHE

The employees of this department, General Offices, recently got together and decided that they would like to have a small space in YE GUDE OLE MAGAZINE, and have elected J. E. Barnhart as their correspondent.

Now, as Mr. Barnhart is still a little bashful in his new role, I have taken the initial contribution upon myself and will introduce our correspondent.

Mr. Barnhart entered the service August 15, 1911, as clerk, Maintenance of Way Department, New Castle Division, and has gradually pushed to the front. He has served as shop clerk, Martinsburg Shop, clerk, Office Chief Engineer, Maintenance of Way, Baltimore, chief maintenance of way timekeeper, Cumberland, Md., maintenance of way clerk, Wheeling, W. Va. From Wheeling he was again transferred to Baltimore as assistant chief clerk to E. Stimson, chief engineer maintenance, which position he now holds.

Mr. Barnhart, in his present position, has an excellent opportunity to, and does, keep constantly on the look-out, and takes steps to "Stop that Leak" as effectively as it can be done.

Mr. Barnhart is a World War veteran, having served in the Medical Supply Depot from July 1, 1918, to June 1, 1919, when he again returned to the good old Baltimore and Ohio.

Mr. Barnhart is an energetic and loyal employe and has the interests of the Baltimore and Ohio at heart. We may expect some interesting notes from our department in future.

Charles Hines, who acted as special agent at Chicago during the incoming Shriners' movement, returned just in time to act as "next to the best man" at his sister's wedding, June 6.

The mermaid in the accompanying picture is our "office beauty," Ethel Maxwell Stephens.

The other day there was a hurried call for an efficient baggageman to accompany the Presidential Special on its trip to Alaska. After a hasty survey, W. A. Clark, baggage agent, Camden Station, was selected.

While the duties connected with this journey do not represent all play, it looks like an enviable trip, and we are looking forward to some interesting reports from Mr. Clark.

The baggagemen who had anything to do with the handling of baggage for the Shriners' Convention at Washington the first week in June, are to be commended. Not a single complaint has been received in this office. This is greatly appreciated by the Department.

Don't you hear them bells? What bells? Why wedding bells. Believe me, they are ringing for the girls of this department. Miss Lilly Sheffer headed the list by marrying our own "Big Ben" Schmidt on June 5. Can't you see them walking down the church aisle together; little Lilly and Big Ben? They say the best goods come in small packages, and I'll bet you that in future Big Ben will follow in the wake of little Lilly, like a big steamer being towed out by a little tug.

The next on the list is Miss Iona Newcomb, who became Mrs. Elmer F. Lauer, on June 19. We haven't the pleasure of Mr. Lauer's acquaintance, but feel sure he is a perfect "32," Mrs. Lauer carrying the heft of the family. Congratulations!

Next comes our multigraph specialist, Miss Sara Morris, who was married to Mr. Michael Goldstein, June 24. We are going to miss you a lot, Sara, but you have our best wishes.

We understand our friend Wooten is about to become a benedict, but the time and date of the wedding are a dark secret, so we will say no more for the present.

Members of the Baltimore and Ohio Accounting Association in this department, who made the special trip to New York on Decoration Day, are still telling us of the wonderful time they had and how royally they were treated on this trip. Here's luck to the Association and wishing them many happy returns of the day.

Greetings to our latest recruits: Mrs. Francis McShane, Miss M. P. Martin, Messrs. C. Feldman, E. A. Shorb, J. Fineman, G. W. Christy, Z. Taylor and W. Fountain.

The opening of King Tut's tomb seems to have started a craze for Egyptian effects, not only in fabrics but even in style of hair.

THEY WENT A-HIKING

We had a surprise one morning when one of the young ladies walked in and displayed her "King Tut Bobbed Hair." How about it Dell—What next?

They say girls do not make good athletes, but for a record jumper I think we must hand Miss Kistner the palm; from the Voucher Writers Division to the Accountant's Division, is some jump; believe me.

Our timekeeper, Mr. Aro, was recently presented with an increase in his family; a son. He was so overjoyed he had to take a week's vacation.

Just a little hint to our readers! While enjoying your vacation don't forget the correspondent. Bring home a few snapshots (Make 'em snappy) and give us the dope, why and wherefores, and we will do the rest. I am sure your friends will enjoy them.

Edward P. Snyder, formerly of this office, has accepted a position in the senior Vice-President's Office.

Most of our old engagement rings are being guarded with a "Band" now-a-days, but Miss Katherine Donneley has started a new list; she has a brand new diamond. Who will be the next to follow?

The accompanying snap shot is of Miss Ella M. Horn, ten months old daughter of Clifford Horn, this office.

Correspondent, S. J. O'NEILL

Miss Francis Sherlock, the "Lone Star" of the Lumber Department, and Miss Marie Wynne, Purchasing Department, are to be seen daily studying time tables and maps, preparatory to winding up the final details in connection with the extensive trip which they are planning for this summer.

Some of the boys in the office had a bully time in Washington during the Shriner's Convention. Among the ones who report the biggest doings are "Chap" Laupus, Otto Kainberger and "Pete" Shaw. From all accounts, those three "Birds" didn't miss a thing. Our friend, Harry Householder, also went to Washington, but he had his wife with him.

"Kandy Kid" Earl Otto, alias "Leghorn Luke," is endeavoring to impersonate Huckleberry Finn with his imported Malay Grass Hat. That's the boy that likes two ball games at Oriole Park for the price of one.

Relief Department

Correspondent, H. IRVING MARTIN

A pleasant smile was on the face of Father Diedrich Knickerbocker at dawn on Decoration Day, as he looked upon the bright faces of the members of the "Sister Knickerbocker" Club of the Relief Department who reported to take a trip to Harper's Ferry and a hike through the surrounding country. Misses Esther Harr, Lillian C. Gerhold, Elizabeth Brune, Marie Segrist and Elizabeth Helfrich checked in to take the trip.

When the party reached the station at Harper's Ferry they felt the need of more substantial food than they had absorbed at reveille, having touched the breakfast food but lightly. The baggagemaster at the Ferry having loaned them his small son as escort and guide, good drinking water and a camping place were located. The members of the club unloaded the delicatessen, built a fire, and were quickly munching "hot dogs" with sundry relishes. "We are told that the bill of fare also included baked beans, rolls, pickles, coffee and ONIONS. (Once the man who "only had fifty cents" could feed a healthy girl on that sum, but the high cost of something or other has knocked that theory cold.) Resting awhile after this "light lunch" the club climbed to Chimney Rock. After many slips and troubles they reached their goal and remained an hour and half admiring the scenery and filling their kodak. With the aid of heavy sticks they finally succeeded in getting to the foot of the hill, much in the fashion of "Jack and Jill."

After another rest they again climbed, this time to Hill Top House, as they wished to see Harper's Ferry from every angle. Well repaid for their climb they returned to town, and as the shoe boxes were empty long since, got another substantial meal at one of the restaurants on "Main Street."

The two hours remaining till train time were spent chatting and telling ghost tales.

A clear day, lots of fun, and the photographs here reproduced make my story a "Twice-told Tale."

We welcome Miss G. L. Porter, who has recently been employed in this office, vice N. A. Murphy, transferred to E. T. Horn's office.

We were agreeably surprised by a visit from Mrs. Samuel Kelly (formerly Miss Mary B. Tansill), who was employed in this office and was at one time correspondent of the MAGAZINE. Mrs. Kelly who now lives in Fairmont, W. Va., has been spending a short time with her parents in Baltimore. "Mary," we hope you will make your visits more frequent.

Ella Margaret Horn, whose daddy is in the General Freight Claim Office

Recently the Telegraph Company has been admirably represented in our office by three distinguished visitors, namely, M. C. Allen, division plant superintendent, New York; E. P. Totman, division supervisor, maintenance, New York; and G. W. Richardson, division supervisor, lines, Cleveland.

The accompanying photograph is Robert G. Miller, son of Chief Clerk R. F. Miller. Young Robert is a student at the Staunton Military Academy and is home for his summer vacation, after having accredited himself well in his first year's studies.

As a token of appreciation and esteem in which the members of the Telegraph Department hold W. L. Brown, he was presented with a gold watch and chain on his seventieth birthday, June 7. Mr. Brown entered the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company in November 1885, and has served that Company loyally and efficiently for thirty-eight years. We extend congratulations and the heartiest wishes for many more happy birthdays, "Uncle Billy."

The chief has so many carbon copies to make that onion skin paper must be used. This causes Miss Catherine to cry!

It is good to see Miss Ritter back at work after her long illness.

Our two Ohio warblers have been at it again. After hearing Turner and Bowditch sing in the Glee Club concert the latter part of May, we'll say they are both good singers.

We now have a regular camel (Campbell) in our office—brought here from—Pittsburgh. That's one time we put one over on Sahara.

Bobolink! Bobolink!
Let this be your song:
Richmond had her hair cut
And we girls are for it strong!

Ruther Tucker promised to love, honor, and disobey "Billy" Russell on June 28. We wish them a long and happy married life.

R. G. Miller, son of Chief Clerk Miller,
Telegraph Department

It looks as though a country club for Baltimore and Ohio employes is within our reach. Who knows but what we may yet learn how to play golf!

The writer has been told that a member of the Building Pilot Engineer's force was seen in Philadelphia recently with a very attractive young lady. We also understand he missed two trains to Philadelphia. Wonder which end of the journey caused him to become excited? Judging from the attention paid to the young lady, it must have been on the Philadelphia end.

Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts

Correspondent, JOHN LIMPET

W. B. Dudderar, assistant auditor, Coal and Coke Receipts, was one of a party of four who made an automobile tour of the country, June 4 to 23 inclusive, touching the following cities en route: Philadelphia, New York, Albany, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toronto, Can., London, Can., Windsor, Can., Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cumberland and Hagerstown.

Fairly good weather was encountered during the entire trip, embracing a run of 1875 miles, and trouble was limited to one blowout, making the tour an enjoyable affair.

Phone call for "The Shiek of the Office." Boy, page O. R. Lutz!

On June 22 about twenty of the girls of this office surprised Miss E. P. Russell by giving her a "Shower" of linen and various other "pretties" for her approaching wedding, which took place on July 3. Miss Russell retaliated by showing the girls her trousseau.

We wish Miss Russell good luck and a long happy married life.

A better day than June 16, could not have been made for an outing, and the Office Bowling League was lucky to strike such a day for its Second Annual Shore Party.

Willow Grove Spring Shore was the spot, and the boys went direct from the office. Sandwiches and appropriate beverages were on hand when the party arrived.

The afternoon was ideal for outdoor sports, and the boys made good use of the time. Johnnie Muth claims the Quoit Championship of fifteen counties and two precincts, for consecutive ringers. An effort was made to get Nix, Miller and Pritchard in a 100 yard dash, but to no avail. The ball was tossed around and the married men seem to be in good shape for their impending battle with the bachelors.

An excellent meal was served at 6.00 p. m., and the boys certainly did make fried chicken, fish, crab cakes and numerous side dishes disappear. After eating, the time was spent in various ways, enjoying the quiet peace of a perfect afternoon, and when daylight failed, the majority of the boys made their way to the cars and home.

The affair was voted such a success that a return party is planned for July 21.

A good beginning is a big step in the right direction. Anything that is started may be hard work at first, but doesn't the work usually become more interesting as we tackle each new part of our project? After the foundation has been properly laid for a well planned course, one's progress is as fascinating as the growth of the skyscraper.

July, the patriotic month brought to mind a little school play the writer participated in 14 years ago entitled: "The Fourth of July Oration," in which the chief actor played the role of an enthused orator.

Words no longer rising spontaneously to the lips, am concluding with a couple of office notes.

The following gentlemen have severed their connections with this office during the past three months to take positions with the U. S. Railroad Administration, Washington, D. C.: L. F. Gallion, W. H. Behler and R. C. Flavin.

Recently a group of girls were making plans for summer school. They are not all going to the same school. If you'd listened you would have heard above the excited babble expressions like this: "this at Cornell," "new course at Columbia," "wonderful swimming at Chautauqua" or "Sargeant," but they were all planning one grand week end in New York before they settle down to studies. One of the girls, who seemed to be sort'a "listening in" without saying much, piped up with the question as to what road they were using to New York. Somebody answered, mentioning a competing line. "And why do you prefer them?" This from the questioner. No ready answer came but after a second or two one of the girls said, "Well, I know that line better because I pass their station on the bus." Everybody laughed and voted the response clever. But when the suggestion that they try the Baltimore and Ohio came, they thought a minute and then said that there really was no reason why they shouldn't. And so it's to be a Baltimore and Ohio party to New York.

A few one-way tickets to New York aren't much, you say? Probably not, but "one-way" is sure to mean "return trips" also. Why? Because we have so much confidence in our service that we know if it's once Baltimore and Ohio it is sure to be always Baltimore and Ohio. The important thing is that we are helping them form the best habits.

Felicitations to Miss Marie Bohlman, who will leave us shortly to enter the state of connubial bliss. We think Mr. Schluderberger's choice could not be improved upon. We wish them in their new life every happiness and (this is a nice word we just thought of) longevity.

A porch party was given at the home of Miss Aubrey Silance, 3417 Mondawmin Avenue, on June 11, in honor of the happy pair, to give us an opportunity to convey the good wishes we have expressed above. The occasion also proved to be a reunion of many girls who left this office to take the same step. Their happy smiles must have been an assurance to Marie that she was taking the right step.

After all the choicest bits of gossip had been exchanged, Mrs. Mollie Merrican Ford, one of our recent brides, played the wedding march and the prospective bride and groom led the way to the beautifully decorated dining room. It was not until Marie saw the white ribbons, wedding bells and the little bride and groom in the center of the table, that she realized she was the honored guest of the evening, which sends the age-old adage that "a woman cannot keep a secret" flying skyward.

The guests were Mesdames Elton Aist, Robert Ford, Richard Hammond, and Stella Tipton; Misses Marie Bohlman, Mary Neck, Ethel Porter, Ethel Fifer, Jean Schaffer, Lottie Fuller, Anita Simering, Marie Linzey, Marie Hohlman, Grace Zimmerman, Irene Hulse, Lottie Hulse, Virginia Seene, Regina Coster, Gertrude Kimball, Emily Tripp, Selma Herzog, Bertha Scott, Dorothy Robinson, Lillian Schueler and Josephine Silance.

One of the attractions of the Shriner's Convention, visited by several thousand people, was the Baltimore and Ohio historical exhibit of ancient and modern locomotives and cars. This transferred E. L. Bangs temporarily to the service that he loves—historical work.

At the big Shriner's parade on June 6, Messrs. Wilmer and Thomas had grand stand seats on the curb on the avenue. The low seat and limited space must have been rather "tough" on the fat man.

Misses Grace Zimmerman and Ethel Porter have undergone serious operations but have now returned, a little thinner, perhaps, but just as cheerful. We're glad to see them well again!

The marriage of Miss Ethel Fisher and J. Albert Marsh, on June 2, at St. Luke's Lutheran Church, was an event in the history of our office. The bride, who looked like a picture, wore a beautiful gown of cocoa shade Molly-O crepe, with hat and slippers to match, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The wedding trip was kept secret but it leaked out and we learn they honeymooned in the mountains. Through this marriage the Payroll Bureau lost an energetic and popular clerk. All join in extending congratulations.

Henry Ford has a new follower in the Payroll Bureau. Be a good sport, Selma, and take us a-flivvering!

Arthur Shanahan now walks with an exaggerated swagger, having just received a promotion from the Statistical Bureau to the Journal Entry Bureau. We trust he will succeed in his new duties. Mr. Shanahan, you will remember, is the young swain who recently won a contest for being the handsomest man in Hagerstown. Imagine his chagrin and his disappointment when it was discovered that the promoters of the contest were escaped patients of Spring Grove!

The Voucher Register Bureau, has suffered the loss of one of its real assets in the transfer of Joseph Pardoe to the Transportation Bureau. We wish him the success that he deserves.

The late Frank Tinsley, Office of Auditor Merchandise Receipts

Well, the secret is finally out. One of the secretaries in the office has had the noose thrown around his neck—he has given THE girl THE ring.

We are told that two of our young belles will spend their vacation at Coster, Md., and for the occasion have purchased tweed knickers. We envy the Solomon's Island boys.

A new battery has recently been installed in the Radio Station "E. F. T." and the records can now be readily heard in all parts of the office.

Within the last month two of our able clerks were transferred to work on the divisions. Ted Butts, Fuel Bureau, has gone to Pittsburgh to work in the Engineering Department and Eddie Deal, Voucher, File and Index Bureau, is doing yard work at Willard, Ohio. Sincere wishes for success!

We sympathize deeply with Mr. Yienger in the recent loss of his mother, and we want him to feel assured that we all would gladly lighten the burden of his sorrow if we only could.

The Baltimore and Ohio Baseball team now playing in the Inter Club League deserves much praise. Mr. Pryor, manager, has been successful in getting together a snappy and hard hitting team that the Road should feel proud of. The games they have played fully demonstrate the fact that they are in for the pennant and that they are going to make a good fight for it. Let's all get together and root and then we know they'll win. Following is the remaining schedule for this season:

The advent of Gladys Marie Corinne Geraghty on May 31, at St. Joseph Hospital, caused much excitement. "W. A." was such a proud daddy that he made the rounds of the office for congratulations. Stopping suddenly before "M. D." and asking her if she was going to congratulate him on the arrival of his little daughter, in a startled tone she replied, "Yes, thank you!"

The "Dear Paul and Our Lillian" series is nearing a climax. Our Lillian made her final preparations to promise "Dear Paul" to be his wedded wife on June 30.

Um-m-m! "S. W." what is this we hear about September and vacation time being so slowly on its way, and is it true you are expecting company to share this vacation with you?

Our Miss Margaret Will is now an appendix-less-heroine, and each one of us wish to tell her how glad we are to know she is convalescing so nicely. We wish to add that "G. B. H." is now wearing a bright smile to the office in place of that woe-be-gone expression that seemed to be obsessing him.

The next issue will show pictures of our prize winners, W. S. Mangold, claim checker, Revision Department, and Theodore Hassling, junior clerk, Revision Department, who were fortunate enough to win the $20.00 prize offered by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for students making sufficient averages in the Railroad Accounting Course conducted by Assistant Comptroller F. A. Deverell, of the Johns Hopkins Faculty, at Homewood.

We note that the long boy, "Bobbie" Gerhardt, sojourned in Washington, D. C. during Shriners' week and came back with two gold medals as trophies of the regatta feature of that convention. Boys, keep up the good work.

Millard Watkins, a promising young business man of Syracuse, N. Y., and former interline clerk of this department, recently called and we were pleased to learn that he is getting along well. Millard, we will recall, was one of our whirlwind soldier boys. One of the last to leave here and one of the first to return, and all through the fray "Over There" on that memorable trip personally conducted by our Uncle Samuel! We want to remind our young friend that the Baltimore and Ohio touches many points where his concern has agencies, and when practical, we would be glad to have him remember his Alma Mater, the Baltimore and Ohio, when the question of transportation presents itself. Continued success, and call again!

A million and half tried this as one of the tests used now in the schools. When you have leisure, look it over. Set down figures, mixed up, three wide, seven high, six sets of them, and add in two minutes. They tell me you're normal if you do it in that time.

We note with interest smiles galore after a certain young woman's return from a short vacation, and the cause of this delight was a reunion of the Second District of Pennsylvania Normal School where "Our Mary" went to attend that event. Nothing like reestablishing old acquaintances and maintaining tried and true friendships. The event must have been charming, indeed, when speakers were there to represent classes in the last five decades.

A soldier is dead, the hostilities of life have ceased, the last review has been held and taps have been sounded. Our late friend, Sergeant Frank Tinsley, departed this life after a short illness on June 4.

Funeral services were conducted June 7 by Rev. George J. Kromer, Chapel of the Guardian Angel P. E. Church, and by a representation from Central Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of which body he was an active member since its inception. Interment was at Loudon Park. A squad fired a volley over the grave. Mr. Tinsley had been identified with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad since June 9, 1882.

For thirty years he was a member of the Fifth Regiment, Maryland National Guard. He was lieutenant of the regiment during the Spanish American War. We shall miss his fatherly counsel and pleasant disposition. Mr. Tinsley was a member of the Knights of Pythias, Baltimore and Ohio Veterans Association, Interline Clerks Welfare Association and Veterans of Foreign Wars. The latter organization had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mr. Tinsley is survived by four sons and three daughters; three of the sons saw active service in France. The family has our condolence.

The most prominent of our office romances culminated, on June 2, in the marriage of Miss Jessie Disney, formerly of this office, to Head Clerk, Train Earnings Bureau, Z. T. Meushaw. After announcing that they would leave for New York on the four o'clock train, the bride and groom slipped away at two o'clock. The would-be serenaders declare that: "A little rice pudding now and then—is relished by the best of men." They contend, however, that rice makes a better missile than a dessert.

We are glad to have John Finn, assistant chief clerk, back with us. The news of his unfortunate accident was received with much regret.

June 13 will go down in history as the birthday of one of our future Presidents. "Joe" Meyd is all "fussed up" over the arrival of "Little Joe." Mrs. Meyd was formerly Miss Elizabeth Minnick, of this office.

We were all sorry to learn of the illness of Miss Margaret O'Leary and hope she will have fully recovered before these notes appear in print. We miss her cheerful disposition and ready wit.

The House That Tom Built

The accompanying photo shows Chief Rate Clerk Thomas Mylet's new home at Annadale, Staten Island, recently completed and now occupied by the happy possessor and his family. Mr. and Mrs. Mylet are shown in front of the house. Moving into it materialized Tom's most cherished wish and was brought about by the aid of the Baltimore and Ohio Relief Department. The house stands on ground bought by Mr. Mylet many years ago when, after getting a wife, they yearned for and became ambitious to own a home. A most worthy and honorable ambition it is to become your own landlord and janitor. It sort of "adds inches to one." When a man goes to the polls and an inspector after inspecting him and getting his house address asks: "tenant or owner?" it feels like a mouthful to say "owner." It converts a plain citizen to a respected citizen. "Tom's" house or "property" adjoins the extensive and well cared for grounds of the Annadale Club-house and his ambition now it to make his ground match that of the classy neighborhood, to which end he has tanned his skin and skinned his hands rooting up stumps and planting seeds, but in his heart is song, the theme of which is "Home, Sweet Home," tempo allegro, con espressione.

Congratulations are extended to John V. Costello, assistant chief clerk to superintendent, who recently announced his engagement to Miss Francis Connine. Miss Connine was formerly employed on this division as ticket agent.

Employees of the Staten Island Lines extend their heartfelt sympathy to the family of John H. Junius, conductor, who died at his home on May 29.

Seen and Heard Along the Line

"Buck" Farley, our "illustrious" trainman, will give lectures this winter on "How I won the World War."

J. V. Ryan, claim agent, has challenged "Jack" Sharp to a wrestling match.

"Devoti," the well known linguist, will give lessons on "English to Foreigners."

All rookie brakemen take notice—Henry Goolic is contemplating signing up with the Giants. Ask Fetzer, he knows.

Pettigrew awoke one morning recently to find that his wife had rented a home in Port Richmond.

John Costello desires that the Railroad Club run another package party. Crackers are cheap, John, why wait?

D. Lawson requested "Jimmy" Lynch to let him off one day last week; having in mind that "Jimmy" was trainmaster.

"Dan" Carney, tinsmith helper, is practicing for a new show. "How I fix stoves in two parts."

It needs no prophet to foretell the wonderful outlook of the baseball team, Staten Island Railroad Club.

In the last five games played they have won four, and the game lost was because of inability of several of the best players to get the necessary time off to play.

On June 23 the W. A. Marshall Coal Company were the victims, and it is needless to say that the Coal Company lads never had a look in.

Our shining star, John Larkin, assumed the pitching burden, and his masterful control, change of pace and varied assortment of curves were more than the Marshall cohorts could overcome.

The record speaks for itself.

With a high class of pitching talent to draw from, the Railroad Club hopes to set a new record in the annals of its activities.

Here is a funny one we heard—a man said to his friend, "Say 'Bill' its dem hot, you know it? Why it's a hundred in the shade." His friend replied, "Well, you don't have to stay in the shade."

Miss E. Runnow, stenographer, Storekeeper's Office, isn't worrying what it is in the shade; she supplies her own draft from a hand fan. "Lend it to us, please?"

George E. Nix, work checker, while on his way to work on the morning of May 25, noticed Baltimore and Ohio box car 181294, in a train which was ready to leave Mt. Clare. In passing the car he noticed that one wheel was sliding, and after investigation found that a block of wood was wedged between the steel underframe and the wheel, which caused wheel to slide. Mr. Nix had train stopped and block removed. This observation of Mr. Nix prevented an accident, and "Stopped a Leak." Keep up your good work, George! Instead of letting George do it—we all should be on the lookout for things of this sort.

On May 24, M. M. Buettner, better known as "Max," work checker, became the father of a nine and one half pound girl. Now "Max," guess there will be other things to check up besides steel cars. Good Luck to you and the Missus!

"THEY CAME, THEY SAW AND THEY CONQUERED," and they were some crowd! There were many things in connection with their visit to this city that are of great interest to all Baltimore and Ohio people, and undoubtedly some of the Company's photographers and others have furnished interesting items for the MAGAZINE; but one or two things may possibly have escaped notice, so, although in danger of repetition, your correspondent ventures to add "a few remarks" for the occasion.

Restaurant Manager H. Davies, his mother and three year old "Sonny"

One of the most interesting features was the presentation to Imperial Potentate James S. McCandless by General Manager Scheer, of a memento giving tangible evidence of his eventful trip over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Mr. Scheer, accompanied by Freight Agent D. M. Fisher, and City Passenger Agents "Jack" Lewis, presented the Imperial Potentate with a handsomely bound album, which was prepared under the direction of Superintendent of Motive Power C. A. Gill, containing various views of the engine (No. 5087) which had hauled his train into Washington; one view of which was entitled "THE TWO BIG BOYS" showing Mr. McCandless standing beside the engine.

Cabinet-sized photographs of President Willard and Vice-Presidents Shriver, Galloway and Fries were also included in the collection.

The album was lettered in gold to show that it was presented to "Sunny Jim" by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

Mr. McCandless expressed his gratification and appreciation of the thoughtfulness of the officers of our Company, and told the committee that the Baltimore and Ohio was his own road, he being originally from Parkersburg, W. Va. He also spoke of the consideration that he had been shown and the recognition that he had received by virtue of the office he held, after he was on the rails of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Our spacious yard and platforms were almost literally turned upside down during the eventful period of occupation by the army of invading shriners. We had twenty-three temples parked in our yards, and the gayly decorated cars and gaudy costumes of the Nobles caused the old Baltimore and Ohio Yards to present an appearance that will not be forgotten for many a long day. In addition to our usual number of tracks it was found necessary to lay four additional tracks in Eckington yard. Our yard was finely illuminated by the use of five extra electric light poles, each of which had two brilliant lights. In addition to this there was a large light on the corner of our office building which threw into bold relief the beautiful decorations that were on the front of the building during the convention.

During the recent spell of humidity, when a cake of ice would have felt more comfortable than the office chair, and the mercury was trying its utmost to escape the confines of the glass tube, we and our partner in crime took a trip to Bay Shore or Sandy Beach (or was it Riverview?) for the purpose of a dip in the "briny." On arrival we nearly encountered one of the fair sex from Camden and (No gentle reader it is NOT her little brother) consequently the purpose of our trip was forgotten and the accompanying picture is the result. close enough to hear part of the conversation which ran as follows: "A'int nachur wunnerful?" To which the reply was made in a voice trembling with emotion; "A'int love Grand?"

Numerous requests having been made for a picture of H. L. Goodman, secretary to the superintendent, known from Philadelphia to Brunswick as "Goofey." Hence the "close-up" as they say in the "Movies."

Considerable difficulty was experienced in persuading the young man to pose; cajolery, threats and pleading of no avail, bribery was resorted to in the form of a "Kemel." Goof smokes from twenty to thirty fags each day, and is not particular as to what blend—Piedmonts, Chesterfields or Fatimas, and never, never "mooches" more than one at a time, and rarely more than three from one person each day. It is safe to conclude that as he passes on to the "Great Beyond" his last words will be "Gimme a cigarette."

abled fireman, who has been of great assistance to Dr. Ward in handling clerical work, etc.

Dr. Ward's first connection with the Baltimore and Ohio was in the Civil Engineering Department, commencing in 1867. After six and one half years he severed his connection with the railroad, when lack of money halted construction on practically every railroad in the country.

Dr. Ward was graduated from the School of Medicine, University of Virginia, in 1877, and served in the medical corps, United States Army, in Texas and Mexico, until 1880, when he resigned. He then took up private practice in Baltimore and became acquainted with former President Garrett. In March 1881 he accepted a position as medical examiner, Relief Department, and he has served in this capacity over the entire line, Philadelphia to Chicago.

Dr. Ward says "The late Dr. Barnard, who was undoubtedly the founder, and at that time secretary of the association, before determining to resign his position in order to become assistant to president, called me to Baltimore to perform the duties of chief medical officer. I filled this office until the Maryland Legislature annulled the charter under which the association had been functioning. I then asked to be returned to Winchester as medical examiner, and have remained here ever since."

"It will be recalled that the Relief Association, after its charter had been annulled, was reorganized as a department of the Railroad. In the early days it was not very popular, but now, after forty-three years of operation it is proving more popular daily in every feature.

"You will see my service is now nearing the half century mark, and I do not know anyone who entered the service with me, who is now on the active list."

The position of medical examiner is by no means a "small job." Dr. Ward has proven his ability to the many who are under his jurisdiction. In Brunswick, he is highly respected and beloved by everyone who knows him.

Joseph A. Krause, a member of the Relief Department, who is permanently disabled because of an injury received while on duty, voluntarily offers his services to assist Dr. Ward in the Brunswick office work. He is secretary of several fraternal organizations and is popular with his fellows.

Cumberland Division

Vacation time is with us. Keep cool and practice Safety First.

Employees of the Cumberland Division are to be congratulated on their efficiency. When it comes to doing big things and doing them right, they are on the job. After breaking all records of miles per car per day, they jumped in and handled one of the biggest passenger movements ever handled in so short a period of time, this being the movement of the Shriners' Conclave in Washington, D. C. More than forty special trains were handled east in addition to regular trains, and over twenty westward. Keep up the good work, boys!

Crossing Watchman Pennington, Polk Street Crossing, calls our attention to a near accident on his crossing on May 24. An eastbound freight train was approaching just as a westbound freight cleared the crossing. A little girl ran across, not noticing the approach of the eastbound train, or Crossing Watchman Pennington's stop signal. Virgil Atkinson, a High School student, saw the danger and by quick action succeeded in getting the little girl, who was a pupil of Columbia Street School, off the track. Young Atkinson is to be commended for his prompt action which probably averted a fatal accident.

Engine 5087 was fitted up in Cumberland Roundhouse to handle the Honolulu Special carrying the Imperial Potentate of the Shriners' Conclave, Cumberland to Washington. Cumberland Shop employees are to be congratulated on the good work they did on this engine, also the Back Shop employees who fitted up Engine 7100 in such fine shape for exhibition at Washington.

The Queen City Social Club, consisting of employees in the Superintendent's and Division Accountant's Offices, and their families, held their first outing at Patterson's Creek June 23. Over one hundred attended. Swimming, fishing and other outdoor sports were enjoyed, and basket luncheon served. Superintendent Brown and Assistant Superintendent Faherty visited the picnic. A good time was had by all. More of these enjoyable outings will be held during the hot weather.

The Cumberland Division recently had the pleasure of congratulating Superintendent C. W. VanHorn on his promotion to general superintendent of the Maryland District. While we regret that he has left us, his promotion was well merited by his good work here. We are glad that his new duties will bring him to the Cumberland Division.

Superintendent R. W. Brown, who has taken up his duties on the Cumberland Division, is given a hearty welcome, and his success in this field is assured. He is well qualified to take up the work laid down by Superintendent VanHorn, and every employee on the division will do his part to keep it at the head of the list.

We have been breaking records recently in miles per car per day, fuel consumption reductions, Stop That Leak drive, etc. Every employee on the Division is keyed up to the point of saying "just show us what you want next," and at the same time, maintaining the high standard of efficiency, and striving for something better. That is the spirit that wins!

"Aunt Mary's" letters from "Over There" are very interesting. Let us have more of them. Knowing "Aunt Mary's" aptitude for seeing and relating, we look for interesting numbers in the near future.

We have requested several of our local employees to take their cameras on their vacations. We will look for some good pictures for the next issue.

The new Capitol Limited between Washington and Chicago is the pride of all employees, with its on time record. The Cumberland Daily News recently carried a story from Paw Paw, W. Va., that the local residents of that town are setting their clocks and watches by this train as it passes on the dot daily. Let's keep up this good record. Forty days on time performance shows it can be done.

A LOCOMOTIVE FIREMAN's promotion depends largely on the knowledge he shows of the locomotive and kindred subjects at the time he goes up for his examinations.

It behooves every fireman, therefore, to prepare himself as thoroughly as possible so that he will not be found wanting when his turn comes.

Failure to pass means a black mark against your name and the loss of valuable seniority rights.

The best way to make sure of passing that examination with a high mark is to study at home, in your spare time, with the International Correspondence Schools. Lucy Catherine Haines-Duckworth, daughter of the late John W. and Sarah C. Haines, was born at Donaldson, W. Va., on November 1, 1879, living her entire life in her childhood home. United in marriage to Tieman H. E. Duckworth on January 25, 1916, she continued to reside on the old home place, which she and her young husband purchased. Hers was an exemplary Christian life. United with the M. E. Church in early girlhood, she was ever a consistent and active worker. Her death followed a second major operation at the Allegany Hospital at Cumberland.

The high esteem in which she was held in the community was attested by the large attendance at the funeral held at Forest Glen, conducted by her pastor, and the many floral tributes. Besides her husband, two sisters and three brothers, Mrs. Duckworth left two little daughters, Sarah Virginia, age six years, and baby Elizabeth, sixteen months, to mourn a loving mother's tender care and affection. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of the entire community.

Considerable enlargement of our plant, greatly increasing our capacity; is included by our management in this year's program. These include an additional treating cylinder, working tanks, storage tanks, generator and engine air compressor, boiler, additional tie and piling tram cars and other equipment which means remodeling of our present building and many other changes. The addition of this cylinder will enable our company, in addition to treating cross ties, to which the plant has been devoted almost entirely in the past, to treat bridge ties and other construction material requiring straight creosote process.

Our congratulations and best wishes go with our former superintendent C. W. Van Horn, recently promoted to general superintendent, Maryland District.

We extend to Dr. and Mrs. Maxwell our deepest sympathy in the death of their little son Godfrey.

"Pete" Ervin followed a Shriner's band all over Washington during the Convention and came back home with his feet so badly blistered that he could scarcely walk. He is better now, thank you.

Passenger Engineer "Bill" Rafter bought a pet monkey the other day but his wife wouldn't let him keep it so he gave it to Fireman Hollen. Someone said Hollen had it for a mascot on his engine, and was using the monk to dig down coal for him.

Announcements were received recently of the marriage of Miss Irene Harvey to Fireman Charles Blamer. Congratulations!

Brakeman Kenneth Hildreh also joined the rank of benedicts on June 12 when he entered into a life long contract with Miss Elize Kight. The happy couple will be at home to their many friends at Keyser after they return from their honeymoon.

What a sight it is to see the fellows check in at the shops these days! More men are working at the local shops than ever before in the history of Keyser and everybody is happy! Housing conditions in Keyser, however, are bad and families are very much crowded. Remember, fellows, that the Relief Department is your friend when you contemplate building. You will do well to get in touch with them. Be your own landlord!

We regret to report the death of Veteran Engineer Richard Purdy. "Uncle Dick" was pensioned in 1899 after having served our Company for 48 years. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the family.

Your correspondent has been assigned to the agency at Deer Park for the summer. I shall be unable to keep in touch with West End readers as readily as I do at Keyser, and I hope if you have any news you will send it to me at Deer Park Hotel. Your co-operation will be appreciated.

Several years ago "Pat" Rankin came to Keyser as a student at Potomac State College. During vacation he was employed as a brakeman on the West End. He studied faithfully and worked for our Company every vacation during his time here. When he finished at Potomac, he went to the University at Morgantown and kept his turn on the road, working whenever he was out of school. Recently he returned from Morgantown, having completed his studies. Now his shingle hangs out, in a down town office, reading "Finnell and Rankin, Attorneys-at-Law."

We congratulate you, "Pat." We know it has not been all sunshine and the friendships you made while you were one of us will always be kept sacred.

Business on the M. & K. Sub-Division has taken a jump and indications are that it will continue at the present high level. Car mileage is being given serious attention and results are encouraging.

Sabraton's new band is being heard from frequently. We expect to see them on parade by September.

Fishing is the order of the day! Recently several Sabraton celebrities engaged in the sport and the host of the evening, Supervisor Fretwell, made the following statement to a representative of the Associated Press: Fish caught—6—All large. Fish that got away—43—All immense. Headaches—7—Various. Grouches—7—Assorted.

Because of advances made by several members of the party the names of those who were present have been omitted.

The chest of Robert Dominec Kennedy expanded three inches recently—he's Uncle Robert now.

Road Foreman Henry filled Mr. Brown's place while he was on vacation. "Bill" is like wine—grows stronger with age—he lifted a car over a fifteen foot embankment with the Sabraton tool cars! His stay was limited and just as we were getting acquainted he left. We expect him back again next year.

"Curly" Johns' dogs are especially trained to hunt rabbits and he recently gave an exhibition of the best one's ability. He put the dog on a fresh trail and freed it; however the dog didn't seem interested, it strolled around a while and then went back into its house. The crowd assembled for the exhibition congratulated Mr. Johns upon the keenness of the dog and went home. No

Connellsville Division

Correspondent, C. E. REYNOLDS

On June 5 a dinner was given in honor of Superintendent Brown, who has gone to the Cumberland Division, and was attended by members of the Connellsville Division Staff and their wives. After dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Brown were presented with a silver service set, the presentation address being made by Division Engineer Gibson in a very able manner. Toast Master McElheny handled his job in his usual jovial manner. The floor was then cleared and all present enjoyed a dance.

Just before Mr. Brown departed for Cumberland, he sent the following letter to ALL EMPLOYEES—CONNELLSVILLE DIVISION:

"As you are no doubt aware, I am leaving the Connellsville Division to take the superintendency of the Cumberland Division. I therefore wish to take this opportunity to express to each and every employe on the Connellsville Division my appreciation of their loyal efforts during my stay to make the operation of this division a success.

"During the time I have been on the Connellsville Division a number of previous high marks have been out-distanced, and I readily realize that this has been due to the loyal and efficient manner in which all employees on the division have placed their shoulder to the wheel to bring about such results.

"In behalf of my successor I can only ask that you give him the same loyal and honest support that you have given me while I have been with you, and I am satisfied that if this is done, you will not only maintain the present standard of efficiency on the Connellsville Division, but will surpass even the highest marks you have made for me.

"I regret to leave the Connellsville Division, as I have, during my stay, considered each and every employee a friend, and trust the fact that we are from now on to be connected with separate divisions on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, will not in any way sever the friendly relationship that has existed between us."

A son was born recently, to Conductor and Mrs. J. J. Alt. The little one has been named Francis. Congratulations!

Our baseball team is now playing regularly. The club expects to have a better season than ever in its history. Manager Bowser announces that he will book only first-class aggregations. Come to the games and give the team your support.

The "efficient" messenger, Division Accountant's Office, Ralph Cockrell, has left us to take a position as machinist helper in the Shops. His past experience with a bicycle should be of great assistance to him.

M. L. Lohan, chief clerk to division accountant, won a prize at a card party recently. We want to know what the prize was, but "Mike" won't tell. Of course, we don't blame him for not saying it was a rubber doll.

One of our cartoons is Leo Duncan, maintenance of way labor distributor, Division Accountant's Office. Leo believes in playing "Safety First" when he plays his banjo for the dances at Dunbar.

On June 17 a nine pound boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Griffith, South Connellsville, Pa. The baby is their first child, and has been named William Albert.

The proud father is employed as weighmaster, Connellsville Scales.

We haven't received any news from "Swanmount" lately.

Lenora Grace, stenographer to division accountant, has bought a Ford Racer; it's some CRANK, without a self starter. After it gets started, it rambles right along.

We regret to announce the recent death of Conductors Charles E. Enos and John H. Harshman. Both men were reliable employees and their many friends on the Connellsville Division express deepest sympathy to the members of their families.

Pittsburgh Division

Correspondents, EARL FAIRGRIEVE and MARY BREEN

On June 16 G. W. Martin, formerly superintendent Pittsburgh Terminals, but now guiding the destinies of the Connellsville Division, was called to Pittsburgh suddenly. Upon his arrival he was whisked rapidly away to the Traffic Club, where he was the recipient of a testimonial dinner given by the staff officers of the Pittsburgh and Pittsburgh Terminal Divisions in appreciation of his efficient work while in action at Pittsburgh, and incident to his promotion to the superintendency at Connellsville, where he goes to take up the burden left by Superintendent R. W. Brown, promoted.

All the staff officers of the Pittsburgh and Pittsburgh Terminal Divisions were gathered round the festive board, and they had as their guests, General Superintendent Peck, Engineer Maintenance of Way E. G. Lane, and District Superintendent Motive Power G. A. Schmoll. After the wants of the inner man were satisfied, "Colonel" Martin was presented with a beautiful gold watch and Shriner pin as a token of the esteem in which he was held while our leader at Pittsburgh. Mr. Martin expressed his appreciation and was given the good wishes of all present.

A. H. Gribbin, car accountant, Pittsburgh, who has been ill for a long time, recently underwent a successful operation and is now convalescing. He will soon be back.

Stationmaster Drake was one of those Shrine persons who recently made a caravan to Washington. Although "Tom" helped to tramp through the blistering rays of Old Sol, he is none the worse for his experience and is back at the old stand directing his work with characteristic vigor.

All arrangements have been completed for the outing of the Veteran Employees at Olympia Park, July 25. This is going to be some outing and if you want to have a good time among people that you know, don't miss the opportunity to be present. Amusements have been provided to suit all and you can jazz yourself to death on the dance floor. Heap big time—Ketchum date. No forget. Beeg Time.

The little girl posing as a conductorette in our photograph on page 68 is the niece of Miss Ann Welsh, stenographer, Mr. Graffius' office, Glenwood, little Miss Peggy Remaley, age 13 months.

Talk about hot weather! Sometimes the temperature in the Master Mechanic's Office hits the mark at about 150, especially when District Boiler Inspector F. A. Now Fred says he is going to take a course in shorthand to try to keep up with "Jim."

The Mechanical Department, Pittsburgh Division, is sorry to lose Terminal Superintendent G. W. Martin, who has been appointed superintendent, Connellsville Division. His place on the Pittsburgh Division is taken by W. F. Booth.

A banquet was tendered C. A. Marshall, storekeeper, better known as "Dock," who has left the service of the Baltimore and Ohio to enter that of the Wabash Railroad. He has our best wishes for success in his new position.

General Foreman R. M. Baker stole a march on us not long ago and took unto himself a wife. Congratulations!

Recently General Foreman Gibson started on his vacation and we thought he was going to take a little trip. Instead he seemed to want to help a fellow in distress and went to the assistance of Inspector M. Reynolds, who joined the ranks of benedicts.

A few days ago our fuel clerk requested leave of absence for a couple of days. We felt sure that she was going to take the fatal step, but when she returned she informed us that she had acted as bridesmaid for a friend. Now she will know the ropes. When is it to be, Mary?

We are sorry to learn of the injury to our "Old Friend," Michael J. Flavin, delivery clerk, Pittsburgh Freight Station. While discharging his duties, his leg was broken. We wish him a speedy recovery, as we miss him.

Our old friend Thomas Rhinehart has been transferred to position of cashier, Braddock, Pa. We are glad to hear of his promotion and wish him success.

We have at Pittsburgh Freight Station an athlete named J. T. "Slim" McFarlan. As a baseball player, he is a wonder. "Slim" will compete with anybody on the System for sliding to first base, especially on Belgian Paving Blocks. "Slim" is a good baseball player, but he has "TWO" many thumbs. When it comes to sliding and ducking for lost balls "Slim" wins the prize.

We offer our congratulations to "Tom" J. Ward, who has recently been appointed terminal supervisor of all yards between

"Inquired who he was and what he had done."

Those working by our side and those under us know who we are and what we have done; but do those over us—those who are our superior officers—know who we are and what we have done? Can we do something that will cause them to ask the above question?

Everyone on the Charleston Division is wearing the smile that won't come off as this article is being written. We set up a new mark to shoot at on CAR MILES during the week ending June 7. We don't know just what kind of a look we will have on our faces when this is published, but we hope that we can say that even the first week of June has ceased to be a record breaker.

money as you are to get it, you will be astonished to find how much more satisfaction you feel in keeping dollars than in spending them. Let's use the same logic in connection with the "STOP THAT LEAK" Campaign.

Even Benjamin Franklin in his day was an advocate of the "STOP THAT LEAK" movement, for in "Poor Richard's Almanac" we find the following quotations,— ing grounds beautified. The station was appropriately decorated.

CLARKSBURG W. VA. FREIGHT OFFICE FORCE

Of special interest was the Baltimore and Ohio exhibit, which included the venerable locomotive "Atlantic" and the coach "Pioneer." The old coach "Pioneer" from Nova Scotia, the first coach to run in Canada, was also on exhibition.

General Yardmaster H. R. Harper has been promoted to the position of terminal trainmaster, Fairmont, W. Va., vice T. J. Ward promoted. Yardmaster H. M. Harris, Belpre, Ohio, will succeed Mr. Harper here. Good luck, Ray!

We regret to report the death of Walter P. Burton, veteran watchman at Barnes Crossing, who passed away on June 18 at St. Mary's Hospital. He was buried at Frostburg, Md., on June 20. Mr. Burton has been in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio for many years and is well known by hundreds of employees. In his youth he was employed as brakeman, and later—as he grew older—as watchman. He is survived by one sister and a step-daughter, to whom our sympathy is extended.

Talking about CAR MILES! If Ernie Cutlip, train baggage master, Weston, was turned loose for one month with his little "Yellow Flivver," he could make more car miles than we could keep track of, but even at that he is a living exponent of the Careful Crossing Campaign.

This brings up the question as to what is a living exponent of the Careful Crossing Campaign. Our opinion is that the best living exponent of the Careful Crossing Campaign is the fellow who is still able to drive his car.

Mr. Driver, did you ever stop to think that if you get careless at Railroad Crossings you would hardly see an account of it in the newspapers! Someone else would read the account. You read the Detour Signs and you "Follow the Arrows"—why not read the Crossing Signs and follow the instructions?

Let's not forget the "STOP THAT LEAK" Campaign! If you saw a silver dollar lying in the street, you would go after it and get it. Each dollar of your salary or wages is just as precious as that dollar in the street. If you are as eager to have

"Beware of little expenses; a small leak will sink a great ship." And "Many a Mickle makes a Muckle."

Parable of the Boat and the Fish

Now, there was a certain man called Schide who had a boat, a wife, and a friend called the division accountant, whose wife was also with them. This man having fished for quite a while by the site of the dam at the town called Weston, called his friend, the division accountant, unto him and turned over to him one talent, viz.: the fishing tackle, requesting him to make use of this talent until this certain man returned. Now, this certain man started off in his boat and had gone about one mile, more or less, up stream, when he heard unusual noises from below. Hurriedly returning, he found his friend, the two ladies and a strange man feverishly trying to separate the talent from that which it had yielded, consisting of a catfish of no mean dimensions. He who had been left in charge of the talent was hopping around, first on one foot and then on the other, proudly asserting that if a man wants to know how to catch fish, let him first live his boyhood days in Baltimore and all this shall be added unto him. The next day at even, three families partook of the fish, after which the fragments were piled into the boat and dumped over the dam. MORAL: The division accountant swears that he will not fish any more by a dam site.

Who's Who and What Ails 'Em

Conductors J. D. Fury, B. E. Jeffries and J. R. Cox have returned from a fishing trip.

Engineer R. J. Vassar is improving after his recent illness and is able to be out.

We sympathize with Fireman L. H. Fitzgerald, who recently lost his father and mother through death, both having passed away within a period of six weeks.

Road foreman P. D. Marsh and Instructor of Fuel Economy C. E. Buckley attended the International Railway Fuel Association Convention at Cleveland, Ohio.

M. D. Dean secretary to superintendent, is confined to his home in Baltimore because of illness. We hope for a speedy recovery.

We were surprised, and agreeably so, the other day when Captain E. H. Nichols, Division Engineer's staff dropped into Weston and resumed his former duties. "Nick" has been on sick leave for several months. We are glad to welcome him back.

We are glad to announce the wedding of Miss Dovie Justus, Superintendent's Office, to Mr. Roscoe Hall, Weston. We understand the ceremony took place nearly a year ago, and how the happy young couple have kept it a secret for so long, we cannot understand. We also announce the wedding of William C. Borneman, Division Accountant's force, and Miss Gertrude Meadows of Clarksburg, which took place during the early part of June. We extend to both couples our hearty congratulations, and the wish that they may enjoy many happy years together. We don't seem to be able to get along without the unions. How about it, J. C. C.?

Brakeman G.W. Short, Charleston Division

Elsewhere in these columns will be found a photo of F. W. Short, passenger brakeman. Mr. Short has been in service since March 1, 1918, and is one of our popular employees. He is good looking, too.

We are glad to know and to publish in these columns, that John Nodes, former secretary to Mr. Trapnell and who graduated from Ohio State University this year, was one of the twenty-six students selected for their honorary scientific society. To become an active member of the organization, worth-while research work must have been accomplished by the elect.

We have the champion fisherman of 3rd Street, who is also our handy cooper, Jess Nolan. While sleeping on Neale's Island recently, with his rod and line by his side, a 70-lb. fish climbed out of the water and up the sandy beach, attached itself to the hook and begged "Jess" to take it home. If any one wants fish, let "Jess" know, he will supply you. The lily pond at City Park is now open for all LICENSED fisherman, but "Jess" does not go there.

Speaking of fish, "Tallyman" Perkins informs us he is to be married July 4. He says he has as much right to get married as some others, and that it is as cheap to keep two as one. Poor fish! By the time this appears in print he will have been hooked long enough to know better. Did we hear Hutchinson, Bush, or other old timers make any remarks?

You have heard the old adage, "A wise man sometimes changes his mind, a fool never." After receiving three black hand letters containing divers threats, we have changed our mind about writing about John McGraw and the flood, which we announced in the last issue we would do. Our natural inclination is to go ahead and tell, and we don't like to be intimidated, but we want to live as long as anyone else, as something might happen that we wouldn't know about, so the details of this unhappy affair will have to be secured from the wild Irishman himself. We'll say this much, however; when any of the employees at Ann Street see John starting up the stairs with a huge bottle of water, they all take to life boats, purchased by them since a certain episode.

All Parkersburg employees extend their sympathy to Miss Maud Moore, clerk, whose mother passed away at the family home after several months illness. Mrs. Moore was well-known to most of us, and many employees paid their last respects by attending the funeral in a body.

Charles Jones, sweeper, better known as "Dog," was absent because of illness for two weeks. All of us were sorry for "Dog," and missed him as it was hard to get a man to do this long-headed work. Everyone was glad to see him back. He wields a mean broom, as the platform boys will testify.

Chief Clerk and Mrs. B. F. Butcher recently returned from Atlantic City, where "Butch" found enough water to bathe in. He came home spouting about the good

CHARLESTON DIVISION LEADS THE PARADE

On May 30, a parade was held in Weston, W. Va., under the auspices of the American Legion. The Weston "Democrat" says that they were the most striking floats entering the competition.

time he had, but when we asked for his picture for the MAGAZINE, he hurried home and hid all his photos, that is, he thought he did, but his nefarious scheme was thwarted, and the one he overlooked appears in this issue. Friend wife says, "make the flowers roses in case she should die a violent death when 'Butch' beholds himself in the MAGAZINE clad only in a bathing suit."

J. K. Cromley is entertaining at his home his daughter, son-in-law and little granddaughter, Anna Rose, who drove through from New Smyrna, Fla., in their car, making the trip in a few days. They expect to spend the summer here.

Baggage-master and Mrs. Robert E. Foggin are happy over the advent of little Miss Betty Irene, who put her name in the family pot on June 10. Betty is a discriminating kid to choose a home where there is no competition. Where's the candy and cigars, "Shorty?" Show your appreciation.

On the evening of May 28, after their regular business session, Parkersburg Lodge No. 560, B. of R. C., honored Miss Margie Lasure and Charles Matheny, who obtained their withdrawal cards that evening to form a Union of their own on June 6. A delicious lunch was served to about forty members, during which time toasts were offered by several members. J. W. Stocking presided with dignity and ease as toastmaster, introducing the speakers with his customary brilliancy, the main speaker of the evening being our own Col. McEvoy who brought down the house with his address. Miss Ethel Owens looked after the punch bowl, while the correspondent filled with grace her usual position at the dishpan. The latter part of the evening was spent in music and dancing, and altogether the affair was a great success.

Freight House employes extend their sympathy to Tallyman A. M. Gerhold, whose father died recently.

"Boss" McPherson, platform, is going around with a million dollar smile. When we inquired why such a high-grade grin he informed us he was building a new brick house on Quincy Hill among the society people, and it's going to be some house! When "Mac" gets up among those high bugs he will have to wear his shoes and a white collar every evening. He'll be a "climber" for sure.

If you don't know Conductor "Bill" Beaty, running between Parkersburg and Wheeling, you have heard of him. He's been in the service 20 years, long enough for everybody on the System to get acquainted with him. Well, nothing in the MAGAZINE interests "Bill"—nothing in it about the trainmen, it's just for the Transportation Department, that's all. Just for this we are featuring him in this issue, without his knowledge or consent, and hope we may awaken his interest sufficiently to get him to open the Magazine to this page where he can look in the eyes of himself and family and remember that he is a married man.

Strong as he talks sometimes, "Bill" has his weakness, chief among them being his tendency to run off at the jaw about Mrs.

Bill, but we don't blame him for this. He has the distinction of being married to the first lady in Parkersburg holding a position as a member of the Parkersburg School Board, and he is justly proud of the fact. He is also fond of teaching the ladies how to drive their autos, and will come at the call of the fair owner of any make of car from a "tin lizzie" up. There's nothing stingy about "Mrs. Bill," girls. If you are in need of his services send out an S. O. S., Mrs. Beaty will hear your cry and send "Bill" to your assistance. Oh, yes, we almost forgot to say "Bill" is also fond of fishing, in fact he is fond of a great many things, which we will not mention at this time.

Lately we notice Agent F. A. Carpenter riding in a handsome Paige sedan. Things are looking up a little around the Freight House. Time was, and not long since, when nobody but the messenger boy had enough dough to buy a car.

Clyde Beabout and "Billy" Dick, Low Yards, have each become the possessor of a fine Nash. Won't Henry Ford "Nash" his teeth when he hears of these good prospects gone wrong? Anna Graf says these Nash cars sure look swell, but "do they ride easy?" that's what she wants to know? "Billy" Dick, take notice. We think this means you.

"Had" Harris, day yardmaster, Belpre, has been promoted to terminal trainmaster, Clarksburg. While we regret that Mr. Harris and his family will be moved from Parkersburg, we are glad of his good fortune. The Baltimore and Ohio is quick to recognize merit, and "Had's" advancement will be gratifying to his many friends.

The Baltimore and Ohio has many talented and loyal employes all over the System, but our own town stands second to none in cleverness and loyalty. It may not be seemly for us to toot our own horn, nevertheless we are only human and have all the weaknesses and frailties that human flesh is heir to, and we do like to brag about our exceptional employes.

Chief Clerk and Mrs. B. F. Butcher at Atlantic City

Glance around and you will see the picture of W. J. McEvoy, delivery clerk, Freight House, who entered the service June 8, 1901, and has been in continuous service ever since. Mr. McEvoy has always had the interests of the Baltimore and Ohio at heart, serving on the Safety Committee for two years, and is as keenly interested today as when he was an active member of the committee.

Dick Martine, operator, accompanied by Mrs. Martine, visited Cleveland the latter part of June, presumably to see a specialist Look at his photograph in this issue. His health is as good as anybody's. He simply camouflaged to get a few days off, but it was so hot he was glad to come back home.

Miss Willa Trainer, who underwent an operation in a Cleveland hospital recently, is much improved, although she will not be able to resume duty for several months.

J. M. Allison, trucker, suffered a severe stroke of paralysis on June 14. He is slowly improving and his recovery is expected.

Have you read Aunt Mary's account of the Veterans' Reunion and Get-together meeting in Parkersburg June 20 and 21, published in this issue? If you haven't, do it now. You'll find it worth while.

Conductors I. E. Burd and G. R. Clark were off a few days in May, the former looking for a good Oorang Airedale and the latter looking for a good fox hound.

J. W. Gordon, first, Williamstown, C. F. Laughlin, first, St. Marys, have been enjoying a rush during the early season, handling carnival and show trains in addition to their assigned duties.

We are pleased to learn of A. N. Peters' advancement and also welcome F. C. Moran as Division Operator.

G. R. Van Valey, agent and yardmaster, St. Marys, enjoyed the Colored Minstrels immensely and is now looking for a car that starts with "T."

General Offices

Correspondent, THOMAS J. MURPHY

Office of General Manager

Incident to the appointment of H. A. Iuler as assistant trainmaster, Walter K. Noe has been promoted to chief clerk and J. R. Ahalt to assistant chief clerk.

It is with keen disappointment that we announce that Charlotte Lauther was not the successful candidate at the Cincinnati Terminal Shops Outing at Chester Park on May 26.

As a booster for the Chester Park Outing let it be said that John A. Sheeran did his part nobly in advertising the affair, as he paraded the third floor during the better portion of one whole day with a rear-end display sign.

E. F. Medosch and family have returned from a vacation in the country, where "Ed" no doubt, picked up some plots for new short stories, in the writing of which he is rapidly gaining distinction.

As intimated in the May issue that far-away look in the eyes of May Agen had a meaning all its own. She was married on June 19, and any of us who did not have the opportunity of extending good wishes to her on the occasion do so herewith.

Carroll Knopp, alias "Half-Pint," the diminutive telegraph messenger, admits to many affairs of the heart, the latest conquest being Virginia, a petite belle of Madeira.

Office of Superintendent Transportation

Place a merit mark to the credit of our chief clerk in the acts of mercy column; he started out to pay his respects to a deceased friend, but being unacquainted in the locality where the "dead man lived" and being of a confiding and trusting nature, he placed himself at the disposal of a street car conductor of Gaelic origin who directed him to an Irish wake, in which he was not interested.

Phyllis Meiers spent her vacation, and we don't know what else, in New York, which she reports as being rather uninteresting after having become accustomed to Fairmount.

George Lange, now a full fledged clerk but still in possession of all his boyish proclivities, spent his vacation making mud pies with the other children in Lincoln Park.

C. J. Moeves is fishing in that old stream where the biggest ones always get away; in between times he is thinking how he can frame George.

E. A. Duncan at the she side!

The following rip-trackr(h)apsody/pathetically rendered by the anvil chorus and accompanied by rain on a tin roof, has been respectfully dedicated by some of our co-workers to "some more" of them:

We have a man in our department,
Who's full of mournful sighs,
He hems and haws at all the world,
Under stormy or sunny skies.
When "Bill" is due for a Saturday off,
And perchance he passes near,
Our friend looks out and scornfully sighs
"It's going to rain, I fear."

If there's to be an outing day,
And "Old Gloom" hears about it,
He'll shake his head, have his say
And loudly howl against it.
When Kistner happened to mention
That the Reds were winning a game
He claimed it was an accident
Or maybe the umpire's to blame.
When the Giants came to play the Reds
Our "boiz" had no chance,
But our team won—no luck we say—
Still his hymn of gloom he chants.
So if you're planning some pleasure trip,
Away from the Railroad fray,
Just keep it quiet and let not a word
Reach the ears of W. C. A.

The correspondent is receiving no items from the various offices and unless aid is given his column will eventually represent a few observations he is able to make within the transportation office. Hellup!

Cincinnati Terminals

Correspondent, JOSEPH BEEL

W. J. Maloney, heavyweight chief yard clerk, has been on a diet for several weeks and is reducing rapidly. If "Bill" keeps on trying to beat old man "Bogey," he'll soon have "Gene's" crown.

Operator Harry Fritsch, Elmwood Place, Ohio, reported a "catch" of 78 or 87 fish while at Hartwell recently. We don't doubt Harry's word, but suggest that he take our adding machine next time so he can keep better tab on 'em.

Motor Car Repairman Harry C. Cook, enjoyed a visit from the stork which left a baby girl. We extend best wishes.

J. W. Kunker, signal supervisor, suffered a slight attack of grip. We are glad to report that he is again in our midst with the same jolly and always willing disposition.

Donations are in order to purchase a new skyscraper for our assistant division engineer. Your contributions will be gratefully received, and can be sent direct. Evidently this would be more appealing if you could cast your orbs upon the one he is now sporting.

It is suggested that someone search Mackenzie for that rabbit's foot and give others a chance to carry off high scores. "Mac" is the "lucky bambino" in our midst.

We are all glad to see a certain smiling face in a certain corner of the Superintendent's Office. Miss Herron has returned after a three months' leave of absence, and all wish her continued good health.

It has been overheard that the girls are going to stop drinking coffee at noon in order to obtain a complexion like a certain car record clerk. They certainly envy him that complexion. How long does it take you to get that way, "Frank?"

The Maintenance of Way Department boasts a man who likes his work so well that he forgot to go on his vacation. Is there any other Department or Division who can say as much as we can for "George B. F.?"

Girls! Bobs are still in style. When entering Storrs office recently, we thought a new clerk had been employed, but it was discovered it was none other than one of our old stand-bys, with her hair bobbed. Bobs are very becoming to "Bobby."

Cleveland Freight Traffic Department

Correspondent, A. H. STROME

Cigars and candy were much in evidence in the Traffic Department at Cleveland during the forepart of June.

A. R. Strome, assistant chief clerk, passed the treat for a nine and a quarter pound son born June 5, while W. P. Richmond, freight representative, treated on an eight pound son born June 18. Both mothers and babies are reported as doing nicely.

The "Boss" will have to excuse the boys if they are not so prompt in their attendance, as he cannot expect them to work both day and night shifts.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was well represented at the Annual Outing and Election of Officers of the Cleveland Traffic Club, held at Nela Park on June 18, as is shown by the accompanying photos.

In the other photo, we have Annette Kellerman's brother—nee W. P. Richmond, freight representative.

NOW FOR A GOOD START—WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TO HELP THE CAR MILE CAMPAIGN? WE FEEL THAT NEWARK DIVISION IS WELL CANVASSED IN THIS RESPECT AND DOING FINE TOWARD THAT MARK OF "40" BUT ETERNAL VIGILANCE IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY IF WE ARE TO MAINTAIN OUR GOOD PERFORMANCE ALONG THIS LINE. KEEP THIS FEATURE ON YOUR DAILY PROGRAM. LET EVERY DEPARTMENT ENTER INTO THE CAMPAIGN! IF YOUR DEPARTMENT IS NOT UP TO STANDARD ALONG THIS LINE TAKE STEPS TO CORRECT SO THERE WILL BE NO POSSIBILITY OF NEWARK DIVISION FALLING BEHIND ON THE CAR MILE SHOWING WHICH IS BEING IMPROVED ON ALL DIVISIONS ON THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO.

the bench after facing "Our Gandy" it was necessary to use a fan so they could get their breath which had been exhausted by reaching for the one that looked good. Gee! if we are to have such pitching the balance of the season, there will be a silver cup in our glass case sure. It's a shame to take all the games, but what can we do if we have the best team in the Twilight League!

Manager Stanford reports all members of the Baltimore and Ohio team doing their best. Wet weather has hindered their practice as well as the playing of the full schedule to date. As in past years, the interest of Newark fans centers around the Baltimore and Ohio Team, and they always produce the goods when taking part in a ball game. If there is any doubt in regard to this statement, refer to Trafford Paul who has been watching the performance of the team closely this season.

ARE YOU TRYING TO STOP THAT LEAK?

We would like to be able to present to the CAR MILES BRING GREAT BIG SMILES.

WATCH THE CROSSINGS! STOP THE LEAK! BOOST THE CAR MILES!

We are pleased to be able to present to MAGAZINE readers, especially on Newark Division and Sandusky station, a good photo of Harry B. Siehl, otherwise known as "The Shick," who is employed as clerk to car foreman, Sandusky, Ohio. His railroad experience covers a period of only three months but he does his work like a veteran. His motto is "Get the reports in on time," and he does. They also say "Harry" is a wizard at dancing. Perhaps a visit to Cedar Point will give the ladies a chance to look him over.

Good photographs galore of the Capitol Limited, our swell new train, and of our Good Will delegates, certainly make the May MAGAZINE interesting. We are indeed grateful to Miss Stevens for the good reading presented and look forward with eagerness to the continuation of her interesting and descriptive stories relative to her trip abroad.

DO YOU KNOW THAT IF WE WATCH THE CROSSINGS—we will help STOP THAT LEAK—and see the CAR(S) MILE)

We are glad to have Sandusky station represented again in the columns of the MAGAZINE. We do not know why, but since Miss Martin, former correspondent, changed her name to Miller, we have had nothing from there.

Since Sandusky is again represented, I take pleasure in introducing to our readers, Rolland Schemenauer, member of the force of Agent R. E. McKee, who will in future keep us posted on what is going on at Sandusky.

Batter up! That was the way our Pitcher Gandy had the men who faced him in the opening game. All the batters were up, "up in the air." They could not see them let alone hit them. As the men retired to

Who will be the first to mail division correspondent photo and service data for publication?

CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY!

You no doubt saw in the May MAGAZINE, the cartoon by the famous "Billy" Ireland. The Columbus Dispatch granted permission to reproduce it. It is right up to the minute in connection with our Crossing Campaign. If every reader will do just as the driver did in the cartoon, there will be no necessity for any further campaign.

Mr. Ireland refers to the machine in the cartoon as "This Old Crock will not cross a track till some member of the party gets out and flags us across."

This is good advice—let's follow it this summer.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Levina Rupp, nee Snyder, at her home in Archbold, Ohio on May 24, at the age of 36 years.

She was born in Fulton County, Ohio on September 17, 1866 and was married to David Rupp on May 20, 1884.

She leaves to mourn their loss, a husband, eight children, of whom one, E. S. Rupp, is chief clerk to division accountant, thirty four grandchildren, four brothers, two sisters and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held on May 27, and interment made in Aeschliman Cemetery.

Ralph Shaw, Division Engineer Corps, has been promoted to chief clerk to division engineer, and Howard "Dan" Fleming has been transferred from assistant car distributor to Division Engineer Corps, because of resignation of Herbert Rine.

Donald Jordan has been appointed stenographer, Division Accountant's Office.

We have with us today Martha Jane Floyd, one week old daughter of "Mose" Floyd, maintenance of way timekeeper. "Mose" dug up one of his cans and bought cigars for the boys, and received their congratulations.

A. B. Vermillion, chief, Bureau Rates of Pay, was a visitor at Newark on June 12.

Fred B. Fulk, section foreman, Newark Division, has been promoted to track supervisor, effective June 16 with headquarters at Barnesville, Ohio. Congratulations!

W. H. Dowden, C. T. time clerk, has returned after attending the Shriners' Convention at Washington, D. C. Through the efforts of Mr. Dowden, twenty-one Shriners, some of whom were accompanied by their wives, made the trip from Newark to Washington via Baltimore and Ohio, and all were pleased with the service rendered and enjoyed the beautiful scenery through the Allegheny Mountains. Much credit should be given Mr. Dowden, who through his efforts secured this business for the Company despite strong competition from another road.

Machinist King is running opposition to Boiler Maker Hauser in the chicken business. They both claim its only a matter of time until our market will be overstocked.

Operator Finley has been off duty for three weeks because of sickness.

Engineer Austin Toole is off duty because of sickness. We understand he is improving and will soon be able to resume duty.

Operator Kitzmiller has joined the Baltimore and Ohio family.

Engineer Herbert Brown had the misfortune to burn his arm while on duty, causing him to be absent a few days.

Dispatcher Geil is now doing all his traveling in his new Overland.

We are sorry to learn of the serious illness of Miss Marie Welsh, a former clerk in this office. She is in Mt. Carmel Hospital where she underwent an operation.

Misses Hazel Cashner and Edith Roach spent a few days in Washington, D. C. and Baltimore. While in Washington they visited Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Dodds. In Baltimore they had the privilege of going about the property. They appreciated the hospitality shown them.

Among Shriners at the Convention from here were Lee Tucker, lieutenant of police, and Thomas Yeager, clerk, East Columbus.

Sandusky, Ohio

Correspondent, R. SCHEMENAUER

Cedar Point is now open and a large passenger business is being handled. The first excursion of the season from Newark to Sandusky was well attended and larger crowds are expected.

The freight business at this point is heavy. The trouble is not to get the business but to furnish cars to supply the demand. Sand, stone and paper are the principal commodities shipped and are about as heavy as can be handled.

Fred Walsh, operator, has been granted a six months' furlough.

The Kelly Island Lime and Transport Company, has just commenced operations on the Baltimore and Ohio Docks, and are putting them in shape to meet their requirements. They have placed a new track and also a new derrick with which to coal their many sand boats, they being the largest sand loaders in this section of the country. After they have completed the necessary improvements they will add to the number of cars loaded at Sandusky and will give a big boost to the outbound freight business here.

Car Shop Notes

Car Foreman Frank E. Cheshire did not say it, but we promise he would like to tell the world that little Miss Cheshire is the finest ever.

Clerk H. B. Seihl has been parking his windshield at Bellevue often in the last few weeks. Any further developments will be given in a future issue.

The recent death of one of our veteran car men, Adam Nutter, has caused regret among his many friends and fellow workmen.

There are over two hundred men employed at the local shops and they are helping out the car situation to a great extent.

STOP THAT LEAK AND REMEMBER CAR MILES BRING MANY SMILES!

The Road building boom in Mansfield at the present time is giving the Baltimore and Ohio a generous share of the various commodities used in connection therewith. We predict that before long there will not be a road leaving Mansfield that will not be in good condition and that tourists will find it to their advantage to include our town in their tours.

The Baltimore and Ohio lost their first game by a score of 2 to 1. The boys deserved to win but there had not been much practice, because of weather conditions. We fought a good battle and were defeated by the close score mentioned. J. A. Dudley and Tom Kitchart both pulled several Tris Speaker plays by running back to the wall and spearing line drives over their shoulders, that had all the earmarks of triple and circuit routes, respectively.

L. L. Kerr, general yard master, manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Baseball team, has given us a lineup and score board record of game between our boys and the Westinghouse team. Mr. Mulquinn, the former manager, made a deal with Mr. Kerr regarding the changing of ownership and the change was made, although the money involved was not made public. Kitchart's home run with two on in the fourth put the game on ice for our boys and they were never in danger thereafter. Lineup and score:

Another campaign has been added to our list; Cross Crossings Cautiously. Too much cannot be said regarding it as there are so many people injured and killed by disregarding signals placed at remote places to protect the public.

The illustration drawn by Mr. Gay Lowry pictures horror and despair on the faces of the occupants of a car being demolished by a train as it speeds on its way. On the other side is the man who is safe, having taken no chances of beating the train to the crossing. In five years there have been 9,101 killed and 24,208 injured. Let us STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN and then Cross Crossings Cautiously.

We were pleased to hear of Mr. Altherr's promotion, but sorry to lose him. Mr. Altherr does not forget South Chicago, however, and drops in occasionally, always with his usual cherry smile, yet with one big thing in mind—"Get cars Released promptly."

At the same time, we welcome J. H. Maginn, assistant agent, South Chicago, succeeding Mr. Altherr. Mr. Maginn was for some years chief clerk to Mr. Draper, agent, Chicago. Our sincere good wishes to you, Mr. Maginn, in your new field.

That the people of South Chicago, Ill., appreciate what the Baltimore and Ohio is doing for them is shown by the following article, which appeared in the Daily Calumet on a recent date:

"The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is the only railroad that is boosting South Chicago along its line. It is the only road that is stopping its fast trains at South Chicago. Down in Washington, D. C., the Baltimore and Ohio has a big sign in the depot, advertising the fact that the "Capitol Limited," their new crack train, stops at South Chicago.

"It is a very popular move on the part of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, as the other eastern roads running trains through South Chicago do not stop here. * * *

"Many South Side people who travel east are using the Baltimore and Ohio because they can board the train at South Chicago station when going east, and get off here when coming back."

Ohio Division

Correspondent, A. E. ERICH

Ohio Division Employes,

How about

Increasing car miles

On our division?

Do you know

It is shown on the report, that the Very highest average miles per car per day,

Including bad order cars, on this division was,

Seven years ago,

In April 1916, when we reached 78.6?

Our performance, week ending June 14, was 62.6.

Now that's good, but let's beat the 1916 record.

On Decoration day, a fine young gentleman was matriculated to learn the intricacies of instructor of fuel service, thereby better enabling him to follow his fathers' (John C. Wilkins) footsteps. This makes the family now consist of two boys. About the same time we noticed that in honor of this important event "Wilks" was having his residence "decorated" with a new coat of paint. Let the good work go on "Wilks." Congratulations!

Carl Boll, formerly clerk, Freight Office, has accepted a position in the General Car Foreman's Office, filling that made vacant by Edson Wilhelm, who has been promoted to car tracer, Superintendent Transportation Brooke's office, Cincinnati. We wish both success in their new positions.

Seemingly out of a clear sky, and without advance notice, came the announcement of the marriage of Miss Ruby Timmons, clerk, Division Storekeeper's Office, to Wade McGee, who is in the contracting business. They were married on May 26 in Covington, Ky. Good wishes and congratulations!

Among the June weddings was that of H. J. Bresnahan, brakeman, who was married to the daughter of Thomas Clark, passenger engineer. Our heartiest congratulations and best wishes are extended.

J. E. Weaver, former section foreman, has been promoted to supervisor, with headquarters at Washington C. H. We wish him success.

Our sympathies are extended to F. C. Donaldson, conductor, in the death of his mother.

The stork recently visited the home of L. T. Griffin, brakeman, leaving a girl. Best wishes!

CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY! Do you know that in five years 9,101 persons were killed and 24,208 injured at railroad highway crossings in the United States? The latest figures show that 80 per cent. of the accidents at crossings were to occupants of automobiles. Just think "Cross Crossings Cautiously" just before crossing a railroad track, and do your part in reducing such figures. CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY!

Our sympathy is extended to Dr. Glen Nisely, Company surgeon, in the death of his father and sister, who were instantly killed when the automobile they were driving was struck by a train at Jasper Mills, Ohio, on June 19.

The accompanying photographs (with the exception of Miss Cornelia Rhulman) are graduates of the Chillicothe High School class of 1923. All of these young people are children of Baltimore and Ohio employes, or are themselves employed at present with this Company. The 1923 class of this school was the largest in its history, the total number being ninety.

Miss Rhulman graduated from the High School, Chillicothe several years ago, and this year, on June 13, graduated from Defiance (Ohio) College.

President Harding and party passed over the St. Louis Division, Cincinnati to St. Louis, June 21. The train was successfully handled, arriving at St. Louis on time. It stopped at Washington, Vincennes, Olney, Flora and Salem and the President made short addresses at each point, shaking hands with the people who had assembled to hear him. Mrs. Harding was given a large and lovely bouquet of roses by the townspeople of Flora. The President's special was ably manned by G. L. Durland, conductor, H. Kempton, brakeman, H. R. Davis, baggagemaster and Enginemen

James M. Downey, J. D. Arrington, H. Brannaman and J. Cleveland.

H. Johnson, conductor and George Klier, dispatcher, spent several days fishing at Carlyle, Ill. recently. Henry caught fish and George posed for pictures. Anyhow that is what Henry said. Our other great fisherman on this division, Tin Shop Foreman J. J. Rose and Labor Foreman E. C. Bateman, Washington, took Machinist "Ed" Nimnicht fishing with them recently. Nimnicht left his rod and line for a while and on his return found the cork under water. He pulled out what he supposed to be a large eel. After striving heroically for half hour to kill it with a fence post Bateman and Rose returned and informed him that the eel was a snake that had been dead many hours when they put it on his hook.

Claim Agent James Bradford spent his annual vacation with Mrs. Bradford motor-ing through the Ozark Mountains, Missouri. He was relieved by C. Graham, General Claim Agent's Office, Cincinnati.

Perry Kerr, the "kid" operator at C. W. cabin, who has been "pounding brass" for the Baltimore and Ohio for forty-five years, has a water bucket which it is rumored he has had since he entered the service, and it is so dear to him that he will not part with it. The bucket recently had a hole punched in it but Perry, well versed in ways to "stop the leak," fixed it by plastering the hole with soft soap, and the bucket is still in service. We can all "stop the leak" by finding something to plaster the holes with.

A new road foreman of engines, David Edwin Creager, arrived on this division on June 16, weight nine and one-half pounds. The happy father, C. H. Creager, has already instructed him that there is a big waste of fuel in letting an engine pop-off.

Telephone Maintainer R. N. Henry, Milan, Indiana, resumed duty June 18 after an absence of five months because of illness. Telephone Maintainer J. M. Mills relieved him.

R. S. Isenogle, statistical clerk, Master Mechanic's Office is in the sanitarium, Olney, Ill., receiving treatment.

Our popular south end local brakeman, N. R. Hodges, is a new member in the ranks of the Benedicts and is spending his honeymoon in California.

S. E. Tucker, agent, North Bend, Ohio, recently decided to go "back to the farm." He sold his property (everything except the Ford) took a leave of absence and moved to the country. After an absence of two months and a half, "Si" came to the conclusion that railroading is a better job than plowing corn and milking cows, and he is back at North Bend looking for a house and will soon resume duty as agent.

Chief Caller Frank Wright, Flora, Ill. who has been away because of serious illness, returned to duty on June 1. We are glad to see you back with us again, Frank.

L. A. Smiley, chief clerk to master mechanic, has just completed a new house on E. Van Trees Street, Washington, Ind., and will move into it shortly.

G. L. Badger, second trick operator, Dearborn, Ind., is sporting a new sport model Buick.

"Bill" Green, car repairman between Storrs and Cochran, is champion apple-eater of the division. John Young, operator at Cochran, is responsible for the story that he starts to work with not less than a peck. When hot boxes are plentiful it is necessary for him to buy another peck or two along the line to fill out. "Bill" is also a record breaker when it comes to applying brasses; he recently applied ten new brasses to as many cars at Cochran, between trains 67 and 60, or in about two hours, consumed a half peck of apples, went to Finney on No. 60, applied two more brasses, eating the remaining half peck of apples, walked to North Bend, brassed another car and returned to Storrs on No. 80. Frequently "Bill" takes someone along to help; they carry the apples and "Bill" brasses the cars. It is great to hold the record for two f(eats).

The death of Engineer Herbert F. McMullen on June 8 was a shock to his host of railroad friends. Mr. McMullen, known as "Herb" to us, was one of our best known and most popular engineers. He was noted for his sunny disposition and readiness to perform any duty when called upon. He took service as fireman in September, 1910 and was promoted to engineer in December, 1917. He was laid to rest in Washington, Indiana, June 10. Funeral services were conducted by Masons. For the benefit of those who desired to attend the funeral a special train was run from Flora to Washington and return. He leaves a wife, three children and a host of friends who deeply mourn his loss.

The accompanying photograph is of F. H. Wolke, brakeman, trains 53 and 56. Mr. Wolke was granted leave of absence effective June 19 to enter service of the Lincoln Shale Products Company, South Fork, Ky. This Company owns 504 acres of rich oil shale, and it is estimated that there are seventy six million tons of shale located on it. Laboratory test shows that one ton of shale will produce 43 and seven tenths gallons crude oil, 59 pounds ammonia sulphate and 1800 cubic feet non-condensable gas. Mr. Wolke has been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for 24 years. His many friends wish him success in his new business.

What is matter with the news this month? Haven't received much from any one. Presume everybody is on vacation, and is having such a wonderful time that they have no time to write a few lines, to tell us about the big fish they caught, or how nice and cool the weather has been. Some of them will probably return the proud owners of Brooklyn Bridge, Singer Building or the Great White Way. Vacationists, Beware! There's one born every minute.

A Good One

An enterprising coal dealer in Montreal adopted for his "slogan," which he printed on his stationery, the following motto: "It's a Black business, but we treat you White."

A customer, upon receiving his account recently for his supply of coal at the price of $22.00 per ton, inclosed his check in payment, and at the same time suggested that the merchant should change his motto to read: "It's a Dirty business, but we Clean you Good."—Judge.

Service is the watch word of Master Mechanic McMillian and a very potent factor in his achievements. Herein let me quote the words of that beautiful poem, by Francis Gable.

If you ask me to define Success
On one word only I'd lay most stress;
With seven letters that word I'd spell;
Yet mean as much as a book might tell.
That word is SERVICE in fullest meed,

Service in sorrow, service in need.
 Service alike, to rich and poor
 Service to help the weak endure.
 Service that makes the strong more kind
 Service of body, spirit and mind.
 In joy, in sadness, in sore distress,
 Service alone will define Success.

Mrs. Nancy Jane McMillan, Benwood, West Va., mother of Master Mechanic A. E. McMillan, is paying him a visit. Having rounded out the ripe old age of 82 years, she is still alert and bids fair to live for many years to come. May her visit here be pleasant and enjoyable, and may she return with pleasant memories of Dayton, Ohio.

Master Mechanic J. A. Tschuer, and his official staff: Messrs. E. R. Creel, C. A. Burge, R. C. Gallagher, J. M. Warmick, J. P. Walters, David Cassidy, J. L. Cole, and Norman Butler recently visited East Dayton. Their stay was brief, but pleasant. They had nothing but words of commendation for our shop and roundhouse, and our method of handling business. Come again, gentlemen, we were proud of your visit.

Cleanliness is the motto of General Foreman W. A. Gilmore, as he figures this the "Thrift Spirit" in railroad operation. This surely has an appealing effect on the casual observer, and is a big factor in "Stop That Leak" campaign, which is making progress around our shops and yards. A real incentive to higher ideals.

That the Toledo Division is enjoying the height of prosperity is evidenced by the fact that more trains and cars are moving now than ever in the history of the road. Every effort is being made by the employees to keep America's First Railroad in front. Their motto, Efficiency, Service, and Carefulness, has gained the confidence of the traveling and shipping public.

We will soon have some good cartoons from Walter Wentworth on Safety and "Stop That Leak."

A shadow was cast over our shops in the recent death of Robert E. Doudican, for 33 years an honored employee of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. His death occurred after a brief illness. "Bob," as he was familiarly known to all of us, leaves behind him a memory of love and respect, which will be cherished by all who had the pleasure of knowing him. He was laid to rest in Calvary Cemetery by his shop mates, and tears filled their eyes as they gazed for the last time on him, they loved so well in life.

Brakeman F. H. Wolke, Dayton, Ohio

It is pleasing to see Louis Tolby back on the Lima local, after his absence of a few months with a mashed foot. "Lou" reports foot O. K., run O. K., and every other thing O. K.

Assistant General Yardmaster John Nanna is all set now after moving his household goods from Chillicothe to Lima. He is now a "Lima Bean." His transfer to Lima was a welcome addition to our family on the Toledo Division. Make yourself at home, John, but for goodness sake you didn't have to burn up four perfectly good cord tires on your bus in your anxiety to get back to Lima last week. We were going to stay here for a while anyway.

That Kid Dan Cupid can't stay away. What do you think? SH—Whisper it! John McGoff, machinist, and Ella Brown, daughter of Oil Distributor Maurice L. Brown, slipped over to St. Rose and said "I will" and "I do" in the presence of Rev. Father Bouschere before breakfast on May 2 and are now enjoying their honeymoon. Congratulations and best wishes.

"Leo" Swick, our agreeable and efficient assistant ticket agent took leave of absence for 30 days, commencing June 10. We miss his pleasant ways and smiling face, but will try and console ourselves in his absence with "Skinny" Thompson, who has been working the night shift at the window. Brother Nungester filled in where Brother Thompson has been officiating.

Martin Dibling, machinist, one of our oldest employes in point of service, having served the company 49 years, passed to his eternal reward on May 16 as a result of an operation. In his passing the Company loses an efficient employee, the community an upright citizen, his friends a loyal and delightful member of their associations and his family a devoted husband and kind father. Who can say anything but praise for so splendid a record as a workman, as a man, as a husband and father? We are all daily walking toward that same gate and when we enter it, what will our record show? That depends on us entirely. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Switchman Harry Conaway is still confined to his home because of serious illness. We hope fervently that you will recover entirely and shortly, so that you can be with us once more Harry.

Those of our employees who heard Dr. Shattuck, tell of his experiences in the heart of Africa, enjoyed a treat. Dr. Shattuck took five miles of moving pictures while in Africa and they will be shown in Lima sometime in October, probably in the Central High School Auditorium. Don't miss them, boys. Bring the children. This is a treat from the management. You will regret it, if you miss them.

Ask yourself the question. What can I do to increase car miles. Then answer it by your actions. How much it increases depends on us. Did you see how easy it was to beat that bunch east of the Ohio River. We didn't exert ourselves and didn't know we had broken a record, but we had. Now, let's go to it strong and show them what we can do. All together now, boys, let's go. 40 is the goal.

We were newly painted for the occasion and consequently presented a clean appearance to our visitors.

Our outbound shed was converted into a first class restaurant, which was well patronized, and the orders of good cookery often made some of us "ordinary folks" hungry.

The shed was fitted up with an elaborate kitchen containing eight large ranges and four sinks, together with all the other paraphernalia that goes with good eating houses. There were also ten telephone booths and a Western Union Telegraph office on the platform for the use of the Shriners.

Arrangements were made for the handling of the voluminous mail arriving so that there was no delay in delivery. Incidentally there was a rail placed the entire length of the platform outside of the restaurant, but whether this was for the benefit of those who were dining well inside or for some other purpose we cannot state.

Many expressions of appreciation of the manner in which they were treated while in our yard as guests of the Baltimore and Ohio were heard, and in return we were treated to one or two impromptu concerts by some of the bands that accompanied the Temples. One concert that was given on our platform by the band of El Rio Temple was especially fine, and appreciated by those of us who were in the office.

During the week President Willard visited our station, and expressed his satisfaction at the manner in which the Convention matters had been handled. Especially was he pleased with the appearance of the great 7100 engine which was in our yard.

A pleasing item to report is the fact that notwithstanding the tremendous amount of traffic in and around our yards during the Convention week we stand ONE HUNDRED PER CENT in Safety! Not a single accident or mishap of any kind occurred, although at times the congestion was serious.

In spite of the apparent set backs to the ordinary freight business that the above business suggests it is nice to know that we did a splendid incoming and outgoing business during the entire time, and that the usual summer lull has scarcely given any evidence of its presence so far.

Miss Katherine Gerhardt recently acted as bridesmaid at the wedding of her brother, Bernard. There is an old tradition that anyone acting in this capacity will be calling upon some good friend to assist at a like ceremony before long, the first mentioned being the one who needs the bridesmaid. How about it, Katie? Perhaps "Andy" could answer this better!

The stork has again been busy, this time visiting the home of Tallyman Frank A. Gillioti, leaving a bright little girl to make the home happier. Good luck, and many happy returns to the fortunate parents!

Our Sick Report is as follows: "WE HAVE NO ONE TO REPORT."

Our old friend Michael F. Kelly, who has been in the service for thirty-two years (his last job being that of sealer at this station) has been placed on the pension list, and is earning the reward of long and faithful service. He has been sick for many months.

While these notes are being written the Baltimore and Ohio "Presidential Special" with President Harding and party on board, en route to Alaska, is passing our windows. From the outside it is certainly a "Train de Luxe." What it must be on the inside can well be imagined. Accompanying the President on his eventful trip are two of our good Baltimore and Ohio people who are well known at this station. Division Passenger Agent W. V. Shipley, is in charge of the train, and this is a guarantee that every possible comfort will be extended to the distinguished passengers. General Baggage-master W. A. Clark is also with this train, and it is safe to say that his part of the business will receive the closest attention. Mr. Clark was for many years employed at Washington, part of the time with the old Blue Line Transfer Company, when they were operating here, and later as tallyman on our platform. He was transferred from here to the Baggage Department, Camden Station, and has made rapid progress in his work, so that the honor accorded him today is a reward for faithful service. He is still a young man, and great things are expected of him.

Some of the things we hear when we don't have a Gun!

Erratum

On page 15 of the May 1923 MAGAZINE appeared a group of pictures showing some of the employees on the first run of the Capitol Limited, eastbound.

Picture No. 2 read "Engineer Leek and Fireman Smith at Garrett."

This was in error and should have read "Engineer C. E. Beltz and Fireman T. G. Kearns." We regret the mistake.

Engineer Jarrett and His Crew Rushed First Aid to a Burning Child

By M. W. JONES, Former Secretary to Superintendent Charleston Division

AN incident well worth telling came to the attention of your correspondent through a chance remark. On following it up we found the following story:

Recently while returning from Clay Court House to Charleston on the south end of the Charleston Division, Engine 1739, in charge of Engineer E. L. Jarrett, held a meet order with Extra North 2952 at a place called Dorfee—a small coal mining settlement. While waiting for the opposing train, Engineer Jarrett heard a child scream. Looking out of his cab window he saw a little girl, probably six years of age, run out on the porch of her home—some distance away—with her clothes on fire. Without hesitation Jarrett jumped off his engine and ran to her assistance, pulling off his coat as he ran. He wrapped the coat around her, smothering the flames, not, however, before she had been badly burned.

The first aid kit carried in all cabooses was secured, and with the assistance of Conductor J. L. Smith and Brakeman C. Sumpter, the little one was made as comfortable as possible until the services of a doctor could be secured. Jarrett immediately, through the assistance of neighbors, had a telephone message sent to the superintendent of the mines and medical aid was secured. It was with great regret that we learned that the child died the following day.

The little one was named Frankie Walker, the daughter of Homer Walker of Dorfee, W. Va. At the time of the accident the father was absent at his work, and the mother had left the child with one younger, at home, while she went to a near-by grocery store for supplies. A photo of Engineer Jarrett, and one of the little one will be found with our story.

Engineer Jarrett was born in Jarretts Ford, W. Va., on the Charleston Division, in 1878. He first entered the service of the old Coal and Coke Railway (now a part of the Charleston Division) as a fireman in 1901, being promoted to engineer in 1903. His record is an excellent one, and he, with his companions, Conductor Smith and Brakeman Sumpter, are to be highly commended for their excellent and prompt exposition of what "Good Neighbor" really means.

Conductor Hagdon Will Soon Get His Wish

GEORGE HAGDON was born December 31, 1855, in Cincinnati, Ohio.

His first railroad service was with the old C. H. & D. as a messenger, in September, 1873. He was furnished with two saddle horses, one of which he rode each morning, the other each afternoon, delivering freight notices in Cincinnati. Two years later he was promoted to the position of yard clerk. Mr. Hagdon tells us that in those days crews were required to make up their own trains, and it was the yard clerk's duty to see that they had full tonnage. In 1879 Mr. Hagdon took charge of a yard engine, switching freight house tracks, etc., and in 1884 was promoted to yardmaster. In 1885 he was appointed trainmaster, and in 1886 passenger conductor, running between Cincinnati and Richmond, Ind. In 1888 this division was sold to the Pennsylvania Railroad and Mr. Hagdon took

Conductor George Hagdon, Toledo Division, who soon will reach the 50-year mark in Baltimore and Ohio Service a passenger run between Cincinnati and Toledo, which he still holds.

Mr. Hagdon's greatest desire is to round out 50 years of service.

In 1905 he was placed in the tool room at Mount Clare, holding a position there at the time of his recent retirement.

Michael F. Kelly

Help Stop Leaks by Check-Weighing

By A. E. DAY, Chief of Weighing Bureau

IN commenting on the results obtained by which revenue was increased in the month of April $5,176.53, a word of commendation is due agents at the following stations, with a small population and handling a limited amount of tonnage, yet with substantial gains in revenue as shown:

above, kindly write me a friendly letter, sending copy to superintendent, stating frankly their best judgment as to why better results are not possible?

The accompanying photographs are of Agent P. H. Stuck, Oakland, Md., Agent F. A. Reeder, Williamsburg, West Virginia, and Agent P. T. Dowell, Ravenswood, W. Va., who, considering the limited tonnage handled at their stations, are making remarkable showings in revenue secured through check-weighing and revising classi-

In marked contrast to this are stations, towns and cities with a population much in excess of 2500, handling a vastly greater amount of L. C. L. tonnage, some doing nothing in this commendable work and others showing less gain in revenue than these stations handling so limited an amount of L. C. L. tonnage.

Will agents at stations with a population of 2500 or more, showing less gain in revenue by check-weighing than shown fications of L. C. L. freight received by them.

Statements showing results obtained at all stations on the System are published in the MAGAZINE each month, and show clearly that there is no better way to assist the campaign to "Stop That Leak" than by giving the important matter of check weighing close personal supervision.

Messrs. Stuck, Reeder and Dowell are to be commended for their efforts.

ceived from the Baltimore and Ohio was appreciated. A man came in a few days ago and asked the fare to Pittsburgh, Pa. I gave it to him, and in addition told him the best road from Chicago was the Baltimore and Ohio, quoting a few of the conveniences he would secure by using it. When he came for his ticket all I had to do was write it out "Via Baltimore and Ohio." At this office I only sell tickets on Sundays, but at my former office I had two chances to sell east of Chicago, in both cases the destination was New York. Needless to say they went over the "Best Road." I do not forget the good treatment I received on the Charleston Division, and any business I can route via Baltimore and Ohio will go that way."

"Cast Thy Bread—and it Shall Return"—from Far-Off Idaho

SOME two or three years ago, a telegraph operator who had recently landed from New Zealand, dropped into the offices at Weston, W. Va., looking for a job. He was put on the extra list by the chief train dispatcher, and for a while made fairly good time. The summer season passed, however, and work became somewhat scarce for extra men, and therefore

Mr. Thomas M. Copeland moved on west. A few days ago, one of our staff received a letter from him in Idaho, reading as follows:

"I wonder if you remember the bird who used to waggle the key at Weston? Just to show you that I have not forgotten the Baltimore and Ohio or yourself, will tell you what I did this day. It in itself will show whether the good treatment I re-

Set Clocks By Capitol Limited

Proving that the Capitol Limited, new Crack Flyer Baltimore and Ohio express train from Baltimore to Chicago, is a convenience to others than those who use it for transportation, the following letter was received at the Daily News office last evening:

Paw Paw, W. Va., May 21, 1923

Editor Daily News
Cumberland, Md.

Dear Sir:

Since the new Baltimore and Ohio all Pullman train, the Capitol Limited, was put into service, the people of Paw Paw have watched it with great interest. There being no regulation time clock in town, people now find out the exact time as it passes through Paw Paw, both east and west, and set their clocks and watches by the train, as it is always on time.

Yours very truly,

C. E. WENTLING.

"Three and a Half Million Dollars Revenue for Columbus in 1923"

Columbus, Ohio

April 6, 1923

E. D. Baldwin, Agent
W. H. Hukill, General Yard Master
L. E. Smith, Night General Yard Master
C. B. Van Blarcum, General Foreman

Gentlemen:

Our report of freight revenue for March at Columbus shows $251,637.85 as against $196,581.34 for February, and $181,637.35 for March of last year.

This is a substantial increase, and I predict a heavy year for 1923. Let's make "Three and a Half Million Dollars for 1923" our slogan, which will mean an average of about $291,000 a month. This may appear a high figure to shoot at but I believe we can make it.

Everybody will have to push, and push hard to do so, but there are so many ways to help, that if everybody gets back of it we will be able to put it over.

First—Every car order possible to fill, should be filled, and yard masters will see to it that there are no empty cars in the yard that could be applied on an order and are not.

Move all cars promptly, both loaded and empty.

Keep your yard cleaned up.

Deliver all cars for connections promptly, and see that none is left over at midnight, as the per diem will eat up your revenue.

Car foreman can assist greatly by cleaning his repair tracks every night; also by careful and close inspection of all equipment so that the cars may reach their destination safely and not cause an accident that would make us squander a part of our "Three and a Half Million."

Upon the agent depends a great deal—

To load the cars to capacity, thereby conserving the car supply.

To see that merchandise is properly loaded and secured, avoiding a loss to part of our "Three and a Half Million" by claims.

To report to yard master promptly as soon as cars are made empty on industrial and team tracks. In fact, to figure ahead by sending a word to the yard master stating "B. & O. 169432 on No. 5 team track will be empty at noon today, and Smith Fertilizer Company want it badly to load" is an example of how you can help us make our mark.

By urging all employees at the freight house to practice extreme courtesy to shippers, even though they do not come in contact with other than the truck drivers who bring and come after freight. These fellows appreciate courtesy, and, incidentally may have much more influence with their bosses than we know of.

Make the Baltimore and Ohio a nice place to come with freight

There are many other ways not mentioned in this letter by which the business may be increased. They all come under the plain head of "common sense, and the right spirit towards our good Company."

Just remember that to make a rate of interest at which you would care to loan your money, the wheels must be kept turning. Standing still means Inefficiency and Losses; Per diem and Demurrage mean a Deficit, or a rate of interest so low that you would not look at it in loaning your own money.

"Courtesy by all is a business getter"

Every employe should be a solicitor.

Every employe should be a Baltimore and Ohio Booster.

When we furnish the cars and move them promptly we are delivering service that does it's own boosting.

Let's all keep one foot in the air and we'll make it!

"Three and a Half Million Dollars in 1923 for Columbus, Ohio!"

Death of Charles W. Spengler

Forty-four Years in Service, Father of Nina Spengler, Our Good Will Delegate, Dies at His Home in Strasburg, Va.

ON June 7, Charles William Spengler, who had served the Baltimore and Ohio faithfully for 44 years at Strasburg and Strasburg Junction, died at his home.

Mr. Spengler was the son of the late William and Katherine Spengler. He was born on June 28, 1860. Three years ago he was paralyzed, and since then until the time of his death he had been helpless.

Many of our readers will remember that when Miss Nina Spengler, our Good Will Delegate, was first elected to go to France, her father then was ill and it was with some hesitation that she left for the journey. Miss Spengler was fortunate enough to arrive home a few days before her father's death. Our sympathy is extended to Miss Spengler, to her mother and to her brother, Paul, who are left to mourn their loss.

With the exception of one year, when he was agent at Staunton, Mr. Spengler spent the whole of his 44 years of Baltimore and Ohio service as agent at Strasburg and Strasburg Junction. He was untiring in his efforts to please, and he consequently made many friends among railroaders, shippers and the traveling public.

The funeral services were held at his late home, Rev. Hamaker, of Strasburg Christian Church, officiating. The Masonic Lodge members of Spurmont Lodge acted as honorary pall-bearers and were in charge of the ceremony at the grave. Interment took place in Riverview Cemetery.

Here's a Fighter for Safety!

Conductor H. E. Rowman Makes Personal Drive in Careful Crossing Campaign

THE accompanying photograph is of Charleston Division Conductor H. E. Rowan, who has been specially energetic in connection with the Cross Crossings Cautiously Campaign.

Mr. Rowan has personally constructed small wooden frames and placed posters at all crossings in and around Weston, W. Va., headquarters of the Charleston Division.

In addition to this he has been active in distributing pamphlets and other literature in connection with the campaign. He has also talked to many people on the subject.

In a letter to Mr. Rowan, Superintendent Trapnell says: "If we could all realize our responsibility and obligation in connection with this work there could be no question as to the result, nor would there be any further necessity for organized activity to spread the Gospel of Safety First at grade crossings. I think those who are active in the campaign, as you are, have every right to feel—when the result shows a reduction in the number of accidents—that their action and interest has resulted in saving human life and preventing suffering. There is no greater reward that a man could have than the consciousness that he has done this."

It gives the MAGAZINE pleasure to publish this tribute to Conductor Rowan and to express its appreciation of the work he has done.

Will You Give Me a Chance to Pay You $100 a Week?

I want to make an offer whereby you can earn from $100 to $1,000 a month, cash. You can be your own boss. You can work just as many hours a day as you please. You can start when you want to and quit when you want to. You don't need experience and you get your money in cash every day when you earn it.

These Are Facts

Does that sound too good to be true? If it does, then let me tell you what J. R. Head did in a small town in Kansas. Head lives in a town of 631 people. He was sick, broke, out of a job. He accepted my offer. I gave him the same chance I am now offering you. At this new work he has made as high as $69.50 for one day's work.

If that isn't enough, then let me tell you about E. A. Sweet of Michigan. He was an electrical engineer and didn't know anything about selling. In his first month's spare time he earned $243. Inside of six months he was making between $600 and $1,200 a month.

W. J. McCrary is another man I want to tell you about. His regular job paid him $2.00 a day, but this wonderful new work has enabled him to make $9,000 a year.

Yes, and right this very minute you are being offered the same proposition that has made these men so successful. Do you want it? Do you want to earn $40.00 a day?

A Clean, High-Grade Dignified Business

Have you ever heard of Comer All-Weather Coats? They are advertised in all the leading magazines. Think of a single coat that can be worn all year round. A good-looking, stylish coat that's good for summer or winter—that keeps out wind, rain or snow, a coat that everybody should have, made of fine materials for men, women and children, and sells for less than the price of an ordinary coat.

Now, Comer Coats are not sold in stores. All our orders come through our own representatives. Within the next few months we will pay representatives more than three hundred thousand dollars for sending us orders.

The Trade Mark Contest—Highest Honor to Miss Leonora Lansdowne

THE September, 1922 issue of the MAGAZINE announced that one hundred dollars would be awarded to the person submitting the best trade mark, slogan or advertising idea representative of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Each entry was sent in to the MAGAZINE Office accompanied by a blank, sealed envelope containing the name and address of the person submitting, and entry and corresponding envelope were given the same number for identification. The designs were examined strictly on their merits and the judges finally decided that No. 400 was the best design submitted. When envelope No. 400 was opened, it contained the name of Miss Leonora P. Lansdowne, Engineering Department, and she was, therefore, awarded the prize.

There were upwards of twelve hundred designs, all told, sent in. It is not known how many persons entered the contest because some, undoubtedly, submitted more than one design. Miss Lansdowne, for instance, sent in ten different designs. The only envelopes containing the names of contestants that were opened, in addition to Miss Lansdowne's, were those of the persons sending in the designs shown in the accompanying cuts. Permission was secured from all of these to reproduce their designs in this issue.

From letters of inquiry received at the MAGAZINE Office asking when the results of the contest would be announced, it is apparent that people from many parts of the country submitted entries. These inquiries came from employes of other railroads besides the Baltimore and Ohio, from passengers who had seen copies of the MAGAZINE on the trains, from advertising men and others.

It was evident soon after the designs began to come in that intense interest was being taken in the contest. Fully half of the ideas submitted showed considerable study and thought, and many of them were worked out with elaborate care and a good deal of skill. About one out of four was designed either in pen and ink or in colored crayon, and the skilled hand of the draughtsman was evidenced in many.

The basic idea in the contest seemed to be thoroughly understood by most of the participants and the principal constructive criticism that can be fairly made comes under the headings of "too great elaboration in design," and the use of the initials "B. & O." as the basis of designs. A good trade mark must be a simple one, must make its impression with a glance of the eye. There were some extremely pretty designs which failed because they "said too much." The designs which used "B. & O." could not be considered seriously because it is now, and has for years, been the wish of our Management that wherever practicable the full name "Baltimore and Ohio" be spelled out rather than the abbreviation in initials. It is only fair to add that some striking, clear and effective designs were worked out with the initials "B. & O."

When one considers the long period during which the Capitol Dome in the circle has been the mark of the Baltimore and Ohio, it is surprising how many other designs were worked up. Of course the Capitol Dome predominated—in many variations, both as to design and the wording used in connection with the design. The phrase used most often in connection with the Capitol Dome was "The Capitol Route," the play on the word "Capitol" being obvious. Another much used theme was that developing the Pioneering History of the Baltimore and Ohio, "The Pioneer Route" being a favorite slogan. The "Service" idea was developed in many attractive forms, showing unmistakably how thoroughly the contestants associate Service with the Baltimore and Ohio. "Safety" was another engaging theme and the Scenic Beauty of our line was also greatly stressed. One especially convincing design showed the Capitol Dome in the conventional circle, in the upper half of which was the railroad name, and below and balancing it the three words, "Safety, Service, Scenic."

Many of the contestants sent notes explaining why they felt their ideas worthy. The strongest letters came from those who championed the familiar and favorite Capitol Dome design and who deprecated the possibility of losing the years' old prestige which it has won as representative of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Miss Lansdowne's Winning Design

EXCELLENT SUGGESTIONS IN THE TRADE MARK CONTEST

The designs were gone over at intervals by Miss Olive Dennis, inspector of passenger service, G. B. Luckey, chief photographer, and the editor of the MAGAZINE, acting as judges. Their decision was unanimous that No. 400 was the best submitted and they so reported to J. S. Murray, assistant to president, who was in charge of the contest. It so happened that in a preliminary examination of the designs, before the judges' report reached him, Mr. Murray had also picked No. 400 as his choice.

The fact that Miss Lansdowne's design was selected as the best submitted in the contest, does not mean that it will be adopted as the invariably used trade mark of the Baltimore and Ohio. But the appropriateness, simplicity and history of the basic idea, make it adaptable for so many purposes that it will certainly be of great usefulness to the Railroad.

In reporting the results of the contest to President Willard, Mr. Murray gave the following reasons in explaining why No. 400 had been judged the best design.

1. It is adaptable to all uses for which the Railroad might want it; advertising, stenciling on cars and other property, stationery, timetables, etc. From an art standpoint the capitol dome can be reproduced in variations of halftone and line cut effects, depending on the use to be made of it, viz.: whether as a stencilled trade-mark on cars, stationery, newspaper advertising, etc.

2. The trade-mark selected has a dignity thoroughly in keeping with the requirements of the Baltimore and Ohio.

3. It holds the selling and good will value of the similar designs incorporating the capitol dome in the circle, as used in past years, and omits the non-essentials such as, "All Trains via Washington," etc. Although the trade mark we have selected is different from any previously used, it will still be instantly recognized as representative of the Baltimore and Ohio.

4. Although numerous "selling" slogans were submitted in other designs, there was none which, if incorporated with the trade-mark we have selected, would have added any value to it. On the contrary it is felt that any "selling" slogan incorporated with the design selected would detract rather than add to its value.

Miss Leonora Lansdowne, Engineering Department, Baltimore, and prize winner in the Baltimore and Ohio Trade Mark Contest

Miss Lansdowne receives the honor of being adjudged the winner because she was not satisfied with one, two or three attempts, but spent night after night on the contest, exercising her ingenuity and using her skill in draughting until she had submitted a well rounded and complete selection of carefully worked out ideas. It happened that perhaps the very simplest idea submitted in the whole contest, won, especially when it is considered that the prize winning design is really but a simplification of the several variations of the Capitol Dome design used in past years by the Baltimore and Ohio.

But genius is often in making a simple—a plain thing—even simpler. And Miss Lansdowne knew how to do just this!

Introducing Miss Lansdowne

MISS L. LANSDOWNE,

who has been awarded the prize of one hundred dollars for a Baltimore and Ohio Trade Mark, is an employee in the Drafting Room at our Baltimore and Ohio Building, Baltimore. She is a Baltimorean by birth, and will celebrate her fifth anniversary with the Company in September.

Miss Lansdowne attended public school and then high school, specializing in art. Whenever there was illustrating to be done, Miss Lansdowne did it. On Saturdays she studied art and china painting at the Maryland Institute, Baltimore, later taking up water color painting, design, commercial art and sculpture, perspective drawing, charcoal from life, and still life. United States on March 4, 1921

IN MEMORIAM

ON JUNE 20 last President and Mrs. Harding and official party left Washington on their way to the Northwest, Alaska and Canada. The Chief Executive met many of his fellow citizens, saw the beautiful parts of the country that they had chosen for their homes, learned at first hand much about their problems, and greeted the hospitable citizens of the friendly nation along our northern border. He also spoke of the world problems facing our country, and of his plans and hopes for helping solve them.

The journey was conceived and carried out in the spirit of friendliness, the friendliness which was his dominating characteristic, and which, especially since his sudden death, has been recognized as so worthy of high praise and sincere emulation.

The initial movement of the Presidential party over our line from Washington to St. Louis gave to a large number of our employes the privilege of sharing in an unusual way in the expression of this friendliness. Many of them had performed some service in connection with the movement of the special train, which helped make the journey safe, comfortable and pleasant, and these especially will look back with reverent memory to the occasion, so often repeated, when the President and Mrs. Harding came out on the rear end and evidenced their friendliness in smiles and words of kindly greeting.

Inexpressibly sad, in contrast, is the homeward journey of the fallen chief back to the Nation's Capital. It is being completed as this is written, through lines of sorrowing Baltimore and Ohio employes and other citizens.

As we grieve over his sudden passing we are thankful for his life, so rich in friendliness for his fellow men, and we join in the prayers that are being offered up on every hand that his devoted and courageous helpmeet may be strengthened and comforted by the sympathy of a united nation and by Divine guidance and support.

"Inject the Human Element into Railroading and You'll Get Success,"

Says H. B. Voorhees, Newly Appointed General Manager,
Western Lines

By MARGARET TALBOTT STEVENS

ONE Sunday morning four years ago I was filing some papers in the Office of the General Superintendent of Transportation, Baltimore. At the sound of footsteps I looked up. There stood the G. S. T. himself.

"Good morning," he greeted me pleasantly, "didn't you have any church to go to this morning?"

"Oh, good morning, Mr. Voorhees. Yes, indeed, but—"

He was looking at his watch.

"Well, it's ten o'clock. What time does service begin?"

"At eleven, Sir, but—"

"You still have lots of time to get there then. Get your hat and run along. It isn't necessary for you to be down here on Sundays."

Not necessary for me to be down there on Sundays! And it was the "big boss" who was saying that—actually telling me to get my hat and run along to church. He must be human. Why, bless your heart, I thought all that "big bosses" expected of their employes was regular machine work. I had heard a lot of that "cog in the wheel" talk during the war, and I had come to believe that I was just one of the cogs; I must do my work like the rest of the machinery. I could hardly believe that this was H. B. Voorhees himself telling me to go to church. Were all the "big bosses" like him? A file clerk, you see, does not often come into contact with many of the executive officers—unless it's the case of a lost file, and then the circumstances are different.

Needless to say, it did not take me long to get into my hat and coat and follow his advice. All the way to church I thought about it, and the more I thought about it, the more I began to believe that those "higher up" must have hearts after all.

In the four years that have passed since then I have found out many more things about the "big bosses." Why, they all have hearts. They're human, just like you and me. The only wonder of it is that, with all the work that they necessarily must do, they ever get a chance to show us that they are human. But they do show it. They show it right in their work. And since that Sunday morning, which I remember so distinctly, H. B. Voorhees, then general superintendent of transportation, has become manager of our New York Properties, and now holds the enviable position of general manager, Western Lines. Therefore, when it became the job of somebody on the staff of the Magazine to interview General Manager Voorhees, it was with a feeling of pride that I picked up my notebook and took the train out to Cincinnati to have a talk with my old boss.

Henry Belin Voorhees was born at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. on January 22, 1876. He attended the public schools and several private schools in New York, had two years of college and at the age of 16 entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y. He was graduated from here with the class of 1896 as civil engineer. He was of a railroad family and, as he says, he had no idea of becoming anything else than a railroader. His father was a superintendent on the Delaware and Hudson Railroad at the time that our general manager was born, subsequently becoming president of the Reading Railroad. Mr. Voorhees remembers that as a boy his one ambition was to become a railroader. As other children pile up blocks to build houses, he built engines of them.

He first entered railroad service with the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad on March 1, 1897, as assistant supervisor. He tells an amusing story of himself at that time. He didn't tell it for publication, but I am sure that he won't mind.

As assistant supervisor his salary was $60 per month. He lived in a little village and learned to save his money. Then came the day when he was promoted to supervisor with a salary of $90 per month.

"I have never felt so rich in all my life as I did then," says Mr. Voorhees. "In the country place where I boarded there was nothing to spend my money for. My board cost me $17 per month, and I lived in boots and corduroy trousers. If I wanted to be quite a spendthrift and have a gay time, I sometimes managed to spend $25 of my month's earnings. I saved at least $65 of it. Yes, I was quite rich. I saved up $500. That, I had an idea, would be quite enough to keep me from worrying about finances for the rest of my life. I began to think of how I would spend it. I decided first of all to get my life insured. It was one of those 20-year policies and it cost $140 a year. And I took it out just before Christmas! Ah, little did I think of the many future Christmases that I would have to scratch around to get that $140. You see, I wasn't married then."

His promotion to trainmaster came later, and on December 1, 1901 he came with the Baltimore and Ohio as assistant engineer, maintenance of way, Pittsburgh. On July 1 of the next year he was made assistant trainmaster, Cleveland, and on August 15, division engineer, Baltimore.

On September 1, 1903 he was promoted to assistant to general superintendent of transportation, and on February 1, 1905 to superintendent and general agent, Philadelphia.

On May 10, 1910 he was called to the general offices, Baltimore, as assistant to the president, and on July 1, 1911 was made general superintendent of transportation, and was transferred as general superintendent of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern on May 1, 1912. On July 1 of the following year he was made general superintendent of the old C. H. & D. and Cincinnati Terminal Division. He continued in this position until July 1, 1916, when he was made general superintendent, Northwestern District, with headquarters at Cincinnati. On October 1, 1917 he was made general superintendent of transportation, and on July 1 of the following year he began to act in this capacity for the Allegheny Region.

On September 15, 1919, he was made manager of the New York Terminals, and on March 1, 1920, general manager, New York Terminals, New York Railroads and Staten Island Rapid Transit. This position he held until June 1, this year, when he was promoted to the position which he now holds, that of general manager, Western Lines.

And now, why, after experience like that, should Mr. Voorhees be concerned about a girl who worked unnecessarily on Sundays? Simply because he is human; simply because he believes in injecting the personal element into business. Hear what he says:

"In ordinary commercial enterprises the employees are brought together in one place. In the railroad it is different. The employee must become a part of the organization, but he is not a machine. We must depend upon the man's integrity and his desire to do a good job of railroading when the boss is not there. If we can make him feel this desire, then our work and his work will be successful.

"I believe in making employees understand our problems. There is nothing hidden; there is no mystery about railroading. All our reports are filed and employees may see them and understand them.

"Officers are human beings and are willing to see the employees and to talk with them, and to help them to understand the railroad problems."

"Suppose, Mr. Voorhees," I asked, "a clerk, or even a messenger boy should come to you and ask you, 'What shall I do to become an executive officer?'—what advice would you give him?"

"I should tell him to make his work stand out so that it would receive the notice of those whom he serves. I would tell him to develop the desire to succeed and not to stay in a rut. Any deserving employee who is not willing to stay in the rut—and there are so many who are willing to stay in the rut—can find the way to promotion if he will. But he must not drift with the tide."

"They tell us, Mr. Voorhees, that you folks are away ahead of your schedule in coal and ore movement. Tell me something about it.

"In most years at this season all railroad men and industries are worried about the coal and ore movement. This year it is estimated that we had 25,000,000 tons of coal to move to the Great Lakes, and 60,000,000 tons of ore from the Great Lakes. On August 1 this year, three months of the season will be over and four months will remain. The railroads have already handled and dumped into boats 14,000,000 tons of coal, leaving 11,000,000 to be handled; we have handled 27,000,000 tons of ore, leaving only 33,000,000 to be handled."

Mr. Voorhees then spoke of phases of operation in which economies could be effected, dwelling particularly on car mileage and car loading. "The savings that can be effected by increasing each carload one ton per car are astounding," he said. "And the Baltimore and Ohio is carrying the flag for the railroads," he continued.

"And what do you think of our new Capitol Limited?"

"One of the finest things that we have," he declared with emphasis. "It is giving not only splendid service to the public, but it is giving our employees something to be proud of. We are all proud of it."

He smiled.

"I was standing at the station at Garrett, Indiana the other day and no less than three different people came up to me and said: 'There's the engine that pulls the Capitol Limited.'"

Then he told the story of a conductor whose car had developed a hot box. Instead of setting the car off and leaving it he had it attended to immediately.

"Yes, Sir," he told Mr. Voorhees, "I had to get her cool quick and then go, for that Capitol Limited was behind me!"

"That," said Mr. Voorhees, "illustrates my point about the human element. That man was personally interested in the success of the Capitol Limited. He understood the problem; he had learned to do not only what was expected of him but a little more. It is our job to let employees like him understand that we appreciate such action."

So that is the story of the man who appreciates men, who treats them as men, and who expects them at all times to handle their jobs as men would handle them. And they are doing it.

This is Real Team Work

By A. E. ERICH, Secretary to Superintendent, Chillicothe, Ohio

IN the month of June, Engine 5106 arrived at Parkersburg on Train 11, with fire door in such condition that it could not be closed. Finally the right section broke in two, making the fire door inoperative, with part of it missing entirely. Engineer William Cadden and Fireman R. C. Collins, who had been called to go out on this engine from Parkersburg to Chillicothe, after learning of the trouble, instead of waiting for another engine and causing delay to train by so doing, or waiting for repairs to be made, voluntarily agreed to operate the engine in this condition. Although greatly handicapped, they brought the train to Chillicothe on time.

Mr. Cadden is one of the oldest engineers on the Ohio division, entering service July 16, 1880, and is the third oldest on the seniority list. This crew always use TEAM-WORK in their handling of passenger trains, and in the manner in which they do their work, the above co-operation being a sample of their stopping a "DELAY-LEAK."

Chesapeake Bay Famous for Many Things besides Magazine Covers

THERE is a lot of work in getting good cover designs for our MAGAZINE. Often, also, there is a lot of fun, such as is suggested by the picture on the cover of this issue.

After canvassing many of the departments in Baltimore to discover a young lady who is an expert swimmer and who had plenty of nerve, we finally discovered Miss Maude S. Todd, secretary to Assistant General Freight Agent C. S. Roberts. Miss Todd has won several prizes in swimming races and no stunt around the water fazes her. So when we said: "Have you ever done any aqua-planing behind a fast motor boat?" and she said: "No," and we said: "Would you be willing to try—to make a cover picture for the MAGAZINE?" and she said: "Yes,"—we got busy.

First we called on Cabinet Shop Foreman H. B. Wheeler, at Mount Clare, to make the aqua-plane, since one could not be purchased in Baltimore. Then we asked Dan Smith, newsdealer at Camden Station and motor boat enthusiast, where we could get a fast boat and he recommended R. M. Welsh, assistant superintendent of the repair shop of the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Company, whose craft does better than thirty miles an hour, and Mr. V. I. Lenz, whose boat is only a trifle less fast. Then we got a "life saver" in the person of Lawrence W. Brown, statistical clerk in the General Freight Office. And finally came the job of getting Chief Photographer G. B. Luckey, Miss Todd, the plane, boats, the Bay and the proper time together. Some of the intermediate steps following are shown in the accompanying group of pictures.

Miss Todd is the daughter of E. W. Todd, tariff inspector, Pittsburgh, and entered the service of the Railroad in the General Freight Office in Pittsburgh in June, 1917. In 1920 she came to her present position in Baltimore.

Mr. Brown, whose help in getting the picture was greatly appreciated, and whose presence on the job in the role of "life saver" was quite reassuring, entered the service in December, 1912.

Chesapeake Bay is not nearly as well known as an ideal summer vacation ground to people outside the immediate environs of the Bay, as it should be. There is hardly a body of water in the world which offers as many fascinating boat trips as does the Chesapeake. From Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Norfolk and other cities, staunch little steamers ply the waters of the Bay and poke their prows up into the delightful, numerous little rivers tributary thereto. These rivers tap a fertile farm, garden and fruit country and the decks of the boats are usually piled high on their trips to the city markets with the most tempting products of the soil.

And piled high near this produce are barrels and boxes and crates of the succulent sea and bay foods for which the Chesapeake and surrounding waters are famous. It is a rare treat to be close to the markets to which these products are sent in season, and the person who has yet to tempt his appetite with the Chesapeake Bay crab in the multitudinous ways in which he appears on bills of fare, or on Tangier Bay, Smith's Island or any of the other famous varieties of Chesapeake Bay oysters, has a treat in store for him.

Within a radius of thirty miles of Baltimore hundreds of Baltimoreans and people from surrounding towns have summer places, known as "shores." These are built principally on the little rivers which enter into the Bay and provide attractive home sites with summer pleasures such as boating, fishing, canoeing, swimming.

The Chesapeake Bay is also famous for its many motor and sail boats, and the summer months are a veritable succession of races and regattas between the various clubs and sections. The development of these summer competitive meets has been very fast during the last few years and the Chesapeake will soon be nationally known as a summer rendezvous for all kinds of water sports, in keeping with its ideal qualifications.

Don't forget the large number of boat trips offered at small expense out of Baltimore on the Chesapeake and surrounding waters. Try such a trip over some convenient week-end and then send your friends over the Baltimore and Ohio to have a similarly pleasant holiday.

To all those who helped us make this cover, and especially to Miss Todd, we extend hearty appreciation.

Brakeman Howard Crawley an Unsung Hero

By CHARLOTTE MARLOWE

Magazine Correspondent, Parkersburg, W. Va.

TO JUMP from a moving freight train as it was running along the river bank, run into the water, swim out and bring in two small boys, place them on the bank, hurry out again and bring another one in who had become panic stricken at sight of the first two boys drowning, would be a pretty neat day's work for most men. The average man would have knocked off work, called it a day, and hurried home to change his wet clothes and tell everybody all about it.

But not so with Brakeman Howard (Babe) Crawley, of Parkersburg. After bringing the three youths in question to safety, Brakeman Crawley hurried to his train, which the engineer had slowed up to give him time to finish the job, swung onto the train and went about his work as usual. And be it said also that he didn't hunt up a newspaper reporter as soon as he was off duty, and to this day none of the papers has had a line on this happening.

On July 10, Engine No. 1114, in charge of Engineer Baker and Conductor Payne, had stopped for orders near the point where the Baltimore and Ohio bridge crosses the Ohio at 6th Street, Parkersburg. It was going ahead again, moving slowly, when Brakeman Crawley heard cries for help from both the drowning boys and a crowd of small boys on the bank. He acted at once, bringing in the two small boys locked in each other's arms, and quickly returning for another boy, who had become panic stricken in seeing the two boys drowning. The spot was in deep water, over a place in the river where the sand diggers had been removing sand from the bed of the river.

Your correspondent heard of it by accident, tried to find out about the matter from Mr. Crawley's superiors, but found them all close-mouthed about it, saying Crawley wanted nothing said about the matter, and his wishes would be respected.

Finally, after going to the Crawley home and talking with his wife and mother-in-law, Mr. Crawley was persuaded to talk enough about the incident to permit of this account. Even then he was inclined to make light of the matter, saying he had been a strong swimmer all his life, and that the boys were small and easily managed. But it matters little that Brakeman Crawley happens to be a fine swimmer, for his prompt action and courage were brought into action at just the right moment, he saved a triple tragedy and deserves the highest commendation.

The accompanying photo, taken at their home at 1013 Swann Street, Parkersburg, shows Mr. and Mrs. Crawley and their two fine boys.

Fifty Thousand Copies a Month

WE are now printing 50,000 copies of each issue of the MAGAZINE and we are getting calls for more copies almost daily. We also frequently get back a few copies of each issue from various points on the System, but seldom does the container indicate from what point they come.

If the department getting an oversupply will kindly advise the MAGAZINE office, we will be able to use its oversupply to send to those places that need more copies.

Please check your need against your supply and see if you have an oversupply. Let's send your surplus, if you have any, to those points needing more copies.

Department heads are earnestly requested to see that the distribution of the MAGAZINE is carefully supervised. The cost of publishing the MAGAZINE is considerable and we wish to avoid all waste.

Wearing Out His Welcome

SITTING on the ground near the railroad track were two tramps. Just in front of them a thin line of smoke curled upward, proclaiming the fact that the two had breakfasted. The baldheaded tramp filled his pipe, leaned over towards the smouldering embers and pulled out a half-charred stick, the end of which was still glowing. From this he lighted his pipe and began to put out the fire by pushing the stick into the ground.

"Wait a minute," called Redhead, "gimme a light."

Baldhead handed over the stick. Redhead lighted his pipe, then gave the stick a toss over into a tuft of sage grass.

"Hey, there! Don't do that!" yelled his companion, getting up and stamping out the little blaze that already had started from the burning stick. "That's likely to set fire to the whole blamed place."

"Well, what about it? Movin' along today, aint we?" asked Redhead. "Reckon it'll make any difference if they do have a little light around here?"

Baldhead pulled his whiskers.

"Well," he said, "the old gink up at the house yonder didn't sic the cops on us. Dunno as I'll ever come along here again, but if I do, I'm dog-goned if I want to wear my welcome out."

Now Baldhead was one tramp in a thousand; Redhead represented the other nine hundred and ninety-nine. This being true, it is not hard to see why the Baltimore and Ohio had $500 worth of damage done by tramp fires during the month of May this year. However, it might be a little hard to understand just why our entire fire losses for that month amount to over $28,000; it may also be hard to understand that the greater number of these fires was caused not alone by accident, but by carelessness and by non-observation of Safety rules.

For example, there were four fires caused by smoking, amounting to $1,090. To remedy this, the "NO SMOKING" rules must be enforced.

Rigid and proper inspection and maintenance of ash cans on engines and proper fire protection, such as water barrels and pails on bridges, would have prevented a loss of $2,924 because of hot coals. The Honor Roll notes in last month's MAGAZINE will give an idea of how some of our watchful employes have been instrumental in putting out fires on bridges.

If some of our bridges had been sufficiently and properly grounded; if no lead covered cables had been allowed to enter the buildings, a loss of $20,000 would have been averted.

If proper and regular inspection had been made for defects; if there had been proper clearance of wood-work behind stovepipes, standard thimbles installed in dampers, etc., there would not have been a loss of $150 because of defective flues.

If the operator of an acetylene torch had used special precaution when working around wood equipment to see that all fires were extinguished and all possibility of fire from sparks eliminated before leaving equipment, there would not have been a loss of $1,500 from this source.

These are a few of the reasons why it pays to keep our eyes open. Careless employes are a menace to the Railroad. Remember the story of the tramps; let us not wear our welcome out, but rather let us keep it by playing safe, by strict observance of the rules and by doing all in our power to prevent this one of our greatest wastes.

Fireman James Q. Shaw Saves His Scoop a Mile and Then Some for the Other Fellow

FIREMAN JAMES Q. SHAW, New Castle Junction Yard, Akron Division, on engine 1947 with Engineer Charles Chaplin on the East Lead job, has recently proved to his entire satisfaction that the slogan "Save a Scoop a Mile" represents a call to performance which is entirely possible and practicable.

After establishing by actual weight test that the average scoopful of coal he fires weighs eleven pounds, he kept count of the number of scoops fired during an eight hour tour of duty during which engine 1947 was worked at about the usual capacity and had no delays.

He found that his coal performance, using three to four scoops to the fire, was as follows:

Hour	Scoop	Pounds
1st	15	165
2nd	34	374
3rd	25	275
4th	16	176
5th	26	286
6th	28	308
7th	16	176
8th	16	176

For eight hours this shows 176 scoops, or 1936 pounds, or 242 pounds of coal per yard engine hour. Average steam pressure of 170 pounds was maintained. The engine was in good operative condition.

Fireman Shaw fired locomotives on the Hocking Valley Railroad and the West End Cumberland Division of the Baltimore and Ohio before being transferred to the Akron Division. He spends some of his spare time studying the theory of his work, with the aid of correspondence instruction, and expects to keep right on trying to reduce the fuel consumption on his engine while maintaining full working steam pressure.

If this example is followed by other yard firemen it is safe to say that the Akron Division fuel performance in yard service is due for a real improvement.

Car Miles—

Car Miles is still the liveliest operating subject on our Railroad. Past records of individual divisions indicate that with proper coordination the mark set of 40 miles per car per day can be realized. And it will be reached some time soon on the Baltimore and Ohio! Will you have a share in doing it?

"Washington Enshrines the Heart Throbs of America"

And a little girl living there writes anonymously some lovely verses about the souls that march by in her dreams, souls who have made her city—and ours—the glorious thing that it is

Washington, D. C.
March 20, 1923

Editor, Baltimore and Ohio Magazine
Baltimore, Md.

My dear Mr. Editor:

Several times I have wanted to write to you but for various reasons the writing was deferred. My brother tells me I should get a contract from Mr. Post, to write cereal ads, and sister says if I would quit moping around the house like a sick owl it would be better for me and everyone else.

I do not know why I am what I am; but I do know I am what I am because I am. We do not make ourselves; and we are as powerless to prevent seeing and feeling as we do, as human energy is powerless to stay the sea-seeking river in its course.

It is because of Margaret Talbott Stevens' great poem, "The Lincoln Memorial," in your February issue, that I have at last determined to write. I do not know the exact number of times I have read her poem, but many.

The opening and closing couplet,

"How blessed is the man who dares to speak the thoughts that sear his breast, Who challenges opposing worlds, does well his part, leaves God the rest," came to me as the coming of a white dove across the great waste-lands of mediocrity, bearing in its mouth the olive branch of hope.

Surely, said I, if the male may dare speak the thoughts that sear his breast, shall not the female also seek by brave utterance to quiet the flames of immortality which beat at her breast? Then, because of the couplet,

"Strange tales of chivalry they tell, of courage strong, of noble hearts,
And songs of men whose spirits dwell no longer in the busy marts,"

I began moodily to ponder why the American people cannot see that our beautiful city, Washington, is the center of American life, the heart and soul of human hopes and aspirations.

Here are enshrined the heart throbs and pulse beats of America and American memories; here, in Arlington Cemetery, reposes the honored dust which symbolizes American chivalry; and here abides the spirit of America's future.

It might have been because of the winds rollicking through the trees, or it might have been the starlight which, though radiant in its brightness, seemed sorrowful—I cannot say—I only know a vision of the souls of the past appeared in the sky. A bulging cloud, drifting along, hid from my view the starlit sky; and in the moment of passing, a bird began to sing—only a bird—but it seemed to assume the form of Christ, who, with his "Peace, be still," commanded the winds to cease.

Apart from the rest, Washington was kneeling in the snow as at Valley Forge, and, at a little distance, the great-hearted Lincoln was removing the shackles from a negro. This innumerable throng appeared to be the souls of the pioneers and colonists, marching on to the visionary Washington of their dreams—the Washington which has now become a beautiful reality.

The winds are in the trees tonight,
The winds are in the trees:
And ever, as I sit alone
In such drear hours as these,
A fever riots through my veins
In fitful maladies.

The stars shine dolorously bright
In the illusive sky,
Where countless dead, with solemn tread,
Go marching, marching by;
The countless dead that are not dead,
The souls that cannot die.

I see each face, its time and place—
As mortals reckon years—
And some are sad, and some are glad,
And some are stained with tears;
And some, so pitiful and pale,
Are etched by human fears.

A father here, a sister there,
A mother, bent and gray,
A friend or two, that someone knew
Ere youth had slipped away,
Go marching on, forever on,
Along their endless way.

Our Employes Helped Prevent Disastrous Fire at Washington, Indiana

Good Neighbor Spirit Commended by City's Business Men

RECENTLY a serious fire occurred in Washington, Ind., destroying the merchandise establishment of Cabel and Kaufman, who have been in business in Washington for 71 years, and doing damage estimated at $200,000.

Master Mechanic Herlihy was aroused by the fire alarm, and was one of the first men on the ground. Mayor McCarty was present and in discussing the situation with Mr. Herlihy feared that the entire block would be destroyed and that the fire would spread to other parts of the city. On the suggestion of Mr. Herlihy a fire truck was sent to the Baltimore and Ohio shops, a distance of one mile, to secure men and hose. They secured 1800 feet of hose and 18 men, who had just been relieved from their tour of duty on the second trick. Fire Marshall Bateman and Assistant Fire Marshall Ivy, Baltimore and Ohio Shops, voluntarily assisted in the fighting of the fire for four hours.

The action of the Baltimore and Ohio employes was commended highly by Mayor McCarthy, and President Ben Allen, Business Men's Association, wrote Superintendent Stevens as follows:

"On behalf of the entire membership of the Business Men's Association, permit me to extend to you, and through you to all other officers and employes of the Baltimore and Ohio, our most sincere appreciation for the splendid and efficient services so promptly rendered during the disastrous fire which seriously threatened the entire commercial district of this city.

"I assure you that such service as you and your force rendered on this occasion is deeply appreciated by everyone, and is a visible and concrete manifestation of the motto of the Baltimore and Ohio 'Being A Good Neighbor.'

"We hope you will appreciate the sincerity of our feeling in this matter."

also hope that this splendid testimonial will be used to the greatest advantage by our freight solicitors and, in fact, by all our employes, to bring new customers to the Baltimore and Ohio so that they too may learn of the dependable service given by our Company.

Introducing Miss Lansdowne

the camouflage class during the war and at that time she had three posters accepted and used—valuable service in the war emergency.

While attending classes at the Maryland Institute, Miss Lansdowne helped paint a set of scenes to be used at the Lyric Theatre for the concert by the French Orchestra. She has also worked on scenery and color costumes for plays given at other theatres.

Miss Lansdowne does not find much time for art work now; however, she is still much interested in it and never misses an exhibition here, in Philadelphia, or in Washington. Her work in the Drafting Room of the Engineering Department is most practical, and despite her artistic inclinations, she finds it quite interesting. She hopes some day to be a "bigger railroad man."

Miss Lansdowne considers 13 her lucky number. It was on Friday, September 13, 1918 that she came to work with the Baltimore and Ohio. Her work took her to the thirteenth floor, and the picture shown on page 7 was taken on Friday, July 13, this year.

The prize check came to her as an agreeable surprise, and Miss Lansdowne, is, as any of us might suppose, delighted. The prize winning design which she submitted, though simple, did not win first place without a good deal of thought and work on her part, for it was but one of ten designs which she sent in, and on which she worked night after night until her best ideas on the trade mark had been executed and entered.

The Weil Clothing Company Pays Remarkable Tribute to Our Fast Freight Service

THE accompanying cut, showing the top of the order blank used by the Weil Clothing Company of St. Louis, is a remarkable tribute to the splendid schedule maintained by our famous fast freight train No. 97.

In his letter of May 5 to Freight Traffic Manager Stuart A. Allen, Chicago, Mr. Ralph Weil, president of this company, said:

"Would you be interested to know just what 'America's Largest Clothing Store' thinks of the Baltimore and Ohio freight service?

"Though only thirteen years old we have gained an enviable position in the clothing world through our methods of buying and selling high-grade merchandise for cash at decidedly low prices. As the dominating feature of our success has been the rapid turnover of merchandise it is only natural that the stocks be kept complete at all times; that all shipments of new stock arrive on schedule and that new purchases be routed to effect delivery at the time desired.

"For thirteen years we have used your service, and now deem it so indispensable that our newest order blanks to eastern manufacturers have been inscribed in heavy type: "Ship Via B. & O. Train No. 97."

Such a tribute does not come as the result of indifferent service nor from spasmodically good service. It can only result from the consistent maintenance of a fast schedule, and the giving of uniformly fine service in other respects to these good customers of ours.

We appreciate Mr. Weil's letter and the compliment paid our crack westbound fast freight train and we

Help When It's Needed Most

Red Cross Service Car Will Demonstrate First Aid Methods to Employees

IN an effort to reduce the number of deaths from injuries in the nation, the American Red Cross First Aid service car has started out over the Baltimore and Ohio System and in the five months it will spend on this Company's lines it is expected that many thousands of railroad employees, industrial workers, Boy Scouts and others will be prepared to give efficient aid to those who have been injured.

This trip of the first aid car, which began in Philadelphia on July 21, marks the resumption of this sort of work by the American Red Cross after the suspension brought about by the World War. It is planned to cover the entire country, and the railroads will co-operate by carrying the car from place to place.

The car is of the standard Pullman type and contains a lecture room seating 50 persons. It is so arranged that in case of necessity because of some disaster, it can be converted into a hospital accommodating 30 patients. There is a surplus supply of food, blankets, stretchers and first aid materials for any purpose the car may be called for. At the conclusion of the five-months' trip over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the car will go to the Illinois Central Railroad and then to other roads until the entire country has been covered.

Major M. J. Shields, first aid field representative of the Red Cross, will be in charge of the car. He will be assisted by Dr. W. A. Redel and others who will travel with the car. Instructions have been issued by C. W. Galloway, vice-president, Operation and Maintenance, for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to subordinate officials to give every assistance in handling the car while it is on the Company's lines.

Meetings will be held in all the railroad shops, freight houses, freight yards, and other places where there are groups of workers. When possible, the force will be taken to the car's assembly room. Otherwise the demonstrations will be given in the shop or other buildings where the men and women can be assembled. When the car is in a city or town, one of the doctors will make a tour of all the industrial plants and give talks on first aid work. Police forces, fire fighting companies, municipal employes and others will be shown approved first aid and resuscitation methods. There will be lectures for the public, when first aid for the home will be shown. Anyone desiring to learn approved methods for taking care of cuts, burns, injuries of any other kind, the resuscitation of persons overcome by gas or by falling into the water, will be welcomed to the car. In each city visited the surgeons and instructors on the car will announce when meetings will be held.

Officials of the American Red Cross have discovered that thousands of minor accidents lead to death or permanent injury primarily because no one was present at the time of injury to give efficient first aid service. Proper application of remedies, bandages, tourniquet, etc., it is claimed, will many times save a human life, and this is the primary reason for the undertaking of the trip by the Red Cross.

Due notice will be given our employes at the places on the car's itinerary, of the time of its arrival. The accompanying pictures show the car and its officers giving instructions to some of our employes in Baltimore.

Vice-President Fries Addresses Mid-Day Club, Springfield, Illinois

By E. A. FERGUSON, D. F. A.

SPRINGFIELD, Illinois, was favored on June 20 by a visit from Vice-President Fries, who came as a guest of the Mid-Day Club, and who spoke to members of the club after a luncheon in his honor at the Leland Hotel.

The luncheon was the most successful in the club annals in point of interest in our guest and his subject, and our vice-president was greeted by a large delegation of our representative business men. To show how appreciative our city was of his visit, I quote below part of an editorial from the Illinois State Journal of June 20, which is self-explanatory:—

AFTER HIS ADDRESS BEFORE MID-DAY CLUB, VICE-PRESIDENT FRIES AND PARTY VISITED THE BEAUTIFUL LINCOLN MONUMENT IN SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

"That the public may know both sides in the railroad controversy, railroad officials who have any gift at all in writing and speaking, have set about to state their position. They are doing a very fine job and it is good for the public welfare that the carriers have such men. At noon today Archibald Fries, vice president of the Baltimore and Ohio, will speak under the auspices of the Mid-Day Luncheon Club. Mr. Fries will devote himself to the railroad question. He comes accompanied by a large number of Baltimore and Ohio officials. Aside from its interest in what he may have to say from the railroad's standpoint, Springfield owes it to a high representative of one of its important railroads to give him a hearty welcome. The local division of the Baltimore and Ohio grows in importance and magnitude each year and is destined to play a very much greater part in our municipal development."

For Pittsburgh Employes Carnegie "Tech" Offers Big Opportunities

OF particular interest to railroad workers are the Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh, Pa., night courses. The scope covers nearly every branch of industry and the arts. The range of the work is wide enough to interest the young worker who wants to specialize, or the one who wants to increase his efficiency in general.

The courses of special interest to railroad people are civil, mechanical and metallurgical engineering; machinery courses in pattern making, foundry work, machine shop practice, forging and heat treatment of steel, practical chemistry, lead burning, mechanical drafting, storage batteries, oxyacetylene welding, electric equipment and construction, automobile maintenance and operation, algebra, geometry, physics and English.

In each of the shops used in these groups has been installed the most modern equipment and facilities obtainable. Expert instruction, combined with up to date equipment with which to impart it, are promptly reflected in the student's mental capacity.

The fees for the night course at Carnegie are computed on the basis of $5.00 a year for each instructional hour a week, with minimum charge of $30.00 and maximum of $50.00.

Full details may be obtained by writing to the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Death of Former General Superintendent E. W. Hoffman

THE May issue of our MAGAZINE told of the appointment of former General Superintendent Hoffman, Northwest District, as general agent at Cleveland, Ohio. This change was made because of the long continued illness of Mr. Hoffman and in the hope that a complete relief for a time from the arduous duties of an operating officer would quickly bring back the health which he was making so courageous a fight to regain. He went to Los Angeles, where it was felt that the change of climate and the equable temperature would enable him to recover his lost ground, but his was a losing fight and he died on August 3.

Mr. Hoffman was born on November 9, 1877. He began his railroad career early in life and in 1908 was made general yardmaster for the C. H. & D. at Indianapolis. He became trainmaster at the same place in 1910, and superintendent of transportation in 1913. He was made assistant superintendent of the Toledo Division in 1914, superintendent of the Ohio Division in 1918, and superintendent of the Chicago Division in 1919. In 1920 came his promotion as general superintendent at the Chicago Terminal and in 1921 as general superintendent of the Northwest District. He was made general agent on April 15, last.

Mr. Hoffman's career as an officer of the Baltimore and Ohio was characterized by fine interest in his work and ability and energy in handling it. No task was too hard for him—he was ready to tackle any problem and he liked men about him who were able and willing to give without stint to the job at hand. Despite the determined spirit which characterized his railroad work, however, he was well liked by all his associates because he was fair and square in every relationship.

Several years ago ear and nose trouble developed without apparent cause. It gradually spread and eventually his lungs became affected. His death occurred in Los Angeles, and his funeral, in Indianapolis on August 10, was attended by many of his railroad associates and friends.

He was married, but had no children. The sincere sympathy of his fellow workers is extended to his widow.

Our New Coal Traffic Manager, Harry A. Cochran

SCARCELY an issue of the MAGAZINE is published without a story telling of the promotion of comparatively young men to positions of great responsibility on the Railroad. The stories all spell "OPPORTUNITY" in big, bold-faced letters and he who runs may read in them not alone the achievement of the other fellow, but also an equal chance for himself to make good.

If there is more important information to give the readers of the MAGAZINE, we do not know it. The slogan "Land of Opportunity" is America's particular possession and pride. Men who are willing to work hard, men who are loyal, men who realize the fundamental truth that what helps their employer helps them, are daily demonstrating that this slogan never applied with greater truth and force to American industry and particularly to American railroading than it does today. What a drab and uninteresting world this would be without competition in human endeavor, without rewards commensurate with results produced!

Our story this month is about a comparatively young man, for H. A. Cochran, made coal traffic manager on July 16, following the death of his chief, H. M. Matthews, was born on January 14, 1871. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio as a stenographer in the General Freight Office at Wheeling in 1897 and in 1899 had become through several promotions chief clerk to the coal and coke agent at Pittsburgh. In 1905 he was made assistant coal and coke agent at Cleveland. He went to Baltimore as coal freight agent in 1911 and in 1916 was made general coal freight agent there.

On January 15, 1918, after the railroads had gone under Federal control, Mr. Cochran was loaned to Federal Fuel Administrator Garfield and became assistant to the transportation advisor in that department. He later became manager for tide-water distribution for bituminous coal in the Fuel Administration and when its work was concluded Mr. Cochran was assistant director of bituminous distribution. He helped wind up the affairs of the Fuel Administration until July, 1919, then became traffic manager of the Davis Coal and Coke Company and the Pittsburgh Terminal Railroad and Coal Company. On January 1, 1920 he returned to the Baltimore and Ohio as assistant coal traffic manager.

Mr. Cochran was a member of the Committee on Bituminous Coal which prepared the 40 per cent. rate increase case in 1920, and in the reduced rates hearing, in 1922, he was witness on bituminous coal rates for all the carriers in the eastern territory. He was also a witness for all the carriers in the Ohio-Michigan coal case.

Employees generally of the Road know of the large tonnage of coal and coke handled by the Baltimore and Ohio. They may not know that coal and coke, together with ex-lake iron ore, over which the new manager has jurisdiction, comprise on an average of 50 per cent. and over of the total tonnage of our System.

Mr. Cochran has often been characterized in the hearing of the writer as "one of the finest fellows on the Railroad." Perhaps the following suggests one reason why:

When leaving his office he said to me:

"Have you read Bruce Barton's article in the last issue of the American Magazine on 'How Much Money Would Satisfy You?'"

It happened that I had read and enjoyed this interesting symposium of opinions from representative business men all over the country. Mr. Cochran said:

"The thing that impressed me was this—that so many of the men interviewed by Mr. Barton said they had never given his question much consideration; that early in life they had been anxious to earn a substantial competence but that when they had accumulated this they were so much in love with their work that they kept right on going, and not primarily because they wanted to make more money."

After all, it is love for your work and for achieving something that makes you happy in your job.

Fireman William White, Staten Island Lines, Saves Trespasser from Death

By G. J. GOOLIC

ON May 6, while No. 975, engine 1349, was running between Hugenot and Annadale, Fireman William White, Jr., observed a trespasser walking close to the westward track on which train was running. He called engineer's attention to the man, and whistle was sounded and bell rung.

H. A. Cochran, recently appointed Coal Traffic Manager

Disregarding these warning signals, the trespasser came closer to the westward track, and engineer applied his emergency brake. In the meantime, Fireman White went out on front of engine, and as it was about to strike the trespasser, lifted and swung him clear of the locomotive.

Investigation developed that the man was under the influence of liquor and unable to care for himself. He was placed on board train and taken to St. George.

By his prompt action, Fireman White undoubtedly saved the trespasser from serious injury or perhaps death, and he has been warmly commended by his superior officers.

Good Work Wins Promotion for Ticket Clerk Harry B. Kight

A NUMBER of years ago the west end of the Cumberland Division was represented but indifferently in the Among Ourselves Department of our MAGAZINE. One morning came a surprise at the MAGAZINE Office. It was a letter from a young fellow at Keyser. He too, had noticed that his territory was neglected and he made the very practicable suggestion that if the editor was willing, he would be glad to put "his people," as he called them, at Keyser and vicinity, on the map. The result was that hardly an issue of the MAGAZINE has been published since which has not contained items about and interesting to the "West Enders." The young man was Ticket Clerk Harry B. Kight, and it gives the MAGAZINE especial pleasure to announce that on August 15 he was promoted to the position of travelling passenger agent.

Mr. Kight is a splendid illustration of a man who does his own job well, and then reaches out in an aggressive yet becoming way, to see what else he can do to promote the interests of his Company. His name in Keyser is a synonym for "service" and one has only to spend a day with him at his work, to see what a real asset he has been to the Railroad as a builder of good will among his fellow townsmen. It is never any trouble for him to do for his employer all the things he would do if he owned the Railroad himself.

On his own initiative he has arranged for attractive displays of our advertising literature, in the stores of Keyser. He has talked the Washington trip idea to his friends, in season and out, and actually been a real salesman of the service that we are offering in the Freight and Passenger Departments. Many times the writer has learned of real revenues that he has secured to the Baltimore and Ohio which, had he been less interested, might just as well have gone another way.

He has been on terms of friendship with the publishers of the newspapers of Keyser, and has been able to get published in them many stories about the Baltimore and Ohio, its service, and its employees, all of which has helped build the neighborly feeling which the Railroad wishes to exist between it and the communities it serves.

His work for the Road is an inspiration to all who know him, and is a splendid example of what a man can accomplish when he puts real interest into his work. His promotion is richly deserved and his fine qualifications mean larger success for him in the new field of greater opportunity.

Harry B. Kight was born at Westernport, Md., on June 5, 1887, and was taken to Keyser by his parents in 1888. He attended Keyser Public Schools for nine years. He entered Baltimore and Ohio service on December 11, 1903 as messenger in the office of Car Foreman E. B. Miller. He remained there about one year and was then consecutively caller, boiler-maker's helper and brakeman on the Cumberland Division, West End. On September 1, 1913 he was appointed night ticket clerk, Keyser, and later, day ticket clerk, which position he held at the time of his promotion to travelling passenger agent, August 1, 1923. During the summers of 1921, 1922 and 1923 Mr. Kight was agent at Deer Park Hotel, Md.

In his new position, Mr. Kight will cover the territory from Cumberland to Connellsville, Grafton to Weverton, and Hagerstown, Romney, Somerset and Cambria branches.

Brain and Brawn

The BRAWN of man erected the Power Plants that harness the current of the mighty Niagara.

The BRAWN of man erected huge skyscrapers, bridges, tunnels and other large structures—BUT

The BRAIN of man CONCEIVED them.

The BRAIN of man organized the working out of plans to make them possible. In short the BRAIN of man utilized the BRAWN of man and trained it, making it possible to erect and operate these huge structures.

No matter how perfectly designed by the BRAIN of man, or how perfectly made by the BRAWN of man—they can never be perfectly OPERATED unless in the operation there is a superior combination of BRAIN and BRAWN. Nowhere is this better exemplified than in the operation of a modern locomotive. BRAIN designed it—and it takes some Brawn, but MORE brains to operate it.

In the firing of a locomotive for example—BRAWN is DESIRABLE—but NOT ESSENTIAL. Some of the best firemen are big, brawny men, but they are not good firemen because they are big and strong, but because they use their BRAIN to SAVE THEIR BRAWN. This is proved by the large number of small, wiry men who are EXCELLENT firemen. They have no brawn to speak of—but they are GOOD FIREMEN.

WHO IS THE BEST FIREMAN? Certainly not the man who can put the most coal into the firebox in a given time (this is the product of brawn alone)—but most certainly it is the man who can put the most coal into the firebox to GOOD ADVANTAGE, utilizing to the highest possible degree all the heat units in the fuel. This does not mean using more coal—on the contrary it means using less—a great deal less.

"How then," says the Fireman anxious to learn, "CAN I UTILIZE MY BRAIN TO SAVE MY BRAWN?" The answer is—read "Good Firing." The DON'TS on the back cover page show you how to make your work easy—i. e., to make your BRAIN SAVE YOUR BRAWN. Incidentally you will

Cumberland Shop Saving Thousands of Dollars Monthly by Reclaiming Headlight Turbo-Generator Parts

By HARRY E. CHILDS, *Electrical Foreman
Cumberland, Md.*

THE reclaiming of scrapped railroad material of almost every description has become a matter of course. The possibilities in connecton with reclamation and the economies to be effected, are so vast as to be almost limitless. This is clearly shown in the following pages in which an effort has been made to describe briefly what is being done with one class of material with which the Electrical Department is concerned—the various parts of the generating unit used in our locomotive headlight equipment.

The turbo-generator set, which is suitably mounted on the locomotive, consists of a steam driven turbine, direct connected to a 500 watt generator, which supplies current for the headlight, cab lights, and signal lights. These turbo-generators, while efficient, are subject in their operation to a severe and exacting service which is rather destructive to their delicate parts, resulting in frequent repairs or renewals. With upward of 2700 locomotives owned by the railroad, each of which is equipped with one of these small lighting plants, a large quantity of parts naturally accumulates through becoming worn or defective. A portion of these parts wear in such manner as to preclude the possibility of repairs, and are necessarily scrapped. A substantial number however, permit reclaiming, and such parts are salvaged and made virtually as good as new, with a small amount of work, in accordance with a reclamation program which is being carried out on the System, four central points handling the work for their respective districts.

At Cumberland, special facilities have been provided for handling this work for the Cumberland Division and the West Virginia District, and of the methods and practices used the following is descriptive. To insure the desired refinement of finish and the accuracy of fit so essential to the required interchangeability, a system of thorough inspection and testing of the various parts after repairs have been made, is followed out, guarding the material and workmanship so that perfect service is secured from the parts in operation.

In addition to the reclamation work shown in pictures the generator armatures and field coils are also repaired by the Railroad as they become defective. This work is also of extensive character but as it is handled at our two electrical repair shops, Baileys Station, Baltimore, for the Eastern Lines, and Ivorydale, Ohio, for the Western Lines, no detailed description of the work is given at this time. The purpose of this article is to illustrate the activity of reclaiming turbo-generator parts at Cumberland.

It will be noted from the table shown below that in an average month, a total saving of $3180.50 is shown, which represents the difference between the cost of reclaiming the various parts, including shop and storehouse expense, and the cost of new parts. This amount, applied on the working allotment, would be equivalent to giving 22 additional mechanics employment for one month. This is a splendid example of the benefits that accrue to the employes personally through the practice of saving or reclaiming material.

The next four pages show in pictures the essential operations in the reclamation of headlight turbo-generator parts.

A Railroader's Epitaph

By W. N. MITCHELL, General Southeastern Freight Agent, Atlanta, Ga.

WHEN in Richmond, Va., on June 30, W. N. Mitchell, our general southeastern freight agent, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., copied the epitaph on a tomb stone in memory of James E. Valentine, a locomotive engineer killed in a collision on December 20, 1874, age 32 years.

It read as follows;

Until the brakes are turned on time,
Life's throttle valve shut down,
He wakes to pilot in the crew,
That wear the martyr's crown.

On schedule time on upper grade,
Along the homeward section
He lands his train at God's Roundhouse,
The 'morn of resurrection.

His time all full, no wages docked,
His name on God's payroll,
And transportation thru to Heaven,
A free pass for his soul.

The Reclamation of Headlight Turbo-Generator Parts

RECLAMATION SAVES NEEDLESS EXPENSE

1. View of work bench; note test board, complete in every detail. The generators are brought to workroom, dismantled, thoroughly cleaned and inspected for worn or broken parts, then assembled and mounted on test stand for final adjustment. Picture frames shown contain descriptive prints of Turbo-Generator parts. 2. Reclaimed turbine wheels. 3. Test rack and balancing arrangement used in reclamation of turbine wheels. This is one of the finest in the country, as wheels can be balanced to weight of a match stick, or run 1 to 8000 RPM. This gives view of governor in operation. New wheels cost $21.00 complete with governor. 125 have been successfully reclaimed at average cost of approximately $1.00 each. 4. 27 reclaimed covers. 5. Showing method of boring and bushing covers. Face plate, or boring jig, is screwed on lathe spindle and grooved in such manner as automatically to center the part quickly and with absolute accuracy. Covers are then bored and bushing applied and reamed out to insure perfect bearing fit. Covers cost new $7.50 and are being reclaimed at average cost of $.58 per unit

WHY BUY NEW ONES WHEN RECLAIMED FRAMES AND SHAFTS WILL DO?

6. Thirty reclaimed Generator Frames. 7. Showing method used to mount, bore out and bush frames. "U" brace or boring jig is fastened to a face plate which is screwed on lathe spindle. Jig is grooved in same way as turbine cover jig, in such manner as automatically to center the frame quickly and with absolute accuracy, without necessity of bringing them to center by usual chuck method. Frames cost new $9.75; are being reclaimed at average cost of $.75 per unit. 8. Shafts with worn bearing surfaces built up by electric welding process preparatory to turning. 9. Shafts undergoing turning of bearing surfaces. Note method of chucking and centering. Chuck is simple, having taper body to conform to lathe spindle with split end which is threaded for tightening nut. Bore of split end is such that slight turn of nut clamps the shaft while automatically centering it. Opposite end of shaft is centered on tail stock and steady rest used to eliminate vibration and springing. 10. Bearing surface of shafts after they have been straightened and turned ready for key seating.

RECLAMATION A SURE WAY TO STOP THAT LEAK

11. This shows the simple method by which Turbo-Generator shafts are chucked in lathe and key-ways milled. New type E-2 shaft costs $2.62. Reclaimed, including building up by electric welding, truing and milling of key-seat, cost is $.42. 12. Nineteen reclaimed Turbine Wheels, with shafts and governors assembled. 13 and 14. Showing method of turning steam nozzle and guide passage plate, after worn surfaces built up by acetylene welding. Worn out nozzles removed and new ones applied. Guide passage plates are then bolted to a face plate or jig which is grooved to provide proper radius for turbine wheel clearance and give proper curvature to steam nozzle. Jig permits eight of these units to be turned in one operation. Where guide passages are worn out, they are discarded, but many units are reclaimed. Where this is done, average cost of reclaiming complete is $.50; cost new $4.88. When new guide passages are required $1.69 each must be added. 15. Reclamation of governor arms is simple. Small pieces of scrap material are shaped and riveted to prong of arm as shown. Cost of new arm is $1.69, reclaimed arm $.33

The Reclamation of Headlight Turbo-Generator Parts

RECLAIMED GOVERNORS, CASINGS, RINGS AND NOZZLES GIVE GOOD SERVICE, COST LESS AND MEAN ECONOMY IN OPERATION

16. Turbine casings reclaimed by acetylene process. This photograph illustrates what can be done. 17. The method of reclaiming governors is as follows: After taking apart, springs are reset and tempered in blacksmith shop. This is important work. Springs are placed in fire until cherry red, then placed on anvil and pressed until spring is closed; then dipped in oil to cool, and held over fire to draw temper. This is done three or four times, or until it is seen that proper elasticity is restored to spring. Governor yokes straightened when necessary and sleeves are faced off on bottom and sleeve bushing polished to prevent sticking on shaft after complete governor assembled. 18. Successful operation of Turbo-Generator is dependent upon governor. Care is taken to test all governors for elasticity of springs and travel of governor sleeves. This photograph shows gauge with which reclaimed governors are tested. 19. Left: badly worn nozzles. Center: nozzles built up by acetylene process. Right: finished reclaimed product. 20. Anti-friction rings are reclaimed by chipping worn out carbons out of holders, then applying new carbons. Smooth-on cement is used to fasten in holders. Cost of new anti-friction rings and holders complete is $1.12. They are being reclaimed at 44 cents per unit

New Refrigerator Baggage Service Improves Baltimore's Milk and Cream Supply

DURING the last few years large quantities of milk have been returned during the summer to farmers shipping the milk to Baltimore, because at the temperature at which the milk reached the city, it was not safe for public consumption. To provide for a greater measure of safety for the milk consumers of Baltimore, and especially the babies and children, an ordinance was made effective by the City Health Department on July 1, whereby all milk, in order to be saleable for consumption in the city, had to show a temperature of 70° or less.

The Baltimore and Ohio has for years transported large quantities of milk from the farms along the Old Main Line into Baltimore and our General Baggage and Milk Department handling this business was quick to provide the farmers a means of transportation which made it certain that their milk would reach the city with a temperature considerably lower than the 70° limit. A special refrigerator milk car was built, as illustrated in the accompanying picture and is now giving safe and satisfactory service.

It is hoped that milk producers with dairies convenient to our lines will see the advantage of this improved service and use the splendid facilities offered for their business.

Mary Pickford is a Romantic Street Singer in Her Latest Play, "Rosita"

ROSITA, a street singer in Toledo, Spain, is the idol of the people.

With her guitar and songs she supports her parents, two small brothers and little sister.

The King of Spain rules with a high hand. Where women are concerned, however, his sternness turns to weakness, with the result that the Queen is always keeping a watchful eye on him.

The people of Toledo are holding their annual carnival. Rosita, singing in the public square, has captivated the revelers with the gaiety of her song. She is in high hopes of a large collection when a trumpeter appears heralding the arrival of the king, who has been informed that the townspeople are indulging in debauchery. Taking this opportunity to escape the watchful eye of the queen, the king enters Toledo, pretending that he intends to suppress the licentious conduct of the people, but secretly hoping to pursue his amorous adventures.

Rosita, having been deserted by the crowds which rush to view the king, returns home with empty purse. Piqued at being deprived of her collections, and knowing the king's weaknesses, she quickly conceives a song ridiculing him. Returning to the public square she sings:

I know a queen so staunch and true!
Young Maidens, if she only knew!
Take care, My King! Be not too free—
Some eyes look blind that still can see.
I know a king—So bold and gay!
Young Maidens, look the other way!

The populace, hearing their Rosita singing this song, become delirious with joy and shower her with coins.

The king, meanwhile, has donned a mask. Mingling with the crowd, he hears Rosita's lampooning song. Instead of being indignant, he admires the singer, and seeking further conquest, tries to make her acquaintance. The prime minister, horrified at his king being derided by a street singer, orders her arrest.

The king and the people protest but soldiers appear and disperse the crowd. The struggling Rosita is dragged down a dark street. Don Diego, a Spanish cavalier, demands that the girl be treated with more chivalry. A quarrel ensues. The officer and Don Diego draw swords. They fight. Don Diego kills the officer and is arrested.

Next morning Rosita is brought to the Royal Palace. The king gives her a beautiful gown and jewels in order to win her favor. Rosita is delighted with the gifts but repulses his advances. Her heart belongs to the chivalrous Don Diego. The king's infatuation increases under her resistance. He presents her with a villa and permits her family to live there also.

Don Diego, who is the Count of Alcala, has been sentenced to be shot, but before the execution, the king commands that he marry Rosita in order to make her a countess. The wedding is performed, with Rosita and Don Diego blindfolded. They recognize each other. Rosita, terrified that her love is to be taken from her, rushes to the king and has him arrange a mock execution.

Rosita and Don Diego have their wedding breakfast in the prison cell. They are happy, and Rosita explains that he must feign death. The king, fearing that he will lose Rosita if Don Diego lives, again orders him shot.

In the meantime the queen learns of the king's latest adventure. She feels it is better for her own happiness that Don Diego live. Don Diego is led to his execution. The Minister of State, who has always disliked Rosita, tells her of the king's counter-order. At this moment the guns are fired. Rosita rushes to the prostrate body of Don Diego, implores him to give her a sign that he still lives, but in vain. She orders his body brought to her villa. Broken-hearted she drives there also. The king arrives almost simultaneously in high hope that now he will join the Countess Rosita in his first dinner with her. A fierce hatred overcomes Rosita. She pulls out the king's dagger and is about to plunge it into his breast, when Don Diego rises and thanks the king for his pardon.

Crestfallen and ashamed, the king leaves. To his amazement he finds the queen seated in his carriage. She hands him the counter-order, delighted that she has outwitted her consort and that she has him back, at the same time that she has achieved her purpose—the happy marriage of the Countess Rosita and Count Don Diego of Alcala.

Veterans Have Gay Time at Pretty Olympia Park, Versailles, Pa.

WE'RE going!" sang out the members of Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary as they boarded the train at Camden Station, Baltimore, the night before.

And "We're going," declared those who got on No. 17 at Martinsburg and Cumberland and Connellsville.

"Oh, yes, you bet we're going," cried the boys and girls, young ones and old ones, too, whom we met in the General Offices at Pittsburgh.

And "We're coming," insisted the other folk from Fairmont, from Wheeling, from Newark, from Columbus, from Cincinnati, from Lima, and even from far away Garrett, Indiana.

Going where? Coming where? Why, to the big picnic at Olympia Park, Versailles, on July 25. And they all came, too, not only the Veterans and their wives and families, but the girls and boys from the offices and many of their friends. The agents and supervisors were there, and the superintendents and the traffic people, and the office boys and the vice president. Uncle George Sturmer paraded around with the ladies and Captain Fletcher and the Missus were there. Brother Frank Howard and Mrs. Howard, Brother Wiley and Sister Moriarity, Sister Leonard and Brother Morris, all from Newark, came with their appetites.

"Daddy" Harrigan, Brother and Sister Wardley, from Connellsville, and Brother and Sister Garvey from Wheeling were among those who smelled fried chicken and were lured away from their homes.

Conductor Lenhart made everybody on his train happy, for he was happy to be in charge of such a good natured bunch.

The Cumberland Shop Band was there in all its glorious array of new uniforms which the men were wearing for the first time, and Frank de Luca waved a brand new baton, while "Ed" Warner looked 'em over through his tortoise-shells.

A Fillin' Dinner

A dinner was served at noon to grand officers, visitors and out of town guests. Just as the diners were about to be seated, the Cumberland Band began to play and Vice President Galloway made his appearance. Hearty applause greeted him and he was given the end seat at the table. General Superintendent Peck, Superintendent Beltz, Superintendent Martin, Superintendent of Transportation C. W. Gorsuch, Assistant General Passenger Agent J. P. Taggart, General Freight Agent W. W. Blakely, Assistant General Freight Agent A. L. Doggett, and Division Freight Agent F. A. Markley were among those who also ate corn-on-the-cob together. Besides, there were soup and chicken, new potatoes, salad, coffee, cake and ice cream—enough to make any hungry man promise to wash the dishes. Old Man Keane, from down at Grafton, didn't have much to say; he didn't have time. Safety Agent Allison rose to remark something about chicken and French dressing. Brother Daugherty didn't say much but kept sawing wood.

The Ball Game

After dinner there was a baseball game in which Connellsville beat Cumberland to the tune of 4 to 1. But the mountaineers were good sports and hope for better luck next time. Superintendent Transportation C. W. Gorsuch made a most excellent baseball fan, while Division Freight Agent W. E. Magill and Brother John McLain stood on the outside afraid to go in. Brother Sturmer forgot himself and tried to run the little "Capitol Limited" around its track in the field with Sister Lewis as fireman.

Brother Fleckenstein, the man who keeps the cleanest storehouse on the System, was there with his grandchildren, and Martin Devine, 98 years old and with 52 years of service, sang songs and danced a jig.

"Salute your superior officer, Sir," demanded Martin of Vice President Galloway, and also of General Superintendent Peck. And they both saluted.

"Don't they call you Gallagher?" asked Martin of the vice president. "Sometimes," smilingly admitted our chief operating officer.

The Speech Making

At four o'clock a table and chair were brought out on the lawn and Brother Sturmer mounted the one and then the other. It was the signal for the speaking to begin.

In introducing Mr. Galloway, Mr. Sturmer explained the meaning of the term "Cooperation," as he had heard it somewhere in Baltimore.

"When a Masonic order turns over its hall for a game of basketball between the Knights of Columbus and the Ku Klux Klan for the benefit of the Young Men's Hebrew Association—that's cooperation," he said. "Vice President Galloway is willing to turn over anything to us or to do all the things that make for cooperation: Vice President Galloway."

Mr. Galloway

"I am strong for the Veterans," said Mr. Galloway, "and I am proud of them. On the twenty-third of next month I will be two veterans, for I shall have been 40 years in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio."

"The Veterans Association is a strong asset to the Railroad; it can, it will and does benefit the Railroad. Mr. Sturmer has just spoken to you of cooperation. Cooperation is necessary for success. The Railroad cannot be run without the help of the employees."

"Some people have an idea that it is the officers who run a railroad. It is not the officers but the people themselves; without them we could not get along. No matter how bright and how smart a railroad officer may be, he must have the cooperation of his employees, and the man who does not believe this is sadly misled."

"In the records of service, courtesy, good fellowship and fair dealing with the public, the Baltimore and Ohio stands second to none. This is not because of Mr. Willard, because of me, or because of any other officer, but because of you."

Mr. Galloway then spoke of the things that employees do to make passengers comfortable, of the Capitol Limited and its high class service.

"It took three years for us to decide to put on the Capitol Limited," he said, "and it has been successful. Its success is not because of what the officers have done, but because of the magnificent spirit of all the employees who have come into contact with it. With two exceptions since it was placed in service, the Capitol Limited has gone into its terminals every day on time. One time it was 45 minutes late getting into Cumberland, but it reached Washington five minutes ahead of time. This was accomplished because of the feeling of each employee for the success of the train. Each man went to it and accomplished his part of it."

"Your officers see that all practices are set to standard; you people carry them out; it is you who are doing the work. Our improvements for this year cost $12,000,000, including elevators, etc. $32,000,000 of this has been spent for equipment alone, and 70 per cent. of this for freight equipment. Better equipment means better service; better service means better conditions and employment of men.

"I have no fear of the competition of any other railroad while we have men who show accomplished in one hour and five minutes. This is the reigning spirit among Baltimore and Ohio employees. If you do the things to make the Railroad successful, you are successful.

"There are many things that employees can do for the success of the railroads. As soon as a little money gets into the railroad's treasury, there are politicians who begin to devise ways and means to reduce rates. Certainly we ought to be permitted to earn enough to pay a decent wage to employees. If Congress lets the railroads alone for a time we shall be all right. You people have no idea how many bosses we have. The state and interstate commerce commissions are all our bosses. Understand, I am not complaining; I am simply stating facts. Somebody out in California wants rates cut and then begins the trouble.

"An automobile carries you a few blocks and charges you fifty cents for it; the railroad carries you many times farther for fifty cents."

Mr. Galloway then spoke of operating costs. He said that at Union Station, Washington, which is owned by the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania Railroads, it costs us 83 cents per passenger for every person who passes through the station, including the commuters. The only way to pay for this, he said, is to get passengers who travel long distances, those who pay $30.00 and $40.00 per passage. The best thing that we can do, he said, is to operate our railroad economically and honestly, and in this every employee has a share. It is the people who control this to a certain extent. There is always a certain political element who want to stir up things for the railroads. Certain things are facts; if they will only deal with facts we have nothing to fear. There are many newspapers and magazines published for the purpose of keeping up excitement, of telling lies to fool the people, to get big money through subscriptions that the owners may live "soft." Employees should think of these things and not be misled by such propaganda. And when the time comes, Mr. Galloway said that he hoped the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio will think properly and act accordingly. Our employees are now doing good work and are contented.

Mr. Galloway, in conclusion, told an amusing story which went something like this:

An Irishman was giving some good advice to his son. He said, "Me bye, ye're now 21 years of age. Ye've reached the point where ye'll start out fer yourself. Whin ye've a project in mind, be sure that ye use a bit av forethought, system and planning. Fer instance, if ye're walkin' up Fifth Avenoo and yer eye lights on a pie in the window of a bakery, ye wouldn't throw a rock in and break the window; ye'd go in and ask the young lady behind the counter to tell ye the price av the pie. Ye'd tell her to give ye wan. Thin ye'd ask her fer the sugar to sprinkle on it. Thin ye'd eat it, and as ye did so, ye'd be movin' toward the door. Whin ye've finished eatin' the pie, wipe the sugar off yer mouth wid yer handkerchief an' thin ye'd bate it out av the door. Yes, me bye, thin the evidence is gone it's time to run."

"And so," added Mr. Galloway, "with my evidence finished, it's time for me to run. I've enjoyed being here and I hope to come again."

Mrs. Howard

Mrs. Frank M. Howard, grand president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, was the next speaker. She told of the interest of the women in the Veterans' Association, and commented nicely on some of the remarks made by Vice President Galloway. She extended a cordial invitation to all the Veterans and their wives to visit the Newark Division Veterans at any of their meetings.

Mr. Harrigan

Mr. Sturmer then introduced P. J. Harrigan, a Veteran of 50 years of Baltimore and Ohio service.

Mr. Harrigan reiterated some of the things that Mr. Galloway said, and added:

"The vast amount of money needed and used by the Railroad is gathered in from the people who use the Railroad. Probably 60 cents from every dollar of this goes to us who labor for it.

"My membership in the Railroad dates back to 1867. In all that time there has never been an officer in the service who has ever directed, instructed or requested me to do a wrong thing. And when we have officers at our head who believe and trust in a Supreme Being, we can do well to carry out the work which is given us by them to do.

"There is the divine command that we earn our bread by the sweat of our brows. I have learned efficiency through the training of my eyes and hands. If you find working conditions as I have found them, we will yet be able to train the young men of today to direct his steps. We want him to be a better man for the Railroad than you and I have ever been."

Mrs. Lewis

Mr. Sturmer then presented Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, president of the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary, Baltimore. Mrs. Lewis gave a pleasing talk on the progress made by her Auxiliary and extended a cordial invitation to all present to visit them on meeting days. She told of the 32 women who had come from Baltimore to be present at the picnic, and urged these as well as all present to observe courtesy at all times. She cited a case of an employe of another road on which she had traveled whose discourtesy had been so pronounced that she had realized at once that no Baltimore and Ohio employe would act in like manner.

Mrs. Garvey

Mrs. J. M. Garvey was the next speaker. Mrs. Garvey came forth with one of her pleasing little talks, emphasizing the co-operation of employes with the management, and our consideration for each other. She expressed pride at being a wife of a Veteran and pride for the Baltimore and Ohio. "The little road, christened by Charles Carroll of Carrollton," she reminded us, "has now grown to be a giant of Transportation."

By the Way

Mrs. Bartlett and Mrs. Fleming, Fairmont, W. Va., were much in evidence. An observer must admit that if these two ladies entered into an argument, the "weight" would be all on Mrs. Bartlett's side. Ditto for Mrs. Otto Wallburg, of Lima. And she left poor Otto at home!

General Superintendent Peck is "camera shy." However, Aunt Mary overcame his natural reserve and "shot" him.

Vada Pearl Drumm, Cumberland, is some girl! She was selling tickets on a Chevrolet, and certainly lightened everyone's pocket book. We hope she gets it, even though she admits that if she does it will mean the poor house for her.

Marie Slatterick, Wheeling, creditably represented her division. But—Marie, your photo in the bathing suit doesn't do you justice by any means.

We've heard of round table orators. This, however, was the first time we ever saw "table top" orators.

In the sleeper from Baltimore were 32 ladies and one lone male. Some time in the wee small hours of the morning the train stopped. Other noises being silenced, music in various keys, from G-flat to A-minor were heard. Those rudely awakened from sleep demanded to know who was making the music. Then voices called to Brother Wall to wake up and stop snoring. A wee small voice from the poor man answered, "It's not I; I'm awake." Arriving in Pittsburgh the mystery of the "Heavenly Night Music" was still unsolved. None of the ladies would 'fess up.

Newark, Ohio, was there with bells on, led by Mrs. Frank Howard. Makes us wish we could visit Newark often, when we see the kind of "roses" they grow there.

And Connellsville! Two young ladies tried to "vamp" us into giving up even the shirts off our backs! Said they wanted to make blouses to go with knickers for hiking parties. Only way we got out alive was by promising to search our homes and offices on our return and forward the results by special delivery. Who could resist them?

"Courtesy, thy first name is Traffic Department, Pittsburgh." We don't wonder the cars are full of freight and the station full of passengers when we visit the Oliver Building and see the reasons.

There were no "claims" presented for lost or damaged goods. Mr. Cogley, Wheeling, took care of that.

And Safety! Who could get hurt with "Safety First Bill" Allison, Parkersburg, on hand to see that they didn't.

Did you see the way Mr. Beltz and Mr. Booth looked after things around the station when it was time to leave? A real lesson in efficiency.

Frank Kane upheld the honor of Grafton,

W. Va. After seeing the fine looking crowd, Frank's one regret is that the street repairs, etc. in his town this year make it impossible to decide when to hold their annual picnic.

W. W. Haines, Connellsville, and C. H. Durant, Pittsburgh, in charge of arrangements, were the busiest men on the grounds. They were everywhere at once. We doubt if they even got anything to eat, so busy were they looking after the comfort of their guests.

Boy, page Mary Breen! After making all kinds of promises she "turned us down" and did not come.

The title of "silver tongued orator" passes to Mrs. J. M. Garvey, there being no dissenting votes. Her little speech came right from the heart and hit the spot every time.

On the train returning from Versailles to Pittsburgh one of the ladies said she was hungry. Mr. Sturmer handed her a Baltimore and Ohio dining car mint. Disposing of it, she was still hungry and took the package from Brother Sturmer and ate them one by one until they were all gone. The hungry feeling still remaining, further search was made of the train—without result—and when the train arrived in Pittsburgh, before the rest of the crowd were on the platform our lady was in the restaurant, ordering everything in sight!

Oldest Iron Vessel Listed by American Shipping Bureau is Our "Major Henry Brewerton"

A VETERAN OF 65 YEARS OF SERVICE

The oldest iron vessel on the list of the American Bureau of Shipping is the Major Henry Brewerton, of 65 tons gross, built in Baltimore in 1857. This tug is in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and is still in good condition. Assistant Agent and Yardmaster C. C. Lonkhardt, Philadelphia, obtained for us the accompanying picture of the Major Henry Brewerton. Mr. Lonkhardt's picture is at the extreme right in the group above. The others, who comprise the office force at Pier 22, Philadelphia, are, left to right: Chief Clerk T. P. McGarvey, Tallyman W. I. Congar, Stenographer Herman Chesen, Demurrage Clerk Joseph Levy

No. 4

SWEETHEART:
Do YOU remember
THAT WONDERFUL day,
IN THE beautiful
MONTH OF May—
YOUR slender hand
CLASPED IN mine,
WE KNELT,
AT THE shrine
OF GOD,
AND PROMISED to LOVE, CHERISH
AND FOREVER share
EACH OTHER'S JOY AND care
UNTIL PARTED by THE WILL of GOD?
DO YOU remember?
YOU DO, don't you?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember,
WHEN THE man
OF GOD,
PRONOUNCED us
MAN and WIFE,
AND THE bliss
OF THE lingering kiss
WITH WHICH we SEALED OUR vows?
DO YOU remember,
YOU RAISED your
DEAR SWEET face
TO MINE,
YOUR BEAUTIFUL eyes
MOIST WITH the HEAVENLY MIST
OF SUPREME happiness?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember,
I FOLDED you in
MY ARMS and kissed
AWAY THE tears, I
AND YOU called me
HUSBAND,
AND I called you
WIFE,
AND THEN I knew,
AND YOU knew,
THAT WE were BOUND together
FOR LIFE,
BY THE invisible

BONDS OF love,
AND THAT SIDE by side
WE WOULD rise or FALL ON life's tide?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember,
WE VISIONED
TIME'S pathway
STREWN WITH flowers, GROWN IN the GARDEN OF love AND WET by SUMMER showers?
AND HOW
THE 'LURING placid CALM OF the SILVER SEA of time,
HID WELL beneath
THE SUBLIME
BEAUTY OF its SMOOTH ENCHANTING surface
THE SHOALS and WHIRLPOOLS OF life's TRAGEDIES—
AND WELL it did?

SWEETHEART:
DO YOU remember
HOW WE would PLAN AND dream OF PEACE and CONTENTMENT, as we SAILED LIFE'S stream,
YOU AND I, together,
TOWARD THE land of
THE CRIMSON SUNSET?
DO YOU remember?
YOU DO, don't you
SWEETHEART?

Sugar Cookies

By Mrs. E. MORRIS, Wife of Engineer,
Smithfield, Pa.

Sift 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder with flour,
1 cup butter or lard,
2 cups sugar,
2 eggs,
1 cup sour milk,
1 teaspoonful soda,
Vanilla to suit taste.

Household Hints

Contributed by Mrs. E. MORRIS,
Smithfield, Pa.

WHEN boiling eggs, wet the shells thoroughly before dropping in boiling water and they will not crack.

To freshen the carpet, sweep with a broom previously dipped into salt water.
Shake the broom well so that it will be damp but not wet when using.

For hiccough, give the patient a teaspoonful of granulated sugar mixed with a teaspoonful of vinegar. If this does not afford instant relief, repeat the dose.

When our stockings no longer can be patched or darned, I make excellent dust cloths of them. Rip them up the back and sew together until the cloth is of a convenient size. Pour on your favorite furniture polish, or a bit of kerosene, and give the cloth time to absorb this before using.

If you have the misfortune to scorch any vegetable, remove the kettle containing it from the fire, set it in a pan of cold water, and, unless the food has been very badly scorched, the unpleasant taste will disappear.

Add a teaspoonful of vinegar to the water in which eggs are to be poached and they will not spread or crumble.

Mrs. McCauley's Corn Pone

MRS. ALICE McCaULEY, matron,
Mt. Royal Station, whose picture you see here, has been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio for 18 years. All of this time she has spent in the same position and in the same station. This is a splendid record, but when you have met Mrs. McCauley, you will not wonder why she has been

Mrs. Alice McCauley, matron, Mt. Royal Station, who gives us the recipe for corn pone kept here. Mt. Royal Station is spoken of by Baltimoreans as "the homelike station," and surely Mrs. McCauley does her share in giving to the women's rest room a homelike atmosphere. She is a home-loving woman, a good nurse in time of illness, and a good cook.

Mrs. McCauley is the widow of the late James E. McCauley, for many years a Baltimore and Ohio conductor. She has children, one of whom is particularly fond of the corn pone that his mother makes. We asked Mrs. McCauley for the recipe, which she gladly gave us. She was a bit shy when we asked her to pose for her photograph, but we are sure that she will be pleased with the results as she sees them here. The recipe follows:

One pound cornmeal, one pint milk, one tablespoon lard and one tablespoon butter mixed; two eggs, baking powder and salt. Beat all well together. Grease pan well and bake in a slow oven.

As it Really Happened

Y. W. C. A.

Clarksburg, W. Va.

June 21, 1923

Baltimore and Ohio Magazine
Baltimore, Maryland
Gentlemen:

Recently I picked up a copy of your MAGAZINE in the home of a friend, and it proved quite interesting—possibly because it represents travel.

I wonder if you would be interested in printing this piece of nonsense enclosed—in the next issue of your MAGAZINE? And this is the way it actually happened!

Very truly yours,

(Signed) JOAN R. BROWNING

On the eighteenth of March a man did go From New York to Washington—via the
B. & O

He rode on a pass, and had two brown bags—
We didn't know his name (couldn't read the tags).

Across the aisle a girl, a lovely creature,
Slender of form and perfect of feature,
Sat quite all alone; she seemed almost sad—
I had never met her (but I wished that I had).

She did not smile, nor even glance,
(A mere man, you see, had not much chance.)
Though each for the other had interest quite keen,
Not a sign of their thoughts on the surface
was seen.

Before the big flyer had flown very far,
"First call for dinner!" was heard through the car.

The man arose quickly and rushed out to eat—

But the girl never once arose from her seat.

That train pulled in at four-fifteen,
But still no move toward acquaintance
was seen;

With a lingering glance, that man arose
And went—but where?—Nobody knows!

Charleston Division Girl Makes This Charming Blouse

THE picture on this page shows Miss Madeline Hayden, secretary to the chief clerk, Superintendent's Office, Weston W. Va., wearing a most attractive little blouse, made from one of our MAGAZINE patterns.

Miss Hayden, who does practically all her own sewing, made this blouse for herself. She says that she found the pattern simple and easy to handle—not confusing in the least. It took her possibly two and a half or perhaps three hours to complete it. She did the work at intervals in the evenings after work.

The material which Miss Hayden used is figured canton crepe, with a back ground of gray and figures of cerise and black. We only regret that we could not make the picture in colors just to show you how lovely it really is. No changes were made in the pattern, save that the neck was hemstitched instead of being bound, as is shown in the pattern.

Miss Hayden gives us some good advice about making our own clothes. "I think it economical," she says, "for the business girl to do her own sewing. It enables her to have lots and lots of nice things inexpensively. If she bought these clothes ready made she would necessarily pay considerably more than their real value." There is just one item which Miss Hayden might have added: just think of the experience in sewing that a girl gets by making her own clothes; who knows how she may utilize that in the future! But then, I forgot. Girls on the Charleston Division are so charming in themselves that they do not need to know anything about household arts to make themselves more attractive. As for Miss Hayden—well, look at her and judge for yourself.

Price 12 Cents

The pattern used for this blouse is No. 4040.

This blouse is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches, bust measure.

Size 38 requires  $3\frac{1}{8}$  yards of 32-inch material.

From Baltimore and Ohio Magazine Pattern No. 4040, Miss Madeline Hayden made this charming little blouse of figured canton crepe

School Clothes for the Kiddies and Comfortable Styles for Everybody in the Family

By PEGGY

WHEN the Fashion Woman thought of styles for the late summer and early autumn, she thought of everybody in the family. There is the play suit for baby, another for the small boy; dresses for the school girl, aprons and dresses for mother and big sister, and even a night-shirt for father and big brother. And you will see what comfortable, sensible garments they are, too. They are easy to make, too.

The Fashion Woman says that many of the new one-piece costumes have the fullness draped at the side or in the front. Soft fabrics are used for the late summer and early autumn. Plaited skirts with jackets of the same or of contrasting colors are worn with the dainty little white blouses. Blouses are worn with the tiered skirts; this style, however, is most becoming to the slender person.

There are pretty striped materials to be found now in both heavy cotton and woolen materials. Striped materials combine with the plain colors in many interesting ways. Tan, with tan and white striped trimming, green with green and white striped trimming, and blue with trimming of blue and white striped material form some of the pretty combinations. Sometimes the plain materials are used for the blouses and the striped materials for the skirts, and vice versa.

Georgette is still in favor, although the colors are a bit unusual this season. Black, cream, flesh, yellow and turquoise blue are among the favorites. Black satin is much used for those youthful, long-waisted dresses with straight blouses attached to straight, full skirts. The general length for dresses has grown again, now measuring 6 inches from the ground.

The cool freshness of the lingerie collars and cuffs adds so much to the appearance of the severe tailored effects which are so much worn.

Velvet blouses in gay colors and in the jacquette models are worn with finely plaited skirts in contrasting or in self colors.

A Most Attractive Blouse

No. 4432 shows a fine way to make up that piece of figured material that you have kept in your trunk for a long time, wondering what was the best thing to make of it. It will be attractive in silk, crepe, georgette, paisley, or most any material. Figured silk was used in this instance. A nice combination could be made by using silk for the body of the blouse with georgette sleeves and cascade draping. The pattern is cut in seven sizes, 34 to 46 inches, inclusive. The size 38 requires  $2\frac{1}{2}$  yards of 40-inch material. Price, 12 cents.

An Unusual and Charming Little Frock

4424. This pattern would adapt itself nicely to being made over from another frock of which you may be tired. Embroidered or printed crepe, or foulard would be attractive in this design. The skirt is joined to an underbody; the overblouse and tunic close at the left side. This pattern is cut in 7 sizes, 34 to 46 inches bust. A 38-inch size requires  $6\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 32-inch material. The width at the foot is 2 yards. Price, 12 cents.

When Baby Plays

Pattern No. 4437 shows a comfortable play garment for children 2, 3, 4 and 5 years old. It is cut so as to afford freedom to the little wearer. It has a practical closing which is convenient for the youngster. It may be finished with or without the long sleeves. A 3-year size requires  $1\frac{1}{3}$  yards of crepe, linen or chambray, in 36-inch width. Price of pattern, 12 cents.

Housework is a Pleasure with an Apron like This 4420 was made up in figured pereale, edged with rich-rack braid, although cambrie, lawn or gingham might be used to good advantage. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes, Small, Medium, Large and Extra Large. Medium size requires 4 yards of 27-inch material. Price, 12 cents.

All Ready for School

No. 4447 is a dainty little up-to-date frock which the little miss will be proud to wear to school. On it she may have her initials worked, just the same as on big sister's blouses. Mustard colored linen was used for this dress, with a white bias binding as a trimming for the collar and cuffs. Green would also make a pretty trimming. Ratine in tan or gray with a piping of black or green would make an attractive little frock in this pattern. It is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10-year size requires  $2\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 32-inch material.

Inserted Pockets Add to the Utility of This House Dress

4426. The slenderizing features of this house dress will appeal to the stout woman particularly. Figured pereale with trimming of poplin made the dress shown here, although striped pereale would make quite as attractive a dress, the stripes running lengthwise, of course. The pattern is cut in 7 sizes, 36 to 48 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 5 yards of 32-inch material with  $\frac{5}{8}$  yard of contrasting material for trimming. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12 cents in stamps.

A Charming Gown

4423. Here is a pretty model draped at the centre front in Egyptian style. The dress slips over the head. This model is good for crepe, satin, or crepe de chine. Handkerchief linen, embroidered voile and batiste also, could be used.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16-year size requires  $4\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 36-inch material. The width at the foot is  $1\frac{7}{8}$  yard. Price, 12 cents.

A Pretty Frock for the Growing Girl

4440. Printed and plain crepe are here combined. This style is also pleasing in embroidered and plain voile, or it may be developed in plain or figured goods, with pipings of a contrasting color.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12-year size will require  $4\frac{3}{4}$  yards of one material 32 inches wide. To make as illustrated will require  $1\frac{7}{8}$  yards of plain material and  $2\frac{3}{8}$  yards of figured material. Price, 12 cents.

A New Version of a Popular Style

4052. This attractive one piece frock of dotted voile is trimmed with organdy and finished with a "short and long" button hole stitch. Plait sections lend fullness, and simulate length to the lines of this model.

The width at the foot with plaits extended is a little more than two yards.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 5 yards of 40-inch material. Price, 12 cents.

A Pretty and Becoming Frock

4422. Embroidered voile, or crepe could be used for this model. The drapery may be of self or contrasting material. As here

George M. Shriver Auxiliary, Martinsburg, W. Va.

Correspondent, CLARA McDONALD TAYLOR

THE gala night of this Auxiliary, May 24, has not yet been forgotten. We were disappointed that Vice-President Shriver could not be with us, but Mr. Milholland gave us a fine talk, conveying Mr. Shriver's regrets and best wishes. Mr. Milholland told of many events in the pioneer days of our Company and we hope he will come again soon.

The ladies sent a fine cake to Mr. Shriver, on which were candles representing the number of members. Mrs. Frances Watson Robbins sang for us, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Morrison Livers, in her usual charming manner. The music by the girls orchestra was also much appreciated. Mrs. C. W. Lewis talked in her interesting way and impressed on us the part we must play in working for a stronger union among our members. Mrs. J. M. Garvey's talk was impressive and interesting, while the Rev. Father McKeefry pleased every one by a short speech in his happy vein. Miss Vanetta Chambers, daughter of the late Brown Chambers, gave a humorous selection which kept everyone laughing.

On July 25 we visited the Versailles picnic. This has become an event eagerly looked for. The weather man was truly kind to us and every one was happy. Your correspondent and her son, Ellis Taylor, clerk, Cumbo, and Mrs. W. S. Burkhart represented Martinsburg. We met friends from Confluence and Smithfield and many other places. The dinner? Such chicken and angel food! The only thing to mar it was the watermelon which G. R. McDonald, Confluence, hunted for and could not find. Better luck next time, G. R., we will order a carload shipped for your use.

The addresses made by Vice President Galloway and Grand President of Veterans G. W. Sturmer were especially enjoyable. Hats off to the Cumberland Band! They certainly can play. The songs of Miss Vada Pearl Drumm were also much appreciated.

Our chaplain, Mrs. McBee, who has been ill, is missed at our meetings. She is always on hand, ready and willing to do anything for us. Our secretary, Mrs. Mary Robertson, was called home because of the serious illness of her mother. We are glad she is better. Mrs. Charles Lowery has returned from a trip to Pennsylvania points and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Copenhaver have returned from a trip west.

An Old Engine

By MARIE SLATTERICK
Secretary to Division Engineer
Wheeling, W. Va.

THE accompanying picture was taken at Barnesville, Ohio, on April 7, 1867, on what is known as the coal track, opposite the new Baltimore and Ohio Station.

This engine was formerly the property of the Old Central Ohio Railroad. The engines in those days were named instead of numbered, this engine being named the "Chauncy Brooks." After the Baltimore and Ohio took over this railroad, the engine was numbered 520.

George Greaves, engineer on this engine, is shown sitting on side of cab. Mr. Greaves is now 78 years of age and enjoying the best of health. He resides on his farm near Zanesville. The fireman on this engine is Mr. D. Shipley, who died about one year after this picture was taken.

The picture is now in the possession of a Wheeling Division man, Engineer C. T. Welsh, to whom it has been "handed down."

Mother Knows Best

By MARJORIE WHITE, Niece of Miss Sara White, Freight Office, Washington, Pa.

"BUT MOTHER," sobbed Louise, "I must have a new dress. I can't wear my old pink organdy. Remember, mother, this is a big party and all the girls will have new dresses. I want a lavender crepe de chine with a silver lace berth. I must have it."

"But Louise," said her mother, "I think that is much too elaborate a dress for a girl of thirteen. I will willingly buy you a new organdy or a plain silk, but I don't think it would be wise to buy such a dress as you suggest, for you would probably never wear it again. No, I think you will have to be content with your organdy."

"Mother," fairly screamed Louise, "Margaret Caldwell and all her set are getting crepe de chine and silk dresses, but no one is getting organdy. Oh, mother, I can't go without a pretty dress. Just think, the president of our school will be there to select the girl and boy for the pageant and everyone thinks Ronald Caldwell and I will be chosen; so, mother, I must look nice."

"We will see, dear," said her mother. "Now go to bed."

For a long time, Mrs. Kingston sat before the fire thinking how she could get a new dress for Louise for the party. She was a widow, and although she had enough to enable her and Louise to live comfortably, she had not enough to buy all the luxuries Louise wanted. At last she rose and said, "Well, I'll do it."

As she climbed the stairs she told herself that her old coat would do for another season. She could dye it and it would be almost as good as new.

For the next two weeks everyone at school talked about the party. They were very much interested in each other's clothes, but if Louise had noticed it, more girls were getting organdy than those who were getting more elaborate dresses. But she worshipped Margaret Caldwell and the five girls who went with her and they were getting fancy dresses, so she must have one too.

At home Mrs. Kingston was busy making Louise her lavender crepe de chine. Louise had many suggestions to make and her mother quietly did all she asked her to do.

At last the evening of the party came. Louise was wildly excited and as she dressed she said "Mother, Ronald will call for me at seven o'clock."

"Why, Louise, I'd much rather you went with Katherine. You know I don't approve of girls of your age going out with boys."

"Oh, mother, don't be old fashioned. You know all the girls will have escorts."

"Very well," said Mrs. Kingston quietly.

When Louise was dressed, she did look nice, but the dress was much too elaborate for the party she was going to.

Promptly at seven o'clock Ronald came and Louise set off down the street very much elated. At the corner she met her chum Katherine, but instead of stopping, she walked past with her head in the air. Ronald looked at her in surprise but said nothing, then Louise said laughing scornfully, "Did you see her dress? It was blue organdy." But Louise had failed to notice how becoming the blue organdy was to curly haired Katherine.

Upon arriving at the party, Louise was promptly carried away by Margaret Caldwell and her friends, for they noticed she was well dressed and so worthy of their company.

When the president and his wife appeared, Louise tried to be as much in evidence as possible. She got a ukelele and entertained the boys by singing all sorts of funny little songs. Although she was entertaining the children she was a little too forward about it, and she was so sure her beautiful frock would work wonders for her.

No one noticed Katherine very much at first, but at last the president said "What a pretty girl, she looks so much nicer in her simple dress than the others in their more elaborate ones."

"She certainly does," said his wife. "What a pretty picture she makes."

And indeed she did, for she was sitting in a big arm chair, surrounded by flowers. Her curly golden hair was such a contrast to the dark blue plush of the chair.

After supper had been served, the president got up to make his speech telling who had been selected.

Louise sat ready to get up and make her speech, but when the president made his announcement, it was not Louise but Katherine who had been chosen. Immediately Margaret and her friends left Louise's side and crowded round Katherine and Ronald.

Louise crept into the dressing room for her coat and then out into the street. When she reached home she found her mother waiting for her and she sobbed out her story in her mother's arms.

"My mother knows best," sobbed Louise, "and never again will I do something she doesn't want me to do."

Katherine and Louise soon made up again and Mrs. Kingston felt that the incident had cured Louise's vanity.

Onward, Dear Country

By ELNORA EWING, Niece of Oilman
J. M. Ewing, Chillicothe, Ohio

Onward, dear country, with your ambition and fame

In every land honored shall be thy name
Amid the stir and bustle of busy life,
You, dear country, have been true throughout strife.

Prove your qualities, fulfil the command of God. Let

Foreign nations continue to stumble and fall upon unrighteous sod.

Do not falter till every nation has realized
Till every country is Christianized

In God's pure light—In God's pure love—
In the radiance which beams from above.

Onward, dear country, with your flaming light

Make nations realize the God of power and might.

Lead them upward to the sunshine that God so freely gives,

To the men, women and children who in Him believe.

Lift those little children who are so vainly groping,

Who are sincerely hoping,
From utter darkness into dazzling sunshine.

Onward, dear country, so brave and true
Come what will, I'll stand by the red, white and blue

In war we shall conquer our foes, for Christ is our captain

Ever victorious shall we remain, for God will guide and watch
O'er us.

Life on a Ranch

By MARGARET ANDERSON, Relay, Md.

IN the morning the boys on Hunwell's ranch got up very early. They expected to have a busy day as they were going to have a round up.

At five o'clock they were all in their places. "All ready boys!" shouted Mr. Hunwell. At this they all started on a gallop after the cattle. A few minutes later they were scattered in all directions getting the cattle together. Six hours later the cattle were already branded with a big "H."

It took all day to brand them, and after a long, hard day, the boys turned in very tired.

Girls and Boys:

Well, what a fine lot of our little people guessed the puzzles in the May MAGAZINE! But Oh, when the June MAGAZINE came along, why that big charade made everybody think hard, didn't it?

The answer to the April puzzle is: "OUR LITTLE RAILROADERS." There were more than fifty little people who got the correct answer to this. The answer to the June puzzle is: "COAL BIN." There were all kinds of answers that our little people sent in. Some were good and some were very funny. One little girl said that the answer was "TEA KETTLE," and a little boy said it was "SUGAR BOWL." Of course neither of these was right, but there were a number who did guess the correct answer. But the Puzzle Man made you think that time, didn't he? Oh, how he did laugh when I told him about the teapot and the sugar bowl.

The answers to the July puzzles will appear in the September MAGAZINE.

And now, here's one that I'll bet you can't guess. If you can—well, I'll see if I can't find something that little girls and little boys can use.

There are 10 letters in this word.

The letters numbered 10, 1 and 4 placed together spell the name of a little animal that says "me-e-ow!"

Letters 5, 3 and 4 spell a word that means to strike with the hand.

Letters 6, 7, 1 and 8 spell something found on every dinner table.

Letters 10, 2, 7, 1 and 6 spell the rich substance that forms on the top of milk.

Letters 8, 9, 2 and 7 spell something that goes around an automobile wheel.

The whole word is the name of a study that we all have in school. (The Puzzle Man says that he will whisper this little secret in your ear: boys usually like this study better than girls.)

Send in your answers, as well as all other letters and pictures to: Aunt Mary, Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Maryland.

PICTURES DRAWN BY OUR LITTLE RAILROADERS

The man behind the ticket window is a funny picture of Mr. Harry B. Kight, Keyser, W. Va., drawn by his little nephew, Harley. Next to that is a funny picture of John Gianfagna, New York, drawn by himself. The girl is by Camilla Ausbrook, daughter of Agent C. E. Ausbrook, Noble, Ill. The dollie without her clothes was drawn by Maxine Moler, Brunswick, Md.; we didn't have the space to put in her dresses and hats. The little cowboy with the pony was drawn by Ernest Fischer, Baltimore, and the clown by Bernice Kirkpatrick, Dover, Ohio.

You Can't Put Guards on Men's Brains

I WOULDN'T be alive today if it hadn't been for that guard," said Foreman "Bill" to the S. M. P., as they looked at the swiftly revolving fly wheel enclosed by a stout wire cage. "I was standing right in this very spot when a circuit breaker blew out over on the board. I started for it quick, slipped on a small spot of oil and landed up against that guard. Lucky for me it was there."

One might say, "Well, 'Bill' should have watched his step. What was that oil doing there anyway? A man can't be too careful around dangerous machinery." But the fact still remains—"Bill" slipped and the guard saved his life.

Next to a careful man the best Safety device in the world is a good guard. We can put guards on machinery but we can't put guards on men's brains. We generally know what a machine will do but we can never accurately determine what tricks our minds will play on us to cause trouble. And that's why certain gears, belts, and other equipment in the plant generally must be covered up.

If we were as sure of what we will do tomorrow as we are of what the machines in the plant will do, we could throw away a large number of the safeguards now being used. There's the trouble! We don't know what moment some careless act or thought on our part will result in an accident.

Man suffered few accidents from the hand operated jackknife, saw and hatchet, but when he created machines to cut wood, iron and steel he had to protect himself from them. Many a man has taken off a guard saying, "that's the bunk," and has gone on working—and probably he has gotten away with it. But in the files of the Safety Department are accounts of hundreds of accidents which happened because the guard was taken off, goggles thrown aside, gloves discarded, or some other safeguard ignored. On the other hand there are also on record numberless instances where accidents have been averted by means of guards.

The safeguards in our plants, in our power houses, on our tracks, at our crossings, are intended to save lives, limbs and misery—they have a humane purpose we cannot afford to overlook. And no person has reason to believe that he can go through life and neglect these safeguards which have been developed for his protection.

Kentucky Girl Tells of Lovely Trip over the Baltimore and Ohio and Ohio

WAY down in the Blue Grass State, in the City of Louisville, there is a Baltimore and Ohio employee who believes firmly in his Company, and who feels sure that if he can once persuade his friends to use our service, one trial will be sufficient, and they will always come our way. His faith seems to be well grounded, as the following story will show.

Assistant Ticket Agent Richards is the man. The time is early spring; the place Louisville and the girl—Miss Alberta Nichols, who is studying music in New York. Her photograph is shown on this page.

Mr. Richards is a friend of Rev. Dr. Nichols, and through him persuaded

Miss Alberta Nichols, who tells her daddy of a nice ride on the Baltimore and Ohio

Miss Alberta to use the Baltimore and Ohio on a trip to New York. While members of her family have given our Company a share of their business, their New York trips have been made over competing roads. That the trip via the Baltimore and Ohio was well worth while, that the service was all that could be desired and that nothing was left undone to prove that "Our Passengers are Our Guests" is amply proven by the following extract from a letter written by Miss Alberta to her father, and which we have received his permission to print;

"I made my connections just fine in Cincinnati; slept fairly well, and Oh! daddy, how I did enjoy the beautiful, gorgeous West Virginia scenery. I am so glad you had me go over the Baltimore and Ohio. You didn't tell me about the wonderful scenery and historic interest of the route. I just wished and wished all of you could enjoy it with me. Harper's Ferry and John Brown's monument and all the scenes of interest made it so different from other trips. Daddy, why didn't you tell me? The conductors on the Baltimore and Ohio came and talked to me; they were very kind and helped me to make my change in Cincinnati. I did enjoy the beautiful route, in spite of my lonely feeling."

Thank you Miss Alberta. We appreciate your kind words. We hope you will use our line whenever occasion offers and we wish you every success in your musical career.

"Washington Tour is Greatest Bargain in Educational Sightseeing"

THAT is rather a unique way of expressing appreciation of Baltimore and Ohio service, but it means a good deal, summing up, as it does, the contents of the complimentary letter which we reprint below.

This is a splendid letter to show to your friends, to pass along to your wife who may be able to interest some of her women associates in making up a party, to tell the boys at the club about—all with the idea of giving Americans the opportunity of seeing Washington in a comfortable and an inexpensive way.

Mr. Strickenburg merits and has our congratulations for having made his tourists feel so entirely at home and happy when they were in his care.

The writer of the following letter is the secretary to the superintendent of Public Schools at Lakewood, Ohio. She is an educator and speaks, therefore, with authority about the tour.

LAKWOOD PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Lakewood, Ohio

CHARLES P. LYNCH
Superintendent

April 9, 1923.

MR. J. G. STRICKENBURG
Division Passenger Agent
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad
Cleveland, Ohio

My Dear Mr. Strickenburg:

Owing to the fact that your time was taken up with the duties attending the handling of the Cleveland party, I think no one had an opportunity of speaking a word of commendation to you before our party left Washington, so I am taking this opportunity to express for myself and the entire Lakewood party our appreciation of your very admirable plan of handling tourist parties, which in detail of comfort and execution of plan leaves nothing to be desired.

The real success of a conducted tour lies in the conducting. Tourist parties are usually composed of inexperienced travelers who, in order to enjoy their first trip and inspire a desire for more, must be relieved of the panicky feeling which is apt to consume the novice in the catching of proper trains, boarding right street cars, finding his way back to his hotel, etc. etc., all of which is eliminated by an efficient tourist conductor, and that I am pleased to say the Baltimore and Ohio has in you.

Surely your plan of transporting by auto or bus between points of interest in the city is highly commendable, as it obviates fatiguing walks which would detract from the pleasure of sight-seeing. When reduced to the minimum there is sufficient walking during the course of the day to make the comforts of the hotel (the bed and bath) greatly appreciated. Taking it all in all your Washington tour is the greatest "bargain" in educational sightseeing that I know of.

Again thanking you for the courtesies to the Lakewood party, and hoping that we may have the pleasure at some future time of another trip with you, I am,

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) DONNA STEVENS

Good Service Means Good Business—

Infers "Bob" French in the Tanner-Gross Co. House Organ,
The Flour Barrell

WHEN an athlete lowers a sprint record, or a flying machine goes a mile in about nothing flat, the feat gets a lot of publicity, but any such record "busting" means little to the flour man. He is concerned, however, when a new record is made in the movement of flour, because he may be the man to benefit next time.

Here is what happened in our organization a few days ago:

1.35 p. m.—Cable received from a buyer in the United Kingdom for a lot of flour to be shipped on steamer leaving New York at once.

1.38 p. m.—Salesman finds a stock of this flour is on hand at our mill-warehouse on Staten Island, and confers with our traffic manager.

1.45 p. m.—Traffic manager phones our plant and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

1.50 p. m.—Baltimore and Ohio say they can effect the movement and will send barge to our plant immediately.

2.38 p. m.—Plant phones office that barge has arrived.

2.50 p. m.—Plant gets orders to load, and quickly.

4.20 p. m.—Word from plant that men have completed loading and barge ready for tow, awaiting arrival special messenger from office with necessary papers.

8.00 a. m., following morning. Barge is reported safe alongside steamer, the S. S. Celtic.

9.00 a. m.—Receiving clerk of Celtic reports barge light and the flour in the ship. Just 19½ hours from time cable was received at our office!

The man at the plant, the traffic department and the railroad officials can be justly proud of making this quick shipment. It required real cooperation, team-work and above all, the ability to work fast and effectively. And despite the speed with which the flour was handled, it arrived at the ship with the sacks clean and perfect.

Why Do We Pay for Insurance—

And Stop That Leak?

By H. IRVING MARTIN

WE are paying insurance premiums every day, Fire, Life, Accident, Burglary, Plate Glass, etc.

We are paying a premium to protect ourselves against unavoidable disasters. If we suffer a loss we get the money to cover that loss.

Now what kind of a premium could we pay to guarantee us against Loss and Damage Claims. None whatever, we simply pay the whole loss. Yet these claims must be classed as avoidable disasters.

Did you ever think of this subject in this light? Let us tell you what kind of a premium is possible. It is the premium that every employe can put on his own efficiency and carefulness. That is the sort of premium that would cut out the claims. Have you perfected it at your station? Is everything working right with you and your men?

Following the Good Will Girls through France

By MARGARET TALBOTT STEVENS

No Man's Land—XII

FOR several days we have been passing through the lands which were torn up by gun fire and trenches. It is as if we had attended a great funeral of several days duration. Villages, like Fleurs, that have been totally destroyed without leaving even a stone where 150 to 200 houses stood before; towns like Verdun, which have no houses unmarked by the scars of war, or, like Rheims, where the once magnificent cathedral now stands as a spectre against the dark skies, shell battered and crumbling walls, with towers like broken sticks.

At Coucy le Chateau we saw a ruined citadel like that of Carcassone. From its top we beheld the fertile meadow lands which tell a story of the toil over barbed wire entanglements and shell holes in their making. In some cases there were all of the members of the family, from the old toothless grandmother to the little boy of six or seven, each with a shovel or pick, all doing their best to reclaim a bit of the land that once lay in the beautiful valley, a stretch of farmland that yields grain to feed the hungry mouths. Now with their homes in ruins and their fields a mass of debris and upturned rocks, shell holes and barbed wire, it is a struggle that only those who have regained the spirit that made France beautiful can fight against.

I am anxious to speak of many things today, but first of all, there are the events of yesterday. Each day seems far more interesting than the preceding one; each holds its own allurements in a different way.

It was not in a spirit of adventure, nor the spirit of the professional souvenir hunter that we stopped in the midst of a drizzling rain to look among the ruins for bayonets, helmets and empty shells.

"Here's a whole pile of helmets," said one.

"Yes, here's another."

"Be careful," warned the captain, "do not pick up anything until I see whether it is loaded or not."

"Oh, Captain, what is this queer looking object?"

And thus were gathered the souvenirs of the battles of Argonne Forest, the Battle of the Marne and Belleau Wood. There were German shells and casques, bayonets and cartridges, American and French helmets and shells—all mingled together just there where these men had fought their bloodiest battles of the war.

There was a French helmet with a hole shot through the top. Poor boy! Whose son was he? I shall take this helmet home with me. I shall place it on my wall with the scabbard and the grenade that I am also bringing. And when in later years I look upon them, they will remind me of many things, and the uppermost thought shall be—not that I picked them up on the battlefields of France, but that this casque from Argonne Forest and the sheath from Belleau Wood shall mean that these boys who wore them fought for "Liberte, Egalite et Fraternite." They shall remind me of those who made it possible for me to see France. The old France and the new; the country that in a few years will look as though a war had never passed through; the France whose people gave to us the most cordial welcome; the France whose spirit will never be crushed.

Soissons to Rheims—XIII

WHAT interesting days we spent in Soissons! Three of them, and each filled to the brim with visits to the centers of activity of the American Committee; libraries where whole families came in the evenings and on Sundays; schools, where the little children studied, sometimes under difficulties; baby clinics and hospitals; kindergartens and agricultural centers; playgrounds and day nurseries—all in war-ridden villages and towns. Domestic Science schools, medical schools and ambulance service are all to be found wherever there is a settlement of people who need them.

On the Sunday afternoon that we visited the nurses center at Soissons, we chatted with the nurses and got some idea of their work. Requests are constantly coming in from every quarter. All day long the French doctors are coming to the American Committee for nurses, for ambulance service. The little hospitals established here and there seem to be such little, makeshift places, but when we realize that these are the only semblances of hospitals that are to be found in many towns, we can understand the great work which is being done here. Public Health is a new phrase in the French language, but it is one which is taking a mighty big hold on the people. Sometimes I wonder if, from the standpoint of health and sanitation, the War wasn't a wonderful thing for France.

At one period of the existence of the American hospitals these were entirely full of accident cases resulting from shell shock and falling walls; later they became general hospitals, increasing the facilities to meet the needs, even to the addition of operating rooms, etc. Everywhere the American Committee's work has been received with open arms.

Home Building

Then there is the house building work of the American Committee, which is sorely needed everywhere. Realizing the immense territory which the Committee covers, it does seem amazing that it has accomplished so much in so little time. In order to keep other phases of its work in progress the Committee set about to do something from which it might realize a little profit, so that this might be used to advantage in the hospitals and clinics, etc. The idea came to build houses. To this end the Building Cooperative Society in the Canton of Coucy-le-Chateau was established. At the end of last year, they had built 536 new buildings, including stables, barns, dairies, graneries and dwellings. At the time of our arrival in France this number had been increased to 776, not to mention the 663 repairs that had been made to houses and the 4860 windows and doors that had been constructed.

Vocational Training

There are also classes in agriculture and carpentry. At Coucy last year there were 29 girls who took up manual training, and 29 boys who took up carpentry in the foyer, or general assembly room, which is used for most every purpose. The foyer is the center of community life. It may be the library, the entertainment room, the schoolroom, the workshop, consultation room for those in charge of public health, sewing room, club house, gymnasium or rendezvous for almost any public occasion.

The French "Movie"

That reminds me, I must not forget to tell you of the moving pictures which some of the girls attended in the town of Soissons. They found that the "pit" as we know it, is not upstairs, but downstairs. There the young swains of the village sit with their sweethearts, and almost as much love-making goes on in the pit as on the screen of the movie. As one girl expressed it, "I didn't know whether to look at the picture before me or the picture below; both were interesting and I couldn't afford to miss either."

The French movie is rather interesting. The characters are slow. They seem to lack that element which the Americans would term "pep." The hero enters the room. He takes a seat. He picks up a newspaper. He lays it down. He gets up and looks out of the window. He walks over to the mantel. He picks up a cigarette. He goes to the table to get a match. He lights the cigarette. He takes up his paper again. He sits in his chair. He gets up and turns on the light. He sits down again.

He flicks imaginary dust from his sleeve. He puffs six or eight times on his cigarette. Then the heroine enters. Yes, it is exciting indeed! Then, when the picture has ended at last, you are likely to find your hotel closed for the night.

We had such an experience one evening at Soissons. I think that it was nearly eleven o'clock when we returned from a walk to find the doors of the Croix d'Or closed for the night. We banged and knocked, we called and we stamped on the pavement, all to no avail. Finally one of the party espied a huge rope, several inches in diameter. We gave that a mighty yank. I never saw the bell that hung on the other end of the rope, but I am sure that everybody in town heard it. Shutters were thrown open and windows flew up. Heads came forth and angry voices were berating us. But we had gained our point. The watchman came down and let us in.

The Chemin des Dames

The Chemin des Dames (Women's Road) was the one we followed on our journey by bus—all of our journeys through the Devastated Regions were made by bus—from Soissons to Rheims. It is named from the story that the daughters of Louis XV walked this road when they went from Chateau de la Boivre to visit the Countesse of Narbonne. This road is a natural stronghold and was the scene of great military operations during the war. Here our troops from New England, with the French, were attacked viciously. All the villages in this vicinity were reduced to ruins.

From 1914 to 1918 the Germans were continually hammering at the towns along the Chemin des Dames.

The roads of France are wonderful. Many of them, particularly in Southern France, seem to be of solid stone. A great number are the same roads used centuries ago by the old Romans.

Rheims and Its Cathedral

Rheims is a quaint town. The greatest thing of interest, of course, is the famous cathedral with its rose window, which was partially destroyed by the war, and the equestrian statue of Jeanne d'Arc which stands before it.

It was noon before we arrived in Rheims. Our first duty was to eat. After that we were to make a visit to the cathedral

THROUGH THE DEVASTATED REGIONS OF FRANCE

1. The Bayonet Trench, where unknown French soldiers "sleep upright, with their rifles in their hands." 2. Delegates pause a moment and bow their heads in memory of those who died in the Bayonet Trench. 3 and 6. Scenes from Fort Douaumont, typical scenes throughout the Devastated Regions. 4. Delegates assembled at the gates of Romaine Cemetery, the burial ground of thousands of American soldiers, whose graves are marked by the white crosses in the distance. 5. American nurses tending the mothers of France to care for their babies. 7. The magnificent statue of Joan of Arc, before the Rheims Cathedral. 8. The bridge across the "Bloody Marne"

While waiting a few minutes for some of our party, we discovered a delightful little shop next door to our hotel, where we purchased hairnets and necklaces. They presented each customer with a little package of perfume as a souvenir. A little farther down the street I met Nina running towards me.

"Oh, come here, quick!" she cried, "the man in the store is saying something and I don't know what it is. I think he's trying to sell me something else and I only want some post cards!"

I ran with her to where a shopkeeper stood, holding out a panorama picture of the town. It was too funny for words. He was trying to give Nina the picture for a gift and she thought that he was trying to make her buy it. How glad he seemed that she finally understood. "It is a little souvenir for you to remember my town," he said, "I hope that some day you will return." This was typical of the people of Rheims.

At the Cathedral we were met by Cardinal Lucon, an aged priest, who braved the enemy fire during the war and who still loves to tell the story of how the beautiful buildings were shelled by the enemy from 1914 to 1918. For a long time it was necessary for the people of the city of Rheims to wear gas masks and helmets and to seek shelter from the bombs. Many lovely buildings now stand in ruins. The cathedral is being repaired. Workmen were busy with their hammers in the top of the edifice and magpies flew here and there while the cardinal explained to us the lovely bits of art to be seen here. The life of John the Baptist is depicted in the front windows; the great rose window is a thing of beauty, and outside may be seen what remains of many lovely pieces of statuary, including a shattered image of the Smiling Angel, which the people of the town believed to be one of their guiding spirits. In the evening we saw the cathedral by the moonlight, a lovely thing, whose towers seem to rise to the very skies.

It was in Rheims that I got another peep into the life of the French people.

One of the Good Will Delegates, who comes from Cincinnati, works in an office with a girl whose mother and brother live in Tours. Miss McGrew promised the little lady that if our journey took us to Tours, she would certainly visit the family. She asked me to accompany her. One of the chaperones called the French lady by telephone in the afternoon and informed her of the contemplated visit. The old French woman was over-joyed and said that she would send her son to get us.

Dinner was scarcely over when we found him waiting for us. He took us with him to his mother's house. Neither of them spoke English, so we armed ourselves with French dictionaries and began a funny conversation. However, it went on well enough and we had some nice messages to take back to Cincinnati. They were simply overcome with this visit. They did everything that they possibly could to make us enjoy ourselves, and although they had so little to offer, their best was set before us. I remember distinctly a little incident that made me believe more thoroughly in the affection of these people for us than anything of that nature that happened.

The dear old woman offered us some refreshments just at a moment that we were speaking of our return to the hotel. We told her that Mr. Hinds would call for us at ten o'clock. Very carefully and without attracting our attention, she reserved her share of the refreshments, contenting herself with munching on a little cookie. When Mr. Hinds arrived, she brought out the refreshments that she would have eaten and set them before him. Many an American would have scorned to offer so little; not so with a Frenchman. He offers you his best, be it ever so little, and he offers it with grace.

"On Ne Passe Pas"—XIV

SEVERAL years ago, when these battlefields were alive with the boys of France and America, it was necessary in times of depression and hardships to find for themselves certain amusements. Without these the human body could not have withstood the strain. Captain Hart told us of the results of shell shock. Men who were perfectly sane blew their brains out after hours of pounding and banging. Thirty to thirty-two hours, he said, is about all the average man can stand. He told an amusing story of how the Germans, in one case, had to keep their gas masks on for a day and a night without removing them even for a drink.

"Imagine," he said, "a big German officer sitting before a bottle of beer for thirty hours unable to drink it."

As an idea of the amusing things that must have happened, our Good Will Delegates got a taste of the fun that they provided for themselves on several occasions.

At Verdun we were the guests of the Commandant in charge of the citadel. The Commandant was a jolly good fellow, full of fun and mischief. He and the general and ten soldiers are housed in the barracks that formed our headquarters for the night. Yes, it was a great experience. We slept underground, just underneath of 15 yards of solid concrete. As we approached the barracks, the ten soldiers in their blue uniforms and little red hats stood at attention—just like little tin soldiers.

Quickly they seized our bags and packages and hustled us into the underground barracks where we were to spend the night.

It was most exciting. We were taken into the long, vault-like halls, along the sides of which were our sleeping quarters. Each compartment held an army cot, a box-like washstand and a rack. The "little tin soldiers" were at our beck and call, and you may well imagine that we felt as though we were the French officers themselves.

Dinner awaited us in the officers' mess. At the door stood the general and the major, who were our hosts for the evening, and several civic officers who had been invited. The guests included the prefect of the citadel, and several others who were dressed in the uniforms of their respective offices. Everybody who is of any importance, it seems, must wear some kind of uniform.

As a dinner partner for me, there was Monsieur, the-Inspector-of-Something-or-Other. At least that was the way in which he was introduced—and right here is where I made a real faux pas. Shall I tell you about it?

Everybody was in good spirits when we came in to eat. Nothing cheered us up after a long, dreary day in the rain like the sight of an attractive table. Moreover, there was heat in the barracks, the first we had felt since we had been in the Devastated Regions, save on one or two occasions when we had been able to cajole the chambermaids into building fire in the fireplaces. We had washed up and dressed in the nicest clothes that we had brought with us; we were as hungry as bears, and the prospect of a real, honest-to-goodness meal made us quite jolly. We were waiting for a guest who had not yet arrived. Monsieur-the-Inspector-of-Something-or-Other was speaking to me in French. The person who introduced him told me that positively the inspector knew not a word of English. Assuming this to be true, I replied in English to the girls who were standing near me, and who, whenever the opportunity came, plied me with questions, concerning my dinner partner.

The inspector seemed rather stupid; since our language is taught universally in the French schools, he certainly ought to have been able to join in the conversation. When I attempted to speak in English, he asked me to repeat it in his language. We managed to get along nicely. He asked the usual questions, how long had we been in France, how long would we stay, and if we liked the country and its people. Then he told of how appreciative the French people are of this visit of the Good Will Delegation, and how much it means to the people of the Devastated Regions to be able to thank some of the Americans in person. He complimented the charming manners and dress of the American girls. It was rather amusing, for whenever he spoke the girls wanted to know what he said, so there was much talking to be done at once.

Then came along one of the managers of the Temple Tours to join the jolly group.

"Oh, Mr. Peck," I said as he came up, "see what I drew for a dinner partner!"

Horrors! The Inspector-of-Whatever-He-Was understood—English? Yes, and also American slang! And for the remainder of the evening he spoke—not only in French, but in English. He was a jolly good fellow however, and seemed to enjoy the joke as well as the rest of us. But never after that did I speak anything in the presence of a Frenchman that I did not want him to hear.

The little tin soldiers served a most delightful dinner. The menu cards were hectographed with a little sketch of a soldier's grave in the upper left-hand corner. We thought it quite a gruesome decoration for a menu card, but at least it was unique. After dinner some of the girls played the piano, some sang, and some danced in the long hall, which was decorated with the flags of the Allies and with that never-to-be-forgotten motto: "ON NE PASSE PAS" They Shall Not Pass.

Then came bedtime. Never shall we forget the fun of sleeping in barracks. Each of us went into her own little compartment and closed the door. Just as I was about to doze off, I heard a little noise. Opening my eyes I saw a horrid looking face peering down at me. For a second or two I was nearly frightened out of my wits. Then I realized that the girl who had the sleeping quarters on my left was making faces at me. She had stood upon her washstand and was looking over the partition which separated us. It was not long before many of us were playing "ghost," and it was a long time before we finally settled down for a night's sleep. I don't believe we had really got to sleep before the guard ran along the gauntlet of doors and banged on each one as a signal to get up.

We had breakfast in the mess hall again with only the two officers as our guests and the ten little soldiers as our waiters and men-servants. Then we set out to visit the Fort Douaumont and the Bayonet Trench.

"Inconnu"—XV

IT was raining hard. The air was damp and cold. The hotel in which we had slept last night was without heat and we had crawled in between sheets that seemed damp and clammy. Perhaps you think that this was a hardship for girls who have been accustomed to steam heat and all of the conveniences of the modern American home. So it was, but those who suffered it, did so in silence. They knew that this was but the smallest touch of what our own brothers suffered here during the war. And at least we had a roof over our heads at night and a covered wagon to travel in. Many of us had bought extra sweaters and blankets, and strange to say, there were few colds. We could not afford to have them, for we had no doctor. The delegation had split at Paris to take different routes through the devastated section, and our doctor had gone with the other group.

We visited an American cemetery at Bony. Here thousands of little white crosses mark the places where lie our dead. Many familiar names were there inscribed, and a number of us found the graves of friends and relatives and laid thereon our little tokens of remembrance.

One of the girls found it impossible to locate the grave of a friend. A mistake had been made in the location, for when she reached the cemetery, the name and number of the grave which had been given her by the soldier's mother, were not there. She tried the same number in another cemetery, only to find that this grave was occupied by another. What should she do? She had promised the mother to find her son's grave and to decorate it. She could not go back and say it was not there. Over on the left were a group of white crosses, each marked: "Unknown American Soldier." Perhaps this mother's boy was one of these. It was possible; there was nothing else to be done. Mary took her flowers and laid them on the grave of an Unknown.

These places of which we heard so much during the war—did it ever seem possible that we should ever tread this sacred ground. No, we can never tell. As the burial place of the soldier is so often "inconnu" so are the vicissitudes of our lives. We never know what tomorrow may bring forth.

The Bayonet Trench

It was on the morning that we were visiting Verdun that we went to Fort de Vaux, to the lost village of Fleurs, and finally to the Bayonet Trench. Little did any of us dream what the Bayonet Trench would mean to us.

The cars came to a halt before a great marble gateway bearing an inscription which translates itself into English somewhat as follows: "To the memory of the French soldiers who sleep upright with their rifles in their hands, this monument is erected by their American brothers."

A few whispered words and we descended from our cars and began our march through the gateway and up the path. There before our eyes stood a magnificent white cross, cut into the white stone of a kind of a tomb, which takes the form of a half square. The terrible silence which followed was broken only by the sound of tramping feet—slow measured tread as of those of mourners following a bier.

Halting at the back of the monument we looked through the pillars. There, pointing from the ground upwards towards the sky were the bayonets, which were held, a few feet below the surface, by the hands of those who had been buried alive by shells from the enemy. Sentinels still! Dead themselves, yet keeping watch over their sleeping brothers—a silent vigil that neither time nor eternity can break.

Over toward Verdun a skylark began his circular flight and poured forth a beautiful song. Was this the spirit of the departed sentries speaking to let us know that all was well with their souls? Or was it simply a bird expressing his joy in the beauty of the morning, while the chaplain asked that we bow our heads in memory of these of the bayonet trench? Who shall know?

Down through the valley the other birds answered the call of their little comrade. The magpie darted away and the jackdaw boldly gazed at us who dared to intrude on his grounds. But when our prayer was ended the steady tramp of mourners returning again resounded through the stillness, and we entered the little chapel where lay the bones of many of those who are still unknown. Little caskets heaped with flowers and cards of remembrance, the altar on which the candles ever burn in memory of the "Inconnu."

Railroad Women Have Jolly Time at Tolchester

By DADE

THE Ladies Auxiliary of the Veteran's Association, of Baltimore, of which Mrs. Charles Shipley is president, held an excursion to Tolchester on July 10. This is their third annual picnic. There was a goodly attendance to share in the many pleasures that were provided.

There was a pic eating contest in which the young folk participated. There was also a peanut scramble for "young girls" whose ages ranged from 50 to 80. Everybody forgot all of her troubles and Mrs. Collingsworth won the prize for drinking milk from a bottle. Sister O'Hara was chairman and she turned out her sack of funny stunts. This good lady is equal to the occasion at any time.

The crab feast showed us how "the girls" could turn back the clock to the days of their childhood.

One hundred and four were present for dinner and one hundred and twenty-four for supper, and there was an abundance for all. We did not find out who won the prize for eating the most crabs, but we feel that it was a tie between Sister Bowers and Sister C. Lewis. If any crab feasts of the future should care to welcome the champion eaters, we respectfully recommend these two world beaters.

News from Daniel Willard Auxiliary No. 5

By MRS. H. K. DAUGHERTY

DANIEL WILLARD AUXILIARY, Pittsburgh Division, held its regular meeting in I. O. O. F. Hall, Hazelwood on June 5. We had a nice attendance and after the regular routine of business, we had a fine musical program.

We had two solos by Miss Lois Durant, who is the daughter of Chief Clerk to Superintendent Beltz; she was accompanied by Miss Mary Hull, daughter of Train Baggage-man Frank Hull. Miss Hull also favored us with a piano solo. There also were piano duets by the Misses O'Roke and Miller, and recitations by Master McMillen.

New Puzzles

1. INITIAL CHANGE (5)

On his way to an orchard some pruning to do,
Bill, a poor Manxman, drank TWO deeply,
'tis true.

Arriving, he clambered up high in a tree,
Alas, not without barking an arm and a knee.

Perched high on a limb he very soon found His tools he'd forgotten; there they lay—on the ground!

Retrieve them he must: Bill saw that at once,

So he came down and got them, the fuddled old dunce.

Up again in his roost a long ONE he chose,
Crawled out upon it, and tight to it "froze."

He sawed 'til his THREE old muscles were sore,

'Til the limb wouldn't hold him, and then sawed some more.

On a bed of FOUR stones poor Bill landed, alive,

Sat up and declared that his bones were but FIVE!

The solver sending in the first complete list of answers to the puzzles in this issue will be awarded a copy of one of the six best sellers, the selection to be made by the winner from a list that will be submitted.

To receive proper credit all lists of solutions must be in my hands by October 5, 1923, the answers and solvers list will be published in the November issue.

Just between You and Me

Winkie, who has been a staunch supporter of this Department, has graduated to the ranks of the elite and is represented in the July Enigma by a very clever riddle. We understand some work of Wick-o-cincy and N. Jineer will also be seen in early issues of that publication. More power to them.

The winner of the New Standard Dictionary, offered by Senior Vice-President Shriver, will probably be announced in the next issue.

We can use some flat puzzles, such as, transpositions, beheadments, curtailments, etc., and will be glad to have our poets come to the rescue. Speaking of transpositions, No. 14 in this issue is a clever example of that puzzle. N. Jineer is to be congratulated on her rapid advance in puzzledom.

William R. Dunkerly

William R. Dunkerly was born in Baltimore, October 10, 1850. His grandfather was Machine Shop foreman at Mt. Clare. Mr. Dunkerly entered the service in 1870 as blacksmith helper, under John Sands. In 1875 he was transferred to Riverside as tender repairer, and in 1876 returned to his former position at Mount Clare. In 1878 he was sent to Bayview as ash pan inspector and in 1885, to Garrett, Ind., in the same position. In the latter part of the same year, he returned to Bayview and in 1888 returned again to Riverside. In 1915 he was transferred to the Boiler Shop and in 1917 was appointed boilermaker, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement.

Judson S. Chambers

Judson S. Chambers was born in May, 1856. His railroad life commenced April 1, 1869, when he accepted employment as water and tool boy on the old broad gauge A. & G. W., now a part of the Erie Railroad, where he remained until 1871. He then worked as brakeman in Leavittsburg yard for about six months, after which he went out as road brakeman, and in 1874 was promoted to conductor. In 1876 he entered service of the Cleveland and Tuscarawas Valley Railway, now the C. L. and W. Division of the Baltimore and Ohio. He married in October, 1877 and has five daughters living.

Later Mr. Chambers left the C. & T. V. and went to Cleveland where he was employed on the old Valley Railroad, now Baltimore and Ohio, under Roadmaster T. DeLaney, Division Engineer J. E. Turk and Superintendent L. M. Briggs. After a short time, he left the Valley Railroad and was employed as fireman on the N. Y. S. & O.—now the Erie Railroad. In July, 1884 he again returned to the Valley Railroad, being employed about one month, when he was promoted to conductor, and remained there until 1898—with the exception of one year as yardmaster at Akron. He then took a position as engineer and remained in this position, with the exception of one year as general foreman at Akron Round House, until he retired.

Eli T. Marsh

Eli T. Marsh was born on October 25, 1853. He entered the Baltimore and Ohio service as laborer in 1870. In June, 1872 he was promoted to fireman, and in 1883 to engineer, which position he held at the time of his recent retirement. His father was in the Baltimore and Ohio service for over fifty years, and his son, E. T. Marsh, frequently fired for William Galloway, grandfather of our vice president-Operation and Maintenance.

A. M. Cunningham

A. M. Cunningham, who retired July 8, 1923, was born at Odin, Ind., on January 13, 1858. When he was five years old, his parents moved to Washington, Ind., where Mr. Cunningham attended school. In 1896 he entered the Baltimore and Ohio service as laborer and was promoted to machine operator three years later, being promoted to machinist in 1910.

In 1880, Mr. Cunningham married Rebecca Brown. They have nine children, all living.

Baggageman Parson Andres, Chillicothe, Commended for Exceptional Service

AN employe of whom little is heard, yet who is an important part of the organization, is he of the Baggage Department, at stations and in the baggage cars. The station baggageman comes into daily contact with many hundreds of our patrons and by his attitude can make friends or enemies for the Company. The travelling man, or indeed the casual patron, forms his opinion of a railroad often by his contact with one man. If he is not well treated, then he feels that the service of the Company is not what it should be, and in this way patronage is often driven to competing lines.

That our Baggage Department employes are striving to live up to Baltimore and Ohio standards and the slogan that "Our patrons are our guests," has been demonstrated on many occasions, and the following letter is just another instance of the good service they are giving. Mr. Clem D. Dowlins, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes as follows, under date of July 17:

"I wish to compliment you on the fine baggageman you have at Chillicothe, Ohio. There is one man there who is especially bright. I saw him working at Athens a short time ago and he is certainly a hustler. I think his name is Andres."

Mr. Dowlins refers to Baggageman Parson Andres, and the MAGAZINE is glad to publish this tribute to his courtesy and efficiency.

Wonderful Crystal Caverns are at Strasburg on the Baltimore and Ohio

By P. H. STARKLAUF, Office of Auditor Miscellaneous Receipts

THE historian in quest of lore and the nature lover in search of real beauty must some day turn their attention to the Shenandoah Valley, particularly in the neighborhood of Strasburg, Va.

Here Massanutten Mountain has stood guard for ages on the one side, and North Mountain of Virginia in another direction. Cedar Brook, three miles to the north, and Fisher's Hill, two miles to the south, still have folks nearby who can tell graphic stories of the eighteen sixties and their war turmoil.

The country abounds in limestone, formed in places into numerous caverns, some widely known. One along the Baltimore and Ohio was opened on May 30, 1922 to the public and is attracting considerable attention.

In his History of the Valley of Virginia Kercheval refers to Hupp's Cave (on Hupp's Hill) which in war time was a place of refuge for deserting soldiers. This has been renamed "Crystal Caverns." Extensive excavations have been made, electric lights installed, concrete walks and steps constructed and the place made dry and attractive in every sense. An entrance house arranged like a small club stands on Hupp's Hill, so named after the family in whose possession this tract of land has been for over a hundred years.

Geologists claim that it requires 160 years to form a cubic inch of stalactite formation (those hanging from the ceiling) and 225 years to form a cubic inch of the stalagmite formation (those forming from the floor up).

The action of water on limestone has resulted in varied formations. One of the first to catch your eye is the land turtle. Seemingly he must have heard an Indian coming down the shaft, become frightened, tried to get into a crevice in the ceiling, and been petrified.

This cavern contains a Giant's Coffin, as do some of the others which I have explored. The Pineapple, Banana, Blackberry Patch, Fish Market (rock fish, of course), as well as Buddha (God of oriental sect), Brontosaurus or Dinosaur (prehistoric mammal), are there in fine formation.

The Eagle, Dog's Head, Elephant's Head, Lady's Side Comb, Reposing Lion and French Poodle are easily distinguished.

Even Mutt and Jeff have a place all their own, and then one may see an excellent resemblance of the Capitol Dome at Washington, D. C. At the extreme end of one of the avenues is the Ballroom, a room seventy-five feet long and estimated to be about 165 feet below the surface.

The Whirlpool Room is worth mentioning. An opening in the top is where the rushing waters caused circular ridges to be left in the solid rock. A desert scene is in evidence showing entire impression of a camel's hoofs in the rock formation.

The Natural Bridge, Wigwam and Snow-drift are splendid, and the Crystal Pool is a veritable mystic maze, sufficient to deceive the best. Many other formations abound.

This interesting natural formation is but half a mile from our track and a short mile from the Strasburg, Va. station. It is easily accessible by bus or can be reached in a twelve minutes walk. On the grounds have been erected refreshment stand, retiring rooms, dance pavilion and an observation tower equipped with a powerful telescope, with which one may view the battle country for miles around. Earth breastworks and cannon pits erected and used by both sides in 1862, are still in a good state of preservation, and are within a hundred yards of the entrance to the Cavern.

You owe it to yourself to visit with your friends the Crystal Caverns on the Baltimore and Ohio.

ENGINE 5135 AND HER ALBION CREW

A Whole Crew from the Same Town

Engineman Ray entered the service November 30, 1886 as freight fireman, was promoted to engineer December 6, 1892, and to passenger engineer December 4, 1904. Conductor B. C. Lewis was employed on April 17, 1883, as a laborer, M. of W. Dept; transferred to freight brakeman on July 10, 1883, and promoted to conductor on August 17, 1885, and passenger conductor, December 12, 1900. Brakeman A. Mullen entered the service as freight brakeman on August 7, 1903; was promoted to passenger brakeman on September 27, 1917, and to extra conductor on September 21, 1920. Baggage-man L. L. Lewis entered the service as laborer, M. of W. Department, September, 1894; he was appointed passenger brakeman on October 4, 1890, and train baggage-man on October 1, 1906. Fireman A. Dreibleblis was employed as freight fireman on July 29, 1909, and is still working in that capacity.

Conductor Lewis is affectionately known among his men as "Old Man" Lewis. And all who know him agree that he's a fine "old man" at that.

We are indebted for this story and picture to Pullman Conductor R. L. Hamilton, who is a great friend of all our employees mentioned.

Thomas Jasper Rose, Baggage-man, Monongah Division, Dies after 53 Years Faithful Service

THOMAS JASPER ROSE died at his home in Grafton, W. Va. on July 7, after a lingering illness, resulting from paralysis. He is survived by two sisters, two daughters, two sons and thirteen grandchildren.

Mr. Rose was born on May 8, 1848, at Stone Coal, Harrison County, W. Va.

He was married in 1879 to Miss Laura Brooks of Cooks, Ohio. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad

The late Thomas Jasper Rose in 1867 as track laborer. In 1873 he was transferred to position of brakeman and in 1883 to train baggage-man. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' Association. He was one of the pioneers in the railway industry at Grafton, and rode on the first train using air brakes, between Grafton and Parkersburg.

The Grafton Sentinel says;—"For thirty seven years he was baggage-man on one turn on the Parkersburg Branch and he worked this train until he retired. He was connected with the construction crew that built the tunnels between Grafton and Parkersburg. He was one of the most trustworthy of the railroad's employees and held a record of missing only eight days in eleven years of service. He was one of the first five men on this division to receive a merit badge for twenty five years continuous service. Mr. Rose retired about two years and a half ago.

"He was a man who had the interest of Grafton at heart and was always working to improve the city and his community."

Funeral services were held on July 10 at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Rose was a member; Rev. T. M. Zumbunner, pastor, assisted by Rev. James E. Scott, Moundsville, officiating. Interment was made in Bluemont Cemetery.

They'll be Seen in Hamilton Watch Advertising

THE accompanying pictures of Freight Conductor Wash Christner, Connellsville Division, and Passenger Engineer E. G. Browne, Pittsburgh Division, were taken for use in the advertising of Hamilton watches for railroad Magazines, such as that of Engineer Pauver, which appeared in our own Magazine, January issue.

Mr. Christner was born on August 16, 1871. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio on November 25, 1898, as freight brakeman, Connellsville. He was promoted to conductor on June 17, 1901. Mr. Browne was born on May 16, 1854. He came to the Railroad as freight engineer, Connellsville Division, on July 20, 1881. He was promoted to passenger engineer at Pittsburgh on February 1, 1907.

It was at the request of the Magazine that Messrs. Christner and Browne had their pictures taken for the Hamilton Watch Company and it will be a pleasure for them to know that they will help spread the fame, not only of their favorite time pieces but also of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Peter Cosgrove, in his 1880 Baltimore Booster Parade Uniform

Peter Cosgrove Helped to Boost Baltimore in 1880

By JOHN HOWE, Superintendent of Shops, Cumberland

THE accompanying photograph is of Peter Cosgrove taken 43 years ago, dressed in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad uniform which was used by all employees in the Baltimore City Booster Parade, in 1880.

This event was one of the greatest affairs known in the history of Baltimore, in which the whole city as well as several railroads participated.

The sole object of this affair was to boost Baltimore and make it a greater and better city. Mr. Cosgrove tells us the city was elaborately decorated for the occasion. Many things of interest were on exhibition, one of which was a threshing machine, which at that time was quite a curiosity. Another was the old Yankee battleship "Kearsarge", which sank the Southern boat "Alabama" during the Civil War.

The most important feature of the day was the parade, in which thousands from every position in life took part. The Baltimore and Ohio had the greatest number of men in line, of all participants, with 10,000 men; the Pennsylvania railroad was second with 7,000 men. All the Baltimore and Ohio employees who took part in this parade, wore uniforms consisting of a red fez and white tassel, and blue waist with the letters "B. & O. R. R." stenciled on the collar in yellow.

Each employee in the parade carried an exact duplicate, made of wood, of the tool he used in his everyday duties. Mr. Cosgrove used a "tong" in his work as catcher in the Puddling Department of the old Cumberland Rolling Mill, where he first entered the service as cart driver, in 1869. He was soon advanced to catcher, which position he held until 1891, at which time he resigned to accept employment with the Cumberland Electric Railway Company, as motorman. At this work he was continuously employed until 1917.

During the year 1917, Mr. Cosgrove felt the call of the railroad and again returned to the services of the Baltimore and Ohio, and at the present time is employed at Cumberland Locomotive Shop as blacksmith helper. In spite of his 66 years, he is as active as any of the younger set in the shop. Mr. Cosgrove is one of the most popular and well liked men, not only in this shop, but the entire city and we hope that we will not lose him again.

Death of John F. Sullivan, Stationery Department

ALTHOUGH he had been in ill health for over two years, the death of John F. Sullivan, accountant, Stationery Department, on July 20 last, was a great shock to many of his Railroad friends in Baltimore and elsewhere on the System.

Entering our Accounting Department in February, 1880 as a messenger he gained wide experience in Purchasing Department affairs during a clerkship in that office, fitting him admirably for the position of accountant in the Stationery Department, to which he was promoted in November, 1901. This position was taken over by the Stores Department in 1917 and Mr. Sullivan was filling it at the time of his death.

Great responsibilities attached to his work in this position because of the sums of money involved in the bills he was called upon to check and audit, and his ability was commensurate with them. He had the interests of his Company always at heart and there was no problem too intricate for him to solve when it meant the saving of money through minute and painstaking investigation.

He was accommodating and loyal and lost little time until the last two years of his service when he was intermittently ill. It was the writer's privilege to know him as a fellow worker and to experience his interest in all things pertaining to the Baltimore and Ohio. Many appeals were made to him for the support of this, that or the other thing, and never without a hearty, and always modest, response.

A man who had known him in the service over a period of years but who is now connected with an industrial concern in Detroit, came to Baltimore to attend his funeral and said:

"I have many acquaintances and associates whom I respect and esteem, but among them all I count but three friends and John Sullivan was one of these. He was a man of unusually fine character."

Mr. Sullivan's lodge affiliations included the Elks, Knights of Pythias, Loyal Order of Moose and the Knights of Columbus. He was buried from St. Ignatius R. C. Church, Baltimore, on July 23, interment being in Bonnie Brae Cemetery.

The Perfect Day

By C. V. SMITH, Ticket Agent, South Branch, W. Va.

Two ends you will find to a perfect day,
One, the day that is just begun;
Unless you choose, you can't loose, I say
In the race that you have not run.

No matter how long on this earth you stay,
You have work that must be done;
And if you do it the very best way,
You will find the other one.

The late John F. Sullivan

Cleanliness, Cooperation, Ditching, Good Line and Surface Won the Prizes on These Sections

WE quote below from letters written by supervisors and foremen on sections which won prizes in the Maintenance of Way Department for 1922. Cleanliness is emphasized, while the importance of utilizing every hour, good ditching, good line and surface, and cooperation of the men are stressed.

Good Ditching and Surfacing Did It

Ditching and cleaning ballast and ballast shoulder, building standard road bed, surfacing track and having the 130 lb. rail in good shape won the prize for this territory.

A. O. TEDRICK
Supervisor, Martinsburg, W. Va.

Utilize Every Hour to Best Advantage

I owe my success to utilizing every hour to the best possible advantage.

THOMAS J. BURKE
Foreman, Roseby Rock, W. Va.

Keep Ditches Clean

I won a prize on my section by keeping my ditches clean, bolts tightened up and keeping line and surface in good shape.

M. C. MILLER
Foreman, West Romney, W. Va.

Gave Close Attention to Work

I have been foreman for three years, and was glad to receive a prize. I gave my work close attention by ditching, lining and surfacing and keeping right of way clean at all times.

C. W. ROBY
Foreman, Orleans Road, W. Va.

"Do It Now," His Motto

Our first duty is to carry out instructions from our superior officers. Never allow yourself to be told a second time, but always carry out the old rule, "Do It Now." An important point in maintaining a good section is to have good men; place the best man patrolling track and tightening bolts. I made a special effort to complete tie renewals early in the season; this gave me a good opportunity to take care of line and surface and clean the road bed. I got my entire section ditched by using one man and a wheelbarrow.

MONT WILSON
Foreman, Piedmont, W. Va.

Don't Let Safety First Get Behind

Carry out your instructions to the letter. Add a thing or two, that will, perhaps, be of benefit. Always get a dollar's worth of work for the dollar spent.

Remember. Don't Let Safety First Get Behind!

RUSSELL DAVIS
Foreman, Ohio Pyle, Pa.

Cleanliness and Good Line and Surface Did It

To win the prize, I had my work neat and clean, and kept the track in good line and surface. I have my ties evenly spaced. When I commence work in one place, my rule is to complete it entirely before moving elsewhere.

J. E. RIFFLE
Foreman, Crawford, W. Va.

Good Men Did It

In 1912 I was promoted to foreman of this section. This is the second time we have won the prize.

I have been fortunate in getting good men and I work with the men myself. By working regularly and steadily, and keeping a close watch on places that have a tendency to go bad, we make headway. In this way—We Did It.

FRED YOUNKIN
Foreman, Ursina, Pa.

Good Drainage is the Secret of Good Track

In the first place I get good drainage, which is the secret of good track. Then I established an organization among the foremen, giving them the work schedule one week in advance. This I prepare after patrolling track and observing conditions closely—looking after little things which eventually make big things. We also apply Chief Engineer Stimson's article, "Man Hours," in the December MAGAZINE to our work.

Every foreman puts his shoulder to the wheel and secures the full benefit of every man hour used.

W. C. WRIGHT
Supervisor, Wheeling Division

Get on the Job with Two Feet and Lots of "Pep"

We have a little black book entitled "Instructions Governing the Maintenance of Way Department." We took this book for our guide and got on the job with both feet and a lot of "pep." Of course one has to have plenty of "pep" if you make it a go anywhere. So we took our two jacks, placed them under the rail opposite each other and started raising track out of face—pulling out old ties and putting in new ones—tamping all ties up to jacks—spiking new ties—tamping down spikes on the old ones on line side of track—adzing off shoulders—pulling spikes—drawing rail to gauge on opposite side and tightening bolts in joints. Looks like a slow job—eh? But just keep moving jack ahead five or six days, then go back and pick up all little depressions, line and dress down ballast, cutting neat sod line or clean the ditch, using stick or line to make straight. Then step up in the middle of your track and look back toward where you started from. Oh Boy—some track!

If one has kept the "pep" in the gang and done this kind of work from June until November, when it comes to "Engine-riding" day, it makes you feel pretty good for the engineman to tell you have a fine piece of track instead of saying "I should think you would be afraid to ride over your section." Yes, I had it said to me not many years back.

We understand that some of the other boys ran us a close race for the prize this year. We like close races—that makes it interesting. So you all want to tie an angle bar on your pop valve this year and come on for we are going to have that same "pep" and the same two feet all this year.

JESSE V. SNYDER
Foreman, Lesage, W. Va.

It Takes Two Men to Put in a Tie. This Foreman Was One of Them

First—my supervisor gave me my tie allotment and told me to use it to best advantage. I saw that it would not tie the section and so tied the joints and quarters on the entire section—three and one-half miles. After using all my tie allotment I got after line and surfacing. When that was caught up, I tightened every bolt on main track. When through with bolting, I went over every frog and switch and tightened bolts and adjusted switch points and stands. Having done that I went over the entire main track and set all spikes down to base of rail, then cleaned out my ditches for the winter. Now I am bolting up side tracks.

Glenwood Social Club Entertains in Honor of District Master Mechanic and Mrs. Schmoll

By EDRIC C. GREAVES, Secretary and Treasurer

THE Glenwood Baltimore and Ohio Social Club gave a dinner and dance in honor of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Schmoll on July 9, at "Bongiovanni's Million Dollar Garden," Wildwood, Pa., Mr. Schmoll having retired as district master mechanic, Pennsylvania District, to take up other duties in Baltimore.

The attendance was approximately 150, including the wives, sweethearts and friends of the members of the club.

The presence of the ladies, who were beautifully gowned; the excellent musical and vaudeville program rendered by the Bongiovanni artists, together with the attractive appearance of the Garden, which was tastefully decorated with flowers, shrubbery, etc., tended to make the affair a brilliant success. It was one which will be long remembered.

The dancing platform was simply a bower of beautiful color and splendor, and the merry peals of laughter and songs of the graceful dancers indicated that everybody was happy and having a glorious time.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmoll were delighted beyond words. Mr. Schmoll proudly displayed the beautiful diamond ring, which had been presented to him by the Motive Power forces of the Pennsylvania District.

The Transportation Department was represented by the general superintendent and his popular secretary.

From Baltimore the following were present: Messrs. C. A. Gill, superintendent of motive power; A. K. Galloway, district master mechanic; O. C. Cromwell, assistant to chief of motive power; George P. Hoffman, master car builder and his charming bride.

Cumberland was represented by its popular shop superintendent, John Howe.

From the Pennsylvania District came: General Superintendent E. A. Peck; District Master Mechanic F. P. Pfahler; Superintendent of Shops and Mrs. C. M. Newman; Master Mechanic and Mrs. McGann; District Master Car Builder E. B. Miller; District Motive Power Inspector and Mrs. E. P. Poole; District Electrical Supervisor and Mrs. Roy W. Eves; and District Electrical Supervisor Harry Ellsworth. Among the young ladies were the charming trio from the Stores Department, Misses Edna Moxley, Claire Farrell and Elizabeth Flynn. From the Office of the Superintendent of Shops were Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Powell, Misses Mary Walsh, Olga Morris and Mr. A. K. Smalley.

The Reception Committee was composed of Edric C. Greaves, W. W. McPherson, B. H. Rush, H. F. Schwab, Misses Elizabeth Flynn, Edna Moxley and Claire Farrell.

Cleanliness, Cooperation, Ditching. Good Line and Surface Won the Prizes on These Sections

Some one might ask—"How many men did he have." Myself, and one man, and I have thirty switches on the three and one-half miles of main track. Again some one may ask—"How many ties did he put in?" More than one thousand. The reader may remark that you can't put in ties with one man. You cannot—it takes two.

Now I want to say a few words regarding installing switches and maintenance. You often see a switch installed and the points do not fit properly. The foreman usually condemns the material and says that it isn't made right. That is not the case, however. The switch wasn't installed properly. If it is, the points will naturally adjust themselves and fit either rail. If foremen will follow their guide, the "Book of Maintenance of Way Instructions," they will have no trouble in getting a close fitting switch. It is the best book we ever had.

Now comes the maintenance of switches. A foreman in many cases will find a switch point open one-fourth inch. The first thing he thinks of is to put nutlocks back of lug to overcome the opening. That is wrong. Try your gauge and nine times out of ten you will find the gauge one-fourth inch wide at point. Look at your line through switch. Probably you will find heel out too much. That will throw your point away from stock rail. Sometimes you will find your points fitting too tight. In that case, nine times out of ten you will find the heel out too far. The material that we get now will fit O. K. if properly installed and maintained. If I am wrong I want some maintenance man to tell me in the next issue of the MAGAZINE.

T. C. STONECIPHER

Foreman, Martins Ferry Branch, Ohio

Always be "ON TIME"

I make it a rule to arrive at the tool house on time. If a man makes it a habit to be late in arriving at his work, he will often prove to be a poor man in other respects. When I take my men out to work, I insist that every man does a fair day's work and that the work he does is of benefit to the section, as well as to the System.

Always see to it that—no matter what you are doing—the work is the best that can be done. Even the best you can do is poor enough sometimes, especially in winter.

Foreman Fred Younkun. 9. Foreman J. E. Riffe. 10. Foreman M. C. Miller. 11. Supervisor W. C. Wright. 12. Foreman J. V. Snyder

I have been a foreman for 25 years. I realize more, daily, the responsibility which rests on us.

E. G. CALVERT
Foreman, Morgantown, W. Va.

An On-Timer

In regard to the prize, I will say I get to work on time, keep my men busy and keep them lined up so that every man is busy and does good work, so that I do not have to go back over it.

I spaced two and a half miles of track, ballasted two and a half miles, dressed and banked two and a half miles with a gang of four to ten men.

MIKE ROSE
Foreman, Hamilton, Ohio

Neatness Was His Watchword

Am much pleased that we are the winners of the prize for best section on the Wellston Sub-division.

As to conditions which resulted in our winning the prize, keeping track in good surface and line, keeping belts tight in joints, etc., and keeping track as neat in appearance as possible, had much to do with it.

Foreman, Zimmerman, Ohio

Berkeley Springs (W. Va.) News Compliments Service

It is pleasing to get such complimentary press notices as the following from the BERKELEY SPRINGS NEWS:

WE are glad to hear the favorable comments on the courtesy of the employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The kindly consideration paid the travelling public is in marked contrast to what it was years ago. The company is evidently making a strong bid for support of the public. The service has improved and the readiness of employees to give information, answer inquiries, etc., makes it a pleasure to travel over the road.

Playing Train

Jack finally persuaded his aunt to play train with him. The chairs were arranged in line and he issued orders.

"Now you will be the engineer and I will be the conductor."

"Lend me your watch and get into the cab."

Then he hurried down the platform, time-piece in hand.

"Pull out there, you red-headed, pop-eyed boob," he shouted.

"Why, Jack," his aunt exclaimed in amazement.

"That's right, chew the rag," he retorted. "We are five minutes late already. Get the 'ell out of there."

Now "Jack's" parents forbid him playing down by the Baltimore and Ohio freight house.—The Tiger's Eye.

Safety Roll of Honor

The Safety Roll of Honor appears in new form this month. There are many broken rails, brake beams dragging, etc., being reported, and it is unnecessary to repeat the details in each case, in view of the pressing demand on the Magazine for space. Therefore the honor roll will hereafter be published in the form shown below. Items of unusual importance will be taken care of in special articles. The fact, however, that an employe's name appears below is an indication that he has done something which is wholly worthy of commendation.

Greetings from Conductor Andrews

THE accompanying photo shows Conductor T. J. Andrews, who has been on leave of absence, and judging from his photo, thoroughly enjoyed himself in California. He wrote us from Long Beach, Cal. as follows:

"Just a few lines from the Golden West. To say that I am having the time of my life is putting it mildly. The weather this winter has been the best in years. I have been doing some deep sea fishing, and the day the photo was taken we caught three hundred fish and seven sharks; one shark weighed 225 pounds.

"We motored over to San Diego, and then to San Bernardino to the orange show, and back through Redlands and Riverside. The roads are fine and the scenery beautiful. They have a bumper crop of oranges this year.

"About a mile from where we are staying is Signal Hill, the largest oil field in the world. A gusher came in last week with 20,000 barrels per day. The well pays for itself every three days. Many of the wells are 4500 feet deep and cost $125,000 to drill. In one of the large gushers that came in about ten days ago, the oil poured out all over houses and streets, about three hundred feet around, and it took ten men ten hours to cap the well. The men were paid one hundred dollars per hour. They all made their wills before they went to work, but all came through alive. As for me, I would rather run a train than cap an oil well.

"As I said at the Convention last year, I hope to spend the last years of my life in California, unless the last years come within the next six or eight years. My wife says I am a "California Booster" and she knows me pretty well.

"My best wishes to everyone."

Conductor T. J. Andrews does a good day's work in California

Law Department

Correspondent, GEORGE W. HAULENBECK

My friend H. B. Knight, in his Keyser, West Virginia, contribution in the July Magazine, extends a cheering invitation for me to visit Deer Park, my summer residence. I am sorry I cannot accept, though Deer Park is a delightful spot on the apex of the Alleghenies in Maryland, but I am booked to spend the summer week ends at Ocean City, New Jersey.

The trip from Baltimore to the breakers is a pleasant and inspiring journey. Our No. 524 makes but two stops to Philadelphia, and the P. and R. train from Camden, New Jersey, to Ocean City, the same number. Both are simon pure express trains. Thus far, and I am in my second season for these trips, I can set my watch by their running.

Mr. Knight's invitation gives me an opportunity to dilate on the wonderful achievement of these trains. I think their performance is marvelous. At 3.55 p. m. the great engine of the 5200 type, puts the train under cover at 24th Street, and in four minutes a P. & R. engine takes its place. We do things better than formerly. We are constantly improving. What pleases me most is to see the number of people who are using the Baltimore and Ohio for the first time. The idea of a person reaching man's estate and putting off a journey on one of our fliers until late in life!

While I have my pen in hand, I shall not indulge in very much enthusiasm over the speed of the Delaware River ferry boats to the Jersey side, and especially the return trip Sunday night, when a fellow is anxious to catch our No. 509 to Baltimore.

Our General Counsel

Governor Cornwell celebrated his birthday on July 11 in a practical manner, presiding at his desk as usual. He is always among the first to appear in the morning, and five p. m. finds him still at work.

Mrs. Gertrude Kelley, R. Marsden Smith's secretary, in her vacation peregrinations, went as far west as Montana and revelled in the wonders of Yellowstone Park.

Albert E. Frankton, Charles R. Webber's efficient secretary, spent his vacation in making near-by trips to points in Maryland.

Mr. Horsey also availed himself of a short period of recreation in attractive Maryland spots. His examination for admission to the Bar was a series of triumphs, and we are proud of him.

George Raymond Brennan spent the first part of July amid the breakers at Atlantic City. He says the board walk attractions positively kept him entranced, and he felt as though he could stay there forever. We are all very fond of him. George declares that the girls at Atlantic City are rather acceptable, but those at Ocean City (Ocean City, New Jersey, mind you) are far superior. This is not the reason I spend my week ends there, but because the bathing is "supercritical." Now there!

(A friend of the youngest correspondent of the Magazine, none other than our esteemed Nestor of the Law Department, recently wrote the editor a personal letter. He mentioned a gathering of Civil War Veterans—and an address in which Comrade Haulenbeck stated emphatically, deliberately and enthusiastically that despite the recent trouble he has had with one of his eyes, the other was doing efficient double duty on the beach at Ocean City during his week-end visits. Boy, page Ponce de Leon and introduce him to our own original and inimitable Fountain of Perpetual Youth!—Ed.)

Mr. Hodges, checkman, Camden Baggage Room, just returned from another hunting trip in Canada, and this time he brought home the "Dear." His marriage is the culmination of a romance which began while he was a patient in one of the hospitals in France during the World's war, the bride being his former nurse. This sounds like an interesting story but we have not been able to secure the details. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges have our congratulations and best wishes.

Wallace Oest has returned to the office after a week's absence, because of a cold contracted at the bathing beach, which put his eyes out of commission.

When "Jack" Ault, at the bat in the accompanying picture, is not carefully inspecting baggage and making up train baggage reports on his run between Philadelphia and Baltimore, he is out playing ball with the boys. We're not mentioning just how many years Mr. Ault has been with the Company, as we do not want to give information that might disqualify him for the ball team, but he has been a part of the Baltimore and Ohio long enough to prove that he is one of the dependable and conscientious employees who are helping to make the service 100%. As an example of how much he has the interest of the Baltimore and Ohio at heart, note this: some time ago, a dog was delivered to the baggage car, destined Washington. When the train baggage reports were inspected, it was noted there was a "B. O." (bad order) notation recorded against the check number covering the dog. Upon being questioned as to the meaning of the bad order notation, Mr. Ault explained that the dog had been delivered to him minus its tail, and in order to relieve the Company of all responsibility in case the owner should make claim for the missing tail, he made the proper "B. O." record.

"Jim" Phillips, Assistant Superintendent of Dining Car Department

For several generations the Chesapeake Bay hard crab and fish have offered themselves as willing martyrs that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Dining Car Service might enjoy world-wide fame. That the Railroad Company cherishes such devotion is demonstrated by the solicitude with which Assistant Superintendent of Dining Car Department James Phillips investigates the housing conditions and general welfare of his crustacean and piscatorial assistants, is shown in the photograph

At a recent business meeting of the McDonogh School alumni, E. R. Sparks, chief clerk to chief engineer, class of 1889, was elected president of the Alumni Association for the coming year.

It is gratifying to know that one of the artists in our department carried off the $100 prize in the Baltimore and Ohio Trade Mark Contest. And a woman did it at that! Our hats are off to you, Miss Lansdowne, on your successful endeavor. It goes to show that some of us, at least, are capable of doing something worth while, aside from the mere routine of office work.

I mentioned in the last issue of the MAGAZINE that even though the mercury insisted upon trying to climb out of its tube, two of our engineers "went and done it," to-wit, got married. After no small amount of work I managed to get a few facts concerning one wedding. It seems that one, U. S. (United States?) Holden, field engineer, Surveys Division, and his bride-to-be, did not want a lot of publicity, so they made up a party and motored to Alexandria, Va., and there "hitched up." The young lady in the case was Miss Dorothy Boyer, formerly clerk, Car Service Department. For weeks before, our friend Mr. Holden had been getting things ready, fixing up the house, garden, 'n everything, and now the deed's done. You have our heartiest congratulations, Mr. Holden. May your troubles be territorial!

What would you think, after having been accustomed to see a signet ring (his own) on a certain young man's finger, to discover it gone, and in its place, although not on the same finger, a class ring. And to witness, now and then, mostly now, a far-away look in this young man's eyes. Suspicious, huh!

Don't forget to keep in mind the idea "Stop that Leak." In the course of a day's work there are many ways in which time, labor or money may be saved, by the application of a little brain power. Think it over!

Who is Dr. Pill of the Bridge Division? Ask C. W.

We are pleased to announce the acquisition of a new file clerk, Miss I. V. Henderson, who assumes the duties of C. W. Leasure, who is spending the summer out on the "Pike,"—without his family.

We were favored recently by a visit from our genial chief, Mr. Lane, who, accompanied by his secretary, was engaged in looking over the work in this vicinity.

Mr. B., we understand, took Mr. E. on a tour of inspection of the "Pike" bridges. Mr. B., for some reason, was without his regular car and instead was using one of the most "popular" cars on the road. Mr. E. reports an interesting time; in fact, he is unable to tell which was the more interesting, the bridge construction or Mr. B.'s method of running a Ford.

That lumber deal, mentioned in an earlier issue, seems to have fallen through, D. H. declining to pay more than $15 for what he claims was only $10 lumber. Max, we are sorry to say, seems to have been beaten, temporarily at least.

H. P. C. reports things going very nicely at Millvale and the meals are just as good, if not better, than they ever were before. We will have to accept his word for it, however, as we haven't been there ourselves.

J. P. R. Jr., who is engaged in building a new freight house at 33d St., Pittsburgh, has not been heard from lately, but we presume the new house is about ready for occupancy. The new house in the South Hills we mean, not the freight house.

James Harry Gaskins, after a lingering illness, died at Rockingham, N. C., July 3. A brief service was held at Old St. Paul's Church, Norfolk, Va., and he was laid to rest in Elnwood Cemetery, Norfolk, on July 5.

Mr. Gaskins, who was one of our traveling freight claim adjusters, had many friends among the freight agents and their forces, and had endeared himself to all by his courteous and gentle manner and many other lovable traits of character.

Charles A. Blackburn, employed in this office as clerk, who has been ill for some time, died on July 13, and was buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Baltimore, Md., July 16. He leaves a widow and one child.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the widows and other relatives of the deceased, as both Mr. Gaskins and Mr. Blackburn will be missed in this Department.

An ideal spot to spend a vacation is along the shore of West River, so H. H. Goldsmith says, but if all reports are true, he is not the same Goldsmith we used to know before vacation time. He seems seriously affected by one of the fair mermaids, and it won't be long before we can say, "Yes, we have no Goldsmith, he's at West River."

Presently, all eyes were focused on the center aisle at the sound of the Wedding March, and witnessed the bride's father, giving her away to the groom, followed by a picturesque ceremony, Rev. Taylor, officiating, pronouncing them man and wife.

The following fellow clerks witnessed the performance:

E. E. Redding, H. S. Anderson, W. E. Hatton, M. H. Wentz, W. G. Laynor, and J. J. Hagerty. We all wish them a long and happy married life.

"Bill" McCallum started the ball a rolling—went and got married and was shortly followed by his buddy, Johnny Kratz, and since then Cupid has just captured the Freight Claim Department, as we have had one marriage right on the heels of the other.

Bill and Johnny went through the late war, and, according to Sherman, that is equal to going through H—I. While they were never captured by the Huns, they came home to be captured by our own fair ones.

Here's wishing them a long and happy married life.

Mrs. Lehman, wife of Cost Clerk Lehman, recently had the misfortune to trip over a rug, breaking her arm in two places. We extend our sympathy and are glad to report she is recovering rapidly.

Not to be outdone by Mrs. Lehman, Mrs. Reay, wife of Compositor Harry Reay, fell downstairs recently, fracturing her shoulder. We hope for a speedy recovery.

We offer our sincere sympathy to the family of the late Mrs. Lowe, mother of Compositor Lowe, who—after a lingering illness—has been released from her suffering and entered into Eternal Rest. Our sympathy is extended to Miss Katharine, whose father P. D. Dempsey died July 7 at the age of 52, from the effects of cancer of the stomach. Mr. Dempsey was father-in-law of J. P. Landerkin of this office, to whom we also extend our condolence. A floral design from the office employees was sent to the home of the deceased.

The second and final outing of the 1922-1923 Office Bowling League was staged at Willow Spring Shore July 21. It was a perfect day, with plenty to eat and drink, bathing, various kinds of indoor and outdoor sports, and a wonderful chicken, crab and fish meal.

Shinnamon and Pritchard were the bathing beauties. "Bill" Nix, when occasion demanded, would swell out his chest and pitch three quoits a mile from the peg. "Al" Lehman took the long distance talking record. "Johnnie" Muth, who has been in training, ate continuously and made about a 115 average. "Jerry" Johnson rendered several operatic selections.

Judging from his actions, our old friend "Hughey" has at last fallen for the charms of the fair sex. If our judgment is not completely wrong, this young blade is entangled in the snare. Hold on to him, Selma!

It has been whispered that "Doc" and Miss Amanda are back at the old game of looking at furniture displays. What's the answer?

Last but not least, Mrs. W. was seen at Bay Shore Park vamping somebody's grandfather. This may be the same party who was seen in a machine down near Annapolis.

For some time past we have had a silk shirt mystery in our office. One member of the faculty has been wearing a silk shirt, the colors of which must have been gathered by its creator from the rainbow, and combined with remnants from the flags of all nations. No other method could produce such a beautiful dazzling effect. It simply "out-shies" any Shiek of the Arab deserts or the movies.

What puzzles us most is how the gentleman can wear the same shirt day after day for weeks. There could not be more than one such in the whole world!

The mystery has been cleared—he has a dozen. It is claimed by experts that there are twelve different designs, but it would take twelve tried and true citizens to convince the laymen that such is the case. We would have to see all twelve at one time, as we think "Bill" wears the same old shirt continuously.

The accompanying photograph is of Mrs. Warren A. Shipley and her daughter, Elizabeth Jane.

Mrs. Shipley was formerly Miss Alice B. Ott and was employed in this office for about eight years. She was married in June, 1922. Mr. Shipley was also employed in this office, but left here several years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Shipley are now living in Franklin, Pa., where Mr. Shipley is employed as Manager, J. W. McCrory's Five and Ten Cent Stores.

Beautiful

A beautiful day in the month of June,
A beautiful Saturday afternoon,
Ten beautiful girls in beautiful togs,
In two beautiful cars, decided to jog
To beautiful Harpers Ferry.

They jogged along at a beautiful pace,
Each with a smile on her beautiful face.
Then a beautiful storm hastened their pace
'Til it had the look of a beautiful race—
The beautiful storm made them scary.

They reached their beautiful destination,
The beautiful rain fell like d—nation,
Appearing just like a beautiful fog.
Beautifully limp were beautiful togs—
Ten beautiful girls quite weary.

They left the beautiful mountain town
With beautiful wet hills to come down;
Made beautiful skids and beautiful stops,
And oh, they had such beautiful shocks
And beautiful food was their query.

They skidded to Frederick beautifully sore,
One maiden swore, a beautiful swore,
She'd never leave beautiful Baltimore
'Less the beautiful automobile bore
A beautiful man as Steery.

So this is the end of the beautiful tale;
Hear the ten put up their beautiful wail.
They had beautiful nerve, may have it yet
But got beautifully soaking, sopping wet,
Those beautiful maids, oh, dearie.

Carl Hamilton plays the violin and sings wonderfully, and his brother Nova accompanies him excellently on the piano, while "Pa" plays along with them on his flute!

Here are pictures of Carl and Nova. Nova is a member of the Baltimore and Ohio family, in J. P. O'Malley's Office. The Hamilton family were delighted with the hospitality of the Parkersburg people, and express their appreciation of the many courtesies extended to them during their stay.

On the right end stands our heavyweight F. I am unable to estimate the aggregate tonnage of these two, but one thing they have in common is that they are good natured and, therefore, lovable. The day was spent merrily, enlivened by hot sports, like running and spooning, alternating with cool drinks, ice cream and dips in the bay. Prizes were bestowed to the winners of the sporting events. Principal prize-winners were Miss Anna Carroll and Mr. Longfellow, shown in an intimate pose in photograph No. 2, "far from the maddening crowd," apparently oblivious of the crowd and the rest of the world. The other picture (No. 1), posed in the open, with sea and sky for background, shows our yard clerk "Tom" Lally, with his clinging vine, Mrs. "Tom." Mr. Lally took a prize for his prowess in the water, swimming in it, and coming up first. The prize is described as a "beautiful pair of embossed water-wings." Some of the other prizes are of a too intimate nature to mention. Picture No. 6 presents Charlie McAllister, Collection Department, standing at "attention." Charlie is a "veteran of foreign wars," as shown by the pose, which he retains, though he has taken on considerable embonpoint, as they call it in France, meaning bulk about the middle section. Several other pictures accompanied Mr. Longfellow's narrative, but they were marred in developing and could not be reproduced in the MAGAZINE.

Result, Birmingham caught the ball, wheeled around and then to second. The second baseman threw to first, completing a triple play.

Baltimore Terminal Division

Correspondent, H. R. LINCOLN

Office of Superintendent

F. E. J. McGuigan, shop clerk, Riverside, has been promoted to shop inspector, headquarters Pittsburgh, Pa. "Mac" departs with the good wishes of his fellow employees and a 19 jewel Elgin watch, presented to him by the office force.

On July 10 at 11.00 a. m., Mary C. age 18 months, daughter of Matthew Hogan, died after an illness of five months. The little girl was buried in Baltimore Cemetery on July 12. Mr. Hogan is a pipe fitter and plumber at Riverside and to him the sincere sympathy of his fellow employees is extended.

"Wallace Reid" Webster, the blonde yard clerk, Curtis Bay, has gone in for pedestrianism—in the rear of a perambulator. "Wallace" claims the job keeps him occupied during all his spare hours, also most of his sleeping hours as well.

"Jake" Herbert, Car Distributor's Office, has offered a reward for the culprit who wilfully "busted up" his new Royal typewriter.

The correspondent would appreciate any notes of interest about folks on the Baltimore Terminal Division. Send 'em in.

The accompanying picture is of Troops 4 and 7, Baltimore Council, Boy Scouts of America, at their annual encampment. Troop 4 is the oldest troop in Maryland and was organized shortly after the beginning of Scout work by T. E. Stacy, secretary of the Riverside Y. M. C. A. Many of the boys are sons of Baltimore and Ohio men and are receiving a fine training in outdoor life, swimming and scoutcraft, and are good citizens in the making. This is only one of the many activities of our Railroad branches.

Some of the boys who have fathers in the Railroad service are those numbered as follows: 1. Ed. Atkinson, son of late Conductor Atkinson; 2. Sherman Pennell, assistant scoutmaster and son of Engineer J. G. Pennell; 3. Norwood Massey, son of Engineer T. E. Massey; 4. Jethro McCullough, son of deceased conductor; 5. T. E. Stacy, secretary Riverside Y. M. C. A.; 6. John Lougherman, son of Engineer Lougherman; 7. George Stacy, son of secretary, Riverside Y. M. C. A.

Mt. Clare Yard

On July 13, at 4.45 a. m., Caller E. K. Selby discovered a fire in Paint Shop, west end of Oil House platform, Mt. Clare. His prompt action in advising Yardmaster Sullivan, who dispatched engine to scene, resulted in extinguishing blaze without damage, and prevented a fire of possibly greater proportions. "Sup't" is doing his bit in "Stopping That Leak" in the line of fire prevention.

Yard Clerk G. F. Judge spent the week of July 15 at "Starve Inn" Shore on the Magothy, having previously arranged to have General Yardmaster H. E. Hopkins and clerical force enjoy a crab feast the following Wednesday evening. On the evening of the occasion, the office force (9) filled Conductor C. A. Bokman's five passenger "Rolls Rights" (generally wrong, though) and down the Annapolis Road they went on the road and off, through sand to the hub, with blow-outs and punctures, finally arriving at the shore with the appropriate name. It was found that "Jubby" had one hard crab to feed a dozen hungry guests. Agreeable to all, coins were pitched to decide ownership, and in the excitement, the crab crawled away in the darkness. John (Walt) Brennan came down 220 pounds heavy, on a cactus, with his right bare foot. Ben Pundt's left forefinger coupled with Mr. Crab's right-front claw, and two others fell over a ten foot elevation, into six inches of the Magothy.

When things finally righted themselves again, Bokman, assisted by "Hops" basso, sang the "Oom-ba-laddie" yodle song, and everything ended coposatic, as "Jubby" says.

Rumor has it that H. R. Canby, Out-bound Billing Department, is building a home at St. Denis, to which he expects to take his bride sometime in the late fall. Good luck, Canby. We married men are with you!

Sometime ago we had the pleasure of presenting a picture of the infant son of A. L. Knorr, Accounting Department. We are sending another picture taken when this chap had reached the age of one year. He is a sturdy looking little chap and we hope that he continues to grow, but not to look like his dad!

We are having some interesting games of ball. Every lunch hour our men can be seen practicing for the game which is played at Clifton Park every Sunday morning. These games are interesting and we hope that our fellow-employees will be present to cheer the teams.

ing events in the Shenandoah Valley District.

J. D. Parker, agent, Raphine, Va., accompanied his daughter to Chicago where she is attending a Conservatory of Music.

C. D. Bosserman, former agent, Lexington Va., has resigned to enter the banking business in Lexington.

P. E. Johnson, agent, Mt. Sidney, Va., has been acting agent, Lexington, pending regular assignment.

Ticket Agent W. M. Chittum, Staunton, has been away since June 12 spending part of the time in a hospital at Richmond, Va. Mr. Chittum is improving in health and we trust he will soon be back in the service.

Bridges are being strengthened to handle heavier equipment and traffic that is now being diverted via other routes.

On the Baltimore Division proper, we have the following:

C. C. Hite, agent, Frederick, Jct., Md., attended the funeral of his uncle, C. W. Spengler, at Strasburg, Va. Mr. Spengler is the father of Miss Nina Spengler, our Good Will Campaign representative in France. The sympathy of employees of the Division is extended to the bereaved family.

Superintendent F. G. Hoskins and family visited relatives at Monongahela City, Penna., during his vacation.

"Billie" McLaughlin, machinist, and Miss Winnie Niller, were married on June 23. They spent their honeymoon at Niagara Falls. On June 20, A. Quinn, machinist helper, was married, spending the first few days of his "life sentence" at Atlantic City. Congratulations to all!

On June 30, it was my pleasure to attend the wedding of William E. Reimer, agent, Pacific Fruit Express, and Miss Jennie Johnson, West Philadelphia. Congratulations!

Charles Davis, formerly of East Side Restaurant and the Baltimore and Ohio Police Department, has left his present position with the Erie at Susquehanna and is again with the Best and Only, in Murphy's Restaurant, Cincinnati. We miss his smiling face and wish him good luck in his new location.

The "Flying Squadron," Master Mechanic's Office, Mrs. B. Duffey, Miss Loretta Jordan, "little" Grace McFadden and Miss Marie McAleer (champion fast walker of the world), made a trip to Niagara Falls June 30 and July 1.

I. C. C. Inspector J. Donnelly, was a recent occupant of Price Hospital, Philadelphia, because of an attack of pleurisy. His wife recently underwent a serious operation at the same place.

"Jim" has been in the Baltimore and Ohio service ever since I first came to town—1887, and is always on the job. We miss him and wish him prompt and complete recovery.

"Jazzy Jack" Ehrig, East Side Office, will soon turn into a gold fish if he doesn't stop swimming in the aquarium with the other "little fishes."

We hope by the time these notes are printed, that our general foreman, C. B. Smith, will be able to recognize a "one way street" when he sees it.

Our new chief clerk, J. C. Farr, is making good. We are glad to say he has found a warm place in our hearts. John is a self made man and a real worker. The secret of his success is explained in one word, "Work." He sets a good example, and by his fair dealing has gained the confidence, respect and loyalty so necessary to a man in his position. We are all going to cooperate with him to the fullest extent, "Not because we are obliged to do so, but because we want to do so."

James Anderson and family recently visited Atlantic City. We are told that the one drawback was that the five and ten cent stores were not open. The total of "Jim's" family is TEN, therefore we can understand his kindly feeling to the five and ten. He suffered also a grave misfortune in that he forgot his pipe and had to smoke "Piedmonts."

Patrick McNaman, Barney McLaughlin and Bob Haywood are planning a trip to the park to spend a day. We hope it will work out better than the theatre party. Steve Tuttle can't go—he had a close hair cut and wants to wait until it grows a little before appearing in public. Charles Getty wonders why they don't ask him, but they are going to surprise him. He will keep things running until they return. What happened to Bob's hat?

Bob McCoach will not take a trip this summer. He will enter the "chicken" business soon, so all his spare time is devoted to a study of "how to make them lay."

Don't forget the 14 round bout Labor Day, Murphy and Getty. Reports state Murphy is trying to reduce, and Getty to put on weight. Mike Burns plans a trip round the world on the winnings, in James McFadden's Buick.

East Side

On July 23, at 4.45 p. m., three of our East Side yard clerks met with a serious accident on their way home. They were Claude C. Jackson, booking out clerk, Arthur Needham, index clerk and Andrew Gallagher, relief clerk.

They were riding home in Jackson's Stutz roadster, had halted behind a trolley car at 55th and Woodland Avenues, West Philadelphia, and were waiting for the trolley to discharge passengers and move on, when they were run into from the rear by a five ton commercial truck. Needham and Gallagher were thrown headlong to the pavement, while Jackson was jammed against the steering wheel unable to get out. When picked up all were found to be unconscious and were immediately rushed to Misericordia Hospital, 53rd Street and Cedar Avenue, where Needham was found to be the more seriously injured, and to be suffering from internal injuries of a serious nature. Gallagher suffered bruises and sprained back and some broken ribs, and Jackson a bruised chest and stomach. They were all discharged from hospital that night, and sent home, where they are now under doctors' care. At this writing it is not known just how serious Needham's injuries are, but it is sincerely hoped that with good care, rest and quiet he will pull through O. K.

Washington, D. C. Freight Station

Correspondent, W. L. WHITING

If any one should ask us if we are busy in Washington, it would be only necessary to point to our various platforms and the questioner would be quickly convinced that there is "some business" going on here. Our delivery platform is kept constantly full of incoming freight, notwithstanding the fact that the various business firms are hauling it away as soon as we can unload it. And then our automobile platforms! To see the hundreds of automobiles that pass our office windows during the week, one would think that a great parade was in progress. It certainly carries out the prediction that this will be a banner year for automobile trade. To further establish the idea of a parade, we have an almost incessant tooting of automobile horns all day long, which furnishes the music for the show.

We have had one or two changes in our force recently. Mrs. O. B. Parker, comptometer clerk, has left us and is succeeded by M. F. Burton, a Baltimore and Ohio man of many years standing.

"Dick" Kearns, messenger boy for a long time, has obtained employment elsewhere, and Clifton Bell, son of Sealing Clerk James H. Bell, is taking care of the outside public, notifying them of arrival of cars, and doing other messenger service. Good luck to those who leave us, and a welcome to those who take their places.

"STOP THAT LEAK," by using the "Tuck in" envelope, Form 386 A. T., whenever possible. And please conserve the space. Don't scrawl address over half the envelope—Keep within bounds!

In addition to the changes mentioned above, we have secured the services of Charles E. Boldin, who succeeds Miss H. L. Bowen as posting and balancing clerk; Miss Bowen left us to take up other duties. Mr. Boldin is an experienced railroad man, and we hope to have him with us a long time.

It was sad news that came to us recently. James H. Gaskins, formerly traveling freight claim adjuster, who made his headquarters at Washington, with desk room in our office, died in Rockingham, N. C., and was buried on July 5, at Norfolk, Va. It has been several months since he has been with us, owing to the contraction of a serious throat trouble which finally caused his demise. Although we know that he has obtained a happy release from his many months of suffering, yet we regret the loss of another of our good friends, one who always had a pleasant word and story to tell when he came in. Your correspondent and Mr. Gaskins have had many a good laugh over the inimitable works of our mutual friend, Charles Dickens, he being, like the writer of these notes, a veritable "Dickens Crank."

Our deepest sympathies are extended to the family of the deceased in their sad bereavement.

There is always a silver lining to every cloud, and the natural gloom occasioned by the news of the death of Mr. Gaskins was in a measure dispelled by a telegram received by Agent D. M. Fisher, from another of our good friends, Frank M. Handshumaker, announcing the arrival, on July 8, at Wheeling, W. Va., of "David." Undoubtedly he was named "David" in honor of Frank's good friend, Mr. Fisher. This is fine Frank, and the congratulations of our entire "gang" are extended to the happy mother and father of the newly born railroader, who will, before you know it, be starting in life after some Giant Goliath to conquer, and, like his first name-sake, will undoubtedly succeed in his quest.

Good luck, Frank, and Mrs. Frank, and many happy returns of the day!

In case there are any of our readers who may not be acquainted with the lucky "Frank," please be advised that he is one of R. L. Schill's young men who travel around the country in the interest of the Station Service Bureau, and when he comes to you in an official capacity, look out! Things are doing when Frank is around!

Delivery Clerk C. M. Witt travelled on a recent holiday to his old home in Germany, and reports having had a grand time there. He came back with the accustomed air of a millionaire, who can talk of spending so many hundreds of thousands at a time! German Marks!

Ralph Montgomery was absent for a brief period enjoying himself. He looks better for his trip, and would like some one to tell him of some spot in Southern Indiana that he is not acquainted with. Incident-

“A Hamilton 992 has timed my trains since 1910”

WHEN Conductor A. I. Cowdrey, of the Rock Island, purchased his No. 992, the Hamilton was already famous as The Railroad Timekeeper of America. Railroad men everywhere were demanding Hamiltons, for they were accurate watches that could be counted upon to answer the requirements of railroad service.

Accuracy, sturdiness and dependability have always been built into every Hamilton. That is why it has become increasingly popular among railroad men and stands today as the greatest railroad watch.

Ask your jeweler to show you the Hamilton No. 992. It will better than pass time inspection on any railroad, and is the watch that times America's fastest trains.

For other than time inspection service, ask to see the No. 974, a model that gives you Hamilton quality at a lower price.

Send for a copy of the “Timekeeper,” our booklet that pictures and describes all Hamilton models and gives much valuable watch information.

The accompanying photographs are of "Captain" John Bowers, conductor, Shenandoah Division, and his son, John A.

Captain Bowers was employed by Vice President Galloway's grandfather, John R. Galloway, as an engine cleaner, July 15, 1879. He was transferred to train service as brakeman on June 10, 1880, and was promoted to freight conductor in 1883. He has never lost a turn. One of Captain John's recollections is that he hunted snakes with Vice President Galloway, when both were boys together.

Mr. Bowers has an excellent record, is well informed and always willing to explain the points of interest along the road to passengers who desire the information.

Captain Bowers' son, John A., enlisted as a bugler with Company A, Fifth Machine Gun Battalion on January 25, 1917. He became recognized as an expert marksman. He served in Troyon, Aisne, Chateau Thierry, Marbache, Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne offensive and at Champagne. He came through the war without a scratch. His discharge papers are interesting, one of the principal points of interest being the note "Faithful and Honest." He participated in the march to the Rhine and served in the Army of Occupation, December 12, 1918 to July 5, 1919. He reenlisted in the army and was finally discharged November 19, 1922. His parents have every reason to be proud of their boy's record.

W. M. Chittum, ticket agent, Staunton, Va., who has been away for the past six weeks because of illness, has resumed duty. We are all glad to learn of his recovery. He was relieved by Relief Agent Browning.

Considerable progress is being made on the new bridges between Harrisonburg, Va., and Staunton, Va., on the Shenandoah Division. When these bridges are completed, heavier power will be operated over this division.

We were glad to welcome our new General Superintendent, C. W. Van Horn, on his recent inspection trip over the Shenandoah Division, and trust that he was favorably impressed with the conditions.

Cumberland Division

Correspondent, JOHN J. SELL

The Terminal employes at Cumberland had a flag raising on July 1, a fine new flag having been secured, and, together with the pennant bearing the slogan "Baltimore and Ohio—Best and Oldest," was raised on the steel pole, East Hump, Evitts Creek Yard, this pole having been placed there during the World War. The Baltimore and Ohio Shop Band rendered several selections, and solos were sung by Miss Vada Drumm, stenographer, Master Mechanic's Office, and Mrs. T. E. Mewshaw. The flag was raised by Misses Gertrude Harper and Esther Weltman, while the band played the Star Spangled Banner. A patriotic address was delivered by P. D. Harvey, president, Federated Shop Crafts, Cumberland. C. F. Van Osedale was chairman of the arrangements committee, and is deserving of much credit for the fine program. The occasion was in memory of the employes of the Cumberland Terminal who made the supreme sacrifice during the World War.

The local orchardists are preparing to harvest one of the largest, if not the largest, apple crop ever produced in this territory, it being estimated that more than two thousand carloads will be shipped from points on the Division, principally Kearneysville, Martinsburg, North Mountain, Hancock, Berkeley Springs, Paw Paw, Romney and Keyser. The production of apples is gradually increasing in the Cumberland fruit belt each year, and with the large new ice plant recently constructed in the Evitts Creek Yards, Cumberland, icing and reicing of cars can be taken care of in fine shape. The peach crop in this territory was small this year because of late frosts.

Contractors are working on the new asphalt and fire track layout at Keyser, which, when completed, will add greatly to the enginehouse facilities at that point, and permit of more expeditious turning of Mallet power. This is a big item in getting the loading over the mountains from Gratton and the empties west to the mines.

More miles per car per day is the slogan of every employe on the Cumberland Division, and by keeping cars moving we hope to break our previous good records.

Some Solid Matter

The Creek Vale Lumber Company of Clarion, Pa., operated by H. B. Caldwell & Son, have bought a tract of timber adjacent to the Baltimore and Ohio at French, W. Va., and have commenced operation which will give our railroad additional tonnage of from three to five million feet of lumber within the next two years. This is only a beginning of development of the large tracts of lumber which abound along the East End of the Cumberland Division and we welcome the Creek Vale Company in the use of the Baltimore and Ohio facilities.

The Division Accountant's Night School Class held another delightful outing on June 23, on the South Branch of the Potomac, giving a basket picnic and swimming party to guests, including Superintendent and Mrs. R. W. Brown and family, members of the staff and clerks of various departments. Sixteen automobiles were used to take care of the happy crowd and everyone had a good time. We tried to get some pictures of our "Bathing Beauties" but were threatened with assassination if the MAGAZINE carried head lines. Arrangements were in charge of F. L. Sheakley, chairman entertainment committee, and as usual he was there with bells. A prize was promised to the largest family and of course, when "Jiggs," carried on the payroll as C. W. Shaffer, trotted out the army, all other contestants withdrew. We are all waiting for another party and invitations are at a premium.

Assistant Trainmaster and Mrs. W. C. Baker spent an enjoyable vacation touring Canada and points in the Northeast. Don't forget some pictures the next time "Bill", or no publicity for you!

The boys are still on their toes keeping up the campaign to Stop That Leak and we are not worried when the official end of the campaign may come. Cumberland Division is in the game to stay. Reclaimed material is leading. Shopmen and trackmen are trying to show the greatest results, but the clerks still have their shoulder to the wheel and in many ways are trying to cut the overhead. Trainmen, operators and agents are watching the interests of OUR COMPANY. It's teamwork that makes the wheels go round. As a crossing watchman said the other day, "you don't have to save any particular article, but by better work and more attention to duty we'll soon have the world admitting we have the "Best and Only," and that's a big point. Don't save or boast because you are asked to do so, but, as President Willard points out, Save and Boast because you WANT TO.

Train Dispatcher, Harry E. Flook viced Assistant Trainmaster J. C. Tonry, while on vacation, and handled the job very creditably. Harry has the stuff that keeps the cars moving.

All our employes are glad to know that our old Veteran employee, John Ketzner, is back in harness and handling a job in Cumberland Terminal, after a prolonged illness. On October 1, he will have completed his 55th year with the Company, and his many friends wish him success for many more.

President Harding used our line on his trip to the Great Northwest, his special train being handled without a hitch over the Cumberland Division. Every employe who had anything to do with the handling of this train is to be congratulated on the splendid manner in which the movement was made.

Stop That Leak Campaign. He made a gain of $18 in revenue in check weighing freight at his station during the month of March. This splendid showing would be a credit to a much larger station. Keep up the good work, "Brownie."

Second Trick Train Dispatcher "Bruce" Mosier recently took a fishing trip, and according to latest reports can claim the honor of the largest catch of the season, Bruce having landed a four and one half pound bass. Understand during the battle in landing him, Bruce was calling for the Tool Cars with the Big Hook, and a gondola to load him in. Too bad Bruce, the scales at Paw Paw would not weigh more than two pounds, but you have to allow for the water dripping off before you reach the scales.

was pressing. We are glad to see back in active service a craftsman of his calibre.

Now that bobbed hair seems to be the rage, our pretty stenographers will be able to carry their pencils behind their ears same as ye men?

We are glad to present a picture of General Superintendent C. W. Van Horn about to enter his new seven passenger Buick-sedan, a testimonial of the esteem in which he was held by the employees of the Cumberland Division. It was presented to him at Mt. Vernon Place, Baltimore, by Chief Clerk G. A. McGinn, who represented the Cumberland Division employees. While superintendent at Cumberland, Mr. Van Horn not only made a record in handling business that has made new standards, but by his affable manner brought about closer cooperation between management and employees. He is held in high esteem by all with whom he came in contact. We are glad to see him going up the ladder and, while we feel his loss as superintendent, we know that as general superintendent of the Maryland District, he will visit us frequently. Mr. Van Horn warmly expressed his appreciation of the fine token, and said it was characteristic of the cooperation he had received while on the Cumberland Division.

Our new superintendent, R. W. Brown, who succeeded Superintendent Van Horn, has taken up the reins and has already made a host of friends on the Division. From his record on the Connellsville Division, and the fine send off he received from the employees of that division, feel we are to be congratulated upon the man who was selected to fill the position made vacant by the new general superintendent.

Romney. Pall bearers, all plant employees, were George Taylor, G. C. Conley, R. H. Corbin, J. C. Alexander, W. C. Haines and G. P. Chesshire.

A meeting of Tie Inspectors was called at the plant by Lumber Agent S. M. Elder, on July 6. Among those attending were: Messrs. C. C. Cook, maintenance engineer; J. W. Rowland, chief inspector; H. E. Huber, special agent and inspectors, H. E. Weir, R. E. Carrico, T. E. Crofton, H. Koehler, R. W. Windley, F. E. Wolfe, J. J. Greer, W. D. Prince, W. S. Shreve, W. J. Lienemann, C. R. Lattimore, J. A. Gordon, J. H. Hancock, F. J. Meader, J. W. Hancock, E. L. Mathers, Wm. T. Harte,

Our Correspondent at Green Spring sends us, left, copy of an old deed signed by Benjamin Franklin; right, Pipe Fitter J. J. Foley, who loaned deed, on running board, and Hostler R. D. Nixon, in car

C. H. Woodyard, G. J. Koehnlein and P. O'Fallon; Messrs. J. N. Natwick, Natwick Lumber and Tie Co., Baltimore; S. S. Watkins, Joyce Watkins Co., Chicago; T. F. Peterson, South Branch Tie Co., Romney W. Va., and H. L. Meese, superintendent of inspection.

Mr. D. B. Hussey, President of the Hussey Tie Co., St. Louis, Mo., was a recent business visitor to our plant. This company is erecting a plant at Houston, Texas.

A number of employes here purchased new cars this summer. Among recent deliveries are: Operator G. W. Kaylor, Overland; Switchman W. F. Kesler, Chalmers; Lineman A. E. Whitlock, Tiemen S. P. Hose, R. H. Corbin and Switchman D. H. Talley, Fords. Garages are going up faster than houses at present.

F. A. Sebold, general clerk, spent part of his vacation studying conditions at New Orleans and along the gulf.

General Foreman E. M. Stottlemeyer and wife decided to investigate beach conditions at Atlantic City while on their vacation.

R. G. Smith has accepted position of station clerk, Hancock, W. Va. Operator and Mrs. J. D. Rockwell enjoyed a visit by Mrs. Rockwell's sisters, Mrs. V. S. Dillard, Lakeland, Fla., and Mrs. A. S. Butts, Martinsburg, during July.

J. M. Bean has given up the Company house occupied by him since August 14, 1913, and is making his home with his son Frank. Tieman R. G. Brown has rented the property vacated. We hope Robert's lease runs as long as Joe's did. Permanent employes are always the best and most dependable.

Fishin' parties, Campin' parties! We did not realize that our section was so attractive. Why "every day in every way," they're gettin' thicker and thicker.

Engine Watchman Carl Schaidt received a letter of commendation from Superintendent A. M. Smith, W. M. R. R., Hagerstown, for prompt action taken June 15, on the discovery of a slide in Knuckles Cut, near Oldtown, Md. Carl broke the window in the watch box and telephoned conditions to the dispatcher at Hagerstown. We are glad to commend him for this and ask the Editor to place his name on the Honor Roll for this month.

It was our pleasure to join the Cumberland Division forces in presenting to former Superintendent Van Horn a beautiful seven passenger Buick Sedan. We wish him continued success as he keeps stepping up.

Well, we don't know just how much we missed or how much we forgot that we were told to include, but our time is up. The one big thing now being talked about here, while these notes are being printed, is the second annual picnic of Plant employes and their friends on August 4.

Pipefitter J. J. Foley is a relic collector. Here's a photographic reproduction of an old deed written on sheep skin in 1787, signed by the Hon. Ben. Franklin, himself, with his own quill, covering the old George Chestnut property at Hancock. Foley, who has quite a collection of historical documents, could hardly be persuaded to loan us this one long enough to be photographed, for fear something would happen to it. John says they become more valuable as time goes by. He has promised us some old freight bills away back before the war. Along with this old document we submit a snapshot of our supervisor at his desk. He says it is not a good one but what do you think?

Are you a better Railroad man than when you read last month's MAGAZINE? If not, get busy.

Catlette—Kidwell

A recent surprise wedding to even their most intimate friends, was the marriage of Fred G. Catlette, our hustling station agent, and Miss Mary Dee Kidwell, popular young school teacher of Newburg, W. Va. The wedding was solemnized at Cumberland, June 23, by Rev. M. L. Enders, St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Mrs. Catlette is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kidwell, Newburg. Fred and Mrs. Fred are house-keeping in Cumberland. Congratulations!

Correspondent, HARRY B. KIGHT

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Pensioned Engineman Adam Keller. Mr. Keller has been retired for a number of years and with his death there passes one of our oldest employes. To his aged wife and family we extend heartfelt sympathy.

(NOTE:—The above brief note does not do full justice to the splendid man it refers to. An appreciation of him which appeared in the Keyser paper and which was signed "A Friend" but which we learn was written by Correspondent Kight, was not included by Mr. Kight in his notes, but came to our attention in another way. Keyser folks who knew Adam Keller, also knew that no one tried to bring sunshine into the declining years of his life to a greater extent than did Harry Kight. It seems only fitting, therefore, that we should quote the last paragraph of his tribute to his old friend who has now passed on. It was viz.:

"And tonight, as I write, I think of how he enjoyed the singers at Christmas time when they came softly beneath his window and out of the stillness of the night, sang "Holy Night," the singing of which, as he told me, "seemed to come from Heaven." Tonight I am sure that the angels are singing carols to him—he who loved his God and his fellowman."

"May he rest in peace."—Editor.)

Early this summer, Engineers Prentiss, Shores and Harry Thrasher visited Hot Springs, Ark. While walking down one of the boulevards, Mr. Shores was panic stricken to see in his path a monster boa constrictor. Shores ran to a nearby fence, jerked off a piece of 2 x 4 and beat the snake until he was completely exhausted. As he walked away from the "dead" snake, he was surprised to hear the laughter of some boys, who—hidden behind a fence—had watched as he "killed" a rubber boa constrictor they had placed there. Mr. Shores is slowly recovering from the shock.

CAR MILES! Keep 'em moving. Let's endeavor to beat all previous records.

General Superintendent Van Horn, Superintendent Brown, Messrs. Galloway, Petri and Edwards were welcome visitors at Deer Park Ticket Office recently.

"Cap" Edwards has "Golf Bugs" now, and had it not been for a spring tooth harrow on a farm near here, he would have made the 19th hole in ONE. He was using a magnetic golf ball which, when he "swatted" it, sped away and clung to the harrow.

Where are the girls from the General Office who spent their vacations here last year? We miss you, girls!

West End readers. Send in some news. Surely you received my letter asking your cooperation. You can help wonderfully if you will. Send in the news, photographs, etc. and then—Watch the MAGAZINE!

Yes, Frank. I did not receive the items you promised!

The Deer Park village station, in charge of William McKinley, deserves special mention for the tidy condition "Mac" keeps it in.

Blanche, I hope to see you in your new car soon.

Keyser passenger station has just been given a coat of paint. This greatly improves its appearance.

Everyone knows that Conductor McMakin has a dandy caboose, but unless they have been inside, they only think they know. It resembles a private car and is "Slick's" pride.

It is with the greatest pleasure that the editor of the MAGAZINE adds another note to the Keyser items this month, a note telling of the promotion of Harry Kight to be a traveling passenger agent.

This will not be news to Keyserites for they have already learned of it from other sources. But it gives the MAGAZINE an opportunity to express its gratification and best wishes for Harry's continued success.

The writer has known Mr. Kight for about ten years and has found him to be a prince of a fellow. No request in behalf of the MAGAZINE was too big, or too small, to get the quickest and heartiest response from him. Of his work as ticket clerk at Keyser and as agent at Deer Park during the summer—it is enough to point to his promotion as proof that it has been worthy of this fine recognition. At this writing, we are having dry weather and some of our crops are suffering for want of rain.

The Consolidated Orchard Company has practically completed their new cold storage and packing plant. They have installed a large gasoline tank and will be ready shortly to commence packing apples. A few shipments of the early variety are now being forwarded by express.

"Daddy" Shipley, freight line foreman, has given his house a coat of paint, which makes quite an improvement. John Souders, formerly freight conductor, Cumberland East End, applied the paint.

Our old friend, Robert McAdams, freight helper engineer, Martinsburg, recently spent a few days at Magnolia, fishing. We have not yet secured details as to the catch.

We received a post card from Aunt Mary in France, which we appreciated.

A. C. Hardy, first triek operator, Okonoko, has been absent some time because of an attack of "flu" and an abscess on his jaw. We are glad to see him completely recovered.

Rev. Bauchman, First M. E. Church, was recently married to a young lady from Pittsburgh. Congratulations from the Baltimore and Ohio family!

Track Foreman George Tredman, of the "Cut" has been replacing steel rail on his territory.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE ONE YEAR MAKES!

In the Spring of 1922, Conductor Lewis Hess, Sabraton, W. Va. bought this property through the assistance of the Relief Department. The view on the left shows the house and grounds when he purchased them. The right photograph shows the same place one year later Employment is plentiful at present. Everyone who wishes to work can do so. Several of our young ladies are working in the orchards.

Your correspondent was in Martinsburg recently, attending to business matters and seeing old friends. We saw J. W. Zeff, who is keeping "bach" while his wife is with their daughter, Mrs. Flynn, who has been ill in Baltimore. "Bill" cooked our dinner and we will say he can surely cook "beans and potatoes."

Second Trick Operator C. E. Grop, Okonoko, has purchased a home in Paw Paw.

We were at the Brunswick picnic on May 16. It was an enjoyable day. We met several old friends and made some new ones. As usual Bill Parlett said that we would get in the parade right away. After we had walked about two miles behind those in automobiles, Bill said "Why, we could have been riding, I have a car at the Park." We looked at him and said "Bill, since when did you become so absent minded?" He introduced us to his wife and daughter when we got to the Park, and there was his car! We hope to meet him again, but under similar conditions we hope he will remember his car!

The two young ladies whose pictures appear here are the daughters of Veteran Machinist Roy A. Bowers. Both are graduates of St. Joseph's Parochial School, Miss Dessie having graduated in June, 1922 and Miss Marie in June of this year. Roy can well be proud of his attractive daughters.

On June 26, Charles F. Hollis and Miss Mary A. Perkinson were married at the home of the bride's parents. "Holly" is our shipping clerk and you can bet he came in for a bit of good natured "razz" after the happy event. Mr. and Mrs. Hollis spent a week on a honeymoon trip to Baltimore, New York and Boston.

It is gratifying to see our old friend "Chris" Dailey back on the job. "Chris" has been on the sick list for a long time and it is good to see him back in the harness again. Things will now speed up in the switch stand shop where "Chris" is the great factotum.

Connellsville Division

Correspondent, C. E. REYNOLDS

There may be joy in the Firpo Camp, but it cannot hold a candle to the joy in the camp of our efficient cashier, R. E. Fornwald, Johnstown, because of the fact that on July 1, just in time to be on hand for the celebration of the glorious fourth, there arrived at his home a bouncing ten pound boy. Congratulations!

On July 16, Conductor R. F. Wolford returned from a six weeks trip to the west; he visited Chicago, Denver, Salt Lake City, Reno, Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, El Paso, Kansas City, and St. Louis. "Bob" reports a very enjoyable trip.

On June 16, the Honorable H. W. Swan, caller, and Miss Eleanor Stillwagon, both of Connellsville, were quietly united in marriage at the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. B. W. Hutchinson, pastor, officiating. They spent their honeymoon in Washington, Philadelphia, and Atlantic City. Congratulations to the happy couple!

The station building at Connellsville has been given a new coat of paint, which adds considerably to its appearance.

Yes, they are now spending their vacation on the Cheat River: Bridget Gallagher, Irene Hunt and Mary Gallagher, together with a bunch of their girl friends from Pittsburgh and Connellsville. They report a glorious good time. Go to it girls!

Assistant Train Master and Mrs. J. L. Lowney are now spending their vacation at Berkeley Springs, W. Va. Just received radiogram that they are having very enjoyable time.

YES, WE HAVE "NO ACCIDENT" CAMPAIGN ON THE CONNELLSVILLE DIVISION. HELP STOP THAT LEAK!

Correspondents, E. N. FAIRGRIEVE and MARY BREEN

The two young ladies in the photograph on page 83 decided they would take a trip to the Golden West. They are Misses Doris and Grace, daughters of Engineer "Bill" Parfitt, who, accompanied by their brother, "Young Bill," went out to see the sights. They are all non-employees and traveled on tickets. They went West on the Capitol Limited and say that the train handling on our Railroad had them all beaten a mile. They should know: their daddy is an engineer and he can tell them how it's done.

We also have a small photo of cabooses 1325, Conductor E. A. Troxell, center, Flagman C. H. Pickett, to the right and Brakeman J. J. Daly, to the left. This is one of our Pike crews who know how to handle the "highballs" between Benwood and Glenwood.

Meet W. H., Jr., son of Engineer Kane, Glenwood yard. Comments uncalled for, but we do like cigars and candy.

Misses Harriette Jenkins and Geraldine Donnelly, Superintendent's Office, spent their vacation in the White Mountains. From their descriptions, we have missed a great deal.

Car Distributor A. H. Gribbin, who has been ill for some time, has left the hospital and is now convalescing. We hope for his speedy return.

Wheeling Division

Correspondent, MARIE SLATTERICK

For once in the history of the Wheeling Division we have been able to secure some good pictures for the MAGAZINE. First comes that of Local Storekeeper W. M. Walsh, Holloway, Ohio; another is of the Locomotive Casting Platform, Holloway. Mr. Walsh takes great pride in his store-room and platform and as the picture will show, his efforts are well rewarded. A platform like this is something to be proud of.

Another here is of Miss Elsie Perkins, clerk to the local storekeeper, Holloway. Miss Perkins has been in the employ of the Company for more than five years and has given very good service at all times.

And now look who's here! Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Bailey, formerly of Grafton and now of Wheeling. George is rodman on the engineering corps, Wheeling. Can't you just tell they're newlyweds to look at 'em? They've just been married a month and they're still happy! About six weeks ago George took awful sick one day and nothing would do but he must go home. Said he was tired of eating at the Greasy Spoon and wanted to eat some real home cookin'. He was gone two days and when he came back he brought with him Mrs. Bailey (Miss Ada Newcome, that was). Now he doesn't complain of being sick any more and if the hot cakes we ate at their house one morning are samples of the cooking he gets he'll never be sick again!

Here's some more of the engineering corps—Upright and Inverted, or better known as P. M. Ghent and R. B. Burgess. They're both from Baltimore and regular sheiks. All the girls in Wheeling and vicinity are just crazy about them. Do you wonder?

Here is Wesley Truman Whaley, age 10 months. Isn't he the darling? He's the son of Fireman T. T. Whaley.

Last but not least is Fred Jones, porter, Wheeling Station. We've had a Dickens of a time getting this photo. We took it ourselves with our brand new camera.

Fred dressed all up in his new uniform and we picked the spot and the day—and then the sun wouldn't shine! We took the picture anyhow and it's pretty good at that. But Fred says, "Never again."

Through the cooperation of the Federated Craft, the division officials and through the Baltimore and Ohio's Grand Old Man, J. M. Garvey, the Wheeling Division has at last realized a long-time ambition—we have one of the best baseball teams that ever wore a Best and Only uniform. To date this team has had seven starts and won every one of them, a record that is hard to beat! The team is being managed by Machinist Joseph Stevens, Benwood, and for the first time for quite a while we have men from practically every department. We saw the last game at Moundsville when the Shop team won, 2-1, and noted the majority of the crowd at this game were Baltimore and Ohio people. This was clearly demonstrated by the applause whenever a local player made a thrilling play. This goes to show the team is being backed by the employees as well as the towns-people of McMechen and Benwood. Let everyone boost! Let's all pull together and keep on winning!

We regret to report the illness of Road Foreman of Engines Crawford. We trust he will soon be with us again.

On July 25 we went to the Veterans' Picnic at Versailles, Pa. Many years may pass and the rivers run up-hill but we'll never forget the good time we had. The Special from Wheeling left at seven o'clock in the morning and we reached Versailles about eleven o'clock. The first of the thrills took place when Glenwood Shop blew all sorts of whistles and made all kinds of noise to welcome us. Those of us who had never been that far East observed with interested eyes the many things to be seen. The large Baltimore and Ohio Shops, the many different factories, mills and plants all along the Railroad, the splendid Allegheny River, and scores of other things we don't and do have around Wheeling. When we arrived at Olympia Park, people from Cumberland, Connellsville, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and other points were just pouring in and together with our train we made about five thousand. Five thousand people is a pretty good handful and when one stops to think there are many times five thousand people in the Baltimore and Ohio family, it just makes you feel good all over to be a member of that enormous family. Another of the thrills of the Picnic was listening to the Cumberland Shop Band. We didn't get to count the pieces but there were a great many and they certainly performed splendidly. Their rendition of "Yes, We Have No Bananas" was just great. Of course, the biggest part of the day was listening to the speeches. Vice-President C. W. Galloway held us enthralled for quite a while with his eloquence. Mr. Sturmer, as usual, gave us a good laugh or two. Mesdames J. M. Garvey, Frank Howard and C. W. Lewis, of the Ladies' Auxiliary, made the men folks sit up and listen and the rest of us nod our heads as much as to say that women can make speeches too, and good ones, even if they aren't long. Mr. "Pat" Harrigan, sily'ry haired, from Connellsville, gave a very interesting talk. Can't begin to tell you all the people we saw and met at the Picnic. Aunt Mary was there, so was Mr. Jones, former correspondent at Weston, and now on the staff at Baltimore. We danced with a lot of nice boys from Cumberland Shop and we'll say they are good dancers! We rode the roller-coaster (called the Leap-Frog) and we did feel kind of froggy when we got off. We went boat-riding and someone bought us a balloon to carry tied on our little finger. We had our picture taken by the tin-type man! We saw the baseball game and thought it was just awful the way they argued about the decisions. We saw Supervisor W. C. Wright of Moundsville there and just scores of other people. Altogether it was One Grand Day and when the time came to go home, tho' we had had a glorious time, all of us were tired and sleepy. We were grateful for the nice comfy coaches provided for the ride home where we could rest our heads and try to sleep until some one came along with a monkey on a string they were taking home to little brother (I just bet there isn't any little brother) and tickled us on the nose or the neck and we awoke. We consider ourselves privileged characters to have been able to attend the Picnic given by our Veterans, and hope before long we'll be able to attend another affair. At present our eyes are turned towards Cincinnati, where on August 23, Vice Presidents Galloway and Fries will celebrate their fortieth years of service with us.

Harold (Dutch) Huffner of Wheeling has accepted a position as messenger at Benwood. "Dutch" is a very likable young man and we know he will get along well.

Machinist Gerald Brown recently took unto himself a bride, Miss Clark, from Glendale, W. Va. After a honeymoon in the East they will reside in their newly furnished home in Glendale.

Locomotive Watchman Joe Porter, Bridgeport, recently took unto himself a wife. "Joe" is right there when it comes to beating George to it. George (his brother) has been going out 17th Street for quite a while and if he does not get over his stage fright or whatever is holding him up, we imagine he will continue going for quite a while. Why don't you consult Joe, George? We also heard of a certain young man of Bridgeport Shop going to Zanesville in a machine (Ford) one morning recently and not getting back until 5.00 p. m. the same night. We heard that this was one wild trip but we couldn't get any details. We'll let George Porter tell it. All ready, George!

Noticed Brakeman Crowley the other day with a broad smile and upon inquiry found he is the proud father of a new baby girl. Brakeman Criswell also passed the El Versos around the other day. Cause—a bouncing baby boy.

Conductor C. S. Harter recently purchased a 90-mi. "Shove-or-let-lay" and we understand he is getting along famously with it.

Relief Yardmaster "Johnnie" Wise recently purchased a Nash Sport model.

We just know he bought it with the sole idea of getting to Bridgeport quicker after work. How about it John?

The Wheeling Division regrets not having had any notes in the MAGAZINE for the past two months but outside of ordinary excuses we beg to advise that it was because the folks out on the line failed to cooperate with the correspondent. The operators and agents and others have been kindly requested to furnish news items and pictures but they have fallen down on the job after a single spurt or two of action. Seems to us it is quite an important thing to keep on the map now that we are on, and those of us who are at outlying points can help a great deal by observing things of interest and sending them along to the correspondent who will more than appreciate any help received.

Marriages and Rumors of Marriage

Absolutely disregarding the advice of his bachelor friends, Little Tom Thumb Hannen, tallyman, Freight House, finally succumbed to marriage on July 14, the other party to the crime being Miss Dora Margaret Neal, of this city.

Being of a romantic turn of mind, Tommy thought he would have the nuptial knot tied in historical Marietta, the Gretna Green of many similarly stricken couples. Saturday afternoon saw him breathless at the desk of the Clerk of the County Court of that sleepy old town.

Tommy: "I want a license."

Clerk: "Dog or hunting?"

Tommy: "Neither. Sir, I am to be married."

Clerk: "Ah! A marriage license. What is your name, young man, and your residence?"

Tommy: "Tom Thumb Hannen, sir. And I live in Parkersburg, W. Va."

Clerk: "Sorry, Tommy, my boy, but you'll have to move to Ohio before you get a license here."

Tommy having been raised among the snakes, came back home, got his license without any trouble, and was married by the Rev. R. T. Webb, Southern Methodist Church. The newlyweds made a short trip to Cincinnati and other Ohio cities, and on their return took up their residence with the bride's mother. Tommy says he is just as happy as if a mule had kicked him.

Harry B. Perkins, tallyman, affectionately known as "Slewfoot," was married in Marietta on July 14, to Miss Eva Leona Ford. After seeing Tommy turned down by the Athens County Clerk, "Slewfoot" gave his residence as Belpre. His parents always bragged about his bright mind.

Miss Moore to Wed. The correspondent has been informed that Miss Maude Moore, clerk, Low Yards, and Mr. Claude Crawford are to be married in the early fall.

H. L. Hickman, chief caller, is the happy father of a brand new son, named Robert Joseph Hickman. Congratulations!

We extend our sympathy to Dr. J. P. Lawler, medical examiner, Parkersburg, on the death of his father, which occurred in Baltimore a short time ago. Dr. Lawler is the only surviving child, and has a host of friends among the railroad people and other people generally in Parkersburg and vicinity, who will be sorry to hear of his bereavement.

Division Claim Agent W. E. Kennedy, is flying high these fine days, in a new Buick, and with a new stenographer in the person of Speedy Deem, recently of the Parkersburg High School. He also had a two-weeks' vacation which was much enjoyed. Albert Gatewood of Wheeling had charge of Mr. Kennedy's office while he was away.

"Windy" A. Smith, of Baltimore, has been appointed claim agent, Parkersburg. Welcome to our city, Windy.

At the time of this writing Storekeeper, "Cutie" M. Weser, is taking his annual vacation in Torch Hill, Tupper's Plains, and other interesting places in Ohio.

"Alias" K. Brady has returned from the wilds of Canada, coming home by way of New York, where he stopped and congratulated Governor Smith on his stand on the booze question. "K" is much refreshed and is eating up all the work in the office, so that the rest of the force can easily be dispensed with.

A new son has arrived at the home of Cashier Phillips, name Roy Eugene. "Slim," with his usual modesty, failed to inform the office force of this event, not wanting to stand treat, but murder will out, and so, Slim, the girls will take chocolates. No doubt the boys will be satisfied with Piedmonts.

When the Clarksburg car was opened at the Freight House the other day, the freight handlers were surprised to see a live piece of freight walk out over the flop board, apparently in first-class condition. Kitty walked serenely into the Freight House meowing for her breakfast. No freight bill showed up for this piece of freight, so the waif has been adopted by Clyde Somerville, boss and talker, and we'll venture to say the bold bad man who shipped her away is lucky if he has as comfortable a home as the one Miss Kitty stepped into on her arrival.

In a recent issue we announced that J. Gardner Duncan, he-vamp, had ceased operations at Parkersburg and moved to Marietta to ply his wiles. He has been very successful. To say that the Marietta janes are crazy over him is putting it mildly. And the long-distance telephone calls every day are more numerous than Bud Beck's errors on the billing machine. It is rumored that several of J. "Garrulous" former flames will go to Marietta in a body and expose this perfidious heart-breaker, but it is doubtful if it will have any effect once Gardner has had a chance to use his soulful eyes on the victims.

It is a long lane without a turning, and some of these fine days or nights our hero will meet his match—and all his former affinities hope she will be as thin as a match—and then the curtain will ring down on the greatest heart-crusher since Joe Cromley was a youth.

C. B. Devol, a representative of the Police Department is being congratulated these days. His daughter Virginia, whose picture is shown here, age 17, has been awarded a silver medal and other special commendation at a meeting of Wood County boys and girls at Jackson's Mill, Virginia being a delegate from Parkersburg. The meeting was attended by Governor Morgan and Ex-Governor J. J. Cornwell, now our general counsel. Virginia will begin her third term in High School this fall.

"Go and do thou likewise."

It was a commendable act that brought forth the command given above. Good deeds, good work and honest effort don't come easy, but it's only such things that will bring forth a command like that, and cause it to ring down through the ages to catch the eye and ear of you and me.

The Last Word in Fuel Economy

Do you know what it is? Why it's E-C-O-N-O-M-Y. Very simple, don't you know.

Recently Superintendent Trapnell held a meeting at which the subject of Fuel Economy was looked at from all angles, and from what transpired at the meeting, and the interest that has been taken since that time we know that the Division is going to do from now on, but it will require something from every one of us.

SAFETY FIRST—To the worker in the saw-mill who might read this we dedicate the following. It's old but still holds good—

There was a man in our shop
Who 'round the re-saw lingered;
He got his hand too near the teeth
And now he is un-fingered.

Much interest is still being displayed on the Division in Safety First work and things are BEING DONE that actually spell the word.

The best way to demonstrate INEFFICIENCY is to talk about EFFICIENCY so much that you don't have time to do anything. The best way to demonstrate EFFICIENCY is to do something and talk when there is nothing left to be done.

Roy Sargent, C. T. timekeeper, has been playing on the Weston Two-light Baseball teams most of the summer; he has played with two or three teams and is reported to have gotten his first hit about the middle of July. He may not have to hunt another berth.

Are you in business for yourself? It is said that anyone who has his or her own salary to manage is in business for him or herself. The big idea is to make the business pay more than the expense of running the business.

The progressive people of Gassaway and Sutton staged one of the biggest Fourth of July Celebrations at Gassaway that has been attempted for some years, and it was a grand success. Some of the features of the day were various races, boxing contest between two prominent boxers, wrestling contest, baseball game, band concert, speaking by Col. Guy Goff of Clarksburg, big street parade, etc. The celebration was brought to a close with a fine display of fireworks.

Everyone on the Division seems to be singing the same song; either in the spirit of enjoyment, anticipation, or of by-gone pleasures. It is the song of VACATION TIME, and is sung to the same tune you hear the school boy whistling about the first of June. Possibly the tune is familiar; maybe you also whistled it as a boy. Let's all get back to our boyhood days for a little while each year so long as we are still able to whistle the tune. When we get too old or too crabbed to have our play days we must be over due elsewhere.

About People We Know

Hearing that there was to be a greased pole contest at the Fourth of July Celebration at Gassaway, Assistant Superintendent Kinton and Trainmaster Nicholas went into training a week ahead of time, although not until after considerable pressure had been brought to bear; did I say "bear?" I meant "bull." A few days before the Fourth there was being shipped through Gassaway a box car containing one live bull. This bull decided to get out and look over the town, and he did. The above named gentlemen, feeling it their duty to restore shipment to car, pleaded with Mr. Bull to return peacefully, and everything was O. K. in about two minutes, except that Mr. Bull was still out of the car, and "Jack" and "Jud" were up in two trees crying "Peace" "Peace!" when there was no peace. Conditions were finally restored to normalcy, but there was no more talk of pole climbing by our two valiant officers.

About a week after the tree climbing contest at Gassaway, General Foreman Kelly at Weston was heard to say that they should have sent for him as no one could handle the bull like he could. We think Mr. Kelly forgot about that old saying "He that boasteth shall be brought low," for about three days after his boasting a male cousin of the above mentioned bovine, while with a Wild West aggregation showing at Weston, escaped from the herd and he and the general foreman gave quite an exhibition near the State Hospital. O. J. K's reputation suffered quite a bit as a result of the meeting and we are requested to report a "man failure."

We have heard fish stories, snake stories and ghost stories, most of which left us under the impression that those relating them had strayed far from the straight and narrow way. Just today we learn of a motor car with a "hair trigger." A prominent member of the Baltimore and Ohio Family at Weston possesses the car, an

Essex Coach. He tells us that he had left his car under a tree near the house. Seeing a storm approaching he started to take the car to a garage. Just as he entered the car he saw old Jove aiming a charge of lightning at the tree, stepped on the gas and just got out from under when half the tree came down.

They say Lin Norman, Division Accountant's Force, has a double reason for going to Clarksburg over the week-end. How about it, Lin?

"Al" Mason, popular train dispatcher at Weston, is reported to have hurt himself about half way between the back fence and the office, while on his way to work. We understand he also "dog-goned" near fell in the creek.

Those Eyes—How They Abuse Me

We sometimes wonder how the girls in the Weston offices are able to continue their work, for we have seen:

Sylvia devouring people with her eyes.

Fleda casting her eyes to the floor.

"Peg" permitting her eyes to roam over the hills.

Gladys dropping her eyes to the desk.

Madeline with her eyes glued to a typewriter.

Mary taking her eyes from the "boss."

Trix with one eye on the clock.

No doubt when this article appears they will rivet seven pairs of eyes to it. The eyes have the floor.

First Trick Operator L. A. Teskey, and his family, Weston, have returned from an extended visit with Mr. Teskey's parents and relatives in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Trainmaster J. D. Nicholas enjoyed his vacation with his family motoring in the east.

"Si" Seymore, Division Accountant's Office, lost his canoe the other day and had to borrow a row boat to search for it. Report is that he didn't know how to use the oars and was seen wading in the water shoving the boat. We don't understand why he didn't walk in the first place.

Miss Gladys Tivey, Superintendent's Office, is enjoying her vacation which she expected to spend in Wildwood and Vineland, N. J., and stop off at Philadelphia; Gladys said she also expected to take a few dips in the ocean at Atlantic City.

Miss "Johnita" Hostettler is spending a part of their vacation with her parents at Gassaway.

Division Claim Agent J. H. Workmeister has returned from his vacation which was spent at Baltimore and Atlantic City.

Dr. E. A. Fleetwood, medical examiner, and wife left recently for Savannah, Ga. They were driving through and expected to make the trip in about five days.

Conductor C. F. Davis and family have returned from a trip to Cuba.

Road Foreman of Engines P. D. Marsh and family have returned after spending vacation at Webster Springs, W. Va.

We have just been advised that Charleston Division Brakeman P. O. Snyder was married recently. Congratulations!

A firm believer in SAFETY FIRST is Chief Clerk Owens. In fact he has carried his belief to the point where he refuses to purchase an automobile even for his own pleasure because of the fact that he classes auto riding as DANGEROUS. But after all these precautions, one of his friends invited him to take a little ride with him and his family, and Frank consented.

While the machine in which he was riding was parked alongside the road, someone came up from behind and bumped it so hard that Frank reported at the office Monday morning with tell-tale markings on his arm, wrist and hand. What made Owens really sore was that the fellow slipped up behind and he never had a chance even to see that he was going to be mixed up with the news on the front page of the newspapers. Now, if you pass Frank, you had better think it over before inviting him to ride.

The railroads are making every effort to see that all employes concerned give special attention to the proper performance of their duties at all railroad crossings.

A train cannot be stopped in a few feet—an automobile can. I wonder how many auto owners who read the following suggestions will take this matter seriously and not make a joke out of it.

Slow down when approaching any Railroad Highway crossings!

Look both ways and listen to ascertain if a train is approaching!

Be careful where there are two or more tracks, because of trains in opposite direction.

In case of doubt, take the safe course and stop before reaching track and thereby possibly saving your life and the lives of your loved ones and at the same time demonstrating to others how always to CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY!

Prominent Baltimore and Ohio Surgeon Dies at Garrett

After an illness of nine months, Dr. John Ferguson Thomson passed away at his home on King Street, Garrett, Ind., on July 25.

Dr. Thomson was suddenly taken ill last October, and was taken to Chicago, where he underwent an operation. However, his condition did not improve, and his death had been expected for several days.

Dr. Thomson was a practicing physician and leading citizen of Garrett since 1876. Shortly after his arrival here, he became a member of the Baltimore and Ohio staff of surgeons, and also a member of the Association of Baltimore and Ohio Physicians and Surgeons, and served successively as second vice-president, vice-president and president.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Church and interment took place in the mausoleum, Calvary Cemetery.

On the morning of July 24, on arrival of The Capitol Limited at Garrett, Conductor Michael J. Hallinan, in charge of the train, was the recipient of a gold service emblem in recognition of his fifty years of service with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The presentation was made by Superintendent S. U. Hooper.

Mr. Hallinan was born at Trenton, N. J. He entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago Division, as a freight brakeman on March 1, 1873; was promoted to freight conductor on December 1, 1882; and to passenger conductor on June 15, 1883. During his fifty years of service Conductor Hallinan has proved himself an exceptionally careful and loyal employee, particularly in his capacity as passenger conductor. He has, by his pleasant and courteous manner, won the admiration of officers and employees, as well as of the traveling public.

Save Fuel!—Stop That Leak!

Authoritative statistics show that the railroads of this country use each year 140,000,000 tons of coal. If this was handled through Parkersburg to Chillicothe, it would mean:—

2,800,000 fifty-ton cars,
112,000 twenty-five car trains,
13,580,000,000 actual ton miles.

A train run out of that terminal every hour, for 12 years, 9 months, 16 days and 16 hours, to clear the yards at Parkersburg.

Approximately 1,008,000 tons of coal would be consumed by the engines handling these 2,800,000 cars.

$3,024,000.00 would be paid in wages to the engine and trainmen handling these trains, (exclusive of overtime.)

Just think! If a scoop of coal was saved for at least each ton consumed, it would mean a saving of 980,000 tons of coal, figuring 14 pounds to the scoop. SAVE AT LEAST ONE SHOVEL FULL OUT OF EACH TON and STOP-A-LEAK. Better Save a scoop a mile! It can be done!

On July 24, the Steamer W. C. Richardson commenced unloading at 7.00 a. m. In order to secure sufficient ore to finish a train, 12 cars were loaded, billed, taken three miles to yard and placed in train due to leave at 9.00 a. m. Yardmaster Kramer assisted in this fast work, taking bills to yard in his fast automobile at a two-fifty clip. Bill Clerk Miss Spaderman billed the cars, and we want to add that her

Your correspondent has been off the Toledo Division for the past two weeks and is sorry that news is rather scarce. What is the matter with the correspondents? You fellows started out nicely and sent some interesting notes each month, but you're slipping. Boys, unless you get a full dome of sand, we are not going to reach our goal. Let our slogan be "That news shall never be scarce on the Toledo Division."

It is a pleasure to report that the ever watchful stork was hanging around Chillicothe and paused to deliver a daughter to Time Clerk and Mrs. D. Sullivan. The new order is much appreciated by the dock workers. Hereafter vessels will be finished loading and unloading with coal, only when it does not take more than three hours to complete the work on Sunday morning.

There is enough news on this division each month to fill ten pages of the MAGAZINE, but I cannot find all of it alone. Unless you folks do your share and contribute each month, our column will be as empty as Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard. Take some snapshots of your kiddies, your families, homes, your train, stations, or some scenes along the right of way on your division. Some of our people never have the opportunity to ride on this division, and if we can put an occasional picture into the MAGAZINE it will help the other fellow get acquainted. Let's all get busy and have a 100 per cent. representation.

If Toledo sent a shipment to Dayton without marks would L. F. Hock-ett?

If our agent at Perrysburg chewed tobacco, would it be "REDMAN"?

Be honest with yourself and with the Company for which you work and you will always be prosperous and happy.

On Saturday afternoon, July 21, the Dayton employees held their second annual picnic at Kilkare Park, Dayton, Ohio. The picnic was a grand success. Everybody had a delightful time. Superintendent Iams was on the grounds early and batted flies for about an hour to the players.

The Ball game started about 3.30 p.m. and it was necessary for the following employees to purchase a bottle of liniment after the strenuous exercise!

Blues: Boll, King, Booren, White, Thrasher, Fortman, Kesling, Hartinger, Tull, Jr., Umpire A. A. Iams. Score 14-6 in favor of the Reds.

Lima

Correspondent, OTTO L. WALLBURG

President Willard's words on Courtesy on the cover of the June MAGAZINE will certainly strike an answering chord in the hearts of all true and loyal employees, if each and every one of us will accept the challenge and carry forward the gospel of Courtesy, the results would be so far-reaching as to raise higher and higher the standard of the Baltimore and Ohio. The words "Baltimore and Ohio" then would be on the lips of every person coming in contact with any employe of this Company.

Your automobile or engine will work better and accomplish more for you if all of its parts are well oiled and will give out no squeaks or warnings of unlubricated parts. The Baltimore and Ohio is a wonderful transportation machine, but its efficiency can be greatly improved through the medium of courtesy in our dealings with the public.

Time and again, our patrons have remarked to me that they would rather do business with the Baltimore and Ohio than with any other railroad in Lima, because of the treatment accorded them at all times in the office and on the telephone. A patron does not say that because he has nothing else to say.

Courtesy is the magic key that unlocks the door of reserve and opens unto us vast storehouses of enjoyment.

The accompanying picture is J. W. Linehan, foreman, prize winning section, Wellston Division. Mr. Linehan commenced work on the Wellston Division, then the C. B. & Q. R. R., in January, 1879, and has been in continuous service for 44 years, bringing this section from a speed limit of six miles per hour, up to the present prize winning condition. John lives at Bauers Station and in addition to his duties as section foreman, he protects this crossing at all hours of the night in all kinds of weather.

The dog in the picture is also a prize winner, having recently taken a prize at the State Farm. It is reported that when they found the dog, he was under the corn crib, a rat under each foot, one in his mouth, and his tail in the hole to keep it plugged up.

East Dayton again heads the list with "No Accidents," and can sing to the tuneful strain of "Yes, We Have No Accidents."

Among my most pleasant moments are those spent reading the notes of our correspondents. Seems to be something in them especially appealing in their efforts to establish that good cheer and pleasant feeling so prevalent in our ranks.

Agent L. F. Hockett says he found the following letter in his mail recently from a farmer up the line:

"My razor back strolled on your track,
A week ago today.
Your sixty-nine came down the line
And snuffed his life away.
You can't blame me, the hog you see
Slipped through the cattle gate.
So kindly pen a check for ten
This debt to liquidate.

After consultation with Engineers P. D. Flanagan and George Swires on this run, he replied as follows:

"Our sixty-nine came down the line
And killed your hog we know.
But, razor backs on railroad tracks,
Quite often meet with woe.
Therefore my friend, we cannot send
The check for which you pine,
Just plant the dead, place o'er his head,
'Here lies a foolish swine.'"

Vernet Herrman, machinist helper, breezed into the roundhouse yard the other night, with his "Tractor" making noise enough to startle all the men. Vernet said they could laugh all they wanted to, but it suited him. We're glad of that, "Vernie," but leave that noise out on the hill.

"Gene" Lowry, "Joe" Farley and "Pat" Riley are still single, but slipping fast.

George Slamb, engine and cab painter, gave a luncheon to several of the boys at the shops recently. The "eats" were tempting and abundant, the music delightful, and an enjoyable time was had by all.

H. C. Myron, third trick operator, Medora, has been granted a leave of absence and has gone to Colorado. His position is being filled by Operator Miller.

What has happened to Bob
He is so dignified lately?
He holds his head high
And walks so sedately.

Why Bob has a namesake,
That's the reason why,
For he has been "UNK"
Since the Fourth of July.

Conductor W. N. McDonald, running local trains 76 and 77, Springfield Branch, has returned to duty, following a long illness.

J. R. Minter, shop draftsman, Glenwood Shops, has been transferred to Washington Shops, as supervisor of shops schedules. Mr. Minter was formerly employed at Washington and seems to be well satisfied in his new location.

Russell Isenogle without a chew.
Wilbur Young in a hurry.
Gib Fitzgibbons without an alibi.
Another picnic—with everybody invited.

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Isenogle are the proud parents of a baby boy who will be named Robert Lee. Mr. Isenogle is chief of the Motive Power Bureau at Washington Shops.

"Heinie" Bruner, who has been file clerk, Superintendent's Office, Shops, for a number of years, has accepted a position in the Agent's Office. Flora "Heinie" has now quit singing the "Homesick Blues."

District Boiler Inspector Martin Murphy should make a good salesman for the Oakland car judging by the stories he tells of what he can do with his.

Leo Johnson, assistant foreman—work checker, slipped away to a distant city some time ago—but not alone. We wish you happiness, Leo and Mrs. J—. Acquiring a wife and a new Overland at the same time is some feat!

There doesn't seem to be much activity around Shops in baseball and tennis this year. We hear lots of discussion about the big league teams but some of us still remember the games between the Stores Department and the Round House last year, and we would like to see a couple of good base ball teams from Washington Shops.

"Cross Crossings Cautiously"

While riding on a motor on June 30, Section Foreman H. Clark, Flora, Illinois, who has been in the service of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in the Maintenance of Way Department for fifty-two years, was seriously injured, when the motor car on which he and two other men were riding was struck by a speeding automobile at a road crossing.

Foreman Alex Pitts, who was piloting the motor car, observed the approaching machine and brought his motor to a stop before he had passed entirely over the crossing, leaving plenty of room for the automobile to pass around, but the driver of the automobile did not slacken speed or turn out and struck the motor car on the side Mr. Clark was riding, knocking the motor off the track and turning it over, severely injuring Mr. Clark, although the other two men were able to get away before the collision.

Mr. Clark is seventy-three years of age and is one of our most faithful and valued employees. It is to be regretted that the carelessness of automobile drivers, who fail to heed crossing warning signs, should result in the loss of a trusted employee. It is thought the injuries sustained will prevent Mr. Clark from performing further service.

Mr. West, in checking over handling of Forms 871 and 872, was enthusiastic over the co-operation shown by the St. Louis Division Employees.

Operator, G. C. Williams, has been transferred from Springfield, 2nd trick, to Storrs, 2nd trick. Welcome to the East End, "Sandy."

Special note should be made on the records of crew on Passenger Train No. 54, Conductor Jackson, Engineer Lemen and Supervisor Downey, for their efficient handling of reraiment of truck, engine 5111, on above train, July 19, at North Bend. While running at 45 miles per hour, truck

The walls are three thicknesses; the middle wall was made by standing logs on end. The upper story was intended to hold women prisoners, originally having a stairway on the outside. This, however, has fallen away, leaving only a portion of the landing.

Oriental Pattern No. 534

This is the beautiful Gold Seal Congoleum Art Rug as shown at the top of this page. On the floor, it looks unbelievably like an expensive woven rug. The richest blue color dominates the ground work. Mellow ecru, old ivories, and light tans, set off the blue field. Mingled with these lovely tints are peacock blue, robin's egg blue and darker tones. Old rose, tiny specks of lighter pink and dark mulberry are artistically placed. Darker browns and blacks lend dignity and richness.

The border background contrasts with the blue all over center by reversing the color scheme. Ecru and tan shades form the border background.

An ideal all purpose rug, beautiful in any room. Perfect for living room or parlor. Lovely in bedroom or dining room. Charming in the kitchen.

Pa Brings up the Rear

A fashionably dressed woman, accompanied by four well togged out children, registered at a Springfield hotel and immediately went to their room. A half hour later a seedy looking man sauntered up to the desk and informed the clerk that he was a member of the party. Not knowing just where to place him, the clerk hesitated and finally asked if he was the chauffeur. The man sighed wearily. "Yes," he said, "I am the chauffeur, the husband, the father and the chaperon. I have paid all the bills for 20 years and I want to go up to the room."

The Old Station

The gents' waiting and smoking room was on the left and the women's on the right,

And between the two the ticket office, with a window opening into each.

There the old station agent sat on a high stool at a high desk,

And on the wall near each window were little racks holding tickets to all the stations on the line.

FOR SALE OR RENT

Two six room semi-detached houses. One new four room shingled bungalow; 300 feet from West Baltimore Station; ten minutes from Camden. New Annex.

There was a little bulletin board by the door on the left side, telling when trains were due and when they left, And in a little lean-to building on the north was the express office and baggage room.

There were two trucks, one for freight and one for baggage;

And in the winter both waiting rooms were warmed by big egg stoves set in sand boxes.

The sand box on the men's side was also a spittoon;

And sometimes when old Benny, the agent, fell asleep in his office chair,

The boys got out the baggage truck and played train with it up and down the long platform.

Everybody came to the old station in the evening to see the express come in,

And in the morning to see the mail train depart,

And it was a great thing, when visitors came, to take a walk to the depot!

Why I Travel on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad

By A. D. FAIRBAIRN, President, Fairbairn's Washington News Letter, Inc.

SEVERAL years ago I had a grievance against the Baltimore and Ohio. It was not a serious matter, just an error on the part of one of the employes which caused me some loss. I wrote rather caustically to the Company concerning it. Forty-eight hours after my letter reached the official who ordinarily handles such matters a modestly attired, courteous and mild mannered gentleman called at my house.

"I am here, Mr. Fairbairn, representing the Claim Department of the Baltimore and Ohio, to compensate you for the loss you sustained," he said. "Now what do you think we ought to pay you?"

I was so astounded at this readiness to meet an obligation that I almost forgot entirely my grievance against the Company. It was difficult to assess what I had lost in dollars and cents.

"You have been so decent about this that I am inclined to let the matter drop," I responded.

"No, no, you must not do that," remonstrated my visitor. "The Baltimore and Ohio has no desire to evade its obligations and I am instructed to see that this claim is fully satisfied. I believe one hundred dollars will fairly cover your loss. Will you settle on that basis?"

"When do I get the money?" I asked.

"Now," he responded. And he wrote a draft on the Company, signed it, accepted my receipt and retired. I really thought I was very liberally compensated for the inconvenience that I suffered. But it was not the FACT of settlement which impressed me as much as it was the MANNER, although this great Company might easily have declined to pay and thus challenged me to an expensive and perhaps futile contest in the courts.

My experience since that time has confirmed the belief then established in my mind that the Baltimore and Ohio wants to do what is right by all with whom it has any dealings. If I had been a big shipper and had through carelessness or negligence of employes sustained a loss one hundred times more than the sum allowed me, I believe that on the representation of acceptable proof, the claim would have been paid just as promptly.

But that is not the only reason why I always travel on the Baltimore and Ohio when I am able to reach my destination over that road. Perhaps my feelings for that road are best expressed in a conversation I had with a lady at the consolidated ticket office in this city a few days ago.

"I want to go to Chicago and I want you to tell me which is the best road to travel over," she said to one of the clerks. The young man was much embarrassed because in his dealings with the public he must be entirely neutral. But I was not bound by any such contractual ties, so I said:

"By all means go by the Baltimore and Ohio."

"And why?" said she, somewhat surprised.

"Because the employes are the very essence of courtesy, the food in the dining car is moderate in price and excellent in quality, the road-bed is equal to any in the United States, the scenery is grand, the running time as swift as any and the train equipment generally unsurpassed," I answered.

"In that case please give me three tickets and a drawing room to Chicago," the lady said to the clerk, who quickly accommodated her with the tickets and directed her to the Pullman window for her drawing room.

I think the dollar and a quarter dinner served on the Baltimore and Ohio is one of the most efficient advertisers that any transportation system could employ. Personally I would forfeit two hours of time for the privilege of eating one of those meals.

I don't know whether the employes, from the conductor

The accompanying article was sent to the MAGAZINE office with the following letter:

FAIRBAIRN'S WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER, INC.

Munsey Building, Washington, D. C.

September 1, 1923

Editor
Baltimore and Ohio Magazine
Baltimore, Maryland

Dear Sir:

I have long since threatened to send you an article on why I always use the Baltimore and Ohio. Here it is. It only feebly expresses my convictions.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) A. D. FAIRBAIRN

Such satisfying testimony as this article gives that the Good Neighbor spirit of the Baltimore and Ohio and its employes is a living, vital force, would be remarkable if sent us by anyone of our passenger or shipper friends. It is all the more convincing because the author is a writer by profession and, entirely unsolicited and unknown to us, prepared this account of his pleasant experiences on the Baltimore and Ohio without intimation or request that he be paid for it.

down, are put through a course of training in order to establish cordial relations between the road and the traveling public. On the contrary it seems to me that the courtesy which is so charming on your road, is ingrained. It is a part of the system. It comes so naturally. The artificial seems to have no place there.

Perhaps this courtesy is the result of a spirit of cooperation which makes the Baltimore and Ohio more and more the people's railway. There is in the manner of your officials and your employes a perpetual invitation to the public to unite with you in making the road a public service institution in a very real sense.

A road which treats its employes generously and the public justly is entitled to substantial dividends. Personally I feel as though I had a real financial interest in your road. Like many other men who do considerable traveling I have acquired the Baltimore and Ohio habit and it is a habit for which I hope no cure will ever be found.

I like to read reports of better equipment acquired by you and of more satisfactory earnings from month to month. Your president has frequently said that a railway is no longer a private enterprise in the exclusive sense. To justify its existence it must do more than pay dividends to its stockholders. It must also pay dividends to the public in the way of comfortable riding, good coaches, on time trains and other essentials.

There is no better train in the United States than The Capitol Limited. This is one of the dividends that the public is getting from the road. And the public, I am sure, in exchange for this and other substantial service that you are giving, will be glad to increase your prosperity by freely patronizing you.

In trying to be a good neighbor in every sense of the word, the Baltimore and Ohio has done much to allay prejudice against the railways. The evident determination of its officers to make the public a party to the major transactions of the road, establishes confidence between those who own, those who work for and those who travel over the system. You take the interested people into your confidence and in everything you do seem to have in mind their rights.

Of course when citizens invest their money in railway stocks or bonds they have a right to expect a fair return in kind. Stockholders, however, are also fortunate if they have managers for their property who look beyond the immediately available dollar and have vision sufficient to see the substantial and lasting value of the good will of the public. The stockholders of the Baltimore and Ohio evidently have this kind of managers.

The hundred dollars which the Baltimore and Ohio paid me some years ago has since been returned to the organization at least a hundred fold. I never miss an opportunity to induce my friends to use the road and I do this with delight because I know that in all the essentials of modern travel you have the world beat. I feel when I travel over the road that I have a sort of proprietary interest in it and I always take a personal pride in any forward step you take.

Record Non-Stop Run for Engineer Pope

ENGINEER D. C. POPE has a look of determination in the accompanying photograph. There's a reason! For some time it has been Mr. Pope's ambition to make a trip from Camden to Philadelphia, with a full train, without stopping. A firm believer in the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," he did it on his third attempt.

Leaving Camden July 15 with engine 4615 and Fireman M. A. Kirby, he had 28 loads of coal. They left at 11.20 a. m. and arrived at Philadelphia at 3.20 p. m., making no stops between terminals. They covered the distance with one tank of water, and encountered clear signals all the way.

Engineer D. C. Pope

Aside from fulfilling the ambition of Mr. Pope, a trip such as this means prompt movement of freight and reduction of delays and the usual incidental expense, such as fuel, water, etc., and he has been commended by his officers for his interest.

Fair Play for the Railroads

(La Salle Extension University Trade and Transportation Bulletin)

FROM many of the larger industrial concerns and shippers have come unequivocal statements advocating fair play for the railroads. The conviction that there is no "railroad problem" which may not be remedied by adequate earnings and just treatment of the carriers, is being unmistakably manifested.

The performance record of the carriers during the last year is unequalled in the history of transportation for efficiency, and for tangible manifestation of whole-hearted service and cooperation. That there are those who, in the face of this record, would venture to place a different aspect on the situation, is almost inconceivable and yet it is true.

The shipper of today has learned his lesson and he is not apt to forget it very soon. The railroads learned theirs years ago. Shipper and carrier are in accord on the subject of cooperation and in the conviction that private ownership of transportation facilities is the only transportation policy worthy of consideration

Who Will Be the Railroad Executives of Tomorrow?

"When he was not tending the old engine, he was reading and studying at every opportunity."

By J. C. WILKENS, Inspector of Fuel Service

THE same man, about whom this statement has so truly been made, is now president of our Company. At the time this was first said of him he was second vice-president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company, and delivered an address at Galesburg, Illinois, on February 20, 1909 before the employes of the Burlington Railroad upon, "Problems Confronting American Railways." Among other things, he said: "I have naturally read much concerning the general railroad question as a whole. The same sources of information have also been open to you and I have no doubt that many of you have given the general subject as much or even more study than I have."

These same sources of information regarding our work and railroading as a whole, are still open to us, in an even more marked degree than in the year 1909. Thousands of our Veterans, by viewing their lives in retrospect, will recall when some of our present-day officials were working as machinists, car repairers, yard clerks, telegraph operators, etc. Upon what did these officers build the foundation of their success? Just this—STUDYING, READING and CONCENTRATING at every opportunity! Was it not Lord Bacon who told us, "Reading maketh a full man?" This applies not only to the Railroad game, but to all lines of business.

Read the biographies of all our loftiest characters—our history-making men—what do their lives disclose to students? In the last analysis, that their lives were given over largely to careful reading, studying and concentration.

Sir Isaac Newton, the greatest of natural philosophers and discoverer of the law of gravitation, when a lad of fifteen was always reading. It is said that when his mother sent him to the fields to watch the sheep and cattle, he would be found, hours after, perched in a tree, absorbed in a book. When asked, one day, how he had discovered the law of gravitation, he replied: "By incessantly THINKING about it."

Lincoln and Roosevelt, two of our greatest Americans, whose achievements have gone down in history, were both insatiable readers, and the tremendous influence which their wide learning played in the great questions they were called upon to solve, is a matter of record.

OBSERVING, READING, CONCENTRATING—these essential qualities were, beyond dispute, responsible for the success of Benjamin Franklin, even though the wise old Quaker father, who took "Ben" to the wood-shed for "an interview" must have had his part in the making of this profound thinker.

Alexander Graham Bell's invaluable "Rule of Three" for self-education, which was OBSERVE—REMEMBER—COMPARE, is of inestimable value to us.

There is a general officer on our Railroad today who spends fully half his time on line living in his official car. He left school before he was fifteen and has been at it hard—operating—ever since. But he is an extensive though discriminating reader—not alone books on railroading, but history, biography, economics and fiction. When does he get time? Mostly, on his own say-so, between ten p. m. and one a. m., on his car. He devotes his evenings at home to his family.

In our ranks today are the railroad presidents of tomorrow! They are students, reading, concentrating, gathering gear as they go. On every division there is a Bill Jones, who has the reputation of being the "best posted" fireman. WHY is Bill Jones better than the average? Because Bill reads and studies the worth-while things and ponders over them. He is a bitter enemy of scatteration of thought. He knows that the coal which he is "throwing" into the firebox is not just something that burns. He knows WHY that coal burns—how it burns.

The average fireman may be saying: "I'm too tired to study after a trip. Don't know how Bill Jones does it." Who wouldn't be tired and fagged, if he spent all his time throwing coal into the firebox, and be physically exhausted from shaking the grates and "hooking" the fire? Bill Jones studies "GOOD FIRING" which not only redounds to his ability and credit, but makes his work a lot easier.

Recall if you will, the men who have been promoted, and ask yourself "Why?" Only recently I was riding with a local freight engineer, and during the course of conversation, Road Foreman John Blank's name was mentioned. John was an engineer on the speaker's division, and the latter remarked to me: "I look for big things from John Blank. I once 'fired' for him, and at every opportunity John was studying." On another division where one of our instructors fired an engine, a fireman said to me—"Sure do like to have 'Big Hoots' ride with me, as there isn't anything he doesn't know about an engine."

Every conductor knows who the good engineers are and who the mediocre or poor ones are. Only a few days ago, while riding a local passenger train on one of our districts, I was conversing with a conductor of one of our "Q.D." runs. Conversation turned to the different engineers who had been promoted to road foremen from that division. The conductor remarked: "Road Foreman Jones was 'some' engineer. Always 'on the job' and ready to go. When he would take siding for a train, he would never 'pull' to the extreme end of the siding, but would always stay at the lower end, in order to have his train moving when the caboose of the train he was meeting, was clearing the switch."

We have efficient men and inefficient men, or perhaps more correctly speaking in the latter instance, indifferent men, in every capacity. To some of our yard and road men, a car of Company's coal is just a car of Company's coal—no other significance attaches to it. To others, who study and read at every opportunity, when a car is billed to a certain point, they know it is being sent to that destination because it is the place where it can be used to the best advantage.

Do some of our minor officials appreciate the fact that the statements furnished them are a presentation of running facts, invaluable to them if they are used? Certainly they must recognize the fact that the men at the top are usually the men who have acquired the habit of going to the bottom of things.

In the June, 1923 issue of our MAGAZINE, President Willard expressed the hope that the officers and employes would be able to make a substantial improvement in service and operating records. This can be done, but only by eternal vigilance, which means OBSERVING, STUDYING, CONCENTRATING, COMPARING.

WHAT THE ENGINEERS AND TRACK FORCES FACED AFTER THE WASH OUT ON THE OLD MAIN LINE—THE WORST FOR YEARS ON THIS PIECE OF TRACK

Reconstruction on Old Main Line Done in Record Time after July Washout

By G. S. CRITES, Division Engineer, Baltimore Division, West End

FLOOD waters, caused by several hours unusual downpour of rain, did damage to the extent of $100,000 on the Old Main Line, between Oella and Watersville, on the late afternoon and evening of July 30. The westbound track was opened for traffic at 11.00 p. m., July 31, and both tracks were ready for slow speed at 1.00 a. m. on August 3.

By 9.30 p. m., July 30, while the crest of the flood was passing Marriottsville, estimates of the damage were sufficiently accurate to cause the request that all company and commercial screenings, stone and cinders, within reach, be started to the damaged territory. By midnight a fair appraisal of the damage had been made.

A ditcher was sent to the cinder bank, Bay View, a steam shovel was moved from Locust Point to Reels Mill cinder bank, and two locomotive cranes loaded cinders from various cinder banks on the Cumberland Division. Two hundred carloads of slag and filling material were moved from the Pittsburgh territory.

A report sent from Gaithers at midnight, giving a history of the damage, reads as follows:—

"At Mile Post 26, eastbound undermined for 300 feet to a depth of 8 feet from ends of ties out, and westbound undermined from ends of ties to depth of four to six feet. Westbound thrown into center ditch and good for eight miles per hour. Westbound undermined and cribbed up and thirty feet at East End of Henryton Tunnel, and good for eight miles per hour. From Gorsuch to Sykesville, one and one half miles, eastbound and one mile of westbound undermined and partially off roadbed. Extra east, engine 4634, is standing on eastbound track, with head end at Sykesville station."

To the layman, this would seem to be a good week's work to get the tracks in condition for operation, but the message goes on:

"Small washout on eastbound at highway bridge ahead of Extra East, engine 4634. Approaches to bridges, east and west of Sykesville tunnel, undermined and washed out under both tracks, 300 feet. Both main and both side tracks, from east end Gaither to tower, undermined, in places, to a depth of six feet. Cars on back track, Gaither; track undermined and two cars turned over. West of Gaither, eastbound washed off roadbed and roadbed washed down in places, to a depth of four feet. From Gaither, westbound pullout washed out for 500 feet east and westbound siding to a depth of six to eight feet. From westbound pullout, Gaither to Hoods Mill, eastbound washed out at ends of ties to depth of four feet. Hoods Mill shelter shed gone. East of Morgan, track washed out at ends of ties to depth of three feet. Just east of Morgan, about ten carloads of poles, trces and brush and track and eastbound track washed out at ends of ties six feet deep for a distance of 150 feet."

Even without further damage, this seems to be a discouraging situation, but there was more yet—reported as follows:—

"Westbound pick up train is standing just east of Morgan station. Curve west of Morgan station has eastbound washed out to a depth of six feet and the track is in river for three hundred feet. (See photograph.) Here, the westbound is undermined four feet for a distance of 200 feet

Being one of several true stories about prominent railroaders who were good for a "sacrifice" when called to bat.

THIRTY odd years ago the motive power of a certain small railroad, which has since become one of the country's most important systems, consisted of just two locomotives. Naturally each was a most important part of the business of that company and when the tender of one of them was put out of commission by a bent axle, they were at their wits' end to know what to do. It was at an outlying point, with no shop facilities. There was only a small roundhouse with the commonest tools.

But in temporary charge of the roundhouse was a former trainman, who had been given the job because he seemed to be able to turn his hand successfully to any work assigned him. The superintendent asked him if he could fix the axle and he said he would try.

Ordinarily this job is done in a blacksmith shop where the wheels are pulled off and the axle heated and put back into shape by high pressure. But the shop was miles away and to most men the task would have seemed hopeless.

Not so to our young railroader, who happened to be the kind of a workman who could do things with poor tools!

First he rigged up a little Buffalo forge in the pit of the roundhouse and then rolled the truck so that the bend in the axle was sloping downwards into the fire, and braced it securely. This made the uppermost parts of the flanges of the two wheels slope in towards each other. Then he worked the blower of the forge slowly and steadily, until the bent section was red hot all through.

Handy was a stout piece of four by four, about three feet long, and a twelve-inch jack. One end of the four by four he placed against the uppermost inside part of one wheel, and against the other end of the four by four he placed the base of the jack, fitting the head in securely against the uppermost inside part of the flange of the other wheel.

He then had a rigid horizontal length of wood and steel between the wheel flange sections which sloped towards each other, and, by forcing out the stem of the jack with the jack lever, he forced the upper parts of the wheels apart while the lower parts came together, until the wheels assumed their normal position, at the same time necessarily forcing the bent spot out of the axle and straightening it.

The job took him about four hours and shortly afterward the repaired axle was satisfactorily doing its duty under the tender.

It was this and similar experiences which the management of the road had with him—all indicating that he was a hard worker,—and resourceful and determined—that made them pick him a few years later as the first superintendent they ever promoted from the ranks.

Now it is his duty to make, not alone superintendents, but general superintendents and other important officers of the railroad which he heads. How natural it is that he should want to see in his assistants the same qualities which, everybody recognizes, are responsible for his own success!

Don't Bump That Car!

Improvement Shown Over Last Year, but Impact Registers Indicate Places Where More Improvement Can be Made

DURING the year 1922 the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad spent $248,856 in the payment of claims caused by the rough handling of cars. That is an average of $20,736 per month. Probably as much more was spent in the repair of cars damaged by violent handling, and added to this would also be the loss due to the delay to these cars while they are on the repair tracks. KILL TWO BIRDS WITH ONE STONE. STOP THE ROUGH HANDLING AND YOU WILL INCREASE THE MILES PER CAR PER DAY.

A conservative estimate is that the results of rough handling cost at least $50,000 per month during 1922. So far this year our claim payments for this item have been $18,227 per month, and when the other related costs are considered, we are spending about $44,000 per month this year, or a saving of $6,000 per month over the performance of last year.

While this is an improvement, the charts taken from Savage Impact Registers confirm the fact that there is still room for great improvement. The blueprint statements sent to division officers have shown them, as well as the men, the places where the performances are worst, and with that information before them it should not be difficult to reduce the expenditures caused by "Rough Handling" almost to the vanishing point.

Let's say "It can be done"—then "do it."

Reconstruction of Old Main Line

and track is in center ditch. From Woodbine station west, eastbound undermined and bank washed eight feet deep for a distance of 800 feet. Westbound track over arch, West Woodbine, washed out to a depth of four feet for a distance of seventy-five feet. Seventy-five telegraph poles washed on to west bound track just west of Woodbine."

And here the message concludes. Aside from the trouble mentioned in this report, no damage seems to have been done, and everything was alright!

After this report was made, the crest of the flood undermined the fill supporting the westbound track, from Davis station to Davis tunnel, and water ran over the tracks from Hollofield tower eastward to Union Dam tunnel. Three feet of water ran through the tunnel. Ballast was washed from under ties in the tunnel; the bank east of the tunnel was washed away sufficiently to expose the granite sleepers that supported the original rails at this place 90 years ago.

General Superintendent C. W. Van Horn personally directed the repair work. Temporary headquarters were established at Gorsuch and the damaged territory was covered on motor cars. On July 31, a drive was made on the work on westbound track, and at 11.00 p. m. it was ready for traffic. All regular passenger trains were operated on August 1, and several hundred freight cars were moved. On August 2, a special drive was made to get the eastbound track back into service.

Three labor trains were scheduled. One from Baltimore, one from Washington, via Washington Jct., and one from Brunswick. Four work trains were operated out of Brunswick. The first had 25 cars of dolomite and stone ballast for Sykesville, the second 55 cars of cinders and slag for Gaither, the third 22 cars of cinders and stone for Hoods Mill and the fourth 16 cars of stone and cinders for Woodbine.

A work engine from Mt. Airy handled the Brunswick riggers, which were at Gaither, with three cars of riprap stone to Sykesville. Two work engines operated out of Baltimore, the first with 19 cars of stone ballast for Marriottsville and the second with 40 cars of cinders for Hollofield.

Each work train was accompanied by a track supervisor, trainmaster and road foreman of engines, or their assistants.

One hundred and seventy four cars of material were unloaded and by one a. m. on August 3, the tracks were in condition for operation at slow speed throughout the damaged territory.

The actual work was in charge of Division Engineer G. S. Crites, to whom we are indebted for this report of the damage and the rapid reconstruction.

Make Friends of the Public

By ALTO SMITH, Trainmaster's Clerk, Flora, Ill.

WE do not receive unkind treatment at the hand of a friend. And we do not talk sharply and abruptly to a friend, else our speech would antagonize him and he would cease to be a friend. The public is our biggest potential friend, and the railroad must have the public's good will and friendship to exist, so we do not want to make enemies of the public by giving abrupt and discourteous answers to inquiries. If patrons receive discourteous treatment from one employe, they assume that it is the attitude of the railroad in general and harbor a strong ill-feeling against that railroad. A soft answer will do more to make friends for the railroad than any other thing.

Have You Any May Magazines? We Need Them!

BECAUSE of the unusual demand for copies of our May issue we have not enough to complete our files. Please, therefore, return to us all copies of the May issue of the MAGAZINE for which you have no further use. Particularly would we ask that our office folk look around the office for old copies of that issue that have served their purpose. No matter if these are a bit dilapidated, we can use them if the insides are intact. Thank you.

Send all copies to: Editor, Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Md.

Better than Fiction

MANY employes have written to the MAGAZINE telling of their keen enjoyment of Miss Stevens' stories of the visit of our Good Will Delegates to France. Perhaps some readers have missed one or more of the installments, but this should not keep them from reading—and thoroughly enjoying—the story contained in this issue. The whole narrative is a continued one, of course, but each chapter is a complete little story in itself, and the one in this issue is especially interesting because of the vivid contrast it draws between customs of the French Railroads and our own.

A world traveler recently picked up a copy of the Magazine on a dining car and was kind enough to write us that he had never read a better story of France than "Aunt Mary's."

August Estimated Shows Eastern and Month, October, Will Smother Surplus

The Actual Car Miles figures for August are not available at this writing. Averaging the Estimated Figures as given below shows the Western Lines to be one twentieth of a mile ahead of the Eastern Lines, the figures being respectively 31.15 and 31.1 Miles per Car per Day. But as a slight difference in the Actual Figures might change this, the register in the hammer design is shown the same for both sections.

Galloway-Fries Day Celebrated by Over 20,000 Veterans and Their Friends at Cincinnati

Honoring of Twice-Veteran Vice-Presidents Draws Largest Employee Assemblage in History of Railroad

IF THE day had been made to order it could not have been more beautiful for Galloway-Fries Day. The second day before had been cold and rainy throughout the eastern section of the country, making road beds, right of ways and crossings clean and dustless for the regular and special trains that rushed over them with the thousands of veterans, and other employes—and their friends and families, from all points on the System, all bound for Chester Park, Cincinnati. A warm sun tempered to a nicety the cool crispness of the unusual August weather and refreshing breezes tumbled flaky white clouds across the blue canopy of the skies.

Cincinnati's Welcome

The vanguard of the Veterans began to arrive in Cincinnati several days in advance of "the day." They were the committeemen and officers who wanted to make sure that all was ready for the big pilgrimage. But their precaution was unnecessary. Cincinnati had been preparing for the event for weeks, and from the gaily bedecked Winton Place Station and Chester Park on into Cincinnati, posters and badges and flags and smiles of welcome cordially demonstrated how well the job had been done. "Go west for your fortune, young man," said Horace Greely. "Go west, ye Veterans," say we "and let the Cincinnatians show you how to put on a really record-breaking event."

Our offices in the station at Cincinnati were early thronged with visitors that eventful Thursday morning of August 23. Business was taboo—but whoever saw a lot of Baltimore and Ohio men get together without their having a word or so to say on this, that or the other Railroad subject closest to the heart! And so they did on this occasion, though the western boys of the System, they say, have a special gift at forgetting business cares and establishing that unadulterated social contact which generally brings a perfect understanding. They tell me these men who love especially the last half of our Railroad's name, are good players of the greatest of all indoor games. If so, they all seem to win—at least the friendship and good will of each other and of the thousands of people in their Middle West country that we serve.

The Picnickers Arrive

While operating men were "chinning" at Union Station, and the traffic forces "powwowing" in the Carew Building, the steady stream of picnickers was pouring off the trains at Winton Place and through the turnstiles at Chester Park across the Street. They came from all points on the System. The grand old man from the New York Terminals, W. C. Cornell, brought greetings from the "Vets" of the Metropolis. Brothers Reed, Aiken, Bell and Egan were among the hundreds from the Chicago Division. "Daddy" Harrigan and "Jim Wardley" had a good following from Connellsville. They came with badges and bands and balloons and babies and boxes from all points on the System and found a ready welcome from the Cincinnatians, marshalled by President Howden and his fellow lodgemen.

Parkersburg sent twelve special cars; Toledo, eight; Newark, ten; Wheeling, six; Sandusky four; Akron, five; Chicago, fifteen; Garrett, two sections of sixteen cars each; Willard, fifteen; St. Louis, forty five. Baltimore had three special trains of sleepers and coaches, making a total of 156 special cars, all told.

The tickets supplied by the general committee took all through the gates of the park without charge and entitled them to light refreshments inside. And be it said here that although the facilities in the park were taxed to the limit to take care of the record-breaking crowd, there was not one bit of gouging on prices. Even the park attendants seemed imbued with Baltimore and Ohio courtesy and did their best to please.

There was entertainment for all. Orchestras, dancing and games of skill engaged the young-old folks, and the swings, racer dip, merry-go-round and other attractions were crowded with happy children. The spirit of Galloway-Fries day seemed to possess everything, even to the miniature railway trains which had been christened for the two honored vice-presidents, and to the air-plane swing, whose big boats also carried their names.

One of the best mementoes of the occasion was a blue celluloid button showing the standard Veterans emblem, and hung from it by a yellow ribbon a celluloid card, three inches wide and an inch and a half deep. On the front was the picture of a standard box car in red and black, lettered "Galloway and Fries, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 23, 1923," and the pictures of Messrs. Galloway and Fries looking out from the open door of the car. On the reverse of the card was the following bit of poetry, written by Terminal Agent C. E. Fish at Cincinnati:

Forty Years Today

B and O, B and O,
For what do we stand?
The Best and Only Railroad,
Grandest in the land.

People and traffic,
Handled with ease,
Under the guidance
Of Galloway and Fries.

Rah, Rah, Rah;
Rah, Rah, Rah!

They were messengers
Forty years ago;
Now vice-presidents
Of the great B & O.

Every employe in Cincinnati sported one of these badges and many of the visitors secured them also. They were sold at the uniform price of 25 cents, the proceeds going to defray the cost of the entertainment provided. Most people were glad to get them as an appropriate reminder of the occasion.

One of the most effective displays was on the right hand entrance to the auditorium. It was a panel about twelve feet high and contained life size bust photographs in separate frames. At the top was that of President Willard. Then from left to right in the next row were those of Vice Presidents Galloway, Shriver and Fries; next row, General Managers Voorhees, Scheer and White; bottom row, Grand President of the Veterans George W. Sturmer.

Many of the visitors brought ample basket lunches with them and made a pretty picture at the midday meal, served on tables set in a pretty grove. Others enjoyed the light refreshments provided by the Veteran hosts of the occasion or ate the special dinners served in the pavilion.

The Presentation

Two o'clock saw the band, composed of eighteen women members of the Baltimore and Ohio family at Willard, Ohio, marching into the special seats reserved for them in the auditorium. The Willard Band, by the way, made a fine appearance and a lasting impression. Their uniform of blue skirt, white blouse, red lined blue cape and tufted military cap, is trim and pretty. Their playing is good and they were generous with their selections. The honor of playing the overture was given them. Then the vaudeville show by cowboy sharpshooter, character singer and crayon artist, woman dance impersonator and gymnasts, was enjoyed by the crowd that overflowed the auditorium.

THERE WASN'T A FROWN THERE

1. Left to right: C. W. Shinnamon, Coal Freight Agent, Cleveland; H. R. Lewis, Freight Traffic Manager, Cincinnati; "Al" Todd, Office of Freight Traffic Manager, Cincinnati; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Todd. Mr. Todd is Tariff Inspector, Pittsburgh; (Continued first column, next page)

J. J. O'Donnell, general chairman of the Cincinnati Veterans committee, opened the presentation part of the program by introducing Grand President Sturmer as master of ceremonies. Mr. Sturmer reviewed the history of the Veterans Association and paid a well merited compliment to the splendid handling of the celebration by the Cincinnati Veterans. He then presented C. W. Galloway, vice president Operation and Maintenance, as one of the two honored guests of the occasion.

Mr. Galloway's Address

Mr. Galloway referred pleasantly to the encomiums heaped upon him by the master of ceremonies and laughingly said that since it was impossible for him to answer all the things that had been said about him he supposed the easiest way out was to admit them.

"You have seen from the program," he continued, "that President Willard was expected to deliver the principal address of the afternoon. I saw him in New York Monday. He had just returned from a brief trip to Europe and asked me to express his regrets at not being able to attend. I have wished so often today that he could be here—he would be so overwhelmed by the size and the complete good fellowship of this throng of Baltimore and Ohio folks. In his absence I have been asked to speak and I want to tell you a few of the things he might say if he were here."

Mr. Galloway then admitted the embarrassment he felt at being one of the honored guests on such an occasion—an embarrassment which came from his sense of unworthiness to merit such a tribute from the Baltimore and Ohio family.

"Of course," he said, "I could not but be overjoyed at such a demonstration, and I congratulate you upon the complete success with which it has been arranged. But I choose to see in it not so much a tribute of friendship to two officers, as a genuine and spontaneous indication of your affection for the Baltimore and Ohio and the principles for which it stands. This is the reason the Baltimore and Ohio has changed during the last fifteen or twenty years from the stage joke that it was, to a railroad whose reputation is second to none. It is because you are proud of it, because you have given of your best to advance its interests. The officers of the Road are not personally responsible for the success with which we are operating today. It is you who are responsible, you who build the track and repair the equipment and run the trains, who do the innumerable things that are necessary to keep our trains running smoothly and on time.

"There is a family spirit on our Railroad today which makes all the members of the family proud of it. It is the spirit illustrated by a wife I know who tries her best to advance the Railroad's interests. She says 'why shouldn't I? My husband works for the Baltimore and Ohio and I'm proud of it.'

"That is the spirit that we must never let die, the spirit that will keep this great Railroad family of ours healthy, happy and prosperous. There are, unfortunately, influences about us which would destroy that family spirit, selfish interests whose motive is money and whose purpose is disruption. Such influences constitute the worst danger facing the railroads today.

"I am extremely jealous of this old Baltimore and Ohio of ours. I am so jealous of it that no offer from another railroad could tempt me to leave it, so jealous of it that, as I have said before at other Veterans meetings, 'when you see me leaving it, you'll know I'm fired.'

"Now," he continued, "that is a pretty strong statement, and some of you may wonder why I make it, and I am going to tell you why. When I first went out on the road in a subordinate official position I was pretty green and I knew it. So I called upon many of our older men for help and advice. They could make or break me in that job, and they knew it, but I am happy to admit that they always gave me of their best. Do you wonder, then, that I don't want to leave them? Do you wonder when I say that I will never leave the Baltimore and Ohio of my own volition?

"As I needed the help of those old friends then, so the Railroad needs the help of all its friends now, for the future of the railroads is largely in the hands of the employees. All that we ask is that you analyze every phase of the question that you can and then decide for yourself if the best service and the greatest efficiency cannot be obtained under the same kind of private control under which we are now operating.

"Never fail to remember that the problems of the Management and the employees are identical, and that as between them there are few things that cannot be settled in amicable conference. The Baltimore and Ohio was one of the first railroads, as you know, to get its men about the table with the officers for the peaceful settlement of questions of wages and working conditions. The Baltimore and Ohio wants peace with all its people, and believes that it can have peace and the other good things that go with it."

Mr. Galloway then referred to the predictions that are being made in the press that the next Congress will be antagonistic to the Railroads, that an effort will be made to cut rates, to lower the valuation approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to penalize the railroads in other ways. In this connection he said:

"Some of those who say that rates can be cut without hurting the railroads claim that our operations are wasteful and inefficient; that we have too many employees and that the job could be done with fewer. Now you men are on the ground floor, you are on the firing line and see what is going on with your own eyes. And I ask you if you see men loafing, if you see things being done in a wasteful way, if you do not honestly agree with me that we are all trying to handle our jobs in the real workmanlike and efficient way that real men should. It seems to me that you can only agree with the statement of these critics of the railroads that rates can be cut and railroad valuation drastically reduced, if you agree with the premise that railroad workers are inefficient and wasteful. But I know that you are not inefficient and wasteful and hence I am equally sure that we can't operate successfully on the lower rates or reduced valuation of the property often suggested."

In concluding his address Mr. Galloway again emphasized the power of public opinion in seeing that the railroads get a square deal and urged his hearers to do their utmost to see that the real facts of the railroad situation are clearly understood. As he started to leave the platform he was recalled by Mr. Sturmer, who placed in the lapel of his coat the beautiful diamond-studded forty year service button which was the gift of the Veterans' Association. In doing this he said:

"Mr. Galloway, the Veterans who honor you with this button want you to realize every time you look at it that as they gladly helped you in your younger days on the Baltimore and Ohio, so they stand ready and willing to help you now and any time in the future that you may call upon them."

Mr. Galloway responded:

"Mr. Sturmer and friends; I will always wear this button with honor, with gratitude and with fondest recollection. I thank you."

As he left the stage he was given three rousing cheers by the entire assemblage, who rose from their seats as one man.

Mr. Fries' Address

Mr. Fries caught the fancy of his hearers at the outset of his talk by saying that if not all of the many fine things which Mr. Sturmer had said about him in his introduction were true, he certainly regretted the fact and wished that they were.

"When I look back on my forty, or, to be exact, my forty-two years service with the Baltimore and Ohio," he said, "my heart warms especially to the other veterans of the service in and about Cincinnati, with whom I spent the early working years of my life. From them I learned much and to them I feel a real debt for the unselfish help they gave me.

Predicts Record Business This Year

"It is remarkable to me that during the service of one man the Baltimore and Ohio could have progressed from a road with a gross annual income of but a few millions, as was the case when I entered the service, to a road whose annual earnings are the third largest in the world. If we can keep up for the balance of the year the splendid record of business that we made in the first six months, I have every hope that our business this year will be over $250,000,000.

"The service involved in doing a business of that magnitude is enormous, and the responsibilities of seeing that this service is properly rendered are heavy ones. Each of us has his share, and, if the service is performed as it should be, it will bring proper reward to all.

"When thinking the other day of this celebration I was reminded of other men in the Traffic Department who have been in the service for forty years, some of them considerably more than that. So I made a search of our records and found that there are 25 such men. They have all helped place the Baltimore and Ohio in the enviable position that it occupies among other railroads today and I am glad to share with them the happiness and honor of this great day, and to pay them my tribute of friendship, whether they are here or not."

Mr. Fries then read the names and positions of these men, and spoke appropriately of the service record of each. The list is printed elsewhere in this issue. In concluding his address he expressed his thanks to the Veterans' Association for arranging the celebration, and to the thousands who were taking part in it, and extended his best wishes to all. Mr. Sturmer "arrested" him as he was about to leave the platform and placed in the lapel of his coat the diamond studded button of forty years honorable service, the gift of the Veterans' Association. Mr. Fries responded:

"In thanking you for this handsome mark of long service with the Baltimore and Ohio, and of membership in the Veterans' Association, I wish also to remind you of the great service performed for the Baltimore and Ohio two years ago by the Veterans in the Business Getting Campaign. At the outset of this campaign I spoke to the members of the Baltimore Chapter. Business was poor and we needed every bit of freight and passenger traffic that we could get, and the way that the old timers turned to and helped us was gratifying indeed. Undoubtedly their work resulted in bringing to our lines freight and passengers that would otherwise have gone to competing railroads. Furthermore the good work did not stop then, and I think that the fine example set by the Veterans has been and is an inspiration to all employees of the road, regardless of their position and department, and that because of it we can count upon the active interest and support of all members of the Baltimore and Ohio family in setting forth the merits of our service to their friends and acquaintances. There are so many Veterans present here today that it gives me a fitting opportunity of expressing to them my thanks for their substantial help in getting business."

As Mr. Fries left the stage, he, too, was given three rousing cheers.

Mrs. Frank Howard

Following Mr. Fries address Mr. Sturmer introduced Mrs. Frank Howard, grand president of the Ladies Auxiliaries of the Veterans Association, who was, unfortunately, suffering from a severe cold, and whose address could not be heard in all sections of the auditorium. She spoke of the pleasure of the members of the auxiliaries in their association with the men of the Veterans Associations, and especially of their happiness in having a part in the celebration of Galloway-Fries Day.

"Too few of us appreciate the importance of the women in the homes," she said. "Even the men themselves often don't realize what a big asset they have in good homemakers. And it is to help make good homemakers, as I see it, that the women members of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans' families have banded together. How pleasant it is that all of the family is represented here today, woman and men and children, all mutually dependent on the others for their happiness.

"Most railroad men have the reputation of making good homes. How important it is that the woman should do her utmost also, in providing the comforts that are her particular care! Good food, comfortable beds and cleanly surroundings send our men to their jobs with smiles on their faces. And when they go this way they are safer men, better workmen and happier employees. Keep your men folks from worrying about little things and you will be doing a 'man's' job."

While Mrs. Howard was speaking Messrs. Galloway and Fries were called again to the platform. As she concluded two great black traveling bags were deposited near them and she handed one to each of them with the compliments of the Grand Lodge of the Ladies' Auxiliaries. Meantime Mr.

Galloway-Fries Day

Sturmer had opened the bags and discovered in each a collapsible umbrella to which he was unable to find the combination. While the crowd laughed he pointed to the bags and then said to the vice-presidents: "Big as your hearts are today, I think that these bags are of ample size to get them back to Baltimore."

Mr. Galloway, admitting his constant admiration for the ladies, made another little address to tell Mrs. Howard how much he appreciated the thoughtfulness of the Ladies' Grand Lodge, and Mr. Fries, his face wreathed in smiles and with a profound bow and elaborate flourish, added, "Me too."

And Still They Came!

It is but natural that the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary No. 1, Baltimore, should have something special to say on this festival day, so big in the life of their patron, Godfather, and—shall we say?—namesake. And so it turned out when Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, president of the auxiliary, appeared on the platform and told the audience, and, incidentally, Mr. Galloway himself, that Baltimore had not forgotten him and that the weight of that beautiful bag was to be increased by the addition of an attractive desk set.

Well, what could Mr. Galloway say and do? What would you have said and done in his place? And so did he, just smiled and said some more nice things about all the ladies, and especially the ladies of the Baltimore and Ohio, and more especially the ladies of the auxiliaries, and most especially about the ladies of "his very own little band from Baltimore."

And after all this pleasant time the curtain was rung down on further presentations, so that some would be left for the after dinner ceremonies of the evening and to make way for the clever act of the Baltimore and Ohio Safety Magician, Arthur Gans.

Both of these events are covered elsewhere in the accompanying pages.

Cincinnati and the Baltimore and Ohio Clasp Hands in Friendship across the Dinner Table

THERE was just one regret about the concluding event of Galloway-Fries Day, and that was that the twenty or thirty or more thousand folks that made merry during the day in Winton Park could not, all of them, partake of the testimonial dinner given in the evening. But, as it was, the 500 guests taxed the capacity of the dining pavilion. As it was, also, everybody on the Railroad was represented, if not present, for the dinner guests invited included all officers and department heads and also the officers of all the Veterans' Chapters. So that old and young on the Road, in active or retired service, had his proxy there, and from the tales that have been told in caboose and shop and office since the affair, and have been echoed up and down the line of the road, most of us in a sense at least, have gotten a bit of the atmosphere of friendship and good will so abundantly present. Then again, many of those who had eaten dinner in the evening and had to catch an early train, were able to come up on the balcony to take a peek at the decorations, to hear the music and to catch a glimpse of friends sitting here and there.

O'Donnell and Beel and Murphy (they are the BIG THREE of the Committee on Arrangements that handled most of the celebration job) did themselves proud in planning the windup. The speakers' table had two long "legs" at which many of the officers of the Road had a chance to tell their table companions, public officials and prominent citizens of Cincinnati, what a splendid day of hospitality Cincinnati had given the Baltimore and Ohio crowd and how much those of the Railroad appreciated it. The other guests occupied nearby tables.

The decorations were gay and attractive. Streamers hung from the ceiling, and clusters of vari-colored balloons lent a carnival touch as they bobbed to and fro in the breeze. The table flowers were especially beautiful, cannas and dahlias and gladiolas and asters in huge bouquets, interposed with baskets of wonderful fruit. Each plate had near it a peach (4000 of them had been sent by Mr. E. Oliphant, secretary-treasurer of the Standard Coal Co., Vincennes, Ohio, a good shipper friend of the Baltimore and Ohio, as his special contribution to the occasion) and many a diner, satiated with the other goodies on the table, tucked his peach into his pocket so that those at home could see and believe and enjoy these wonderful samples from the state's fruit belt.

The music was most appropriate. As the guests were being seated the Willard Ladies Band played a stirring tune. One of the ladies favored with a delightful soprano solo, and the entire assemblage sang the first verse of the Star Spangled Banner. Thereafter during the dinner, an orchestra played softly and entrancingly.

The dinner was inviting, delicious, well served and ample. It did full credit to the kitchen of mine host of the Park, and to the good taste of those in charge.

At the conclusion of the dinner the chairman of the Arrangements Committee, J. J. O'Donnell, thanked all the committeemen and others who had a part in planning the events of the day and then introduced Grand President of the Veterans Sturmer as toastmaster, who, in the name of the Veterans paid a glowing tribute to Cincinnati, its people and public officials, and called upon the mayor of the city, George P. Carrel.

Mayor Carrel

Mayor Carrel paid high praise to railroad employes who would travel such long distances and in such numbers to honor two of their officers. He said that Cincinnati had been honored in being chosen as the celebration city and that her citizens were glad to welcome the great contingent from the Baltimore and Ohio family and only wished that large numbers of them could come back to the Fall Festival being planned by the Queen City.

Vice-Mayor Fromme Morris

The next speaker, Vice-Mayor Fromme Morris, said that in a true sense all the citizens of his city could welcome the employes of the Baltimore and Ohio as fellow railroaders because Cincinnati, unusual as it may seem, owns a substantial railroad. He then traced the history of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad, which, he stated, is a $60,000,000 concern, has a $20,000,000 bonded indebtedness, and gives to the city of Cincinnati from $400,000 to $500,000 profit annually. He also said that he knew that both Mr. Galloway and Mr. Fries had for years been doing all they reasonably could to see that Cincinnati got its much needed union station, and suggested that if this station were erected as proposed, no finer monument could symbolize the interest taken in it by these two officers.

Galloway-Fries Day

Mr. D. C. Keller

Mr. D. C. Keller, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, was then called on. He said that he had always had an especially soft spot in his heart for the Baltimore and Ohio because he was born and brought up along its line. And he added that Cincinnati, too, was indebted to the road for its pioneering work in Ohio, it being the first road to run to the Queen City.

Mr. George D. Crabbs

Mr. George D. Crabbs, chairman of the Cincinnati Railroad Terminal Committee, followed with a splendid tribute to the Baltimore and Ohio and to the loyalty that had made possible the honoring of the two vice-presidents in so notable a way by the thousands of employes celebrating the day. He said that the occasion was an example of American democracy at its best, a democracy of equal privilege and opportunity that made it possible for two men to start at the bottom and get high in the councils of a great railroad organization.

General Chairman O'Donnell then made a timely announcement in regard to the early departure of certain of the special trains, and a few of the diners regretfully left.

Comptroller Ekin

J. J. Ekin, comptroller and the next speaker, was manifestly greatly surprised when called upon by the toastmaster. He confessed to 30 years' service with the Railroad and said that it was good to be present to renew youth among the ever young veterans of the "youngest old" railroad in the United States.

"If I could leave a worth while thought with you tonight," he continued, "it would be on the 'Three C's.' First comes CONTACT, which we on the Railroad must have with each other if there is to be mutual understanding. Then there is the CONFERENCE which follows, and which in turn brings CONFIDENCE. And out of these three 'C's' comes the thing which we are all striving for, the fourth 'C,' standing for COOPERATION."

Illustrating the necessity of cooperation in bringing about real accomplishment, he said:

"This brings to my mind an old, old story of an Arab who desired to test which of his three sons loved him best. He sent them out to see which of the three would bring him the most valuable present. They met in a distant city and compared the gifts they had found. The first had found a rug on which he could transport himself and others whithersoever he would. The second found a medicine which would cure any disease. The third found a glass in which he could see what was going on at any place in the world. The third used his glass and saw his father ill in bed. The first carried all three home on the rug, and the second administered his medicine and saved his father's life.

"Now the perplexity of the father, when he had to decide which son's gift had been of most value to him, illustrates very fairly the difficulty in determining what particular group is the most essential to success in conducting the work of the Railroad. Just as the old Arab's life could not have been saved without the cooperation of his three sons, just so, in my opinion, the success of the Baltimore and Ohio depends upon the cooperation of all those connected with it."

In concluding Mr. Ekin expressed his pleasure at being present at the celebration, and added his tribute to the honored guests.

President Willard's Regrets

General Chairman O'Donnell then read a letter from President Willard, expressing his regret at being unable to attend the celebration, as follows:

"J. J. O'Donnell, General Chairman,
"Galloway-Fries Day:

"Your letter of August 11, inviting me to attend the celebration at Cincinnati on August 23, in honor of Vice-Presidents Galloway and Fries, is received, and I regret exceedingly that it will not be possible for me to be present as I have just returned from a brief trip and am compelled to stay in New York.

"Mr. Galloway and Mr. Fries are well worthy of the honor you propose to pay them. To them congratulations and best wishes for continued health and happiness."

General Manager Voorhees' Regrets

Mr. O'Donnell then read a telegram that had been sent by General Manager Voorhees, who was on his vacation at Eaglesmere, Pa., and unable to be present. Mr. Voorhees expressed his keen regret and sent his congratulations to the honored officers and best wishes for a happy celebration.

General Manager Scheer

General Manager Scheer, Eastern Lines, the next speaker, said, in part:

"For weeks I have been looking forward to the pleasure of being with you to celebrate Galloway-Fries Day. The Veterans are certainly following up splendidly the reputation of the Baltimore and Ohio for being a pioneering railroad—theirs being the first big organization of the kind in the country, and the first so far as I know, to honor veteran officers of the Railroad in the impressive way they are doing it today. And this is as it should be, for I am sure that the employes of no other railroad have more loyal friends than have we in Vice-Presidents Galloway and Fries.

"Because of my long service on the Western Lines it has been a particular pleasure for me to greet the hundreds of old friends from the Northwest and Southwest Districts that I have met today. Whatever good fortune has come to me has been due in large measure to the support and help that they gave me and I say to them that I will never forget them. I have enjoyed every minute of the day; it has been one of the happiest of my life, and I wish you all good health and prosperity."

The Resolutions

The general solicitor of the Western Lines, Morrison R. Waite, chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, was then called upon. After humorously suggesting that perhaps the reason the Law Department had been called upon to handle this part of the program was because it was desired that the presentation be in "brief" form, he read the resolution prepared in honor of Mr. Galloway, as given elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Galloway expressed his deep appreciation for the many kind things said about him and then, addressing himself to the Cincinnati folks, in particular, said, in part:

"Mr. Mayor and other friends of Cincinnati: it is not long since that I spent two years in your midst, the memory of which I will always cherish. My duties take me over so much territory that I have not been able to visit you as often as I would have liked, but after this demonstration I am going to make it my business to come to see you more frequently.

"Cincinnati has certainly taken a forward step in the formation of its Railroad Terminal Committee, and I pledge you now the help of the Baltimore and Ohio in bringing this project to a successful conclusion. You are nearer today to what you want and what the Baltimore and Ohio wants you to have than ever before."

After again extending his thanks for the happy day and congratulating those who had been in charge, Mr. Galloway concluded:

"If I were a child and you were a toy
Given to me to bring me joy,
Then taken away to be replaced by a new,
I'd holler like H—'til they gave me you."

After Mr. Waite read the resolution in honor of Mr. Fries, the latter responded, in part, as follows:

In the picture are—

6. Vice-Presidents Fries and Galloway rode around the park in an old hansom, with G. W. Sturmer, Grand President of Veterans, as coachman. 7. Everybody had a ride on the miniature "Capitol Limited." 8. Superintendent Kruse, Newark Division, and Superintendent Meyers, Cincinnati Terminals, discussed such weighty problems as whether a man with curly hair ought not to take off his hat when being photographed and a man with a bald head ought to keep it on. 9. Our Vice-Presidents were honored by having the hydroplanes named for them; this picture shows the C. W. Galloway. 10. The Derby and the Caterpillar attracted the attention of the big crowds. Some of the St. Louis folks posed for their pictures while waiting to cross the tracks. 13. E. Simson, Chief Engineer of Maintenance, often found himself in a circle of admirers

"I am deeply moved by this demonstration, which disproves for once at least the old saying, 'A prophet is not without honor except in his own country.' For this is my home and these are my people and I feel most sincerely the honor paid me.

"I was glad that Mr. George D. Crabbs mentioned the rise of officers of the railroads from the most lowly positions. It is true of all general officers of the Baltimore and Ohio. It is true of almost all the railroad officers of the United States—men who have been tried under fire and not found wanting.

"I do not know any more helpful thought that I could leave with you than this, and I again thank you for the honor you have done me here today."

Then followed the presentation of a beautiful silk American flag and staff to both the honored guests. They were the gift of the combined Ladies' Auxiliaries Association.

It was especially appropriate then that

Mr. Scheer, representing the Eastern Lines, which had, in a sense at least, been the guest of the Western Lines, rose and moved a vote of thanks to the Arrangements Committee, J. J. O'Donnell, chairman, Joseph Beel, vice-chairman, T. J. Murphy, secretary, for their splendid handling of the celebration. The motion was put and carried with great acclaim by the entire assemblage.

At this time the toastmaster rose and said, "We will now close—" But he got no further, for through people crowded back of the speakers' table hustled a man with a huge box which, when opened, proved to be a magnificent bouquet of flowers sent by the management of Winton Park to Mr. Galloway.

The celebration was then closed with a beautiful, short prayer, followed by the benediction, pronounced by The Rev. William A. Anderson, resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Cincinnati.

Newspapers and Shippers Cooperated in Success of Galloway-Fries Day

GALLOWAY-FRIES Day did more than bring thousands of Baltimore and Ohio employes and their friends together to celebrate the long service records of the two vice-presidents honored. It gave to a large section of the country surrounding Cincinnati, and especially to the people of Ohio, a new idea of the fine family spirit and good will which exists throughout the Baltimore and Ohio family, and undoubtedly made them feel that a railroad whose employes show their friendly feeling for it to the extent manifested on August 23, is a safe railroad to travel on and a good one to do business with.

The newspapers in Cincinnati and in many of the cities and towns of Ohio played up Galloway-Fries Day in big headlines and articles, in attractive pictures of the two honored guests and in inspirational stories concerning their careers on the Baltimore and Ohio. It was good, interesting copy and cannot help but have given thousands of readers an impressive idea of the magnitude of our Railroad and its army of employes, and of the Good Neighbor spirit that exists not alone within the Company's ranks but also between it and its shipper and passenger friends. The clippings that have reached us from the newspapers which featured the great celebration, are numerous and interesting, and reflect great credit on J. C. Kelley, advertising clerk in the Office of the General Passenger Agent in Cincinnati, and chairman of the Advertising Committee for Galloway-Fries Day.

There were many shippers who also showed their friendship for the Baltimore and Ohio on that day. We have mentioned the gift of the 4000 wonderful peaches from Mr. Oliphant, the secretary-treasurer of the Standard Coal Co., of Vienne, Ohio. Another shipper to whom special thanks are due is the M. B. Farrin Lumber Co. which contributed largely with the use of their facilities adjoining Chester Park, for parking purposes, etc. To these and to other shippers, to the staff of Superintendent J. H. Meyers at Cincinnati, and himself, and to all others who helped make the day the big success that it was, are extended hearty thanks.

Does Railroad Labor Believe in Federal Ownership, Control or Operation?

By W. N. DOAK, Vice-President, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen before the United States Chamber of Commerce

"Does railroad labor believe in Federal ownership, control or operation? is a question asked so many times by the general public.

"My answer is NO! None of these are desirable, nor should they be resorted to except as a last resort. Many of the public have been told and many believe that the railroad employes as a whole have endorsed Government ownership and tripartite control. It is true that a number of organizations at one time declared in favor of such a plan; however, ours did not, because we found it objectionable and, generally speaking, unsound, being purely an untried theory.

"The majority of railroad employes want freedom of action and the right to deal with their employer, through their regularly constituted committees and representatives rather than being governed by boards or commissions. They prefer meeting in conference, and even though there might be an occasional disagreement or even a strike once in a while on some line, it speaks better for the industry and more good can be accomplished by handling matters as of old around the conference table."

More about the Devastated Regions—XVI

AFTER leaving the unforgettable Bayonet Trench, lunching at Verdun, and turning for our last lap of the journey through Northern France, the sun began to shine. Only our soldiers who have been there can tell you what this meant to us. Days and days of dampness, long, dreary mornings, rainy afternoons, cold nights at hotels where the accommodations were scanty—oh, how these did teach us to appreciate the glorious sunshine!

But even throughout the Devastated Region there are always surprises. Passing through one little town, whose name I cannot recall, we were astonished to see a man going about the streets, calling out in loud tones, much in the manner of our boys who yell "Extra! Extra! All about the big murder!" But this man's song was much longer, and with the noise of the bus, it was hard to distinguish what he was saying. He wore a long cape that came almost to his knees, and a little round cap.

"Is he calling out an extra newspaper?" I asked our guide.

"Ah, no," replied the guide, laughingly, "for he is the newspaper."

"The newspaper!"

"Yes, the town crier, the man who goes about and tells the news of the town and the vicinity. You see, they have no newspaper in the town, so whenever there's a bit of news, the old man goes down the streets, blows his horn, and the people run out to hear it."

War Scars

From the time that we left Paris, every town that we passed through that had been occupied by the Germans had its marks. When a village had been occupied there was little left of it, for when they had finished with it they usually fixed it so that it would be of no further use to anybody. The few houses left standing had peculiar marks on the doors, signifying the number of men and the number of horses that could be accommodated beneath its roofs.

Then there was the morning where we plucked the sweet miguel, lillies of the valley, in the Forest of the Argonne. Growing wild almost like the daisy of our country, everybody was able to get for herself a generous bouquet. This was the morning that we visited the lookout post and the headquarters of Prince Rupprecht. And it was coming down the hill that I heard of some of the most horrifying things of the war. Of course, if I should repeat them here, someone would be sure to remark, "O, the war is over. Let's forget it." And perhaps he would be right. However, if we were in France's position, it would be much easier to understand why that country demands reparation. Oh, how easy it is for Americans to forget!

How much do we know about the war save what we saw in the newspapers? How much have our boys told us? Not much, you say. Well, that is true of many cases—But there is another side of it illustrated by this case: A woman who gave herself to the service of our country during the war told me that shortly after the war had ended and those awful, strenuous days and nights were over, she felt as though she just wanted to come back for a rest. And oh, how she wanted to tell somebody about the hardships which she and those who had toiled with her had undergone. How she pictured to herself as she came over on the boat the scene that would greet her within the circle of her own family! Then she landed in New York, where she was met by her brother.

On the way home she opened up the conversation that she knew must be interesting to him. But he, not having been in the fight himself, exclaimed, "Oh, well, it's all over now; why bring up the subject?"

And when she reached home, she thought that here surely there would be someone who would understand and who would ask her something about it. But there, too, they said, "Oh, dear, what a time you must have had! But I suppose that you had lots of fun, too, and that now it's all over, of course you're glad that you had the experience. You must be tired to death. Come, let's go to a show!"

And she, who had had shows enough to last her for the rest of her life, went and sat through the performance with tears in her eyes because she could find nobody who wanted to realize what the war meant, what the suffering of the poor soldiers in France, the poor people of France, and of our own soldiers and nurses there meant. No, it was just a case of

"Imperial Caesar, dead and turned to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away."

I am not blaming anybody in particular; I say that it was the general condition in America. I know; I felt that way, too. But after having seen the things that our American girls saw; after passing over the grounds where our boys fought; after looking into the horrible, cootie-ridden, disease generating dugouts where they slept in order that you and I might still live in our own homes in peace and freedom—oh, how little, how insignificant it made me feel! How I wished that I might have been able to say that I, too, was there! But I was not! And neither were many of you who read this. But, I beg you, for the sake of your children and your children's children, go to someone who has been there and learn what it meant to those who suffered. It will give you a different attitude toward humanity. Historical accounts are all right, but only he who fought for you and yours can help you to understand. Then, go to the war-ridden section of France, if you can, before it is too late to see and to realize for yourself.

Chalons-sur-Marne and Chateau Thierry—XVII

IT was late in the evening when we arrived at the Hotel de Haute Mere Dieu (Hotel of the High Mother of God) at Chalons-sur-Marne. Here there were scant accommodations and again we were divided. But here at least we found excellent food. Never shall I forget that delicious fish—always they have fish (poisson)—and string beans. And the coffee tasted almost like that of home. That night the son of our landlord gave up his room for me, a little hall-bedroom. I went to the closet to hang up my things and I found it packed full with books. I opened something like a hole, or secret door in the wall. That, too, was filled with books. I started to push my travelling bag under the bed, but that, alas, also had books piled under it. I learned later that the young man was studying law, and I wondered how many books one needs in order to study law in France.

Magdalene and Nina drew a comfortable room, a sort of parlor, adjoining the bathroom that had no bath in it. That night a group of us joined them in their room. We got the maid to bring us enough wood—we had to pay for it, as wood is extremely scarce—to build a nice fire in the fireplace. Around this we sat until nearly midnight, writing in our diaries and nodding by the fireside. Then we were off with a bound for our own rooms, where we jumped into bed before we had time to get chilled again.

Bright and early the next morning we started out again. When we met the girls of the other hotel and told them that we had had such delicious fish for dinner on the evening before, they promptly silenced us by saying, "that's nothing; we had chicken!" We hardly knew whether to believe them or not.

(One good lady, who has been reading the account of these journeys through France, remarked to her husband: "Goodness, but those girls must have been greedy little pigs; all through the story we hear so much about food." Well, say that as you may, food was an important thing in France, and particularly throughout the Devastated Regions. Besides, when one has breakfasted on rolls and coffee spare

GOOD WILL DELEGATES ARRIVE IN PARIS

After ten days of cold rains of the Devastated Regions of France our delegates were glad enough to get back to "Gay Paree." 1. Cottage of Marie Antoinette, Versailles. In the stream that flows nearby fell Miss Lauer in the hope of being rescued by some French nobleman, hut alas! The Good Willers got there first. 2. A group of Baltimore delegates beside the River Marne. In the background may be seen the famous bridge and the houses which carry the scars of battle of Chateau Thierry. Left to right: Miss Jessie Slee, U. S. F. & G. Co.; Miss Stevens, Baltimore and Ohio; Mr. Arthur K. Peck, Lecturer and Manager for Temple Tours; Mrs. Conway, National Stamping and Enameling Co.; Miss M. Freney, Merchant's Bank; Miss Cornelia Quarles, Crook Co.; Miss Magdalene Lauer, Baltimore and Ohio and Mr. R. V. Hinds, of the Press. 3. The Bridge of Arts, Paris. 4. Delegates were delightfully received at the American Embassy. In the center is Ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, President of the American Committee for Devastated France; right: Miss Anne Morgan, First Vice-president of the Committee; left: Mrs. A. M. Dike, President of the Executive Committee in France. 5. Inside of a first-class compartment of a French railway car in which the delegates traveled. Note the hand crocheted scarf on the back of the seat. 6. Monument of the Triumph of the Republic at the Place de la Nation, Paris. 7. One of the many queer head-dresses seen by the Good Will delegates through the country places of France moments during the forenoon are not unreasonably focused on the condition of the stomach.)

Chalons-sur-Marne for one week in 1914 was occupied by the enemy. We did not see much of the town, but went through its narrow little streets, through many turns and criss-crosses before we actually were out of the city. At the little town of Epernay we stopped and were taken to the hotel de ville, or town hall, for another reception. A number of English-speaking people met us here. We were taken through several rooms of the hotel de ville, among which there was one done quite elaborately in yellow. This was the marriage room. Think how funny it would be for one of our towns to fit up a great room for marriage ceremonies by the justice of the peace. In France, you know, there must be two ceremonies, the civil and the religious.

In another large room beyond this we found a large table, on which were tall glasses sparkling with wine that resembled champagne. It was a rather peculiar speech that the mayor made that day, and yet it was interesting. He said that in offering to the American women the wine of his country, he did so not with the idea of inducing them to break the laws of their land, nor as a temptation to those who did not touch liquor, but simply to show them that France was offering to them the customs of the land and the thing that would best express her hospitality.

There were the little cakes of the country, for each section of France and almost every town has its own kind of cookie. And when we had partaken of the refreshments, there were little souvenirs—post cards and little packages of chocolates—for us to carry home. Then the chauffeurs were called in for their share of the refreshments.

Chateau Thierry

We reached the famous Chateau Thierry in time for lunch in a famous old hotel, where at some time or other, all of the noted people of the country must have stayed. This hotel was also the headquarters of General Joffre, the Hero of the Marne.

After lunch we wandered about the garden in the rear of the hotel. There we found a fountain that was not in action. A little fat, smiling cupid sat upon a mound of iron, his arms extended, his feet likewise. We decided to make a Good Will Delegate of him. Each one of us made some contribution, and when Cupid was finally ready for his photograph, there was a scarf across his lap, a coat about his shoulders, a hat on his head, a pipe in his mouth, rubber shoes on his feet, gloves on his hands, an umbrella over his head, a Good Will badge pinned on his breast and a group of admirers around him. I suppose that the little god of love had never had such affection bestowed upon him, but it made a very funny picture.

From the hotel we went down to the bridge that spans the river Marne. There we saw the bullet holes still in the sides of the houses, and in several instances, the round cannon balls also lodged therein. Across the bridge over which our boys had traveled we went and down to the banks where we dipped our hands in what once had been called the Bloody Marne. The townsfolk came out to look at us, for everywhere we went we must have seemed quite as curious to them as they were to us.

We visited the Methodist War Memorial here, just across the street from the end of the bridge. Here were all kinds of souvenirs of the war and pictures of those who had taken prominent parts therein. Most interesting was the Day Nursery, where lots of the babies waked up as we passed through the rooms. Some of them were eating, and a little pair of twins submitted to the many caresses given them by our girls. One little fellow was just getting his bath and he splashed about in the water just to show us how much he was enjoying it. Here also are classes in English, shorthand and typewriting; kindergartens for the children and sewing classes for the older girls; there are wireless telegraphy and a radiophone for the instruction and entertainment of the boys; a free, circulating library and reading room, library associations and boy and girl scout organizations, a girls social club and a war museum. There is no charge whatever made for any service rendered in this memorial; the work is financed by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Church, with the aid of the Centenary fund.

"In Belleau Wood, Where Sleep Our Dead"

It was market day in Chateau Thierry. Little stalls were erected side by side, and one could purchase practically anything here that he wished for. The array of gaily colored handkerchiefs and aprons here and there gave the market place a festive appearance. Had we had the time we could have spent a long, long time here, but we must make Belleau Wood and Paris this afternoon.

The cemetery at Belleau Wood was most interesting. An American Captain met us and conducted us to the long lines of white crosses that marked the spots where more of our boys were buried. After decorating some graves, we climbed up the hill which was partly covered with undergrowth and began to look for souvenirs. They were to be had everywhere. Captain Hart had quite an array of casques, cartridge belts, "potato masher" bombs, and other explosives, all of which he generously divided among the girls. The ground was muddy and the rain began to pour before we could get back downhill and into the buses. Once more we looked back at the white crosses. This was our last look at an American cemetery in France.

I must not forget to tell you of the Crown Prince's observatory which you saw pictured in the August MAGAZINE. The girls are sticking their heads out between the logs, which are nearly rotted away. The whole place is in a dilapidated condition. When we entered we had to go in single file, and as we went up the stairway a boy called to us, "LOOK OUT FOR YOUR HEADS," and I can assure you that the advice was timely, for a big beam threatened to do damage to anybody who stood more than four feet high without bending his head. Upstairs there were a few boards across the beams and we had to use precaution as to where we placed our foremost foot.

Montfaucon

Montfaucon is now but a hill of ruins, a network of underground passages. It is hard to tell just what really lies beneath the surface. Holes are in the ground everywhere. One can only use his imagination and shudder as he gazes out over the scene where fierce fighting took place. Montfaucon is said to date back to the 6th century. It made a fine observation post for the German Kronprinz for from there he could see the surrounding country for miles and miles. The village, frequently bombarded by the French, was reduced to ruins. Then came the day in 1918 when it was taken by the Americans, with Baltimore's own regiment, the 313th Infantry in the van, after a long siege of hard fighting.

It was late in the afternoon when we started for Paris. The car wound about the hills and valleys, once the pride of France, now torn by trench and shell-hole, strewn with barbed wire, and dotted by occasional French and German cemeteries, with once in a while a lone white cross with the inscription, "Francais Inconnu." I must not forget the village of Vaux, another scene of heavy fighting. It is said that from March to June, 1915, more than 8000 large caliber shells were fired daily by the Germans on the fort and the surrounding country. The French at last were imprisoned there underground, and the Germans captured the fort, after seven days of hard fighting. For five months they held it, then were driven out by the returning French troops.

"Gay Paree" At Last!—XVIII

IT was almost with a shout that we reached the boundary lines of Paris, where the gendarme of the octroi came out and looked to see if there was too much gasoline in the car. (You can bring into the city only the amount that you carry out. Then, too, you can bring into the cities no foodstuffs, unless you hold a license to sell them; therefore our cars also had to be searched.) Ten days in the Devastated Regions is like ten days of funerals, one after another, and the trip had been strenuous. A few days longer and our nerves would have been on an edge. It was no wonder, therefore, that Paris "looked good to us."

At the doors of the Hotel Moderne we piled out as though it had been home, for it seemed like home to us now; this was the third time that we had visited here and it felt more like home than anything. Out of the buses we came, dragging our souvenirs and our bags after us. We soon found our way to the rooms assigned us, and proceeded to line up for an appointment with the bath-tub. For the next few days the hairdresser was a busy person.

It is rather funny to go to a French hairdresser. First of all, our appointments had to be made a long time ahead. When I suggested a shampoo at seven o'clock in the morning, our big man—for the hairdresser is inevitably a man—was properly horrified at such an early hour. He did come to terms, however, and said that he would see me at eight.

At eight o'clock promptly he opened the door, bowed me in, and begged me to be seated. Then, after washing my hair, he seated me before a mirror, then took down at least a dozen bottles of various perfumes, hair tonics, etc., turning their labels around so that I could read them as he dried my hair. This finished, he began at the right, picked up a bottle, poured a generous lot of it on my hair, rubbed it in, and picked up the next. He showed me the label—Coty's l'Origan. This he also poured on and rubbed in. Then the same thing happened with the third, the fourth, and the fifth bottles, and so on down the line, each time showing me the label, letting me smell it, then pouring on a handful and rubbing it in. At last it dawned upon me that he was trying out various samples on my head. By the time that he had reached the eighth bottle I threw up my hands and cried "Enough!" He then, thinking that this was the bottle of my selection, took from his stock a fresh bottle of the same perfume, wrapped it, handed it to me and said "Five francs, Mademoiselle." I laughed until I was almost hysterical, the whole procedure was so comical. I took the bottle. It was worth it, particularly since my shampoo had cost only five francs—thirty-five cents.

From now on that week in Paris was to be a grand rush. One reception after another, teas and sightseeing, operas and shopping expeditions. Our days were filled from seven o'clock in the morning frequently until eleven or twelve at night.

On our arrival in Paris the first thing that interested us was getting mail from home. Captain Berdanneau had his hands full. Distributing mail to 61 delegates and about 10 additional persons is no easy task. Sometimes there would be little shrieks of happiness as some girl opened a letter which she had been expecting for a long time; often there would be two or three heads together to hear the news from the home town. No, we were not homesick, but I daresay that the folks at home will never know how much we appreciated those letters.

We Are Entertained

Sunday morning was spent in sightseeing around Paris. There were many things to be seen, including the Arc de Triomphe, the Tuileries, Chambre des deputies, Eiffel Tower, Les Invalides, Notre Dame Cathedral, Palais de Justice, and the Madeleine Church. In the afternoon we were free until four o'clock. From one o'clock to half-past three about seven or eight of us spent in the art galleries of the Louvre under the guidance of Mr. Arthur K. Peck of the Temple Tours. The time went by swiftly, and four o'clock found us back at the hotel, ready to enter the bus that was to take us to the Franco-American Club. There we were entertained delightfully. A musical program had been provided and there were many English-speaking people present to make our visit the more delightful. A little French officer had become quite interested in one of our girls—I sup-almost—yes, I almost wish I were at home!"

"Ah, open confession is good for the soul," declared a certain young man whose work kept him with the party, and who had suddenly appeared from nowhere.

And it so happened that the third element presented itself and—well—Romance, where art thou?

And Romance answered, "Everywhere."

Then there was the art gallery at Bagatelle. You cannot go very far in France without finding art galleries, and in Paris you seem to find them at every corner.

The Pantheon de la Guerre was the next place to be visited. This is a magnificent panorama of the war, the greatest thing of its kind that I have ever heard of. All of those who took an important part in the war are pictured here, people from every one of the allied nations. Wonderful figures they are, lifelike, as though about to step right from the canvas on which they are painted. There was some talk of bringing it to America. If this is done, it will be a treat for us all to be able to see it.

That afternoon took us to the lovely Japanese gardens, through shaded nooks and lovely walks. Japanese houses with paper walls and bamboo floors, little streams and lakes where the most glorious water lilies blossomed, and rustic bridges all formed lovely backgrounds for photographs. Then came another delightful reception, where tea and ices and delicious French pastry was served. (There was no wonder that Magdalene gained ten pounds in weight while in France.) Here we were to have been received by the Duchess of Comastra, but because of the illness of someone in her family, we were entertained quite delightfully by her friends.

I shall not go into detail about the receptions which were given to the Good Will Delegation in Paris, for there were many of them, including one by President Millerand and another by Marshall Foch.

We Visit President Millerand

The reception by President Millerand was quite formal. There was quite an array of afternoon dresses at this party; many of these frocks had been purchased in the shops of Paris, so that they were quite new to us as well as to the President of France. Now, don't laugh; the President did look them over, for I saw him. He was introduced to us by U. S. Ambassador, Myron G. Herrick. He made a delightful little speech, which was replied to by Anne Morgan (our Anne), who told him also that the city of Boston wished to present to France a key. This key was presented by "Mother" Buswell, a Gold Star Mother, who was also a member of the delegation. The key was a huge wooden one, inscribed

President Willard Visits Grave of Quentin Roosevelt

On his recent brief trip to Europe, President Willard went to see the grave of Quentin Roosevelt, the aviator son of President Roosevelt, who was killed during the war. How he was impressed by the visit is told in the following excerpt from an interview which he gave the Baltimore Sun the day following his return:

"Somehow," Mr. Willard said, "Quentin Roosevelt seemed to me to typify the spirit of American boyhood that went into the war. His youth, his traditions, his service in the aviation corps, a romantic body of men as I saw them, all touched me. I experienced a strange joy when I reached his grave and found it in a beautiful, peaceful country. It seemed fitting that he, so typical of thousands of our boys, should have fallen and died there, and I was happy that his father and mother did not remove his body. I had an indescribable feeling, one that I never had before, as I looked over that lovely, quiet land in which he lies buried and thought of him as typifying American youth in the war."

pose that I'd better not mention which one—anyway, he couldn't say a word of English, nor she a word of French. I helped them out as much as I could, then left them to their misery—or delight, I have never yet been able to figure out which. Needless to say the two made wonderful progress, despite the handicap of language.

The reception was followed by a tea, with more delicious French pastries, so that when we returned to the hotel for dinner we needed very little.

On Monday we went to Bagatelle, a lovely garden where there were acres and acres of roses, artistic trees, a lake with swans, rustic benches.

"Oh, what a place for romance!" sighed a girl from Indianapolis.

"Yes," agreed a girl from Baltimore, "the place and the time are with us, but ah, me! The third element is lacking. I—I—

"From the Hearts of Boston to the Hearts of France." Graciously the President received it and graciously he replied that along with his thanks for the lovely little gift and the sentiment contained therein, he wished to say that the doors of Boston and the doors of France stand open to each other, and therefore, no keys are necessary to gain admittance to either.

He then shook hands with each of us; the reception was over, and we walked through the gauntlet of liveried guides to our cars.

Shopping in Paris

About 9.00 a. m. Magdalene, Nina and I started out on a shopping tour all alone. Now, doesn't that sound fine—shopping alone in Paris? We thought so, so to celebrate we decided to take a taxi (at seven cents each) and visit the Magasins de Louvre. First, however, we must have some money, so we gave the driver instructions to go to the American Express Office and set out. Oh, if the home folk could have seen us then!

We had our money changed, then set out afoot for the Louvre. I acted as interpreter, and, strange to say, we had no trouble at all. Furthermore, to our great satisfaction we learned that all of the stores have English speaking guides.

We bought a few handkerchiefs and some powder; hand bags and veils. Nina bought a pair of shoes and we all bought some lovely lingerie. At twelve o'clock we found it raining very hard, so instead of going home, we went to a dear little bakery lunch room, where we had a luncheon of rolls and ham, tea and two kinds of the delicious French pastries. The bill amounted to 12 francs, or about 85 cents for the three of us.

The rain ceased and we walked on to the Galleries de Lafayette, where we had been told there were many pretty things. Here we met lots and lots of our girls bound on the same mission.

We pounced upon the blouses immediately, and each of us bought several of these. We had lots of fun with the French girl who waited on us, but she seemed quite as much amused at us. Always patient with customers, always willing to go to no end of trouble, always thanking you for a purchase, this is the French girl clerk. Some of our own American girls might learn a few points from her.

We wanted some fancy stationery. Our little clerk understood this, but it was hard to let her know just what we did want for what she showed us was not of such good quality. I said "Melior;" she brought a little better grade in the same paper; she opened nearly every box on her counter, but that was not it. She looked after us sadly but not forgetting her manners, said

"Merci, Mesdames." We went down the aisle a bit further where we found some stationery on display which was exactly to our liking. We spoke of it among ourselves—yes, this was the kind we wanted.

"Ah, oui, mesdames," and to our surprise there peeping through the stacks of stationery was this same little clerk with her sad eyes now grown happy with ours, because we had found what we wanted.

Everybody takes such a personal interest in the customer everywhere in France. Nor is it idle curiosity. The little shopkeeper is very much hurt if you do not speak a few words with him before you make your purchase, and he always says "Good day," "Good luck," or "Bon voyage," when you leave. Invariably he says it in English. It is remarkable to know the number of French people who speak at least some English. Certain it is that when I return I shall study French with a new effort, a new interest. The

THE GRAVE OF QUENTIN ROOSEVELT, CHAMERY, FRANCE

This photograph was taken by Daniel Willard, Jr., who, as lieutenant of artillery, was one of the first American officers of the Reserve Corps to be sent to France during the World War, and who accompanied his father, President Willard, on the brief European trip from which he has but recently returned French people shall not get ahead of me.

Perhaps I spoke of the clothes of the French children before, but when we saw the charming little things for children in the shops, we could not resist them, and there was hardly a girl in the party who had not some little niece, nephew or cousin for whom she could buy something. I bought two little hats. Magdalene also wanted some, but not knowing the exact size, was in somewhat of a quandary. The salesgirl, however, had a happy thought. She called a mother who was buying some dresses for the most adorable little girl you ever saw, borrowed the child, tried the hats on her, and sold them to Magdalene. Resourceful is no name for these people.

We trotted all over the store, purchasing a ribbon here, a handkerchief there, and always meeting the same courtesy. At five o'clock we took another taxi to the hotel. However, after our arrival we found that we might have ridden home on the bus for three and one-half cents each. Certainly it is not necessary to wear out shoe-leather in France.

A Visit to a French Railroad Station

LACE curtains at the windows of a railroad office would seem a bit strange to us in America, but in Paris it seems quite the thing. Certainly it is quite in keeping with the elaborateness of everything else connected with the Chemin de Fer de Paris, Lyon et Mediterranee (Paris, Lyon and Mediterranean Railroad) on which we travelled several times.

Through the goodness of Mlle. Clement, the delightful French woman whom we had met on the ship coming over, I received one evening at the hotel the gift of a number of lovely French railway posters which one finds everywhere throughout the country.

(These posters, by the way, may be seen at the office of the MAGAZINE, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, by any of our folk who may be interested.) Handsome things they are, these posters—vivid colorings, most attractive subjects, lovely scenes of Southern France—all the elements that go to make up effective advertising. To see them is to be filled with a desire to see the places depicted thereon, but one who has travelled through Southern France, along the Riviera, realizes that there is no picture that can do justice to this country.

With such pleasant reminders as a gift from the Railroad, it was, therefore, with much pleasure that I set out with Miss Martin, one of the members of the Committee, to visit the railroad station known as the Gare de Lyons.

The Gare de Lyons is quite a large station, with many doors and many attendants running hither and thither. I have never seen any railroad station employe in France stand in the same spot for any length of time they seem to be afraid that if they remain in the same place they may miss something. Their politeness, however, is interesting, save in a few cases, such as that of a certain gateman who directed us in no uncertain tones to go "A gauche! A gauche!" (To the left! To the left!) And so we went "a gauche" and finally managed to learn that the general offices were located upstairs.

And the French Station Master!

We took the little elevator, and not knowing at which floor to stop, decided to use the method by which the children decide anything. We pointed to the buttons on the side of the elevator, repeated

A Pair of Slippers

By C. EDGAR WOODEN, JR., Engineer, Norfolk and Western Railway

*A pair of bed room slippers on a pair of tiny feet,
One slipper has a little hole through which I catch a peep
Of tiny toes fast wiggling as they climb upon a chair
To ride her Daddy horseback off to dreamland up the stair.*

*"Get up, Horsey, hurry, my Mamma's coming fast, Don't let her catch us on the stairs; I think she wants to pass."
We quickened then our pace a bit, excited in the race,
And landed on the second floor with Baby in first place.*

*She dropped down on her chubby feet and legs and body fat,
Went hustling through the hallway in a steady pit-a-pat.
Of all the music in the world there's none to me so sweet
As notes which sound upon the floor from Baby's pretty feet.*

*I wouldn't trade those slippers in which there is a hole
For all the wealth of any man on earth from Pole to Pole;
I'll buy her many new ones but will lay this pair away
As evidence to look upon of Baby's happy day.*

Last Call for Contest Entries

IN the January issue of the MAGAZINE we announced a prize contest for our Baltimore and Ohio women. There were pictured also the four handsome prizes that will be given in December of this year to the four Baltimore and Ohio women who submit to the MAGAZINE the most helpful article for our Women's Department this year. The contest closes on October 31.

Already we have received a number of entries, but not nearly so many as we ought to have. We should like to have every division on the Railroad represented. Please let us hear from all of you. Whether you are the wife, mother, sister or daughter of an employee; whether you are a girl in some Baltimore and Ohio office; whether you are the wife of an officer, a matron at one of our many stations, or a car cleaner, we want to hear from you.

Just send in anything that you think some other woman might be interested in. Little stories on how to make or to do something, are especially helpful; household hints, office helps, dressmaking ideas, recipes. One of our women has sent in a nice story on home-building; another has written us about radio in the home; another about bread-making and the care of the baby; another on thrift; and still another sent a little suggestion on "The Art of Being Happy." Many have sent in recipes and household hints. Those which we have not published already will be used from time to time.

If you have already sent in your entry, you may send in others also, if you wish; there is no limit to the number which may be contributed by any one person. One young person in West Virginia has already sent in something like a dozen entries. But there are thousands who have not yet sent in one. If you have not entered yours, please let us have it before October 31.

The prizes are a wrist watch and three lovely pins, any one of which any woman would be proud to wear. Turn back to the January issue of the MAGAZINE and see the pictures of them.

There are no set rules for the contest, save that contestants must be employees themselves or be members of Baltimore and Ohio families, and that the entries must reach the office of the MAGAZINE no later than October 31.

If you are poetically inclined, you may wish to "say it in rhyme," or, if you can draw or paint, "say it with a picture." Whatever your entry may be, pictures of any kind to illustrate it will make it all the more interesting. Illustrated recipes or ways of doing things are especially helpful. For example, if you are telling how you make bread (and by the way, we need good bread-making recipes), get somebody to take a snapshot of you (or you take one of someone else) with the ingredients all ready to start. The next picture will show you mixing the ingredients or kneading the dough; the next, the bread being put into the oven, and the last, a plate of biscuits or a loaf of the freshly baked bread.

Do not think that you are expected to submit a wonderfully written article; a simple letter telling how to make or to do something or your ideas on some helpful subject is all that is necessary. Do not worry for fear your English may be poor or your spelling bad; the idea is the principal thing; your letter will be carefully edited and all mistakes (if there should be any) corrected before it is printed.

Names of prize winners will be announced in the December issue.

Send all contributions for the Women's Department to:

Margaret Talbott Stevens, Associate Editor,
Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, Mt. Royal Station, Baltimore, Maryland.

Her Name is on Our Honor Roll

OUR women readers will be glad to see the accompanying picture of Mrs.

W. H. Boyles, Jr., Alexander, W. Va. Mrs. Boyles recently played the part of a real heroine by flagging one of our trains and averting what might have been a bad accident.

On June 15, Mrs. Boyles discovered a broken rail on the Baltimore and Ohio tracks not far from her home. She did not wait for someone to tell her what to do, but went quickly to her own home, seized a lantern and flagged our train No. 54.

Superintendent Trapnell has written a nice letter of commendation to Mrs. Boyles. We are glad to show her picture in our Women's Department, for we are proud of this and the other achievements of women which are daily coming into notice.

The notation of Mrs. Boyles' bravery appeared in the August issue of the MAGAZINE.

Culinary Column

Where the Dinner Pail Contest Helped

TIMIDLY she came to our desk, the little girl who works in a Baltimore and Ohio office in Baltimore.

"What—what are these?" she asked, touching the big white sheets on which were copied the menus which were sent in last year by our Baltimore and Ohio women who entered the Dinner Pail Contest. We explained that each sheet meant a series of six menus, one for each day in the week, which our railroad women pack into their husbands' lunch boxes.

"I wonder if you would—that is—would you mind letting me have a copy of each one of these—er—you see, I'd just like to look them over."

We saw. And we realized, too, that before long our little lady will be packing a lunch kit for the young man who gave her the pretty diamond ring for Christmas. So we looked over all the menus and picked out the nicest, whitest copies and gave them to her. There was a little pink spot on each cheek as she thanked us and walked away with them and we shouted our congratulations to her.

Yes, contestants of the Dinner Pail Contest, all your entries have helped, more than you know. You will recognize parts of them in the Culinary Column from month to month.

By the way, you don't want to forget about the new contest explained in the Women's Department of the January issue of the MAGAZINE. We want one thousand entries!

The Magazine Claims These Pongee Pajamas

THE Fashion Woman was casting about for somebody who wanted to make some garment for this feature story and she wanted somebody in a hurry. The editor said the MAGAZINE must be ready by a certain date, and that meant that somebody had to do some quick sewing. Then up steps our ever gallant assistant editor, M. W. Jones, with a smile on his face and a song in his heart and volunteers to make the sacrifice.

"Aunt Mary," said he, "I'm going away on a vacation soon, and I'll need an honest-to-goodness pajama suit. If you will hustle down town and get me some goods, I'll take them and a pattern home to my wife tonight and she will make that suit toute de suite. Then our good friend, Mr. Luckey, may take the picture in any way you like it."

"Good! Fine!" we said, "but what do you want? What kind of material would you like?"

"Oh, 'most anything will do. You'll know what to get."

"Me! By all that's good and gracious, how do you expect me to know?"

But nothing could we get out of him, so at lunch time we took ourselves downtown. And the first thing that our eyes lit upon was some pongee on sale. The very thing! We got the pongee. Five yards of yard-wide material, with four frog fasteners—and there we were! We shall pass over the remarks made by the editorial staff when we brought back the goods to the office; nor shall we mention the fact that the girls of the multigraph wanted to "swipe" the material; we shall simply call your attention to the picture of the suit with Mr. Jones in it. And Mrs. Jones made the suit in record time, for this, like all our Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE patterns, was easy to handle.

Those of our folk who would like to secure this pattern may get it by sending 10 cents to BALTIMORE AND OHIO PATTERN BUREAU, 1188-1190 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y., and asking for Pattern No. 4029.

The pattern comes in the following sizes: Small, Medium, Large; and the price is ten cents. Use the coupon. Do not send your orders to the Magazine at Baltimore, but to our Pattern Bureau in New York, according to the address given.

Lovely Patterns for Early Autumn— Reduction in Prices and Quicker Service for Magazine Patterns

Make Home Dressmaking Appealing

By PEGGY

BY special arrangement with our pattern service we are now able to offer our MAGAZINE patterns at even a lower price than ever. Until now our patterns have been priced at 12 cents each, but beginning with the September issue the price will be only 10 cents each, unless otherwise stated. The price of the Fashion Book remains at 12 cents, but all patterns shown on these pages are 10 cents each, postpaid.

In addition to this, all pattern orders hereafter are to be sent to our pattern Bureau in New York, as per coupon, and our service will be quickened further by the fact that all patterns are to be sent out in First Class Mail. Thus we shall have not only cheaper patterns but quick service.

This is good news, particularly because in our new Fall and Winter Fashion Book there are so many new and practical styles. The simplicity of these patterns and the ease with which they may be handled are two features which recommend them to the home dressmaker, for not only may they be made directly after these patterns, but they may be adapted to the individual taste.

Take for example Pattern No. 4456. Instead of using expensive braiding, why not simply use the self material as a trimming with a bit of dainty hand embroidery on end and put on a simple quarter-inch velvet binding. In light weight serge this makes a lovely frock for street wear and for business. In satin the pattern would be even more elaborate. The pattern is cut in seven sizes, 36 to 48 inches, bust measure. Size 38 requires 5 yards of 40-inch material, with 1½ yards for trimming. Price, 10 cents, postpaid.

A Pretty Frock

4459. Here is a model that will look well in silk or crepe, gingham or in heavier material. The guimpe is finished separately, and the sleeveless dress may be worn without it, if so desired. It is in "slip on" style.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34 to 46 inches bust. A 38-inch size requires 6½ yards of 32-inch material. To make the guimpe of contrasting material will require 1¾ yards, 40 inches wide. Price, only 10 cents, postpaid.

A Stylish Wrap

4453. This model shows the circular effect that marks many of the new models. It is attractive for velours, kasha cloth, faille, velvet and other pile fabrics, also for fur. Brocade silk, and embroidered chiffon could also be used. For service and utility wear, double faced coatings, twill or heather mixtures would be desirable.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires 5¾ yards 40 inches wide. For collar and flounce of contrasting material, 3 yards, 40 inches wide is required for a medium size. Price, only 10 cents, postpaid.

the revers and cuffs? Then, instead of the little belt of self material, try a piece of inch-wide velvet, of a color to match the embroidery, looped on the left side. Or, instead of cuffs, gather the sleeve at its lower

A Neat and Simple Frock

4466. After all it is the simple little dress that is best and most comfortable for a little girl who likes to romp and play. The model here portrayed is attractive in chintz, cretonne, pongee or gingham. Voile or batiste could be used if a more "dressy" dress is desired.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 4-year size requires 1 $\frac{5}{8}$  yard of 36-inch material. Price, only 10 cents, postpaid.

A Dainty Frock for the Growing Girl

4477. Printed cotton crepe in blue and tan tones, with black velvet ribbon for trimming, is here portrayed. The dress is a one-piece model, over which the sleeveless overblouse is fastened. Linen would be nice for this style, or gingham. For bordered goods the dress is also attractive.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size requires 3 $\frac{7}{8}$  yards of 36-inch material. Price, only 10 cents, postpaid.

A Simple, Practical House Frock

4454. This model has convenient pockets, inserted at the joining of waist and skirt. The lines are simple and the style is easy to develop. Cretonne and unbleached muslin are here combined. Crepe in two

For the School Girl

4470. Tissue gingham in blue and white is here combined with white batiste. The binding is of blue batiste. This design may be finished in short or long sleeve style. Its loose comfortable lines are especially attractive to active girls of slender figure.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. An 8-year size requires 2 $\frac{3}{4}$  yards of 32-inch material. For sleeve portions of contrasting material  $\frac{1}{2}$  yard 40 inches wide is required. Price, only 10 cents, postpaid.

have the sleeve in wrist length, finished with the neat cuff illustrated or in elbow length as pictured in the small view.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18-year size requires 4 $\frac{1}{4}$  yards of 40-inch material. Price, only 10 cents, postpaid.

A Practical Apron Style

4408. The apron affords good protection to the busy housekeeper. It is easy to develop and to launder. It slips over the head, but may be made adjustable at the skirt portion. Dotted percale in white

Please Take the Magazine Home!

Dear Railroad Folks:

In each issue of the Baltimore and Ohio MAGAZINE there is a section devoted to the interests of the women. This is followed by a children's section. These two departments are intended primarily for the women employes of the Railroad and for the wives and children of our men employes.

Frequently this office receives letters from women who tell us that they would like to know how to get copies of the MAGAZINE. Nine times out of ten the writers are the wives of Baltimore and Ohio men. The other day we received a letter from a little girl which read:

"Please send me copies of the MAGAZINE. My daddy doesn't bring them home to me any more."

Another little girl said to us at the Veterans' picnic at Willow Grove, "MY little friend, who lives down the street, sometimes lets me have the MAGAZINE. I like to answer the puzzles and I like to read the Children's Page. If it's not too much I'd like to buy the MAGAZINE sometimes for myself. How much is it? I'll ask my father to buy it for me and bring it home like Annette's father does."

"Is your father a Baltimore and Ohio man?"

"Yes, he works in a telegraph office."

"Well, you just ask your daddy to bring it to you," we told her. "If he is a Baltimore and Ohio man he can get it free of charge, and he can bring it home to you, too, if he will."

Later the wife of another railroader came up.

"Mrs. Brown has been telling me about the MAGAZINE that you publish," she said. "Will you please tell me how I can get hold of one? I want to see the pictures that you're taking of the picnic."

"Doesn't your husband ever bring it home?"

"No. . . . Oh, yes, he did bring one home a long time ago. I think it was the April number. I asked him to bring some more, but I guess he forgot all about it."

Then came the wife of an officer who did not know that we had a MAGAZINE. On being shown a copy she turned to her husband and said: "My dear, will you please see that this MAGAZINE is brought home hereafter?" And "My dear," promised.

We are glad to have you railroad folks enjoy the MAGAZINE, but please don't forget the women and kiddies at home. Thank you!

Yours truly,

Our Little Railroaders

See what Bernice has written—
And Margaret's poem, "Night,"
And what a lot of little folk
Have guessed the puzzles right!

I'm sure I could unravel
The puzzle's answers, too—
I'll guess them now, Aunt Mary,
And send them in to you.

I-Spy

What shall we play? Oh, let's play "I-Spy,"
Let Joe do the counting and we'll fairly fly
To hide in the hay-mow or down by the gate—
No—up in the corn-crib before it's too late!

Sh-h! Listen! He's calling! "I spy Sister Lou!"
"I saw the top of her sunbonnet blue—
"And I see the ruffles of Fan's pinafore—
"She's hiding behind the old cellar door!"

He'll find us both here. Let's run for the trees!
Oh, goodness! Keep quite, or he'll hear you sneeze!
Quick! Run now! Oh, pshaw! He's caught us—oh, my!
But isn't it great fun to play at "I-Spy?"

The Story of the Man without a Country

(A Book Review)

By BERNICE KIRKPATRICK, 12 years old, Dover, Ohio

PHILIP NOLAN was an officer in the United States Army. Because he wanted to be popular, he made friends with Aaron Burr, and with him was drawn into an act of treason against the United States. He was arrested, tried and found guilty. When asked if he had anything to say, he replied "I hope I may never hear of the United States again." His wish was granted.

He was put on board a ship. He was allowed to wear a uniform but not with regular army buttons on it. For this reason he was called "Plain Buttons." He was not allowed to read any literature that told of his country, and no one was permitted to tell him anything of his home land.

One day, they were taking turns reading. When it came to his turn, this is what he read;

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said,
This is my own, my native land;
Whose heart has ne'er within him burned
As home his footsteps he has turned From wandering on a foreign strand?"
and as he finished, he rose and threw the look into the sea.

In the war, after many people had been killed, Nolan went on deck and took care of the guns. The captain appreciated his act so much that he gave him a sword, which Nolan kept for many years.

A party was given on the ship, and Nolan was invited. During the party he asked Mrs. Craff to dance and she said she would. As they were dancing, Nolan asked her if she knew anything about home, and she replied "I thought you were the man who never wanted to hear of his country again." Then she turned and walked away.

When they were in the South Atlantic Ocean, they came upon a vessel. There were slaves in it to be freed. They wanted someone to tell the slaves they were free. No one could but Nolan, who could talk two or three languages, so he told the slaves they were free. To show Nolan how glad they were they kissed his feet. Nolan realized that he would never see his country again.

On the way home, Nolan said to the boys "Always be true to your flag and stand by it as you would stand by your mother, and always be faithful to your country."

When he was eighty years old, he became ill. The doctor on the ship watched over him. One day Nolan said "My days are short." The doctor went out and when he returned found Nolan lifeless. Looking into the Bible he found these words marked "They desire a country, even a Heavenly. . . . . Wherefore, God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he prepared for them a city."

On a piece of paper in the room, Nolan had written; "Bury me in the sea, it has been my only home, and put a monument up at Fort Adams with these words on it; "In memory of Philip Nolan, Lieutenant, United States Army. He loved his country as no other man has loved her. But no man deserved less at her hands."

The story of "The Man Without a Country" was written by Edward Everett Hale.

Night

By MARGARET ANDERSEN, Relay, Md.

Slowly the sun is sinking
Out of the rosy skies,
While the birds are flying
To their nests close by.

Out come the stars twinkling
Some silver and some white,
Slowly the moon is rising
For the coming of the night.

PUZZLES

for the Youngsters

Dear Little Puzzlers:

LAST month we had any number of replies from our girls and boys, and most of the answers to the puzzles were correct. This month we have something unusual, a fine little puzzle of six letters, sent in by Christina Meliocik, 709 N. Madiera Street, Baltimore, Md. We hope that Christina will send us more of her original puzzles and that her work will cause some others of our little folk to make up puzzles for this page. The Puzzle Man will be ever so glad to hear from you.

During the last two months we have heard from the following little people, most of whom have solved the puzzles correctly; some of whom have sent in drawings, and some of whom have written stories besides the ones that you find on this page:

Hazel Barnum, Parkersburg; Robert Keller, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Marguerite Dragonas, 344 Second Street, Rankin, Pa.; Ellsworth Forney, 1838 Wikens Avenue, Baltimore, Md.; Charles Matheny, 631 W. Market Street, Washington C. # Experts Predict Consolidation of English Railways Will Save a Hundred Million a Year

By STEPHEN C. HODGSKIN, London, Midland and Scottish Railway

BY an Act of Parliament, dated 1921, it was provided that the various railway companies of England must amalgamate into four main groups. The original companies were as follows:—

- 1 Great Eastern
- 2 Great Northern
- 3 North Eastern
- 4 Midland
- 5 Great Central
- 6 London and North Western
- 7 Great Western
- 8 London and South Western
- 9 London, Brighton and South Coast
- 10 South Eastern and Chatham

With the exception of the North Eastern, all had London termini. The Act of Parliament above referred to required that the main groups should be composed of the following:—

- 1 The Southern Group, comprising companies 8, 9 and 10.
- 2 The Western Group, comprising company No. 7.
- 3 The London, Midland and Scottish Group, comprising companies 4 and 5.
- 4 The North Eastern Group, comprising companies Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 5.

Of these companies the largest were the Great Western, with 3,029 miles and the London and North Western with 2,635 miles of track.

The important coal fields of Wales and the Midlands were served by the Great Western and London and North Western, and the important industrial districts of the north by the London and North Western, Midland and Great Central Railways. The North Eastern served the ship-building districts of Tyneside. In each of these groups there are numerous smaller companies.

The magnitude of these consolidations can be realized when it is considered that the combined capital of the companies in group three is five hundred and twenty-seven million pounds sterling, and in group four, three hundred and forty-eight million pounds sterling, or at the normal rate of exchange, approximately two billion six hundred and thirty five million and one billion seven hundred and forty million dollars respectively.

It has been estimated by experts that economies of at least one hundred million dollars per year will be effected by the consolidations, and that better service will result. It is also noticeable in the appointments which have been made in the executive and operating departments of the consolidated railways, that many men who have come up through the ranks have been promoted. Considering the many problems involved, we are told that the companies have settled down in their new status in remarkably short time, and that service, etc., is practically normal.

A new departure since the consolidations is the introduction of many cross country routes, not previously available, which, we are advised, have proved popular with the travelling public.

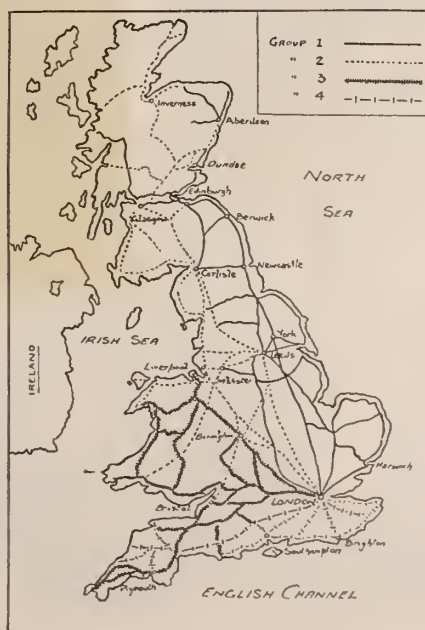

Electrification is being given careful consideration, and it is said that preparations are being made to electrify the London suburban lines. It is further reported that the entire line from London to Brighton (a famous seashore resort) will be electrified, the distance being 60 miles. A new condensing turbine electric locomotive has been constructed for the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, and the London and North Eastern has built an electric locomotive designed to pull a 450 ton passenger train at an average speed of 65 miles per hour.

Of particular interest to Baltimore and Ohio operating men will be the following figures covering the regular runs of some of the fastest British passenger trains:—

Darlington to York, 44¼ miles in 43 minutes.

Paddington to Bath, 106⅞ miles in 105 minutes.

Aylesbury to Leicester, 65 miles in 65 minutes.

York to Darlington, 44¼ miles in 45 minutes.

Paddington to Bristol, 118¼ miles in 120 minutes.

VAN CAMP HARDWARE & IRON COMPANY
Indianapolis, October 10, 1922

MR. E. N. KENDALL

D. F. A., Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
Newark, Ohio

Dear Sir:

We feel that we must take this opportunity to thank you for the real cooperation and assistance you have given us with reference to the car of pipe, P. R. R. 345297 from Zanesville, Ohio, consigned to ourselves at Indianapolis.

This pipe is urgently needed at this time and when we received your telegram of the 7th, advising that the car was in the shop, we were very much concerned as to the delay that would be occasioned there. You advised in your telegram that you were endeavoring to rush and that you would advise us further as soon as possible. We were agreeably surprised this morning to receive your later telegram, advising that the car had been repaired and forwarded from Newark the evening of the 8th. That certainly is what we call "service" and we want to assure you that that kind of service and co-operation is very greatly appreciated.

Of course you can understand that we, as jobbers, are vitally interested in receiving the most expeditious service possible on merchandise that we have in transit and we don't hesitate to tell you that it is the railroads that furnish us with the cooperation and give our shipments the attention such as you have given this car that we want to favor in routing our shipments.

Of course we trust that we will not have to annoy you very often requesting information such as this, but it surely does make a favorable impression with us to receive the information as promptly as we did from you. You may rest assured therefore that the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. will be remembered in the routing of our future orders. Again thanking you for the assistance you have rendered us in this instance, we are,

Very truly yours,

VAN CAMP HARDWARE & IRON CO.,

Governor Cornwell Addresses Green Spring Employees at Second Annual Picnic

THE second annual picnic given by the employes of the Timber Preserving Plant at Green Spring, W. Va., took place in the lovely grove adjacent to the Plant on August 4.

An all-day picnic it was, with loads of good things to eat, a merry-go-round for the kiddies, baseball for the "big boys," speakers, a swimmin' hole, a brass band, soft drinks, ice cream and everything that could possibly make for a real, old-fashioned day of pleasure.

There were folks from Cumberland, Old-town, Ridgeley, Paw Paw, Baltimore, Piedmont, Patterson Creek, Levels, Springfield, Romney, Okonoko, Mt. Airy, Washington, Berkeley Springs and Roanoke, Va., and Pittsburgh. Although rain threatened, none fell, and the day was an ideal one for a picnic. Division Superintendent Brown had arranged for Train No. 2 to stop for the benefit of those who came from the vicinity of Cumberland.

With the games and fun of the morning, everybody was ready for an early dinner. Chicken galore, devilled eggs, olives, salads of every description, luscious ham, many varieties of cake and delicious lemon pies furnished a meal that could not be forgotten. Rev. L. G. Bridgers pronounced the blessing and everybody "fell to."

When dinner was nearly over, Governor Cornwell, now Company's Counsel, arrived on the scene. He declared that he had dined already, but he was still able to do full justice to a generous slice of lemon pie. The boys of Romney who furnished the fine in the upper and lower pictures may be seen a few of the hundreds that gathered at the park at Green Spring on August 4, with the tables all set, full of goodies. Note the number of little folks who also enjoyed themselves. The center picture was taken on the grandstand. In the back row are the members of the Romney Concert Band; on the front row, left to right are: Mrs. Shaffer, assistant to Evangelist Jennie Smith; General Foreman E. M. Stottlemeyer, Railroad Evangelist Jennie Smith, Governor John J. Cornwell, "Aunt Mary" of the Magazine, and E. E. Alexander, Supervisor of Timber Preservation, who headed the general committee for the picnic music for the entertainment, gathered about on the platform; Miss Jennie Smith, railroad evangelist, came forward; Governor Cornwell took his place on the speaker's stand; E. E. Alexander, plant supervisor, adjusted his big cigar at the proper angle, and the afternoon's program was begun.

Mr. Alexander introduced Governor Cornwell as "Hampshire's Pride." "Hampshire County may not have its good roads and bridges," he declared, "but it has its John J. Cornwell."

"I am just as much of an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio as any of you here," declared Mr. Cornwell, "and in some respects I work quite as hard as you do."

He then told of the establishment of the Tie Plant at Green Spring and of the part that he had in the settlement of the question of location.

"But I have another pleasure in coming here," he went on. "This is my native county, the place where I helped to manufacture cross-ties in the woods, helped to load them and to haul them nine miles to French. I handled many of them and, if put to it, I might be able to handle them yet. You can never tell what these old fellows can do until you give them a chance."

Mr. Cornwell then told of a story of an old negro in Georgia, who had suffered with rheumatism all his life. One day some of his friends took "Pappy" for a hunting trip. By and by the dogs were turned from their chase by a bear, who began chasing them. The other negroes took to their heels, forgetting all about "Pappy." All out of breath they arrived home. Then they thought of the old man.

"Where is 'Pappy?' Has anybody seen 'Pappy?' they inquired."

"Oh, yes, 'Pappy's' done been heah long time ago," declared a member of the family, "why, 'Pappy' he come home wid de dogs!"

The governor then spoke of the ideal location of the grove at Green Spring for a general employes' picnic.

"Miss Jennie Smith says that this is the ideal spot," she said, "and she has been traveling on the railroad for 37 years. She ought to know. I am for it with both feet. I hope that next year will find 10,000 people here to enjoy your picnic."

He told of the benefits that may be derived from picnics, of how people are brought together to enjoy reminiscences, to eat together, and of how it brings to our minds the good things of life and makes us better men and women. He spoke of his boyhood in West Virginia.

"The first silver dollar that I ever had and the first one that I ever saw, I earned when I was about ten years old, at French Station. These were the days of 'shinplasters,' and all of our money was paper money. While I did not earn this money directly working for the Baltimore and Ohio, I got it from Baltimore and Ohio men.

"I was playing around the station one day when I saw a private car coming. An officer stepped out. A man climbed up a telephone pole and hitched on a wire. Then some men came out and they went fishing. One of them called out to me, 'Son, can you catch me some frogs?'"

"I took the can, 'I think I can,' I replied, for if there was anything that I knew that I could do it was to catch frogs. I soon had the can filled up heaped and pressed down. Then the man gave me a big silver coin. If he had given me the whole of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad then I would not have been half as rich, for I would have had a lot of trouble on my hands.

"Then the agent told me that it was the vice president of the Railroad that had given me a dollar. He laughed at my consternation and said that the man was Vice President Spencer.

"The Baltimore and Ohio today is doing a good job with the public and with its employes. At the first Board meeting which I attended in 1921 the Railroad had not earned its operating expenses by several hundred thousands of dollars. The two meetings which followed showed the same situation. It was a dark picture. I couldn't imagine what the Baltimore and Ohio was going to do.

"Then it was that President Willard gave us a ray of hope.

"WE'LL JUST HOLD OUR BREATH," he said, "THINGS WILL SOON BEGIN TO PICK UP." So we did just that, and things did 'pick up.'

"Yes, you have had fair treatment by that wonderful man at the head of the Baltimore and Ohio, Daniel Willard!

"The success of the Railroad depends largely, if not solely, upon the men who do its work, and you can't wreck the Baltimore and Ohio without wrecking the 70,000 employes and their families. Neither can you advance the success of the Railroad without advancing the success of these 70,000 employes.

"Today I overheard an employe criticizing someone for calling him down for being one minute late at his work. Suppose every employe would be just one minute late at his work. It would mean the loss of 70,000 minutes, or equivalent to more than 1,000 men each losing over an hour's work.

"You have heard people say that Wall Street owns the Railroads. The Baltimore and Ohio is owned directly by the 35,000 people who share its stock. Many of these are employes and of these a great number are women. And for four years they have had no dividends. Practically every man who owns a life insurance is financially interested indirectly in the railroads, for life insurance money is, for the most part, invested in railroad bonds. The railroads, therefore, are not owned by a few rich people, but by rich and poor alike, scattered all over the country.

"I am happy to 'come home' to participate with you in this gathering."

Then Governor Cornwell spoke of the sadness of the occasion of the death of President Harding and suggested that all heads be bowed for a moment in memory of our mourned president, that we pray for the comfort of his bereaved widow, and for the preservation of the government in its liberty, which is so dear to us.

Mrs. Lula Shaffer, wife of Engineer Shaffer, Pittsburgh, and assistant to Miss Jennie Smith, sang several railroad songs, including one entitled, "Can I Live and Be a Christian?", after which Supervisor Alexander introduced Miss Jennie Smith, herself, railroad evangelist for 37 years, and well loved and honored by all of "her boys."

Miss Jennie, now in her 81st year, has just recovered from a serious illness. However, she still appears in good physical condition. She made a stirring speech, and although her listeners might have had to crowd a little closer than they used to in order to hear her, her words had lost none of their old-time enthusiasm as she spoke of the God whom she loves.

She told of her illness, and added, "but I got over it, and I have come back for a while longer to look after 'my boys.' I cannot tell you how thankful I am to be able to be with you."

She told of the old picnics, and the last one of them in which 8000 persons were present and in which under her preaching there were 11 conversions.

"My work is almost done," she said. "I am now so anxious to see everybody put on the whole armor of God and to work for Him. The fields are white and the harvesters are few. If you are living for Heaven, life is worth while. Do not neglect your soul. I praise God for every single day since I have given my heart to Jesus.

"May God bless and protect every one of you."

At the conclusion of Miss Jennie's talk, Rev. L. G. Bridgers carried out Governor Cornwell's suggestion, and had those of the audience stand with bowed heads in memory of the late President Harding. Following this, he gave an interesting talk on the development of spiritual man and social man.

Supervisor Alexander next introduced "Aunt Mary" who told of her journey to France, of the French Railroads, and of the visit to the devastated lands of the North.

The little folk took advantage of the swings and merry-go-round; a baseball game was played in which the Cross Tiggers showed the folks down the road at Paw Paw that they can play ball; the Romney Band went on playing, to everybody's delight; some of the boys braved the muddy stream and went in swimmin', and the women folk got ready for supper.

Such a supper as it was! Everything that they had had for dinner and a whole lot more. Everybody had his fill and everybody was happy. The trucks, Fords, Buicks, and Rolls-Royce's—some horse drawn and some otherwise—began to take Brother Pascal was seen taking a flock of chickens on a ride through the "Coal Mine."

Brother Riley tooted his horn and gave everybody notice that if anything was to be started, he was ready to take the lead.

Trainmaster Mewshaw reluctantly posed for his picture, but we got him just the same; General Manager Scheer and Chief of Welfare Wood smiled so broadly before the camera that when the film was developed we unfortunately could find nothing but the smiles. The film was light struck—presumably it was sunshine.

Who was the fat man standing before the "hot dog" counter?

Boy, page Engineer and Mrs. Sterling and give them a good meal for a dollar at the next picnic. Ditto everybody.

"Oh," sighed a certain sister, "what lovely flowers! I'd give anything to have that fern!"

"Madame," said a waiter who was passing by, "you may have your choice of the plants at $2.00 each."

"Oh, indeed? Well, I don't know as they're so pretty after all. I could give these folks some pointers about raising ferns."

The busiest man was Brother Pascal; the most silent people were the members of the Mt. Clare Band. We'd like to hear more from them. The funniest thing was Brother Bowers' introduction of Aunt Mary. It had to be heard to be appreciated. Most conspicuous for his absence was Grand President Sturmer; we learned that he had an invitation to dinner in Cincinnati on that day.

Then Came the Eats

At noon they all gathered together for dinner. At a picnic, you know, folks eat dinner in the middle of the day—real dinner, it is, too. Some were at the big pavilion, some at the cafeteria, some at the "hot dog" stand, and many spread out on

Baltimore Veterans Enjoy Fine Outing at Willow Grove Park

PICNICS may come and picnics may go, but the picnic of the Veterans at Willow Grove will long be remembered by those who attended. The day was remarkably fine, not too much sunshine and just enough breeze to make a person feel like living. Besides, there was Sousa's Band, which in itself was enough to make anybody want to hold a picnic at Willow Grove.

Boys and girls soon found the boat lake and all those between seven and seventy were to be seen riding on the scenic railway.

It was estimated that there were at least three thousand Baltimore and Ohio folk present. In the second section there were 781 people, including the babies, of which there were about 30. Four trains were needed to carry all of them, and there is no wonder that Brother Allen spread out his chest when he posed for a picture.

The shop band from Mt. Clare was there in all its new airs. Two of the boys threatened to make a certain old lady dance before the day was over, but I noticed that they did not put their threat into execution.

General Manager Scheer was there, all dressed up in white flannels, and even Secretary Riley, in all his glory, could not outshine his chief.

We saw lots and lots of employes who are not yet Veterans, but who have hopes of becoming members of that wonderful army.

Sister Lewis was there, holding up Brother Bowers in some kind of an argument. When it comes to argument and oratory these are well matched; both are spellbinders.

Conductor Marvel was on the job, enjoying himself to the utmost, with a big crowd of his friends along with him.

"Bob" Burnette, when asked whether he preferred Mt. Clare Shop Band to Sousa's, declared that he liked them both; he was neutral.

It is true that some of them began eating at the moment that they left Baltimore and did not stop until they got back home. What was the name of the good brother who ate two whole chickens and a lemon pie on the second section—of the train, not the pie—before we got to Philadelphia?

The Concert

Most impressive of all was the magnificent concert given by Sousa's Band. At 2.30 p. m., the Veterans and their families besides many others, gathered beneath the canopy of that immense auditorium to see the famous leader conduct his nationally famous orchestra.

The music was superb. One woman expressed it thus: "It is as if all of the beautiful music of the world were being played on one heavenly instrument."

Sousa stood before us in the dignified uniform in which we were accustomed to seeing him, a bit older looking than when we saw him last, a little balder, perhaps, but still there was that magic of music "in his fingertips" that proclaimed that none of his old-time inspiration had been lost. The audience arose with one accord as, in memory of the late President Harding, the music of that ever beautiful hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee" seemed to enter our very souls and we were in the presence of Death.

Followed then a lovely melody of national airs and old songs, including Maryland My Maryland, Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground, Carry Me Back to Old Virginia, Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground, and the Star Spangled Banner.

Here and there were those who followed, humming along to the old strains. - Then came a xylophone solo, which was encored again and again, and Sousa himself bowed to the artist.

Sousa's music was the greatest treat of its kind that has ever been provided for a Veterans' picnic. The arrangement committee is certainly to be congratulated.

The Addresses

At the conclusion of the concert Veteran G. A. Bowers pronounced the invocation, which was the beginning of a series of short addresses, and which, we might add, was one of the most impressive little prayers that we have heard for a long time.

President Allen, the first speaker, called attention to the efficient manner in which the thousands of people here assembled had been handled, through the courtesy of the Railroad and of the officers of the Baltimore Division. There was not a hitch in the schedule, and although it had been necessary to run four sections instead of three to accommodate the people, the cars were secured, even though it meant the use of a number of them from the Western Maryland Railway.

President Allen said further that he knew that the Veterans and their families, as well as many others among our employees who were present, would gladly show their appreciation by keeping up with the business getting idea; by recommending the Baltimore and Ohio to the travelling public, and by telling shippers the merits of our splendid fast freight service.

THE "ANNUAL" OF THE A. P. R. FORCE WAS A HOWLING SUCCESS

G. A. Bowers followed with a stirring talk on cooperation. The basis of his talk was the subject of "Good Neighborliness," not alone among the people who live along the lines of our Baltimore and Ohio, but also among ourselves, as employes of the same Company.

General Manager Scheer then gave an interesting talk on Car Miles, and he promised that there would not be many times in which he would not be smiling on the car miles page of the MAGAZINE. He spoke further about the splendid performance of our Capitol Limited, saying that this fine performance could not be accomplished without the cooperation and support of every trainman, shopman, and everybody else connected therewith. He, too, emphasized good neighborliness.

"Aunt Mary," of the MAGAZINE, after a most elaborate introduction by Brother Bowers, told of some of her experiences in France with the Good Will Delegation.

Chief of Welfare W. W. Wood followed with a short but inspirational address on what the Baltimore and Ohio is accomplishing in the matter of making other railroads "sit up and take notice."

Officers and Employes Hobnob at Auditor Passenger Receipts Office Fourth Annual Outing

GIRLS, Girls of all kinds. Short, thin, stout and tall, but all pretty! This was the impression we received when we boarded the special cars at Paca and Lombard Streets at noon on August 4 to attend the Fourth Annual Outing of the Welfare Association, Auditor Passenger Receipts Office. We arrived at the appointed place about 11.50 a. m. Mrs. C. W. Lewis was there waiting for hubby. At noon he came, when we had almost given him up. It developed that he had stood on the opposite corner of the street looking for his better half for some 15 minutes. Imagine it! Just a short fifty feet separating them and they could not see each other. Truth is surely stranger than fiction.

Chief Clerk G. William Jentner came under the wire at 12.10 p. m. Evidently he requires a few lessons in Baltimore and Ohio standard train practice. Of course he had an alibi! Some last minute work to be completed, some papers to put away and desks to close, etc.

We reached Miller's Park, Dundalk, about 1.00 p. m. and it being considerably past the usual lunch hour of many of our number, the sandwiches, coffee and ice cream disappeared almost faster than C. R. Purdy, who was on hand ahead of time, could provide them.

Among the officers present were Assistant Comptrollers Owens and O'Malley, Auditor Passenger Receipts Poumairat, Assistant Auditor Passenger Receipts Grice, General Freight Claim Agent Glessner, Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts Lambert, and Assistant Auditor Merchandise Receipts MacCubbin. Vice-Presidents Shriver and Galloway and Comptroller Ekin also spent an hour or two with the picnickers during the afternoon.

After lunch had been disposed of, races were run and suitable prizes awarded. The winners were as follows: Potato Race, William E. Machin and Walter L. Seems; Ladies' Foot Race, Miss Mildred Eberhart; Fat Ladies' Race, Miss Lee Adele McNally; One Foot Hopping Race, Earl B. Hoppman; Children's Race, J. B. Zimmerman, Jr. Watermelon Contest, Earl B. Hoppman; Bowling Contest No. 1, A. Thurman; Bowling Contest No. 2, Mr. Swartz.

The only near casualty occurred during the Fat Ladies' Race, when Miss Clara E. Meredith, at the end of the run, tripped and lost both her French heels. However, Mr. Grice proved himself to be an excellent shoemaker and the damage was quickly repaired. Mrs. Grice, who was looking on, remarked that she could not understand why it should be necessary for her to send her shoes to the shoemaker. We presume Mr. Grice had not shown any indications of his aptitude in this direction near home—and won't! Approximately one net ton of youth and beauty started in the race, but 400 pounds of it fell by the wayside when Miss Helen Kirkwood made a false start and calmly walked over to the side lines and sat down.

We expect that the Magazine Among Ourselves Department will contain a very full and accurate description of at least TWO of the fair sex who were at the picnic. Why? Ask Mr. Warwick.

Mrs. Price was on hand to help the fun along. But—we did not see hubby. Miss Helen Harte was there all smiles. She assisted the photographer very materially and our thanks are due her. She had her own camera along too, running opposition to the writer.

Dancing was one of the important parts of the program, music being furnished by William F. Grund, Mount Clare Printing Department and other musicians. C. F. Grund is president and W. L. Thomas secretary-treasurer of the association and these gentlemen certainly had a busy time looking after the guests, all of whom thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The attraction of the afternoon was the manoeuvres of five aeroplanes overhead. However, no one was "in the clouds" during the picnic, except the aviators and two or three happy couples whose names we will not mention.

Mr. Hoppman definitely cinched his right to his name by winning the Hopping Race. Mrs. Lewis again showed her ability as a dancer, while Mrs. Jentner said the only reason she did not dance was because no one asked her. This, however, was an excuse only. We know. We asked her and she turned us down cold.

About 200 people enjoyed the afternoon's outing, which was voted a grand success.

Greetings from the Charles W. Galloway Auxiliary No. 1

By MRS. C. W. LEWIS, President

THE summer is passed and we are now going into our fall and winter meetings.

The past few months have been most pleasant and interesting, but I think we are all somewhat tired, particularly after the Cincinnati Anniversary with its jollification and loss of sleep. Everyone says it was a wonderful affair.

During the summer we had the measuring party on the lawn at the home of the writer. The lawn was lighted with Japanese lanterns and punch and cake was served. Grand President Sturmer and Sister Sagle got the prizes for the largest waists.

Our August meeting was held at the shore of Sister Stier on Middle River, busses leaving Baltimore and Ohio Building and returning to that point. Everyone carried a box lunch. Rowing, croquet, bathing and a good old time crab feast occupied the day. Our vice-president, Mr. Galloway, Grand President Sturmer, Past President Wall and a large number of the husbands of our members were present.

The Versailles picnic was another enjoyable affair, the whole Auxiliary being entertained at a chicken dinner.

The Galloway and Fries' day at Cincinnati was the climax of a most enjoyable summer. The Auxiliary had three steel Pullmans for members and their husbands only, and from the numerous requests that were made to go in our party, we could have filled at least 10 Pullmans, but we could only take care of our members and husbands. Horns, caps, false faces and the "old time all day candy suckers" were provided. Serenading at the various stations with the men in various disguises was a feature where even the ladies could not recognize their own husbands.

The Auxiliary presented Mr. Galloway with a handsome bronze engraved desk set.

The many courtesies extended to our Auxiliary are acknowledged and greatly appreciated, especially the two and one-half hour sight seeing trip in Cincinnati given us by Mr. Galloway. The 21 taxies in line looked like a parade. We visited the Rockwood potteries and had a wonderful time, arriving home tired as could be.

The solicitude of our General Manager Scheer to see if the babies on the train had sufficient milk, was a typical example of the thoughtfulness of our officials.

We expect to have in our winter program things that will be both educational and social and of a lasting benefit to us all.

The Auxiliary is recognized as one of the leading bodies of women in circles outside of the Railroad and has been and will become even a bigger asset to our Company.

I will close sending you greetings from the C. W. Galloway Auxiliary and trusting you will have successful meetings this fall and winter. Our attendance has averaged around 50% during the summer, which is an average that is very seldom attained in any organization and most gratifying to the writer.

George M. Shriver Ladies' Auxiliary, Martinsburg, W. Va.

Correspondent, CLARA McDONALD TAYLOR

WE are glad to be able to show you some of our Cumbo people, in our columns this month. In the large group, there are three good "catches" for the girls. They are a fine lot of Baltimore and Ohio employees. In the smaller group, the four young men are well chaperoned by two old timers with them.

Because of the intense heat, the attendance at our Auxiliary meeting on August 9, was small.

The death of three of our sisters, Mrs. Walter Trout, Mrs. Ambrose and Mrs. Clark, was a sad blow to all of us. We shall miss them at our meetings as they were always thoughtful of others and ever ready to bear their share of others burdens. Our sympathy goes to the bereaved families.

Our Veteran brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Kilner, have been seriously ill, but we are glad they are able to be out. Mr. Kilner has resumed his duties at Cumbo.

Our past president, Mrs. Burkhart, has returned from the K. of P. convention at Wheeling. Mrs. C. H. Lowery also attended.

I wonder how many of our readers have been following Aunt Mary in her travels through France? The wonderful thoughts she has brought back to us from that stricken land are worthy of our careful study. I would like personally to thank Aunt Mary for the many fine articles she has given us and for the message she has brought back to us from France.

Miss Merriken Pleases "Her" New Passenger

EVEN the most experienced traveler will sometimes leave a valuable package, bag or umbrella on a train or in a station, and for this reason the "Lost and Found Department" of a large railroad is an important one. Another instance of the service rendered by this department, which on the Baltimore and Ohio is under the jurisdiction of the General Baggage and Milk Department, has just come to our attention.

A lady patron leaving Philadelphia for Baltimore, left a fur neck piece valued at $450.00 on a seat in the Philadelphia station at 24th and Chestnut Streets. On arrival in Baltimore she reported her loss to Miss Mabel Merriken, Camden Warehouses, through whose efforts she had been induced to use the Baltimore and Ohio. Mr. Dugan's Office promptly made inquiry and located the fur piece, which was returned to Baltimore and to the hands of its delighted owner, without delay.

In commenting on the prompt attention given her, our patron wrote:

"The fur neck piece which was left in Philadelphia was returned to me and I want to thank you for the courtesy extended to me by those with whom I came in contact. The Baltimore and Ohio officers and employees, even down to the porter, are ever kind and courteous and it is a pleasure to travel by your road. The fur piece was new and worth $450 so its return was fully appreciated. I again thank you."

The story would be incomplete without some comment on the quietly efficient part played by Miss Merriken. When our patron advised her of the loss, she personally went to the Baggage Department and started the tracer going. Miss Merriken is in the employ of Manager J. C. Brown, Camden Warehouse and Blue Line Transfer, and through her efforts the lady above referred to—although a regular patron of one of our competitors—was induced to use our line. Miss Merriken has been instrumental in diverting a number of passengers to our line and we are glad to record the appreciation of her efforts by the Baltimore and Ohio.

Marietta Meeting for Better Understanding

By E. N. KENDALL, District Freight Agent

ON August 2, the members of the Farm Bureau, Washington County, and Marietta, Ohio, Chamber of Commerce, held a picnic at Fleming Experimental Farm, about ten miles from Marietta. Nearly three thousand people were present and the entire landscape was black with automobiles and people who had driven to the farm from many distant points. It had been arranged that addresses would be made by General Superintendent D. F. Stevens and Freight Traffic Manager H. R. Lewis. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Lewis was called away on the morning of the gathering, and was unable to be present.

General Superintendent Stevens made an excellent address on the general railroad situation, and he was given a hearty welcome and his remarks enthusiastically applauded. Superintendent H. G. Kruse was present.

President W. T. Smith, Marietta Chamber of Commerce, delivered an address on the subject of "Community of Interest."

Occasions such as this bring about a closer relationship between the agriculturalists, the industrialists and the railroads, and we hope to see more of them.

The Mercury Went Down

Little Girl (rushing into Doctor's office): Please, Doctor, come at once to father. Mother's taken 'is temperature an' it's gone down.

Doctor: That's all right, my dear—that's splendid.

"Tain't all right; it's gone right down. 'E's swallowed it."—Punch.

Welfare Association, Auditor Freight Claims Office, Holds Second Annual Outing

A FEW days before "the big date," Mr. English, president, Welfare Association, Auditor Freight Claims Office, called the MAGAZINE Office by telephone and said that his association would hold their annual outing on August 4, and that he would like to have a representative attend. It's YOUR MAGAZINE and naturally we take pleasure in doing things to please you and in telling stories of your doings and so, of course, we accepted. The Editor looked round; "Tag," said he, "you're it,"—and we were glad we were "it" when we saw the good time everyone had and the good feeling that prevailed throughout.

Four special cars left Lombard and Paca Streets at noon, with about 200 members of the Association, their families and friends. Unfortunately the writer could not be in all four cars at once and so only knows how everyone enjoyed the trip in our car.

Did you ever hear John McCormack sing? His understudy, in the person of Mr. O'Toole, was on board. First he came through the car demanding fares; however, everyone had a ticket so unfortunately he could not fulfil his desire to put someone off. He then asked if everyone knew a new song entitled "Yes, We Have No Bananas." Remarkable as it may seem everyone knew it, and so under the leadership of John's understudy a musical program was commenced, the voice of the leader drowning even the noise of the flat wheel under our car. The United Railways had their latest pamphlets entitled "Smile" in the cars, and everyone obeyed their request. Rattles and horns were furnished for the little children—and the big ones, too, and there was no lack of noise.

Arriving at Miller's Park, Mr. English instructed everyone that the most important event would now commence, and we all did full justice to the sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and other good things furnished by Mr. Bopp. In the Park we found Assistant Comptroller Deverell, Auditor Freight Claims Schutte, Assistant Auditor Disbursements Hill, General Claim Agent Glessner, Chief Welfare Department Wood, Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts Lambert, Assistant Auditor Merchandise Receipts MacCubbin and many others. They all took part in the fun and everyone enjoyed it judging by their continuous smiles.

After lunch the baseball game between married and single men started. There's an old saying that the Lord takes care of his own, and he did on this occasion. At the end of the third innings the married men were getting decidedly the worst of it—and the rain started! It came down in torrents for about fifteen minutes and there was no more ball game!

One of the "heavy" reasons you should have been there if you were not, was Miss Lillian Springer. Her weight? We cannot even guess it, but she is smiling and happy all the time so why let a little thing like a few hundred pounds worry us?

Nelson Thomson, walking across the ball ground, was hit on the nose by a ball; so far as we could learn this was the only "bloodshed" of the day. If Nelson had brought his wife with him, it wouldn't have happened. Mr. Hitchcock, secretary to Mr. Wood, was on hand with his wife and daughter. "Who's boss in this house?" said Mrs. Hitchcock when he said it was time to go home, and she did not think so. Ask us, we found out.

And Doxen's big boy! He has two sons, but one of them is a wonder for his age. We pity papa when the boy grows up.

Miss Anna Evans and W. A. Geraghty won the prize waltz—imagine it, with Mrs. G. standing there looking at him, too. But—they left the baby at home.

The smallest baby on the ground was the little one with Mr. and Mrs. R. Reppert. She was good too, just like her mother!

Who was the prettiest girl, we were asked.

THE AUDITOR OF FREIGHT CLAIMS WELFARE ASSOCIATION AT MILLER'S PARK

We declined to commit ourselves. We know, but we won't tell. They all looked pretty to us. The oldest man? F. C. Alrich admits it, and the oldest in point of service was C. R. Weir. The oldest lady? None of them there over 25! Mrs. English was kept busy trying to keep an eye on her husband. We know what a job it was, we tried it ourselves—without avail. We met Otten Babendrier at the picnic. She came, she saw and she surely conquered. Look at the list of prize winners.

The races were interesting and everyone entered into the spirit of the occasion. The winners were as follows:

Girls 7 to 9 years.....Katherine Ford.
Girls 10 to 15 years.....Elizabeth Stevens.
Boys 7 to 9 years.....Paul Miller.
Boys 10 to 15 years.....Harry Miller, Jr.
Girls under 7 years.....Claudia Ford.
Boys under 7 years.....Austin Dopman.
Ladies.....Otten Babendrier.
Men.....H. C. Lidie.
Ladies, Hop, Step & Jump..Otten Babendrier.
Men, Hop, Step & Jump..Herbert Brown.
Ladies, Spoon and Potato..Otten Babendrier.

Men, Spoon and Potato..H. C. Lidie.
Boys, Cracker Race....Richard Gordy.
Ladies only, Revenue Mrs. J. G.
Cutter.....Brubaker.

The officers of the Association are R. H. English, president; W. A. Doxen, vice-president; G. L. Bauerle, treasurer; C. W. Eger, secretary. They and their various committees are to be congratulated on the fine entertainment provided for their guests, and also on their foresight in insuring against rain. The numerous showers of the afternoon, while dampening the grounds, did not dampen the ardor of the picnickers, who were busy every minute until the special cars came to the gates about 8.00 p. m. to take us all home at "The end of a Perfect Day."

The writer took a number of photographs, but because of a combination of bad weather, too many shade trees, a slight defect in his camera and probably a good measure of "poor photography" on his part, only a few are available for publication, for which we offer our apologies with promises to do better next time.

Crossing Watchman P. M. Pennington Brings Honor to Cumberland Division

Wins Prize Dictionary Offered by Senior Vice-President Shriver for Best Work in Solving Puzzles

PHILIP M. PENNINGTON, crossing watchman at Polk Street, Cumberland, has been declared by George H. Pryor, auditor disbursements, the winner of the prize dictionary offered by Senior Vice-President Shriver for the best work done in the Realm of the Riddle Department for the first six months of this year. In notifying Mr. Pennington of his honor, Mr. Pryor wrote him, as follows:

Baltimore, Md.,
August 9, 1923.

My Dear Mr. Pennington:

It gives me great pleasure to inform you that you have been awarded the prize of a New Standard Dictionary offered by Mr. George M. Shriver, senior vice-president, to the employe of the Baltimore and Ohio who performed the best work in the Puzzle Department of the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine during the six months ended with June 30, 1923.

Candidly, the prize lay between N. Jineer and Wick-o-Cincy but these two puzzlers with a fine spirit of fair play, notified me that they already owned New Standard Dictionaries and suggested that the prize be awarded to someone else not so fortunate. That's just the sort of spirit I have found among puzzlers in the 45 years or more that I have been mixing with them and it speaks well for the brotherly feeling that exists very generally among the clan. After eliminating these two you stood out so prominently that I did not hesitate a moment about awarding you the prize and the editor of the MAGAZINE tells me he will advise Mr. Shriver immediately and arrange to ship you the book in a very short while.

When you get it, I am sure you will be delighted with it. It ranks with the very best dictionaries of the English language now in existence and, in fact, is the very latest. You will find in the book much information besides the vocabulary and I am sure its possession will enable you to complete the solutions of many puzzles that would otherwise baffle you, which means, of course, that you will derive just that much more pleasure from your work. Good luck to you and may you long continue a contributor to "In the Realm of the Riddle."

With kindest regards and best wishes, I am,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) G. H. PRYOR

Mr. P. M. Pennington
163 Polk Street
Cumberland, Md.

C. W. Shinnamon, recently appointed Coal Freight Agent, Cleveland, Ohio

Mr. Pennington is well known not only to the employes of the Cumberland Division but also to many readers of the MAGAZINE, because of his interesting contributions. He has a fine mind, is well read in the best literature, and seldom lets an opportunity go by to send the MAGAZINE information that is of value to the Road. He has been measuring his wits with those of the other contributors to Mr. Pryor's interesting department ever since it was started and is highly honored in being declared a top notch solver and maker of puzzles.

His letters of acknowledgment of the letter notifying him of his well deserved victory, were quite characteristic. He chose to call himself "lucky" rather than "worthy," and praised without stint the "noble hearted generosity of N. Jineer and Wick-o-Cincy," the two puzzlers who, having fine dictionaries themselves, declined to be considered for the prize and left the undisputed championship to Mr. Pennington.

There are hundreds of employes not now enjoying the mental stimulus and recreation offered by "The Realm of the Riddle," and I who are ideally situated to enjoy it. Men who are at outlying points on the Road, and whose duties are not exacting, can get lots of fun out of puzzling. Fathers of families will do their children a real service by interesting them in this work. It is highly instructive and helps build one of the greatest educational aids that a person can have, namely a knowledge of words.

Safety First Magician Gans Contributes Novel Act to Galloway-Fries Celebration

ONE of the most interesting numbers on the program at Chester Park on August 23, was the act put on by Arthur D. Gans, Safety First Magician. As Mr. Gans says, this title is not official, but he holds "Squatter's Rights" to it.

"The curtain rises, and the Baltimore and Ohio Safety drop curtain is displayed. On one side is a warrior with shield and sword, the shield bearing the word "Safety." He is sticking his sword into the body of a dragon, which is marked "Carelessness." A safety design appears on the upper part of the drop.

The drop curtain rises and engine 4545, life size, is seen. Mr. Gans, in regulation engineer's uniform, gets off the engine, dinner pail in hand, and says;

"Well, we have another hot box back there. Probably the same one it took 30 minutes to pack before; may take the same time now." He calls to his fireman; "Bill, see that the flagman goes back."

"Well, I've put my foot in it again. I will have to make good. I've been talking Safety First to the boys for so long that they are telling me to hire a hall. The superintendent heard of my interest in Safety, and has asked me to give a talk on the subject tonight in Chillicothe. Guess he thought he had me stumped, but ever since I was a wee bit of a kid, I've been interested in tricks. In my spare time recently, I have thought out a Safety talk, illustrated with sleight of hand, so when I spring it on them tonight, believe I will have them all buffaloed. Guess I'd better put in this half hour on a full dress rehearsal so that when I talk tonight it will be smooth and finished. Here goes."

Mr. Gans then gave an example of the art of "paper tearing." He tore four skeletons from a sheet of paper, while delivering the following monologue:

"Imagine that this sheet of paper represents a man, or a number of men, all healthy, vigorous, strong and in full possession of their mental faculties—clean cut railroad men. The tears I make represent the years of work and experience of the men.

"We all realize that railroad work is no more dangerous than other work. A careful railroad man is in less danger than men working at other trades. The slogan 'Safety First' is not a selfish one. It does not mean to look out for your own Safety first, and let others take chances. It means—think of Safety, your Safety and the Safety of those working with and around you.

"The average full blooded American delights in taking chances, with his money in stocks and bonds, a quiet game of poker, dominos, etc. Daily he runs in front of street cars and autos, he jumps on moving cars and he takes chances in many other ways. Then some day something happens and he is finished taking chances.

"Almost every man has some one depending on him financially, and for his love and care. Every time he takes a chance he not only risks his own life and limb, but he is jeopardizing the happiness of his family and friends.

"Remember the A. B. C.'s of Safety, Always Be Careful. Then when the day's work is done your family and friends have the pleasure of your love and company."

Mr. Gans then entertained the audience with a number of magician's tricks, and concluded with the following act, entitled "Success."

"Many who are employed by a railroad or other corporation, work for a while and then decide there is no chance for advancement, and they either resign or hold on to their job, grumbling continually about not having a chance. Think of it!—in this country of ours, where boys born in log cabins and poor boys from farms have risen to the White House in Washington—in this country, with thousands of libraries, night and day schools, free educational courses and lectures and Y. M. C. A. courses; where even boys from the slums rise to be legislators, merchant princes, bankers and financiers; where section hands, water boys, rodmen, brakemen, telegraph operators and firemen become railroad presidents.

"It is true that there is little chance for the man who watches the clock, grumbles at every task, is always late, does not put his heart into his work, learns nothing from his mistakes, feels that he is above his position, fears responsibility and plays the old game of 'pass the buck.'

"Forty years ago, before many of us here were born, when chances for promotion were slim, two lads started to work for the Baltimore and Ohio. They did not watch the clock, they were not always grumbling, they were not always late, they were willing and they believed in themselves and were always preparing for a step higher. They did not forget, they put their hearts in their work and when they made mistakes they learned something from them.

"They were helpful, sociable, good listeners, frank, open, always ready to lend a hand, self confident but not conceited; they took pains to remember names, faces, facts and figures and were always considerate of the rights and feelings of others.

"As railroad men they were a success. As railroad officers today they are looked up to as leaders. That is why we are here today. To meet them. To get an inspiration for ourselves from their Success."

The Annual Convention of the West Virginia Pharmaceutical Association

A large scenic drop then appeared with the photographs of Messrs. Galloway and Frieson it. At the top was the word "Success," and at the bottom "forty years."

The whistle blew four times to call in the flagman, then twice to go, the bell rang, Mr. Gans stepped aboard his locomotive and the curtain dropped.

Etiquette as Seen on the Charleston Division

By C. W. DIXON, Car Distributor

Charles W. Galloway Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1 Holds Outing on Middle River

HAIL, Hail, the Gang's all here. What the—Ah, yes, pardon me, there are ladies present." Thus spoke Charles Allen about 10 a. m. on August 15, one of the big days in the history of the Ladies' Auxiliary named for our operating vice-president. Members, their families and friends, old and young, tall and short, heavy and slender, gathered at the Central Building with lunch boxes, hampers, suit cases, bathing suits, etc., very much etc., ready for the buses to take them on their way rejoicing. Three large buses were required to take care of about 75 people. No, that's not quite correct, there were more, Mr. Sturmer and Mr. Wall, Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Steiner and several others should really count as two each. Finally at 10.30 a. m. every one was comfortably settled in their conveyances, horns tooted and we started, leaving Mr. Allen standing on the side walk, tears in his eyes sadly singing "Good bye Little Girl, Good bye,"—to which one of the fair voyageurs, however, we cannot say. In any event he took care to see that we were all properly taken care of, giving us as much attention as he does to his daily pride and joy, The Capitol Limited.

Threading carefully through the mazes of Baltimore traffic, out Eastern Avenue, along the wide country roads, we finally, after an enjoyable hour's ride, reached the Middleborough section, on the shore of Middle River, and the residence of our hostess for the day, Mrs. Stier, where we were greeted with a warm handclasp and a genuine old fashioned welcome.

We have only one criticism to offer on the journey down, that is that our friend Allen did not take quite sufficient care in distributing the "weight" evenly. In one bus several heavyweights were all on one side—with disastrous results to the springs of the car.

Mr. Hanson suggested that the company should join in singing "Yes, We Have No Bananas." He was voted down, however, and on motion of Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Steiner favored us with something new, entitled "No, We Have Plenty of Cider!" Mr. Mercer was on hand and brought his wife, and also a fine armful of Frederick roses. Of course Uncle George Sturmer came along to keep order and was ably assisted by his wife and daughter. "Safety Jack" Perin made the welkin ring with his cries of joy when he saw the river, but his enthusiastic transports subsided when his wife told him to behave. Would any outing be complete without Mr. Wall? We'll say not. And his bathing suit! Neither tongue nor pen can describe it. It is our one regret that our camera cannot adequately picture this many colored garment.

Mr. De Falco, Mrs. Stier's father, was there to greet us, and how they did make that poor man work. It must have reminded him of the days when the position of water boy to a gang of thirsty men was common. To be sure that we had adequate means of communication while far away from home, Mr. Hobbs from "CA" tower came along, prepared to climb poles, string wires or do anything connected with the preparation of wireless means of communication. During the afternoon Vice-President Galloway and Chief of Welfare Bureau Wood came down for an hour or two relaxation from their many cares. And they got it!

After the lunch boxes had been opened and the many good things they contained had been disposed of, a number of photographs of the youth and beauty of the Ladies' Auxiliary and the handful of mere men, were taken. The results appear here.

At 2.00 p. m. Mrs. Lewis called her ladies together for a business meeting, from which heaven the men for a short time were excluded, spending the time disconsolately wandering on the beach seeking new fields to conquer. While so engaged a sound as of a mighty thunder rose on the still air. Investigation developed it was the ladies welcoming the arrival of Vice-President Galloway, who made a short address, telling the ladies how glad he was to be able to be present, and expressing good wishes for an enjoyable day.

After the meeting, those who had them, donned bathing suits. Others rested under the trees, while a few took to the river in boats. Suddenly a short sharp cry rang out. "Help, help!" It seemed that Mrs. Lewis had taken one of the boats out without a life saver near by, and due to the swift current could make no headway. Mr. Sturmer, Mrs. Jentner, Mrs. Espey and many others rushed to her assistance and brought her safely to shore, it finally developing that the reason she could not move was that her boat was resting on the river bottom, the river at this point being only six inches deep. Not to be deterred, Mr. Sturmer said he would show us how to row. He did! First he took Mrs. Lewis, then after showing us that he really could do it, he took Mrs. Steiner and Mrs. Espey. Hard luck followed him. In loading his precious cargo he got too much weight on one side and gave Mrs. Espey a bath, entirely unnecessary and unlooked for. Then came the crab feast. And it was a feast. One prominent gentleman remarked afterwards that he had eaten ten crabs and but for the appearance of the thing would have eaten ten more.

The shades of night were descending, and hampers were once more gotten out and dinner disposed of. About this time Mr. Lewis and several other husbands arrived and helped to dispose of the now rapidly diminishing supply of food. About this time also, Mr. Wood decided he had had enough of the water and came in, completely exhausted, but not too much so to be able to do his full share of disposing of the feast of good things.

Mrs. Stier was everywhere looking after the comfort of her guests and the thanks of everyone were heartily voted to her for her many kindnesses and the charming manner in which she had provided for a most enjoyable day for her guests.

The buses returned to take us home at 8.00 p. m., and at Charles and Baltimore Streets we departed our several ways, unanimous in the opinion that it had been a most enjoyable day in every sense of the word.

With Jolly Crowd, the Accounting Association Has Fun a-Plenty on Outing

THE Dreamland, the Annapolis, the Rock Creek, the Louise, and any number of jolly excursion boats pulled out of the harbor at Baltimore on Saturday afternoon, August 18, but there was none among them that carried a happier group than did the Latrobe. This was the annual outing of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Accounting Association on Chesapeake Bay.

As a merry too-oo-oot of the boat's whistle called out the time of departure, there was a scraping of chairs, and many a cheery "Hello, where did you come from?" The Moose band, saxophone and clarinet, led by R. Hart Gawthrop, of the A. M. R. Office, started out on a merry jazz; John Bopp's waiters began stepping lively; T. Parkin Scott and E. Frank Thomas sharpened up their shoes for a waltz, and we were off for a delightful trip.

The journey was made more pleasant than we had anticipated, for despite a cloudy and threatening morning, the sun broke forth and added his broadest grin to those on board the boat, and everybody was happy.

First of all there were those wonderful canaries on strings for all of the children, rattles for the babies—and some of the Too bad the camera does not show the many colored garment of Brother Wall in all its beauty. 9. We like crabs too! 10. Some of the officers of the Auxiliary. 11 and 12. The kiddies were there too, and did their share in disposing of the crabs Mrs. Stier was busy cooking all day. 13. Until the photographer got busy, these six held the center of the stage. Upon his appearance, however, they lost their charm and all the ladies turned their eyes on him. For a few minutes, his ambition to be as popular as Mr. Wall was gratified.

grown-ups quite forgot their ages—so that when the "rattle man" came around, there was a general cry of "gimme" from some of the bearded overgrown kids. Flags of the sea and of allied nations were flown on a rope that reached from fore to aft; children romped from one end of the boat to the other, upstairs and down, and lots of older folk played kids again and did the same thing.

Led by Joe Swikert, as a French orchestra leader, came a quartette of instruments guaranteed to bring forth applause. The instruments were a tin cavalry trumpet, a mouth organ, a mandolin (also of the recent variety), and a most magnificent Jazz horn. And the star performers were as follows: C. V. Thomas, Office of Senior Vice-President; E. Frank Thomas, head clerk, Pay Roll Bureau, Office Auditor Disbursements; W. Erdman, Relief Department, and T. Parkin Scott, chief clerk, Savings Feature, Relief Department.

"I have a leetle apology to offer for zeese men," began Monsieur Swikert, "zey aier just off the ice, and naturellement zey aire a leetle beet flat, and not so sharp as zey ought to be. I apologize for zem, yes, but look at me. I shall make up for all of zeir what you call shortcomings."

"But, Professaire," ventured Monsieur Scott, "my moustache is coming off!"

"Swallow eet, swallow eet," yelled their leader, "don't let zeese people see zat you are

DID YOU EVER SEE SO MANY HAPPY FACES?

1. W. C. Bowhay, Freight Claim Department, Mrs. John E. Jubb, Mr. Jubb, Mrs. John Kratz and Mr. Kratz, holding a mutual admiration conference. 2. C. Vernon Thomas, Senior Vice-President's Office, and his family. Mrs. Thomas was formerly Miss Miller of the Auditor Disbursements Office. Their baby was the youngest member of the party. 3. John M. Shea and his son, John. 4. Left to right: Mrs. George F. Creswell, Mrs. R. T. Newman, Mrs. William Wheeler, Mr. Wheeler and their little son, J. D. Gill. 5. The Town Musicians: T. Parkin Scott, E. Frank Thomas, John Swikert, H. W. Erdman and C. Vernon Thomas, all of whom performed so remarkably for amateurs that they were begged to stop before the excursionists jumped overboard. 6. Mrs. Charles W. Lewis with little Shirley J. Thomas. 7. Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy and children. 8. Watching the Town Musicians pull off their stunts and their whiskers annoyed by a leetle moustache. Swallow eet like a man!"

Then there was the concert, unbeatable and unmatched, the only one of its kind. May we never hear another like it!

Professor Luckey, he of the photographic fame, loaded his gun, aimed and shot. The results you see herewith.

Downstairs Mrs. Lane and a Mr. Lane sang alternately solos and duets. Then came a meeting of the association, at which the ladies were welcomed.

Business was finished in short order. President Lollman handled his job with dispatch, after which the following song was sung to the tune of "Barney Google."

Who's the most important man that the B. & O. ever knew?

Who is the man our officers tell their troubles to!

No, it isn't Mr. Bryan, and it isn't Mr. Hughes—

I'm mighty proud that I'm allowed a chance to introduce:

G. M. Shriver, with his cheery, smiling eyes,
G. M. Shriver, whose plans all harmonize,
He's the Boss the boys all like,
Against his word we'll never strike—
G. M. Shriver, with his cheery, smiling eyes.
and, John J. Ekin, with his question always
"Why?"

John J. Ekin, he'll wink a snappy eye,
He's the boss who will help you out

When he hasn't got the gout,
John J. Ekin, with his question always,
"Why?"

Mr. Shriver was not there, but John J. Ekin was. And when the boys all roared, "Speech! Speech!" the boss came forth and demanded if there was a doctor aboard.

"Yes," called out T. Parkin Scott, "I'll feel your pulse."

"No, it isn't that," declared Mr. Ekin, "I just wanted somebody to tell me when I have the gout. I didn't know until a few minutes ago that I had it. And just one other thing, I don't want to be placed before the organization as being nothing but a question mark. I think that the ladies of the party should have thought more of me than that, but

SEVENTY-FIVE MORE SMILES FROM THE ACCOUNTING ASSOCIATION

1. And the junior officers clustered around "John J. Ekin, with his question always WHY?" Left to right: August Kleinhenn, Office of Auditor Miscellaneous Accounts; J. M. Thiemeyer, Assistant Chief Clerk, Office of Assistant Comptroller O'Malley; J. A. Zimmerman, Head Clerk, Auditor Disbursements Office; Second row: A. H. Atwood, Head Clerk, Auditor Merchandise Receipts Office; A. J. Groeninger, Office of Auditor Merchandise Receipts; R. M. Billmyer, Head Clerk, Office of Auditor Passenger Receipts; F. F. Lollman, Head Clerk, Office of Auditor Merchandise Receipts, President of the Association. 2. Three little maids whose papas were there, too; Dolly Schepler, Frances Hollofield and Gladys Schepler. 3. Mr. and Mrs. George F. Creswell, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Newman. 4. A group of the kiddies who came for a good time—and had it; pick 'em out. 5. A. C. Bowersock and his family, with Sarah Francis Lollman in the background. 6. John Limpert, Secretary to Assistant Auditor Coal and Coke Receipts, and his family. 7. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Groeninger. 8. G. H. Thiemeyer and his daughter, Adele they, too, seem to have gone back on me.

"Nevertheless, I appreciate what you have to say about my 'boss,' Mr. Shriver. As to the question, 'Why?', we'll have to let that pass also.

"I did not come here with the intention of making a speech and I shall not make one. However, it is an inspiration to look into your happy faces. We had a happy time at the picnic last year, but as far as I am concerned, this is even better. Perhaps it is because we seem to know each other better.

"For one thing, I see a lot of sweet-hearts here today. We are all Baltimore and Ohio employes, but the presence of our wives, our sisters and our sweethearts makes for a better time.

"A better spirit exists on the Baltimore and Ohio today than ever before. We are beginning to understand and to appreciate each other more. When we help each other we help the Baltimore and Ohio.

"It is a privilege to me to be with you and to see you in a different way, under different circumstances than we are accustomed to seeing each other. There is no 'Why?' in me today."

Then "Three cheers for Mr. Ekin," called someone, and "Hooray, Hoo-ray, Hooray!" split the air. The song was repeated and a half-dozen other old-timers were sung, including "My Bonnie Lies over the Ocean," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," etc. What mattered it if somebody in copying the songs did leave out two lines of "My Old Kentucky Home," or that he spelled the "Taters" in "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," with a "po-" prefix? Everybody was happy, and when the words weren't there they sang them anyway.

Then there was a general line-up before the camera, kiddies and grown-ups alike. Thirty-six kiddies were in one group, and they all had a fine time.

There were pow-wows and confabs and little parties of eight or ten talking here and there. Sometimes they were standing before the great bowl of orangeade, which was always on tap.

At five o'clock came the call to dinner, and John Bopp served one of his famous meals. There were devilled crabs and potato salad, olives, ham sandwiches, coffee and "hot dogs" and ice cream.
